As we look at the combining of these three areas, I am hoping that there will be a balance. I don't want the agriculture industry to be forgotten. There are new products, new knowledge, and I think everyone here – I'm hoping everyone here – has an appreciation of new knowledge that may come out of this. Within that, one of the parts I read is the reality that – maybe this needs explanation, but if as a government we are paying for the research, do we not own the product then? Or is this going to be negotiable under this authority? Maybe I'm not reading it as clearly as I should, but there is a section in here which says that those kinds of resources or any money from it, that it will be the authority's decision as to how to spend or use that money. My question is: would it not be part of the Crown's benefit since it has been sponsored by this government?

5:10

I had a few other things to point out about this bill. You know, Mr. Speaker, on this board there will be an MLA, which is common for many of these authorities. My question, and I'm sure the hon. minister is really going to consider this: there's never been an MLA from the opposition benches on one of those boards.

AN HON. MEMBER: Correct.

MRS. SOETAERT: And he says I'm correct in that. I'm correct in a lot of things.

You know what? If he goes looking for well-qualified, willing, intelligent people, well, there are a good 16 sitting over here you can pick from. And you know what? They'd work hard. We know how to put in the hours. We'd be vocal. [interjection] No, those guys didn't even wake up when I said that. So no, I'm for folks sitting over here.

Mr. Speaker, I think I've made a few good suggestions to the minister. I've expressed my concern about the loss of agriculture. I don't want it lost in this combining because it doesn't have one big industry focused on just that, as the others do.

So with those concerns and a good suggestion for an MLA that could sit on that authority, an excellent suggestion: the Member for Edmonton-Glenora, the Member for Lethbridge-East, the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, the Member for Edmonton-Manning. I mean, we've got them.

With those few comments I will adjourn debate, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 1
Alberta Heritage Foundation for
Science and Engineering Research Act

[Adjourned debate March 13: Mr. Smith]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would suggest that now may be an appropriate time to move the question on Bill 1.

MRS. SOETAERT: There's no question. There are more speakers.

MR. SMITH: Isn't it if the Assembly is prepared to accept the question that we vote on it and then move on?

MRS. SOETAERT: No, we're not prepared. You were speaking last.

MR. SMITH: Okay. Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to get in a few minutes of comments on the philosophy, I guess, in the approach of Bill 1. We've seen that with the focus that we have on research in the province and with our university system, we have the opportunity to really be participants in a very valid and very active program to contribute to the scientific and technological knowledge of the world, of our country.

Bill 1 is going to make a statement on behalf of all Albertans that this is a direction that we condone and that we really support in the context of how it's going to bring about an increase in diversification in our province and that it will be able to allow us to move into some of the other areas that are contributing to the advance of both our province and the science- and research-based activities that are in it.

Mr. Speaker, we had a chance to discuss this bill the other night with the Minister of Learning, and we were talking about how it would work in with the universities in our province. We were talking, also, in that context about how successful our universities have been in attracting the chairs of the federal program that was going to expand the focus on our researchers and our universities and the direction that those universities take in their research.

We've been able to create a number of centres of excellence now through that program here in Alberta, and the dollars that will come out of this foundation and the endowment that's created as its basis will really now provide an opportunity for those centres to look for, to search out funding that will come from Alberta but also on a matching level from other places in Canada or around the world. This will contribute to the fact that the lead scientists that are here will then be able to attract graduate students and encourage undergraduate students in our universities now to look at the opportunities that are there for them as they move into graduate work, into research work.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think there's any question that, you know, the more scientists we can train in our province, the more likely we are that they'll stay here and conduct their research activities here. The dollars that will be provided through this endowment will give them that opportunity to really flourish here in Alberta and stay in our province and contribute to the advancement of our research, commercialization, and academic environments.

Mr. Speaker, as we go through and look at this, the thing that's going to be important – as a former faculty member at the university I can tell you that when we could draw our undergraduate students into our research programs, get them involved either as part-time students during the academic year or through summer employment opportunities, they really began to shine as students. They began to take an interest in the direction that what they were learning in the classroom could take. I think it effectively made them much better students and in the end much better graduates so that when they did go out into the workplace, they had a little bit of an understanding and appreciation for how concepts that they learned in the classroom could actually be made into a workable practice when they went out into the work world. So they were always there and they were always available to help to improve and create better employees for the companies and the businesses, the agencies that were looking for them to come out and make a contribution.

So these are the kinds of ideas that are really exciting about this bill and the fact that it will give us a chance to see our academic community, our research community, really begin to move out into the forefront, as we've seen with our medical facilities with the support of the Heritage Foundation for Medical Research. That's basically given us that core size, that takeoff size that was needed to really create those good research initiatives. Let's hope that over the next four or five years this program and the moneys that are coming out of the heritage foundation for science and engineering will be able to create that same core level of expertise and that same mass that gives them a critical takeoff into a very stable and ongoing research program in our province.

I think that we'll see everybody at the universities in this province looking at this and saying: you know, the government is making quite a commitment now to improve and sustain and maintain the research efforts that have been undertaken at our universities. They'll be looking at this as a signal to try and expand their programs, to look at new concepts, to explore some of the ideas that have now been languishing in the back of their mind because they're funded to do other things. They'll now be able to pursue those ideas with funding through this.

5:20

We should be able to see the graduate programs and the research programs at our universities really grow in response to this, especially with what we're hearing in terms of some of the discussions, that this actual endowment is potentially going to grow over the next few years from the $500 million that's set aside here. We'll be able to then have a growing amount of allocatable dollars on a yearly basis. Potentially at the start this could give us $20 million, $30 million to $40 million on an annual basis. Depending upon interest rates and earnings, that could grow, and if the endowment itself grows, I think this is just one of the most exciting things that we can talk about in terms of the mandate of this session of the Legislature.

I hope that everybody supports this bill as we move it through the process and that we do it in a way that our researchers can feel that we made that commitment, that we were willing to move it through so that the dollars can be set aside and we can then have it effective at an earlier date rather than a delayed date because of the activities here.

So with that, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Just before I ask that the question be put, I'd like to thank my colleagues on both sides of the House and the last colleague in particular. I appreciated your good comments.

I think that this is an historic bill. Just as in 1982 the HFMR was an historic bill, so this year, 2000, is the Alberta heritage foundation for science and engineering research. I want to say that it couldn't have been done without the Premier's support and his insistence and his vision that this is a positive issue.

I thank everybody, and I'd like to call for the question on second reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a second time]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. HAVELOCK: Thank you. I move that the House now stand adjourned and reconvene this evening at 8 in Committee of Supply.

THE SPEAKER: On the motion put forward by the hon. Deputy Government House Leader, will all hon. members in favour, please say aye.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Aye.

THE SPEAKER: Opposed, please say no.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE SPEAKER: Carried. The Assembly stands adjourned until 8 o'clock this evening.

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:23 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, March 14, 2000

8:00 p.m.

Date: 00/03/14

head: Committee of Supply

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The chair is going to call the meeting to order. Thank you.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

Agriculture, Food and Rural Development

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I would ask the hon. minister to start off the discussion and debate.

MR. LUND: Well, thank you, Madam Chairman. To start off with this evening, I thought I would respond to the questions that I didn't get answered in the first round of our estimates.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East had asked what we were doing regarding the transportation system, specifically as related to the Estey/Kroeger recommendations. I can report that I was in Ottawa around the first week of February and met with eight federal ministers, the Prime Minister's office, the Privy Council, and people from Treasury to talk about how important it was that we move forward with an approval of the Estey/Kroeger report. Also, the next week, the week of the 14th, two of my department staff were in Ottawa as a follow-up to that. In terms of the resources, we don't have any specific number allocated to this particular file, but of course staff continue to work on it and I continue to raise the issue when I'm in Ottawa and talking to the federal people.

As a matter of fact, when I was there just two weeks ago dealing with the farm income crisis, we raised the issue again and how important it is that the federal government move forward on this report, because the fact is that there are studies that indicate there are anywhere from 50 million to 300 million of producer dollars that are on the table if in fact the system is changed and becomes more efficient. Now, I don't care if it's only the $50 million. The point is that there's a major amount of money sitting there, and it would be an annual injection into the farm economy if in fact we could move forward on it.

The hon. member also asked what sectors are being influenced by the industrial wastewater infrastructure program for agricultural process and what municipalities are involved. This program was announced in 1998 by the Premier. There was $35 million allocated to it over a three-year period, and of course we've now completed the second year. In 1998-99 there were the two major projects, and they amounted to some $12.6 million. Both of these were related to the potato industry. There was a grant of $6.5 million approved to the county of Lethbridge and $6.1 million to the MD of Taber. It's interesting how those all multiply. In fact, the development that occurred from this injection amounted to about $40 million for new water and wastewater infrastructure, and that led to $200 million in new investment in value-added agrifood processing. Now in '99-2000 there are two applications currently before us, and these relate to some investment in the grain processing and meat processing sectors.

He also asked how the ministry is progressing with the development of measures that provide more specific information on the achievement of goals and key results. As you know, we've got the seven industry macromeasures in the department, and there are also five goal measures listed with the eight ministry goals which appear in the 2000-2003 ministry's plan. The purpose of the goal measures is to provide data and information to show progress in achieving these eight goals. Now, since these goal measures were first selected, progress in developing the necessary data and information for the measures has actually been a slower process than we thought it would be. The 1999-2000 annual report will be the next step in reporting on the ministry's accomplishments toward meeting these goals. Where possible, data shown for each of the measures will be in a format similar to that shown in the 2000-2003 business plan.

As you know, we are having the ag summit, a major project that will give the ministry direction, and out of that we will be looking at all our goals and measures and seeing if they're appropriate to meet the expectations coming up in the summit.

Now, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre asked: what action has the minister taken in response to the Auditor General's recommendations that the ministry set quantifiable measures and targets to evaluate the performance of the farm income disaster program? I can inform you that there was a ministry steering committee assigned responsibility for developing performance measures for this very program, and they've met with the Auditor General's staff. The committee is now finalizing the measures and will be meeting once again with the Auditor General's staff before the performance measures are implemented. We expect to have the plan in place by June of this year. [interjection] Yeah. Well, that answers your question.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre also asked: how do changes in policy and legislation help the ministry measure its progress in achieving the goals to improve the industry's capacity to respond to opportunities for growth? Well, the changes to policy and legislation I believe improve the industry's capacity to respond to opportunities when the policy or legislation restricts the ability of producers and processors to respond to market opportunities. An example of such a restriction is the monopoly control exercised by the Canadian Wheat Board. Of course that's out of our jurisdiction but is one of the reasons we're trying to move that file forward. The regulatory regime imposed on transportation and handling of grains: that's where the difficulty is with the involvement of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Further, the ability of producers and processors to respond to growth opportunities is enhanced by the removal of trade barriers and the implementation of a transparent, effective, and timely dispute settlement regime. There are several desirable changes to Canada, Alberta, and international policies in the legislation that the department is working towards. Our success in bringing about these changes is the measure of our success in achieving the goal to improve the industry's capacity to respond to the opportunities for growth.

The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert was asking: why is the administration expense budget for Agriculture Financial Services Corporation showing an increase over last year's budget? The answer to that is that the selling commissions were reduced in last year's administrative budget. In this year's budget they are shown as a separate line item. Taking this change into account, the 2000-2001 budget for administrative expenses is showing an increase of $4.9 million over the 1999-2000 budget. This increase is primarily a result of extra costs associated with the processing of the higher volume of farm income disaster program claims due to the introduction of the retroactivity of the program that we announced back on October 14. Higher lending and insurance claim volumes and a provision for salary increases also are contributing to those increases.

The hon. Member for West Yellowhead asked about the budget for farm income support. His question was: why is the 2000-2001 budget for farm income support lower than the 1999-2000 forecast?

The budget is $201.6 million, and the forecast is $299 million. Now, the forecast is higher than the budget for two reasons. First, the 1999-2000 costs of the farm income disaster program are $71.8 million higher than next year's budget because enhancements to the program that were announced back in October 1999 were retroactive to the 1998 tax year. Therefore, the forecast includes the retroactive costs for 1998 as well as the costs for 1999, whereas the budget for 2000-2001 is for the 2000 tax year only. The 2000-2001 budget is $165 million compared to last year's budget of $74 million.

The second reason for this year's forecast expenses being higher than next year's budget is that the forecast includes $25.6 million for industrial development grants. These are onetime grants, and therefore there is no budget for industrial development grants in the year 2000-2001.

Madam Chairman, this completes I think all of the questions that weren't answered when we were first before the committee.

8:10

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Just a few final comments before we move on with the vote on the Agriculture, Food and Rural Development allocations for the year.

The minister spoke a little while ago about the role the ag summit was going to have in reviewing goals and measures. I guess the question that still remained when he finished that explanation was the role that that's going to play in redirecting potential activities within the department and how department programs get delivered to the front line, to the agriculture community, and what the objectives are or the vision is for the agriculture community as much as for the minister's department in itself.

I think when we reviewed the comments that were made by all of the members the other day, we covered a lot of the issues that were relevant to the budget of the agriculture department. I guess the question that arises now, with the announcement today, was where that fits into the budget. Should we now possibly be looking at an amendment to this budget before we vote on it? This budget now is going to have some new allocations. I know the minister has the authority to move money within the line items and within the programs of the budget; that's permitted now with the new Financial Administration Act. But I was under the impression from the discussion during the news conference that there will be about 40 million or 45 million new dollars actually added to Alberta Agriculture's budget. We need to find out where those dollars are going to be coming from. Is it out of the potential surplus that the government showed, or is it going to be out of some other program in connection with that? So on that basis, Madam Chairman, I think we should be looking at how that fits in as we move to finalize our vote on Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

The issue that I'd like to see the minister really address as well, through the ag summit process, I guess, more than as a direct request here, is that when we start to look at the department summary, now we're spending about $250 million to $251 million according to the data here. If we add the extra $40 million or $45 million onto that, we're going to be almost pushing the very high . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. members, would it be all right with the Assembly if we revert to the Introduction of Guests?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. We're absolutely honoured this evening to have visitors that have come from across Canada, actually from Sudbury, Ontario, to witness the proceedings of our committee work in this Legislature. They are seated in the members' gallery. We have 66 members from the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps, Admiral Mountbatten's area, and they are accompanied by their commanding officer, Lieutenant Roger Szydziak. They're all from Sudbury, Ontario. We welcome you to Alberta and to our Legislature this evening, and we'd ask you to all rise and receive a warm welcome from our Assembly.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Thank you very much, hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Madam Chairman. It's a real honour to give my space on the floor to introduce the next generation of leaders in Canada.

Main Estimates 2000-2001

Agriculture, Food and Rural Development (continued)

DR. NICOL: As I was saying, there's an issue that comes out in the context of how the agriculture budget is now becoming prioritized, and I was saying that we are getting now to where well over half of the almost $500 million is going into agriculture insurance and lending assistance programs: the crop insurance, the interest programs, the farm income disaster program, the new program announced today. I guess what we need to do is come out of that ag summit with a concept of when and how it's best to provide public support to the agriculture community. How do we target those dollars so that they get directed to the individuals in the agriculture community that truly have a short-term income shortfall?

Madam Chairman, I don't mean here that we should be putting money into supporting agriculture enterprises, farmers that are effectively on their way out of the agricultural community, but if we have a farm enterprise that has been effectively supporting the family, supporting the community, building the community over a period of years and has gone into a two- or three-year drought-price-caused cash flow problem, that's the kind of decision we need to be making here. How do we step in and provide assistance to those kinds of farmers rather than to the farmers that are either not in real need or who effectively would become dependant on the public dollar? What we need to do is look at that kind of an issue to be addressed by the ag summit.

I guess maybe I'm stepping a little bit out of bounds in the context of debate on the budget when I'm asking for input to the ag summit as opposed to input to the determination of the budget, but so much of what we're dealing with right now in the business plan, in the budget is going to be almost a builder into how we approach the ag community out of the recommendations that come from that ag summit. So it's reasonable, I think, to tie the two of them together in a way that we try to make sure that what comes out of that summit is a strong recommendation back to us in the government, back to us as representatives of our communities on how to provide the support that is necessary for agriculture.

This is especially critical when we deal with the kinds of changes and transitions that have gone on in so much of our society. You know, people are now being asked to deal with and look after their own interests, and the agriculture community needs to develop that kind of relationship with the public purse as well in the sense that they come forward and they're given dollars only when it's critical to the survival of that enterprise and not in terms of a supplement when it's not necessarily needed by each of those enterprise operators.

I think the thing that we want to also look at is how the mix of different programs that we put out under program 6 fit together. Our new program today saw us giving a credit to the farmers who are going to be buying crop insurance. How does that work out? How effective is the crop insurance program in terms of its relationship to our farm income disaster programs? Is it important maybe that we should be tying the two together? If a farmer is not willing to begin the year by making a commitment to risk management, should we be stepping in at the end of the year when the elements have turned against him?

8:20

You know, these are the kinds of questions that I hope the minister takes to that ag summit and comes back with real input from the agriculture community on how they see us tying together these programs and making sure that we do have a set of programs that are fair, that are equitable to those farmers, to the farm community and fair and equitable also, Madam Chairman, to the other members of the Alberta community that are sharing in the burden and the costs and in the benefits of having a strong rural community. That balance has to be developed.

You know, the relationship between some of our programs now is reasonably open. Regarding the new program, I think one of the first things that was asked after the minister finished his press conference today was: well, Ken, is this going to be neutral under the WTO? And I said: as long as it's a one-year, onetime payment that can't be built into farmer expectations, I would assume that it probably is going to be neutral, that it wouldn't be a countervailable action.

I would ask the minister, when he's discussing these kinds of programs in the future, that maybe some reference to that would help, a kind of reference to an argument that has been given already before the WTO or in the context of countervail neutrality. He could bring that out as he talks about it. It's important that we make sure that the agriculture community realizes and senses that when we step in as a public to help them in a time when they're having trouble, we're not going to be creating problems for a different sector in the agriculture community or for Canada as a whole in the context of challenges under the WTO.

I hope that my interpretation was correct on this one and that it won't be challengeable. It is a onetime program. It's not commodity specific. It won't influence export potential. I think we get to look at those kinds of things and say: this program probably would stand a challenge. It's a question that comes up, and it would be nice if when these programs are announced, some reference to that is made as it goes.

I guess on that basis, Madam Chairman, I'd suggest that my comments on the budget now are finished, but I would also ask the minister to consider bringing forward the amendments to allow us to look at how today's announcement fits into this before we do put a final vote on this budget so that we can see how it fits into the overall aspects of our financial planning for the next year.

So on that basis, I hope that we vote to delay the movement of this until we see those amendments.

MR. LUND: Thank you, Madam Chairman. To the hon. member regarding the goals and measures and the vision of the community: after the summit we're going to be looking at all of these goals and measures. You're absolutely right. It's very important that they tie into the agricultural community and then back so that we make sure that what we are doing is serving the whole agricultural industry. But, of course, the primary producer is the main building block in that whole industry.

Now, you've asked a number of questions about the financing of today's announcement, so I'll try once again to run through the explanation. It gets a little bit complicated because of the retroactivity of the program, going back into 1998, and we had to account for it in 1999.

What happened is that when we made those changes back on October 14, we weren't able with any certainty to predict within a very narrow range what exactly the cost was going to be. We could do it for the applications that had been approved, but it was very difficult to know how many new applications we were going to pick up and what that cost was going to be. So we went forward to Treasury with a range of what the cost would be, and really what it amounted to was getting approval for an additional $232 million, because we went up to the $200 million for both 1998 and '99.

As it turns out, if you look in the third-quarter report, you will see that in fact we are estimating that we will be lapsing about $68 million. It's been approved, but I must point out that we weren't at the bottom of our range. We weren't at the top. We were pretty much in the middle there.

So we had that $68 million that has already been approved in this year's budget. We also have coming out of the all-risk crop insurance some $40 million that was not used. Actually the late frost caused the yield to go up, and the quality was good, so the indemnities for the all-risk were lower than actually averaged. So we had the $40 million there. That takes us up to the $108.5.

In the hail and crop reinsurance we have an investment. There's actually about $300 million in that account. That investment money can be used for a number of things. Actually it's interesting when you read the agreement with the federal government and actually the legislation that the federal government works under under hail and crop insurance. It's pretty silent on what that money can be used for. So that's where the $20 million for the reduction in premiums for the hail and crop insurance will come from.

Now, if you add those all up, you still see a bit of an overage. If you look in the budget, the one we're discussing, you will see that we did not include any money from the federal government. We did include some for the hail and crop insurance but not out of the disaster area. We know that we will be getting something. As a matter of fact, it will likely be even more than we got this year. If there is an overage in the acreage payment, that's where those extra dollars will come from. It will be that money that comes from the federal government. It doesn't show in this budget, but that's where the dollars will come from.

If you've got any more questions on it, I would be happy to try and answer those.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Question.

MR. LUND: Real quick. I'll just answer a couple more questions.

You talked about risk management and how we target dollars. We really are looking at it in two categories. We have risk management, which includes crop insurance and NISA, and then the disaster, which includes FIDP and the companion programs over there.

Yes, one of the things that we will be doing is continuing with the crop insurance review. Could these be joined? Should they be joined? Is that the way we should be moving forward? That whole thing will be looked at. One of the questions that's in the whole summit review is this whole issue about risk management. What does the producer think he needs? It will tie in with the crop review. I think that covered them all.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Just two follow-ups. I thank the minister for explaining that there are actually no new dollars in this program announced today. It's all rearrangement within the budget. That's the way I understood it.

Now, you also spoke about the review that's going on for crop insurance. There's a committee in the communities of farm organizations that is dealing with a review of crop insurance. How are you tying in there? Is there any opportunity or any place in the budget where they would be getting some financial support to finish their review in the context of alternative programs, alternative ways of funding, alternative ways of structuring crop insurance so that it might be more reasonable? With that I'll end my conversation.

8:30

MR. LUND: Actually, do you remember in this year's budget the $25.6 million that was for reinvestment? We kept $500,000 out to run the hail and crop review. If there are additional dollars that need to be found to complete that review, then we'll find it within the department, but there will not be a line targeted just for that specific exercise.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:
Operating and capital expenditure $449,553,000

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Carried.
Hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report the estimates of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

MR. COUTTS: Madam Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions of the Department of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, reports the approval of the following estimates and requests leave to sit again: operating expenses and capital investments, $449,553,000.

Madam Speaker, I wish to table copies of a resolution agreed to in Committee of Supply on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

head: Government Bills and Orders
head: Second Reading

Bill 3 Statute Revision Act

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise tonight to introduce and move for second reading Bill 3, Statute Revision Act.

The Statute Revision Act has been introduced to simplify and streamline the process of revising and consolidating our public statutes. Provincial statutes are revised periodically to consolidate amendments made since the previous revision, make editorial changes that do not alter the meaning, and generally to clean up a statute following years of amendment. For example, a revision allows statutes to be renumbered, and obsolete cross-references can be updated and spent provisions removed.

In past years these kinds of changes were made under the Revised Statutes of Alberta 1980, Revised Statutes of Alberta 1970, Revised Statutes of Alberta 1955, Revised Statutes of Alberta 1942, Revised Statutes of Alberta 1922. Currently, Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000 are being prepared. Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000 will revise all Alberta public statutes as of December 31, 2000, provided that Bill 3 is endorsed by this Legislature.

As in past years, Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000 will encompass every public statute of Alberta, and all of them will be revised at the same time. However, in the past every revision to public statutes was authorized by its own statute. Once the revision was completed, the authority of the statute was spent. For example, the previous two revisions were authorized by the Revised Statutes 1980 Act and the Revised Statutes 1970 Act. Bill 3 differs from the past in that it is designed to be an ongoing source of authority not only for the Revised Statutes 2000 but for all subsequent revisions in the years ahead. Moreover, it will not only authorize the preparation of revisions for all public statutes in a given year, such as Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000, but it will also authorize the preparation of a more limited revision of one or more statutes at any given time when appropriate. This will allow frequently amended statutes to be periodically consolidated and revised, making them easier to use. Some other provinces, such as British Columbia and Ontario, have also adopted this more flexible method of preparing revisions.

Bill 3 continues Alberta's traditional procedure for preparing revisions by authorizing Alberta's Chief Legislative Counsel to prepare a revision under the general supervision of the minister. In addition, Bill 3 provides comprehensive powers necessary for an effective revision. These powers, Madam Speaker, while comprehensive, are similar to those in past Alberta statute revision legislation and revision legislation in other provinces.

It's important to note that none of these powers authorizes making changes to the law. They are all editorial or cosmetic in nature. They include the power to consolidate amendments; to renumber and rearrange statute sections, parts of a statute, et cetera; to revise and alter language for gender neutrality; to alter language and punctuation to achieve a uniform mode of expression; to make minor amendments to clarify the intention of the Legislature, an example of which would be the updating of obsolete cross-references; to correct clerical, grammatical, or typographical errors; and finally, to include information in schedules that the Chief Legislative Counsel considers appropriate to show the changes made by revision.

Madam Speaker, it's important to go through those powers and assure the public of Alberta and assure members of the Assembly that the Statute Revision Act has absolutely no intention of changing the law of the province. It's a consolidation and a revision of the law in order to provide an up-to-date, consolidated reference act for the public to use in understanding and dealing with the laws of the province.

For example, section 3(a) provides the power to "consolidate in the revision all amendments made to an enactment since the date of its enactment or last revision, as the case may be." That provision was also in RSA 1970. It was in the 1955 version. It was in the 1942 version. It was implicit in the 1922 version. It's implicit but not explicitly included in Ontario's and B.C.'s revised statutes acts. It is explicit in the federal revision act. The reason I point that out, Madam Speaker, is because there has been some suggestion publicly that by bringing in Bill 3, this government is in some way attempting to bring lawmaking powers under executive authority, and that is simply not the case.

This is an ordinary revision in the same context as the revisions made in 1980, 1970, 1955, 1942, and 1922. There is no suggestion that the law of Alberta will be revised in any substantive manner by this act. It's important for the public to understand that that's the case and that we're operating in the same manner with the exception of the provision of an ongoing power to revise individual statutes, which is a modernization of the process but not a change in the substantive ability to make law.

Section 3(b), again, has been included in every act prior to this in Alberta with the exception of 1922. Similar provisions are found in Ontario's and B.C.'s acts.

Section 3(c) has been brought forward from each of the earlier revision acts in Alberta and is also a similar provision to those in Ontario's, B.C.'s, and the federal government's acts.

Section 3(d), again, was included in 1980, 1970, and 1955 and is included in the B.C. act.

8:40

The one new provision to the Alberta act is 3(e), which allows to "revise and alter language to achieve gender-neutral terminology." That's a new provision in this act, that hasn't been in previous Alberta acts, but I think all members of the House would agree that it's an appropriate revision power for the Chief Legislative Counsel to have.

Section 3(f) provides that the people doing the revision can "revise and alter language so as to give better expression to the meaning of the law but not so as to change the sense of any enactment." That provision was also in the statute in 1980. It was in the statute in 1955. It was in the statute in 1942.

Section 3(g), "make any alterations in language and punctuation that are desirable." Again, those are provisions, powers that were brought forward from earlier acts.

Section 3(h), "make minor amendments to clarify what is considered to be the intention of the Legislature." Madam Speaker, that's not a new power. That's not an excessive power that's being given to Legislative Counsel. That's exactly the same power as was provided in 1980, 1970, 1955, and 1942, the same power as was provided in Ontario and in B.C., the same power as provided in the federal act, although the federal act takes the additional precaution of adding: without changing the substance of any enactment. That is, I think, implicit in the issue.

The point that I'm making, Madam Speaker, at some length – some would say ad nauseam – is that while there are broad general revision powers incorporated into section 3 of this bill, there is no intention or ability for Legislative Counsel to change the law of Alberta in any substantive manner. This is simply providing them with the tools to make an appropriate update and revision of the law. I dwell on that because there has been some discussion in the public media about this bill, which I quite frankly thought was housekeeping and not one that would provide any controversy whatsoever.

Bill 3 also specifies the procedure for bringing a revision into force. First, the Lieutenant Governor in Council will direct that a completed revision is to be deposited with the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly as the official copy of the revision. The official copy will be signed by the Lieutenant Governor and countersigned by the minister.

Secondly, the Lieutenant Governor in Council will specify by proclamation when the deposited revision is to come into force. This procedure, again, continues Alberta's traditional procedure in this area.

Thirdly, the bill obliges the Queen's Printer to print each revision in a printed form. For a limited revision of one act or just a few acts, the Queen's Printer has the option of publishing the revision in the appropriate annual volume of the Statutes of Alberta.

Fourthly, Bill 3 sets out the legal effects of a revision and provisions designed to provide a smooth transition from one revision to the next. These provisions cover the following: repeal of the replaced revision or enactment, how the revision is to be interpreted, and technical rules governing its legal effectiveness. A revision does not operate as a new law but simply as a consolidation of the law that it replaced.

Madam Speaker, Bill 3 is essentially housekeeping that will enable this Legislature to ensure that our public statutes are up to date, consistent, and easier to interpret than many of them have been after years of updating and amendment without consolidation. Consequently, this bill will also improve public access to the laws of this province. It's a bill whose time has come. In fact, I'm only surprised that we haven't had an earlier statute revision.

The coming into force provisions of this bill have also been questioned in the public media because we have followed the tradition that has been outlined, that has happened in Alberta and happens in quite a number of other jurisdictions across this country, in that the revisions are prepared by the senior bureaucrat, in this case the Chief Legislative Counsel, are deposited with the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, and countersigned by the Lieutenant Governor and the minister. In some jurisdictions, including the federal jurisdiction, the revisions are brought into a committee of the Legislature for review, and some would suggest that that's the appropriate process in our Legislature.

However, what we've proposed in this bill is exactly the same process as has been used in the province of Alberta in each of the earlier revisions of our statutes and has served Albertans extremely well. In fact, I don't know of any challenges to the Revised Statutes of Alberta or their legal efficacy. I don't know of any question that's been raised in the past about the quality of the revisions. In fact, the process has worked extremely well for Albertans, and I believe that when we pass this bill, if this Legislature does as I urge them to do and passes it quickly, we'll be able to get on with providing Albertans with better access to their public laws.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: I have some questions, Madam Speaker. You know, I understand what the minister is trying to do, and I understand that this is a process that has occurred over time, from 1922 up to 1980, which was the last time there was a revision. In that 20 years, however, from 1980 to now we have seen a tremendous amount of – I guess I heard the word “tradition” used by the hon. Justice minister. Well, there has been an erosion of that tradition of passing law and this law being scrutinized by members of the Legislature.

We now are into an era where we have lawmaking by regulations. You know, we have delegated it to administrative organizations. We have all sorts of different functions where the actual role of the Legislature has been diminished. So when we talk about tradition, I have some difficulty with that, because we don't operate in the same way we did in 1980, and we don't operate in the same way that parliamentarians or legislators did in 1922. So we have seen a dramatic change, and that, of course, then brings some skepticism, skepticism certainly from myself and others. Obviously I notice some editorial comments in the paper, and I think some questions need to be asked, you know. Is it right to continue with the same process?

As I see the bill, I see that this bill gives the Chief Legislative Counsel sweeping power to revise the Statutes of Alberta under the direction of the Minister of Justice. Is it another power grab? You know, the hon. minister says: no, this is not. We have some very contentious issues in other pieces of legislation where we are giving ministerial discretion for a lot of things we ought not to be giving ministers discretion for. It does continue the trend of this government to have the Legislative Assembly pass, you know, shells of bills. The real bills, according to the government, are made in regulations. Well, this is where it ought to happen. We don't need to see the regulations set by the minister coming out in an order in council.

I guess when we talk about language, we have to accept that language is the building blocks of thought. At least I would accept that. In legislation the entire effect of a provision or enactment can be radically altered with the addition, subtraction, or substitution of a single word. My concern, and I think it's a real concern, is that in the past we've seen a lot of changes. In the act the minister outlined them here under section 3. “Alterations in language” can be made under this act.

What he is saying is that this is not different than anything else in the past. That may be so, Madam Speaker. That may be so. But you know what's different? It's the erosion of the role of the Legislature that's different. That has occurred since 1992, and that is what raises concerns about this little piece of paper, this bill, that may not have been a concern in 1980. I think it's tremendously important to draw that analogy and bring that to the attention of other members in the Legislature.

I'm very concerned, and I'll give a little bit of background here. Right now we see the Government Organization Act allow for whole departments to appear and disappear at the whim of the executive. Previously the creation and dissolution of departments were the responsibility of the people, and that's all those people out there, elected representatives. That's us in this Assembly.

We don't see that anymore. The scrutiny of estimates has become a travesty, with the elected representatives of the people unable to scrutinize each department's budget, with a complicated and inflexible committee structure, which again strips the legislative branch of its oversight functions with respect to its traditional power of the purse.

8:50

Madam Speaker, we have unprecedented and what I believe is reckless and undemocratic use of closure to ram controversial legislation through this Assembly. I am waiting to see what happens on Bill 11, because I believe that'll be another one of those opportunities for this government to use that very undemocratic legislative hammer.

The other issue that concerns me is the use of public funds, Madam Speaker, for one-party standing policy committees, for which those chairs get an extra $15,000 or $20,000. All elected members are not allowed to go and speak at those meetings. Not every single elected member in this Legislature can do that. So that's some concern for me as well.

I want to also draw the attention of the Assembly to the House of Commons and what the House of Commons does in relation to this particular issue. They have a Statute Revision Commission. They lay out what that commission is to do. They have parliamentary examination, and if I can, Madam Speaker, I'll just outline some of what the examination is.

During the progress of the preparation of a revision or on the conclusion thereof, or both during the progress and on the conclusion thereof, the Minister shall cause drafts of the statutes so revised to be laid for examination and approval before such Committee of the House of Commons and such Committee of the Senate, or such Committee of both Houses of Parliament, as may be designated for the purpose of the examination and approval.

That's of the revised statutes.

There's absolutely nothing wrong with that, and that's what we should be doing. We should be having an all-party – hey, I know; the Law and Regulations Committee comes to mind here. The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane is the chairman, and we have yet to see her chair this committee. If I have ever seen an opportunity for the minister to sway his caucus on the use of that committee, it would be with this document, with this bill.

MS BLAKEMAN: You mean show leadership?

MS OLSEN: Show leadership is really what I mean.

I do have a great deal of respect for the Minister of Justice, and that's why I urge him to do the right thing and use that process.

I also want to draw the attention of the House to the British Columbia process, and the minister has alluded to that process here in his document. What I might say is that the Chief Legislative Counsel in British Columbia must give a revision to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly for presentation to a select standing committee of the Legislative Assembly designated by the Legislative Assembly to examine the revision. What, pray tell, might that committee be in this Legislature? That would be the Law and Regulations Committee, and that would be a very useful committee, I believe. I sit on that committee, and I would love to see how it operates. I think it would be outstanding.

We do have, Madam Speaker, examples of where, yes, the revisions are made; yes, we have the revisions brought forward, and they're brought forward to us like a standing committee; and then they are ratified somewhere. They are ratified in the Assembly, and that's where that should happen, Mr. Minister.

Let's wake up to what's happened in the world of politics, in this Assembly especially. I can't speak for every other Assembly, but I can damn well speak for this one, and what I have seen over the years, the erosion of the role of the legislators in this particular building, is significant. It's significant when you bring a bill like this forward, which shouldn't be a controversial bill, but because of the process that exists now in the Legislature, it is a controversial bill.

MRS. SOETAERT: It's an issue of trust.

MS OLSEN: Well, my colleague says it's an issue of trust.

You know what? That's exactly what it is. I think the sweeping powers are given to Legislative Counsel and then from that day forward – and that's the change in this bill – they will be forever allowed to be the ongoing source of authority. I have a lot of difficulty with that, because that means that we would never see another one of these. It would just happen. We would never know if the rules were changed. We would never know what particular pieces of legislation were being changed.

What comes to mind, Madam Speaker, is Bill 1 from last year, Bill 1 in the spring session. That was the Premier's bill, the financial responsibility act; "Boy, oh boy, you know, I'm going to stand up and bring this bill in." Not six months later that bill was brought back for an amendment. There wasn't a great deal of change to that particular bill, and I'm just wondering, Madam Speaker, if that's the kind of change that we are going to see cropping up.

I know the Minister of Justice would say: no, that's not what I want, and that's not what I meant when I brought forward this bill. But he doesn't have the final say in his caucus, so somebody could slip things by him. I know he's very smart, but some people still could slip things by him without even talking to him. I mean, you know, other things have been slipped by him, unfortunately, and sometimes you pay the price for that. But you know what? It's a matter of trust, Madam Speaker, and that concerns me. Was that such a minor amendment to Bill 1, the Premier's flagship bill from last year? It was amended not four months later, in the fall session, because he broke his own law.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Questioning a Member

MR. HANCOCK: I rise under the appropriate rule of Beauchesne's to ask whether the hon. member would entertain a question.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Would the hon. member entertain a question?

MS OLSEN: No. No. I can't. I'm sorry. I've got to get my debate finished, but I will meet the hon. minister outside for a cup of coffee, and we can maybe have a chat.

Debate Continued

MS OLSEN: That's one of the issues I have.

We also saw, if you would think about it, Madam Speaker, last year in the fall the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act come forward. The Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act in fact had a lot of changes in it that should have been and are now being brought through the bill process. There was an effort to use miscellaneous statutes as a vehicle to make some significant changes to some bills. They weren't just inconsequential amendments and changes. They were significant. When we see those kinds of things, we again say: why is that happening?

We only want to see minor corrections come through miscellaneous statutes, that we can agree on, and that's also another process that we've been able to work out. Bring in miscellaneous statutes, and if it's an issue of language or grammar, renumbering, adding or changing or omitting a heading, bringing things in line with how the document or the act speaks, that's done in miscellaneous statutes. You know, add that process to the already limited ability now for us to really see and debate what's going on in the Legislature, then it does raise some real concerns.

9:00

You know, I'm cognizant of what the minister is trying to achieve. I understand, but I guess I don't feel comfortable that this bill bestows a fair amount of discretionary power on the Chief Legislative Counsel. Fine; I think they do a good job. I think: do the document, bring it forward to a committee, and let us look at it. Let's deal with it, and then let us ratify it here. It doesn't have to be a big, klutzy process. But, certainly, giving that power to the Legislative Counsel on an ongoing basis is not something that I feel is going to serve the best interests of this province.

I do want to bring up one issue that I'm very happy the minister dealt with, and that's the issue of gender-neutral language. You know, even from 1980 we've come a long way, because there has not been an accommodation ever, ever in the history of the Statute Revision Act to put statutes into gender-neutral language. But you know what? It's not just this that it should come through. There should be a critical analysis, a gender analysis applied to each and every piece of legislation that comes through. For every policy the government decides they're going to adopt, there should be a gender lens applied to that. Sometimes we miss things going through the process, and if we don't ask the question, "Is this good for everybody, all Albertans," then sometimes we miss the boat, Madam Speaker.

I do want to commend the minister for seeing to it. That particular section I think in this bill is 3(e). I really think he's done this piece of legislation justice by saying: yeah, we're going to revise all those statutes and put them into gender-neutral language. That's a big step for the other side.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, it was at least from the Paleolithic era to today.

MS OLSEN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has got some really fine things to say about that gender-neutral language.

With that, Madam Speaker, I think my time is closing here. I could run my time out. However, I would like to hear the rest of the debate on this particular piece of legislation. Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I certainly would never be able to match my colleague from Edmonton-Norwood for either the breadth of her debate or for the colour of her debate, but I'd like to offer a couple of additional observations. The cynics among us, when they hear my observations, may be inclined to share their perspectives.

The definition of opposition at least to one Canadian was as follows:

A viewing gallery from which to ridicule the party in power for mistakes similar if not identical to those that the opposition can be relied upon to commit should it take power.

Madam Speaker, when you're part of a party that's been in opposition for 76 years, you develop an amazing facility to be able to study legislation and to turn it upside down and to look through the minutiae of the legislation. There may be many who say: goodness; how can MLAs get exercised over Bill 3? We heard a wonderful presentation from the Minister of Justice that should allow all of us to sleep better at night. I meant after we leave this Chamber, Madam Speaker. I didn't want to accuse the Minister of Justice and Government House Leader of putting any of his colleagues to sleep in the course of the debate on Bill 3.

My observation, Madam Speaker, is simply this. Our job – and we take it seriously, and certainly my colleague from Edmonton-

Norwood spoke well to this – is not necessarily to take government at its word when it says: we only intend to do this, this, and this with a bill. Our job is to look at the bill, to scrutinize the bill, and see if in fact it would allow other things to be done, other powers to be exercised, powers to be exercised in a different way and in a different fashion from that outlined by the Minister of Justice as the chief proponent of Bill 3.

I'm going to offer a broader analysis to the bill, but first, Madam Speaker, if everybody would take their bill out of their briefing file, I'd refer all members to page 2, section 3. In committee stage we're going to be able to do a subsection review, but I simply wanted to draw the attention of all members, the Minister of Justice and other members, to three provisions that cause me to ask questions about whether this is a measured and appropriate response to deal with the need to have Revised Statutes.

Let me say this and just get it off the table right now. Madam Speaker, I love Revised Statutes. It's a great invention. It's a wonderful, wonderful device. It simplifies things for the pages in the Assembly in terms of being able to bring statutes to the attention of MLAs in debate. It makes it easier for lawyers in the course of doing their work to be able to access a statute law of their province. It makes it easier for Albertans that want to find out what the law of the land is, to be able to access a revised statute. I agree completely with the Minister of Justice. I'm disappointed also that we haven't had one since 1980.

In any event, Madam Speaker, now that members have got their bills out and are looking at page 2, I refer members to section 3 and three provisions that I think are problematic, using whatever sort of criteria you might want to apply, especially 3(h). This is what the Chief Legislative Counsel may do, section 3(h), "make minor amendments to clarify what is considered to be the intention of the Legislature."

Now, is there a definition of what is minor? No. There is not a definition of what is minor. Is there a definition that tells us what would be the intention of the Legislature in any given bill? Well, Madam Speaker, I sit in this Chamber probably just about as much as any other one of the 82 MLAs. I may be a much slower student than other members in the Assembly, but sometimes I'm a bit puzzled and a bit confused in terms of precisely what is the intention of the Legislature.

You see, I hear the Minister of Justice make one of his typically compelling and persuasive arguments. I hear an equally persuasive and compelling argument from my colleague from Edmonton-Norwood, and I may hear the Member for Rocky Mountain House, that esteemed minister of agriculture, make an observation, and I may think that that is persuasive too. We have a vote, and then if you were to ask me: so what's the intention of the Legislature? I know what we've passed, but the Chief Legislative Counsel also has access to the text of the bill, but the question is: does he know what was intended?

9:10

Well, Madam Speaker, on some bills I think I get it, and then there are some other bills where there's always a sense I have to stand up for the next one, because it's just gone right over me. Sometimes I don't quite get what the purpose of the bill was, what the intention was. Now, the Chief Legislative Counsel is clearly much more astute than this member, and I have every confidence in the current Chief Legislative Counsel, but we're talking about a forum and a model and a system that isn't dependent on a particular personality or a particular individual. It's the office. So I'm a bit troubled with the breadth of section 3(h).

Next I'd ask members to look at section 3(i). This is page 2,

Member for Calgary-Bow. "Make changes to reconcile apparently inconsistent provisions." Now, Madam Speaker, this is one of my favorites. I had never realized before I came to this Assembly the extent to which elected people can deal in the areas of contradiction, inconsistency, and confusion. It's becoming almost a stock-in-trade. We find statutes that are contradictory. We find sometimes provisions within the same bill that seem contradictory. Nonetheless, some of these things get passed. There's no definition that says what's an apparently inconsistent provision. Is this only in terms of form? Is this not treading, however timidly, on that bigger issue of substantive law? So I ask that question. It seems to me a power that is capable of abuse, and I think that's part of what our job as an opposition is, to query whether there's potential here for these sections to be used in a way that's perhaps not intended by the Minister of Justice tonight but could be misused by others for different purposes.

The third provision that troubles me and that I'd encourage members to look at is section 3(n):

Make minor amendments to other enactments not being revised that are required to reconcile them with a revised enactment as if the minor amendments were amendments consequential to the revised enactment.

Now, once again there's no definition of what a minor amendment is. We have seen numerous statutes before brought into this Assembly, and they're presented solemnly, I'm sure sincerely, by the sponsoring proponent with the comment: this is housekeeping. Madam Speaker, how many times have you heard those words? This is a housekeeping bill. When those bills get first reading, often that's the comment.

Then when we get to second reading, Madam Speaker, if the opposition is on their toes or maybe a government private member, somebody stands up and asks a question – and sometimes those questions are penetrating, and sometimes those questions are incisive – about: is this really housekeeping, could this be used for other purposes, and so on?

Well, we're not going to have the chance here, because there's a direct line between the Chief Legislative Counsel over here and the Lieutenant Governor over there, and these things go like one of those Japanese bullet trains. The decision is made, and it shoots down the line and out the other side before Albertans know what's hit them.

I make this respectful suggestion, that I'm most interested in working with the Minister of Justice or anybody in his department to take 3(h), (i), and (n) and see if there isn't a way that reasonable men and women could agree to modify (h), (i), and (n) to remove the ambiguity, to make it clear that in fact the bill does exactly what the Minister of Justice had said he wants it do.

There's another way of trying to remedy this bill, Madam Speaker, and it is to do what the federal government does and some other provinces do, which is to have some kind of an oversight mechanism of this Assembly. That would typically be a standing committee of the Legislative Assembly with representation from the government party, the Official Opposition, the third party, and maybe we'd have an independent member on there. What this allows us to do is that the Chief Legislative Counsel comes and makes a bit of a report. He plunks down on the table and he says: Madam Speaker, I've reviewed these statutes, and here are the changes that I'm proposing to do this modification. You would find that the committee would quickly zero in on those items that are contentious, discount and move over those that are not, and in jig time what you'd have is attention drawn to those things that require some amplification, some qualification, some additional provisos to make sure that it simply does what the Legislature thinks it should do.

In fact, Madam Speaker, there's a bit of a process that purports to do that now. We have the Member for Peace River and his never-ending regulatory review committee. I don't remember the appropriate name of the task force, but I think all members know what I'm talking about.

MR. CLEGG: Gone.

MR. DICKSON: Has that been sunsetted?

MR. CLEGG: Yes. Well, no. It's changed.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Speaker, I don't want the Member for Peace River to come in and on a point of order say tomorrow that I've somehow tarred his good name by suggesting that he's still involved with dealing regulations and he's responsible for the 700 or 800 regulations that are whipped through this provincial government on an annual basis.

MRS. SOETAERT: Well, it's Grande Prairie-Wapiti that does it now.

MR. DICKSON: I understand that a new member now has the responsibility, so I want to correct myself on that. Grande Prairie-Wapiti. I understand that there's another process, too, that the government has. It's the government's legislative review committee. I'm not sure I've got the right name.

There are very capable people on both of those processes. But do you know something, Madam Speaker? They're invisible to the rest of us. It's an internal caucus function. It's not a function of this Legislative Assembly. So unless our friend from Calgary-Glenmore is going to come in and sort of table the minutes and the workings of his legislative review committee or the Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti is prepared to come in and report and answer questions about his regulatory review responsibility, you know, the rest of us are sort of left in the dark once again. I don't think that's good lawmaking, and I don't think that's the best that the very intelligent men and women in this Assembly can come up with in terms of dealing with that.

It seems to me we do one of two things with this bill. If we want as eagerly as I do to get that new 2000 set of Revised Statutes – it's sort of like when the national mint issues a new set of coins and you run out to get one for your grandkids, or when Canada Post brings out a new stamp. I mean, some of us stand in line. Pick me for that first copy of the Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000. I can see there will probably be a stampede to the Queen's Printer when that happens. In the meantime, Madam Speaker, I think we can either improve on the oversight process and/or we can deal with some of the problematic parts in section 3. So my intention was simply to highlight those concerns. The Official Opposition understands the importance of revised statutes, but let us recognize that there's a context.

I thought the Member for Edmonton-Norwood spoke eloquently to the undermining of the supremacy of the Legislature as we see more and more delegated lawmaking, subordinate legislation it's called, whether it's regulations, ministerial orders, other kinds of departmental orders. So much of that stuff is the things that affect the men and women of this province, affect their families and affect their businesses, but it's not done in this place, and it's not done by these folks. It's done outside this room in some dark, cloistered corner somewhere by who knows who.

9:20

Maybe we get let in on the secret of the distillate after the process, but that's not good enough, Madam Speaker. I know it's not good enough for the people in Lacombe. I know it's not good enough for you, it's not good enough for me, and I think we can find a better way of doing it. I think we can do that without having to scrap the entire bill, and we'll make sure that those Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000 are there in their mint, pristine condition waiting for the first eager batch of purchasers lining up now, probably, at Queen's Printer. It'll be like going to a rock concert. You know, you've got to get down and stand in line first to get your ticket to be able to then go and stand in line for the main event.

Thanks very much, Madam Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to have an opportunity to be able to comment on this Bill 3, Statute Revision Act.

I listened very carefully to what the Minister of Justice was saying in introducing this bill, and I agree with much of what's been said previously in that I think we do need something that is going to allow us a comprehensive update of the laws of the province. My colleague from Calgary-Buffalo has spoken on the need. I mean, it's been 20 years since the last time we had one of these revised statutes acts, and I think we do need it. I've had people point out to me the number of inconsistencies that we have in language even over the 20 years. For instance, in some cases I know we're referring to a spouse; in others places in the acts we refer to a wife or a husband. There's a whole variety of different names that are put upon essentially the same people, and that kind of thing needs to be made more consistent, for example.

But I think despite the best intentions – and I know this is an honourable member that has proposed this – what I see is an erosion of the powers of this Chamber. Essentially we're being asked: well, trust us; just trust us. And I am not willing to trust this government or to relinquish my responsibility in the preparation and supervision of legislation that's created in this Chamber. I'm not willing to relinquish that with a "just trust me." I think there are a number of examples, even in my short time in this Chamber, where I have – and it's sad to see one so young become so cynical so quickly. It is a sad thing, but truly . . .

MRS. SOETAERT: So young. So very young.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you.

. . . in my short experience here I've had good reason to become cynical, and the "just trust me" doesn't work for me.

Miscellaneous statutes bill: there's a perfect example. When I first started in this Chamber, miscellaneous statutes was, you know, four or five pages long. We're now getting the 10-volume set. It's coming out and it's like 30, 40 pages long. It's amending dozens of acts. This is not minor administrative housekeeping. I mean, for heaven's sake, the great controversy of last year around riding in the back of pickup trucks and laws to either prohibit or allow that ended up coming through under miscellaneous statutes. That's not small stuff. That affected and was of great interest to a number of Albertans. It wasn't administrative in any way.

MRS. SOETAERT: No, it wasn't. That would be a good example.

MS BLAKEMAN: When I look at the crafting of bills . . .

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Excuse me, hon. member. I just was wondering whether Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert really wanted to go on the speaking list, because she seems to be in tandem with you.

MRS. SOETAERT: She's inspired me. Absolutely.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Well, hon. member, may I remind you that there's only one person who has the floor at a time. Edmonton-Centre has the floor.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much for your wise assistance. Always appreciated, Madam Speaker.

MRS. SOETAERT: Don't you appreciate me?

MS BLAKEMAN: Not at the moment, no.

So when we talk about the crafting of bills in this Legislature – and I've spoken about this before – we can make mistakes and we have made mistakes, but generally we're relying on the skills of the legislators, aided by staff experts. I look at what I think is one of the best pieces of legislation, and that's our Constitution. When you look at how long ago that was created and how well it has stood up, how carefully it was crafted, even they made mistakes. For instance, they couldn't at the time have anticipated the advent of television or the use of satellites for communication, but it was crafted in a well enough way that you could look at it and figure out where to put it, where it was logical.

There's always interpretation that goes on, but I think that interpretation which goes on around legislation needs to be done by the legislators, not by staff. You need to be able to go back and look at the remarks in the debate when the bill was first coming up. It even helps if you're able to talk to the people that are here, and I know my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo spoke about this. What is the intention? How are we supposed to find that intention?

I think there's something else that's being called into play here with this Bill 3, and that's the concept of ministerial responsibility. We have operated under that process for some time, and that is that as the legislators, we do the deed and we take the heat. The government has staff advisers who prepare the ministers. They give them good advice and background material, and the minister accepts the responsibility for what's going on and protects the staff from the scrutiny of the public or exposure to the public; the media, for instance. What happens to that when the Chief Legislative Counsel is now the person that's responsible for this? I think that opens up and skews that whole concept of ministerial responsibility, and I don't think we want to go there, because in the end, who is responsible for the mistakes, then, if there are any mistakes? I think as legislators we're willing to accept the responsibility for that, but can we be putting that on a staff person? I don't know.

So I think there's great possibility for erosion of powers here, and we're back to the trust idea. I think, well, you know, where else have I seen examples of this that have caused me to not trust what the government's doing? Well, there are things like the standing policy committee. Now, those are committees which are chosen by the government, funded out of the taxpayer dollars, funded out of the budget that we pass, but the information that goes on there and the decisions that are made there are not open to all of the legislators in this Chamber. It's very specific to government. We don't have entry to that, those of us on this side.

The Law and Regulations Committee. Never been called. I don't think it has been called in a dozen years. It's certainly never been called during my time here, and the whole purpose of that committee has been to review that legislation and those recommendations that support that legislation. Is it given an opportunity to act here with the all-party participation? No, it is not. It's never called, and that, I think, is an erosion of democracy.

Let me give you an example. We've heard the talk about how the Queen's Printer will be printing these changes. The Minister of Justice said that if it isn't a very big change, well, they can just publish something in the Statutes of Alberta. Well, I've spoken before about how difficult it is for a member of the public to actually find out exactly what it is that's gone on in this Chamber or that's happened with the government. I mean, has anybody here ever really tried to understand and glean information from an order in council. It's a few words long, you know, regarding some sale of land. That's all you get from it. To be able to plow backwards and know the right people to call and be able to find out exactly what that meant is very difficult. So for the public the idea of being able to follow what's been changed here – and it can be a substantial change as the Member for Calgary-Buffalo pointed out. Very difficult.

9:30

The whole idea of what I've seen here with this government essentially creating shell legislation is the way I heard another member refer to it, in which the legislation is really just the shell, and then all the regulations are where the meat of the thing is. Well, I had a friend that was working on a committee for a city, something to do with reviewing the regulations under the MGA. It was about the property tax, and they were on some kind of appeals committee. They had a case come before them. I don't know what the case was. They reported back to me and said: we were totally confused about why this case would come before us; it seemed to fit all the criteria. Then they found out that the regulations had been changed.

Well, here was a group of people volunteering for the city, under the auspices of the city, who weren't even aware that there had been a change in regulations. That backs up my point. It's very difficult for the public to find out what's going on. So to have even more done, not even under regulations but under some sort of Chief Legislative Counsel and then put out through the Statutes of Alberta – impossible, almost impossible for people to find out what's going on.

The Public Accounts Committee, which I am very pleased to sit on, is another one that's meant to be an all-party committee, but the members of the committee that have the majority on it, which of course is the government side, consistently refuses to adopt the Canadian public accounts committees' rules and processes. So that committee is very narrow in its focus and what it's able to do.

Let's look at another thing: the whole budget process. Now, that to me is truly an erosion of what has happened here. We have supposedly 20 days of debate that are now split in two, and we're debating two a night and sometimes even three departments a night. That's an erosion of the powers of this Legislative Assembly. Do we see more of that under this bill?

Increasing use of closure. Increasing use of the privative clause. There's another one. I had a lawyer friend chatting to me the other day. He reviews legislation for his company. He said: you know, it's really interesting; in the last seven years or so we increasingly see the use of the privative clause in new legislation that's coming out. That is part of what is creating these pieces of shell legislation. The privative clause is the one that says that, you know, the minister is God, that nobody can challenge him in court or anything, any decisions that are made. I mean, to me it's an extreme example of hubris. Nonetheless, we've got more and more and more of these showing up in the last seven years. Very interesting. [interjections] There has been increasing use of the privative clause in legislation here in the last seven years. Go back and look. I went downstairs to the library, and I asked and looked. I did.

We know that regulations are difficult enough to get hold of, certainly to be aware of any changes that are happening. I've talked about how difficult it is to decipher or find out what the real information is behind orders in council. This bill is talking about taking what this Chamber does a step further beyond all the things I've just detailed that already pull away from the powers of this Chamber and this Assembly, all those things I listed. The standing policy committees, not calling the all-party committees to sit at all, like Law and Regulations has never been called, the budget process, the use of closure, the increasing use of the privative clause: all those things are taking away from what this Chamber does. This legislation can take us one step further away again.

Now, happily I notice something in here I like besides the concept of being able to update the legislation. It is to "revise and alter language to achieve gender-neutral terminology." Well, you know, Madam Speaker, it's a heck of a long way from the paleolithic age to today, but I'm very pleased to see that some members of this government have made that giant leap across that chasm of time. They have moved into the 21st century. I am proud of you for that, and I thank you for that. We should be able to achieve gender-neutral language in our legislation in this day and age.

MRS. SOETAERT: Oh, that would be something.

MS BLAKEMAN: Yeah. So I do congratulate the minister and the government for being able to put that forward in the legislation. I'm very pleased to see that. It doesn't counteract fully all my other hesitations about what's possible if this bill gets passed.

One of the other things that leapt out at me was the thing about "making minor amendments to other enactments" that are revised in order to reconcile everything. Now, that's really interesting. There's been a bill introduced, Bill 16, the condo amendment act, and that's a good example, because we have a previous condo amendment act from 1996 which has never been proclaimed. We're now amending the condo act again, I guess the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2000. If this goes through, do we end up with amendments or with – how are they putting it? "Minor amendments to other enactments" which haven't been enacted yet? Can the original bill from 1996 be changed when it hasn't ever been proclaimed? Again, what kind of scrutiny is available there? What kind of information is available to the public there?

So I have great hesitation with what is in this bill, and I think that in the worst case scenario it is a huge step towards further erosion of the powers of this Assembly, which I think is wrong, very wrong. But, as I've said, there are a few good things in there.

I am going to ask that we adjourn debate on Bill 3, because I am looking forward to being able to return later at another time to be able to further debate this bill. I know there's disappointment from others who didn't get to speak, but I would ask that we adjourn, Madam Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

9:40

head: Government Bills and Orders

head: Committee of the Whole

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I'd call the Committee of the Whole to order, please.

Bill 6 Special Payment Act

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. It's an honour and a pleasure this evening to rise to speak to Bill 6, the Special Payment Act, in Committee of the Whole. I just have a few comments and questions that I'll pose to the minister tonight in hopes that he will be able to alleviate some of the fears the widows expressed to me when they had an opportunity to read this bill.

The first thing they noticed in the bill was that there was no provision for the WCB to identify or notify individuals whose spouses were killed in a job-related accident. They did note, however, that a web site has been set up and that if they contact that web site, they will be able to have a kit sent out to them which will inform them how they go about applying for this special payment. They are very concerned that some of the people who should be receiving this special payment will not.

Now, they made a concerted effort as well earlier on in this process where they made a freedom of information request to the WCB so they could get a list of the names of those widows or widowers who were or would be affected by this, but they were denied. So they went at it from a little different angle, and they made another request that the WCB contact on their behalf those people who would be surviving spouses, but again this request was denied. So they do have some concerns in this regard, Mr. Minister.

Their next major concern with this particular bill is how the WCB arrived at the figure of $80,000. In talking with a number of the surviving spouses, they indicated that if indeed this figure is $80,000, this would be less than a three-year payment by today's rates that widows would receive if their spouses were killed in a job-related accident or how their pensions would have been increased over the years.

The actuaries on one of these widow's pensions at today's rates indicate that this pension would be in the neighbourhood of $1,100 per month. When she had actuaries done looking at retroactive pay with the increments that would have occurred over the time since her husband died, with interest and retroactive to 1985 $80,000 is $120,00 shy of what she should be getting. So she certainly is concerned that she isn't receiving the amount of money that she feels she's entitled to.

As well, in the bill itself in section 2(3): "No interest is payable on the special payment." So that was another question: why would there not be any interest payable to them?

They were quite concerned that the only input their group had with the WCB occurred at a meeting when they were asked what they wanted as a settlement. Now, they indicated at that time that they would like a settlement very similar to those that occurred in British Columbia and Ontario. In both of those, pensions were reinstated with interest back to 1985 when section 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms came into force. Looking at this, again this is one of the major reasons that widows in other provinces were successful and why these widows felt they were entitled to their pensions. Under section 15(1) in the Charter, and this is under the section entitled Equality Rights, every individual is equal before and under the law and has the right to the equal protection and equal benefit of the law without discrimination and, in particular, without discrimination based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.

So in this particular case they definitely felt they had been discriminated against because some widows post 1982 were treated differently than they were.

As well, it is interesting to note that in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick widows are awaiting pending decisions from the courts in regards to their settlement. In Nova Scotia, Madam Chairman, I do have a copy of the summary of Bill 90 benefits, which was An Act to Amend the Workers' Compensation Act. This was passed in the Nova Scotia Legislature on April 13, 1999. It received royal assent on April 16, 1999, and was fully proclaimed on April 28, 1999.

I would like to point out highlights of two particular sections in here. These are under the new benefits sections 4 and 6. Under section 4: "Reinstatement of pensions retroactively to January 1, 1999 to survivors who remarried and had their benefits terminated before April 17, 1985." As well, section 3: "Pensions become payable for life (instead of age 65) to survivors where the worker was injured pre-February 1, 1996 and died on or after February 1, 1996." This benefit will be proclaimed on April 28, 1999. Again, a very different type of settlement than what we have here. I look under section 5: "Reinstatement of pensions retroactively to the date benefits ended to survivors who remarried on or after April 17, 1985 and before October 1, 1992." Madam Chairman, with your permission I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of this article that I was referring to.

Another major concern that a number of these widows have – and these are people that today are living on provincial assistance, whether it be AISH or whether it be social services or whatever – is how this lump sum payment, this special payment will affect those people that are now receiving those benefits. So they did have some concerns about how these members' assistance would be affected by a lump sum payment.

Another thing they saw in the bill but were not in favour of is why there are no death benefits to the surviving family members. I was pleased today, Madam Chairman, to see in the announcement regarding the farmers in need that they will receive a speedy payment. Has the minister any time lines on how quickly after they have applied the surviving spouses will be paid the moneys which are due?

I guess one last point I would like to make for the minister is that I don't see any provision in this particular bill as to when it will come into force. Would the minister be able to tell me if an amendment is required to have this bill put into force upon royal assent or not?

9:50

With those comments, Madam Chairman, I will conclude my comments on Bill 6 in the Committee of the Whole, and I thank you for this opportunity.

[Mrs. Laing in the chair]

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. Nice to see you in the chair. Just a couple of points that I want to make on this bill before us, that being Bill 6, the Special Payment Act. First of all, congratulations to the government for listening and for doing something. It's not often that I see that happen with this government, and I have to put it on the record and say "congratulations" when I do see it happen.

I think the history behind the creation of this particular piece of legislation is a really good example of advocacy from individuals. I often hear people say: "Well, you know, what's the point? What difference could I possibly make to influence legislation or to advocate for myself to make a change? There's no use. They never listen. You can't fight city hall." All that sort of attitude. I always say: "No, you have to make your voice heard. Use every avenue that's open to you. Whatever form of advocacy or ways to raise the issue that you feel comfortable with, use them. If that's being in a march and carrying a placard, do it. If it's writing letters or phoning someone's office, do it."

This group, the Disenfranchised Widows Action Group, did exactly that. They did all those things. They contacted members of the government. Each member of the group contacted their own MLAs. They contacted a number of us in the opposition, and I had an opportunity to work with the group for some time as well. I first met them when they came to us in the spring of '97, shortly after I was elected. They laid out what their concerns were, and I could agree that there was an injustice here. There was an unfairness; there's no question. I commend the Member for Edmonton-Glenarry for following through with this group and staying with them and advising them, coaching them, and following through on giving advice and guidance to this group. I know there are others out there who deserve credit for assisting them.

I think the credit really goes to the women themselves, who did follow through. They did keep at it. You know, they phoned one MLA and didn't get enough action, so they phoned two and three and four. At one point I think they had about four of us in the opposition all arranging different meetings for them and doing research for them and giving advice. That's fine. That's good. That's exactly what they should be doing. That's exactly how you do advocate for yourself to influence policy and to get legislation changed to get inequities addressed.

I'm going to be able to talk about this bill for a long time and use it as an example for other people, because the truth is that there was no legislation. There was no sort of legal avenue this group could use to force the government to deal with them. They kept at it, and they have been able to advocate for themselves and end up with a piece of legislation before this Assembly.

Now, having said all of that, there are just a couple of points I want to raise. Time is of the essence with this bill. Others have spoken to that, so I won't go on at length, but time is of the essence with this bill. Sometimes at the end of a bill you'll get instructions on when it's proclaimed. Sometimes it's a specific date, or sometimes it's proclaimed on royal assent or when something else happens. I'm not seeing that in this bill. When time is of the essence, as it is here - we have some elderly and some very frail and some very ill members of this group, terminally ill even - it is critical that this legislation be proclaimed as soon as possible. So if an amendment were going to happen here, that's the amendment I would like to see, that there be a specific date put in here, ASAP, to be able to process the claims and to be able to get the money into the hands of these women as quickly as possible. That's what I'd like to see.

Secondly, how was the figure that was quoted in the bill, I believe . . .

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

MR. BONNER: It's not quoted.

MS BLAKEMAN: It's not quoted in the bill.

MR. BONNER: It's by WCB.

MS BLAKEMAN: Okay. We know that the amount that's under consideration as a settlement for each individual as a result of the passage of this bill is a figure set, I believe, at $80,000. I haven't heard how that was arrived at. I know that some of the women feel: "Well, why that amount? It should have been more for various and sundry other reasons." So I'm wondering what the criteria were to calculate that particular figure. How was it arrived at? I think if we went back and looked at the amounts of money these individuals would have had had the program stayed as it was, it would amount to a heck of a lot more than $80,000. But I'm interested in how it was arrived at.

The third point is the take-it-or-leave-it sort of proviso that's in the legislation. There's no further room for discussion about this. They either take the whole thing and everything that goes with it or they're completely out in the cold. That's a bit draconian, given the circumstances these women have come through to get to this point. This government often tends to the draconian in legislation, so I'm not surprised; I'm just wondering why it happened in this particular piece of legislation, which I would have to say falls under the kinder, gentler pieces of legislation I've seen come forward here.

The last point is: what happened to these women and what is unfair about what happened to these women is that WCB widows in this province were treated differently. In the same circumstances they were treated differently based on an arbitrary date. That's what's unfair about it, and that's what has allowed other provinces to do a Charter challenge. It was the same group of people with exactly the same circumstances that got them into a particular place, and they are being treated differently. But this legislation does address that wrong. I'm very pleased to see that.

I would hope this newfound understanding of equity carries through into other pieces of legislation and into other regulations and into the budget process and a number of other processes that are available to this government. We certainly need to see more of that, particularly from my point of view as the opposition critic for women's issues. I see a lot of this inequity. This is a first step along what I hope is going to be a long road of better understanding about how inequity is created and how it should be dealt with and treated fairly to address the wrong that was caused.

With those few points, I'm very pleased to be supporting this bill, wholeheartedly I might add. I don't want to delay passage of this bill by any means. As I say, there is a need here for a very quick passage and a quick settlement. I wish I could see a date in here. Perhaps I can get the minister to do a government amendment to it or to enable very fast passage of the bill.

With those few remarks, Madam Chairman, I will give the floor to someone else.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

10:00

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Just for the purpose of clarification for all the members of the Legislature. When a bill comes before us without a date for proclamation, such as Bill 6, it's then inferred that the date will be at royal assent. I use as my authority the Interpretation Act, under section 4(1):

The date of the commencement of an Act or of any portion of an Act for which no other date of commencement is provided in the Act is the date of assent to the Act.

I think, then, that the request for expediency will be handled, because upon final reading and upon royal assent the act is in place.

In conclusion to my remarks here at the committee level, I want to again just make it clear that the role of the government in bringing this bill forward is simply to provide an avenue for settlement to be reached. The government is not responsible to nor does it have the authority to in fact effect what that settlement would be. Certainly I have compassion and sensitivity toward the widows and their plight, but I think we also have to think for a moment of current-day employers, who after all are going to be the ones to have to pay for whatever settlements are made.

Once again, I would remind all members of the House that Bill 6 provides an avenue. If someone feels that the settlement that's offered is not appropriate, is not the proper amount, they still have of course, as they should have, access through the court.

So with those comments, Madam Chairman, I would like to move that this bill be reported when we rise and report.

[The clauses of Bill 6 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report progress on Bill 6.

[Motion to report progress on Bill 6 carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

MR. COUTTS: Madam Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports the following: Bill 6. I would also like to table copies of the documents tabled during Committee of the Whole this day for the official records of the Assembly.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

[At 10:06 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, March 15, 2000

1:30 p.m.

Date: 00/03/15

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O God, grant that we the members of our province's Legislature may fulfill our office with honesty and integrity. May our first concern be for the good of all our people. Guide our deliberations this day. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition on public health care to present today. It's 120 names from Edmonton, St. Albert, Leduc, Sherwood Park. They urge that the government of Alberta "stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care" in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to present a petition to the Legislature. There are 117 Albertans that have signed this petition, and they are from Sherwood Park, Ardrossan, and Edmonton. They are urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon I would like to present this petition of 144 individuals from Edmonton, Sherwood Park, and St. Albert urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition signed by 140 people from Edmonton, Warburg, Fort Saskatchewan, Leduc, and Beaumont urging the government "to protect, support, and enhance public health care in Alberta and to ban for-profit, private hospitals from receiving public dollars."

MS LEIBOVICI: It's my great pleasure this afternoon to present a petition by 120 Albertans from Bon Accord, Spruce Grove, Sherwood Park, Fort Saskatchewan, and St. Albert indicating that they, too, want the government to protect and support our public health care system and to "ban for-profit, private hospitals."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table a petition signed by 635 Albertans from Valleyview, Fort McMurray, Lacombe, Rimbey, Bluffton, Eckville, Blackfalds, Leslieville, Winfield, Millet, Pearce, Falher, and Calgary for a total of 4,150 petition signatures to date. The petitioners are asking the Legislative Assembly of Alberta "to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

MS GRAHAM: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Further to my report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, which I gave Tuesday, March 14, 2000, I move that the five petitions for private bills presented in the Assembly on Wednesday, March 8, 2000, now be deemed to be read and received.

[Motion carried]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you. I would ask that the petition I presented on March 14 on listing of drugs for osteoporosis now be read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Alberta Government to take an enlightened preventative approach and add the newer and more effective medications and therapies to the Alberta Drug List to ensure the health of an aging society.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, wish to have the petition I presented on March 14 regarding private health care now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I'd ask that the petition I presented on March 14 now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the petition which I presented to this Assembly on March 14 urging the government to stop its promotion of private health care now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

head: Notices of Motions

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 40 I'll be asking for the unanimous consent of the Legislative Assembly to debate the following matter of pressing urgency.

Be it resolved that the Assembly, recognizing that the ongoing Calgary Herald strike and Mr. Conrad Black's refusal to engage in fair collective bargaining is an indictment of Alberta's unfair laws, urges the government to appoint a disputes inquiry board to facilitate the settlement of this dispute.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. the Premier.

MR. KLEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. Both are letters. One is from the Bonavista Eye Clinic, in which the writer says that "the idea of contracting out services is a sound and wise move."

The other is from the Kensington Clinic, which performs therapeutic abortions, and it points out that this clinic now charges the Calgary regional health authority "less than what was charged to patients privately between 1991 and 1996."

I would like to table these two letters, Mr. Speaker.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, today I have two tablings. First of all, I wish to table with the Assembly five copies of the report Building Better Bridges, prepared by the Hon. Gene Zwozdesky, Associate Minister of Health and Wellness. This is a very comprehensive report. [interjections] I regret that the members across the way think it's laughable; it certainly isn't. It's a serious report dealing with a very, very important topic. Along with it is a consultation form that would be sent asking the people involved in the review to comment on the recommendations. I wish to table that with the Assembly.

Further, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table five copies of a news release I issued today along with an independent legal opinion which highlights the very significant similarity between Bill 11, the Health Care Protection Act, and Saskatchewan's Health Facilities Licensing Act, which was passed in 1996 by a New Democratic government, now a New Democratic/Liberal coalition.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

MR. LUND: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the six copies of the responses to the members' questions from Committee of Supply on Tuesday, March 7. These responses were given orally in the Assembly last night as well.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

MS LEIBOVICI: Point of order.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table five letters and e-mails opposing Bill 11, which include an e-mail from a doctor in the Premier's riding, an e-mail from Rimbey in the health minister's riding, and the others from Edmonton and Calgary.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

1:40

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings that I'll run through very quickly this afternoon with your permission. The first is an excerpt of a document entitled An Opportunity to Develop a New Fiscal Partnership for Canada's Social Programs, the 1999 Western Finance Ministers' Report dated May 20, 1999, in which our Treasurer was a participant. In part, the report concludes:

Western Canada, along with other provinces and territories, will receive an equitable share of the health supplement and the increased cash floor, as these will be paid on an equal per capita basis. This is a constructive response to the 1996 Western Finance Ministers' call for a more equitable allocation of the [Canada health and social transfer].

Mr. Speaker, the second tabling is Current Analysis, a document from the Royal Bank of Canada dated September 1999, and in part it concludes that "we project that by 2004/5 Ottawa will have a fiscal surplus amounting to $25.9 billion, or 2.2% of gross domestic product." That of course is important in the calculation of tax room.

The third tabling is an analysis done on the province's flat tax. It's updated figures showing that unless there is a significant change in the personal exemptions, at the $35,000 taxable income level, the $50,000 taxable income level, and $65,000 taxable income level the rate at 10.5 percent is still an Alberta disadvantage to taxpayers in this province.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, a report titled Projected Reduction in Alberta's 11% Flat Tax Rate to Flow Through Federal Government Tax Measures affecting Alberta, 2004/05-2007/08. The major conclusion is a required reduction in the Alberta 11 percent flat tax to fully capture Alberta tax relief would be 7.82 percent.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table for the information of the House this afternoon a letter I received from Harold S. Millican of Calgary. He is one of "130 Calgarians from all walks of life concerned about the quality of print journalism" in the city of Calgary and "the negative impact that the current labour dispute at the Calgary Herald is having."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 109 I am pleased to table with the Assembly the 11th annual report of the Legislative Assembly Office for the calendar year ended December 31, 1999. This report includes the third annual report of the Alberta branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. A copy of the report is being distributed to all members.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. the Premier.

MR. KLEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to the Assembly today on your behalf four prominent Alberta business leaders. They are Kenneth Stankieveh, president of Canspec; Adrian Met, general manager of RTD Quality Services Inc.; Robert L. Duke, QC, Miller Thomson, barristers and solicitors; and Val Lopatka, Lopatka & Company, barristers and solicitors. I had the opportunity to have lunch with them today as a result of an auction luncheon that they purchased at the Aaron Moser fund-raiser. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Redwater.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly 61 students from the Gibbons school. I must say that the tour guides indicated to me that it was one of the best classes they've had as far as attentiveness. They're seated in the members' gallery. They're also accompanied by teachers Mrs. Cindy Hamilton, Mrs. Rhonda Hruschak, Mrs. Sheligne Connolly; parents Mrs. Donna McDonnell, Mr. Don Butler, Mrs. Becky Stoddard. I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you a very familiar face to many legislators and staff of the Legislature Building, and that is Mr. Oscar Lacombe, who is seated in your gallery this afternoon. Mr. Lacombe was the first Metis Sergeant-at-Arms appointed in the province of Alberta and in Canada, if I may add, and held this position at the Legislative Assembly from 1980 to 1993.

Oscar was renowned throughout the Legislature Building for his wit, sense of humour, and friendly disposition. However, when it was time to carry the Mace and lead the procession into the Assembly, Oscar was extremely professional and delivered his responsibilities for MLA security and the Assembly with great pride and dignity. On behalf of all members in the House, past and present, we thank you, Oscar, for your commitment and years of service.

Oscar currently resides in the town of Two Hills in the beautiful constituency of Vegreville-Viking. Mr. Speaker, I would ask that Mr. Lacombe rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

MRS. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure today to rise and introduce through you to members of this Assembly 52 students who are likewise very attentive during their visit here today. They are from Robert Rundle elementary school. They are seated in the members' gallery. They are accompanied by their teachers, Mrs. Katherine Cornelius, Ms Angela Bizon, Mr. Brad Shillington, and by parents Ms Valerie Panchen, Ms Shannon Wakefield, and Mr. Darrell Wakefield. Other persons accompanying them are Mrs. Kelly Kump and Mrs. Norine Seath. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and to all of my colleagues in this Assembly two youthful Albertans who are working as volunteers to collect signatures on the petition that I've been tabling in this House over the last few weeks. They are Elgar Schmidt and Leif Langvand. Both of them are seated in the public gallery. I'll ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly someone who I think is well known to members on both sides of the House. He's a former MP, former school principal, present golfer, and always a friend. I would like you to please welcome Mr. Norval Horner.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Associate Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly today a group of individuals who are deeply committed to assisting members of our disabled community. This group has also been very keen to participate in and provide input to the Building Better Bridges report, which was tabled earlier today in support of programs and services for persons with developmental disabilities.

They are Bev Matthiessen, the executive director for the Alberta Committee of Citizens with Disabilities; Mr. Bryan Sandilands, co-ordinator of research and evaluation for the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities; Mr. Tom Fowler, the manager of community relations and policy analysis, also from the Premier's council; and Mr. Gerald Gordey, who is a council member as well and who also closely follows activities of the Alberta Association for Community Living. With them is Mr. David Steeves, the special adviser to the Deputy Minister of Alberta Health and Wellness, who was instrumental in assisting me with the preparation of this final report. Gail Davis, who is the executive director of the Alberta Association of Rehabilitation Centres, was here earlier, but I understand she had to leave for a commitment elsewhere. I would ask these very dedicated, committed individuals to please stand and take the warm applause and the warm reception of all members of this Assembly.

1:50

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. "Viewing their doctor as an entrepreneur and health care as a commodity is an American invention that few Canadians are willing to support." That quote is taken from this March 2000 study by Dr. Richard Plain, a noted health care economist from the University of Alberta and a former mayor of St. Albert. Well, instead of using the current studies, the Premier has tried to pass off studies from the 1970s as proof for his private hospitals plan. That's why it was so astounding yesterday to hear the Premier accuse anyone using reports from the '70s as being "intellectually bankrupt." My question is: why is the Premier using these same studies to justify his government's attempt to force Bill 11 on Albertans, or is the Premier saying that the minister of health, who tabled the reports, is intellectually bankrupt?

MR. KLEIN: Well, certainly the Minister of Health and Wellness is not intellectually bankrupt. He is a very bright and dedicated individual and an asset to this government, Mr. Speaker.

The tabling of those reports by the Minister of Health and Wellness – I believe it was about a month ago – was simply to show that there are reports on both sides of this issue. It was not used in the preparation of Bill 11 in any way, shape, or form. It was simply a tabling to show that there are opinions on both sides of this issue.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, why would the Premier not listen to experts right here in Alberta, like Dr. Plain, who are saying that “surgical facilities with overnight stays,” that is, private hospitals, should “not be permitted to operate within Alberta”?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, Richard Plain is entitled to his opinion, and the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition is entitled to her opinion, and we’re all entitled to our own opinions. That’s why we have sent the bill out to about a million households, to get the opinions of Albertans on this particular issue. This is an unprecedented move to seek the wisdom and the guidance and the intelligence of Albertans in making sure this legislation is the right legislation.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, why doesn’t the Premier withdraw his intellectually bankrupt Bill 11 and listen to the experts in this province who are committed to public health care, rather than telling them that it won’t work.

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are opinions, as I said, on both sides of this issue. I did a tabling earlier today, one from the Bonavista Eye Clinic, in which the writer, a medical doctor, says:

The idea of contracting out services is a sound and wise move.

Everyone seems to know competition reduces cost while increasing service. I realize the media spin of a two-tier system and the other groups “American Health Care” make for good copy but is nowhere near the truth. Actually almost all doctors now practice in their private clinics and public hospitals.

I continually tell my patients how this new and innovative system will benefit them and all Albertans. I applaud your courage to take an issue and stay with it when the easy road would be to let future generations worry about an inefficient health care system. Continue the good work.

Another letter, a final . . .

THE SPEAKER: And I understand that document has been tabled.

MR. KLEIN: It has been tabled, sir.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that recommendation 4 from Dr. Plain’s study calls for guidelines to identify “private costs and benefits,” why has the Premier excluded that from Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, it hasn’t been excluded. As a matter of fact, one of the main components of Bill 11 is that the RHAs must demonstrate to the minister and to the college that contracting out will reduce costs and it will produce efficiencies and it will shorten waiting lists. The bill is quite specific on that particular issue.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that recommendation 5 of Dr. Plain’s study calls on the government to set out guidelines for the tendering of medical service contracts, why has the Premier excluded that from his bill?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, it’s quite obvious now that the hon. member has not read the bill, because the bill alludes quite specifically to that particular point. Again, if she has read the bill, obviously she can’t understand it. I will have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness give her another clinic.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, actually, the legislation with the explanatory notes should be something the hon. leader can understand. The legislation has a fairly comprehensive section which outlines the factors that have to be considered in terms of deciding on awarding a contract.

The other thing that I think is very important here is that there’s also the openness in the legislation dealing with the contracts being made public, Mr. Speaker. There are quite a number of sections of the legislation which follow that theme.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that recommendation 8 from Dr. Plain’s study calls for the public to have access to all information and reports, not just an agreement on the spin but all the information and the reports regarding regional health authorities and private clinics, why has that been excluded from this Premier’s private hospitals bill?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, again I’ll have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness supplement, but I would point out that Dr. Plain’s report, to the best of my knowledge, was prepared before the bill was tabled in this House.

I’ll have the hon. minister supplement.

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I’ve indicated, there is a section of the bill which provides for the disclosure of contracts. There’s a section of the bill which outlines in some detail the circumstances that have to be taken into consideration when the actual proposal is considered. The legislation is basically about that particular set of requirements as it applies to surgical clinics. I think this is really a rather fortuitous criticism of the bill, because the bill has right within its clauses the very things that the leader is asking for.

MRS. MacBETH: No, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are seeing through this net that’s been created by the government.

Clearly this government’s health care policy is to go backwards to the 1970s model of the U.S. two-tiered private health care that’s gotten them in so much trouble. What Albertans are looking for is a strong public health care system that will serve us in the 21st century. This question is to the Premier. Rather than relying on outdated, irrelevant U.S. studies, why not commission a made-in-Alberta solution based on current and relevant data from Alberta?

2:00

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, that’s what Bill 11 is all about.

Mr. Speaker, since the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition alluded to going backwards, I would like to read a letter that was sent to the leader of the Liberal opposition. It was sent by the Kensington Clinic, which performs therapeutic abortions. I tabled five copies of that letter today. It is talking about going ahead, and it’s talking about what it used to be like. It says:

We now charge the CRHA less than what was charged to patients privately between 1991 and 1996. Our current offer to the CRHA, if accepted, would further reduce our fees by 15%. We pay the equivalent of union wages as well as benefits to our staff, but need fewer staff to provide the same level of care. The clinic also uses fewer physician services resulting in a minimum $100 savings per patient. Our outcomes are compiled quarterly by the CRHA and remain consistently better than the hospital site. We have not sent our most difficult cases to the hospital because prior to funding we were seeing all the difficult cases. After funding, the hospital agreed to share the load with us, resulting in more timely care for these women. Furthermore, in the last 8 years there have been at least 5 renovations to the hospital-based abortion clinics. If this clinic were to engage in that kind of haphazard planning, the funds at least would come out of our contracted operating funds. We would not be demanding more each time . . .

THE SPEAKER: Okay. I gather the letter has been tabled as well. Is that correct?

MR. KLEIN: It has been tabled.

MRS. MacBETH: Getting back to the question, Mr. Speaker, rather than letting cataract surgery clinics, as an example, continue to mushroom at taxpayers' expense, why doesn't the Premier commission someone like the Medicare Economics Group here at the University of Alberta to do a cost-benefit analysis of private health care delivery? Isn't that just common sense?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, since the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition alluded to cataract operations, I tabled a letter earlier from the Bonavista Eye Clinic, where the writer, a doctor, says that "the idea of contracting out services is a sound and wise move."

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, getting back to the question, rather than letting the chairman of the Calgary regional health authority embark on yet another of his expensive health care experiments, why doesn't the Premier ask the University of Calgary or the institute of health economics to conduct a cost-benefit analysis on, say, MRI services? Wouldn't that just be common sense?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, the only expensive experiments that were ever undertaken with a great deal of failure were under the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition's watch when she was minister of health. That's when health care costs started to skyrocket, and she did nothing about it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. interim leader of the third party.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Chairman Jim Dinning of the Calgary regional health authority had another innovative idea today on how to waste taxpayers' dollars while messing up the public health care system, and that is to bail out the two private MRI clinics in Calgary. But, then, again, Chairman Jim is also busy working on putting privately owned MRI machines into public hospitals. This will give Calgarians the dubious privilege of waiting in line for public MRI during regular office hours or, if they prefer, paying privately and thereby jumping the queue after regular office hours. My questions are to the Premier. Can the Premier please explain how this bailout of private Calgary MRI clinics will accomplish anything other than bleeding personnel and resources away from MRIs located in public hospitals?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this is not a bailout of MRI clinics; this is providing options. This is a measure to reduce waiting lists for MRI procedures. Certainly, there can't conceivably be anything wrong that, that is, to reduce waiting lines for MRI procedures.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier confirm that despite the CRHA bailout of private MRI clinics, Calgarians will still be allowed to buy their way to the front of the line at private MRI clinics and that the government plans to do nothing to put a stop to this queue-jumping?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, the Calgary RHA is looking for ways to reduce waiting lists for insured MRI scans, and I think it's a good idea to see if there are services out there who can provide these scans safely and efficiently and allowing the RHA to get more services done and reduce waiting lists. That's what it's all about. For insured MRI scans and to reduce waiting lists: that's what it's all about.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question to the Premier: how can the Premier justify the appointment of Dr. Bill Anderson as a so-called impartial consultant to review bids from the two private Calgary MRI clinics when Dr. Anderson is part owner of a private MRI clinic in Edmonton and thus has an interest in expanding this form of private, for-profit health care delivery?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know the business arrangement that Dr. Anderson has with the Calgary regional health authority. Perhaps the Minister of Health and Wellness can shed some light on this situation.

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Anderson is a former president of the Alberta Medical Association. He has, I think, a reputation for neutrality, and he's a man of integrity. He's highly regarded in the medical profession, I think, in the city in which he works.

It is my understanding that the regional health authority has engaged Dr. Anderson to be an outside observer and reviewer of the whole process of putting in these MRI clinics in Calgary. He will be called upon to provide both his expertise and advice as far as the actual installations and the services to be provided and also to make sure that the selection process dealing with companies such as Western Imaging Systems Inc. and so forth is fair and the contracts are awarded appropriately.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Public Health Labour Negotiations

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today's media states that the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees are seeking a range of 30 to 45 percent increase in wages for health care employees. The Provincial Health Authorities of Alberta, who are bargaining with the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, have requested a mediator to assist in negotiations. How will the government assist the parties? My question is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I think it would be important for all of us to understand that collective bargaining has begun between the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees and the public health authorities, so I suspect that what we're seeing today is, of course, first positions. My understanding is that, yes, a request has gone in for a mediator by the Provincial Health Authorities of Alberta. With any mediation request we first look at it and then try to determine as best we can whether or not it is an appropriate request and, if so, then we look for a qualified and experienced mediator to get into the situation as soon as possible. We're in the situation of doing that as we speak.

I would hope that all members here in the Legislative Assembly would be aware that we have a very good track record in the area of issue management and particularly as it comes to mediation. We have a success rate of something over 90 percent. So we'll work as best we can. We'll do what we have to do to see that a settlement is ultimately reached.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. What is the process that occurs in selecting a mediator?

2:10

MR. DUNFORD: Well, with the reorganization that has taken place, Mr. Speaker, we actually maintain a roster of skilled mediators that we turn to whenever we need to put someone into a situation. The mediators that we have access to have a proven track record, and in the past they've dealt both with employers and unions in working together to reach settlements. But we must make it clear that the process and the negotiations themselves are the responsibility of the parties involved, and the mediator is there to assist however they can.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you. Also to the same minister: what will happen once a mediator has been appointed?

MR. DUNFORD: Well, again, the process, Mr. Speaker, would be that meetings would be set up with the parties. The mediator would then work with the parties to try to constructively address whatever the particular issues are that are in dispute. We want our mediator to be a catalyst and, of course, a catalyst toward productive areas. But I want to repeat in this answer once again that the mediator does not absolve the parties themselves of the responsibility to come to a negotiated agreement.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday and today we established that the studies the Premier has used to support his private hospitals plan, or as he'd like to call them, approved surgical facilities, were outdated and irrelevant. The question on Albertans' minds is: why isn't he using more current studies, and where are the department studies to support his plan? My questions are to the Premier. Given that the 1999 study in the Journal of the American Medical Association concluded that the "decade-old experiment with market medicine is a failure" and that "the drive for profit is compromising the quality of care," why did the government draft Bill 11 in order to promote private hospitals in this province, otherwise known as overnight approved surgical facilities? Why are you doing it?

MR. KLEIN: Quite simply, Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 is to protect the health care system as we know it today in Calgary and to set very stringent rules and regulations for the operation of surgical clinics. The bill, as stated in the householder, is about "a stronger health system for the future." That's what the bill is all about.

Mr. Speaker, what is frustrating, though, is the kind of orchestrated campaign of fear and misinformation being conducted by the opposition Liberals and their Friends of Medicare. There is an organized campaign to tell Albertans what they should think about Bill 11, but it's not coming from the government.

One of our MLAs received an e-mail, and I'm about to entitle this. It's entitled More Hints from Margaret, and it's all about Friends of Medicare and how to organize protests. It talks about groups deliberately jamming government phone and fax lines. There is a well-orchestrated phone and letter-writing campaign going on by groups opposed to change, and this campaign of misinformation and fear is being led by the opposition Liberals.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Premier, I'd ask that you table that document as well, please.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As there are, as the Premier so often points out, surgical facilities now operating in this province, such as the Kensington Clinic, can the Premier tell us: what are the standards that are over those clinics right now? Are you saying that there are no standards in this province right now and that that's why you need Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Relative to the delivery of medical services, yes, there are standards. There have always been standards set down relative to the delivery of medical services by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, but we have not had sufficient rules and regulations relative to the conditions for contracting out, Mr. Speaker, and that's what Bill 11 is all about.

MS LEIBOVICI: Well, given that the studies that we've put forward in the Legislative Assembly show that private, for-profit hospitals, or overnight surgical facilities, cost more and provide less care and that there is no need for standards for the current facilities that are operating in this province, why does this Premier want to contract out overnight services?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, there may or may not be. It depends on the requirements and need of a particular regional health authority as to whether there are certain surgeries, minor surgeries that can be done in a surgical clinic that would require overnight stays.

Mr. Speaker, this is being done now, as I understand it, in Toronto in a riding next to Mr. Rock's own constituency. It's called the Shouldice clinic. This clinic specializes in hernia operations. It doesn't contravene the Canada Health Act. It's done under the publicly funded system within Ontario. If it can be done there, why can't it be done here?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Workers' Compensation Board

MR. COUTTS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Workers' Compensation Board of Alberta has a long history of working co-operatively with health care providers to ensure that injured workers receive appropriate, timely treatment. This has been a very successful partnership, and it is vital to small rural communities to continue that partnership. The WCB is now requiring physical therapy and chiropractic clinics to undertake accreditation by an external agency if they want to continue doing business with the WCB. My question to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment is: why is the WCB Alberta imposing this requirement on those clinics?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, I think it's incumbent upon the board of directors of the Workers' Compensation Board to do whatever they can to assist delivery of services to injured workers. It's my understanding that they are working on what's called the Commission for Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities, which has the acronym CARF, and that they're working on this initiative with both the College of Chiropractors and the Alberta physical therapists association.

Now, it's true, Mr. Speaker, that I have been hearing from some individual clinics that are unhappy about the requirement for the accreditation, but I think something will have to be worked out, because again I don't think we can hardly blame a board for requiring a level of standard on an institution that it's going to contract with.

I believe it's being done on behalf of the injured workers. I believe the majority of the physical therapy clinics in Alberta are supportive of the initiative, and it's my understanding that currently there are over 20 physical therapy clinics in Alberta that have gone through the accreditation process.

MR. COUTTS: First supplemental to the same minister. Many of these clinics are small independent businesses. Is it fair that WCB Alberta impose the cost of this accreditation onto these businesses?

MR. DUNFORD: Well, I agree that the cost is a situation that has to be dealt with. My understanding is that if a physical therapy clinic bills less than $10,000 a year of WCB work, they are not required to go through the full accreditation process and of course they are not required to pay the accreditation fee. If, of course, you are billing more than $10,000, then this will be a requirement.

Now, WCB apparently has committed up to half a million dollars to assist those clinics that have to go through the accreditation in terms of trying to defray some of the costs. I don't know if it's necessarily a yearly cost, but my understanding is that the accreditation is either for a year, two years, or three years. Certainly once that accreditation lapses, of course the process would have to be gone through again. I believe that WCB is trying to assist.

2:20

MR. COUTTS: Final supplemental to the same minister. In many smaller Alberta communities there may be only one clinic. Can the minister assure this House that accreditation will not affect the delivery of health care services to injured workers in smaller communities?

MR. DUNFORD: I can't make that guarantee Mr. Speaker, but I am asking for direction from the board of directors of the WCB as to how they are going to deal with injured workers that might be in some of the more remote areas of our province. My understanding is that as a policy they are trying to have a service where an injured worker would not be required to travel any more than 20 miles in order to receive the kind of support they would need.

I believe that we're going to have to watch very, very closely what happens not only in the urban areas but in the rural areas as well. Through this question today and through the means that we have of both Hansard and the Internet now, should there be any physical therapy clinic in this province that feels they're going to be impacted and not be able to provide the kind of the service that they have become accustomed to and that injured workers have become accustomed to, then I invite them, of course, to contact my office.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, my questions are to the Premier. Would the Premier name one private clinic anywhere in Canada that admits patients overnight for services that are paid for under medicare? Just name one.

MR. KLEIN: The Shouldice clinic in Toronto, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SAPERS: So we are talking about hernias, Mr. Speaker. We're talking about hernias. All right. [interjections]

Now, Mr. Premier, if you could you get your backbenchers to tone it down for a minute, name one of the 170 surgical procedures currently done in Alberta private clinics that will require an overnight stay?

MR. KLEIN: None right now, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SAPERS: None, Mr. Speaker.

Well, Mr. Premier can you explain why, then, you believe that Alberta needs a law to allow publicly funded overnight private facilities when no evidence, not one shred of evidence exists to support them or to support that need?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness supplement, but I would remind the hon. member that cataract surgeries, for instance, were done only in hospitals at one time. Whether or not they were overnight stays, I don't know. There have been tremendous advances in the medicine relative to this procedure, and now they can be done very effectively in surgical clinics.

Mr. Speaker, I alluded to the point of overnight stays I think it was yesterday in answer to a question. Now, when is the cutoff? Is it after 12 hours, or is it 13 hours, or is it 15 hours, or is it 23 hours? You know, that is a medical decision, a medical adjudication. The bill quite clearly states that it doesn't matter whether it's overnight or day surgery as long as it is a minor surgery. There is a very clear definition that defines what a full-scale hospital is and what a surgical clinic is.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Leduc, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Day Care Standards

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently a media story focused on an incident in an Edmonton day care that raised questions about day care standards. To the Minister of Children's Services: how are day cares monitored to ensure that children are being well cared for?

MS EVANS: I think that's a good and very timely question. To the hon. member through you, Mr. Speaker, we are committed to high-quality standards for day cares. Throughout Alberta every child and family service authority in all 18 regions has licensing officers that provide at least two inspections per year to day cares and more frequent inspections dependant upon the number of complaints or the concerns that have been raised by parents or members of the community. Further to that, we have educational programs for day care operators and for their staff, and we persist in working with them to ensure that the standards are maintained.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Mr. Speaker, my first and final supplemental question is also to the same minister. If a day care is not in compliance with provincial standards, what steps are taken by the ministry?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, problematic day cares are inspected at least once a month, and through the compliance management system – in other words, the reports that we get – they are carefully tracked, and unannounced visits are made to day cares that we suspect may have problems. If, in fact, we are discovering that those problems and those complaints are valid, we can respectfully request due consideration and improvements within that day care on an immediate basis. We can revoke or suspend their licence.

Mr. Speaker, all the day cares that we inspect have to comply. If in fact they don't comply, we can close their doors, and child and family service authorities will find ways and means of accommodating the children on an interim basis until other solutions can be found.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Regional Health Authority Contracts

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. One of the most troubling aspects of the Calgary regional health authority has been its historic failure to police apparent conflicts of interest. That region hands over $250 million to private contractors without any adequate oversight and without provincewide rules for conflicts of interest, and now that the Calgary region proposes to offer 5,000 cases to private MRI clinics, we're assured that Dr. Anderson has been retained to, quote, make sure contracts are fair and awarded appropriately, close quote. My questions are to the Premier this afternoon. Given the very sorry record of the CRHA on apparent conflicts of interest, wouldn't it make more sense to hire someone who's completely independent of the CRHA board to police conflicts rather than a consultant hired by the board itself?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I take exception to the hon. member's comments relative to the way the RHA is being operated. It's being operated very effectively and very efficiently. Yes, there are about 5,000 people on waiting lists for MRI scans, and what the RHA wants to do is find a way under the publicly funded system to reduce those waiting lists.

The Liberal opposition doesn't want to see that happen. They would rather have people wait six, seven, eight, 10, 12, 18 months for a medically required MRI scan than have the RHA explore more efficient and more effective ways of reducing the waiting list. That's what they would want; that's what they are advocating. The Liberals are advocating longer waiting lists for a medically required procedure as it relates to an MRI scan.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, if this government and this Premier were genuinely interested in policing these kinds of private contracts, why wouldn't they simply adopt strong, clear guidelines that apply provincewide to all 17 CRHAs rather than seeing this kind of nonsense perpetuated?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, all RHAs have their own set of guidelines relative to conflict, and I do believe – and I stand to be corrected – that the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness tabled the guidelines as they relate to the RHA. If he hasn't, I would encourage him to do so, because there are guidelines relative to the RHA.

Now, if this is a genuine concern relative to the whole issue of conflict and having standardized rules, perhaps we can look at that when the bill enters second reading. Maybe it could be a reasonable amendment. So help us with it.

2:30

MR. DICKSON: Let me offer this little bit of help to the Premier, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier commit today, right now, that any new or renegotiated MRI contract in the city of Calgary and in that region will be fully disclosed to the public on the Internet?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, if the Liberals would help us with the legislation, the legislation compels all contracts to be open and transparent. If they would be constructive instead of organizing orchestrated meetings such as that attended by the hon. Member for St. Albert last night, where she was shouted down and was treated with great rudeness but nonetheless held her head high and did a tremendous job . . . [interjections]

Mr. Speaker, if they would be helpful, then they would indeed be performing a service to their constituents. As it is right now, the Liberals are being destructive. They are part of a campaign of vicious misinformation. If they want to be helpful, then bring forward some reasonable amendments when the bill is introduced for second reading. They could be much more useful than they're being right now by being constructive rather than destructive.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Scientific and Technological Innovation

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, technology is a key driver to the success of our new economy. A report was released today by Ernst & Young along with Silicon Valley North, TD Bank, and CompCanada. This report, entitled Alberta Technology Report, recommends that the government of Alberta take action in several areas including increasing R and D funding and initiatives to attract and retain high-tech workers. My question is to the Minister of Innovation and Science. What is the government doing to address these recommendations?

DR. TAYLOR: Thank you. It is a timely question, Mr. Speaker, because I happened to be at a launch of the report at noontime today. I'd like to congratulate the four organizations that were involved in presenting the report, because it does look at high tech across this province and does present baseline data for the province. I think it's very worth while, and I encourage all members on both sides to get a copy of the report. It is a good report. To facilitate that, if they'd like to call my office, I'll make sure they get a copy.

In response to the member's questions the report did identify several areas. Two in particular were R and D funding for what I call the knowledge-based industries, as well as the necessity of having the critical mass of people. The question is: what is this government doing in these two particular areas?

Well, certainly in addressing R and D funding, we've taken some major steps just in the last few months. We created the informatics circle of research excellence, announced that last fall. That's a commitment of $10 million a year to find some of the best scientists in the world to work in this whole area of information and communications technology.

They have put out some advertising. The advertisement they put out was really neat. It had a picture of the mountains, and then it had "extreme computing" across the mountains.

We actually are negotiating right now with two world leaders that are interested in moving to Alberta to work in this ICORE, as we're calling it, this centre of research excellence for information and communications technology. So that's one step we've taken.

Another step we've taken, of course, through Bill 1, that's proceeding through this Legislature, is the creation of a $500 million fund, Mr. Speaker, with the possibility of $100 million a year being added. So it will be a total of $1 billion by our centennial in 2005.

Then, of course, there is the budget that is part of my department, Mr. Speaker. Initially we had about $15 million a year in there for research, and it is now up to almost $100 million a year.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: the report also identifies the need for a high-tech infrastructure. How is the government of Alberta addressing this recommendation? [interjections]

DR. TAYLOR: Well, Mr. Speaker, perhaps if the intellectually challenged members across the way could keep quiet, they could hear my response.

We have to recognize, Mr. Speaker, that the infrastructure for high-tech, knowledge-based business is in fact as important as highways; it's as important as railroads in this province. So we have just recently released an RFP that is requesting proposals to really provide a fibre-optic network from Manyberries to Fort Vermilion, from Vermilion to Edson, right across this whole province. There's only one other jurisdiction in North America that's attempting this, and that's Massachusetts. They're doing it with copper, which is old technology. As we work through this and have this fibre-optic network blanketing the province, it won't be any more expensive in Manyberries than it is in Calgary, postage-stamp rates. We will develop that infrastructure and make it available to all Albertans.

As part of this infrastructure, Mr. Speaker, I'm recommending a community kiosk in all of these communities so that if people don't have access to a computer at home, they'll be able to walk into the community kiosk and access this high-speed Internet.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. The report once again raises the issue of brain drain. Can the minister explain specific initiatives aimed directly at the issue of attracting and retaining our best minds in Alberta?

DR. TAYLOR: Certainly the initiatives that I've already described: the ICORE initiative; the AHFSER initiative, Alberta heritage foundation for science and engineering research. As you know, we have the HFMR, the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research. That is a very good model, and we know it works. It's been working since 1982, and Alberta is recognized as one of the key places in the world to do medical research. If we do the same thing with the Alberta heritage foundation for science and engineering research – we need to get a good acronym for that, Mr. Speaker, perhaps AHFSER. We can have before and 'afser.' If we can get that up and running, which we've already committed money to, $500 million, as I said, we will be able to attract the best science in the world.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray.

Mental Health Services

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Mental illness has been identified as one of the highest users of our health care system and is predicted to grow even more in the future. The most effective way of treating mental health is through community-based programs, yet this government insists on committing 80 percent of the entire Mental Health Board budget to institutional care. My questions today are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. What is the rationale for closing the community-based clinics in Red Deer to bolster the institutional care out of Ponoka?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, the community-based clinic services are being continued in Red Deer. There has been a review by a community advisory group which has recommended certain changes. Those changes have been made, but the services are still being provided and I think improved in terms of their co-ordination with the regional health authority.

MR. GIBBONS: Six months isn't very long.

Why did the acting, now new CEO of the Alberta Mental Health Board receive a $4,000 increase? Is it the reward for increasing funding to the Ponoka hospital? [interjections]

Mr. Speaker, the next question: as the suicide rate in this province continues to increase, when will the minister admit that the focus needs to be on community-based care, not on institutionalizing people?

2:40

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, we are expanding community-based care across the province. I indicated in response to a very similar set of questions from another member across the way that we have more than doubled our overall monetary commitment to community mental health. I can go through an extensive list of initiatives that are under way. Most recently I was in the Chinook region visiting Lethbridge, and one of the specific proposals there, which is going to go ahead, is the expansion of a number of beds – I think it was 14 beds – in a group home in Lethbridge along with the addition of a six-bed acute care or psychiatric service for children, which would be in the hospital. So we still have to have that balance of beds and intensive care for our mentally ill, but as well we have to have continuum into the community. We're making a lot of progress in that regard contrary to the implications of that question.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, before stopping for a brief recess and the recognition of hon. members with respect to Recognitions, I'd like to remind hon. members that today, March 15, is the 94th anniversary of the first sitting of the first Legislative Assembly in the province of Alberta. It was held on March 15, 1906.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, were you attempting to catch my attention in just the last minute or two?

MRS. FORSYTH: A point of order on the question.

THE SPEAKER: You want to raise a point of order?

MRS. FORSYTH: Yes.

THE SPEAKER: Well, we'll deal with it at the appropriate time.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: We'll now proceed first of all with the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Martyn Godfrey

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to take this opportunity to recognize the late Martyn Godfrey. Mr. Godfrey was born in Birmingham, England, and after immigrating to Canada as a young boy, Martyn attended school in Toronto, received his arts and education degrees at my alma mater, the University of Toronto, and has taught and inspired students in Ontario and Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, Martyn Godfrey was best known for his authorship of stories in a variety of genre for children and young adults. Martyn lived in St. Albert and spent many hours with the children in our local schools. Our own children along with hundreds of other fortunate children were touched by Martyn's infectious love of the written word, his own creative fun and sensitive expression with both imaginary and real-life stories, and his incredible ability to encourage young writers and readers to pursue their interests.

I would ask all Members of the Legislative Assembly to join me in extending our condolences to the members of Martyn Godfrey's immediate and extended families.

Marco and Carlos Rivera

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, we recently heard of the case of a woman who had collapsed and expired at a bus stop while a stream of motorists passed her by. This incident should not be taken as a measure of the community's compassion.

Recently, in the early hours of the morning, Marco and Carlos Rivera,* while driving home, encountered an elderly woman. She was crying, clad only in a housecoat, wandering aimlessly in the winter cold. Marco and Carlos stopped, picked her up, and took her to the local police station, which they discovered was closed. They then proceeded to the Grey Nuns hospital to make sure she was cared for. The woman, who suffers from Alzheimer's, had somehow been able to leave the house and place herself at extreme risk.

Marco and Carlos are like many other Edmontonians quietly going about thousands of acts of kindness. On behalf of the constituents of Edmonton-Ellerslie I say thank you to Marco and Carlos Rivera. Thank you for caring for your neighbours. Thank you for taking action that makes Mill Woods and this city the caring place we know it to be.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverley-Clareview.

Ukrainian Bilingual Education

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A huge celebration recognizing the 25th anniversary of the establishment of the Ukrainian bilingual program in Alberta was held at Edmonton city hall on March 1, 2000. The capacity crowd heard congratulatory tributes paid to the visionary founders who 25 years ago sensed the need to promote the continuation of the Ukrainian language and culture. The founding committee went to work finding funding, resources, and volunteers, allowing the vision to become reality.

Now, 25 years later a celebration recognizing 25 years of success was discussed, and three ladies – Barbara Hlus, Carol Evans, and Maryanne Bazuik – agreed to take on this monumental task. The success of the celebration is a tribute to the hard work of these three dedicated individuals. The city hall celebration, consisting of tributes from government, clergy, and others and enhanced by dancers and school performances, was superb. Thank you, Barbara, Carol, and Maryanne, for a job well done. You did Ukrainians proud.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Connaught Community Outlook

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to recognize the efforts of all the volunteers at the Connaught Community Association who have worked so hard to produce an excellent community newspaper, the Outlook. The Outlook provides Connaught residents in the downtown constituency of Calgary-Buffalo with an excellent opportunity to stay informed and voice their concerns on issues such as development, business, and community resources. I might add that there is no more active or vital part of the city of Calgary than the Connaught community.

In particular, I'd like to recognize the association executive for their excellent work and single out Stan Turner, president; Rob van Wegen; and Cindy Graham, who have all been instrumental in producing this excellent newspaper for the Connaught community in downtown Calgary.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Fraud Awareness

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Monday, March 13, I hosted an information seminar for my constituents of Calgary-West on the ABCs of fraud at the Westgate community centre. Abuse of seniors occurs in many forms, and this seminar focused on the fraud scam and telemarketing artists and operations who disrespectfully target the seniors population because of their vulnerability, their trustworthiness, and the perception that many seniors have money. Fact: for every 1,000 incidents of abuse, only 100 are reported.

Recognition is due to the Scotiabank fraud awareness program, the ABCs of Fraud, which Scotiabank proudly sponsors, and the volunteer presenters on Monday, Margo and Juergan Jahn, who are members of the Calgary Seniors' Resource Society, and to the print and television media for further dispersing very important information to the public at large. Thank you. Thank you. It is very important that all of us learn about and support very worthy nonprofit societies who exist through private-sector sponsorships and community volunteers.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Calgary Herald Strikers

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the striking Calgary Herald workers, who have been out on strike since early November '99. These workers have been subjected to insults from the paper's owner, who declared recently about the Calgary Herald: it's better without you and that the paper was amputating gangrenous limbs, referring to employees engaged in the legal strike. The owner, Mr. Black, also told workers: this strike is going to be resolved either by coming to an end after two years, by decertification, or by you people coming back to work.

These workers have endured the fear and uncertainty that occurs to workers on strike who see owners and management not bargaining in good faith. They have persevered in the face of name-calling and antidemocratic behaviour by this organization. I applaud these striking workers' continuing defence of journalistic independence and integrity, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

2:50

head: Motions under Standing Order 40

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on a Standing Order 40 application.

Calgary Herald Strike

Dr. Pannu:

Be it resolved that the Assembly, recognizing that the ongoing Calgary Herald strike and Mr. Conrad Black's refusal to engage in fair collective bargaining is an indictment of Alberta's unfair laws, urges the government to appoint a disputes inquiry board to facilitate the settlement of this dispute.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will speak to the urgency of the matter, but I'll just take a moment to outline the issue. It will take me less than a minute. The issue in this strike is that the employees asked for a basic seniority clause which would come into effect only during layoffs. Such a provision is vital to ensure employees are not arbitrarily terminated. Seniority clauses are standard in collective agreements in newspaper rooms across Canada. This company said no.

Now to the urgency, Mr. Speaker. Speaking to this question of urgency then, today is the 128th day of the Calgary Herald dispute.

*This spelling could not be verified at the time of publication.

About 100 employees of the Calgary Herald have been on strike for over four months, as have 67 employees belonging to the Graphic Communications International Union. These union members have tried their best to negotiate a fair first collective agreement.

Mr. Speaker, the ongoing Calgary Herald strike and Mr. Conrad Black's refusal to engage in fair collective bargaining is an indictment of Alberta's unfair laws. The recent statements by Mr. Conrad Black violate both the spirit and letter of the law regarding collective bargaining. To quote Mr. Black: this strike is going to be resolved either by coming to an end after two years, by decertification, or by you people coming back to work. In referring to these striking employees, Conrad Black said: we are amputating gangrenous limbs. These statements are incredibly offensive.

Mr. Speaker, long strikes divide communities. The right of employees to join unions should be respected in all workplaces, including newsrooms. When a legal strike occurs and the management side shows by its actions an unwillingness to reach a fair first collective agreement, the minister responsible for labour relations must act. This motion calls on the minister to appoint a disputes inquiry board to facilitate a resolution of this unfortunate dispute. I urge all members to allow the debate on this motion to proceed.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, as per Standing Order 40 the mover of the motion is provided an opportunity to briefly provide for an urgent and pressing necessity, and then the question is immediately called, and it requires unanimous consent in order to proceed.

[Unanimous consent denied]

THE SPEAKER: I do believe we now have a couple of points of order to deal with. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Point of Order Offending the Practices of the Assembly

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am going to rise pursuant to Standing Order 23(l), which reads:

A member will be called to order by the Speaker if, in the Speaker's opinion, that member . . . introduces any matter in debate which offends the practices and precedents of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to refer specifically to the exchange that transpired when my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo was questioning the Premier regarding conflicts of interest in Calgary and the provision of MRI facilities. The Premier in his response mentioned in part – and I don't have the Blues in front of me, so I'm paraphrasing from my hearing of the Premier's response – that that's why we need the bill, referring to Bill 11, and that we should be able to count on Albertans understanding that this is why this kind of legislation is necessary.

Well, the Premier also has said many times that we should read the bill. Maybe the Premier should read the bill. Bill 11 does not deal with diagnostic imaging or any diagnostic services. Bill 11 deals with surgical services. I submit that the Premier either is not aware of the contents of his bill or he is deliberately distorting the contents of Bill 11 and confusing its purpose in the minds of Albertans. Mr. Speaker, that is clearly offensive and a violation of Standing Orders.

The Premier has spent millions of tax dollars to try, in his words, to inform Albertans. He invites response, yet in this very Chamber he misrepresents the intent and the contents of the proposed legislation. I can think of nothing greater than that which would offend the practices and precedents of this Assembly, and I would request that you call the Premier to order.

MR. HAVELOCK: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is no point of order, but I do feel compelled to express my admiration for the opposition member's courage in raising this matter, especially under section 23(l), especially so after yesterday's, what I would consider to be, dishonest, false, fraudulent, indecent, insincere, misleading, obscene, scandalous, unscrupulous, and untruthful actions on the part of not only himself but 11 other members of his party regarding the tabling of newspaper articles under the guise of reports.

Mr. Speaker, we often discuss in this Legislature the need to respect each other, the need to respect the rules and procedures of this House, yet those words ring hollow when we continue in this House to refuse to call to account those who continue to abuse the procedures of this Legislature. There is no point of order.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, on two occasions this week rather interesting arguments have been put forward by certain members, and they've been dealt with. The other matters have been dealt with.

There have now been two occasions this week where either the House leader of the Official Opposition or the former House leader of the Official Opposition have asked for the Speaker to intervene. On one occasion the current House leader of the Official Opposition had asked to rule out any questions which may be repetitious, in essence, or questions that have been raised before, and the chair said that he would consider that. Now there's an appeal to the chair to invoke section 23(l), which is really rather interesting, because the chair's view is that if the chair were to in fact invoke these things and in light of most of the questions in the question period thus far in this session, this being day 15, virtually all questions would have been ruled out. So I think it is extremely important – extremely important – that hon. members begin to start reading the rules and understanding the rules.

Now, hon. members can't have it both ways. They can't one day say something on a point of order and the next day come in 180 degrees opposite on another point of order. The chair has absolutely no difficulty – no difficulty – intervening, and all question period will become is the chairman of this particular Assembly standing up for virtually the whole question period and giving his thoughts or rulings.

Now, hon. Deputy Government House Leader, the matter that you refer to today was dealt with yesterday, so the chair does not view that there was a point of order in here and really, really, really would like to ask hon. members to understand the rules.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be the first to admit in this House that I don't stand up on a lot of points of order. In fact, I got elected in 1993, and I think this is the second one since 1993.

THE SPEAKER: Good. Then you've got the experience to know that you have to give a citation.

MRS. FORSYTH: I am referring to 23(h), (i), and (j).

THE SPEAKER: Good.

MRS. FORSYTH: It's in regards to the question from the Member for Edmonton-Manning. Mr. Speaker, I know you don't know this, but I've known the Member for Edmonton-Manning for, oh, many years, before we were even elected, probably the last 15 years. When I knew this member, it was in regards to community leagues and our involvement as community league presidents. I admired him. He had a great deal of integrity.

The questions he was asking the minister of health from Ponoka-Rimbey in regards to the construction at Ponoka I think were absolutely awful and deplorable. I want to remind the member that myself, the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek; the Member for Livingstone-Macleod; and the Member for Little Bow did a mental health review. I'm trying to think. It was probably in 1996. At that point in time the Member for Drumheller-Chinook was the minister of health, and the Member for Ponoka-Rimbey was not even the minister of health. It was at that time, in those recommendations that we decided that Ponoka should stay where it is and that the mental health funding should stay in Ponoka.

3:00

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, please. You have to help me with the point of order.

MRS. FORSYTH: I did.

THE SPEAKER: No. You're giving a speech. Please. What's the point of order?

MRS. FORSYTH: Okay, Mr. Speaker. I'll be brief, and like I said, I'm not good. I believe the questions were insulting, they were making allegations against another member, they were making false motives to another member, and I would like your ruling on that.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, briefly. Standing Order 23:

- (h) makes allegations against another member;
- (i) imputes false or unavowed motives to another member;
- (j) uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.

It is very clear that there may be acute sensitivities on members on the government side with the nature and topics and subject matter, but none of the questions that have been asked, in my respectful view, deal with anything other than a questionable policy and a form of business dealings on the part of the government of the province of Alberta.

Now, if a member chooses to take that personally, then I suppose she can take it any way she wishes, but your job, with respect, Mr. Speaker, is hopefully one of protecting the integrity and the reputation of members in this Assembly in terms of what's said, not to deny any member, certainly a member of the opposition, to attempt to hold the government accountable for practices that run contrary to what many Albertans would like to see.

So I think, with respect, the citations aren't appropriate. I understand she's concerned, but let's hear that in a forum of debate. This is not an appropriate point of order, in my respectful submission.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. HAVELOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, I believe the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has raised a legitimate point of order. If I recall the offensive part of the language used by the hon. member across the way, it was that he was alleging something along the lines of whether or not the minister of health influenced a particular individual's decision with respect to the construction of a hospital facility or a health facility by giving or directly influencing the giving of a raise to that particular individual. Now, I hope I've captured the essence of what was said.

Very clearly, if that's what the hon. member was saying, then it does offend 23(i), and it does offend 23(h). Clearly, an allegation has been made against another member, and 23(i), "imputes false or unavowed motives" – well, very clearly, again, the inference is that there was an exchange of favours, the granting of a salary in exchange for a decision with respect to the construction of a facility.

So very clearly to me, Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member has raised an appropriate point of order, and I hope that you would direct the hon. member to withdraw the remark. If you do not do so, however, I hope the hon. member would reconsider the statement he has made.

MR. GIBBONS: The question was asked around the now CEO of the Alberta Mental Health Board receiving a $4,000 increase. Maybe the emphasis was pointed, and the concern is: is that a reward, increasing funding to the Ponoka hospital? The thing is I also had a question last week, and it was pointed around quite a few different studies around mental health in Canada and Alberta. It's been emphasized that Alberta has been pointed to by Canadian mental health across Canada as being in the dark ages. We have studied mental health to death. We have had a study . . .

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, we have a point of order here. It's on the point of order. [interjection] Please retire to your chair. We're on a point of order. That's what we're dealing with here, not a speech. Please proceed.

MR. GIBBONS: I don't believe there's any point of order, because I don't think there were any allegations against the minister over there outside of asking a question around the CEO.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, what is unique about this point of order is that the hon. member who might be rising on the point of order has not made an argument with respect to this. The chair will however review the Blues and, if required, make a comment on this tomorrow.

Speaker's Ruling Reflections on Nonmembers

THE SPEAKER: In the interim the chair would like to draw all members' attention once again to Beauchesne 409. Again, this is constant repetition about reading the rules, and 409(7) is a very, very powerful statement.

A question must adhere to the proprieties of the House, in terms of inferences, imputing motives or casting aspersions upon persons within the House or out of it.

Increasingly there's some kind of creep going on in here in the sense that more and more frequently comments are made either in questions or responses about individuals who are not within this House. They are not in a position to defend themselves. Those individuals are not here.

Often times statements are made ascribing certain things to certain individuals. The veracity, the truthfulness, of the statement may or may not be as acute as it might be. If the individual who's quoted as being responsible or standing for something disagrees, that individual has no way of counteracting that assumption, and the same holds true on the other side, when in a response someone ascribes to an individual outside of this House and gives something about that individual.

Now, again, that individual might call my office and say: "You know, I'm really angry. I'm hurt. My public reputation has been hurt." That individual has no way – no way – of having that view corrected, and I want all hon. members to know that that does occur. That does occur, and it's not a matter to be taken lightly. The chair does not want to stand up in here three or four or five times a week with a sworn affidavit from a citizen at large and then proceed to read the affidavit, because then I'm participating in the debate.

This is a system and a policy forum. It's not a personality forum. It's a policy forum, and it should be ideas that the war should be waged over, not individuals. Might is not right; knowledge is right.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Written Questions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Associate Minister of Health and Wellness and Deputy Government House Leader.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given yesterday, I will now move that written questions which appear on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

[Motion carried]

3:10

head: Motions for Returns

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given yesterday, it is my pleasure to move that motions for returns which appear on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of motions for returns 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 10, and 17.

[Motion carried]

West Edmonton Mall Refinancing

M1. Mr. Sapers moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of the October 19, 1993, document from a third party to the Executive Council/office of the Premier relating to the refinancing of the West Edmonton Mall.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, I note that it's day 15, and this best before date is day 18, so I want to thank the government for rushing headlong into the debate on this motion for a return only three days before it was due.

Mr. Speaker, in order to support this motion, I want to retrace quickly just a couple steps of history here with the West Edmonton Mall saga, because I know that in the minds of some this trail has got a little bit cold. Of course, it's being actively pursued in several courtrooms across this province, so it's not that cold at all. I guess it's that old adage about out of sight out of mind, and I guess the government was hoping that if it was out of sight here in the Legislative Assembly, maybe it was out of mind as well, but that's not the case.

Mr. Speaker, the first bit of history I want to retell in support of this motion is that, of course, when the Official Opposition used the freedom of information legislation to request that Executive Council/office of the Premier release to us all of the documents it held regarding the Premier's office and the government's office involvement in the West Edmonton Mall refinancing, I recall that the first response was that the Premier could not be responsive to the request, not because he chose not to but because in fact there were no documents held in Executive Council relating to the West Edmonton Mall refinancing.

Well, Mr. Speaker, that was an unbelievable claim, and it was proven not only to be unbelievable but untruthful. In fact, an appeal was made to the Privacy Commissioner, and a subsequent investigation revealed that the Premier's office violated the access to information law in this province. That was shocking, because of course the freedom of information law was the Premier's own flagship bill. He seemed to take great joy in claiming that a whole new era of openness was about to begin in Alberta. What's really damning, I think, in the report of the Privacy Commissioner is that the reason why the Premier's office didn't comply is because they had not set up procedures to deal with records management. They hadn't trained their staff properly. I think thrown in somewhat gratuitously was the observation that staffing might have been at an all-time low because of Christmas holidays or some other kind of vacation. What we have then is the Premier being called to account for his office breaking the law. Of course, there wasn't much of a consequence, but what we do know is that subsequently many, many documents were found not just in Executive Council but throughout government.

Now, the reason why we are bringing this motion for a return forward is because in spite of the Treasurer saying – and I'm paraphrasing – that there will be no closed door or no closed drawer when it comes to West Edmonton Mall disclosure and the Premier saying that everything will be made public in due time and to wait for the courts and to wait for the Auditor General's report, et cetera, the truth is that Albertans are still being kept in the dark. There is still this stony silence when it comes to requests for documents.

Now, I can almost anticipate that whoever the hired gun is on the government side, who I'm anticipating will reject this motion for a return – I can almost anticipate what they're going to say. They're going to say: well, you know, the Auditor General looked at all of this and exonerated the government. Well, that's not the case. What the Auditor General did is the Auditor General was able to review some documents and talk to some people, not everyone and not all documents, and based on that limited evidence, the Auditor General said: I cannot find evidence of government wrongdoing. He did find lots of evidence of government involvement. Of course, it then becomes a matter of judgment whether it was appropriate or inappropriate involvement. I would submit it was inappropriate, particularly because this was a government that denied any involvement whatsoever.

I think Albertans get really tired when a government starts shaving the truth. I mean, look at the reaction to Bill 11, Mr. Speaker, if you want to see how angry the taxpayers of this province will become when it comes to shaving the truth. Just look at the anger in the streets over this government's plans to privatize surgical services in this province.

In fact, there are a lot of parallels between West Edmonton Mall and Bill 11. Here's a pop quiz, Mr. Speaker. What do you think exactly these two initiatives have in common? Well, one is the government did something that they denied they were going to do, and the second thing is that both arguments are absolutely papered in blank pages. That's what we've received in requests about the government's foundations for privatizing hospitals. It's also, of course, what we've received in response to freedom of information requests in regards to West Edmonton Mall.

Mr. Speaker, let's take a look. The motion for a return specifically asks for a document that originated on October 19, 1993. A couple of things to put that request into context, some other things that were happening back in 1993 in the fall. In September of 1993, in fact September 7, there was a letter from Gentra, who was one of the mortgage holders on West Edmonton Mall, to the Ghermezian family, of course the owners of Triple Five, and Triple Five are the owners of the mall. Now, Gentra, the private lender, insisted that all funds generated from the mall be used for the purposes of operating expenses or payment to the first mortgage bonds and payment of tax arrears. No payment was to be made to the nonsenior bondholders, including, most interestingly, the Alberta Treasury Branches.

Later on that month there was a series of discussions between Genra and West Edmonton Mall which resulted in the development of the so-called plan A refinancing proposal. Under plan A the maturity of the loans was to be extended for five years, and subordinate lenders such as the Alberta Treasury Branches would be repaid over a much more extended period of time. Later on in the fall the owners of West Edmonton Mall engaged another private lender, in this case one from the United States, First Boston, to assist them in pursuing other alternatives for refinancing the total indebtedness of West Edmonton Mall.

Now we get into October of '93, when West Edmonton Mall defaulted on a $50 million second-level mortgage held by the Bank of Montreal, Alberta Treasury Branches, and other financial institutions. This is where it gets really interesting, because the document that we're requesting is one which came from a third party to the Executive Council office regarding the West Edmonton Mall refinancing.

In October of '93 there was a $50 million default. On October 29, 1993, there was a memorandum from the Premier to the then Minister of Economic Development, and it reads as follows, quote: I would like you to be the minister that deals with all aspects of the government of Alberta's interactions with Triple Five Corporation; it would be costly and harmful to Alberta if bankruptcy, foreclosure, or enforcement procedures commenced against Triple Five Corporation at this time without a full and comprehensive review and a determined attempt to solve their refinancing difficulties, end quote. So this is what was going on in Executive Council in the fall of 1993 at about the time we were asking for this document.

Now, there were some other things going on in the fall of 1993. You may recall the steely-eyed Premier saying that he wasn't going to blink and his favourite right-hand man, the Treasurer, Mr. Dinning, who is now presiding over the privatization of surgical services in Calgary, saying that he'd rather just cut than plan. So this refrain of his about his predilection, wanting to do experiments rather than planning, goes back to his days as Treasurer as well.

At the same time that the government was becoming intricately involved in the private business dealings of a shopping mall and its lenders, of course this government was going about its 20 percent cuts in health care and in education. Thousands of frontline health care workers were losing their jobs. Classrooms were becoming overcrowded. Municipalities were being downloaded. Albertans were being told that the cupboard was bare. It seemed the cupboard was bare except when it came to half a billion dollars that was going to be made available to a private mall without telling taxpayers that they were footing the bill.

3:20

So I would argue that in order for this government to live up to its claims of full disclosure, openness, and transparency, to try to make amends for clearly what was the error of their ways back in the fall of 1993, they have a responsibility to produce this document. It is clearly in the public interest. I would hope that they don't hide behind some third-party rules. I would hope that they don't argue that there is too much of a proprietary or commercial interest. I would hope that they don't argue that there is Executive Council privilege. I mean, the fact is, Mr. Speaker, this story is being dragged out in the courts, and I think that does a disservice to taxpayers.

This government can demonstrate that it's true to its word when it says that it wants to disclose, and it can produce this document, right here, right now, today. What a surprise it would be, Mr. Speaker, if in fact that happened, if we actually had a member of government, Executive Council, saying: "You're right. We want to keep our word. We don't want there to be a growing gap between what we do and what we say. We want Albertans to be able to have trust and faith in their government, so we're going to produce this document. We're going to live up to the commitment we made." What a treat that would be. So I hope those are the words that we hear today.

With those few short remarks I will leave it to the government to respond to the motion for a return, and we'll see where that leaves us.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier I will respond that government is rejecting Motion for a Return 1. The document in question actually relates to a letter from a third party to the Executive Council/office of the Premier in relation to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall, as noted. The record will not be disclosed because it involves a third party's personal and/or commercial information, which, as we all know, requires third-party consent for release to be made.

Also, the particular issue of the refinancing in question has been before the Ethics Commissioner, the Auditor General, and there are now several cases in this regard which are before the courts. As we all know, the courts are an open and transparent process, and most people have great respect for the court system in this province and in this country. This issue will be dealt with in a fair and impartial manner there.

So I will respond officially that the government is rejecting Motion for a Return 1.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora to conclude debate.

MR. SAPERS: No surprise, the rejection. A little bit of a surprise in the rejecter but no surprise in the rejection. I guess they're becoming too predictable, because I clearly anticipated the arguments. You know, they just don't hold any water.

There is a public interest involved here, Mr. Speaker. The fact is that while this government was telling Albertans that they couldn't afford classrooms and teachers and hospital beds and diagnostic services, while they were telling municipalities that they couldn't afford to continue to pay as much as they were for policing costs and road paving and other infrastructure, while all of that was going on, this government was in secret, behind-closed-door meetings with some of the wealthiest financial institutions and businesspeople not just in this province but in this country, and they were negotiating a half billion, 500 with lots of zeros behind it, a half billion dollar bailout.

You know, if this government wants to continue to hide behind the work of the Ethics Commissioner or the good work of the Auditor General and say, "Oh, look; the work has been done; the disclosure is there," then not only are they doing a disservice to Albertans, but in fact they are diminishing the offices of both the Ethics Commissioner and the Auditor General, because those gentlemen who occupy those offices did what they could with what the government allowed.

It is really a shame and quite disappointing to me that any member of Executive Council would stand up and put a cloud over the offices of the Ethics Commissioner or the Auditor General. Their work does not excuse what this government did, and their work does not excuse the subsequent cover-up of what's happened, and their work does not excuse the government from escaping its responsibility to act always in the public interest and not in the selfish private interests of a few members of Executive Council.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is consistent. I'll give them that. They're consistent. They seem to have their song sheet set on this one, and you know, they're beginning to do it even without teleprompters. It is still about time that they put into action the words that they have uttered about openness and transparency and disclosure.

This story will come out, and I hope that I am still a Member of this Legislative Assembly when this story comes out. I'm hoping, when that opportunity arises, that those individuals who have distorted the facts, who have misled taxpayers, who have created suspicion, and who have denied responsibility will finally be called to account. They will be called to account not just in this Chamber but elsewhere, and every taxpayer of this province will have an opportunity to see them for what they are and to call them to be accountable for what it is they have done and then denied it.

So, Mr. Speaker, when the Deputy Government House Leader says that he's going to have to reject it, I'm certain that the whips are on and the government will use its majority to once again stifle the public interest and we won't see the disclosure of this document. I would hope that just one or two of the Conservative members of this Assembly will have it in their heart to vote along with us. It won't be a standing vote, you know. It will just be a voice vote. I'm going to be listening carefully because I know that there are some hon. members on that side who also want to see this issue put to rest.

[Motion for a Return 1 lost]

West Edmonton Mall Refinancing

M2. Mr. Sapers moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of the December 3, 1993, letter from one MLA, Member of the Legislative Assembly, to a second MLA in the possession of the Executive Council/office of the Premier relating to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, I didn't hear that chorus of voices that I was calling for, so that saddens me. I'll try again.

Now, let me say that we wouldn't even need this motion for a return if the Premier's office had done its job, respected the law, and responded appropriately to the freedom of information request that the Official Opposition put in. So for any member that is sitting there thinking, "Why are we spending time again on this issue?" well, that's why. Because the Premier's office didn't respect the law and didn't do the job that the people of this province would expect it to do. What I will say, Mr. Speaker, is that this again is an interesting exchange of correspondence at a particular point in time.

Now, earlier in my comments on Motion for a Return 1 I brought the Legislative Assembly through to the early part of the fall of 1993. Well, let's look at what began happening in November of 1993. Remember I mentioned that plan A about the refinancing? Well, interestingly, in November of 1993 Genra, that private financier, withdrew its support for plan A and presented West Edmonton Mall with plan B.

Now, plan B called for a consensual foreclosure in which all nonsenior debt, including ATB's, would be purchased at a discount.

You know what that sounds like? You know what plan B sounds like? It sounds like a private-sector financing solution. It sounds like a way for ATB to be off the hook and for taxpayers to be off the hook.

3:30

This is what was going on in the late fall and the early winter of 1993. On November 1, 1993, a $150 million government loan guarantee proposal from the Ghermezian family was sent by the office of the Premier to the Alberta Treasury Branches. Now, isn't that interesting? Obviously the owners of West Edmonton Mall contacted the Premier's office. Who knows? Maybe that was the document from October 19. We can only guess. They contacted the Premier's office. What did the Premier's office do? The Premier's office sent it to the Alberta Treasury Branches.

Now, let's remember that the Alberta Treasury Branches did not have an independent board of directors, in fact was operating in 1993 very much as an arm of the government, of the Provincial Treasury, very much considered to be a department of government. When the Premier's office sends something over to the Alberta Treasury Branches, it's like getting a little wake-up call from your boss. The boss sends a note along to the ATB, and we can only assume that the intent was that they wanted the ATB to be aware of this $150 million loan request and to consider it. So this is what was happening on November 1, 1993.

To his credit the then superintendent of the Alberta Treasury Branches, Mr. Al Bray, appears to have ignored this little missile from the Premier's office because Mr. Bray believed, I believe, in the independence of financial decisions, that they should not become political decisions.

Now, the very next day, on November 2, 1993, a letter from the Bank of Montreal to West Edmonton Mall citing the default of $50 million on the syndicated loan went on to say that the syndicate demands payment by the borrowers, that all indebtedness is due and payable by the borrower to the lenders. So West Edmonton Mall was in some kind of financial trouble. That's never been in dispute. What we know is that there were private-sector deals being worked out.

Now, when these private-sector deals were being worked out, it appears that the response from the government was to ignore what was going on in the private sector, to ignore what was going on in the business world, in the market. While at the very same time in public saying, "We have to slash and burn public services," they were saying in private: we've got to figure a way to support and maintain and enhance private businesses. This is an irony, Mr. Speaker, that I don't think we've spent quite enough time talking about.

November 26. We understand that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark sends a letter to the Premier urging the government to ensure that the positive worldwide awareness of the mall and the tax benefits and the influx of millions of tourists are protected and that negative publicity is curtailed. Now, the Premier has used this correspondence from the MLA who happens to represent the area in which the mall is located as the excuse for government interference in the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

You know, people have said that the Official Opposition doesn't always have enough influence on this government. Isn't it remarkable that on one of the most sensitive political issues that this government has faced, dealing with almost half a billion tax dollars, the government would say in its defence: it was that member of the Official Opposition that made us do it; she wrote a letter, and the power of that letter convinced us to put half a billion dollars of taxpayers' money at risk. Well, of course that is an absurdity.

What the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark was doing was of course representing the interests of her constituents in asking the government to do what was within their power to do, which would be not politically expedient, not just politically acceptable but would be in the public interest. I know that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark puts the public interest first, and it's about time that members of Executive Council followed her lead and put the public interest first when it comes to disclosing the truth about their involvement in West Edmonton Mall.

Now, according to Michael Walrath by affidavit, on November 30, 1993, there was a meeting between the Ghermezians, the Premier, the then Minister of Economic Development, the then superintendent of Alberta Treasury Branches, Mr. Leahy, and a gentleman by the name of Rod Love. During this meeting, according to the affidavit, the following transpired.

Now, this is going to be a quote from the affidavit, Mr. Speaker, so you'll forgive, please, the use of proper names. Quote: upon the instructions of Premier Klein to Deputy Premier Kowalski, Mr. Tadman invited Elmer Leahy to join the meeting at which Rod Love was also in attendance. I am further advised by Nader Ghermezian and verily believe that at the meeting the government ministers directed and encouraged Elmer Leahy to assist the Ghermezians with the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall. Thereafter, further meetings and correspondence ensued. End of quote.

Now, this is despite the protestations to the contrary by the Premier. This sworn affidavit – and this is on file – says that government ministers directed ATB with the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall. That's what this says. This affidavit is on file.

We have heard rumour of a statutory declaration from the Premier. It has been referred to in the Auditor General's special audit, but we have not seen it. We don't know what questions were asked of the Premier. We don't know what responses he provided, and we don't know what responses he didn't provide. We don't know what list of documents was provided to the Auditor General because the government won't tell the public what it is they provided and what it is they continue to keep secret.

All I can argue, Mr. Speaker, is that we have one affidavit here. If this affidavit is false, then there is recourse through the courts because of that. If this affidavit is not false, then it is quite an indictment of the government. If it is false, I would expect the government to offer a robust defence of their behaviour and quite a spirited attack on Mr. Walrath, but we haven't seen that. So I would guess that as all of these things were happening in the fall, one piece of the puzzle that we need is this letter from one MLA to another regarding the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

Now, later on in 1993, towards the end of the year, West Edmonton Mall experienced operating losses to the tune of nearly $6 million. West Edmonton Mall's annual municipal tax bill was hiked up about $2 million. They then failed to pay the $10 million property tax bill and were penalized at a rate of $100,000 per month. So there was some urgency in resolving the financial woes of the mall.

Now, keep in mind that in the background were these private-sector deals that were being arranged. But lo and behold on January 5, 1994, which takes us just beyond the period of time in which this earlier exchange of correspondence occurred, there was a letter that was sent from the Premier to the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, which read in part, quote: accordingly, the present difficulties brought on by various mall lenders carry serious consequences to the province of Alberta and the city of Edmonton, close quote. So the Premier was absolutely aware.

There were a series of discussions within the Premier's office and Executive Council. We know that there were meetings of agenda and priorities. We know that there were discussions in cabinet. So we now have a pattern, Mr. Speaker, that would convince even a casual observer that the government was intimately involved and following very closely the fortunes and misfortunes of West Edmonton Mall and its potential for refinancing and for economic viability.

So again I will say that to make that record more complete, to ensure that there is full disclosure, to make sure the government lives up to its commitments, I would request that Motion for a Return 2 be quickly complied with so we can get this one more little piece of the puzzle on the table so we can begin to fill in the frame.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier I will indicate that government is rejecting Motion for a Return 2. The opposition is aware of these records as a result of a FOIP request to Executive Council. The Information and Privacy Commissioner did issue order 99-017 on the request, and under his order he upheld Executive Council's refusal to disclose these records. Again, similar to the FOIP request Executive Council will not be releasing them today.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to rise on this matter because this matter has a long, long, long history and will have a much longer history. There will be books written about this, and there will be books written about each and every part of it except the part that says that this government has a member of their caucus denying this information to an opposition who asked for this information. When that member was a member of the opposition, he was the one that was asking for the information. It is simply not fair for that caucus to have this member do its dirty work in this particular matter.

3:40

He is on record asking and demanding this information from that chair right in front of this member. It's not fair to put this member through that embarrassment. Quite frankly, this information – I cannot put words into his mouth. He did that already, and I will not go to the record to throw those questions back at him, but you'd think there would be a little sensitivity to half a billion dollars, $500 million. That's enough to keep Regis Philbin busy for at least three lifetimes when trying to give away money. This government signed it off faster than "Jack be little." Not only did they sign it off, but then they deny that they ever did it: it weren't me; it weren't me. It is unbelievable that this could happen.

AN HON. MEMBER: The sky is falling.

MR. WHITE: Someone says, "The sky is falling." I think it's the member opposite. Well, maybe the sky is not falling, but I'll tell you that this government certainly would try to buy it to bring it down.

I mean, they can cover up so much. It's hard to believe that the citizens of Alberta can stand by and watch this occur, particularly with one member opposite being on both sides of the issue: demanding this information and now denying it. It is hypocrisy at its best, sir.

Thank you for the time.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora to conclude debate.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Again no surprise, but there is a terrible irony here. April 1, 1998: now, I know that that was April Fool's Day. Let's hope, though, that that didn't have anything to do with what the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek was thinking and doing that day.

On April 1, 1998, on page 1295 of Hansard, there was Motion for a Return 62, which read that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all correspondence exchanged between the ministries of Treasury, economic development and tourism, and Executive Council for the period January 1, 1994, to January 26, 1998, relating to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall and the involvement of the Alberta Treasury Branches in that refinancing.

Now, as events would transpire, of course, the Treasurer rejected that motion for a return. I had an opportunity to make some comments on it, but so did the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek. I just want to quote from page 1296 of Hansard of April 1, 1998, where he said in part in defence of his motion for a return:

Here is yet another opportunity, I think, for the government to climb out from whatever rock it may be under with respect to the refinancing package, and I would have hoped they would have taken the opportunity through this motion to do that.

You know, it is most disturbing to me that in a couple of years we've seen this transformation from a suggestion that the government needs to crawl out from under a rock to hiding behind some procedure to protect the government instead of the public. That is a very disturbing transformation.

Mr. Speaker, none of this is to make an argument about the merits of West Edmonton Mall or the value that the mall has provided to the people of this province. This is all about government accountability and government responsibility and truthfulness, and that's the purpose that we are pursuing this matter.

[Motion for a Return 2 lost]

West Edmonton Mall Refinancing

M3. Mr. Sapers moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of the December 3, 1993, memo from one MLA, Member of the Legislative Assembly, to another MLA in the possession of the Executive Council/office of the Premier relating to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You have no idea how much I look forward to these Wednesday afternoons and the opportunity to ask the government time and time and time again to do the right thing and then live with the disappointment time and time and time again of the government doing the wrong thing. I guess if that's my destiny, to spend my Wednesday afternoons defending the public interest against an overwhelming government indifference to the public interest, then I'm quite willing to live up to that responsibility, as are my colleagues in the Official Opposition.

It was nice that the member for – I get it wrong. Is it just Airdrie now?

AN HON. MEMBER: Airdrie-Rocky View.

MR. SAPERS: Whoever that person is. The hon. member was applauding, so I take it that she won't be – well, she is the whip, so I can't say she can't be whipped into just doing the government line.

Mr. Speaker, I don't want to prolong debate this afternoon. Motion for a Return 3 is remarkably similar in form to the previous motion for a return. I will incorporate by reference my earlier comments, but I will note that on that day back in April of 1998 not only was Motion for a Return 62 put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, then a member of the Official Opposition, but so was Motion for a Return 63, that asked that the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all loan guarantee agreements for the period January 1, 1994, to January 28, 1997, between the Alberta Treasury Branches, TD Trust Company, West Edmonton Mall Property Inc., WEM Holdings, and 626110 Alberta Ltd. relating to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

So clearly that member at that time, a couple of short years ago, had an abiding interest in getting to the truth in this matter. I would hope he still has that abiding interest, and I would hope that he will recommend to his colleagues that this motion for a return be supported.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier I will respond and let it be noted that government is rejecting Motion for a Return 3.

I'd like to make a few comments here in light of some comments that have been made on the other side. It's true that when you're in opposition you do bring forward motions for returns and you do bring in written questions and you're looking for answers. That's part of what the role of opposition is, and it's certainly one that I took seriously and did put forward those specific requests.

However, it's also true that I had then and I have now great respect for the rules and procedures of this House and for the laws and guidelines that exist under the freedom of information and protection of privacy laws, as I also have great respect for the Auditor General's office and for any other offices, the Information and Privacy Commissioner, for example. When these bodies respond and explain what reasons are given for particular decisions, I think they should be respected as well. You may not like them, but the fact is that you have to respect them. I respected them in whatever role I played, and I will continue to respect them because I believe in the integrity of the process.

Having said that, I will again state that the Information and Privacy Commissioner, one of the individuals and one of the individual's offices that I referred to earlier and one for which I have great respect, did issue an order on the request, and under his order he did uphold Executive Council's refusal to disclose the records in question. So again, similar to that request, Mr. Speaker, they will not be released today.

3:50

MR. WHITE: Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to believe that the member opposite can stand in his place and make those arguments. Yes, he has a point on motions for returns 1, 3, and 4. There is a possibility – and this member will admit there is a possibility – that there is an obligation at some point to deny the public knowledge from a third-party communication. There is a possibility. This government has ignored that many times and in this particular issue ignored it a great many times in publishing information. But when it comes to trying to hide behind that ruling, for one of the items that was asked for today – the member generalized about all of those – it's an MLA to MLA communication. There is no such third party.

Now, I have to ask what service this member thinks he's delivering to his constituents in denial of information from one MLA to another MLA when previously he sat in one chair, the chair immediately in front of this member, and demanded that information. This, sir, is nothing short of the worst kind of hypocrisy, and it is sad to see it from this member, who was formerly, in my view, highly respected.

Thank you, sir.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora to conclude debate.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess my disappointment has grown, and now I have a brand-new reason. It seems to be the failure on the part of the Deputy Government House Leader to understand that I wasn't asking the Ethics Commissioner, the Privacy Commissioner, the Auditor General, the Ombudsman, or any other legislative office to do anything. I'm glad that he respects those offices, and you know, that's between him and the people he confesses to.

My request in this motion for a return is to ask the government to produce a document. You see, the government can always do that regardless of what any other legislative office found. This Chamber has the authority to direct the government to do something, and they could. They could ask the government to do the honourable thing, to live up to its commitments about openness and truthfulness and produce these documents in the public interest. Even the freedom of information legislation in this province contemplated that there may be times that the exclusions would be overridden by the public interest. It is simply referred to as the public interest override.

The Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek and Deputy Government House Leader can claim untold allegiance and respect to the legislative officers, and that is totally relevant to the issue at hand, because the issue at hand is the government living up to its word and producing the documents that it's hiding from Albertans, bringing them out into the public. That's what this motion for a return calls for.

[Motion for a Return 3 lost]

West Edmonton Mall Refinancing

M4. Mr. Sapers moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of the February 18, 1993, letter from a third party to the Executive Council/office of the Premier relating to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Again a very interesting point in time in the whole legacy regarding West Edmonton Mall refinancing. In late 1992 West Edmonton Mall experienced a net loss of $4.3 million. In early 1993 the same mall renovated the existing phase 1 at a cost of about $20 million. In June of 1993 West Edmonton Mall withheld almost $12 million in taxes due to the city of Edmonton.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in February of 1993 again, third-party correspondence to the Executive Council has now come to light, correspondence we can only surmise was being held by Executive Council at the same time that office denied they had any records on West Edmonton Mall refinancing. In other words, we know the correspondence exists. It's been documented elsewhere – in the Auditor General's report, and it's been documented, I believe, in one of the court proceedings – but we still don't know what it is. Now, isn't that curious? The government, which claims openness and transparency, after denying that anything existed only grudgingly admits that it does exist, only because it's referred to in another place, whether that be the Auditor General's report or a court of law. So we get the truth sort of through some kind of torture, and this government seems to make a habit of this.

Whether it has to do with Opron Construction and the Paddle River dam, whether it's got to do with Bovar, whether it's got to do with Millar Western, or whether it's got to do with any of the issues that have gone up before the courts, what happens is that when the government is caught, it finally says: oh, yeah; we meant to tell you about it all the time. That seems to be what's happening now in these court proceedings with West Edmonton Mall.

Well, I'm going to give the government an opportunity to get out ahead of the game. I'm going to give this government yet another opportunity to be honourable; to put the documents forward, all the documents; to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth about its involvement in West Edmonton Mall; and to be heroes. You know, they could actually be heroes. They could say: "Look, Sapers; you have nothing else to complain about, because here we are. Here's the box of documents. Read 'em and weep. It's all good stuff. We didn't do anything wrong. We've nothing to be ashamed of." That would be great. I don't think we're going to see that, but wouldn't that be just great?

Now, this date of February 18, 1993, is curious for another reason as well, because it was almost a year later to the day that the agenda and priorities committee met on February 14, on Saint Valentine's Day of 1994, and we had the Saint Valentine's Day Massacre of the Alberta taxpayers, which was the meeting of agenda and priorities that decided to scuttle all the private-sector financing, put a hold on it, and then put into place a series of decisions which led to taxpayers backstopping the West Edmonton Mall.

The irony of ironies there, Mr. Speaker, just in case you've forgotten, is that one of the arguments put forward was that we can't allow the financing of this mall to go to some eastern lenders, and that's why we need a made-in-Alberta solution. That was really the essence of the Premier's February 1994 memo. The ultimate funder of the loan was the Toronto-Dominion Bank, or TD Trust. I believe the Toronto-Dominion Bank is headquartered in Ontario. Now, I don't admit this to many people, but I was actually born in Toronto. I've been to the main office of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, and unless they've moved it, they're an eastern lender. Isn't it an irony that we have the excuse that we can't allow an eastern lender to be responsible for the financing of West Edmonton Mall, but we're going to organize a bailout, backstopped by taxpayers of Alberta, ultimately through an eastern lender? That engineering began pretty much a year to the day after this February 18, 1993, letter was received by Executive Council.

So I would ask once again that this government take this opportunity that the Official Opposition is providing them to stand up and do the right thing: accept this motion for a return quickly and produce the document.

4:00

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier I will indicate that government is rejecting Motion for a Return 4. I think perhaps the member needs to know that the reasons stated earlier for some of these responses apply equally here as well in this case.

MR. SAPERS: Well, I don't know which reasons those would be.

Would that be the reason that the government is hiding behind some exclusions, or is the reason that that hon. member likes the Auditor General? I mean, which reasons for rejection was he referring to? The readers of Hansard, as few as they may be, I'm sure would want to know what exactly the government is relying on to justify its abdication of responsibility in truthfully and quickly producing these documents. That being said, I can't put words in that member's mouth, and I won't pretend to know why on behalf of his friends in government he is rejecting this very legitimate request, particularly because it is so similar in form to requests for information that he made just a couple of years ago.

So, Mr. Speaker, we'll only be left to wonder, and in spite of the hon. gentleman's recommendation to the contrary, I hope the motion will pass.

[Motion for a Return 4 lost]

West Edmonton Mall Refinancing

M8. Mr. Sapers moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of excerpts of cabinet agenda, with attachments, dated March 12, 1996, pertaining to the refinancing of West Edmonton Mall as listed on page 34 of the affidavit of records of Her Majesty the Queen in right of Alberta dated November 30, 1999.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, this is very curious, and again I'm going to have to walk the Assembly through some of the history.

What we find is that the troubles for West Edmonton Mall continued. The refinancing package was put into place, but there were some legal actions with some numbered companies, a company called Mansfield Tek. We have the Treasurer in January of 1996 talking about how ATB had adopted a whole new policy for loans after he was appointed the Provincial Treasurer. We suppose that was because of briefings he had about questionable lending procedures beforehand. We know that in February of '96 Mansfield Tek, in that lawsuit I was referring to, was awarded $1.7 million in a court judgment against Triple Five. On February 23, '96, we know that there was a lease agreement between West Edmonton Mall and an enterprise called Sunningdale. This was signed by the then superintendent, Elmer Leahy.

The agreement grants exclusive management rights to the mall to the Ghermezian families for 99 years, plus limited occupancy and utility costs on the hotel for 99 years. This lease also provided for the construction of a second hotel at the mall through Sunningdale Investments, which is in fact a Ghermezian-held company. The Alberta Treasury Branch claimed that they did not find out about the Sunningdale lease agreement until April 3, 1998, and they did not receive a copy until April 21, '98. Furthermore, the ATB claims that each of the side agreements, if given effect to, would disadvantage the Alberta Treasury Branch, would be highly detrimental to the ATB's position with respect to the mall, and would jeopardize the recovery of the guaranteed funds.

So, Mr. Speaker, what we have is that a whole series of things transpired even after the government-engineered refinancing package took place. It seems we have some side agreements, and it seems we have some evidence of some other legal and financial trouble that the mall was getting itself into. Most interestingly, we know that there was further discussion in cabinet, so it wasn't simply a onetime deal.

Mr. Speaker, I would say that the government yet again has an opportunity to let Albertans know what was going on behind closed doors in 1996, while people were still suffering the effects of provincial government cuts in core services such as education and health care, what was going on in those Executive Council meetings to deal with the West Edmonton Mall.

Mr. Speaker, I could continue in my history. In March a couple of other interesting things happened in regard to the government's involvement in West Edmonton Mall. The Alberta Liberals, as the Official Opposition, asked the then Provincial Treasurer, Jim Dinning, about changes in lending practices at the Alberta Treasury Branch. The Provincial Treasurer responded, and I'm now quoting from Hansard, March 4, 1996, page 352.

Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member well knows, I sat down with the acting superintendent . . . when he took on the job, and I asked him to carry out a study with a local consulting firm to look at the lending practices of Treasury Branches.

What exactly was it that led the Treasurer to do that as one of his first items of business? On March 26, 1996, Alberta Treasury Branch and West Edmonton Mall Property Inc. concluded a right of first refusal agreement. Alberta Treasury Branch granted West Edmonton Mall Property a right of first refusal to purchase any outstanding mortgages that the ATB was a beneficial owner of or guarantor for. This agreement also entitled West Edmonton Mall Property to receive a copy of the offer made to the Alberta Treasury Branch by a third party to purchase any outstanding mortgage or mortgages. Alberta Treasury Branch claims they had no knowledge of the right of first refusal agreement until a letter was received from McLennan Ross, a law firm, on June 8, 1998.

If this document has any effect, it would be to restrict the Alberta Treasury Branch's flexibility with respect to a sale of its position and would potentially diminish its recovery. That means diminish its ability to protect taxpayers' interests in this regard. A very interesting development that took place at about the same time that we are asking for copies of the cabinet agenda where we know this matter was dealt with.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would ask once again that the government do the right thing and produce the materials requested in Motion for a Return 8.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again, as with the previous requests, I'm responding on behalf of the Premier to indicate that government will be rejecting Motion for a Return 8.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora to conclude debate.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, this is perhaps the most curious refusal of the bunch, and let me explain why. Not only do we have this whole legacy now of government involvement stemming back to the early 1990s, not only do we have meeting after meeting of Executive Council, of agenda and priorities committee, the most powerful committee of government, not only do we have an exchange of correspondence between the Premier and his most powerful lieutenants, not only do we have handwritten notes emerging from the Premier's office, not only do we have direction to scuttle private-sector financing, but we have, in fact, a continued series of events that bring us right through the period of time that the refinancing was negotiated.

We begin to uncover evidence of side deals, and of course those circumstances which have led us to the legal battles which are now raging in the courts happened at about this point in time. But with all of that, as interesting as it is, all of that history, that whole legacy and that whole sordid involvement of the government in this affair, it may be that it's not as interesting as what happened more recently.

Now, I have a document that I believe should be available to the government because it's a court record, a public document. It's an affidavit dated November 30, 1999. It's signed by a commissioner for oaths by the name of Kari Becker. It's an affidavit of Robert Bhatia, and what it says is that the Crown doesn't have any problem disclosing the material that I'm requesting.

4:10

So we have the government through Executive Council saying that we're not going to tell you the answer to that question, we're not going to produce the records and the documents, we're not going to respect the procedures of this Assembly, we're not going to respect the legitimate requests of the Official Opposition on behalf of the public, but if you happen to be one of the privileged few who can be in court, then it's okay. On the one hand, you have the government saying: "No closed drawer; no closed door. We're going to be open and accountable. It'll all come out." On the other hand, you have the government saying, "But we're not going to tell you here in this Chamber," in the one place in this whole province where free speech is supposed to always prevail, where truth is always supposed to be the watchword, where we're supposed to take each other at our word at all times, even when some of the utterances are most unbelievable.

Now, this document, which references Action No. 9903-18469, is an action in the Court of Queen's Bench of Alberta in the judicial district of Edmonton between Alberta Treasury Branches as plaintiff and Nader Ghermezian, Raphael Ghermezian, Bahman Ghermezian, Eskander Ghermezian, 273905 Alberta Ltd., Howard Anson, Mavis Halliday, 218703 Alberta Ltd., 579511 Alberta Ltd., 298936 Alberta Ltd., Triple Five Properties Inc., West Edmonton Mall Property Inc., WEM Holdings Inc., WEM Management Inc., Avista Financial Corporation, 298926 Alberta Ltd., ABNR Equities Corp., Devcor Investment Corporation, Elmer Leahy, Ventana Investments Inc., and Adirondack Investments Ltd. as defendants. I will read from it. The Crown says:

The Crown has in its possession or power records, as set forth in the First and Second parts of the First Schedule hereto, that are relevant and material to one or more of the issues in this action.

Simply put, they have records.

In "The First Part" the Crown goes on to say, "does not object to produce." Now let me read to you the form of the affidavit. It says:

The First Part: showing records in the possession of the Crown which it does not object to produce.

See attached list hereto marked "The First Part" and which list forms part of this Affidavit of Records.

The Second Part: showing records in the possession of the Crown which it does object to produce, being:

See paragraph 2 and the attached list hereto marked "The Second Part", which list forms part of this Affidavit of Records.

So if you read the first schedule, Mr. Speaker, it says that here's a whole list of records, including "excerpts of cabinet agendas with attachment(s)" from 08/13/96, which the Crown does not object to produce.

Now, I am very puzzled by this. I'm also deeply concerned, because it seems a little bit duplicitous to me. It seems as though we have the government saying one thing when it's convenient and saying something else when it's convenient. It seems that we have a growing gap once again between words and deeds. Why is it that the Crown would have no objection to producing these cabinet agendas and attachments in court, in that public forum, but will reject them and refuse to produce them in this public forum? Are they hoping that nobody will notice when they're produced in that public forum? Is it because one hand doesn't know what the other hand is doing? Is it because they're just trying to be difficult? Is it because it's the Official Opposition that's asking?

Mr. Speaker, what legitimate reason could there possibly be for the government to say, "It's okay; we'll produce these records in one forum but not another"? I don't think there is a legitimate excuse. I think this government is clearly trying to confuse, mislead, and otherwise obscure its role in putting nearly a half billion dollars' worth of taxpayers' money at risk. It is clearly a touchy, sore point for this government. It's an embarrassment to them, as it should be. You know, it must be an embarrassment, because it is their newest Deputy Government House Leader who has been given the task of standing up and saying: we won't comply with your requests.

You know, Mr. Speaker, that hon. member and I were once colleagues on this side of the House, and I still have a soft spot in my heart for those days. I know that that member doesn't take his responsibilities lightly, but I can't help but observe that he must be feeling awfully abused right about now. First of all, he gets put up to be a member of the truth squads; not just a member of a truth squad but in fact one of the capo de capos of the truth squads. Then of course when that initiative seems to fail to capture the public imagination in a positive way, the government says: "Okay; we'll go soft on the truth squads. Maybe that was a mistake, but I know what we can do. Wouldn't it be fun . . ." And I can just imagine the sort of boyish glee in the Premier's office when he was talking to his advisers about how they're going to obscure the truth and how they're going to deny these requests. I can just imagine the boyish glee as they said: "Oh, I know what we can do. We can get Edmonton-Mill Creek to stand up and deny the request. Won't that be an irony?"

So of course here we are today, where we have this situation which must be awfully uncomfortable and embarrassing for that member. I want to say to him that I feel his pain, and I want to say that it truly saddens me to see him abused like this when, after all, all he was trying to do was serve his constituents.

What we have, Mr. Speaker, to try to quickly summarize, is an affidavit of record put forward by a representative of the Crown, in fact an assistant deputy Provincial Treasurer, saying that they don't have any problem in releasing these documents, yet we have the Deputy Government House Leader saying just the opposite, just the contrary: we're not going to release the documents. I think Albertans will want an explanation as to why we have this to and fro, why we have these totally opposite and opposing responses to similar requests. I don't think Albertans are going to be satisfied if the answer is "I don't know," which seems to be about all we've heard from this government; that is, either "I don't know," or "I don't want to know," or "I might know, but I'm not going to tell you." That does not bring this House into a positive light either.

So we have a rejection from the government. We also have an acceptance from the government, but it's in a different forum. Maybe those members here will be compelled to help save the face of the government and will vote to release the document so the government at least can be made to look consistent on this one little point. I mean, rife with inconsistencies throughout this whole saga, but at least on this one little point we can give the government an opportunity to look like it's doing the things it says it's going to do and it can be consistent in all forums.

I think the minds of the public would be put at ease if they could see that their government was being consistent. Of course, if the government chooses to continue to be inconsistent, then one couldn't blame any taxpayer of this province for thinking that the government has something to hide. Because you know, Mr. Speaker, when you have something to hide, you forget what you've said and what you've done and you're scrambling to figure out what really is the truth and how you can shave it, and you often just get tied up in your own words. Maybe that's what we're facing with this government on this matter now.

So I would once again ask that this Motion for a Return 8 on the Order Paper in my name be accepted.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: All those in favour of Motion for a Return 8 as moved . . . [Mr. Jacques rose] Hon. member, the call was from one side to the other, and there being no speakers at the time, then the chair invited the hon. member to conclude debate, so that's why we're holding the vote. Perhaps the next one.

[Motion for a Return 8 lost]

Government Fees and Charges

M10. Mr. Gibbons moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all fees and charges and copies of expense and revenue analyses prepared by the Department of Government Services and Alberta Registries between May 1, 1999, and February 17, 2000, for Alberta Treasury and the Fees and Charges Committee.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise on behalf of the hon. Minister of Government Services and indicate that the government will be accepting Motion For a Return 10.

4:20

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: To conclude debate, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: I rise to close, and I'm pleased to receive this information. I had tried to get it earlier on last year, and all I got was 23 pages of FOIPed items. Some of these items that we're needing lead up to Bill 5 and Bill 16, items that are on the table right now, and I appreciate getting that information.

Thank you.

[Motion for a Return 10 carried]

Agriculture Financial Services Corporation/ Alberta Opportunity Company

M17. Mr. Wickman moved on behalf of Dr. Nicol that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all studies and reports prepared by or for the Department of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development between May 25, 1999, and February 17, 2000, relating to the integration of the Alberta Agriculture Financial Services Corporation and the Alberta Opportunity Company.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

MR. LUND: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the members in this Chamber was appointed to oversee and study the whole issue to see what could be done as far as the integration of AOC with AFSC. It's an ongoing procedure. The hon. member has, I know, met with the various boards that are involved, has asked for a number of reports, and has done that kind of work. But it's a work in progress, and to our knowledge there have been absolutely no studies or reports completed at this time. Because of the nature of the work, it's ongoing, so we would have to reject this particular motion.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford to conclude debate.

MR. WICKMAN: Mr. Speaker, to conclude debate, the statements made by the minister really surprise me. They're a contradiction. On the one hand, what the minister is saying is that there are no reports, that there are no studies, that there is nothing to table or to report. On the other hand, the motion for a return clearly says, "copies of all studies and reports prepared by or for." Why he doesn't accept it, I don't know. If there aren't any there to submit, then there's no reason why he shouldn't accept it. The fact that he's rejected it indicates to me that there may possibly be some studies or reports there that he's not prepared to release for whatever reason.

The Member for Lethbridge-East, Mr. Speaker, I would think is going to be quite surprised. He anticipated that the minister would have no hesitation accepting this particular motion for a return. I don't really understand why on the one hand the minister would say that there's nothing to report and on the other hand he rejects it. If there's nothing to report, why not accept it and submit whatever's there? If there's nothing there to submit, there's nothing there to submit. At least he would then have accepted the motion for a return rather than have rejected it.

On that note I'll conclude, but let me say that I'm very disappointed that the minister has rejected it.

[Motion for a Return 17 lost]

head: Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders

head: Third Reading

Bill 202

Marriage Amendment Act, 2000

[Debate adjourned March 14: Mr. Dickson speaking]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

MS GRAHAM: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise this afternoon to take this opportunity to outline the reasons why I'm unable to support Bill 202, the Marriage Amendment Act, 2000, a private member's bill sponsored by the Member for Red Deer-South. In my view, this bill does not and cannot do what I believe the sponsor has suggested that it does do; in other words, protect the institution of marriage in Alberta from challenge under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms by way of restricting solemnization of marriage to only opposite-sex couples.

Mr. Speaker, for the reasons that I will describe, in my view Bill 202 is largely meaningless and ineffective to achieve the purposes stated by the sponsor, and unfortunately I believe that it sends a message to Albertans which is misleading and suggests to them that we are doing something that we really can't do as a provincial Legislature.

During the debate on this bill the sponsor and other hon. members of this Legislature, in their speeches both at second reading and at committee, spoke of the very positive benefits to society that the institution of marriage has contributed and the importance that marriage has for many people in Alberta and elsewhere in this country, and in all of this I concur. However, Mr. Speaker, to express these sentiments at length does not ensure the legal and constitutional validity of the contents of Bill 202. It does not ensure that, nor can these sentiments cure the weaknesses in Bill 202.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, it is my belief that the content of a private member's bill should be held to the same standard as the content of a government bill in terms of the scrutiny it receives and the debate it receives. I don't believe this has happened here, and I think that is unfortunate. I do believe that private members' bills, or any bill for that matter, should be more than a form of public relations for the consumption of the public, who often have neither the time nor the resources to check out the validity of the legislation which is being passed in a Legislature. For me as a member of this Assembly to support a bill which I believe is beyond our jurisdiction as a provincial Legislature, that I believe to be at the worst or at the best a somewhat meaningless piece of legislation – for me it is not responsible to support it, for of course once this legislation is passed, it has the same effect as any other piece of government legislation.

I'm proud to be a member of this Legislature, and I would like to think that the bills we pass here are ones that we are entitled to pass and that give us credibility in this country. I want to be proud of what we do here. I'm by no means saying that I'm not a big supporter of marriage. I've been married, and I believe in marriage as much as anyone else here, but that doesn't mean, in my view, that we pass bills that we're not entitled to pass.

Yesterday, in moving third reading of his bill, the sponsor, in a very genuine attempt, I'm sure, to garner support for his bill, stated that all members of the Legislature had to ask themselves whether the institution of marriage is worth protecting and said that that is at the heart of this bill. Well, I do not believe that that is the right question that members of this Legislature should ask themselves at all. In fact, I would suggest that the right question is: does this provincial Legislature have the jurisdiction to legislate on the subject of who can marry? The answer, in my view, is: no, we do not. In my view, this bill attempts to do something by the back door that can't be done through the front door.

4:30

The Constitution of this country defines for us the generally clear and exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government versus the provincial government. I think it is essential that each level of government legislate within its own area, especially where it's clearly stated, and I think it's important that we as a provincial Legislature have respect for the division of powers and that we adhere to our own areas of authority, for this is the very foundation of how our Canadian system of government works. We certainly don't like it when we think the federal government is intruding into our areas of authority, so by the same token I think we have to respect those areas that belong to the federal government.

To be specific, Mr. Speaker, it is section 91 of the Constitution of Canada which defines the areas of exclusive federal jurisdiction, one of which is marriage and divorce. This has always meant that the federal government has the jurisdiction to decide on those issues relating to the capacity to marry or, in other words, who can marry. Now, section 92, which outlines the provincial exclusive jurisdiction, gives the province the right to legislate in the area of the solemnization of marriage, which is very simply the form and the process of how a marriage is conducted, registered, and the like. In other words, the province says how you can get married, but it is the federal government who says who can marry.

In fact, there is no federal statute, I believe, that defines what marriage is. The federal Marriage Act doesn't define it. The legal definition of marriage in this country is found in the common law or case law or jurisprudence that has developed over time. It's very clear: marriage means the voluntary union for life of one man and one woman to the exclusion of all others. This is the law in Canada.

In the final analysis, Mr. Speaker, I guess my point is this. The province doesn't have the jurisdiction to legislate on who can marry.

Even if it did, I don't believe that this bill even accomplishes the objective of the sponsor, which was to prohibit unions of same-sex couples, because it doesn't go far enough. It doesn't prohibit them. It just includes a definition of marriage by using the word "marriage." It doesn't include a prohibition. I don't think it could do this legally, but it doesn't in any event. In my view, the bill – that is, the preamble and the definition of marriage as drafted in this bill – at the very best adds nothing to the law, and at the worst it is an intrusion into federal jurisdiction.

I would now like to talk briefly about section 5 of the bill, which is an attempt to use the notwithstanding clause relative to our provincial Marriage Act, which is a licensing act in the main. I would start by saying that the notwithstanding clause of the Constitution can be invoked to allow a statute or a provision of a statute to remain valid when it would otherwise be in violation of a right or freedom guaranteed by section 2 and sections 7 through 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. However, there is no statutory provision to be protected, and therefore in my view the notwithstanding clause has no effect here. The law on marriage, as I mentioned, is in the common law, and the notwithstanding clause cannot affect the common law. It has no effect. Including the notwithstanding clause in this provincial Marriage Act does not, in my view, Mr. Speaker, cure the fact that the province has no jurisdiction over the authority to legislate capacity.

I would just go on to say – and I find this is why I most strenuously disagree with the inclusion of the notwithstanding clause in this bill, which I think is quite ill-conceived and somewhat clumsily done – that if the bill is passed, this will be the first time in Alberta that we have ever included the notwithstanding clause in our legislation. I think we should be very, very clear that when we start invoking the notwithstanding clause, which is very significant and in my view a provision that should be used sparingly, we should know exactly what we're doing when we use it and know what we're protecting against. There's nothing there to protect against. There's no statute. The federal government hasn't done anything. They've had the opportunity; they've done the opposite. There's nothing on the horizon. So we don't even know what we're protecting against, but we're throwing it in, and I think it's not responsible of us as legislators to use the notwithstanding clause in that way. That isn't to say that in the proper case it wouldn't be justified, but I think it doesn't exist yet, so that is why I cannot support the inclusion of the notwithstanding clause in this bill.

For those reasons, Mr. Speaker, I will not be supporting this bill.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to concur with the position that the Member for Calgary-Lougheed has taken on Bill 202. Bill 202 is indeed a bad piece of legislation from a constitutional as well as a legal standpoint. In fact, its legality and constitutionality stand in serious question. I'm surprised that it passed committee stage and now is at third reading stage. At the very least I would have hoped that at committee stage there would have been more members like the Member for Calgary-Lougheed and the Member for Medicine Hat who, while supporting the principles of the bill, voted against it because it's simply a bad law. I ask the government members to consider carefully the arguments put forward by the Member for Medicine Hat, the Member for Calgary-Lougheed, and the Minister of Justice before voting this very ill-advised bill into law.

Bill 202 deserves to be defeated because it represents an unacceptable intrusion into the jurisdiction of the federal government. The attempt by the Member for Red Deer-South to rationalize this intrusion lacks credibility. Mr. Speaker, the comments made by the Member for Medicine Hat on March 1 bear repeating. The member said:

As has already been pointed out by the Minister of Justice, the institution of marriage falls under federal jurisdiction. The Alberta Marriage Act, which we are here to amend today, does not deal with the institution of marriage; it deals with the regulation of marriage. The reference to marriage that is contained repeatedly within the Marriage Act is using the definition that comes from federal legislation. So how can we in the Legislature of Alberta purport to be able to bring something about that is clearly under the jurisdiction of the federal government?

This is wise counsel by the Member for Medicine Hat.

4:40

The Alberta government historically has insisted that the federal government respect the Constitution and not make intrusions into areas that are within provincial jurisdiction. If Alberta's call for the federal government to respect provincial jurisdiction is to have any credibility, this Legislature should not be passing Bill 202, which intrudes on the federal government's constitutional responsibilities. I note that the Minister of Justice has, I believe courageously, opposed Bill 202 because he, too, believes that it represents an unwarranted intrusion into matters properly within the jurisdiction of the federal government. Has the Minister of Justice consulted with his federal counterpart on the question of jurisdiction? I wonder where the minister of intergovernmental relations stands on the question of jurisdiction. Has she consulted with her federal counterpart?

I'm concerned that the fast-tracking of Bill 202 through the Legislature will mean that no answers to the above questions will be provided. There's no good reason to fast-track this bill through other than the hope that by doing it this way, the government can save itself political embarrassment that would no doubt come from a detailed public scrutiny of the bill.

Clearly, the use of the notwithstanding clause to shield Bill 202 from court challenges under the Charter is offensive. I note that the Member for Calgary-Buffalo attempted to address this by introducing an amendment that would have removed this provision from the bill. While this may have made the bill less offensive, it remains the case that the courts could rule that the bill is unconstitutional because it violates the division of powers under the Constitution Act. If a legal challenge was made on these grounds, the bill could not even be saved by the use of the notwithstanding clause.

The fact that Bill 202 is being fast-tracked through this Legislature shows that this government has learned nothing from the public uproar following the introduction of Bill 26 two years ago. Bill 202, which obliges the government of Alberta . . .

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, we have a point of order.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Point of Order

Private Members' Business

MR. JACQUES: Thank you. I noted with regard to the speaker's comments that he was referring to, quote, government. I know that you, Mr. Speaker, have cautioned us in the past that this is a private member's motion. Hon. member, you have very eloquently identified members individually who were speaking to the motion, and I fully concur with that, but when you now in the last two references referred to the government, I have to take exception to that. This is a private member's bill.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, without even hearing any further comments, I think the reminder has to be made again. This is private members' business, and the points made by the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti are absolutely correct. This is private members' business.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If I erred in this regard, I am prepared to correct myself. I mentioned that only in that we need to learn from our past. That was essentially the point of my observation.

Debate Continued

DR. PANNU: Let me resume then, Mr. Speaker, with your permission. This is the point I was making. Bill 202, which obliges the government of Alberta to invoke the notwithstanding clause, could be law in this province within days, despite the assurances that we received from this government that it will be much more cautious in the future before it considers invoking the clause. I'm in fact here restating the government's own position and reaffirming it.

Again, Mr. Speaker, tell me if I'm erring, but I would like to go on record as saying that I'd like to remind Albertans once again of the Premier's undertaking made two years ago. On March 11, 1998, the Premier said that the government would give the use of the notwithstanding provision much more serious thought in the future because "the seriousness and the power of this particular clause" became crystal clear to his caucus. Furthermore, the Premier responded to questions in this House about the use of the notwithstanding clause by saying that "if the notwithstanding clause is ever contemplated, indeed, there will be a tremendous amount of open and honest and public discussion" before it's invoked.

As I said at committee stage and I repeat: where, then, do the Premier and the government stand on the use of the notwithstanding clause as referenced in section 1.1 of Bill 202? Where is the open and honest discussion promised before approving another bill that contains a notwithstanding clause? I again point out that this bill is being proposed at a time when the government has failed to address the need to bring provincial legislation into compliance with the May '99 Supreme Court decision in M versus H. The federal government and most other Canadian provinces are moving rapidly to ensure that those involved in same-sex relationships have legal status equal to opposite-sex common-law couples. Even the Conservative government in Ontario has amended its statutes to remove this discrimination.

What are we doing in this province? Unfortunately, Alberta is moving in the wrong direction. Last spring and fall this Legislature approved amendments to such acts as the Domestic Relations Act, the Employment Pension Plans Act, and the Insurance Act. These amendments entrenched discrimination against same-sex couples by excluding them from the definition of spouse even when that term is clearly understood to include those couples living in common-law relationships. This is wrong, just as Bill 202 is wrong.

I'm not questioning the sincerity of the Member for Red Deer-South or the sincerity of other government members who are supporting Bill 202. I mentioned at committee stage that my wife and I recently celebrated our 40th wedding anniversary. I do value the institution of marriage and the lifelong commitment that marriage entails. At the same time, I'm realistic enough to recognize, Mr. Speaker, that when we talk about marriage, we need to participate in this discussion with some humility. It's a fact that 1 in 2 marriages today ends in divorce. It's also a fact that we no longer as a society require someone who lives in a psychologically or physically abusive relationship to stay in that relationship under the pretext of preserving the sanctity of marriage.

Finally, it's a fact that many couples choose to live in mutually supportive relationships even though they are not legally married. The preamble to Bill 202 says that marriage between a man and a woman is firmly rooted in our philosophical and religious traditions. It is important to note that in a modern state such as Canada or Alberta marriage is a civil matter which sets out the legal rights and obligations of those who participate in it. The state should not be involved in promoting particular religious traditions or understandings of marriage. It is the responsibility of the state to ensure that those living in mutually supportive relationships fulfill their obligations to each other and to any dependent children.

Many gay and lesbian adults live in marriagelike relationships. Many same-sex couples subscribe to a lifelong commitment despite the lack of legal recognition of their relationships. I have been privileged to know many individuals with the same-sex orientation who take their responsibilities to their partners every bit as seriously as those of us involved in opposite-sex relationships. These are realities that will not be changed by this Legislature's approval of Bill 202. Whether we give recognition to the reality of the relationship by allowing same-sex couples to legally marry or whether we do so through some type of separate legal recognition, one thing is certain. If it is beneficial to society for opposite-sex couples to make a lifelong commitment to each other, the same should apply to the relationships of same-sex marriages. As J. Edwards said many years ago: what we wish for ourselves we desire for all.

As a society we will have to in the future face the question of public recognition of same-sex relationships in the same way that societies in the past had to struggle with questions of women's equality or racial equality. There were those in the 19th century who argued that slavery was deeply rooted in philosophical and religious traditions. There were those in the 20th century who argued that the subservience of women was deeply rooted in philosophical and religious traditions. Just because something is rooted in tradition doesn't automatically make it right. Societies evolve and change. As legislators we also have the responsibility to challenge our own assumptions and prejudices and be prepared to change.

The fact that the judiciary has on a few occasions ruled that the decisions of parliaments and legislatures are unconstitutional does not necessarily mean that the politicians are right and the judges are wrong. Just as politicians have a responsibility for making laws, judges have a responsibility for interpreting the law. In that context I make the following request of the Minister of Justice. Should Bill 202 regrettably be passed into law by this Assembly, the Minister of Justice should, prior to proclamation, commit to referring the bill to the courts for judicial review to ensure that it does not violate the division of powers in the Canadian Constitution.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully urge all members to vote against Bill 202 at third reading. Whatever our views are on the institution of marriage itself, Bill 202 is an ill-conceived piece of legislation and does not deserve the support of this Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

4:50

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to private member's Bill 202, Marriage Amendment Act, 2000. Before I do speak to the specifics of it, I would like to read into the record and I would wish to declare that I truly respect the institution and the sanctity of marriage. I also believe that we as legislators have the responsibility to not only acknowledge the legal and religious values of marriage but indeed to pass laws that even assume those values.

However, Mr. Speaker, with reference to clause 2 as proposed in the bill, I find that while I believe that "marriage is the foundation of family and society," as is stated in the second whereas section, I cannot assent to read into the law of this province the ending of the second whereas clause, which reads, "without which there would be neither civilization nor progress." As I understand this whereas clause, it implies that marriage is the sole determinant of civilization and progress. While I agree that marriage contributes to civilization and progress, I do not believe it is the only factor that defines them.

The second point that I want to make is in reference to section 5, which does suggest that we write into law, again, this bill which suggests the use of the notwithstanding clause. My understanding of that clause contained within the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms is that it is only to be used when it is a situation that truly merits it in reference to another statutory situation, and I do not believe that there is a statutory provision to be protected under this whereas clause. Section 5, I believe, is beyond the scope of provincial legislative jurisdiction. I am not a lawyer, but I do believe that the Member for Calgary-Lougheed expressed it very well in saying that we cannot suggest the invocation of that against another government's jurisdictional powers, as I understand it.

So, Mr. Speaker, I stand here today to identify that I will be voting against this private member's bill, and the reason for it is not because I do not believe, again, in the sanctity and in the legality of marriage. It is truly to be respected. However, I do feel that this particular private member's bill is beyond the scope of our legislative approval.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. HAVELOCK: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief, but I'd like to respond to a couple of the remarks made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and some others here today.

For me the issue is not whether the government can or cannot pass this legislation. It's not whether it should or should not include the notwithstanding clause. Having had a rather vivid experience myself with respect to that particular clause . . .

MR. DICKSON: Tell us about that.

MR. HAVELOCK: Well, I don't think I have time to tell you about my experience with respect to that particular clause.

MR. DICKSON: Show us the scars.

MR. HAVELOCK: Yes, I can show you the scars.

I will make a couple of points, Mr. Speaker. I consider myself, in light of that experience that I had, to be somewhat of an expert on the notwithstanding clause. For one thing, when the government responded to the Vriend decision, which the Supreme Court rendered and indicated some changes that had to be made to or rather read into our human rights legislation, it was made very clear that with respect to the institution of marriage we would not take that particular issue to Albertans with respect to a full referendum or full discussion. In fact, I do recall the point being made very explicitly by the Premier and by other members of our caucus that the institution of marriage is so important and should be protected that we felt we would try and implement the notwithstanding clause in the event some changes occurred which we did not agree with.

So I have to take issue with the argument of the hon. member across the way, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, that it was our intention to consult with respect to this particular type of change. It wasn't. What the hon. member across the way who is sponsoring the bill has done is simply incorporate that philosophical position in a private member's bill.

As concerns the role of the provincial government, we do play a role with respect to the institution of marriage. We are involved in the solemnization of marriage. We are involved in the licensing. I myself had the honour of actually marrying a couple last year and very much enjoyed the experience.

MR. DICKSON: Did it work better than the Premier's experience?

MR. HAVELOCK: Well, I don't know if it was better than the Premier's experience. I can tell you that this particular experience was a lot smaller than the Premier's experience. There were about 50 people there as opposed to the hon. Minister of Environment, who I think filled the Jack Singer hall with all of his supporters. In fact, I think it was a combined nomination meeting and wedding.

MRS. McCLELLAN: It was very successful.

MR. HAVELOCK: He was successful. He not only won the nomination; he also has a lovely new bride. I'm sure he's very happy with her.

So we do play a role. Sometimes we bring forward legislation in this House and/or take positions where we feel so strongly about them that we're prepared to take the risk as to whether or not they could be challenged by the federal government. We took a very strong position with respect to federal gun control. While I appreciate that it's important for us to respect the jurisdiction of the federal government, again this is not a black and white issue. There is some overlap with respect to the role that the provincial government plays regarding the institution of marriage.

I will be voting for this particular private member's bill, and one of the reasons is this. After the Vriend decision we quite openly discussed whether or not there was another way to recognize a relationship which may be entered into by same-sex couples. Now, since having moved on from being Minister of Justice and Attorney General to my new post, I haven't been following that issue with a great deal of closeness or scrutiny myself personally. Nevertheless, there are some ways in which same-sex couples could, if they wanted to pursue it, have their particular relationship recognized. I know there are some European countries where they have done that, and if those individuals wish to pursue that, perhaps that's an option they should seriously consider.

I do support the intent of what the hon. member is trying to accomplish, and it's not for me a negative statement or passing judgment in any way on those who wish to pursue an alternate lifestyle. My position is simply that I feel the institution of marriage as presented by the hon. member reflects quite accurately what I believe in.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

MS HALEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad that I have this opportunity to rise just before the debate closes on this particular bill that was brought forward by my colleague from Red Deer-South. I've listened carefully to a lot of people discuss the merits of this bill, both the pros and the cons, and not being a lawyer, perhaps I don't appreciate the finer points of some of the comments that are being made. I do, however, want to say that the spirit of the bill and the intent of the bill I'm absolutely one hundred percent in accord with. I don't believe there's another way to do this type of bill other than what the hon. Member for Red Deer-South has brought forward.

Our whole society has been inundated with change, and I think the one thing that has remained rock solid and stable throughout our creation as a civilization is the fact that we've had the bedrock foundation of family. A family was inherently a man and a woman and children, and I don't think that this government or the people in this caucus have any desire to see that change.

Mr. Speaker, by supporting this bill, I want to send a strong message to my constituents as well who feel very strongly that marriage is sacrosanct in this province and that it needs to be respected by not only all of the people in this province but particularly by its legislators. I will in fact be supporting Red Deer-South's Bill 202.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, under our rules we afford an opportunity for the hon. mover of the bill to conclude.

The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

MR. DOERKSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm just going to review briefly some of the debate that we've had and then have my closing comments.

The Marriage Amendment Act, 2000, is of course focused on the recognition and value of marriage by adding to the Marriage Act a preamble and a definition. There has been some suggestion that the scope of the bill isn't large enough, but I would remind members that for a private member's bill to have success, you have to keep it as narrowly focused and precise as possible. In that sense, Mr. Speaker, this bill is very specific to the value and importance of the institution of marriage.

5:00

In the debate I want to remind members that evidence was produced to show that the social science research supports those principles. To date in the debate I haven't heard anybody argue against that research or present something to the contrary. In the debate the principles that we have outlined in the bill in the preamble have been affirmed by most speakers. The bill also uses the mechanism of the notwithstanding clause primarily to indicate the commitment to stand by those principles.

There has been some debate around jurisdiction. We've been able to show by reference to section 92(12) that the provinces indeed do have jurisdiction on the matter of solemnization of marriage. I also refer to the Alberta Law Reform Institute in their presentation on family law and reference case law, which also confirms that position.

The main point of contention in the debate has centred on the use of the notwithstanding clause, not necessarily so much as to whether it would be effective but whether this would be an appropriate time to use this. The question was raised: why would you use the notwithstanding clause at a time when there's no challenge before us?

Mr. Speaker, I would argue that that is precisely the right time to do it, when we can make a reasoned and determined debate in this Legislature to affirm a position ahead of the time when that controversy may arise. So we are making a commitment to the people of Alberta, a firm and clear commitment that we are prepared to defend the definition of marriage. The principle is certainly more important than the mechanism. Mr. Speaker, the institution of marriage is worth defending and is worth preserving.

Up to this point I have confined my comments to research, to the principles, to the argument for using the notwithstanding clause. I want to close with a few personal comments. I want to dedicate the efforts on this bill that I have taken forward to those who have exemplified to me what marriage and commitment are all about. I want to reference my two sets of grandparents: John P. and Katharina Doerksen, who were married for 54 years; Heinrich and Helena Harder, who were married for 40 years. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I'm wearing today the ring from Heinrich Harder that he wore when he was married and still with us. Both of those couples lived through a time of inconvenience, a time of poverty when they were forced to leave their homeland of Russia to come to Canada. It was a time of war, a time of resettlement, a time of new language, and the commitment that they had to each other continued throughout that period.

To my own parents, Peter and Tina Doerksen, who will be married for 53 years on June 28: this is dedicated to them as well. Those people have shown to me the value of passing down commitment, commitment to each other in marriage.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, I want to dedicate this bill to my wife, Doris. We will be married for 25 years on June 28.

MR. TRYNCHY: You're only halfway there.

MR. DOERKSEN: You're right. There's still a lot of work to be done, Mr. Speaker, before I get to that magic 50 years and above. She has stood by my side for all those years, been the mother to our four children, and I can't say enough about her. She's a woman and she's a lady.

Lastly, to my children, who are not yet married but one who will be married this coming June. I would also want to pass on to them the importance and value that they would see from us, the importance of being married and the importance that would be for future generations.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:05 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

For the motion:

Burgener

Jonson

Pham

Cao
Coutts
Doerksen
Ducharme
Forsyth
Friedel
Haley
Havelock
Hlady
Johnson

Klapstein
Kryczka
Langevin
Lougheed
Lund
Marz
McClellan
McFarland
Melchin
Paszkowski

Shariff
Stelmach
Strang
Tannas
Tarchuk
West
Woloshyn
Yankowsky
Zwozdesky

Against the motion:

Bonner
Boutilier
Dickson
Graham
Hancock

Jacques
MacDonald
Magnus O'Neill
Pannu

Renner
Sapers
Severtson
White Wickman

Totals:

For - 32

Against - 15

[Motion carried; Bill 202 read a third time]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. HAVELOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I move that we call it 5:30 and that the House do now stand adjourned and reconvene this evening at 8 in Committee of Supply.

THE SPEAKER: On the motion put forward by the hon. Deputy Government House Leader, would all members in favour, please say aye.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Aye.

THE SPEAKER: Opposed, please say no.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE SPEAKER: This House is adjourned until 8 o'clock this evening.

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:18 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, March 15, 2000

8:00 p.m.

Date: 00/03/15

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd like to call the committee to order.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

THE CHAIRMAN: This evening we have Committee of Supply dealing with the estimates of the Department of Resource Development. Are we agreed that it's 20 minutes, 20 minutes, and then a vote? Is that agreeable?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

DR. TAYLOR: How about five minutes, five minutes, then a vote?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yeah, right. The third party has five minutes.

We'll begin this evening, then, with the hon. Minister of Resource Development.

Resource Development

DR. WEST: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In the estimates of Resource Development tonight I'd like to bring a few highlights of today's energy sector and a few comments. I don't know that I need to go into full details of what we did in room 512, but I certainly will give a bit of an overview of where we are today.

Last week oil prices reached a new post Gulf war high of $34 a barrel. Last March they averaged at $14.68. If you compare natural gas prices from last month with prices a year ago, you can see an increase there too. It was $2.80 today, and a year ago it was $1.80 Canadian per gigajoule.

On the consumer side we saw an increase in the price of gasoline. Today it's 64.9 cents and last year at this time it was 45 cents a litre. Given these high commodity prices, we're forecasting significant increases in exploration and drilling this year with a corresponding increase in royalties to be collected, but it is also important to note that we don't expect prices to stay as high as they are now. In fact, from last week to today they've dropped two and a half dollars a barrel. Our prediction is that oil prices will average $19 U.S. a barrel in 2000-2001 and that natural gas will average about $2.50 Canadian for a thousand cubic feet. That is the Alberta reference price. These forecasts are lower than prices are now, but they reflect the best economic analysis we have going into the future.

Our estimates are that resource royalties in 2000-2001 will total $4 billion, up from the $2.4 billion we collected in '98-99 and down from the $4.3 billion we expect to collect this fiscal year. This is predicted to include $2.3 billion in natural gas and gas by-product royalties, $632 million in crude oil royalties, $469 million in synthetic crude oil and bitumen royalties from Alberta's oil sands, $14 million from coal, and $650 million from bonuses and the sale of Crown leases.

I would like to point out that the Crown takes royalties on conventional crude oil in kind. The Crown's share is sold by the private-sector marketing agents, Tidal oil company, PanCanadian, and CanPet. Tidal was previously Gulf. We assess the marketing agents' performance based on what prices they receive for the Crown volume and how the price compares to market benchmark prices. From January to July 1999 the average Crown price for light sweet crude was 69 percent above the Edmonton posting. For light sour crude it was 95 cents above the Hardisty posting, and for heavy crude oil it was 60 cents above the Hardisty posting. That demonstrates that the private sector is selling our share on behalf of the people of Alberta and reaching a good price for it.

Resource development in Alberta is increasing across all sectors, and here's a snapshot of what's going on. The natural gas pipeline capacity has increased from 10.4 billion cubic feet per day in '95 to 11.9 billion cubic feet today. The volume of synthetic crude oil manufactured from bitumen has continued to rise from 278,000 barrels per day in '95 to 320,000 per day and rising as it today. Alberta's demand for ethane continues to rise from an average demand of 131,000 barrels per day to over 140,000 barrels per day today.

Industry is also taking on improved environmental performances especially in the area of flaring reduction. The target was set to reduce flares by 25 percent from the '96 levels by the end of 2001, and as of year-end '98 we were at 15 percent below '96, and we're on our way to beating that 25 percent target today.

According to the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, the industry is expected to drill 14,300 wells in western Canada in 2000 compared to 10,200 in 1999, and 10,500 are expected to be drilled in Alberta.

AN HON. MEMBER: Question.

DR. WEST: The hon. member from the oil sands seems impatient.

The number of rigs drilling in February of 2000 was 403, and that's up from 275 in February of '99.

Industry has announced $33 billion in oil sands investment. Over $23 billion is already in application.

Natural gas was the top commodity export in '98, increasing $8 billion. At a 1.2 percent increase, that is up today in the year 2000.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have gone over much of the department's budget in estimates in subcommittee. Again, we're asking this year for $87 million from the Assembly to run Alberta's business as it relates to oil and gas, electric deregulation, and issues that deal with the EUB. Also, we're asking for an extra $5 million to do due progress in certain areas such as animal health studies that will be done in conjunction with the other western provinces and industry. We're putting about $980 million into this animal health study this year, and it will be doing flare gas emissions as well as fugitive emissions from all other sources.

We are also looking in this budget to continuing electrical deregulation, and we're well on our way to giving full customer choice by January 1, 2001. We're also looking at finishing the extension of rural utility service to the Metis settlements, and that will be done this year. We have put money towards a new volumetric and infrastructure petroleum information registry, which will be completed somewhere in the year 2003.

We're doing research: another million dollars into coal bed methane. Remember that there's about 2,400 trillion cubic feet of coal bed methane estimated in the province. If we could develop the technology to use that, you can imagine what the supply would be for generations to come.

We have been instrumental throughout the last year in looking at the pipeline regulatory review and also reducing public liability for oil and gas facilities. We will be bringing in an act this spring I think to look at the orphan fund so that we can increase the rehabilitation of those facilities and pipelines, gas plants, batteries, and wells that have been abandoned or are orphaned in the province.

Again the Energy and Utilities Board continued to do magnificent work last year. They processed over 43,500 corporate transactions and 20,500 applications. Remember that they went to hearings on less than .1 percent of those. They had 45 and they expect this year to get that down to 30 appeals – can you imagine that? – that had to go to hearings out of some 60,000 transactions.

Mr. Chairman, I will finish there because many of the other facts and that we went through in subcommittee, and I will await other hon. members if they have some follow-up questions.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. [some applause]

MR. WHITE: Thank you members from both sides of the House for the hand. That's awfully good.

Tonight we'll do the best we can to keep it within a reasonable time limit, certainly under the 20 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Now, this is a case of the good, the bad, and the ugly. The good is that there are some great oil and gas markets. They're really doing well. The province of Alberta is doing exceedingly well in that area. The minister has just outlined all the numbers that are current. I'll deal with that in a moment.

8:10

The bad, of course, is where we are in the generation of power and the uncertainty of the market. The ugly is the coal market at the moment. It's a bit sad.

First of all, there are some other parts of the good. It's good to see that the minister has seen the light and put more money into the EUB. The EUB, the regulatory agency of the Crown, does a good job; I agree with the minister on that. They have been working very hard at reducing a great deal of the turnaround times. They're reducing as best they can. They're doing a number of things, new and different ways of doing things such as problem solving and disputes mechanisms. For those of you that are interested in hearing a little bit about it, this morning in Public Accounts Mr. McCrank, the full-time chairman of the board, outlined some of that to great effect.

We'd also like to applaud the minister, along with the Minister of Environment I suspect, for agreeing to be in a consortium of governments with private enterprise involvement also, putting together this consortium with $17 million in order to study flare gas and all fugitive gases, their effect on humans and animals. Mr. Chairman, you'll recall that in this province it's caused a great deal of consternation. There are a number of terrible situations that have arisen supposedly from flare gas, citizens that believe there's great harm being done to them, and they have taken the law into their own hands. Hopefully this study will answer a good number of these questions so we will not have that kind of breaking of the law in the future. It'll be good solid negotiation and discussion about these potential dangers.

The good news, of course, for Alberta and for the current government is that both natural gas and the price of oil are very high. That fuels the surpluses in this province. I don't think enough can be said about the natural resources in this province making all of us much better off and providing opportunities for ourselves, our neighbours, and our children. The difficulty I have is not giving credit where credit is due. This government continually takes credit for balancing the books and balancing the budget and being able to pay for so many things when, in fact, this government should be thanking, if you're religious, the Lord I suspect for putting the natural resources here. There doesn't seem to be much credence ever given to that.

That's the good news. The ugly is being really tough in the coal market right now. There are difficulties in the world price of coal, not only for anthracite, the very, very tough coal that gives off exceptional heat per pound, but even the high- to medium-grade coals that we mine here in Alberta and the lower grade coals we just can't afford to mine and ship, nor would we consider even using them, because we have reasonably stringent laws as they relate to emissions.

The other area that is a concern in the coal business, recognizing that I believe in the order of about 60 or 70-odd percent of the electricity generated in this province currently is generated from that source, and a difficulty that the industry could face relates to emissions. We recognize that Alberta always has had very good players in the business. We haven't had the ugly coal burning and emission production of some other countries in the world. Whether they had restrictions on them or not in the days when they were built, these operators have been doing a good job. The difficulty is with the climate change in the world today. With those concerns there could be some impingement put on these operators. In fact, this member believes that the public is not particularly enamoured with any new coal generation plants, and we could see some civil disobedience from the environmental sector if we did plan on some. So that makes it difficult for the coal business.

I recognize that the extraction of natural resources in this province is and should be managed for two purposes, although we never hear debate on that. One, of course, is to generate revenues for the provincial coffers, the provincial coffers being the stewards of we the citizenry. The other reason is to sustain some communities, sustain the companies that employ those persons in the extraction and the production areas. To have those businesses healthy is advantageous to the people of this province, and it certainly wouldn't do to allow these businesses to fold or to go into terribly difficult times and have to cut back in the area of employment, nor would it be wise to design the systems that are in place to remunerate the owners of the resource, the people of Alberta, to an extent that would hinder the well-being of those industries.

Now, I said the good, the bad, and the ugly. I left the ugly for last, because quite frankly the management of the deregulation of power in this province is absolutely atrocious. This is entirely and completely driven by an ideology that says that government regulation in any case is bad and market driven is good without examining the facts, without even bothering to look to find out if in fact the system that's currently in place is better than the others.

Quite frankly, all my lifetime up until about 1993 or 1994, when this government decided deregulation was the be-all and end-all in the electricity business, this member always thought that we had some of the lowest prices on the entire continent for electricity delivered. We had an abundance of supply. In fact, among the energy companies the big competition was to be the next generator, to be allowed to invest capital at a guaranteed rate of return.

This government decided that deregulation was absolutely the right way to go and then didn't even bother to fully examine the ramifications. They didn't look at divestiture of the assets of at least one and perhaps even more of the major players. Recognize that the major player in this province is TransAlta Utilities. Quite frankly, since 1994 this government has been trying their damndest to design a system that would put the production of new generation and existing generation on a market base, driven on a market base. To date this member had hoped it could be done, but hope is fading and fading fast. This government has not produced to date, and quite frankly it's worrisome.

Most recently there have been a number of reports of economists that say we could be in very, very dire straits here if this system does fail. This member hopes it doesn't because, quite frankly, this province needs new generation, needs in the order of about 3 percent a year. We're probably looking at about 500 megs a year to bring on the market, and it doesn't appear under pure market conditions that the PPA sale will produce that. I would like to be proven wrong on this one, but it appears it's coming to that state.

8:20

Quite frankly, there is absolutely no evidence filed in this Legislature or with the people of Alberta, and the people of Alberta, both industry and residential, are the ones that are at risk. There's not one shred of evidence that has ever been filed in this Legislature to say: we have studied this, we understand the concerns of the citizenry, and this is what we propose. Not once. Nor did they bother asking the citizens honest questions.

They surveyed the citizens and asked a very, very simple and philosophical question: do you agree with the statement that electrical energy can be produced under a market system cheaper than the current regulatory system? They had a 75 percent reply. What they didn't bother to say was how you provide a market-driven system where you have one player that controls the market. In the business they call that market power. That is precisely what the problem is today.

This member happened to be invited and did attend a meeting of potential purchasers of the power purchase arrangements and found that the potential purchasers were just as much at a loss as I was as to how this system could actually work, how you can have players bidding for the production of assets of a number of plants over 20 years with the confidence that the market power will not play a major force. They're taking a substantive risk there. They know the risks more than I certainly, and they really, really haven't come to the table. [interjection] This minister seems to yak a lot except in debate. He does absolutely no debate on the subject at all. He yaks about lots of other things, and he does not tell the citizenry, nor does he tell the major players . . .

DR. WEST: That's not true. You know it's not true.

THE CHAIRMAN: Through the chair.

MR. WHITE: Through the chair.

The minister does none of the above. Absolutely none. Mr. Chairman, there is no debate, never has been in this House either in the time I've been here or in the research I did before I arrived in this place as to whether in fact this should be deregulated. It was good for booze, it was good for registries, and it was done. That's the way it works.

The province of Alberta has been very, very good to this government by not questioning and making them agree to debate or at least have an understanding of these things. When the proverbial hits the fan come January of this next year, it is where the tire meets the road, and it could be a disaster. I'm hoping it will not be, but it would have been a whole lot easier if all of us, the economists at the university and those that are in the business, could have understood what the government's intent was.

DR. WEST: We're not Liberals. We don't sit back and let it go forever, never fix it, just keep throwing rocks through the windows. You never pick up the pane and fix it.

MR. WHITE: Yada, yada, yada.

Chairman's Ruling Decorum

THE CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, you had an opportunity, and I wonder if we could spend the time . . . [interjection] Actually, hon. minister, are you calling a point of order on the chair? The chairman was the one that was addressing you at the time and so has that concern there. Hon. minister, if we could hear this gentleman out, then an opportunity will present itself for you to refute that in every way.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, if you'd address the chairman and not the other members of the committee.

MR. WHITE: It doesn't take anything to have this minister rise. Calling into question his decisions on behalf of all the citizenry is not inciting, sir. That's debate. That's supposedly what we're here for.

Debate Continued

MR. WHITE: We'll leave power for the moment, because there isn't going to be any definitive answer until July of this year. We can't even get this minister to say what is success or failure on behalf of the citizens. What amount is going to be left in the power pool to say that this is success, that we will have some returned? It doesn't say it at all.

Now, the other area that this minister has had absolutely no debate on is the rate of extraction of our natural resources. Is it the will of the people that we extract as fast as we possibly can?

MRS. NELSON: Absolutely.

MR. WHITE: There it is. Now, I would like to have had some debate on the matter.

MRS. NELSON: Why?

MR. WHITE: We continually get these interruptions that don't make it into Hansard. We had a former minister of energy ask why.

Why? Because it's a matter of public policy. The reason you have debate is so the citizens understand what the government is doing. See, these people don't seem to understand what democracy is about, which means not only for the people but by the people. The folks are supposed to know what you're doing on their behalf. It doesn't seem to matter to these folks that they go holus-bolus off in one direction. In this particular area, extraction at what cost and at what rate? Well, there's something to be said for extraction at a rate to meet demand. I can understand that. There's something about the extraction being at a rate that at least sustains the industry. Beyond that there has to be some reasonable debate with the people.

Now, the minister doesn't enter that debate. Perhaps the government caucus does that. This member wouldn't be aware of that. It certainly isn't exposed to the people. You don't see it in the Herald. You certainly don't see it in any of the journals. There isn't any debate where the folks can have some input.

Mr. Chairman, this member does not have a great deal of difficulty with the bulk of the expenditures in that department. As a matter of fact, it's good to see that the minister has decided there are at least three areas that warrant more expense and that his well-earned reputation for cutting and slashing has been laid to rest, that he's in a spending mode or an investing mode, as he would say. Quite frankly, investing in the EUB to the extent that has been done is a good move as well as some other moves that they have done too.

Mr. Chairman, I think we've covered the matter, and if the members on this side of the House haven't anything further – I don't believe so – we will look forward to the vote.

Thank you, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Resource Development, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense and Capital Investment $88,429,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

MR. HAVELOCK: Is it me now?

8:30

THE CHAIRMAN: Actually, hon. Deputy Government House Leader, we used to need that, but with this process we just ask the question.

Economic Development

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin this evening's deliberations, we'll call upon the hon. Minister of Economic Development.

MR. HAVELOCK: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I actually was standing up to discuss the estimates and not to move a motion. In any event, I am pleased to continue our discussion pertaining to the 2000-2001 estimates for Alberta Economic Development.

First, I would like to introduce the members of the ministry who are here with me today. Along with my executive assistant, Ms Hazel Cail, we have Dr. Bob Fessenden, who is the deputy minister, who is waving up there, and we have Mr. Jim Bauer, director of finance and performance accountability. I appreciate the fact that they've taken time out from their busy schedule to be with us this evening.

MR. DICKSON: Maybe they don't trust the minister to do it right.

MR. HAVELOCK: Thank you, Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Chairman, during our previous meeting on March 1, I feel we had a very productive and useful discussion regarding the ministry's role in continuing to further the prosperity of our province. As noted during those discussions, our department, the lead sales and marketing arm for the government, assesses and monitors Alberta's business climate to ensure it remains positive and competitive. The estimates and business plan before you represent a broad outline of how we intend to proceed to facilitate economic development in the province.

At the last session I was pleased with the evident interest hon. members expressed towards the goals, objectives, and performance measures of Alberta Economic Development. As concerns the latter, I'd like to point out that we are committed to performance measures. We believe these are powerful tools that can contribute to the further enhancement of the ministry. Again, Mr. Chairman, I encourage all members of this Assembly to forward to my attention any suggestions they may have regarding such measures.

At the meeting on March 1, Mr. Chairman, I endeavoured to answer the questions of the members of the Committee of Supply. I also undertook to review Hansard. At this time I wish to table responses to three questions that I was unable to address during the March 1 deliberations. How's that for service? There you go.

In response to the question raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder concerning the accuracy of the percentage change in actual tourism industry revenue between 1997 and 1998, I am tabling the detailed revenue figures to show that the increase between those two years is in fact 9.5 percent.

In response to the request made by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View for a list of initiatives supporting the knowledge-based industry, I am tabling a list of the initiatives Alberta Economic Development and Alberta Innovation and Science are undertaking to advance the knowledge-based, high-tech sector.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, in response to a question raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods regarding the use of the department's web site, I'm tabling information that shows the number of requests and user sessions from Canada, the United States, and around the globe since the department's web site was redesigned and launched last October.

Finally, in response to a question from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, earlier today I provided a copy of the detailed strategic tourism marketing plan.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I would like to emphasize that these estimates are concluded as part of the ministry's plans to continue to foster a positive business climate, one that is conducive to private-sector job creation, growth, and investment in Alberta, and as was the case with respect to the March 1 discussion, I certainly undertake to provide written responses to any questions that may be raised this evening.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thanks, too, to the minister. I think the last session that we had in committee was most productive, and the minister helped us better understand what the department does. It was, I thought, a very useful use of our time, and that's in large part thanks to the minister. We were able to range over a lot of topics in that last session. I thank the minister for tabling the responses to the question about the web site this evening.

Because the time is limited, I thought that I might spend some time looking at a very narrow range of activity in the department, and that's the Alberta Economic Development Authority support. It's really embodied in item 1.0.4, on page 118 of the estimates, and my understanding is that the purpose of the authority is to serve as the link between the public and private sectors as it relates to the province's economic activities and to identify the future directions for the government and for the province and planning for the future through a series of task force committees. AEDA has 10 of those committees that do the work for them, and it's in focusing on those 10 committees that I'd like to spend the next few minutes, Mr. Chairman.

I guess, first, a general overall question is: what savings have been achieved by having the functions of AEDA centralized in Calgary? There obviously were some savings when that move was made. Along with that, what is being done to ensure that AEDA still has a northern Alberta presence? The centralizing of the service in Calgary was one move, but along with that is the concern whether northern Alberta is still being served. So I'd appreciate some comment on that move and the north.

A second sort of general question is: does the AEDA produce a three-year business plan, and who reviews that business plan? Is it reviewed by the department? Just how is the work of AEDA monitored by the minister and his department?

I wanted to start with the AEDA Taxation and Finance Committee. It works with the department to try to attract new investment and to keep business competitive as it relates to a number of issues, and I would like to know what kind of work the committee does in terms of ensuring a globally competitive tax regime to stimulate economic activity in the province.

A third question. What are they doing in terms of the ability of start-up and early-stage companies to access capital and to keep them up and running as they get started? I think all of us in our constituency offices have been approached by those people interested in getting into business and looking for support for new business. I wonder what this committee has in terms of plans for helping those entrepreneurs and, once they get going, to help them to keep running?

A fourth question. It relates to a review of regulations that was being done by a member of the government and a committee. What have they had to do with streamlining regulations and helping by that streamlining to make Alberta companies more competitive, getting some of the paperwork out of their way? In terms of the same committee, were they involved in the analysis of Alberta's business tax or the review that's going to be conducted by the department to support the Alberta Business Tax Review Committee? Are they involved in that committee in any way, and if so, how are they involved?

Those are some questions about the Taxation and Finance Committee, Mr. Chairman.

8:40

I'm also interested in the Jobs for the Future Committee. We touched on this a little bit in the session we've had previously. I would like to know what kind of work is being undertaken in conjunction with Human Resources and Employment in preparing for future workplace needs. We talked briefly the last time about establishing databases of up-to-date information about workplace trends, skills development, and training opportunities. It would seem to me that this would be a natural domain for this particular committee of AEDA. Are they involved, and what kind of impact do they have in expanding co-operative work programs, apprenticeship and mentoring programs? Are they involved in establishing career education foundations such as Next Generation, the one that was established by the Alberta Chamber of Commerce?

They must have close linkages with postsecondary institutions in the province. Are they actually involved in helping adjust curriculum and work in business skills programs? Are they directly involved in consultations with those institutions and with those companies that are offering training to postsecondary institutions to make sure that there's a good match between where the marketplace is and where it's going and the kinds of people that will be entering it? I'd be interested in knowing what those links are. The same would apply to continuing education efforts. How deeply are they involved in determining the kinds of curriculum, the kinds of programs that continuing education institutes and groups are involved in? How closely do they work with them?

In terms of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, I would assume they were involved in the establishment of a comprehensive transportation strategy for the province. I wonder if we could have some information in terms of how that planning is proceeding. Another area where I assume they have some input is in dealing with telecommunications networks. There are some changes afoot in the province, and I wonder what kind of input, what kind of action the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee has undertaken in terms of those changes and, of course, looking to the future.

A sensitive area for this city, of course, is the International Airport. Has the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee worked with them in terms of improving international service, which is really a sore point with many residents of this city and in northern Alberta, and working to improve domestic service? It's still impossible to fly from the capital of this province to the capital of the province to the west directly, in many cases. There are some flights, but it's rather limited in terms of what it used to be, so I'd be interested in terms of what kind of activities they have in this regard.

I wondered what steps have been taken by the department to respond to the recommendations of the AEDA Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. They made a number of recommendations to the department in terms of removing trade barriers to ensure that Alberta shippers had access to a competitive rail industry in terms of pricing and service. What were those recommendations, and has the department or the government responded to them?

Because the time is moving on, I'd like to move to the Technology and Technology Products Committee. This is a huge area for the government. I'd like to know the kind of priority that's being placed on initiatives in energy production and products, in wireless technology, in telecommunications and new media, the kind of value-added activity they're involved in in a number of industries, in agriculture and in forestry. It's a huge area. I know there are activities that spread into a number of departments, and I'd appreciate some information on that activity.

They obviously have had some input in terms of the province's research and development capabilities. We have before us this session of the Legislature a couple of very good initiatives in this area. I think it's Bill 1 that is a particularly good bill and one that will greatly enhance the research and development capability of the province. I wonder what other activities the authority has been involved in and in particular the Technology and Technology Products Committee. I'm wondering about the Energy and Energy Products Committee. The need for proper funding, for adequate funding for environmental education: have they made any moves in this area? Have they been involved in the property tax assessment impacts and the shortage of trained professionals for the trades?

Energy and energy products is a growing area for the province, and again it would be interesting to know what kind of activity is planned by this committee for the coming years. The Export and Trade Committee in conjunction with the department is, I understand, responsible for expanding trade and export as it relates to national and international market opportunities for value-added industries and services. Again, I would be interested in knowing: what kinds of activities are they involved in? What kinds of activities are they planning for the future? They are part of an effort that is put forward to combine the efforts of the private sector and the government to provide what I guess you could call market intelligence and to create more flexible business networks to assist smaller organizations to capitalize on opportunities in new markets. Again, I'd be interested in what kinds of projects are being undertaken or planned in this year's budget.

They also work with the federal government and the other provinces to remove trade barriers and to encourage colleges and universities and schools to target their language training.

This has been an issue that's been raised in not only Economic Development but in the Department of Innovation and Science and in the Department of Learning budget estimates. That is the need to make sure that the technology and the science thrust that is so much of the government's effort is complemented by a similar thrust in the humanities and the social sciences so that those people who are seeking to do business in international markets can draw upon good language education in this province and, if not here, at least in a neighbouring province, so that there's the kind of social science research that's needed to make sure that our institutions are up to a global economy and able to adapt to the coming future, and so that the investment in those areas is maintained at a level so we really can say that the moves in the technology area are matched by moves in the humanities and social sciences.

8:50

With regard to the Forestry and Forestry Products Committee, what kinds of recommendations have they made to extend the period of the land use polices? Those policies were debated in at least one bill in the last session of this Legislature, and I wonder what they are doing in terms of those policies.

The AEDA works with the department, and one of their focuses, of course, is self-reliant communities. Again, if we could have some information on their success or the kinds of work they are undertaking in working with business, municipal governments, and labour, education, and community groups to eliminate barriers, to identify some local opportunities for Economic Development, and to identify opportunities and some fiscal strategies for those communities to maintain and enhance the infrastructure they have in place and will need if they are going to grow in the ways in which the government in its plans would have them do.

Those are a number of very detailed questions about 1.0.4 and the AEDA in particular, and I would greatly appreciate any information that the minister is able to provide.

Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Economic Development for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Okay.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$51,236,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Government Services

THE CHAIRMAN: I'll call upon the hon. minister to begin.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Two weeks ago I presented this committee with the first business plan and estimates of the new Ministry of Government Services. I talked about the ministry's goals, the actions that we intend to achieve, and how we intend to achieve these goals. I talked about the recent reduction in our registry fees, some $55 million a year in savings that will go directly to Albertans. I talked about some of the things that we'll be doing to improve services to Albertans within the ministry. I gave examples of how Albertans deserve better service than what they've been getting, and we're on that track. I also talked about how we hope to attain delivering that service by going through our gateway to government project, which will be a one-window approach to providing services to Albertans.

Mr. Chairman, I think we had a very good dialogue during that presentation, and I appreciated the questions that came forward from the members opposite. I must say that I was very pleased to see their interest in some of the things we're doing within this ministry. I did answer a number of the questions that evening, and I made the commitment that I would get the rest of the questions from Hansard and get back with answers to those questions as quickly as possible. I am able tonight to table the answers to those questions as I committed, so I'd like to table five copies of the questions that were raised during the Committee of Supply. Again, I would like to thank subcommittee C for their work on the evening that I presented the estimates for this department.

At this time, Mr Chairman, I would like to say that if there are any further questions this evening, I will undertake to get answers back to hon. members as quickly as possible, but I would ask that the committee approve the estimates of the Department of Government Services.

THE CHAIRMAN: As I understand it, hon. member, we've got the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning and then, within the period of time, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

So if you would commence, hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to thank the minister. Just a couple of question that we didn't get on the floor the other day, and that was actually around registries, motor vehicle registries. As we were reading in the paper in the last couple of weeks about the fake drivers' licences that are being produced and so on, I'd like to see if we can get something on the record on that particular item.

I really believe, as I read through the business plan and everything, that registries is one of the biggest items in here, and we sure have to make sure that the 21 recommendations from the Auditor General and everything else are in place.

I'm a believer in the private system, but I want to make sure that we keep the right monitoring systems in place, that we are checking up on them. I do know from traveling around the province – I do stop in at registries, and I talk to the owners and so on – that they're relatively happy.

MRS. NELSON: Very happy.

MR. GIBBONS: Yes, they're very happy. [interjection] I'm going to stay at the "very."

Even when they start talking about the ones that actually took on the fishing licence machines and all that, they now are happy, subject to some of the ones that were really taking my head off originally. [interjections] Mr. Chairman, I don't really mind stuff like this, but I'll continue.

THE CHAIRMAN: The chair would observe that the hon. member should speak through the chair.

MR. GIBBONS: I'm going to sit right now, Mr. Chairman, but I'm hoping to get some answers back on this, because we don't want fake licences getting out onto the street. That was the major thing I wanted to ask since last time.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister is rising on a point of order?

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Chairman, can I not just respond to that?

THE CHAIRMAN: If that's what the hon. member wants. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, do you want responses now?

MR. GIBBONS: You can get back to me after.

MRS. NELSON: Oh, okay. Okay; I'll get back to him.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am very anxious to ask the hon. minister some questions this evening regarding the new Ministry of Government Services that was established in May of last year.

Now, it is an interesting ministry. It's taking over responsibility for registries and consumer services from Alberta Municipal Affairs and for the Regulatory Review Secretariat from Alberta Treasury. I'm sure the minister is going to do an outstanding job with her new portfolio, particularly if some of the staff that she had with her in her previous portfolio of Gaming come with her, because some of her staff, at least the ones that I had direct contact with, were excellent. I'm sure she was astute enough to take them with her when she moved.

There are some major goals and strategies discussed here. I'm going to review them, and I have some corresponding questions, Mr. Chairman. The first goal I notice is a declaration to provide a gateway or a "common portal . . . so Albertans receive the services they deserve." My questions for the hon. minister regarding this goal are: what services has it been determined Albertans deserve, and why are they not receiving these services right now? What types of redevelopment does the minister see for Alberta land titles, motor vehicle registration, and personal property registration systems? What are the current concerns with these systems, and how will redevelopment address those concerns?

Another goal of the department, Mr. Chairman, is "excellence in service development, delivery and accessibility." This seems like an odd goal for the minister to have to state. Would it not be taken for granted that excellence would be standard for everything? Is this not the standard currently being attained? How will excellence be measured? How does the minister plan to enhance marketplace surveillance monitoring capabilities so that the ministry can better anticipate and respond to changing marketplace requirements? Which new information and access standards will be implemented for services provided by AGS so that these services reflect fair business practices? Why are these practices currently not being reflected? The last question concerning goal 2: with what regularity is the ministry currently publishing enforcement bulletins? Will this time frame continue, or will a new time frame be adopted? Will it be weekly, semimonthly, or monthly?

9:00

Now, another interesting goal, Mr. Chairman, is "a fair and effective marketplace in Alberta with a high standard of business conduct." My questions to the minister regarding this are these. What resources are currently available for investigating major marketplace issues? Will there be any increases or decreases in these resources? In light of the minister wanting to develop and implement a policy to ensure that resources for marketplace practice investigations are appropriately prioritized, could the minister explain how these investigations are currently prioritized? Could the minister detail how order in council exemption requests from foreign companies for intensive livestock operations and agroforest operations are currently reviewed and assessed? What part do municipalities and various government ministries currently contribute to this process? How does the minister see these groups fitting into a new framework? Another question: what is the status of the implementation of the national information sharing database to support investigation enforcement activities? Regarding the Regulatory Review Secretariat, I have two questions. What goals and objectives did the government set in 1996 regarding the review of government regulations? What quantity of staff time has been dedicated to reviewing the 616 regulations left to review?

Now, the fourth goal is "a streamlined, effective, and relevant regulatory environment." Regarding performance measures for customer satisfaction, Mr. Chairman, how will consumers be selected for contact? Will they be advised that they may be contacted at a later date for follow-up on their initial call or point of contact? If the survey is contracted out, how will the minister deal with a consumer who does not want a private contractor to know that they have contacted the ministry with a particular question? What if many of the consumers do not give their names and numbers? How will these be followed up? Will the yearly survey only look at consumers who contact the minister's office? Will there be any information campaign encouraging people to contact the ministry for advice or other information? What points of contact will be included in this survey?

I have at this time, Mr. Chairman, five more questions regarding goal 4 pursued by the department. What will determine if a consumer investigation is successful? Will more resources be added to this area if the 95 percent target is not reached? Regarding the Regulatory Review Secretariat, what would the minister consider effective measures to replace the ineffective status reports in three-year achievement statistics? Will new measures be established, or will the minister only consider establishing new measures?

Now, Mr. Chairman, it's very interesting whenever we talk about user fees in this province, and I have some questions regarding the outline of fee reductions. For the land titles department will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under land titles? Notification, transfer, vesting order, leasehold certificate of title, correction, and reversal, application for: the old government fee was $35 plus $1 per $1,000; the new government fee is $35 plus $1 per $5,000. Mortgage, encumbrance and amendments: here we have the old government fee of $15 plus $1 for every $1,000, and we have the new government fee of $15 plus $1 per $5,000. A writ of enforcement: the old government fee was $15 plus $1 per $1,000; the new government fee is $15 plus $1 per $5,000.

Now, will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under corporate registry? Certificate of incorporation: the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of amendment, articles of amendment: $75 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $25. Certificate of amalgamation: the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. For certificate of registration of an extraprovincial corporation, $300 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of registration of an interprovincial nonprofit with exemption: the old government fee was $150; the new government fee is $75. Reinstatement of an extraprovincial corporation: $300 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of amendment of registration of an extraprovincial corporation: $75 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $25. Certificate of registration of amalgamated corporation: the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of restated articles: old government fee, $75; the new government fee is $25. Incorporation, section (g), certificate of continuance under section 181 of the Business Corporations Act: the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of amendment, articles of reorganization: $75 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $25. Certificate of revival: $300 was the old government fee; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of English or French equivalency: the old government fee, $50; the new government fee, $25. A certificate of continuance under section 261 of the Business Corporations Act: the old government fee, $300; the new government fee, $100. Certificate of status: the old government fee, $25; the new government fee is $5. A search for each corporation, microfiche only: old government fee, $10 plus $1 per page, and the new government fee is $5 per file. Certification of each file: the old government fee was $25 plus $1 per page; the new government fee is $5 for the entire file. Issuing a corrected certificate: the old government fee was $75; the new government fee is $50. A printed search, each corporation: the old government fee was $10; the new government fee is $1.

9:10

Also, Mr. Chairman, will the minister provide, please, the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under Alberta companies regulation? Certificate of incorporation: the old government fee was $125; the new government fee is $75. Certificate of amendment: the old government fee was $50; the new government fee is $25. Certificate of restoration: the old government fee was $125; the new government fee is $75. A certificate of status: the old government fee was $25; the new fee is $5. Certificate of change of corporate name: the old government fee was $50; the new government fee is $25. Search for each corporation, microfiche only: $10 plus $1 per page was the old government fee, and the new government fee is $5 per file. Certification of each file: the old government fee was $25 plus $1 per page; the new government fee is $5 per file. A printed search for each corporation: the old government fee was $10; the new government fee is $1.

Will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under the Co-operative Associations Act? For a certificate of incorporation the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of amendment: the old government fee was $75, and the new government fee is $25. Certificate of amalgamation: the old government fee was $300; the new government fee is $100. Certificate of revival: the old government fee was $300, and the new government fee is $100.

Now, I'm sure many hon. members of the Assembly are wondering about the comparisons in these old fees and the new fees. This is information that is vital to the consumers of this province.

Will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under the Partnership Act? Filing a certificate of limited partnership: the old government fee was $150; the new government fee is $50. Filing a notice to amend a certificate: the old government fee was $50; the new government fee is $15.

Will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under the Societies Act? A certificate of amendment under the old schedule was $50; the new government fee is $25. A certificate of status was $25 in the old government fee; $5 in the new. A certificate of amending objects: $50 for the old government fee; the new government fee is $25.

Now, will the minister please provide the actual cost of service prior to the reduction in fees and since the reduction in fees for the following fee reductions under personal property registrations and renewals? Registration or security agreement under the Personal Property Security Act: per year for optional registration, between one and 25 years, the old government fee was $4, and the new government fee is $2; for infinity registration the old government fee was $400, and the new government fee is $400. Okay?

Now, there are other acts here. There's the garageman's lien, the railway rolling stock, and if the minister in due time would perhaps agree to answer all my questions regarding old government fees and new government fees, I think that would be the extent of my questions. [interjection] Okay. So if the minister would be gracious enough to provide those answers in due time by letter at a later date, I would be grateful.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Government Services for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$49,810,000
--	--------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Community Development

THE CHAIRMAN: We'll call upon the minister to begin this part of the deliberation.

MR. WOLOSHYN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This is, I believe, about the fourth time I've had the privilege of addressing the members here with respect to the estimates, and I'd be willing to do it again. As I've indicated to you previously, I will be getting back in writing to a good number of the questions very, very shortly. As a matter of fact, it's already been prepared for some of the members but hasn't gone out. I'll use the mail unless you want me to table it in the House. It doesn't really matter.

The discussion around the ministry, I think, has generated a significant amount of interest. I was pleased to hear a lot about the seniors' programs, the grant funding, support we get for historical resources, the foundations, and so on. I appreciated the questions we had over time on citizenship, on the Human Rights Commission, and on women's issues.

I'd like to say that it's the intent of the ministry to keep focused on our core business plans and basically concentrate on improving the quality of life for Albertans at every level of the ministry. The staff work with cross-government initiatives. We develop new relationships, partnerships, and so on.

We will continue to make access easier for Albertans with respect to seniors, working on some of the suggestions – and certainly they weren't new and novel – in terms of getting information out somehow in a better fashion. I'm certainly willing to listen to any suggestions you may have there.

[Dr. Massey in the chair]

As you know, we've got a couple of studies going on. The impact of aging study will be brought forward hopefully sometime in the spring. We'll be looking at that along with other studies that are going on, and what we'll be trying to do is end up making long-term plans that can aid the seniors in their transition, shall we say, to a more comfortable life. We're going to ensure that we can address the needs of seniors, whether it be transportation, housing, health, or whatever, as well as possible.

There was some discussion with respect to the Western Heritage Centre, and I want to reiterate that Alberta Community Development has extended its partnership arrangement with the Western Heritage Centre Society. The centre will remain open and continue to be programmed by the society, which will devote its efforts to developing new programming and marketing strategies. Revenue will go towards programming and retiring debt. At this time, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to table five copies of the agreement between the department and the Western Heritage Centre so interested members may have access to them. That is a complete package that I believe includes the agreement which it supercedes so those who might be interested will have the total picture.

9:20

We all know that the arts, as some of the members have mentioned, have a very, very positive economic impact on the province. There are various estimates, I suppose, but we do know it's significant. We do know, for example, that there's well over $120 million spent on materials, supplies, services, salaries, whatever you want to throw out. In the nearest figures we can get, there have been some attendance figures of over 11 million people, which is roughly four times the population of Alberta, that have attended arts organization events over the past year.

We'll be doing more work with the Alberta library card project. As I indicated, we'll be looking at the method of funding libraries, hopefully getting a more up-to-date process in with respect to the census figures used.

As we know, with respect to homelessness and our social housing we have a provincial economy that's very, very strong, and the growing population has put extreme pressures on housing. In some communities rental rates have fallen very, very dramatically. At the same time, rents have gone out of the reach of a lot of low-income Albertans. We're committed to working in partnership with the municipalities, with community-based organizations, with not-for-profit housing sectors, and whomever to try to develop a continuum of affordable housing solutions, and we'll be looking at making them basically tailor-made, if you will, to the communities in question.

We all know that this is a broad spectrum. It's not just one little band-aid that'll fix it. We're looking for any innovative ways, whether it be the private sector or municipalities or the not-for-profits, any of those that have any innovative ways of approaching this.

With respect to human rights, I do support the work of the Human Rights and Citizenship Commission; it goes without saying. I believe we have to instill tolerance and understanding at home, at work, at school, and throughout our society. So I'm very, very supportive of any kind of education programs, if you will, that would address these kinds of issues. Hopefully the goal would be to have the workload of the commission diminished through better behaviour and lack of demand.

I'd also like to add that ministry staff do a very, very good job, a tremendous job in fact, of supporting myself in my role as minister responsible for the area of women's issues, as well as providing support in all the other areas I deal with, but that one I wanted to underline more specifically. We also do a lot of work with other ministries across government.

I'm not going to go into too much detail with the foundations. You're all familiar with what we do. We're trying to get them more focused, and I do believe I made reference to the development initiatives program through the ASRPWF which will meet the needs hopefully of clients that are not covered by other ones.

Just to wrap up very briefly, Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank colleagues on both sides, primarily the opposition side, for their comments. I appreciate your efforts in this process. As I stated earlier, we will be responding to all the questions I didn't have the opportunity to give you earlier.

On that, Mr. Chairman, I would move that we call the question.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to start off by acknowledging the efforts of the staff from the Department of Community Development. I have tremendous respect for the job they are attempting to do and the spirit and hard work they put into trying to realize the objectives and policies of the department. I think they deserve that acknowledgment, and I am certainly willing to give it to them.

The minister, however, I am disappointed in. The minister says that he's supportive of a number of things but no action will be taken. Frankly, I think a person could starve on the minister's kind of support.

We raised heritage sites. Well, no, nothing to happen there. We raised the problem with libraries and funding, being funded at a 1997 level, which is creating extreme situations, I think, for those libraries that are existing in locations where populations have grown dramatically. No, says the minister, I'm not going to do anything there or at least not this year. So if it actually does kick in next year, in 2001-2002, they will have gone four years at essentially a frozen funding level. Frankly, the funding level was no great shakes to begin with. No, says the minister to libraries.

I suggested that as a preventative measure in working in partnership with the Department of Health and Wellness the minister look at operating funds for seniors' centres or some sort of assistance there. No, no funding of seniors' centres. I talked about the issues that have arisen around the lodge granting program and the fact that larger lodges run by larger organizations are funded at a disadvantage now. No, says the minister, nothing happening there.

Now, I know that the minister and members opposite have received information from groups and individuals. They've received letters, e-mails, phone calls, faxes, and visits from constituents, all of them pointing out these different issues that exist under the Department of Community Development and many of them asking for increased funding. I know that because I've been CCed. I know there are people out there bringing this to the minister's and other members' attention and asking for this department to give some real support instead of this sort of benign neglect. I hope it's benign, but it's certainly neglect for the areas under this department.

One of the things I've talked about before – and I'll keep raising it – is how many times the elements in this department have been collapsed onto one another so that they don't exist any more. Of course, the one I am most disappointed about – more than that, I'm angry about it – is the women's policy and programs, which from the early '90s was actually a branch or a division. There were a number of staff. I think there could have been 15 to 20 staff in there working on different programs, developing policy, advising the minister. I think we're down to one official staff person in that program. If you look through the documents in these budget estimates, there's no recognition of women's policy and program advice at all, because that's been rolled up inside something rolled up inside something rolled up inside something now called citizenship. So I think there's an ideology behind that beyond what is apparent.

We used to have a ministry of culture. Now, if I look at it, the best that I can find out of this is something called community services, unless you get far enough down in the vote levels and sublevels of the votes to actually find what's under that. I think that's a very sad comment on the support of quality of life in Alberta.

We have the public asking this department for more support, especially when they know that $800 million went into the lottery fund in this year. Actually, they're expecting $837.5 million in this fiscal year. Now, right from the beginning this money that was brought in from lotteries was not to be used for core services, but when I look at the lottery fund and what this money is being used for, so-called onetime projects, I think they're really core services.

9:30

I look at things like agricultural initiatives at $11.6 million, advanced medical equipment at $10 million, Alberta Wellnet at $15 million, Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission – now, that was definitely funded under government programs and services; it's now funded under the lottery – at $33.3 million. A couple of other examples are health care facilities funded at $120 million, water management infrastructure at $20 million.

I think that these are areas the government is responsible for: road paving, school building, medical equipment, agricultural initiatives. Is this government saying that it's out of all these businesses and that they're willing to abandon this to the uncertainties of lottery funding? The point was that the gambling summit said: spend more money on those charitable groups that are offering quality-of-life programs for Albertans. What do we get? We get two pages full of things that are being funded out of this that I think are very clearly core services. If you want to call them onetime projects, fine. Go ahead. But anybody can look at that.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Let's have a look at this situation with the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation, in which the quarterly grant program was reduced or cut or terminated. I don't know what terminology the department is using. Essentially they lost more than 50 percent of their budget, and there's now a program called development initiatives. Now, according to what I read that was put out by the department, this is now supposed to be for the little guy, what's left of this grant program. I really wonder if the little guy is going to be able to get access to any of these funds, and there are a couple of reasons for that.

The decisions are now centralized in Edmonton, Calgary, and in a few cases Red Deer, so any of these sports and recreation initiatives which are taking place in High Level or Crownsnest Pass or Slave Lake don't have representatives on the board. There's nobody there explaining what exactly the grant is for or that knows the group that's applying for the money or the individual applying for the money. It's all centralized decision-making in Edmonton or Calgary, Edmonton for the northern region, Calgary for the southern region. So how is the little guy supposed to get any sort of advocacy out of this?

I think there's a situation that perhaps exists less in southern Alberta but definitely in northern Alberta and on this same issue of representation in centralized decision-making for these grant programs. In the north we have barriers of distance and barriers of climate. I mean, what is the team supposed to do? They're all supposed to come to Edmonton for a workshop? No. You need to be able to bring the experts, the team leaders, the safety advisers, or whatever you need. They need to be traveling up there. How are these people supposed to be getting that message through when we have the centralized decision-making happening there?

I look at the northern regions. Under the quarterly grant program they used to get $720,000 a year. That's for all the activities that went on in the northern region. Now under this new program they're going to get $300,000. That's more than a 50 percent cut. Where did the rest of that money go?

How come this came about? Well, I checked around a bit, and what I heard was that people felt there was double-dipping between the old program, the quarterly grant program, and the community lottery boards. That's really interesting, because I'm sure that when the community lottery board money was introduced, it was about augmenting what was already there. It was supposed to be about recognizing that there needed to be additional support into the community, and these community lottery boards were set up to be offering additional money, not replacement money, not to have the community lottery board money in place and therefore we'll reduce the old grant. That's not what this was about.

These groups are not double-dipping. If they've got a $50,000 project, yes, they're applying to a couple of different places, but they're still not getting their whole $50,000 covered, and they're certainly not getting it covered twice, which would be the definition of double-dipping. No. They're still putting in their own money and trying to get support for different facets of the project that they're doing.

That whole idea that we'd be losing money out of grant programs because the community lottery boards are now somehow replacing them or where there's some accusation of double-dipping really burns me. How that's being operated and how the community lottery board money going out into the regions is being handled – there was to be really strong criteria in place, criteria that I felt should have protected all the different areas that were applying for money so that the local board would know that they should be looking for projects for seniors, they should be looking for projects for youth, they should be looking for projects for artists in that region.

What I think in some cases has happened is that your group has to have an advocate at the table. If that voice isn't there to be represented, well, there's a certain amount of negotiation that goes on and you may just not get any money for whatever that particular sector is if you don't have an advocate at the table. That's why there was supposed to be the strong criteria for it.

The criteria have changed. I know some groups were in the media because some school projects were being funded through community lottery boards. Now, I'm not going to criticize that school for applying for money. I know that that school needs the money, and they're looking for it anywhere they can get it. But this grant program was supposed to be augmenting what was going on in the community for quality of life, sports and recreation, arts and culture, that sort of thing, and that's not what's happening here today. It's even worse if we're losing grant programs because this community lottery board program is now in place.

I think it's important here to compliment and recognize the volunteers, the many volunteers that support the minister and the department, those volunteers that do sit on the community lottery board or on the boards of the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation or the Alberta Foundation for the Arts or the Wild Rose Foundation. These are citizens from the community, from Alberta who are giving up their time and doing their best to try and do this, and I think in some cases the minister does them no favours by not giving them strong criteria to work with.

Now, I'd like to move on to the performance measurements again. I question almost all the performance measurements that are in this department. I don't think the minister is doing himself much of a service with the performance measurements that are there, because I don't think it's looking forward to what improvements need to be made and what programs need to be in place to support where we could be going. In other words, the whole concept of development, of moving forward is not in this.

So it's not about how many people went to an exhibit and were satisfied, which is what's being measured here. It's about: why didn't other people go to the museum or the exhibit at all? That's what we're trying to find out. If we're trying to get more people in there, why didn't other people go? I mean, isn't that it? Isn't the goal to increase the participation? Then why aren't we trying to find out why people don't come rather than measuring the satisfaction level of those people that are there? I think there's something very much missing in those performance measurements.

I'll note once again the mysterious change in statistics shown in last year's estimates book, the same year's figures brought forward into this year's estimates book, and they're different. The numbers have changed. They've transmogrified somewhere in the translation, and I'd like to see that clarified, please.

I didn't get much time to talk about the Francophone Secretariat, which is new under this department this year. I am interested: what are the key performance indicators for the Francophone Secretariat? It's now under this department. What are we looking for it to do? What are the goals? What is it trying to achieve? What's in place to measure whether or not that's successful? I didn't see anything in there about that.

Library funding and support. I've already said, you know, that we're finding out: no, not this year. They're based on '97 levels. We're now looking at 2001-2002 as the earliest time they'd be given some relief and some reality in their funding.

Another topic. I'm interested in what advice or what policy was given by the women's policy and programs. I acknowledge there is one person working on this. My heart and support goes out to this person. What advice, what policy direction was given by women's policy and programs to the minister that he can then pass on to the Minister of Health and Wellness, particularly on the issues of osteoporosis and midwifery, two key issues for women in this province? What kind of advice did this minister get that he then worked in partnership on with the Minister of Health and Wellness? I'd be very interested in that one, two very important subjects for women in his province.

9:40

I've talked quite a bit about the non-increase in funding to seniors in that the only increase there is to deal with an increase in volume demand. We didn't see any changes in the thresholds. We didn't see any changes in the benefit amounts. Nothing changed. There's just a whole bunch more seniors in Alberta that are poor enough that they can qualify for this program. I'll point out that the criteria for qualifying for the program is that you have to be a really destitute senior. It tells us there's a lot of destitute seniors in Alberta. This is a problem I don't see being addressed. I don't see where the new ideas are going to be coming from, so I guess, like the minister, I'm waiting for the part B report on the impact of aging.

I've addressed some of the issues where I felt there needed to be literally more cash into this department, which has been more or less at the level of 1988-89 for some time. There was money that has been taken away or ignored.

Now let's talk about taking away staff. I'm wondering why the minister in all the comments he's brought forward in the time we've had together on this didn't talk about shared services, in which we evidently are now going to outsource all the administrative positions in this department. If I may quote my good mother, I think the minister is cruising for a bruising here. I think maybe he wants to be a Jane Stewart wanna-be. He's running a department that dispenses grants out into the community. Who are the people that do the input, that collect the data and do the evaluation on these grants? By terminating or laying off or outsourcing all these jobs, you're getting rid of the very people that know what's going on. You're getting rid of the very people that are going to save this minister's hide.

We're saying goodbye to them now because we're going to outsource it to KPMG or, you know, Hire-a-Worker Inc. That's not to disparage those people that are running private companies. Good for them if they have the initiative to do it, but I really question why this minister is now going to outsource these staff. I'd be interested in knowing why that didn't come up in the budget estimates of this department. That's a fairly major change in things. I guess he was hoping I wouldn't notice. What I think we're going to have left in there are a few program officers rattling around in the Standard Life building.

I'm wondering how the minister envisions being able to track the work that is being done by these outsourced groups. Will the contracts that are going to be signed with the outsourced companies be open and available to scrutiny, open and transparent, or am I going to be sitting in Public Accounts a year or two from now with the Auditor General having a reserved opinion on this department because he can't get details of what was in the contract for outsourcing all the administrative support staff in this department? I think it's a recipe for disaster, and it's an immense disservice to Albertans.

How are these outsourced companies going to make money? The profit margin has to be built in. What have we seen in other examples? We end up with them hiring the same people at less money or even trying to de-skill the job. If you used to have to have a degree to do this job, well, we'll pay you minimum wage and a high school certificate is good enough. I don't think so.

I'm asking again for the full-time employee counts because I think that's part of what's happened in this department. There's one line giving FTEs in here, and there are far fewer employees in each department. So I would like to see the FTEs for each subvote and, let's say, for April of '93, '95, '97, and '99. That's not too much work for the minister. Your resources are certainly larger than mine. You have the backup of an entire department to do this.

A few comments on the Banff Centre for the Arts. This was our jewel in the Rockies, and once again benign neglect, or at least I hope it's benign. The funding and the support for this has been so minimal that I'm wondering if the government just hopes they'll go away, just quietly die. This was a world-class facility attracting world-class artists and national artists. It gave our artists an opportunity to work with them. What happened? No support for it.

Once again I've run out of time, Mr. Chairman. I do wish I had another good hour; I could certainly use it. I think that it's mismanagement in this department and poor stewardship.

Thank you very much.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Community Development for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense and Capital Investment $334,491,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.
The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. HAVELOCK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee do now rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

Resolved that a sum not exceeding the following be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, for the following departments.

Department of Resource Development: operating expense and capital investment, $88,429,000.

Department of Economic Development: operating expense, $51,236,000.

Department of Government Services: operating expense and capital investment, $49,810,000.

Department of Community Development: operating expense and capital investment, $334,491,000.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to file copies of the documents tabled during Committee of Supply this day for the official records of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

head: Government Bills and Orders
head: Third Reading

Bill 6 Special Payment Act

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to move Bill 6 for third reading and look for the support of all Members of the Legislative Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to get up this evening and speak to Bill 6, the Special Payment Act, in third reading. It's been quite a journey for a number of widows and widowers, and I think what I would like to do is look at the three important parts of this journey: where these people have been, where they are presently, and where they're going to be hopefully in a few short weeks if all goes well.

9:50

When we look at where they've been, Mr. Speaker, prior to 1982 dependent spouses were paid a pension for life unless they remarried or entered into a common-law relationship. Now, in 1982 that legislation was changed. It was well-meaning legislation and certainly looked at pensions. It also looked at a retraining program. In 1985 we had the introduction of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and in particular section 15(1), which dealt with discrimination, had an influence on pensions. In 1987 we saw the government of Canada recognize and correct a similar discriminatory error by reinstating Canada pension cheques to surviving spousal benefits. In 1996 we saw the disenfranchised widows in British Columbia win a court challenge. At that point their benefits were reinstated, and they received a lump sum payment for the retroactive payments they hadn't got. Since that time we've also seen settlements in other provinces, Mr. Speaker, and these were in various forms of reinstatement of pensions.

In 1994 in the province of Alberta we had the formation of the Disenfranchised Widows Action Group. At that time they started a process to get their pensions reinstated, to get their pensions reinstated with a lump sum payment, or in this particular case they were looking at a lump sum payment. That all came about because of the introduction of Bill 6 in the spring sitting of the Legislature.

What this Bill 6 will do is allow the two groups, the Disenfranchised Widows Action Group and the Workers' Compensation Board, to get together to settle this issue, and it will allow for payments of moneys from the WCB to the disenfranchised widows. This will certainly go a long way in correcting the issues of fairness and the issues of protection of the vulnerable surviving spouses.

At this stage of the game many of them are widows, they are seniors, and they've encountered financial hardships since the time of the death of their spouses in work-related injuries. Some of these people today still continue to have financial hardships. They are living on some type of provincial assistance, whether it happens to be AISH or family and social services benefits. So for them financial support is welcome. This will also certainly add to the quality of their lives from now until such time as they retire.

They have been offered, I am told, a lump sum payment of $80,000. Some of the widows are quite willing to accept this figure. It's been a long and hard struggle for them. Even though they're not totally happy with the $80,000, they are quite prepared to take that. Others may not be satisfied with this amount, and of course there are provisions in Bill 6 for them to go to the courts to see if there's any possibility of increasing this amount. Others are simply tired of the struggle. It's been a David versus Goliath battle for them, and of course the little person has come out victorious again.

Tonight we are on the verge of passing Bill 6 in third reading, and I hope that in the Assembly here tonight we have support from all members and this settlement will be speedy.

With that, we must also look, then, at the question of where disenfranchised widows are going from here. At this time I would like to thank the minister for listening to their concerns. How different this is from what we saw when Bill 26 was introduced here on the floor of the Legislature. We see a government that has decided that a worthy settlement, a deserving settlement is much better than going to court and having these people go to court in a lengthy and costly battle.

As I say, the widows, quite a number of them, are looking for a speedy settlement to their issue. They are hoping the WCB will process and approve their applications and that the payment of $80,000 will be made in very short order after that. I must say that I would like to take this opportunity to challenge the WCB to get the payments to these needy people as quickly as our government is getting the payments to those farmers who are in serious trouble here in this province. I think it's only fair that these widows, who have been fighting the good fight and who have been without their pensions since 1982, should be able to look forward to getting this lump sum payment in exactly as quick a time as our farmers are going to get their well-deserved money.

As well, I would like to see the WCB make an effort to notify all those widows and widowers who are eligible for their pensions. I really want to see this happen rather than the onus being put on those people to apply. I know a number of them are very well aware of this, but there are also others that I'm sure don't know that this bill is on the verge of being passed here this evening.

I would like to congratulate the widows. I hope they all have many more years of good health. I certainly hope this settlement will enhance their quality of life. I want to thank them for the lessons they've provided to all of us with their perseverance, their dedication, their determination, and their sense of fairness. It was a pleasure to work with these people, and I certainly do hope they enjoy many, many more years.

I'm very pleased to support Bill 6 at third reading, and I urge all members of this Assembly to vote for it. Thank you very much.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, I'm all too mindful of the condition of sweet harmony that prevails in the Legislature while we've discussed Bill 6 at each stage, but I make this observation again that was raised at an earlier stage. It has to do with section 9 of the bill, the provision that allows the minister to make "regulations respecting any matter that the Minister considers necessary or advisable to carry out the intent of this Act." Certainly in the opposition we've been prepared to support the bill and vote for it at each stage because of the important remedial effect of the bill, but we do so, I suppose, at least insofar as section 9 is concerned, without prejudice to the opportunity, when we see this kind of provision again in another bill, to argue as strenuously as we can manage that this is excessive in terms of regulatory authority. So I just wanted to make that observation that section 9 is in effect as a model much too wide, too vague. It allows the minister to effectively rewrite the bill without recourse to this Assembly.

10:00

I make that observation. It's not a reason for any member to vote against the bill, but it's a caution that hopefully the legislative draftspeople and the Chief Legislative Counsel will take to heart. Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment to conclude debate.

MR. DUNFORD: Question.

[Motion carried unanimously; Bill 6 read a third time]

[At 10:01 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, March 16, 2000 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 00/03/16
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O Lord, guide us all in our deliberations and debate that we may determine courses of action which will be to the enduring benefit of our province of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly, although he actually needs no introduction, Dr. Allan Warrack, a former member of our Legislative Assembly for the Three Hills constituency from 1971 to 1979, who I am proud to say now resides in the constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. Allan Warrack is a constituent in one of the best constituencies, in the best city, in the best province, and the best country in the world. Mr. Warrack is a professor of managerial economics at the University of Alberta. He is accompanied by three of his MBA students: Kathryn Wood, Patti McIntosh, and Richard Dixon. They're seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, and I ask them to rise now and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a distinct honour for me today to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly a distinguished Canadian whom I have admired and respected for many years. Alexa McDonough is the Member of Parliament for Halifax and the leader of Canada's NDP. She's an articulate and passionate voice in the Parliament of Canada for many issues. Most impressive, however, is her strong and principled defence of public health care. She is in Edmonton today as part of a national campaign to listen to the concerns of all Canadians regarding the state of our health care system. Ms McDonough is in your gallery along with her assistant, Gary Evans, and I would ask them both to rise and receive the warm Alberta welcome of this Assembly.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have five copies of a petition to be presented to the Legislature today which a number of students and young people across the province have signed in support of Bill 11.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition supporting public health care in Alberta urging the government of Alberta to stop promoting private hospitals and "undermining public health care." This is signed by 220 residents of Alberta from Edson, Jasper, Vegreville, and Cold Lake.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition to present to the Legislative Assembly. This petition urges the government to "stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system]." This petition has 224 signatures on it, and the individuals come from Fort McMurray, St. Paul, Cold Lake, Ponoka, and Lacombe.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to present a petition signed by 209 individuals, most of them from the Cold Lake area, and they are urging the government of Alberta to "stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition that reads:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

It contains 218 names, which brings our total to – what? – 80,000, 90,000.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table before the Assembly a petition comprised of page after page after page of signatures from the residents of Edson who are urging the Legislative Assembly to have the government "stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care" in Alberta. This brings today's total to over 1,000 more ordinary, everyday Albertans who are opposed to this government's private health care initiative.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table a petition with 1,111 names on it. All of these 1,111 Albertans are opposed to Bill 11, and they petition this Assembly to "pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

MRS. SLOAN: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today and ask that the petition I tabled last week be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise this afternoon as well to request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to protect, support, and enhance public health care in Alberta and to ban for-profit, private hospitals from receiving public dollars.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented on public health care and the undermining of it and what's happening with it be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to protect, support, and enhance public health care in Alberta and to ban for-profit, private hospitals from receiving public dollars.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented yesterday in proper form regarding the public health care system be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask that the petition with respect to support for public health care that I read yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would ask that the petition I presented yesterday to the Assembly regarding the protection of our public health care system be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

head: Introduction of Bills

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Provincial Treasurer.

Bill 18

Alberta Personal Income Tax Act

MR. DAY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill 18, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Act.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will do a number of things. It's being seen as the most significant tax reform in the country, and in the process of the bill itself we will be looking at significantly increasing basic exemption levels and also spousal exemption levels up to 90 percent. We will be the first province to kill bracket creep. We will also be introducing a single rate of tax. Albertans will be the first Canadians who will be able to work overtime or become upwardly mobile or work harder without being punished at a greater tax rate.

Mr. Speaker, the other element on the bill will allow at the first quarter for the government to adjust the single rate, which will be presented at 11 percent, to either adjust that downwards or move basic exemptions upwards or a combination of the two.

Those are the exciting elements of this particular bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 18 read a first time]

1:40

Bill 19

Alberta Income Tax Amendment Act, 2000

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I also beg leave to introduce Bill 19, the Alberta Income Tax Amendment Act, 2000. This being a money bill, Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

This is another milestone, as it clears the way for the axing of the 8 percent deficit elimination surtax that was brought in in 1987. That will be gone this year, accelerating that commitment by one year.

Both of these bills represent the ongoing commitment of our Premier and this government in that in Alberta the only way taxes are continuing to go is down.

[Motion carried; Bill 19 read a first time]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Bill 20

Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2000

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill 20, the Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2000.

Mr. Speaker, this bill makes a number of changes to the Provincial Court Act, as well as amending the Provincial Offences Procedure Act, the Court of Queen's Bench Act, and repeals the Surrogate Court Act.

One of the key recommendations arising out of last year's justice summit dealt with simplifying the justice system. This bill will assist us in doing that by making courts more accessible and court cases less costly for Albertans.

[Motion carried; Bill 20 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table 11 letters and appropriate copies. These letters oppose Bill 11. They come from Rimbey, Eckville, Ponoka, Calgary, and Edmonton. One of the letters is in fact from the Canadian Federation of University Women.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first are letters from Shannon O'Donoghue of Banff and Dr. Millard of the Canmore medical clinic. Both are opposed to the Spray Lakes development in Kananaskis.

The second tabling I have is a petition signed by 27 people from the Slave Lake area who are petitioning the Legislative Assembly to end the policy "permitting hazardous wastes to be transported into Alberta from outside Canada and delivered to Swan Hills Waste Treatment Plant."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In trying to keep up with all the correspondence opposing Bill 11, I'll table nine in one shot here and just simply read the names of those objecting to Bill 11 and the health care changes: Ruth Elliott, Karen Effa, Ron Clarkson, Allan Effa, Laurel Ambrose, Eldred Stamp, Robert Lawrence, Meaghan Reid, Warren Bard.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings this afternoon. The first is from Mr. Harold Moore from Fairview, Alberta, who wants to know why "the PC party is inviting defeat in the next election over Bill 11."

My second tabling is the approved surgical procedures that can currently be done within this province without Bill 11 that are in the bylaws of the College of Physicians and Surgeons right now, and those were part of the Bill 37 review and the more recent update of those procedures. There are about 170 that can now be done, minor surgical procedures in nonhospital surgical facilities within this province right now.

Thank you.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, this afternoon I have two tablings. The first tabling is the annual report of Economic Development Edmonton as well as a summary of their plans for the future. Unfortunately, I only have three copies of this report, but I understand that other copies can be obtained directly from EDE or via their new web site which was launched. In particular, they refer to the growth in Edmonton in terms of housing starts and retail sales in preparation for the 2001 World Championships in Athletics.

The second tabling I have is yet another analysis done by Mr. Brad Severin of BDO Dunwoody showing the lack of fairness in the government's flat tax proposal as well as the lack of planning with the imposition of this supposed simple single rate. It shows that the distribution of benefits is very unfair and that for the middle-income earners in Alberta to receive a benefit, we would have been much better served if we'd stayed with the existing tax system.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table appropriate copies of a special issue of the Capital health Connections staff newspaper, Meningococcal Immunization: An Enormous Task, An Outstanding Achievement. By the time the campaign ended on February 28, it closed out at 80 percent of that target group, over 168,000 individuals had received the vaccination. It was one of the largest public vaccination campaigns ever undertaken in Canada.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly 35 students from Dr. Elliott school in Linden, Alberta. They're accompanied today by teachers Mrs. Mary Hughes, Mrs. Linda Wiens, Mrs. Alison Ibbotson, as well as a host of parents that include Chuck Tomlinson, James Klassen, Darin Esau, Katie Peters, Laurie Klassen, Jackie Koot, Ernie and Connie Neufeld, Shelley Griesbach, Lynn Regehr, Kerry Eitzen, Robbie Fyn, Norma-Jean Swain, Kevin Christiansen, Sandy Courtney, and Chris McDougall. I'd like to ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly teachers and students from the Rosedale Christian school. The school is located in Crooked Creek, which is in the Grande Prairie-Smoky constituency. Along with teacher Roger Klassen, we have parents and helpers Mr. Stephen Friesen, Mrs. Ethel Eidse, Mrs. Marilyn Friesen, Mr. Louis Eidse, and nine students from the school group. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask the students, teachers, and parents to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

MR. JACQUES: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two distinguished gentlemen from my constituency of Grande Prairie-Wapiti, each of whom has a lengthy record of community service and community involvement. I would like to introduce John Simpson, who is a businessman in the city of Grande Prairie and currently is also serving as chair of the Mistahia regional health authority, and also Mr. Dennis Grant, who is now retired but was superintendent of the Grande Prairie and district Catholic school board. He also serves on the Mistahia Regional Health Authority Board. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome from this Assembly.

1:50

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you a friend and a constituent from Calgary-Fish Creek, Harvey Cenaiko. Harvey works for Calgary's finest police department and is a member of the Calgary regional health authority. I'd ask Harvey to stand and receive a warm welcome from all of the members.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly three university and college students who are in the gallery today. They are Blake Robert, Kyle Franz, and Erin King. These three people have been working diligently in the name of clarity and honesty to make sure that Albertans understand the intent and purpose of Bill 11. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you and to the Members of this Legislative Assembly 27 members of the Rotary Club of north Edmonton. Today was quite an exciting day. Usually we bring guests to speak to us at our meetings and luncheons, and today we brought the club to the Legislative Assembly to listen to the Speaker of this Assembly at our meeting.

I'd like to inform some of the members here of some of the community services that our club is involved with. Once a week we donate a luncheon to a school which is in need in our end of town. We also donated $55,000 for the furnishing of the north Edmonton health centre. We're involved weekly in different things with the Boys and Girls Club, northeast patrol, Crime Stoppers, and Remembrance Day in the Beverly site in northeast Edmonton. At Christmastime we decorated some of the trees at the north Edmonton health centre, which we'll keep doing for the next few years. We're involved in very many things in a lot of schools.

Mr. Speaker, members of my club are in the public gallery, and with your permission I'd ask that they stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, one of the members of that particular Rotary Club is a former member of the Canadian House of Commons and a distinguished veteran of Canada's participation in the second war, Mr. Bill Lesick.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise and introduce two individuals from the political science faculty at the University of Alberta. They are currently studying the representation of women in elected office and specifically focusing on women in the Alberta Legislature. They're here today to see that representation in action. I would ask Linda Trimble and Ruby Hussein to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I've just been informed that in the gallery today are representatives from River Glen school. We have teachers and group leaders Ms Janice Dempsey, Miss Shelly Klotz, and Mrs. Gwen Pozzolo, and we have also parents and helpers Mrs. Mary Resta and Mrs. Shauna Shanks. They are accompanied by, I believe, 54 students from River Glen school. We're delighted to have them here today.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly several guests who are seated both in the public gallery and in the members' gallery today. They are Morag Rempel, chairperson of AUPE local 6, as well as six members of the AUPE Committee on Political Action, and they are Tom Fuller, Bill Pollard, Roberta Allen, Ron Whan, Don Westman, and Robin Filmer.

As well, seated in the galleries today are Irene Payne, Jean Rogers, Jean Elchuk, Tina Wiebe, Chris Wiebe, Augustina Joyce, Merrill Stewart, Linda Stewart, and Reverend Dr. Charles Garbovitsky. They were all present outside at the citizens' vigil.

I'll ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today the Premier met with representatives from the Alberta Medical Association in a desperate attempt to save Bill 11. It's clear that physicians in this province aren't buying into this government's propaganda campaign on this legislation. In fact, there appears to be nobody in Alberta buying into the government's spin, except perhaps their own spin doctors. My questions are to the minister of health, who also attended the meeting, I understand. Can the minister indicate what four points of progress were made that he reported upon leaving the meeting this morning?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, we certainly did meet with representatives of the Alberta Medical Association, and they raised a number of issues with us. First of all, they are concerned with respect to funding. They want more funding of the health care system and the additional access to doctors' services that would come with that. We indicated to them that we have made a major commitment to increase funding some 21 percent over the next three years. We are funding at the top level in Canada on an age adjusted basis, but certainly we recognize that they want more funding for the system.

Secondly, they indicated and they have on other occasions indicated that they're very concerned about increasing the physician supply, and I would note that we have worked co-operatively with the AMA – and I think they have been at other meetings appreciative of this – in developing an overall physician resource plan so that when we do plan for additional medical positions in universities, we will be doing so on a rational basis, Mr. Speaker. Further to the doctor supply, we indicated that we had made a significant move this year in adding funds for internships, which has gone over, I think, very well.

They also talked about their desire or their feeling that they did not have enough status or a big enough role within the regional health authority system at present. So we did discuss those topics, Mr. Speaker.

In addition, we did actually talk about some of the clauses in Bill 11 and what the potential was for considering amendments.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, will the minister be addressing the concern that I also understand was raised regarding the disclosure of all private contracts, including labs, including food services, including communications consultants hired for spin doctoring, all of those contracts that are raised by the regional health authorities?

MR. JONSON: Well, if I heard the hon. leader correctly, Mr. Speaker, I don't recall any concerns about the communication methods of regional health authorities being raised at this particular meeting.

With respect to the items in the bill that were discussed, certainly one of the proposed amendments that we discussed and we agreed to consider is that they suggested the legislation should require that a contract spell out what enhanced goods and services will be part of any contract and the terms and conditions around that. Quite frankly, we have to look at that more carefully, Mr. Speaker, but I think that is doable, and I indicated that to the AMA this morning.

2:00

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, is the minister willing to table the amendments which the Alberta Medical Association proposed at the meeting?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, this was a quiet, sedate, and formal meeting, but it wasn't so formal that we got down to dotting the i's and crossing the t's of draft amendments. If and when there are amendments to Bill 11 – and I would like to also go on and talk about some more – they will certainly be tabled with the Legislature.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, before we even get on to amendments in the question period, we better first of all move to second reading stage.

Regional Health Authority Contracts

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad that the minister raised the issue of enhanced services, because the majority of contracts for nonhospital surgical facilities in Edmonton and Calgary are up for renegotiation by the end of this month. Both the Premier and the minister of health have stated previously that the contracts should be fully disclosed. So my questions are for the Minister of Health and Wellness. Is the minister directing the regional health authorities to make public disclosure of the contracts one of the conditions of each new contract being renegotiated?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I . . . [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, I know it's Thursday afternoon, but the chair did recognize one hon. member for a question and has proceeded to recognize another hon. member for a response, so let's listen.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I respect what you said earlier, but this refers to a particular need to reference the bill, and I think that if I could refer the hon. member to clause 12 of Bill 11, she would find that there is a transitional provision there with respect to contract renewals, which is there to address this eventuality.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, we're talking about current contracts in the absence of Bill 11, and there is a provision in the regulations for the minister to direct the policies of the regional health authorities. Will this minister require full public disclosure as a condition of the contracts that are under negotiation right now?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, the legislation, Bill 11, requires disclosure of contracts.

Secondly, there is a provision in the bill that talks about the transition in terms of any contracts that come open within the next number of months, and that is provided for.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, the question this minister is refusing to answer is the disclosure of those contracts that exist right now. Will he require public disclosure as a condition of the contracts that are under negotiation right now?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think . . . [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, the Minister of Health and Wellness does have the floor.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. leader is emphasizing that the need, of course, is to get on with it and pass Bill 11, because that would ensconce in legislation the proper provision, but in the legislation, which we do need to have – as I said, it is protective legislation in this particular respect – there is in section 12 the whole area of reporting on contracts, disclosing contracts.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, we do recognize that with respect to the whole contracting matter there is a need for a transition, and there are certain dates referred to, I believe the end of October, whereby we want people who are entering into new contracts to adhere to the legislation and of course not make any changes contrary to the legislation until we have the bill fully implemented.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, I'll send over a copy of section 7 of the Regional Health Authorities Act for the hon. member.

Health System Accountability

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, this government claims that Bill 11 will result in reduced waiting lists and reduced costs, yet the Minister of Health and Wellness hasn't presented Albertans with a shred of evidence to back up these claims or explained why after eight years under this government the system is in such a mess in the first place. This government won't even listen to the evidence given by the Auditor General, because it is so intent, of course, on subsidizing private hospitals with taxpayer dollars. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. What does Bill 11 do to address the Auditor General's concern that this government isn't able to link new dollars going into health with patient outcomes in the system?

MR. JONSON: First of all, Mr. Speaker, as federal and provincial governments go in this country, I think that overall as a government we have introduced more measures and a better system of accountability all across our departments than any other place in Canada.

Secondly, with respect to the health care system we have a policy in terms of who is accountable for what within the health care system, which is a public document.

Also, Mr. Speaker, we have in our business plan and regional health authorities have in their business plans accountability and measurement provisions. Also, as I think is known to the Assembly, we are working on the establishment of a utilization commission which would be arm's length from the system and would look at the efficiency and effectiveness with which resources are being utilized.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, what have they been doing for eight years?

What does Bill 11 do to address the Auditor General's concern that this government lacks information on existing bed space in the hospitals?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, we are, both through the utilization commission initiative and through our own information gathering efforts in health, improving overall information systems across the health care system, and that is certainly an identified priority, one that has been identified already. The hon. leader, if she cared to, could see those efforts reflected in our overall business plan.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the Auditor General has pointed out that occupancy rates for some of the regions in this province are as low as 22 percent, why doesn't the minister simply do what Albertans are asking; that is, open up the existing beds?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think it should be very clear in the Assembly that Alberta Health and Wellness has accepted all of the recommendations in the Auditor General's report and is following up on them.

The other thing is that in terms of bed utilization certainly if there is capacity within a system where there is also the demand for services, regional health authorities would look at their own bed capacity, and if they were looking at considering a contract, they would consider first of all I would think whether they can effectively and efficiently offer the service themselves. But there is an option provided for in Bill 11 in terms of contracting.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. interim leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Private Health Services (continued)

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today federal NDP leader Alexa McDonough and I held a news conference in front of a billboard along Whyte Avenue in the beautiful Edmonton-Strathcona riding. The billboard, which advertises MRI scans, screams out "affordable" and "accessible," lifting these words from the Canada Health Act in its sales pitch. For $499 per scan you can buy your way to the front of the line, ahead of the Albertans who may be more seriously ill or injured but cannot afford to pay. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why does Bill 11 fail to stop the blatant queue-jumping that takes place morning, noon, and night at private MRI clinics in Edmonton and Calgary?

2:10

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I recognize the importance to the hon. member of the occasion of the visit of the federal leader of the ND Party, and I welcome her to Alberta, but this is about the third time the question has been asked. The point is that the MRI scanning process is one that through an interpretation which involved the federal government some time ago was deemed to be an uninsured service. The rationale for it is that, as I've indicated in this House, the actual operating of the MRI device was a process which was handled by technicians, highly skilled ones, mind you, and was deemed to be a process outside the provisions of the Canada Health Act, and therefore you could have the private MRIs operate.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question, to the minister as well: if $500 MRI scans are considered accessible and affordable, will $5,000 gold-plated hip replacements in private, for-profit hospitals just ready to be legalized by Bill 11 also be considered accessible and affordable by this government?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would remind the hon. member and the members of the Assembly that the Alberta government through Alberta Health and Wellness and Infrastructure is making major additions to the MRI capacity of this province. We have a new MRI going into the Red Deer region, into the Chinook region. I was just meeting this morning with the chair of the Mistahia region, and they are getting started with their plans there. There have been additional MRIs in Edmonton and Calgary added to the system, and there are plans for more. These are designed to offer public services, and they will be covered in terms of their costs for the patients that use them within the public system for the insured services. We are recognizing that need and providing for it.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question to the minister. Are $500 accessible and affordable MRI scans the way of the future in the Hips R U hospitals that will be legalized by Bill 11?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 is quite clear in that there will be no private hospitals.

I would really like to add a point here since it would appear that we're doing something unusual in Bill 11, which certainly is not the case. Recently I was apprised that, for instance, in Manitoba, just another example, they have a contract with four private clinics, as I understand it. One of them is in downtown Winnipeg, and, Mr. Speaker, that contract has operated for some time. It provides for a wide range of surgical procedures. The quotes from that part of the country indicate that it is helping to relieve the pressures on their crowded public hospitals, and it has not been challenged by the federal government as being contrary to the Canada Health Act.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton Meadowlark.

Health Care System

MR. HLADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have many good friends and acquaintances who are medical doctors that I've discussed Bill 11 with. However, I'm hearing a different story when the AMA is talking privately to government and a different story when they are talking to the press. Recently the representative forum of the Alberta Medical Association passed a resolution indicating its opposition to Bill 11 in its current form and that it would like to see some amendments to the legislation. I understand that this morning the Premier and the Minister of Health and Wellness met with officials from the AMA to discuss their concerns. My question to the Minister of Health and Wellness: could the minister advise what the nature and the outcome of the meetings this morning was?

MR. JONSON: First of all, Mr. Speaker, as I've indicated, there were a number of matters discussed pertaining to the overall health care system in general. They concern the need for increasing the physician supply and the need to put more money into the system to expand the amount of services that could be offered. It concerned, as I indicated, the feelings that doctors have about their role in the system, as to whether they are regarded as key to the health care system as they should be.

Then, Mr. Speaker, we did go over five or six possible points of amendment with respect to Bill 11. I certainly indicated that we would consider their amendments. I indicated that there were two or three areas that we did not agree with but that we would look further at the ones that there seemed to be mutual agreement upon.

MR. HLADY: Well, Mr. Speaker, my first supplemental to the same minister: was the same message being delivered from the AMA outside after your meeting as it was inside the meeting?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I was not present at the press conference that followed between the members of the media and the AMA. Reports – and I don't think one should completely go by them – would indicate that the actual progress that we made, areas of understanding that we reached with respect to the legislation itself, although they did not in any way indicate that they were completely in agreement with it, were not featured in the response of the president of the AMA. Rather, he was emphasizing the area that we didn't get anywhere because we didn't get more funding tied down, that sort of thing.

MR. HLADY: My final supplemental to the same minister: since the issue of physician supply has been one of the publicly stated concerns of the Alberta Medical Association, could the minister tell us what action is being taken to ensure that we have an adequate supply of doctors in this province in the years to come.

MR. JONSON: Well, as I've indicated previously, Mr. Speaker, we have – we can demonstrate, and we've reported on the fact – been working collaboratively with the Alberta Medical Association in terms of planning for increased physician capacity in this province. We have done a physician resource study that was publicized not too long ago in terms of its initial results. We have taken major measures to address the attraction of physicians to rural areas. We have established the rural physician action plan. We have increased the internships in this coming year that are provided through our two medical schools.

Further, Mr. Speaker, I think we have some good results in this province in that I believe it was 220 additional physicians practised in Alberta this year. They fell into two categories: the fact that we are retaining more of our graduates to practise in Alberta and, secondly, that we have attracted some from outside the province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's interesting to note that twice in this last week the minister of health has tabled the same legal opinion from Mr. Peter Lown with regard to supposed similarities between the Saskatchewan facilities act and Bill 11. Yet what's most interesting to note is that the minister has ignored the recommendations of a major report that Mr. Lown prepared when he was chair of the Bill 37 blue-ribbon panel. My questions are to the minister of health. Can he explain why he has ignored recommendation 5, which says that all surgical procedures exceeding 12 hours of completion, otherwise known as overnight surgical facilities in Bill 11, otherwise known as private hospitals, must be performed in a hospital? That was Mr. Peter Lown's recommendation to you, Mr. Minister.

2:20

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member across the way of course ignores going on to the other part of the report which indicated that we should proceed ahead to providing legislation for the licensing and inclusion of private hospitals into the system. I assume that by raising this, she is supporting that, which Bill 11 of course does not advocate.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister, then, explain why he's ignored recommendation 6 in the blue-ribbon panel, which indicated that Bill 37, which was replaced by Bill 11, should actually have been replaced by amending the Alberta Health Care Insurance Act, the Hospitals Act, and the Medical Professions Act? The recommendation was not to put forward stand-alone legislation again. Can you explain that please?

MR. JONSON: Well, certainly, Mr. Speaker. On such an important topic it is better to have stand-alone legislation which is focused upon the particular objectives that we have for Bill 11, our statement of adherence to the principles of the Canada Health Act, and I can go down the whole list of features of the bill.

We are addressing those issues raised in Mr. Lown's report. The point here, Mr. Speaker, is that we are consolidating it into one piece of legislation which is even more protective of the public system than what the blue-ribbon panel report contained.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister, then, explain why he again ignored the part of recommendation 5 which stated that approved surgical facilities which have overnight stays, private hospitals, Bill 11, should in fact meet the requirements of Alberta's Hospitals Act? That's why amendments to the Hospitals Act are required and not a stand-alone piece of legislation that does not have the same standard as hospitals require in this province. Can you explain that?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 has a number of provisos that go far beyond Bill 37 or the blue-ribbon panel report in terms of disclosure, in terms of contracting requirements, and of course it has definite reference to the need for the approval of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is something that is also linked in with the current Hospitals Act.

Mr. Speaker, I find the question quite ironic or hypocritical or something. If we had brought in a piece of legislation that took a piece out of one piece of legislation and another and involved three acts, we would have been criticized for making it too complicated and not easy to follow. We've consolidated all of our changes into one very important piece of legislation, Bill 11.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Income Tax

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently there has been a lot of talk about Alberta's new personal income tax system. This new system was designed to cut taxes for all Albertans and to also make the provincial income tax system fair. Recent reports and analysis suggest that single middle-income Albertans will actually lose out under the new plan, that their taxes may actually increase, and that they would be better off under the current system. Today my questions are all to the Provincial Treasurer. With respect to single middle-income Albertans I'd like to know: will they really be worse off under the new single-rate tax system than they would have been under the old system?

MR. DAY: Well, a couple of points to make, Mr. Speaker. First of all, the federal plan, depending on which part of it you're looking at, is up to a four-year plan. So there's a presumption – and the jury is still out on this issue – whether the federal government as presently constituted will even be in place four years from now. That's a presumption. I know that certainly there are some, not the least of which would be the leader of the federal ND Party, who will be working hard to make sure that that isn't the reality four years from now.

The other issue, Mr. Speaker, is: will the federal government stick to its commitment to pass these phased-in tax cuts along? The Alberta plan moves all of the savings into next year at a tremendous rate. We will be taking $852 million less out of Albertans' pockets than we will this year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, on the issue of changes the federal government has made for next year, we give them some small credit for following our example. We were first out in terms of our tax plan, a very aggressive, exciting plan, and now with the federal government beginning to lower some taxes and that affecting certain laneways of taxation, the member's correct that if we do nothing, if we do not make any changes to our plan, even though all Albertans are going to be paying less next year – let me make that clear: all Albertans will be paying less – there are some who would be paying more if we hadn't changed the plan. That is a correct identification that the member has made.

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you. My supplemental again, Mr. Speaker, is to the Treasurer. If our new system does not automatically pass on savings that the federal government handles with respect to their adjustments, are we prepared to do something about it?

MR. DAY: Yes, we certainly are, Mr. Speaker. The Premier's commitment, this government's commitment has been very clear on that. The federal reductions will flow through to the benefit of Albertans.

Now, the beauty of a simpler tax plan that everybody can understand is that you can adjust those levels fairly easily. We are introducing the plan. The starting point is an 11 percent rate on all incomes after they've taken all their refunds and after they've taken all their deductions, but we can move that rate downwards, we can also take those basic exemption levels and move them upwards, or we can do a combination of the two. So our commitment, as we look at our revenues at the first quarter, is to announce how we are going to do that and make sure that the full benefit of our plan and the full benefit of what the federal government has done will indeed flow through to all Albertans.

MR. MELCHIN: Well, I'm pleased, Mr. Speaker, to hear of his concern not only for just the province but for the federal system as well.

To the Treasurer: what policy recommendations would you make to give all those who would seek the leadership of the new federal Canadian Alliance?

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I'll address directly what is germane to the tax repercussions to the province. We will narrow and confine it to that, Mr. Speaker, to not cause you any angst on that particular item.

The very clear issue with our tax plan related to family income is both profound and exciting at the same time. We are able to and we have moved basic exemption levels up. Basic exemption levels have moved up 70 percent, and the spousal exemption is moving up to equal the basic exemption by 90 percent. That's going to do a number of things for all Alberta families. Those families and individuals will be able to earn more income before they are punished by the tax man for wanting to earn more income. So there are savings there.

For low-income families this is very important. Approximately 132,000 families in Alberta will not be paying any provincial income tax at all. That's tremendously relieving.

For those Albertans on minimum wage, those Albertans and their families will not be paying any income tax at all, and should that family configuration be a single-parent family, that single parent can take the full basic exemption up to $11,620 and then take the spousal exemption, which is increased to $11,620, and apply that to the first child thereby being tremendously relieving on a single-parent family.

The last quick comment, Mr. Speaker. In Alberta, with the Alberta plan, Alberta minimum-wage earners will pay no income tax, but they will still have to fork over $640 to the federal tax man next year, and that's a disadvantage.

MR. SAPERS: What a load of united alternative that was, Mr. Speaker.

Private Health Service (continued)

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of Health and Wellness tabled a legal opinion which compared Alberta's Bill 11 to Saskatchewan's Health Facilities Licensing Act. Now, he didn't point out that the difference between Saskatchewan and Alberta is that in Saskatchewan the government brought in legislation to clamp down on private clinics, not to build a framework for the creation of private hospitals. My questions today are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Since this government likes to refer to Saskatchewan as an example, will the minister explain why that province maintains that MRIs are medically necessary required procedures and should be covered by medicare while this government in Alberta does not?

2:30

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I indicated prior to session yesterday in an interview that certainly we acknowledge that there was not provision in the legislation in Saskatchewan, as shown by the report by Dr. Lown, for overnight surgical clinics, and we also acknowledge the coverage with respect to MRIs. But I think you would find – and we would certainly need to verify this – that by far the majority of provinces in this country are following the same interpretation of MRI services and what is covered as Alberta is, and that is that it is and can be offered on a private basis without violating the Canada Health Act.

MR. SAPERS: Will the minister agree that the Saskatchewan Health Facilities Licensing Act, unlike Alberta's Bill 11, requires that any services normally provided in a hospital operate 100 percent, fully – that means entirely – within the public health care system?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, our approach, as is the case between Saskatchewan and Alberta, is the same, and that is that we will provide medically necessary insured services at no cost to the consumer or the potential patient and without any preference with respect to waiting lists within our publicly funded, publicly administered system, and that guarantee is the same in both pieces of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, Saskatchewan does have private clinics. They developed this legislation to deal with them, and it is in terms of its principles in that regard very similar to what we are proposing to this Legislature.

MR. SAPERS: Given that Saskatchewan's law protects medicare and Alberta's Bill 11 would undermine it, will the minister confirm that Alberta's Bill 11 allows for surgeries requiring overnight stays in approved facilities – read: private hospitals – but Saskatchewan law specifically prohibits this from happening?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, our proposed legislation and Saskatchewan's legislation are the same in terms of the basic principles, and that is that both are designed to comply with the Canada Health Act. Both of them are designed to provide coverage of insured services. In fact, in our health care system in Alberta we cover, although it goes way beyond the provisions of the Canada Health Act, a much wider area of payment for services for Albertans than Saskatchewan is able to provide. There will not be preference given in terms of queue-jumping, and as I said, it will be publicly funded, publicly administered. They're very similar in terms of their principles and intent, and Mr. Lown's review says that.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Fort McMurray Education Needs

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Northeastern Alberta is experiencing unprecedented growth due to oil sands development, and many Alberta cities are benefiting from the almost $40 billion being spent in private-sector investment. My question today is, no, not to the Minister of Resource Development but to the Minister of Learning. The city of Fort McMurray and Wood Buffalo are experiencing a superheated economy because of the billions being spent. Both the public and Catholic school boards are trying to cope with escalating costs in this superinflated economy. What can the minister do to help relieve the pressures being faced by these school boards?

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In talking to the Fort McMurray school boards and talking to the Calgary school boards as well, it became extremely evident that we needed to add something to the funding formula, that we needed to add something to the growth and density component of this. As the hon. Member for Fort McMurray has said, there are rents up there that are 30 to 40 percent higher than anywhere in the province, and that's if you can get a place to rent. The kids up there still deserve an education. They still deserve funds for their education.

So, Mr. Speaker, what we did back in December of last year is start a committee called the growth and density committee, and that is led by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View. What he is in the process of doing and will eventually give a report to me on is going around to these types of communities and talking to them and finding out exactly what kind of factor we should put in the funding formula for growth and density. We already have one for sparsity and distance, and many people would argue – and I think it's a very good argument – that equally there should be one for growth and density. I hope to have this report back within a month or so, and hopefully we can get something into the funding formula as early as September.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental to the same minister: due to the distance, where Fort McMurray is located, and the sparsity, of course, in a superinflated economy, I have to ask the minister how he intends to work in attracting new teachers to this strong Alberta economy in light of the escalating costs in northeastern Alberta.

DR. OBERG: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. That's a very good question, because quite frankly in much the same way as downtown Toronto has a higher standard of living and a higher cost of living than downtown Edmonton does, Fort McMurray has a higher cost of living than downtown Edmonton does. So the Fort McMurray school boards have an incredibly difficult time in getting teachers to go up there. It's a very challenging time, but again we hope that by putting a growth and density factor into the formula, we'll be able to adjust that and give them the funding that will enable them to get the high-quality teachers up there.

Mr. Speaker, what's happening right now, quite frankly, is that the teachers that are up there are ones that are married to executives from Syncrude or executives from Suncor or people working at Suncor. That's a real problem when it comes to new teachers going up there. We're experiencing unprecedented growth in Fort McMurray, and we have to adjust to that.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you. My final question. We have lots of engineers in Fort McMurray, in fact 3,000 or 4,000, probably a few too many, but we really need some re-engineering of the funding formulas dealing with these special situations. My final question to the minister today: in light of the costs being 20 to 30 percent higher, in light of trying to attract new teachers, how do we go about in the short-term dealing with these tremendous pressures that are taking money out of the classroom just to deal with keeping schools open?

DR. OBERG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I'd already stated, I hope to have some changes to the funding formula by September.

Mr. Speaker, with your concurrence I'd like the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, as the person leading the committee, to supplement me on this answer.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier said that private hospitals would be more cost-effective. Everyone knows, however, the need for profit and massive administration in private hospitals means that they are less cost-effective. The Premier said that private hospitals were needed because they would be more efficient and alleviate suffering. That's not so. Finally, the Premier said that private hospitals reduce waiting lists. My first question is to the minister of health. Will the hon. minister finally admit that waiting lists for public health care will in fact get longer as trained doctors and nurses abandon the public system to practise in the Premier's parallel private system because of Bill 11?

2:40

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier has not contended that. The second thing is that Bill 11 is very explicit in stating very clearly that there will be no full-service, private hospitals in this province. That's prohibited in the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, in terms of evidence or reference points let's consider this particular example. In Manitoba they happen to have the Pan Am Sports Medicine Centre in Winnipeg, and there they provide for a wide range of surgeries. They recorded having done 1,418 surgeries last year, and they're provided block funding for these costs; that is, these surgeries for the public system. The Pan Am does everything from orthoscopic surgery on knees and shoulders to plastic surgery and cataract operations. There are also three other surgical facilities in Manitoba. The positive side to the Pan Am facility is that it takes the pressure off overburdened hospitals. "In an era of rapidly growing health-care costs, private clinics may be one solution to . . . ease the burden of medicare on taxpayers," says Mr. Hildahl, the commentator in Manitoba.

We could go on to talk about the Shouldice clinic. That's already been referenced in this Assembly. We could reflect upon, as I understand it, that at least one of the maritime provinces, which has, I believe, a Liberal government, is sending patients under contract arrangements down to the United States for surgical services.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would say that there is quite a bit of evidence around.

MR. MacDONALD: Very interesting, Mr. Speaker.

This is to the minister of health. Is the hon. minister saying now that the president of the Calgary Regional Medical Staff Association and the president of the Edmonton medical staff association are totally wrong?

Speaker's Ruling Improper Questions

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, you're referring to two individuals who I'm sure over a period of a week may have said virtually anything and everything. It's totally incomprehensible to me how this question can be responded to unless you're a lot more specific about suggesting that somebody said a particular thing. Please proceed.

Private Health Services (continued)

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We'll try this then. This is also to the minister of health. Will the minister finally confirm that the real reason hundreds of public hospital beds and tens of operating rooms are closed is to artificially increase demand for private hospitals by creating a false illusion that the public health care system can't cope? Isn't that what this government's slashing of health care is all about, to cripple the public health care system so now we can have wealth care, not health care?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, it's quite clear – and for the member across the way I'd just like to say this one more time – that, first of all, there is no provision in this bill for private, full-service hospitals. Secondly, the proposed legislation does not force any regional health authority into having a contract with anybody. Further, there is a set of criteria in the legislation in terms of what requirements have to be met in terms of entering into any contract, and certainly the overall net benefit to the system of moving in this direction has to be paramount.

I would just like to conclude, but I could go on to some other examples here. Other places in this country have found it viable to contract with surgical facilities. That has not been challenged by the Liberal Party, as far as I know, in any part of this country, whether they're opposition or in some other role as government, Mr. Speaker, so that is the point that I'm making.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Kananaskis Development

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that our unique treasures of natural heritage need preservation for Albertans now and generations to come, a constituent of Calgary-Fort, a well-known person among our communities, expressed to me his public objection to development in Kananaskis Country. My question is to the Minister of Environment. What is the government policy on Kananaskis Country?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I first of all want to say that I appreciated the letters that were tabled by the opposition Environment critic indicating a couple of people who copied her with letters indicating their feelings about Kananaskis Country. In response to those two letters that were tabled earlier today as well as to the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, I'd like to say that the overriding principle in Kananaskis Country is the protection of the environment. This government will not, has not, and does not allow development that threatens this area's environmental integrity or its wilderness character.

Mr. Speaker, Kananaskis Country is governed as a multiple use area, and one of those uses is to provide recreational opportunities to Albertans and people who come from outside the province of Alberta, thousands and thousands of visitors every year. In May of 1999 after an extensive amount of public consultation the government announced that any new large-scale development proposals in Kananaskis would not be permitted. However, that decision exempted six proposals that were already under review. Of those six proposals I can advise members of the Assembly that one has been withdrawn by the proponent, and that was for a golf course in the area. The second one, one that was put forward, did not meet any financial criteria that were established. So of the original six that were grandfathered, four now are continuing through an extensive process of review.

MR. CAO: Well, thank you. My second question is to the same minister. What is the status of the proposal of an alpine resort development in the Spray Lakes area?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, December last I ordered the Genesis Land Development Corp., which is the proponent of the proposal referred to by the hon. member, to carry out an environmental impact assessment for their proposed four-season resort, but I also ordered that the impact assessment would have to include the downhill ski area that they were proposing at Tent Ridge and a proposed heli/cat skiing operation on Mount Sparrowhawk as well as a boat tour operation on Spray Lakes. From an environmental standpoint looking at the cumulative impact of all of these proposals makes the most sense with respect to the environmental integrity of Spray Valley. At this time government officials are preparing the final terms of reference for the impact assessment. This will act as an environmental checklist of all the concerns that Genesis must address in Spray Valley.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie tabled a letter that indicated that in looking at the development company's terms of reference, it did not take into account a number of issues. Those issues have been raised, however, by members of the public who have put forward their concerns. In all, Mr. Speaker, over 800 Albertans participated in submitting terms of reference. That is now in the process of being reviewed, and there will be a more comprehensive set of terms of reference established as a result.

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the same minister. Can the minister tell us what the process is for the no development views to be taken into account?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, this is really similar to many of the concerns that people have already expressed. As I said in this House before, many people have expressed their opposition to any further development in the Kananaskis Country area, and as a result of that very good input by a number of people, I think that is what precipitated the policy we have, that I referred to earlier in my answer to the main question, a policy of no new large-scale development and a policy that environmental integrity and wilderness character are the most important principles governing how we will deal with Kananaskis country.

2:50

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members in a few seconds from now we will call upon the first of three hon. members today to participate in Members' Statements, but prior to that, might we have unanimous consent to revert to introductions?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure and honour this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly teachers and students from the Sexmith and La Glace junior high band. The band is located in both the Grande Prairie-Smoky constituency and the Grande Prairie-Wapiti constituency. These are the forerunner of probably one of the most successful bands in this province. The junior high band has led to a senior band that has actually won recognition across all of Canada, across all of North America.

It's with a great deal of pride, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to introduce the bandleader, Mr. Paulson, teacher Mr. Scratch; parents and helpers Mrs. Van Dyk, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Craibley, and Mrs. Hutchinson. The band was participating in the Alberta International Band Festival this morning and, I understand, performed very well. The group is seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask the students, teachers, and parents attending to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Legislature.

head: Members' Statements

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Alberta Film Industry

MRS. BURGNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise this afternoon and announce some information about the Alberta Film Commission, which represented about a $98 million industry in the year of 1998. It's an environmentally friendly industry. It's got diversified business opportunities for the province of Alberta.

With the provincial government's recent support by design and implementation of the Alberta film development program and its continued support with the Alberta Film Commission, this province is growing a film infrastructure for our province that is one of the many tangible and beneficial ways which our provincial economy is going to grow and move forward. As I said, it was a $98 million industry in 1998, and that moved ahead by 50 percent in the first six months of 1999. This creates an economic multiplier estimated in various industry studies at 2.8 to nearly three times. The economic spin-offs include a multitude of business opportunities for our hotels, tourism, car rentals, catering industries, to speak of just a few. It brings an international focus to our province, and the film industry, as I said, is an environmentally friendly one.

Mr. Speaker, I was recently appointed a member of the Alberta Film Commission and serve on their board. The offices for the Alberta Film Commission are located in the constituency of Calgary-Currie. The mission statement of the Alberta Film Commission is: in the business to bring film production to the province, nurturing relationships with indigenous, national, and international producers, production executives, and production companies.

We're going to work together to strengthen our relationships with municipal representatives, union guilds, key members of Alberta business, and the public in order to nurture one-on-one relationships and to create a better understanding of this dynamic economic industry in our community. We have also got links with the Alberta Economic Development Authority, the Economic Development Authority of Edmonton, private-sector works, including financial institutions, and key leaders in our community who are taking this initiative very seriously.

I'm pleased to be able to act as a liaison for our colleagues, and I would like to share my information with them and look forward to hearing from anyone who has questions about the Alberta film industry or the commission. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Marriage Amendment Act

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 202 could soon be proclaimed into law in this province. I want to take this opportunity to return to it, because I believe the spirit of this bill is not pro marriage but pro intolerance and pro discrimination and anti human rights. Yesterday I made mention of the fact that I had questions about this bill that were never likely to be answered due to the speed at which this bill was fast-tracked to the Legislature. I'm sure that Albertans as well have questions but have scarcely had time to read the bill, never mind responding thoughtfully and clearly to its intent.

The government has forgotten the outrage that Albertans expressed two years ago when they found the threat of the use of the notwithstanding clause ensconced in Bill 26. The government may say to me, "That was then; this is now," and I would respond by paraphrasing Julie Lloyd of Equal=Alberta who said: you can't continue to load the gun and brandish a deadly weapon then, now, or ever; discrimination is discrimination.

To say that this bill is not anti gay but pro marriage cannot detract from the fact that this legislation legalizes discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. It's an affront to Canadian values of decency and tolerance. It's an arrogant affront to the Canadian Human Rights Act. I quote the Canadian Human Rights Act, Mr. Speaker:

All individuals should have an opportunity . . . to make for themselves the lives that they are able and wish to have . . . consistent with their duties and obligations as members of society.

I've always maintained that this bill is offensive to Albertans who see same-sex couples seeking equal opportunity to make for themselves the lives that they are able and wish to make. I despair that they do not have the support of their government in attempting to do so.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Tourism Promotion Video

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday ITV News reported that the government has produced at taxpayer expense a new promotional video encouraging visitors from abroad to visit Alberta, but it would appear from the video that the current government only wants tourists to visit certain regions of the province, because the video they produced features nothing north of Red Deer.

Well, on this side of the House, Mr. Speaker, we agree that the Banff/Calgary corridor is certainly worth a visit, as are Lethbridge, Drumheller, and Waterton, but unlike the current government Alberta Liberal MLAs believe that Jasper, West Edmonton Mall, Vegreville, Lac La Biche, Fort McMurray, the Peace country, and the Reynolds museum are all worthy of promotion and are all part of the true Alberta experience.

For this government to earmark $4 million for an international tourism promotion with public tax dollars collected from across the province and leave out two-thirds of the province is just plain wrong. Even the Alberta Chambers of Commerce have noted the government's failure to properly support and develop Alberta's fourth largest industry in a competent and equitable manner.

The repeated bungling by this government of tourism promotion for two-thirds of this province must end. The government's own commissioned studies show that Alberta's tourism industry has already lost international market share because of this government's incompetence and failed attempts at privatization through the now defunct Alberta Tourism Partnership. This government's latest insult to attractions and hospitality interests in central and northern Alberta is inexcusable. This latest snub of tourism in central and northern Alberta is just one more indicator of how arrogant and detached this government has become.

On behalf of the two-thirds of the province left out in the latest tourism campaign we request that the government change its marketing plan so that all Albertans share in the promotion and the benefits from tourism.

Thank you.

3:00

head: Projected Government Business

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 7(5) I would request that the information of what's happening next week we now share. Thanks.

MR. HANCOCK: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm more than delighted to advise the House that next week will continue to be as productive as the last two weeks have been.

On Monday, March 20, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders for second reading we will be proceeding with Bill 17, Fair Trading Amendment Act, 2000; Bill 10, Securities Amendment Act, 2000; Bill 13, Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2000; Bill 14, Alberta Treasury Branches Amendment Act, 2000; Bill 15, Business Corporations Amendment Act, 2000; and time permitting, Committee of the Whole, bills 17 and 2.

On Monday at 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of Supply reporting designated supply subcommittees, two of five, Health and Wellness and Learning; reporting Justice and Attorney General and Municipal Affairs, main estimates; Committee of the Whole, if there's time permitting, in bills 1, 2, 4, and 5 and as per the Order Paper.

On Tuesday, March 21, at 4:30 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of Supply reporting main estimates of Innovation and Science; for second reading, time permitting, bills 20, 14, 15; and as per the Order Paper.

Tuesday at 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of Supply reporting designated supply subcommittees, three of five, Human Resources and Employment, Children's Services, and Environment; reporting main estimates of Treasury, Infrastructure, Gaming, and Innovation and Science; thereafter in Committee of the Whole as per the Order Paper.

Wednesday, March 22, at 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of Supply day 1 of lottery fund and reporting of International and Intergovernmental Relations main estimates; thereafter as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, March 23, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of Supply day 2 of lottery fund estimates and introduction of the Appropriation Act, main estimates, and as per the Order Paper.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, there was one point of order provided to the chair today, but there is also a point of order arising out of business in the House yesterday, and I have this statement that I want to make.

Yesterday, March 15, the chair undertook to review Hansard and if necessary comment further on the point of order raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek which focused on statements made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning in question period about the chief executive officer of the Alberta Mental Health Board.

As the chair indicated yesterday, on pages 440 and 441 of Hansard, questions should be on policy matters, not on personality. All hon. members must be reminded that the protection they enjoy for anything said in this Chamber also requires members to act responsibly. To make allegations against someone who is unable to defend themselves can have serious repercussions for the individual and his or her reputation. This point has been made several times by this chair. The same point is found in Beauchesne, sixth edition, at paragraph 493(4).

The current practice in the Canadian House of Commons is reflected in a new book, House of Commons Procedure and Practice, which the chair referred to on Tuesday. On page 524 it states:

Members are discouraged from referring by name to persons who are not Members of Parliament and who do not enjoy parliamentary immunity, except in extraordinary circumstances when the national interest calls for the naming of an individual. The Speaker has ruled that Members have a responsibility to protect the innocent, not only from outright slander but from any slur directly or indirectly implied, and has stressed that Members should avoid as much as possible mentioning by name people from outside the House who are unable to reply and defend themselves against innuendo.

The chair encourages members to reflect on these considerations before commenting on persons outside the House.

Now, I do believe that the Member for Edmonton-Manning would like to supplement my statements.

MR. GIBBONS: Mr. Speaker, I regret that the comments I made may have been heard as offensive. The intent of my questions was to determine the provincial Minister of Health and Wellness' policy re mental health issues. It was never my intention to violate the rules of this House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order

Factual Accuracy

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising under Beauchesne 409 and 23(j) of our Standing Orders with respect to the preamble in the question from Edmonton-Gold Bar this afternoon. In Edmonton-Gold Bar's preamble he first of all offended the rules entirely by exceeding "one carefully drawn sentence," by getting "an unfair share of time," by provoking "the same sort of reply," and in all the other areas of which you've admonished the House from time to time.

But the part about the preamble which was most offensive to the rules and the dignity of the House and the dignity of the members of the House was the fact that he chose to attempt to put words into the Premier's mouth by trying to characterize from his perspective what the Premier has been saying. What Bill 11 and this government have said is that we will be banning private hospitals in Alberta. The bill states that.

Now, they might dispute the definition of hospitals, they might dispute the definition of designated surgical facilities, but for the hon. member to come out in his preamble and attempt to tell the public of Alberta that the Premier supports private hospitals, when the bill that the government tabled clearly bans private hospitals, is wrong. It's characteristic of the type of misleading statements that have been utilized in preambles to questions, which can only provoke long answers, can only provoke members on this side of the House, members of Executive Council, in responding to the questions to spend an excessive amount of time trying to correct the misapprehensions that are being created by the preambles, and this is a classic example of that.

I would ask you to admonish the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on his specific question today and all members opposite to cut down their preambles, to use accurate descriptions when they table documents, to use accurate descriptions in their preambles, and not to encourage and provoke debate by mischaracterizing what is being said. In fact, it's not up to them to tell the people of Alberta what government members or cabinet ministers or the Premier has said. That is on the record, and this hon. member should not be twisting our words.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora on this point of order.

MR. SAPERS: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. I've been asked by my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar to initiate the response to this point of order, and I have to say that I think the Government House Leader doth protest too much. First of all, the preamble – and I listened carefully to it – was perfectly in keeping with the House leaders' agreements that are in place regarding the structure of questions for question period. Secondly, for this Government House Leader to complain about anybody on the opposition side attempting to put words in the mouth of the government – well, first of all, that's ridiculous. Second of all, we don't have to. They can be condemned by their own words and their own actions. They don't need our help. Thirdly, of course, the Premier is the past master of putting words in the mouth of the opposition. In fact, I think what he has said is that people who oppose this government must be left-wing nuts. It's malicious misinformation, and whenever anybody disagrees with this government, he attempts to put words in their mouth. Obviously, I understand their sensitivity to this, but clearly it doesn't constitute a point of order. Maybe it constitutes a point of their own guilt.

Now, I understand that it's very hurtful to the government's position when their own words are reflected back to them, but there hasn't been one or two or three, there have been several times over this government's entire campaign to privatize health care in Alberta when they have said that they are in favour of private health care, that they are in favour of private hospitals, that they are in favour of private fund-raising for hospitals. So, Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar was speaking every word the truth. It was factual, it was to the point, and it was the Premier's own language. I suggest that that's the hurtful part. They just don't like hearing the truth.

3:10

THE SPEAKER: Well, the beauty of this system that we do have is we do have Hansard and we do have the Blues. That really allows for definition with respect to the issue.

As I understand the issue raised by the hon. Government House Leader, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar made a series of statements saying that somebody said this, and the point being made is that, no, that individual quoted did not say that. Here's what the Blues say. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar: "Thank you, Mr. Speaker." So far so good.

The Premier said private hospitals would be more cost-effective. Everyone knows, however, the need for profit and massive administration in private hospitals means they are less cost-effective. The Premier said private hospitals were needed because they would be more efficient and alleviate suffering. That's not so. Finally, the Premier said private hospitals reduce waiting lists. My first question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Will the hon. minister finally admit that waiting lists for public health care will in fact get longer as trained doctors and nurses abandon the public system to practise in the Premier's parallel private system because of Bill 11?

Great danger when hon. members start saying what other people are suggesting or talking about. It clearly violates everything. If the hon. member would ask the question, "Did the Premier say this?" that would be appropriate, but to put words in somebody else's mouth certainly gets away from what we're doing.

Now, I've said this before time and time and time again about this personality thing. So I'm going to give all hon. members an example. I'm going to look at all hon. members, and I'm going to demand that you answer this question yes or no. I'm going to demand that you answer this question yes or no. I will let you know, however, that regardless of the way you answer the question, you will be found guilty. I would never allow this type of question to be in this Assembly, yet the skill of the utilization of the English language is such that I guess everyone would try.

So here's the imaginary test. I challenge you to answer this question either yes or no, knowing full well that there's no explanation allowed. I'm forcing you to answer this. You can't debate it; you can't think about it. You have to answer yes or no. Do you still beat your wife? You're guilty either way with that response, and we're going to be careful with the language we use in this Assembly to make sure we deal with policy and not with anything else.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order. For the benefit of those people who are in the various galleries I would explain, as you can plainly see, that this is the less formal part of the Assembly called Committee of Supply. Members may move about, may even have coffee or juice with them, may remove their jackets and sit at various places. They must speak, though, standing in their place, and we have a convention that only one member standing speaks at a time. It allows for give and take back and forth between hon. members and the minister.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

Infrastructure

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin this afternoon's deliberations we'll call upon the hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like, just before I begin my remarks, to thank the staff of Infrastructure for all of their support over the past few months. I know that I would be extending on behalf of all of our members a sincere thank you for their excellent work.

Infrastructure's business plan and 2000-2001 estimates indicate how we in Infrastructure plan to contribute to Alberta's economic prosperity. We're going to do it by ensuring the provision of safe and effective transportation systems; by managing the development of seniors' lodges and learning, health care, and water management facilities; and by planning, operating, and maintaining government facilities.

The government's prudent fiscal planning and management allow us to continue directing funds to a number of different programs and initiatives throughout the province. Alberta Infrastructure continues to work with a number of ministries to address priority issues and ongoing initiatives and to increase our effectiveness and efficiency. Some of these initiatives include continuing to lead the cross-government Alberta capital planning initiative by working with other ministries on the development of a cross-government approach to infrastructure planning, information management, and project prioritization. This will ensure the most cost-effective and efficient use of Infrastructure dollars.

We're working with Alberta Learning to plan and develop capital plans, programs, policies, and legislation for all learning facilities; with Alberta Health and Wellness to ensure that long-term regional capital plans are developed in partnership with regional health authorities by March 31, 2001; with Alberta Community Development on the provincewide upgrading of seniors' lodges; and with Alberta Environment on protecting the integrity and effectiveness of water management infrastructure.

We support the provincial government's ongoing theme of strong financial management. In order to position the ministry to address infrastructure funding and management matters, we continue to seek more functional and accountable ways to accomplish our mandate. Now, this is evident in the internal restructuring we did after the government reorganization last spring. We have reduced our full-time equivalent count by nearly 100, and we have also been able to reduce the administrative budget by approximately $4 million.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

In the fiscal year 2000-2001 in direct response to the Premier's Task Force on Infrastructure recommendations, several initiatives, including the north/south trade corridor, will receive accelerated funding. In fact, the task force recommendations have resulted in significant changes to the funding and management of highway systems. The changes will also have a major impact on the engineering and construction sectors in this province.

An additional $900 million is required over a three-year period to address these recommendations. The Alberta government is providing most of this additional money through the '99-2000 supplementary estimates and in the 2000-2001 fiscal year for several initiatives. The Alberta cities transportation partnership program will receive a $256.3 million investment. The cities of Calgary and Edmonton will receive funding based on the equivalent of 5 cents per litre of on-road fuel sold within each city. In fact, we just did a news release today on the signing of the agreement between the city of Calgary and Alberta Infrastructure. In total this represents an increase of $30 million per year for each city.

3:20

Other cities will continue to receive basic funding of approximately $60 per capita per year and will also be eligible for $50 million in supplemental funding on a project-specific basis. Rural municipalities will benefit from a $160 million investment and the new resource roads program introduced last April, and that will receive $34 million. Under the streets improvement program towns and villages will receive $60 million. This program has now been expanded to include hamlets.

In our ongoing commitment to develop the north/south trade corridor, $130 million will be invested in rural portions of the corridor, $10 million in upgrades to Calgary's Deerfoot, $15 million in Edmonton's southwest ring road, for a total of $155 million. This continues the government's commitment to accelerate funding of the north/south trade corridor until four-laning is substantially completed in the year 2007.

Now, primary highway construction will receive $147 million. The province will begin assuming responsibility for the construction, maintenance, and rehab of secondary highways as of April 1, 2000. The 2000-2001 estimates show an increase of $70 million from '99-2000, to $160 million, to cover the cost of all maintenance and construction for secondary highways. This results in significant savings to municipalities as they will no longer have to fund maintenance or their previous 25 percent share of secondary highway construction projects. As a point of interest, over the next three years the $900 million in transportation infrastructure funding resulting from the Premier's task force recommendation will create up to 13,500 person-years of work for Albertans.

Now, there are some other aspects of this year's estimates I would like to highlight. Pressure on other municipal infrastructure, such as waste and water treatment facilities, continues to be recognized in the 2000-2001 estimates with increased program funding of $29 million, which is $10 million more than last year. Compared to the '99-2000 budget, spending on health facilities has increased by $53 million, to $168 million, to address health infrastructure upgrading needs.

School funding allocations include $160 million for preservation and high-priority expansion to accommodate increased enrollments. Part of this allocation includes $40 million in block funding to school boards for minor preservation needs, $40 million for new facilities, $10 million for innovation funding, and $70 million for preservation and modernization.

The 2000-2001 estimate for postsecondary institutions is $47.4 million. This funding provides institutions with the flexibility to address present and future renovations and replacement needs as well as program expansions.

Seniors' lodges will be provided with $17.1 million to be used for the upgrading of 15 lodges and the start of designs for 12 additional lodges.

In 2000-2001 we have an ongoing commitment of $95.6 million for the operation and maintenance of government-owned facilities. Approximately $76 million has been allocated to the leasing and operation of private-sector facilities for government program use. We're also targeting revenues of $100 million from the sale of surplus properties over the next three years. It is expected that up to $35 million in property sales will be achieved this year. The 2000-2001 estimates reflect the use of this revenue.

Now, some of our ministry's other major initiatives, Mr. Chairman, are in transportation safety services. In consultation with stakeholders we continue to focus on generating a stronger awareness of the role Albertans play in traffic safety. Work on the regulations under the Traffic Safety Act will be completed. We'll continue with extensive public consultation as these regulations are developed. In 2000-2001 consultations will include discussions on graduated licensing, commercial vehicle equipment standards, and off-highway vehicles. We'll also be developing regulations in consultation with the railway industry and user groups prior to the proclamation of the Railway Act. The objective of this new act and regulations of course is to provide for the safe operation of railways under provincial jurisdiction.

In collaboration with school facilities stakeholder groups many of the recommendations of the School Facilities Task Force will be implemented this year in order to fulfill the government's commitment to improve capital funding practices.

Now, using teams of private-sector consultants, we have completed phase 1 of a complete facility audit of all schools in Alberta. Phase 1 completed 433 of 1,460 schools. We looked at the structural, mechanical, electrical, and building envelope, and when this audit is finished in the summer of 2000, we will have a condition inventory of all Alberta schools. We'll also be bringing forward a funding strategy to address the backlog of modernization and upgrading while addressing the requirement for new student spaces in the form of new schools.

We're recognizing that we need to continue being innovative and forward looking. Using a value-based focus, we're planning to look at new technologies and to review the ministry's processes as they affect our stakeholders and partners. We're reviewing roles and responsibilities in our relationship with these stakeholders, specifically with our consulting and contracting partners.

Alberta Infrastructure is committed to the economic prosperity and development of the province and Albertans, keeping up with the rapidly changing world around us. We continue to face many challenges as a result of economic and population growth pressures and the problems presented, of course, by an aging infrastructure. I believe the estimates for this year indicate that we have a renewed focus on infrastructure in this province. With the collaborative efforts of ministry staff, our partners, and our stakeholders we are addressing these challenges with creative and effective solutions that'll lead us successfully through the 21st century.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Now, certainly I'll be happy to answer any questions that may arise this afternoon. I'll try to answer them all, and those that I can't, I will respond to the members asking those questions as quickly as possible.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to focus on one part of the department's budget, and that of course is the money for new school construction. One of the fears with the creation of the department was that it would be divorced from the education needs of youngsters. I don't think it's been in operation long enough for any kind of a judgment to be made about that. One of the good things about moving school buildings to the Department of Infrastructure is that there is an opportunity to focus on communities and to look at the total infrastructure of a community, not just the school buildings in isolation. I hope it will be to the advantage of communities in this province when things settle down.

In the Speech from the Throne one of the sections was titled The Government Plan – Caring and Strong Communities. It's a theme that's carried throughout the throne speech, the notion that we all want to work for strong communities in this province, yet one of the regulations, one of this government's policies that is very, very destructive of communities is the utilization formula, the formula that's used to determine whether or not a school district or a community can build new schools. From one end of the province to the other the utilization formula, which has been used as an instrument to control school building costs, is tearing communities apart. Whether they be rural communities like Fairview and the Whitelaw school in the Peace River district or whether it be in the city of Calgary, it's having a very destructive impact on those communities. I think that if the Department of Infrastructure does nothing else this year, addressing that problem and sorting out the kinds of difficulties that it's imposing on citizens, it would have done a wonderful job.

3:30

I had a communication from parents in Calgary who are and have been for a number of years arguing that they need new schools, and they make a number of arguments in their request that their school board's plan for building $61 million worth of new schools next year be supported. One of the points that they make is that schools in urban areas, like rural areas, neighbourhood schools in particular, have a great deal to do with the strength of neighbourhoods. When you bus youngsters across a city, the opportunity for a neighbourhood to build some identity, to keep track of youngsters within that community is very, very much lessened and weakened. That is the place that Calgarians find themselves. Like Edmonton they have excess school space in a doughnut ring around the centre of the city and a very critical need for new space in the outlying areas.

One of the arguments they make is that school is more than a building, bricks and mortar, that it's an integral part of a community and community-building. When you apply the utilization rate to those cities, you dismiss all of those concerns. It becomes a formula that is very dictatorial and has nothing to do with the needs of a particular community.

The saddest part of the use of the formula is that it pits community against community, neighbour against neighbour. Certainly that cannot help in any way achieve the government's stated aims of building strong and caring communities. The utilization formula forces school boards to say, "Our utilization rate isn't at 85 percent," or whatever the magic number is at the moment, "and to get to 85 percent, we have to close a school in an older neighbourhood that has some vacant space if we want to build or open in a new area." So you have neighbours at each other's throats. "These neighbours who have a school that's half empty, why should they have a school? Here we are a new neighbourhood and we have enough children to fill two buildings and we don't have a school within walking distance." So the battles go back and forth.

The same thing in rural Alberta. You have schools in small communities, and it literally means the death of the community if that school dies. In the southern part of the province I've talked to school boards, and they admit that the enrollments are low, but again the impact of that building on the community is such that moves to close those small units are very, very destructive. I think the department has to come up with another way of looking at the problem, that it's much more comprehensive than what the utilization formula does.

The parents in Calgary made the point that there are many disadvantages of living in an urban area, but one of the advantages is having young children within walking distance of the school from their homes. As soon as you start busing children across the city, they lose that kind of intimacy that they value. I know that the argument's made: well, rural Albertans bus their children. But there's another set of values that rural Albertans have that many of them deem more important than having a neighbourhood school. Proximity of young children to their parents and to their homes is destroyed under the present application of the utilization formula.

The minister in his remarks mentioned the School Facilities Task Force in January 1998. That's two years old now. A couple of the recommendations in that report talked about looking at schools within a community context: the opportunity to have public health centres, youth drop-in centres, seniors' centres; that school buildings could be used for much more than housing a school program for a few hours in the day; that that would make a tremendous difference to their communities.

To their credit a number of years ago the government had a community school program. That was a program where schools could hire a community school co-ordinator who actively encouraged community groups to come into the school and use that facility. In their wisdom they discontinued that program, and I think it was an unwise decision, because everyone agreed that the community school program was successful. Why it was discontinued I'm still not sure I understand. I heard the argument that every school should be a community school, but that really doesn't wash.

Ontario's last royal commission report, For the Love of Learning, went even further than we did in Alberta and asked that there be a community co-ordinator appointed for each school and that that co-ordinator be charged with making sure that the school space was used by attracting into the building services for children like health and social assistance and really making those schools the heart of the community, that they can be.

The Calgary parents went on to make a number of other points. One of them is that there are no studies in terms of the costs. What does it cost to bus youngsters for 10 or 15 or 20 years out of a neighbourhood to a school in the inner city? It may be an operational cost that can be borne in a budget a year at a time. But over the long term, what are those costs? Do we have information showing that it would be wiser to bus for 20 years than to build a building?

One of the other questions that the utilization formula raises is: how long should a building be expected to pay for itself? How many thousands of graduates have to go through a building before it can be deemed to have done the task for which it was originally built? The whole notion of that utilization formula and the kinds of implications it has for community, for children, and for their school programs is one that I think really needs to be looked at very, very hard.

The Calgary public situation is classic. They have indicated that they need $61 million for new schools next year, and I think the minister said that his total budget was $40 million for new school construction. That's just Calgary. The same situation, as I said, prevails in Edmonton and in other parts of the province.

The parents end their note with the statement that Calgary children and the communities have been in the past number of years acting in good faith and trying to make things work, and now they feel they are justified in having the problem addressed and that the core of that problem is the utilization formula.

So with those comments, Mr. Chairman, I'd conclude. I know that the minister has made a number of comments about the audit that's under way. I'm not sure that the minister knows that of all the resources the province provides to school boards, the only resource they monitor to the extent that they do is buildings. They never go to a school board and say: look; you've got 3,000 teachers; show us that every one of those 3,000 teachers is working the five and a half or required number of hours each day. They don't monitor the activity of every teacher, but it seems that with buildings somehow or other a different mentality takes over, and that is that every inch of space should be counted.

I used to regret the amount of time I used to spend as a school trustee worrying about school buildings and where they were going to be built and where they weren't going to be built and how much better off youngsters in this province might be if all of that energy could be directed towards their programs and trying to make our schools better places academically and intellectually.

I really, really would urge and plead with the minister to take that utilization formula and replace it with something that makes sense, something that doesn't disrupt our communities and doesn't set citizen against citizen, because it does none of us a good service.

Thanks, Mr. Chairman.

3:40

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you. I'd like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods for recognizing the fact that there is real merit in concentrating all of infrastructure in one department. In fact, without a doubt the education ministry at that time had to not only concentrate on programming but also had to find dollars within the same budget for facilities. Now we will be able to focus directly on infrastructure in this department, on a good infrastructure management system, and the Minister of Learning will be responsible for the programming.

With respect to the comments on the focus of communities: exactly correct. We're trying to be as innovative as possible and to bring not only the municipality to the table but also the regional health authority, any of the seniors' groups, recreation authorities, and the school board. I know for a fact that because all of the responsibility is vested in one Ministry of Infrastructure, we have already on occasion heard from different groups from the same area coming to talk to me, but they have forgotten to talk to their neighbour, which could be the school board or the regional health authority. So this gives us an excellent opportunity to send them right back to the community and say: maybe you should talk to the mayor about your plans. It has worked to the advantage where now the stakeholders are back at the table sharing their plans of what they would like to do in the future. I know it will result in much better planned facilities.

I may be repeating myself, but I am very proud of the fact that in my own hometown of Andrew we have a multi-use facility, that was put together in the very late '80s, which includes not only the municipal town office but also the school. The library now is not only the school library, but it's also the public library. You can bring in volunteers in the evening. We have a good recreation facility attached to that. Not only do students use it, but so do members of the community, including seniors. There's one good example of that.

The hon. member was talking about the utilization formula. We definitely have accepted one of the 41 recommendations of the School Facilities Task Force to revisit that formula. At the present time there is a subcommittee of the School Facilities Task Force. The very distinguished Mr. George Nicholson is a member of that committee, and I know that he has many years of experience not only as a former educator/principal but also as a board member, presently serving as chair of the Edmonton public. We have ASBA and CASS represented. There's another group on the committee plus Alberta Infrastructure and Alberta Learning. I think we'll give them a little time. We said that we'd like to get the report back as soon as we can, hopefully early this spring but certainly June, so that we can start implementing some of their recommendations.

They will have a challenge, because they're going to have to find a balance between rural and urban school systems. They are different. I agree: when you're talking about closing a school in a community, many times it does take much of the life out of that community. We have to find that balance, then, as to when the public, the parents of those students, look at programming in terms of what programs are offered in the school or what is better for the student in terms of maybe a better program delivered a few miles down the road. They are very difficult questions to answer. As a former school trustee we went through some of those, and they're not very easy debates.

Now, I've met with members of the Calgary board of education. I've also met with many of the MLAs. We're encouraged by the renewed focus of the Calgary board of education to tackle this issue of underutilized schools, and I think that in conjunction with the lead project in Calgary plus the fact that the utilization subcommittee is meeting, we should have some good direction coming from that committee and see how we can settle the differences.

Underutilized schools in downtown Calgary, for instance. We're hearing a number of things: that property is valuable but it's also recognized as part of a green area, that there may be some historical significance to some of the schools. So there are things being played here other than just looking at a building and saying: well, you know, it's underutilized; it should vanish. I think this is the time for the municipality and maybe the private sector to step up to the plate and say: this building may be modified for another use; it might have some students, but part of that building may be used for another purpose.

I'm encouraged by the kind of dialogue we've had lately with the separate school system and the public school system and also encouraged by municipalities looking at their planning schedule and looking where they need recreation facilities and the realization: you know, perhaps we should share a mechanical room; we don't necessarily have to do our own thing; we can share. We certainly have the technology today to meter the water and the power in all of these facilities and attach the costs of those utilities to the user.

In Calgary, as well, we are working on a project where we have hired a former school superintendent to work with the municipality and also the private sector and to come forward with a few recommendations over and above what will be coming from the utilization committee. So I think we'll have a vast amount of information to then bring forward to this Assembly.

On the issue of buildings. A comment was made about the time we spent monitoring buildings. Perhaps in your opinion, hon. member, you may feel that we spend too much time monitoring buildings. On the other hand, there's huge room for improvement. School boards have used their own criteria to evaluate the condition of their buildings, using a whole myriad of consultants. This particular audit now will have very specific criteria applied to all buildings. We'll have the most extensive audit of school facilities, which will now allow us to plan further into the future in terms of, you know, the age of the school, what the condition is of much of the mechanical of the building envelope, and try and anticipate when dollars would have to go into that school and at what point. The preliminary estimates, of course, are not that inconsistent with the School Facilities Task Force, but once we complete all the schools, we will have a much better picture. That audit should be complete – you know, I'm anticipating this summer, but it should be in our hands by September. Then we will work with the ASBA and the ASTA to try and work out a plan.

I know from traveling to many of the schools in the short time that I've been in this ministry that there is room for improvement. There's room for improvement on our side as the infrastructure management. There's also room for improvement on behalf of the school boards, as well, for maintaining the buildings. One of the questions we'll be asking is: how do we get the best value for the taxpayer's dollar in terms of the building preservation? I know that there are some that have come to me and said: you know, there is room for improvement, and we want to work with you to try and find a way of ensuring, in terms of building quality restoration, some of the other preservation, and even the new construction, that what dollars we get go to the best use.

So I'm greatly encouraged by the support and the comments of Edmonton-Mill Woods and will review the Hansard to make sure that I haven't missed something in your earlier comments.

Thank you.

3:50

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm going to start off with some questions on this education item in Infrastructure just to try to bring out some other answers. It's interesting now, the blend of different programs that Infrastructure has in it. I know I'm going to probably be duplicating Learning questions and Municipal Affairs questions and whatever. But what I didn't hear from you, Mr. Minister, you not necessarily knowing because of not living in a big city, is if you believe that inner-city schools are very important to the connection. What I mean by that is that you can take a map – and I've gone to two different lectures on what is called “no new schools.” I even brought the chairman of the Catholic school board, whom I'll introduce today, to my Rotary Club. The whole title was: no new schools in Edmonton since 1994.

If you take a map of Edmonton and you take the geography of it, I do not have a school north of 153rd Avenue in my end of town. That means that children are traveling. You have parents that have a $300,000, $400,000 house on a lake site in one of my better areas, and they're being bused down to what are considered inner-city schools. That is a major, major phone call that I get through my door, and I don't blame them one iota, because there's an 80 percent turnover in those two schools that they're being bused to, and where the parents . . .

DR. WEST: You get hundreds of phone calls from those $300,000 houses.

MR. GIBBONS: If the hon. minister over there would ever like to have a talk on it, I'd like to talk to him and educate him about what happens in the city.

Talking about the geographical rings of the city, the inner-city schools are really meant for kids that do not necessarily have parents that even wake up with them in the morning to walk them two blocks to school. These children do not have parents or even any sibling that can get them there. But if they had to get out and ride an ETS bus to that school, chances are that they probably would never go to school. I look at the facts. If you take a look at the rings and you go to inner-city schools: keep them open wherever you can as a walk-to school. You get into the next area, and maybe the utilization of downtown might be 65 percent. The next area, the next ring out, might be a 70 percent utilization. You get out one more ring, and then you have the 100 percent utilization.

I'm looking at a hundred percent utilization; it just isn't cutting the mustard anymore. We have to build some schools. We look at the Minister of Justice's area. I do know that they've been trying hard to make the two school boards come together, but infrastructurewise they're not, and it's a major, major concern.

Getting on to the rest of the Infrastructure questions and what I was really going to relate to. Today our communities face a number of serious challenges, and we need leadership in this province so Alberta can move towards solutions in partnering with Alberta municipalities, whether they're urban or rural. There has been a complete lack of leadership. Today what I found on my desk just when I went back was the municipal 2000 program, which is a good program. I wasn't surprised at any of the communities that actually are noted in that municipal release, because each one of the issues I'm quite familiar with. A complete lack of leadership is absent in this province, and we'll not reach anywhere near our full potential until we do build partnerships with our local governments.

This government has been talking about a three-year plan in last year's budget but have actually only been handing out one-year dollars. I kind of wonder whether or not the minister or any other members here could operate one of their businesses, if they still have it, not knowing if any constant dollars are coming to them. AUMA and AAMDC were very happy to hear the three-year talk last year, but they also realized that a five-year is actually a better business plan, so I hope we do work toward that principle of five years and also some substantial funding. Stable funding is the major, major item that we should be asking for.

Instead of pointing our finger and fighting with another level of government – and this is the east against the west – the province needs to engage Albertans in a search for a new solution. As a province it is time to acknowledge our local governments as full, mature partners in building Alberta. The old view of municipalities as being the children of the province is totally out of touch with today's reality.

These are the challenges. How do we go forward? In my view, we need a new partnership between the province and the local governments based upon respect, fairness, and farsighted views of our future. To accomplish this, Mr. Minister – and that is actually related to both you and the Minister of Municipal Affairs – develop a comprehensive provincial/municipal agreement or charter that sets out each player's role, responsibility, and resources. Find the means of providing municipalities with primary access to the property tax base and other long-term, stable, progressive sources of revenue.

This is why a bill is coming forward – and I will have to monitor what I say on it – called the Provincial-Municipal Tax Sharing Calculation Act. Typically, because it's coming from our side and because it's the Leader of the Opposition's bill, it won't go very far. But I'm marketing that out there, and if nothing else, I hope the ministers will take it and build it into a future plan, a future bill, a future concept. Finding means so that our local municipalities can actually look and plan for the future instead of looking at the carrot wagging in front of their nose: that seems to have gone out with the old farmer attitude with their sons and so on.

The next one is to create an environment in which municipalities are totally accountable to their taxpayers for all sources of revenue and expenses to meet their core responsibility and engage in a long-range plan. That might take one or two years, but I believe that, with the size of this government, in building toward planning with each municipality you only have to do it once every few years, sitting down and actually playing a little bit of tough love but actually working out plans so these municipalities can actually plan, and patting them on the back when they are doing a good job, because throughout this province they are.

The government needs to move forward as a leader in developing a framework to design and treat local governments equally, to improve lines of accountability, to respect local autonomy in decision-making, to increase co-operation, and most importantly to provide, as I mentioned before, stable and predictable funding to local governments. The time for planning properly – and I've said this a number of times to a lot of people. It's no different than if your business is working well, and when the province is doing as well as they are now, I would suggest that it is time now to plan properly. It's the same old item. In the 1997 election it was quite easy to point out that there was no plan by this government, and from my end of town people really bought into that. You could have taken it at that particular time and really built a plan.

Some of the concerns that I've heard throughout the province – and these are just highlights of the typical meeting I go to. The number one concern is downloading. The second one is being treated like a child of the province. Lack of respect is the third item, from the government MLAs who come from a local government background. Fourth, which is actually probably moving right up after number one now, is infrastructure concerns, and where are they going to be planning? Education tax: well, if we keep tinkering for the next few years, we might come up with the right tinker.

Secondary roads were mentioned before. When they got dumped back out there a few years ago, everybody had to recoup and figure out how they were going to do it all of a sudden. Now, I do know you took the pressures, and this is your reaction to the pressures that were actually there. For those that did do a good job out there, I hope you are going out and letting them be part of the tendering factor, and hopefully they can be part of the overall managing of the roads that they know so much better.

4:00

I look at how you contract highway 1 and I look at grading. When you don't grade down the side of a ditch, then the wind starts blowing and you've got all that snow coming over top, so it just lands on the other side. That's the same type of thing: if the local person knows how to grade the road. It's no different than the ridiculous job the city of Edmonton does in the land given to them in northeast Edmonton by the province in the early '80s. The city of Edmonton absolutely do not have a clue how to grade a road outside of grading something inside the city. That's the major complaint I have in my own constituency, the rural side of it anyway.

Loss of tax base to the towns; that is, losing the grain elevators. I continually talk out in the rural area – you know, there was this pointing of fingers out there before when the elevators' tax base went to the town and not to the municipality. Now it's the opposite way around. I hope you teach co-operation and working together.

Seniors' housing: insufficient; backlogs; talking about mega-centres. My brain thinks of saving dollars all the time; I believe in 62 units versus the 20 units. Hopefully we move very slowly as we strip our small towns of these different things, different seniors' lodgings and so on, because it's one of the last of the threads that are actually holding them together.

Community housing. What department is in charge? Well, we know that it has been put over into the community now, but it's still under Infrastructure. In your department, Mr. Minister, I do hope that we are looking at the homeless throughout the province. This is a case where I do know we were part of a study conducted under Minister Bradshaw of the federal government. I was happy when finally there was some communication that happened a number of months later, but it's not far enough. I hope we do build a partnership between the province and the federal government and that this doesn't get lost.

I guess under Infrastructure fall a lot of different things. By pushing amalgamations in certain areas, it might work; it might not work. We look throughout the province, where we've got the Edmonton capital region. We have the MD of Mackenzie and the problems we had up there last year. We have Lacombe, Rainbow Lake, Fort Vermilion, the MD of Peace River, a combination of Nampa, Peace River, and Grimshaw. I hope we handled that one to everybody's liking.

I'll move along to talking about other items. When faced with pressures of growth, can cities like Calgary and other municipalities across the province continue to rely on a system of provincial grants that have been proven to be unstable and uncertain? We need to build more consistently, more stably, more looking into the future. Hopefully, once we get past the next election, when we quit buying the next vote, we can actually maybe sit down and look at that. Is there a better funding approach that would allow our municipalities to meet their roles and responsibilities more responsibly? That's why I am very proud that our Leader of the Official Opposition, my leader, is actually carrying a bill forward that I am very passionate about, and when you give up a spot to a leader, that means a lot on this side.

We believe the time has come to seriously consider revenue sharing, and this bill hopefully will enlighten some people, because provinces like Manitoba have gone to a system playing with this. I didn't totally take to their system, but I did read it, and I kind of feel there's a bit of this happening around the Vancouver area, around the amalgamation of the larger centres, a kind of sharing, looking at how they can use the revenue sharing. Tying the transfer to specific sources of revenue such as personal income tax could reduce the fiscal vulnerability arising from uncertainty over the future grant levels, particularly in the onetime grant program in Infrastructure. Revenue sharing would also give local governments access to sources of revenue that have grown in proportion with the economy.

We had a question from the Member for Fort McMurray today about growth, and we can see that in other areas. Tremendous growth like that really goes back to your department, of how you plan your schools, how you help them cope with that. I do know Edmonton can complain about the education tax. In the next couple of years they're going to see the same kind of growth that other areas have been witnessing, and I hope by that time we have a plan for that.

The Official Opposition believes that the revenue sharing will improve financial planning capabilities for municipalities, giving them enhanced ability to meet their priorities in accordance with their roles and responsibilities.

I can actually go on and talk about a lot of things, but I do believe that I did ask questions and I did get partial answers, not a lot of answers, when I asked questions around the fuel tax. I do know that we were asking questions a year ago at this time, and there was no real answer from your department, Mr. Minister, but then it went ahead. You know, the politicians in Calgary at the civic level were very passionate about this, and I do believe that it's a step.

The biggest complaint I have in and around Edmonton is that one minute you talk capital region, the next minute you talk co-operation, alliance, whatever, but the whole area didn't benefit from the fuel tax in that. So I do hope there are some plans being placed. I do know that I appreciate the capital investment study that was put on, that I FOIPed last year and questioned, and I surprised the Premier of the province that there was such a study. But this is the way we move forward. We keep planning, we keep investigating, and hopefully this particular government will take some of these suggestions out of the capital investment plan.

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

I'm going to sit down and listen to the minister's answers or wait for his answers – it doesn't have to come right now – and let some other members speak.

Thank you, Madam Chairman.

MR. STELMACH: Considering that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning would like to have some answers, I'll take this opportunity. He began by talking about schools and how important schools are, and I think I've covered most of that in my comments earlier to Edmonton-Mill Woods. However, when we start talking about parents and who takes care of the children, I will say that that's out of my responsibility. Maybe bring those questions to either Human Resources or to the Minister of Learning. If what I hear is true, then we would have to look at what kind of transportation system is in the city of Edmonton to transport students from their homes over to the school.

You also put on the table the very same question we've been asking. The development plans were put in place years ahead, and the people buying those expensive homes or building those expensive homes know full well where those students are going to be going to school. Now, we're trying to take the pressure off by at least looking at K to 3, a starter school, being as close as possible to the community, but for junior high and high school they may have to travel farther because of the intensity of the program. I believe that over the next few months we'll find some balance on that.

I just wanted to make one comment with the busing. There are many school districts in the province of Alberta and certainly in this country of Canada where the students are busing two hours one way to school. That's in rural Alberta, but you know, it's a fact of life.

So people do make that choice as to where they decide to live, and I know we won't be able to provide the infrastructure for a 20-minute walk to school in all cases.

4:10

It's very interesting, because when I was in Calgary, there was also a difference of opinion. It seems some parents would like to see their child step on the bus right in front of their house and know that they'll be safe going right to the school. The school board takes over the responsibility right as soon as that student gets onto the bus and has that responsibility until they step off the bus in front of their own house. Again, I think the only thing we're looking at is the time spent on the bus, but just because they ride the bus is not necessarily wrong. Some parents actually take great comfort in the fact that their children are safe as soon as they leave the house.

I believe the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning commended us, because he said that there's an absence of complete lack of leadership. So there must be considerable leadership there, because you can't have an absence of complete lack of leadership. Maybe it's just a play on words, but let me give examples of some of the leadership.

In terms of stable funding, I recall in this House, when the business plans were first brought forward, the issue of three-year rollout. Well, there was some disagreement especially from members on the other side, because, boy, that's sure a new policy, and how can you predict some of the changes in the growth of the economy? How are municipalities going to predict, et cetera? Well, you're right. I can give you one very quick example of how quickly the growth is occurring in the province. In the city of Calgary they were predicting one and a half million people by the year 2020. Now, at this rate of growth and if it continues, there will be a million people by 2007. So that's how quickly we have to adapt in Infrastructure to provide and ensure that there are dollars available to cover some of the infrastructure needs.

With respect to the comments made on the role of municipalities and revenue sharing, I'll leave that to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, but at the end of the day there's only one taxpayer. There's only one taxpayer, so we have to ensure, for every dollar that's invested in whatever program, that we get the most value for it. We believe that municipalities are making good decisions with respect to the funding they receive, and that's why they're getting the kind of cash injections that they are. I mean, we're front-ending three years of dollars for the municipalities, so I think we have great confidence in their abilities. It will enable them to do a thorough plan, to review and decide what these dollars will go into: LRT, some of the improvements to the various road projects within the municipalities. In addition, the fact that we are going to be taking over the Deerfoot and the ring road around Edmonton enhances their financial position as well, because we'll be assuming full responsibility.

With respect to secondaries, yes, in the beginning of the early '90s we had to find ways of maintaining the kind of road infrastructure that was necessary to move goods and services. Municipalities at that time agreed to cost share 25 percent for the maintenance and the preservation of those roads. Now, in saying that we dumped that responsibility on them and then took it back and we're leaving the municipalities, it's interesting to note that some municipalities did not want to give up their secondaries. They actually wanted to pay the 25 percent.

So the bottom line here is that it's very difficult to satisfy every municipality in terms of the kind of policy, but the reason we're looking at assuming the responsibility for secondaries is much greater than the relationship with municipalities. It's to have a provincial highway network system that is consistently maintained and also consistently regulated so we don't have a mixture of road bans across this province, because the truck traffic will increase. I've used this comment before, but I'll use it again: if someone is leaving the city of Edmonton with a load of pipe and they get on 831 – just one road I'm very familiar with, at Lamont – their road ban could be 90 percent. They get into Smoky Lake and it could be 85 percent. Thorhild could be a different level, and so could the county of Athabasca. This way it'll be monitored and it will be consistent.

Grain elevators. There has been a large growth of high-output grain elevators throughout the province. Many of these were built on sites where neither the municipality nor the provincial government had any idea they would be placed. Some of them, quite frankly, are placed on secondary roads or primary highways. However, many are not, and we have to also monitor now the kinds of traffic flows that will be going to those elevators.

Now, the closure of the small elevators. We cannot hope to remain competitive, more in a global marketplace, moving raw product to market and looking at including small elevators where in a day they might load three cars when on a good day in a high throughput elevator in an eight-hour period they'd load 100, 102, and some are loading as many as 116 cars. So in terms of the kind of infrastructure commitment made by the private-sector grain companies, I commend them for that, because they're certainly stretching their neck out. Where the system falls apart is that we can't get the railcar to port and back, because that's where the highest cost, the most inefficiency occurs in any system, compared to those countries that we compete against for the market.

There's no reason why, when you load cars in Alberta, it takes as many as 21 days to get them back. It's another very good example of where the federal government has deregulated the Crow rate – and at one time, I'd like to remind everyone here, there was $8 billion on the table, and a couple of the provinces, not Alberta, couldn't agree on who should receive the payment, the railway or the producer. As a result, when that money was on the table as $8 billion, there was a change in the federal government, and all of a sudden they came up with a paltry payment of $1.6 billion: here; take it.

Now, even further to that – I can even go on – the federal government has rewarded those very same provinces that were sitting and not coming to an agreement by a further payment in compensation for the Crow rate and forgetting Alberta again. I really don't know how that particular policy is going to lead to greater efficiency, but I do know for a fact that we will be miles ahead – pardon the pun – of the other provinces in terms of the road infrastructure, and we will be able to move those goods to market.

Where we're going to have to create change is to ensure that the responsibility of the Canadian Wheat Board goes to the port. Their main responsibility is to sell the product, to create the sale and then put out a tender for the quantity of grain they have sold to the grain companies. Then those grain companies will put pressure on the railway companies to get that grain to port and loaded on a ship.

I don't know how many members in this Legislature realize that in the country of Canada today 82 percent of the ships that come to load grain load at multiple berths. Do you know of any other country where that happens? No. This is year 2000. We have computers, we've got all kinds of information equipment, but nobody wants to change the status quo, and at the end of the day it's the farmer that pays the cost. He has no way of influencing efficiency and no way of pointing fingers at those individuals, whether it be grain companies, the railway, or the Canadian Wheat Board, that are not accountable and efficient.

4:20

So that's where we are in the province of Alberta in terms of grain transportation, and that's why the north/south trade corridor is so important. Now we will be peeling apart that kernel of wheat. We'll be taking out the wheat gluten, the bran, the flour, and also the ethanol, and that will be going south, because those countries that are waiting for or want to buy the grain can't afford to pay the price that we need to sustain the farm, and the traditional marketplaces, like China, now have a surplus of wheat, so why would we be sending them more wheat? If we did send them the wheat germ or the wheat gluten, I'm quite sure they could add that high-protein product to their low-protein wheat and create a better product. Plus you're shipping a high-value product at less tonnage, so you're getting more dollars for it.

Currently the policy doesn't support that, and we're looking for some leadership from the federal government and from the Canadian Wheat Board, because our position is very clear and it's on the table. I hope that we do resolve it, because there isn't enough money in the Treasury, not in Alberta's Treasury and certainly not in the federal government Treasury, to compensate farmers every year for the kind of violation of efficiencies that we could reach in this country.

Now, there was a comment made with respect to Infrastructure and working with the federal government. We'll be glad to work with them. The main thing is that our position is that it's got to be hard infrastructure. It's got to be either roads or what's under those roads, and that's sewers and water lines. No more Zambonis. That's got to be very clear.

Further to that, we will be watching the negotiations very carefully, because this first hundred million dollars is supposed to go to planning. We know where we need the roads and where we need infrastructure. We don't have to spend a hundred million to do the planning; we can put that hundred million directly into the ground. But watch very carefully. What might be coming out of Ottawa is taking the $2.65 billion less the hundred million for planning and block funding every province instead of doing it on a population base. With 10 percent of the population, our fair share out of that should be $265 million. We will wait till 2006, when this plan actually does take effect, to see how much of that $2.65 billion will actually come to Alberta.

With respect to the increased commitment of dollars for roads, those roads are very important to move goods and services. Those goods and services that we transport and convey on roads create wealth, and we tax that wealth to pay for social programs like health and education. So you've got to get your product to market. If you don't get it to market, you don't create a sale. If you don't create a sale, you don't create any wealth. I would hope that the Assembly agrees that the investment in road infrastructure is very important and will lead to further growth in the wealth of this province.

Questions on fuel tax. Well, we collect about $550 million in the province. It all goes back into road infrastructure. We've actually just about doubled what's going into road infrastructure. Our position is that if we're taxing fuel, you're burning that fuel on the road and that money should go back into roads, because you don't wear out a road idling your car in the garage. You've got to use a road; okay?

Now, with respect to the fuel tax, we send roughly $600 million to Ottawa. It'll be more this year because of the 7 percent GST. We won't talk about that particular program, but there's a considerable difference in the GST paid on 40 cents a litre fuel than on 68 cents. It would be interesting how much of that new growth in revenue is going to go into some sort of an infrastructure plan but should go directly into highways. What we're hearing now from the federal government – and it's not to point fingers. I had a very good working relationship with the federal minister of agriculture when I was in the ministry of agriculture, and I'm quite sure we'll have a good working relationship here. Except that if it's fuel tax, it should be going to roads. If you're not going to put it into roads, I suggest: just don't tax it. Give us that room, or just don't tax it. That in itself will create more room for the consumer to invest in whatever goods and services they want, which will again lead to further growth in the economy.

I believe I've answered most, but once again we'll review the Hansard, and if there's anything that I've missed from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, we'll certainly get back to him.

The 5 cents a litre equivalency to the cities of Edmonton and Calgary. I think it's an example of a visionary plan, of thinking out of the box in terms of taking some of the fuel tax that we collect in this province. Yes, there is risk. There's risk to those two cities, and they have certainly recognized that. On the other hand, we've also recognized the risk on our side. I think it will now lead to better co-operation between the cities of Edmonton and Calgary and the government, and I'm looking for really positive things to happen.

I know that in Edmonton and in Calgary and in every corner of this province over the next three years you're going to be passing construction sites on every corner. In fact, we're going to see more construction in this province than ever before; as I mentioned before, 13,500 man-hours of work. We're now going to benefit because of the stability in the funding from other contractors in other provinces looking to move their equipment to the province of Alberta because they now have an opportunity to tender on some of the projects that'll be ongoing. As a result, that in itself will lead to lower tender prices, which again will convert into more projects in the province of Alberta.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks, Madam Chairman. Well, interesting discussion so far. A couple of things I want to make note of, and I have some questions for the minister. I'll preface my comments by saying that I've always appreciated this minister's candour and willingness to answer questions, and I think he has distinguished himself from some of his colleagues, in fact, except when it comes to the federal government, in which case there seems to be a consistent theme on the government front bench.

You know, we look at the last comments about the fuel tax, for example, and how much is going to Ottawa and how much is going into the roads and the advice to the federal government about what they ought to do with that revenue. I'm looking at the minister's consolidated income statement, and I don't see any revenue line item that says: here's the dedicated revenue from the provincial fuel tax collected that's going into infrastructure or roads. In fact, the truth is that it's a policy decision of the government. They collect it all, it goes into general revenue, and then cabinet gets together and decides where the money is going to be spent.

Now, I'm not going to diminish the commitment that this government has made to road paving. In fact, some would say that some governments in the past in this province have made a big political deal out of road paving and have made promises about how many roads they're going to pave and build and construct. But I do think it's kind of disingenuous to say, "Well, the feds ought to dedicate all this revenue to one thing, and we're going to make sure that they do," when in fact we don't see that advice being taken here.

While I'm looking at the minister's consolidated income statement, I'd also like to make reference to the line item that is calling for over 13 and a half million dollars' worth of revenue coming from premiums, fees, and licences. I would appreciate the minister's commentary on what impact the review of premiums, fees, and licences will have on these projections and whether or not he's satisfied that he has cost-of-service data. It's on the consolidated income statement under revenue. It's a stand-alone line item. It's on page 182, Mr. Minister, of the Alberta budget book and business plans. It's the consolidated statement. I can find you the reference in your budget plan if you want, but it's pretty straightforward. It's $13,588,000 as projected income from premiums, fees, and licences.

4:30

My questions are: have you done the analysis, and in looking at the province's own reviews, are you satisfied that you have supportable cost-of-service data on every one of those premiums, fees, and licences so that we know, particularly when it comes to the fees and premiums that are extracted from Albertans when it comes to sliding scales, there is a relationship between the cost and the fee or the licence or the premium? It seems to me that's still a pretty high watermark. Just for information, before Eurig, before the analysis, before we were officially concerned that there has to be a relationship between the cost of the service and the fee, last year's comparable forecast was $14.4 million. So it's come down about $900,000, and I guess the more specific question now is: is that because of decreased activity, or is it because of a rollback in fees, or is it a combination of the two? Is the rollback related to the cost-of-service issue?

The minister also made some reference to when the three-year business plans were first rolled out – I guess it would have been back in '93 – and was suggesting that he remembers the opposition saying: oh, well, that's kind of dangerous, and how can you forecast? I'm paraphrasing, but I think his point was that there was criticism coming from the opposition about three-year business plans. I'm not sure that I heard that same criticism. I mean, what I remember hearing about three-year business plans was a demand from the Official Opposition. In fact, a big part of the 1993 general election campaign, from both the Conservative and the Liberal parties, had to do with accountability and value for money spent. I seem to recall not only a demand for value-for-money auditing but also for careful business planning and projecting.

In fact, if there were any criticisms that I recall coming from the Official Opposition when it came to the three-year business plans, it was that they didn't go far enough, that we didn't have good performance measures, that we didn't have good criteria for the business plans, that we didn't have appropriate approval measures, that we didn't have targets and goals set to expenditure levels. More recently of course, Mr. Minister, as you know because you've heard me say it in this House so many times, the Official Opposition is now calling on the government to roll out 10-year forecasts when it comes to budgeting issues. So we're certainly not critical of the three-year business plans per se. What we're critical of is their presentation and how they're being used or not used by the government as real planning tools.

Now, along those lines I'd like to focus my questions on the minister's business plan as presented to the Chamber. Let me say another nice thing, because sometimes we get criticized for only complaining. I happen to be probably one of the few Albertans that have read this particular budget plan book cover to cover. I did that for many reasons, but one of the major reasons why I did that is that I'm always curious to see whether or not there is agreement across all the government departments in the presentation of the performance measures and the goals in the business plans. There isn't. In fact, some departments – and it doesn't matter which ones they are now, because I referred to them specifically in their own estimates – are abysmally poor when it comes to presenting particularly the performance measures, the accountability structures in their business plan.

That is not the case with Infrastructure. In fact, your performance measures are well presented. They are for the most part clear measures, although I have some quibbles with some that I'll get to in a minute. They appropriately give us both a little bit of history and project into the future across the business planning cycle, which is what they're supposed to do. So I want to thank the minister – I think it's consistent with his character of being as forthright as he can – for having performance measures in his business plan presented in this way. It makes it easy to read and to understand and then to appropriately query or provide some suggestions where they could be improved.

When I look at goal 1, improving transportation safety, there is no traffic safety measure yet, and I'll give the minister the benefit of the doubt in terms of developing this new measure. Over the course of the year, though, what I would ask the minister to do as this measure is being developed is to share with the Assembly, perhaps through correspondence or tablings in the House, what the trial balloons are. I don't mean that in any kind of a negative way. You know, as you're developing that measure, it would be very interesting to see the evidence and the thinking as it progresses, who you're testing it out against, what other measures from other jurisdictions are being considered.

Now, the mechanical safety of commercial vehicles measure is also kind of interesting. "This measure is defined as the percentage of commercial vehicles that are rendered out-of-service." It's based on roadside checks. If I take a look at this, at first blush it is a remarkably stable measure. Between 1998 and the end of the planning period, by the end of fiscal year 2003, there will have been hardly any measurable variation in the results or the target when it comes to either the percentage of vehicles rendered out-of-service requiring minor adjustments or the percentage out-of-service requiring mechanics' attention.

The difficulty I have with this measure is that I have no idea whether it's a good or a bad thing. Is 25 percent of vehicles inspected and taken out of service a good or a bad thing? How does it compare to other jurisdictions? What it means is that 25 percent of vehicles require minor repairs when they're inspected and 5 percent require mechanical service. That's nearly fully a third of commercial vehicles that in some measure aren't safe on the streets and the highways of Alberta. I guess I would just feel better if the measure was comparative against other jurisdictions and gave us some sense of whether or not this was an acceptable level of faulty commercial vehicles. It's one thing to say that the target is consistent, but is that okay? I guess I would argue that having nearly a third of commercial vehicles unsafe on the roads in Alberta is not okay, and I would be very anxious to hear the minister's remarks as to what he proposes should be done about it, unless the minister is going to make the argument that it's an acceptable level.

The next performance measure under goal 2 has to do with the integrated infrastructure planning. The performance measure is "progress on the collection of facility condition information." What it says is that the ministry will collect condition information on all ministry-owned buildings over 1,000 square metres. Well, okay. The target for 2000-2001 is that 89 percent of data will be collected. The target last year was 77 percent. I don't know how close we came to achieving it, because it doesn't tell us, but the target for 2001-2002 is 100 percent. So I'm assuming that there is a backlog or that this is a new process and that there is an inventory of buildings and a roster and a list. I'm just curious. You know, we went from 60 percent in '98-99 to 77 percent, so we managed to audit 17 percent of buildings, and then we're going to go up by 12 percent in 2000-2001. Well, we can do 17 percent, apparently, between '98 and '99-2000. Why couldn't we do the same, 17 percent, again? How was the 89 percent target arrived at? I guess that's the essential question.

4:40

Now, the performance measure under goal 3, which is to "work with partners to provide quality infrastructure," has to do with

"progress on completion of major water management construction project." I am aware that some of these, like the St. Mary dam spillway replacement, will be completed over the next fiscal year, but one that I wanted to ask about is the South Heart River dam project. I see that the completion rate is 50 percent for this fiscal year and another 50 percent for the subsequent fiscal year. I may be wrong, but I thought that was a three-year construction project. So please correct my understanding. I thought when that was announced, it was announced as a three-year initiative, but we only have, apparently, construction goals over two years. I'd appreciate some comment on that.

The next one has to do with seniors' lodges, and there has already been some discussion on seniors' lodges. Now, the performance measure has to do with all 121 seniors' lodges, and it's "seniors' lodge upgrading projects completed." The target is another one of these targets that I guess is okay as far as it goes, but the concern I have is that I don't believe it actually gives a very worthwhile measure. I'll explain to you what I mean. The business plan target for 2000-2001 calls for 90 of the upgrading projects – 90 out of the 120, I'm assuming – to have been completed. Well, that's fine, but wouldn't a more reasonable measure be: what percentage of lodges have been upgraded to meet a set of independent standards?

In other words, will a lodge get a check mark as being a completed upgrading project if it gets a new roof but also needed a new kitchen and also needed new electrical services and also needed new flooring in the common areas? I mean, is the upgrading project simply seen as achieved and a mission accomplished when it's upgraded on one of the deficiencies? My understanding is that the seniors' lodges across the province have a laundry list as long as the floor in this room of the things that they need. Given that priorities have to be managed, not all of their deficiencies are going to be addressed at the same time, but this performance measure doesn't capture any of that. It would lead a casual observer to conclude that because it got a check mark as a completed project, all of the issues in that lodge have been taken care of.

The next performance measure that I want to talk about is one under goal 4, "improve the management of provincial transportation infrastructure." In particular, I want to look at the highway pavement condition. Now, this is a measure that apparently will be "an indicator of riding comfort for the traveling public on highways under provincial jurisdiction," and it uses a measure referred to as the IRI, the international roughness index. First of all, I'd like to know whether or not they've set the standards for the IRI in the springtime in northern Alberta. I have a feeling that if they did, with the potholes it would blow their scale right off the meter. I'm talking about the IRI and whether or not they take the measure in the springtime.

The measure also makes note that "by sustaining pavement quality through regular rehabilitation, the total life cycle cost of the highway system will be reduced." Now, the minister got into a little bit of hot water with the press, I think, by making some comments about how highway pavement life could be extended. I don't want to go back there, but I am a little curious about this particular measure. The national highway system average under the IRI measure for highways is described here as a numerical expression, and then it says: other highways' average IRI. Now, when I take a look at this and I compare it to the table that explains the chart, what it says is that if you have a roughness rating of 1.50 to 1.89 on a national highway, it's only "fair." If you take a look at all of the ratings from '98 through to 2000-2003, they're all in the "fair" category. Now, the other highways' average IRI says that if you have a rating of between 1.5 and 2.69, you're also just fair. All of the other highways are also in that just fair portion. So what this tells me, again, is that we don't really have a measure that tells us about targets for planning for the future. What it tells me is that we're satisfied that our highway system in this province, according to this international measure, will just be fair.

In fact, there's been very little movement. Unfortunately, the only movement that there appears to be is downward movement on the IRI scale. It doesn't look as though there's been any tremendous improvement, in other words, when it comes to the riding comfort. Again, this is a measure that gives us a picture of what exists, but it doesn't give us any value around that reality. Are we comfortable, no pun intended, with this level on the IRI scale, or should we be doing more about it to improve the conditions of our highways?

Now, the other question that I have has to do with the lack of performance measures under goal 7, which is to "create a value-added organization." The performance measure is a client satisfaction measure. What it says is:

This measure is under development. Data will be collected and reported once a consolidated strategy for measuring client satisfaction is developed.

Well, I guess my concern here, Mr. Minister, is that this is where I would have thought you would have started. With a goal that says that we're going to "create a value-added organization," it seems to me that that's exactly where you would start and that's how you would sort of decide what it is the rest of your business plan is going to look like.

While I was willing certainly to give you the benefit of the doubt on these other new areas, these new initiatives that require performance measures, I'm a little more reluctant to provide that same benefit when it comes to this area. I would like to encourage you quickly to develop an array of performance measures so that we can gain a better picture of what is meant in your department when it comes to creating a value-added organization.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. I'm aware of the great interest of my colleagues in getting an opportunity to get up and ask questions, and I thank the minister for his willingness to allow a tag team to happen here and for him to respond to the two inquiries at the same time.

There are really just three categories that I want to talk about here today. The first one. I'm reminded of the Premier talking about Alberta as a house and the mortgage and all of that kind of stuff. What keeps coming back to me is that as any homeowner knows, you have ongoing maintenance costs, and you have to take care of those ongoing maintenance costs on a regular basis. In some cases for the big-ticket items you've got to save money or put money aside or plan for it in some way, so it's a planning function and it's a saving function.

I've been looking through my Auditor General's report for the exact reference. I'm sorry that I haven't been able to find it, but I know that the Auditor General had pointed out that we have to be able to have a reasonable planning process and a reasonable injection of money or money available to follow that planning process to maintain the infrastructure in the province. To sort of cut everything back and perhaps even not put money in for a year or two costs us eventually and may in fact cost us more than if we had done the regular, ongoing maintenance. In many cases we know that these buildings exist, we know the highways exist, and we know there has to be maintenance going into it. There's no surprise here. So I have questions about management and planning skills and getting enough money to actually look after the maintenance requirements.

4:50

I'm going to talk specifically about the schools in Edmonton-Centre. Now, those are classed as inner-city schools, and there are a couple of issues going on there. One is around this utilization formula. I think that with one exception all of my schools are very old schools. They're definitely older than 35 years old. These are great old three-storey brick or stone buildings, much larger than we would ever build today. I have to say: at what point do you stop adding these into this utilization formula? I think it's creating an inequity and not through their fault. Yet when we look at the utilization formula, there is always a call for: well, let's get rid of the inner-city schools.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

When we look at other important things in Alberta like communities, like quality of life – and certainly we in Edmonton learned that lesson very well when everyone shrugged and said: it doesn't matter if nobody goes downtown; who cares? We did find out that it matters very much if people go downtown, because it cost a lot of business, affected the vandalism rate, crime, all kinds of things. So eventually we learned that you want a vital downtown with people in it, with people living there, people moving about in their daily lives, not just this place that vacates at 4:30 and the sidewalks get rolled up.

I do question including older schools in the utilization formula. A specific question for the minister. There used to be a regulation or a proviso or something that said that if the school was more than 35 years old, then it wouldn't be included in the utilization formula. I'm wondering if that is still in place. I suspect that it's not in place, and I would like to know if the minister would consider reinstating that.

As well, I think we have to be careful that in the rush to economize in the short term, we don't take away possibilities and flexibilities that in fact have a big payoff for us in the long term. A couple of examples of that. I know that the school boards were being pressured to sell off some of the school buildings they had where the schools weren't being used anymore, where they'd stopped running classrooms in the schools. The Edmonton school board, to give them credit, had been pretty adamant in hanging onto those schools and finding other things to do with them. In the long term we ended up with places like the Bennett environmental centre, which is a great asset to schoolchildren and educational endeavours all across the province, and McKay Avenue school, with the city of Edmonton school board archives in it. The Edmonton school board was exactly right to have resisted the pressure from the government to sell off those buildings.

Another example is Victoria school. You know, it was an inner-city school. Enrollment was declining, with pressure to dump the school, sell it off, get rid of it. The school board was able to maintain it partly by locating the Centre for Education, the head office essentially, next door to it and committing to keeping that school viable. Well, look what happened. Because it was available and there was commitment to it, we ended up with the special fine arts school operating out of that high school, and now in fact it is K to 12. It's become a very vital part of that community and has revitalized the area around it and, because of the uniqueness of the program, draws students from all across the city and in some cases, I think, the province.

Those are sort of the two points I wanted to raise about the infrastructure and planning and maintenance.

The last thing. A couple of these old schools in my constituency have acquired, through diligence, very hard work, creativity, and even ingenuity on behalf of the staff, the money to do the much-needed renovations. But we still have schools in which – I mean, I am shocked at the state that some of these schools are in. Victoria school is an example. I was there for an event I think it was in the fall, about six months ago, and as I left the school, I was looking at the side of the building. Great big hunks of concrete or plaster or whatever it was made of were just falling off the building. I wondered to myself: isn't this a safety problem? I'm sure it is. I've heard other stories about windows coming out, falling out of the building, happily, rather than falling in on the class.

I really look to the minister to be able to plan in a way that has regular, ongoing maintenance for our schools and not to let them get to the point where we either have to abandon them because they're in such crappy shape or where they could be causing some harm to the students. The point is that it's about good planning. It's about constant maintenance. Maybe that's drilled into my head because I'm the daughter of a man who was involved in the trades for so much of his life and his insistence that you treat your car and the equipment you work with properly, that you always maintain it on a regular schedule, not just when you think it might need it. Maybe that's why I think that way about this, but I think it's important.

Now, I'm going to go on to something else, and that's seniors. One of the issues that I am really concerned about in my constituency is around West Edmonton Seniors and what has happened with their location in the General hospital. This is an organization that provides invaluable service in my constituency and in fact beyond the constituency. It gets seniors out of their homes, gets them out into a different location and active. They have all kinds of classes, physical classes. I cohost a Christmas celebration with them, and we have tap-dancing displays and clogging and ballroom dancing. The activity level is tremendous. Those seniors are in far better shape than I am. This is a good thing. This is preventative health care. This is saving us money, a lot of it. They also offer nutrition, and they have guest speakers in. They have an outreach program.

Now, they do get some funding through Alberta Health for the outreach program but nothing for the rest of it. They're trying to raise the money to keep themselves going here. They started out in 1998 paying about $341 for their rent, plus housekeeping charges and the telephone, that sort of thing. Then it went up to just over a thousand bucks in 1999. As of the first of January, because of the negotiations and the changes in the Capital regional health authority being responsible for the General hospital site, these guys are now being asked to pay 4,200 and some odd dollars a month. Where are they supposed to come up with that money? They don't get any assistance from the government. As many times as I sweet-talked the Minister of Community Development, I cannot get him to agree to put funding in for seniors' centres.

You know, the idea of a user fee that could come up with that kind of money every month is simply beyond the means of the seniors that live in that area and the seniors that use that facility. So I'm asking the minister to please, please work immediately on resolving this situation. As I understand it, I think it's because the Capital regional health authority is needing to make income from the space that they are responsible for there. If it's possible for the minister to be perhaps taking back responsibility for the section of the building that West Edmonton Seniors is in and being able to work out a more reasonable rent, that is the kind of partnership and leadership that I'm looking for from this government.

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

We're already into this year. West Edmonton Seniors has been on the hook for a long time. It's been writing to the government for a long time. I shouldn't have to get up here and hassle you guys about this, but I am. The ball is in your court now. I'm going to look to you for a very fast resolution of this. [interjection] Well, you know, it shouldn't have to happen, but it's happening.

The second thing is an encouragement to the minister to look for those partnership opportunities in other government-owned public works, supply, and services locations. You guys have got a lot of empty space out there. I would encourage the minister to be looking for opportunities to partner with groups in the community, seniors' associations, but even perhaps youth groups. You're having to keep the lights on and the power and the heat in these buildings anyway. Look for those partnerships that would really be benefiting the community. It's not going to cost you cash out of pocket. It means you don't have to be giving a grant perhaps of so much money to the groups, or they can use their grant money to actually provide the programs instead of scrounging for their rent money.

5:00

That's the kind of leadership I know this minister is capable of. I know he can do this. I believe he is capable and has the leadership skills to do this. If there are staff in the gallery, fun-seekers all joining us, they're good staff. They can help the minister do this. Thank you.

Now, a couple more things. [interjections] I know that my colleague for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert has lots of things she wants to say, so I will give way to her, despite the fact that I have many more questions that I could raise with the minister.

As always, I will complain about this budget process which limits us to a very little bit of time to talk about huge departments, which are now superministries in many cases, such as the Ministry of Infrastructure. Well, I may give him the title of superminister if he can resolve our problem with West Edmonton Seniors and other seniors' lodges. Until then, there is not enough time to debate these budgets. This is not serving Albertans well where we have to be rushing through things and cutting off questions and cutting off issues. [interjection] No, she's going to get up.

Thank you, very much, Mr. Minister. I look forward to your written responses to my questions.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I would move the committee rise and report progress on the estimates of Infrastructure and beg leave to sit again.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

MR. SHARIFF: Madam Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions of the Department of Infrastructure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001. They report progress thereon and request leave to sit again.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

[At 5:04 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Title: Estimates of Health and Wellness, Friday, March 17, 2000

Date: 00/03/17

8:02 a.m.

[Mrs. Tarchuk in the chair]

Designated Supply Subcommittee – Health and Wellness

Tarchuk, Janis, Chairman
Broda, Dave
Dickson, Gary
Doerksen, Victor

Forsyth, Heather
Fritz, Yvonne
Herard, Denis
Jacques, Wayne

Leibovici, Karen
Pannu, Raj
Pham, Hung
Sloan, Linda

THE CHAIRMAN: Good morning, everyone. I'd like to call the meeting of the subcommittee to order. There is a motion that I'd to read into the record.

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Orders 56 and 57 the designated supply subcommittee on Health and Wellness allocate the time for its consideration and debate of the 2000-2001 estimates of the Department of Health and Wellness as follows:

- (1) The time allocated for the subcommittee will be a maximum of three hours.
- (2) The minister responsible first addresses the subcommittee for a maximum of 20 minutes.
- (3) Official Opposition subcommittee members then have a maximum of two hours for questions and answers. Those members may allocate the time for questions among themselves as they see fit.
- (4) The ND Member for Edmonton-Strathcona then has a maximum of 15 minutes for questions and answers.
- (5) Government subcommittee members have the remainder.

Be it further resolved that in the event government subcommittee members do not exercise their right to utilize the remaining time, the chair shall call for a motion to conclude discussion of the estimates and to rise and report.

Be it further resolved that in order to conclude prior to four hours, as allocated under Standing Order 56(7), unanimous consent of this motion will be required.

I would like to invite someone to move the motion as read.

MR. BRODA: So moved.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Broda. All in favour?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

MS LEIBOVICI: No.

THE CHAIRMAN: What's that?

MS LEIBOVICI: We don't have to be unanimous, and I'll never be on record as supporting the process.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. The motion is carried. Thank you very much.

Mr. Minister.

MR. JONSON: Good morning everyone, and thank you, Madam Chairman. Before I get started, I'd like to introduce to you Alberta Health and Wellness staff members who I've asked to join me here this morning: Lynne Duncan, seated on my right, Deputy Minister of Alberta Health and Wellness; seated on my left, Aslam Bhatti, chief financial officer; seated in the gallery, Terry Chugg, assistant deputy minister of the health workforce services division; Chris Powell, who's with our finance planning department; and Jim McCutcheon, comptroller of AADAC. Also, I would like to note that of course very important to this overall presentation is the role of our Associate Deputy Minister of Health and Wellness, Gene Zwozdesky.

Madam Chairman, I'd like to thank you for the opportunity to speak to the Ministry of Health and Wellness estimates for 2000-2001. Prior to considering the questions the hon. members will raise, I'd like to comment on where we are in the health system today, what we are accomplishing, and how spending for the coming fiscal year will tie to current and new initiatives.

Madam Chairman, we all know that Albertans expect high standards for the Alberta health system. They expect to be able to obtain the health services they need when they need them. Toward that end, one of the core businesses of the Ministry of Health and Wellness is to "lead and support a system for the delivery of quality health services." Through systematic monitoring and action the ministry ensures that health services provided by health authorities to Albertans meet high standards, achieve positive health outcomes, and address the needs of Albertans.

One of the ways we measure progress towards this core business is through the annual health survey. In 1999 Albertans continued to be positive about the services they received in our health system. Seventy-four percent of the people surveyed rated the availability of services in their community as excellent or good, and 73 percent of responses rated the ease of access to the health system as excellent or good.

While access to health services is important, it is also important that the services are appropriate or that the right care is provided in the right place at the right time. Again, as with the measures regarding access, the most recent survey shows that Albertans are also positive about the quality of the health care services they receive. Seventy-five percent of respondents rated the quality of health services in the community as excellent or good, while 78 percent of the respondents rated the quality of health care personally received as excellent or good, and 83 percent of respondents reported that the result of the care they received was excellent or good. As in years past, there's still room for improvement in some areas, but I am confident that the significant increase in health spending for the 2000-2001 fiscal year will address many of these pressure points in the system.

Our government made a commitment to increasing resources when they were needed, and we have lived up to that commitment. Health spending over the past five years has increased from $3.9 billion in 1995-96 to over $5.6 billion in 2000-2001, an increase of $1.7 billion, or 43.5 percent, in 2000-2001. In comparison, the federal government's cash contribution via established program financing and the Canada health and social transfer over that same period of time decreased from 19.5 percent of health spending to 12.7 percent. In simpler terms, their cash contributions are still $66 million less than they were in 1995-96. Despite that fact, Madam Chairman, health spending is higher than it has ever been in the history of the province and is this government's single largest expenditure.

This year on an age-adjusted per capita basis Alberta is spending more on health than any other province in the country. By the year 2002-2003 spending will total $6.26 billion, or fully one-third of total government spending, compared to one-quarter in 1992-93. That means that health spending will rise from the current $15.5 million each day to more than $17 million each and every day.

Madam Chairman, as you know, in January Premier Klein announced a new plan for health in Alberta. It is a plan that has been built on what Albertans and key stakeholders in Alberta's health system have told us they need. Because our government sees the future of a health system as being built on decisions made in partnership with those who fund the system, those who work within the system, and those who use the system, our government made a commitment to such a future when we hosted last year's health summit. As you will remember, Madam Chairman, at the health summit key health stakeholders and randomly selected members of the public came together to take a serious look at our province's health system and to recommend where it should be directed in the future.

The new plan for the new century announced by Premier Klein has taken its lead from what health summit participants told us. Guided by their recommendations, our six-point plan was developed to protect and improve the publicly funded and publicly administered health system in this province, and the budget from the Ministry of Health and Wellness for 2000-2001 reflects the priorities identified in the six-point plan.

Madam Chairman, what I'd like to do is to go through each of these six directions and highlight the strategies that appear in the 2000-2001 budget for the Ministry of Health and Wellness. In doing so, I will also be sharing news on key strategies that helped form the foundation on which our future health system will be built. The six key directions of the plan demonstrate Alberta's commitment to Canada's single-payer, publicly funded style of health. They reveal a common thread, one of co-operation and partnership in decision-making among the health authorities, physicians, nurses, and other key health stakeholders and our government. They reveal hard evidences of our commitment to making Alberta's health system better able to meet the challenges of the new century.

The six key directions in our plan are to improve access to publicly funded services, to improve the management of the health system, to enhance the quality of health services, to increase our emphasis on health promotion and disease and injury prevention, to continue to foster new ideas to improve our health system, and to take the necessary steps to protect the publicly funded system from any potential negative external factors.

I'll begin with the first key direction, which is to improve the quality of the publicly funded health services in Alberta. Certainly one way to do that is to ensure adequate funding for the health system. Madam Chairman, I think it's important to note that health funding in Alberta has, as I've indicated, increased substantially: $1.7 billion, or 43.5 percent, over the past five years. It is also important to note that health funding will increase by more than $1 billion, or 21 percent, over the next three years to more than $6.25 billion a year. Spending in 2000-2001 will total $5.653 billion, an increase of 9.3 percent over the 1999-2000 base budget. Funding for health authorities will increase by $218 million, an increase of 7.7 percent, and by $497 million over three years, which is a 17.6 percent increase.

As the population continues to grow and age, there is an increased need for key lifesaving surgeries. To improve access to these publicly funded services, an increase of $47 million, or 18.2 percent, is being provided for provincewide services, for those key procedures that are provided in Calgary and Edmonton to all Albertans.

The number of major surgeries such as angioplasties, coronary bypasses, bone marrow transplants, and kidney dialysis treatments will increase. It is important to note that the number of these procedures being done has rapidly increased over the past few years, and these increases will continue in this coming year. For example, in this year there are now more than 1,600 major heart surgeries and procedures done every year, there are 160 more major cancer surgeries done every year, there are 300 more major neurosurgeries being done every year than there were before, and there are more than 700 kidney dialysis treatments being provided every year.

8:12

The new funding provided in Budget 2000 will see these numbers continue to increase. Some of the specific increases in services that we'll see will be that the number of angioplasties will be boosted from 2,935 performed in the current year to 3,235 next year, a 10 percent increase. The number of people provided kidney dialysis services will be raised from 1,300 this year to more than 1,430 in the coming year. The number of low birth weight neonatal procedures is projected to increase from 189 to 985, and increased numbers of bone marrow, liver, kidney/heart, and kidney/pancreas transplants will be done. As the numbers of these procedures significantly increase, waiting times will decrease, thereby ensuring timely access to surgery. As the demand for health services increases and the population grows, it is essential to ensure that the province has adequate numbers of health professionals with the necessary skills located in the right parts of the province.

Madam Chairman, funding increases in the 2000-2001 budget will enable regional health authorities to hire up to 2,400 more nurses and other frontline staff, especially in the areas of emergency wards, long-term care, home care, and acute care, over the next three years. And, Madam Chairman, I'd like to note that it is in addition to the extra funding provided to RHAs last year to hire almost 1,200 new full-time equivalent positions, including more than 600 nurses.

This government recognizes the need to train additional health care workers. Alberta Learning has announced an additional 195 spaces in postsecondary institutions to train new nurses in 2000-2001. We will continue to work closely with health authorities, the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses, and Alberta Learning to identify requirements and to create learning opportunities. Madam Chairman, the nursing community has been a great asset as we've changed and reorganized the health system, and change is never easy. Our health authorities are working with nurses and Alberta Health and Wellness to improve working conditions for nurses. We want to retain and attract the best.

Our focus on providing for more health professionals also concentrates on more physicians, both family doctors and specialists, which will be supported through an increased medical services budget. The number of physicians practising in Alberta has been steadily increasing over the past few years, including an increase of 255 doctors from September 1998 to September 1999. A further increase is expected this year. The budget provides for an additional 90 physicians in 2000-2001, but we will be working with the Alberta Medical Association and with the medical faculties to attract even more. In co-operation with the Alberta Medical Association, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Alberta medical schools, and the health authorities the government has completed a comprehensive physician resource plan for Alberta. This plan will provide further advice and direction to help ensure that Albertans have appropriate access to physicians' services in the years to come.

As a first step, Budget 2000 provides for the addition of 20 postgraduate residency positions to Alberta's medical schools in 2000-2001 and another 20 positions in 2001-2002. In the near term we will concentrate on retaining more medical school graduates and retraining specialists and immigrant doctors. For the longer run we will need to increase medical school enrollment. An action plan is being developed with key stakeholders as we speak.

Madam Chairman, Budget 2000 also targets home care and long-term care, reflecting our government's ongoing priority in this area for the past number of years. Albertans generally prefer to remain as long as possible in their own homes and communities. Given the province's rising and aging population, there will be a need for a greater capacity in communities in the years to come. Therefore, Alberta is taking a leadership role in support for home care and assisted living; however, care will continue to be there for those who need it.

I think it's important to note that the number of Albertans receiving home care in Alberta has increased from 53,000 in '92-93 to over 70,000 this year. The total number of hours of home care has increased from 2.3 million to almost 6 million. This year $15 million was provided to the regional health authorities to address the increasing need, including expanded home care services, of continuing care services for Alberta's seniors. A further $5 million will be made available in the coming year.

Recognizing that there will also be some Albertans who will require a higher level of care than can be provided in their homes in 1999-2000, we provided $150 million to fund 1,090 new and upgraded continuing care beds over the next three years. This includes the replacement of 720 existing beds in older facilities and 370 additional new beds.

When combined with other projects currently under way, nearly 2,000 new or upgraded beds, including 650 additional beds, will be available to aging Albertans. As a result, waiting lists for continuing care will decrease. Fewer acute care beds will be occupied by patients who could be cared for more appropriately in continuing care facilities, and more Albertans will be able to remain in their own homes and communities with the support and assistance of home care.

High-cost medical equipment and new technology are also addressed in Budget 2000. Increased funding for health authorities includes an additional $58 million over three years to help replace essential medical equipment, starting with $38 million in 2000-2001. That, Madam Chairman, is in addition to the $10 million allocated for high-tech medical equipment that will serve a broad population base and be used in direct patient care areas.

Budget 2000 also provides $90 million for the growing need and cost of blood and blood products. As well, $270 million is being provided in the Blue Cross benefit program to assist lower income Albertans and seniors when purchasing prescription drugs.

Budget 2000 also provides for an increase of $5 million for community mental health. This is in direct response to the Laing report which recommended improved integration of community services and funding for mental health throughout the province. Funding for services for persons with developmental disabilities will increase by $68 million over three years, including $29 million in 2000-2001 to address projected growth in costs and caseloads and in response to the report provided to me recently by the associate minister. This is in addition to the $10 million that was provided in 1999-2000 for increased caseloads.

Madam Chairman, each of these targeted funding allocations support clearly identified strategies in our six-point plan. Before going on any further, I think it is important to emphasize that the plan is about more than increased funding for more health professionals and more procedures and services, because while significant new funding is being provided over the next three years, we know that money alone will not solve all of the pressures on health.

As we proceed with planning and implementing each of the initiatives I have shared with you this morning – and, Madam Chairman, there are many, many more that I could speak to this morning – an important point needs to be made, and if the hon. members take home with them only one point today, I hope it is this. The foundation of our future health system will be built on strengthening the working relationships among all players within the health system, including government, health authorities, health providers, professional associations, voluntary associations, consumer associations, and the list goes on. Our future is something that can be achieved only with everyone's contribution. The future health system is not something that our government alone can achieve nor is it something that the regional health authorities alone can bring about nor is it the sole role of the community organizations and associations.

Certainly the health authorities and the physicians and nurses and other key stakeholders have consistently striven to meet patient needs even during challenging times, and for that we thank them for their continuing commitments. In fact, in this complex world of ours success depends on more than co-operation within the health service. In fact, all sectors must work together if we're going to promote health and well-being, prevent illness, and ensure access to needed health services.

8:22

To influence the social, economic, and environmental conditions that affect the health and well-being of Canadians, action must occur within and between sectors at the local, regional, provincial, and national levels. Therefore, it's important to work not only with those in the health system but also with people outside the system – in education, social services, children's services, the police, and a whole host of community agencies – to build the commitment of continuous improvement of health. Only by taking a multidisciplinary approach and by involving a broader range of departments, professionals, and community agencies will we be able to begin to adequately address the range of health determinants and the improvement of the health system on a steady and sustainable basis.

Madam Chairman, as we move forward into the 21st century, we will be required to continue to change and adapt if our success is to continue. We need to be able to adapt to new situations as they arise and address them effectively. In other words, we need to see the process of reforming the health system in Alberta as a means to an end, not an end in itself.

Madam Chairman, we are ready to meet that challenge. We are committed to meeting the challenges of a growing and aging population. The opportunity is arising through improved technology and drug therapy. Albertans' expectations of quality health service are there, and this government is very much committed to a single payer, publicly funded health system which will serve the population of Alberta.

Thank you, Madam Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Just so you know, that was perfect timing. You had two more seconds. Anyway, thank you very much.

Karen.

MS LEIBOVICI: Okay. Thank you. Good morning, everyone. Thank you to the representatives from the department of health for joining us at this early stage and also to Hansard. We haven't been getting a lot of sleep lately; have we?

It's always interesting to listen to the overview provided by the minister. My questions will be more detailed, because I believe the purpose of this budget overview is to find out exactly where the dollars are being spent. Unfortunately, when we look at the budget documents, there's not a lot of information with regards to line by line and the reasons for certain expenditures being made.

At the outset I would like to also make the request that I made last year, which was very helpful, Mr. Minister, to provide the answers and the responses in a booklet as opposed to each individual, and then we can get a complete recording of what was asked and responded to by not only the Official Opposition but also by the members of the government.

My first comment relates to the initial introduction the minister made with regards to the increase in health care spending that has in fact been quite dramatic over the last seven years, as the minister indicated. Health care spending now has increased from one-quarter of the provincial budget to one-third of the budget. I'm going to put forward a hypothesis that I would put out to the department of health to prove that hypothesis wrong.

The hypothesis is that the reason for the increase in expenditures is because of the increased privatization and contracting out that is occurring not only on the surgical services side but also with other issues. In order to answer that hypothesis, I believe you are going to have to be able to respond to these questions. One, what was the cost of labs prior to regionalization and for each year since? The projected cost savings that were to be provided as a result of the integration and contracting out of the lab services and the current cost of those labs by RHA would be helpful. The cost of laundry services: again the categories will be the same. Prior to regionalization for each year since, what were the projected cost savings and what in fact are we saving right now? The cost of food services and any other services, of which there are a number, that are currently being contracted out with regards to hard services that are being provided. I would also like to know, especially with regard to the food services, what the results have been with regards to . . .

MR. HERARD: Point of order, Madam Chairman. I don't know if I'm confused or not, but it seems to me that if we want to know these kinds of things, we can go to public accounts and get those things. We're here to debate the budget and not the past, and I'm wondering if these questions are really appropriate for this kind of a session.

MS LEIBOVICI: Well, if I can quote, it's under vote 1.0.5, policy and planning services; vote 1.0.6, health information and accountability; 1.0.8, health strategies. I can go on as to where in fact those would be direct links to the budget. It's also in the Health and Wellness business plan and in the regional and provincial health authorities document as well. So there are a number of areas where in fact these issues do crop up, as well as under the expenditure item of regional health authorities.

What I would also like to get further information on is the tracking of admissions to hospitals as a result of procedures completed or performed within the private health care sector. What are the admission rates, if any, that occur as a result of procedures happening in the private health care system? Are there any standards and performance levels, expectations for private, for-profit hospitals that are providing care based on public dollars? Also, with respect to the long-term care private operators is there any breakdown of what the profits of those long-term private operators are? What are the salaries of the individuals who are providing care as caregivers and as rehab professionals within the private long-term care sector, and how do those salaries compare to those in the nonprofit sector?

In past responses from the minister the minister indicated that the contracts are the responsibility of the health authority and are therefore not monitored by Alberta Health. Given the current promise that the minister and the Premier have made with regards to contracts being open, I would like to know when in fact those particular contracts are going to be viewed by the public.

I would also like to know what policies the department has in place with regards to the directions to the regional health authorities where there are implicit or explicit policies to encourage, promote privatization and/or contracting out of services. An example I can provide is that when a facility, a hospital is being planned, the regional health authorities are informed that laundry services are not to be considered as part of the facility. The expectation is to contract out the laundry services whether in fact there are available contractors in that region or not. That's what I mean by implicit policies to promote privatization.

Another issue that has been brought forward by the Auditor General in actual fact with regards to planning is the whole issue of business plans and the timely implementation of business plans. I must admit that I was quite surprised when I saw that it took until April of 1999 for there to be a basic definition of a balanced budget that could be agreed to across this province by regional health authorities. Well, is there any question as to perhaps why we keep spending money in health and not knowing exactly where that money is going?

The other issue around the strategic work plan with regards to health facility planning. Given the push again for privatization, what is happening with regards to the development of a publicly funded health facility planning process to ensure that there is an overall strategic work plan for public institutions, or have you already factored it in? If you have, it would be good for the public to see what portion of the facility planning process is now allocated to the private sector.

A question that I have is: do you now finally have an up-to-date inventory of the provincial health facilities that shows the bed capacity that is now available and in service? Later on I have some specific questions with regards to that. It's my understanding, again in the recent Auditor General's report, that there is a "lack of benchmarks or standards to understand what should be in place."

Having goals and information to assess the costs and benefit of changing the allocation of facility resources in relation to service requirements would be an important feature of a planning system.

Seven years into restructuring and there is no information as to how our facilities are being allocated. Also, 40 percent of the designed capacity is not used for its original purpose. In other words, those empty beds, operating rooms, wards are not being used. What, in fact, are 40 percent of our hospital facilities now being used for, and can those not be utilized as opposed to private surgical facilities?

8:32

The other questions that I have around this particular theme are more general questions that would be useful in determining the direction of the policy that is being put forward. They could be under, actually, the regional health authority budget vote, but I'll put them here, if that's okay. If not, I can do that in a few minutes. Actually, one that I'd like to know is: what is the definition of profit that the department of health is using when it talks about profit in health care?

These are more general questions. With regards to the MRIs that are being done in the province right now, what is the cost of the scan in the public system and in the private system? What is the cost of the dye, and what is the cost of the anesthetic, public and private? What is the cost of performing hip surgery, the cost of the hips themselves, the different kinds of hips that are available, and the length of stay? Just to back up to the MRIs, what is the exact number of private and public facilities, and where are they located?

Ontario had a recent study that showed that 186 of 1,000 inspected private facilities needed to have their licences suspended or restricted, that in fact 10 percent were not up to standard. I'd like to know what inspections are currently being done by the department of health to ensure that the private facilities that are in operation right now in this province are up to standard. When were those inspections done, and how frequently are they done? Are the facilities informed beforehand that they are going to be inspected? I'd like to also know what kind of monitoring systems the minister has in place right now either through the department of health or through the College of Physicians and Surgeons with regards to monitoring the standard of work and the quality that is occurring within the private clinics, clinics such as the private MRIs.

Performance targets. This is always a favourite. There are at least 14 performance measures that have been dropped by the department of health. Those were performance measures like the hospital beds per thousand population, continuing care beds per thousand population, medical practitioners per thousand population, total health expenditure per capita. The list goes on. I think you know what they are. My question is: how do you determine what your outcomes are if your performance measures keep shifting, and what are the performance measures that you have right now, Mr. Minister? Will they be the same next year? What in fact are they with regards to the private clinics? You indicate in the bill that you will have performance measures. You don't have them for the public sector. They keep shifting. Do we have any guarantees that they will be of any use for the private sector? How in fact do you conduct any longitudinal studies if your performance measures keep shifting? Again, if you had standard measurements, in fact would you not then know why the budget keeps increasing?

The list of visits and review of health facilities. How are those inspections – and by those I mean the hospitals – actually conducted? How often have they been conducted between 1993 and 1999? Can the minister also tell us how many private medical diagnostic and testing services, if there are any, are using public facilities at this point in time? How many leases with the private services were in place prior to 1993 and are in place now? What was the revenue generated for the public health care system as opposed to these leases?

The minister, I believe, has also indicated that there is a cost-benefit analysis that exists to compare the cost of services offered by the public and the voluntary private sector in long-term care. I would like to see what that cost-benefit analysis is.

Basically that moves me into the regional health authorities and some questions that I have around there. What's my time like? Does anyone know? [interjection]

THE CHAIRMAN: You've got two hours.

MS LEIBOVICI: Well, 20 minutes. Ten?

AN HON. MEMBER: Ten.

MS LEIBOVICI: Okay.

There's a health costing in Alberta document, 1999 annual report, and the purpose of that document, my understanding is, was to do a review of the costs and groups utilizing statistical measures. What I'd like to know is: what is the cost comparison of procedures and facility costs done in public facilities and contracted surgical facilities, specifically with regards to cataracts, ophthalmology, restorative dentistry, oral surgery, podiatry, and some other services that are currently contracted out mostly in the Calgary and the capital area.

Now, I know that the minister in the past has referred me to the RHAs. I must admit, Mr. Minister, that it's difficult to obtain information from the regional health authorities, and I would assume that you as the minister must have that information. That's why I am asking you to provide that information to the Legislative Assembly through this request.

What is the minister doing as the minister of health? What are the recommendations to ensure that in fact we have a seamless delivery of service between one regional health authority and another? Our regional health authorities have become balkanized. There are many difficulties with regards to a seamless delivery of service, and it would be useful to know what recommendations the minister's department has to ensure that that does not occur.

As we are one year away from an election with regards to the regional health authorities, I will ask this question again: is there any intention on the part of the minister to change the boundaries of those regional health authorities? As the minister realizes, there are some difficulties with some of the boundaries, but the reality is that if there is an election in the offing, then the changes, if they're going to be made, need to be made now. There has been much disruption within the regional health authorities as their different policies seem to emanate on a year-by-year basis, and I think that in order to try to ensure some stability within our regional health authorities, it would be useful if they had that information as quickly as possible.

When I was looking through the regulations, it was interesting to note that there is a regulation that deals with health services utilization and that each regional health authority must have a committee with regards to health services utilization. My question is: what are those particular committees doing? Why do we need a provincially mandated committee led by government MLAs when in fact each regional health authority has a utilization committee? What in fact have they been doing?

The hiring policy for CEOs. Once in a while I get calls as to what is happening. What are the standards with regards to the hiring policy for CEOs? It is interesting to note, I believe it was in the Auditor General's report, that he indicated that there should be some consistency and standards from the department of health with regards to the hiring of CEOs. We saw a recent example in regional health authority No. 5 where not all of the board was informed as to the CEO that was hired.

8:42

The equipment needs for the regional health authorities. The Auditor General indicated that in fact they were lax with regards to the equipment needs, that there had to be the development and implementation of "an information system to report on the condition of facilities and the cost to keep them functional." So to date, unless that's happened since last year, we don't have that. Also, the equipment that is currently within our regional health authorities on average will be, well, as it's put: the average useful life of capital equipment this month will be 2.8 years. That's what's left in our regional health authorities for capital equipment. The department has provided $10 million, but that's spread over three years, I believe.

So what plans does the minister actually have in place to ensure that the capital equipment in our regional health authorities is functional and safe? What is your replacement policy in the next two years to address all of the equipment needs of the regional health authorities? This is a huge, huge issue, and quite frankly I don't think $10 million over three years will address that particular issue. You have to have some kind of a strategic plan with regards to renewing the equipment that is in our RHAs right now.

What is the role of the community health councils? These councils are mandated through legislation. We rarely hear about them. I don't know if all regions have them, so I'd like to know which ones are active. Where in fact are there community health councils? What is their purpose? What is the cost to a regional health authority for those particular community health councils? They are supposed to have business plans and an annual report as well. Can we get copies of the community health councils' business reports and business plans and annual reports? That is, I believe, a requirement.

The funding formula. I've brought that up before. The minister insists that the funding formula in actual fact addresses what the needs are of all the regions. The Auditor General in fact had a comment about it, and if I can't find it right now, then I will provide it to you later. It indicated that the funding formula needed to be reviewed. We know that in the northern regions – Mistahia, Northern Lights, Peace – a report was presented to the minister two to three years ago indicating that the funding formula was not functional. It was a report that one of the major accounting firms in this country produced.

We have seen the turmoil in the Mistahia region, particularly with regards to the Queen Elizabeth II and the troubles that they are having in meeting the needs of the residents in that particular area. Still we have no movement on that particular formula. So I guess my question to the minister is: what is the holdup? When can the people in the northern regions of this province expect to see that their needs will be met? They're having difficulty being met because of the formula, that the minister refuses to address.

The performance measures for the individual regional health authorities. In particular, what are the mechanisms that the regional health authorities have now with regards to private providers meeting performance measures? Is there any policy in place right now either through the department of health or with each of the regional health authorities that he can gather that indicates what the system is for monitoring those private providers? What happens when there is a complaint with a private provider? What is the appeal mechanism? How are those complaints tracked, and what is the outcome of those particular complaints? Also, as an adjunct to that question and broader as well, can the minister outline how many lawsuits have been filed against either a regional health authority or a public hospital within the regional health authority or a combined lawsuit that involves a private operator and a regional health authority? I know that specifics cannot be provided in terms of names, but the circumstances probably can be provided without violating confidentiality, as well as the amounts of what those lawsuits would be.

The whole issue of contracting out with regional health authorities. There seem to be individual processes for contracting out. Unless I'm mistaken, the contracting-out guidelines for surgical services are actually contracting-out guidelines for construction. Now, we know that when we're bidding on construction projects, it's a lot different than when we're bidding on surgical services. So does in fact the minister have for nonsurgical services a policy that he provides to the regional health authorities with regards to contracting out right now surgical and nonsurgical services? Not for the building of those facilities but the provision of. And what are the conflict of interest guidelines that are provincially mandated to ensure that there is no conflict for an individual who is in a position of authority in a regional health authority and has an interest in a private facility as well?

This goes back to my earlier comments about having contracts with private providers and not knowing where the money is going and maybe that's why we have an increase. That was the hypothesis I put forward. This will be my last, since I'm past my 20 minutes. The Auditor General's report of '98-99 indicated that 10 regional health authorities did not disclose expense categories "associated with $517 million" – this is not small change – "of payments to voluntary and private sector operators." Can the minister tell us if in fact those regional health authorities have now disclosed what those payments were for? And how do you track the money that's flowing out of the public pockets to the private-sector operators in this province?

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: If I could just make a comment at this point on the point of order that Denis had made. If it is in the business plan, a member is free to comment or ask questions, and you did rightfully tie your questions to the business plan.

Mr. Minister, would you like to respond at this point?

MR. JONSON: No. I expect that the opposition will want to use their time fully, so I would not want to interfere right now.

THE CHAIRMAN: Great. Thank you.

Linda.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you. Good morning, everyone. There were a number of questions raised in the '98 estimates that the department did not respond to. I'd like to just touch briefly on those particular areas, and primarily they related to the demographics of illness and the lack of research being conducted in this province relative to that.

We're aware that there has been some work done over the course of the last couple of years on the social problem index. There is apparently a report that has been under way. No mention is made in the business plan of this undertaking. I'm wondering where the social problem index report is, why it's not incorporated in the business plan, and why there is not a greater reflection of the social and environmental and income demographics of illness in the provincial business plan report.

We talked about those issues last year with respect to mortality and morbidity relative to occupational class, age, and cause of death. We continue to have in this province a high rate of infant mortality, yet there does not appear to be any studies being conducted as to what gives rise to that high statistic and what can be done.

Now, in last year's estimates the government actually said that they were leading a children's health study which would examine factors in infant mortality. No report was provided on that last year and I see nothing in the business plan this year, so I'm seeking some tangible information and the report for the public in that regard.

8:52

Further, the province last year said that they were exploring the development of a strategy to address low birth weights in the province, and again this is an area where we have continued to have an increasingly high incidence despite our economic growth and wealth. While that was referenced and the government committed that they were undertaking a strategy, again we see very little in terms of tangible progress in that area.

A further issue is teenage pregnancies. I noted last year that there were no provincial initiatives identified. In fact, the province said that for the most part that was a responsibility that was rooted in the family or perhaps the community. We continue to have a high incidence of teenage pregnancies in this province. I would suggest that is also related to the high incidence of low birth weight and infant mortality that we continue to have, yet the government is not taking action in this regard, and I would ask why.

Further, there were questions raised last year about breast cancer and cervical cancer. Your focus continues to be on screening. I would respectfully submit that that is not good enough. Our incidence of death relative to these two diseases continues to rise. The province must take a greater leadership role in these two areas.

We had the privilege last year of receiving the health surveillance branch Health Trends report, and there have been no updates provided in regards to the indicators in that report this year. Our contact with the health surveillance branch office has indicated that updates won't be available until May, and I would ask why in fact that is the case. The updates relative to health trends in child and infant health, health-related behaviours, chronic disease, communicable diseases, mental health environment, health status: why are all of those indicators for the '98-99 fiscal year and for '99-2000 not available, Mr. Minister? Could we see those updates attached as an appendage to the response to this budget process?

I'd like to turn now to questions relative to the general provision of service in our system, which the minister focused on in his comments at the onset. A key theme you talked about was spending, and I would note that age-adjusted spending is somewhat of a new twist. It's of interest that the province doesn't continue to track or publish their spending as a percentage of GDP, which is a standard indicator of spending in the country.

There was a large degree of focus on high-tech medical procedures – angioplasties, transplants, bone marrows, et cetera – yet we do not see in the business plan and I don't believe have ever seen any statistics on the survival rate or quality of life for the recipients of those procedures.

It was of interest to me that there was no mention made at all in your preliminary remarks relative to mental health of either the adult or child population in this province, and again I would ask why. Similarly, minimal mention was made of home care, no mention made of palliative care. These are areas, with due respect, that our population has as much need for as glitzy transplant-type procedures. In fact, I would indicate that there is a much higher degree of our population that has either relied or will in the future rely on those particular services, and they do not garner sufficient attention from this government.

I will come back to the area of mental health. I'm extremely troubled by the lack of priority that mental health receives in this province despite the continued identification of high waiting lists in the area of children's mental health. I believe in Edmonton alone we have 400 children at high risk of injuring themselves or others, and they are waiting somewhere in excess of four to six months for initial assessment. That is an appalling statistic, yet the budget didn't provide any degree of priority to the addressment of mental health issues. Your preliminary remarks this morning, sir, completely omitted reference to that area. If we want to in a meaningful way understand and perhaps better prioritize our spending in health care, then we are going to have to look at and examine in more detail these areas.

I'd like to move now to some general questions. I would like to request that the minister provide some response with respect to the current inaccessibility of our public health care system, and I would ask whether the provincial government has by conscious decision or through omission chosen to underfund the provision of services in the public health care system. Was this decision or omission in any way intended to create such delays and thereby justify the introduction of private health care policy in legislation?

Has the provincial government made a conscious decision to allow waiting lists to grow despite what personal pain, suffering, or hardship this may cause to citizens and their families? Is it reasonable for the government to withhold the necessary funding that could alleviate waiting lists in all surgical areas, particularly in the face of documented human suffering, when the province is in a position of holding a huge fiscal surplus? Is it fair to make arbitrary funding allocations to address waiting lists rather than budgeting such allocations annually on the basis of need? Does the arbitrary approach not prolong patient suffering and compound system backlog? How has the government determined that a fiscal surplus takes precedence over the alleviation of surgical waiting lists and the accompanying human suffering they cause? And where, Mr. Minister, does an Albertan appeal when they are unable to access surgery they require and neither the province nor the appointed authorities are willing to offer any relief or support?

I had a meeting recently with the government affairs officer of an urban authority, and I asked him questions about specifically what his role entailed. Despite the fact that the majority of letters he receives are relative to the inability to access the public health care system and he deals with all of the MLAs in that particular region when they have concerns or their constituents have concerns, it was perhaps of no surprise that his office did not have any input or any formal process of providing to that regional health authority board any statistics nor did they have any formal mechanism to make any concerted decision or difference to that constituent's or MLA's concerns.

It's a complete facade. It's window dressing. If this is the type of commitment our government is prepared to make to people when they are waiting six months, 12 months for procedures and the quality of their lives is deteriorating by the day, we're in a sad state of affairs. I'm quite happy to provide further details to that, but this is an area where I believe the provincial government has abdicated its responsibility. We see things put in place that really are misleading to the public, particularly when people are in a state of suffering and have very little energy to live, let alone to lobby. We can do better in this particular area.

In conjunction with those questions, I would like to know what exactly is the total number of Albertans waiting for surgical consult and/or surgery in Alberta. In addition, I would like to know what the specific number of Albertans waiting for surgery is by type. I'm sure most are aware that there are in fact two levels to our waiting lists now. There is an extensive wait to see a specialist, and you are not even put on the list for surgery until you have had that specialist consult. So people are waiting now up to six months, 10 months to see a specialist, and they have no hope of getting on a surgical waiting list until that consult occurs. These are questions and statistics which the government chooses not to publish on a consistent basis in their business plans or in their performance measures. I think it would be particularly important for you to assess the change in these areas and the waits over time, particularly for the fiscal years 1993 to current, when the funding cuts and underfunding have primarily occurred.

9:02

Relative to the same particular area, I would like to ask questions about the provincial Ombudsman's role in the health care system and particularly his role with respect to the implementation of Bill 11. There is no mention made that if a private facility does not offer safe or standard-compliant services, Albertans will have the right to appeal to either the Health Facilities Review Committee or the provincial Ombudsman. How are we going to be in a position to reassure Albertans or to monitor or enforce that it is safe to use such facilities when the legislation, sir, makes absolutely no mechanisms available to them when problems arise? It is, in my opinion, a huge inequity that the public health care system must comply with and be responsive to those mechanisms, both the Health Facilities Review Committee and the provincial Ombudsman, when the private health care facilities will not.

Relative to the debates again last year, it was indicated that there were some undertakings or work being done with the ministry of health and the Ministry of Justice, and we're wondering if we could have an update on those discussions.

Continuing on Bill 11, I would like to ask the minister: is it not true that findings of your own department and studies initiated and conducted by your own department have indicated to you that there is no published study of the efficiency, cost, or quality of the purchase of surgical services from private facilities by public funders, i.e. RHAs? Is it not true that your studies have also told you that within the current system the only way extra revenue-raising activities could be undertaken by private facilities would be to offer enhanced services? Is it not true that your studies have also told you that if such outcomes are interpreted as forms of two-tierism, a policy dilemma would arise if the only way private facilities can survive financially is to act against the stated government policy to avoid a two-tiered system or queue-jumping?

Is it not true that your own research has told you that the provision of private-sector beds seems to be associated with longer waits for care? Is it not true that your studies have told you that there are very few studies of the public purchase of private services for nonsurgical procedures? Is it not true, Mr Minister, that you have been told that the for-profit versus not-for-profit literature is largely inconclusive? The broad conclusion is that for-profit hospitals are not more cost-effective than not-for-profit and that the costs to purchasers are higher. That is also substantiated by the report conducted by the Consumers' Association of Alberta that has been released publicly.

I would also just like to emphasize – and this has been an issue of debate and discrepancy in question period – that in examining particular studies by Yates and Armstrong, your research has told you that orthopedic waiting times are up to 10 times longer in private hospitals, that regions with the most private beds are those with the longest waiting lists, that specialties with the longest waiting times are those with the highest earnings from private practice, that patients experience longer waiting lists for surgery in public hospitals only if their doctors are offering both a public and private surgical practice. I believe that all of those things have been made clear to you, sir, yet your business plan seems to be hinged, your agenda and priorities seem to be hinged on steamrolling Bill 11 through when there is no validity and no empirical evidence to suggest that it will make our system more efficient or cost-effective.

I would like to also just make mention of the lack of any comprehensive or long-term health workforce focus or plan within your business plan. In your preliminary remarks you made mention about specific strategies being undertaken to increase the practising physician population in the province. I would respectfully submit, sir, that there is a huge component of our health workforce that is comprised of disciplines other than physicians. One of the most critical at this particular point in time and that will continue to be is the profession of registered nurses. You did not offer any report on the progress made by the AARN's nursing workforce planning group. There are really no commitments made within your business plan this year to not only the shortage that exists in nursing now but the growing shortage that will occur over the next five to 10 years as registered nurses retire.

You made no mention of the increased incidence of patient safety concerns that the AARN has reported to you, an approximately 400 percent increase since 1994. I question why that is. Those statistics are being made available to you, are being conducted by a legislated body, a statutory body, and there is no reply. So I would like to respectfully request some type of formal response relative to the area of the health workforce: what the department's long-term plan is and what progress is being made at both the AARN level and the nursing workforce level.

You did not indicate or have not indicated that there will be substantial increases in program seats for registered nurses, despite the fact that your department has committed to do that very thing for physicians. Having had I guess the misfortune, to a degree, to have spent some time in the last month at the very heart of the health care system, this system has always been and will always be about the people that work in it.

You concluded your remarks by indicating that really our future rests in the working relationships of people in our health care system. That's always been the case. It is a huge about-face for the department to acknowledge that that relationship is a primary underpinning of the proper functioning of the health care system when in the '93 to '96 period, sir, when I was a frontline member of the nursing workforce, we made consecutive presentations, provided statistics, and there was not a working respect in place at that particular time to ensure that the safety and the quality of the system was preserved.

Just a couple of brief questions, to conclude, on NAFTA and the WTO. I'd like to ask the minister to provide to us what submissions or input he has provided to the WTO negotiations. We are aware that a primary focus in that particular area is the harmonization of the service providers or the service workforce. We know that those submissions are being prepared by intergovernmental affairs at this point in time, and we would like to know what the input of Health and Wellness has been to that.

There's no mention of the progress made relative to the implementation of the social union in your report. Consecutive meetings continue to occur with ministers across the country. That is not an area that's been provided for in the business report, and I would ask for a comprehensive update on the progress of those meetings.

Finally, I would point out a discrepancy to you, sir, with respect to the interpretation of NAFTA. The minister of intergovernmental affairs has stood in the House on a couple of occasions now and talked about NAFTA's lack of application to Bill 11. Minister McClellan is quite correct in quoting the federal government's position relative to the exemptions for public services. However she neglects to point out that the U.S. trade representative's office has a completely different interpretation.

9:12

I think you are aware that there has been correspondence between the U.S. trade representative's office and Oregon relative to these very areas. They specifically point out in that communication that they do not believe – and I can read to you excerpts of the letter that was sent to Oregon by the U.S. trade representative's office. This specifically says: your draft guidelines dated September 27 indicate this reservation does not include government services if the state allows private providers to offer similar services on a commercial basis. Exactly what Bill 11 will do. If those services are supplied by a private firm on a profit or not-for-profit basis, chapter 11 and chapter 12 of NAFTA apply. If social services are supplied by a private firm on a profit or not-for-profit basis, chapter 11 and chapter 12 apply.

Repeatedly, different sections are cited. I believe that your office is completely apprised and aware of that discrepancy between the federal government and the U.S. trade representative's office, and you are also acutely aware that this legislation will in fact allow for the application of chapter 11 and chapter 12 of NAFTA, thereby allowing American firms to establish themselves in this province with the same entitlements that are being provided by this government to facilities like HRG.

With those comments, Mr. Minister, I look forward to receiving your responses and will pass the floor over to my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. JONSON: Madam Chairman, if it's possible, I'd just like to respond on three points to the members that have spoken. In following the time rules of the committee, I was not able to complete my extensive opening remarks. I'm just acknowledging that.

I would just like to bring forth three points. First of all, we have an overall policy framework with respect to dealing with concerns, complaints that arise in the regional health authority system. It's based on a study and policy document provided by the Alberta Provincial Health Council, and it's entitled: conflict resolution policy and process. That policy clearly outlines the steps and the avenues of appeal and resolution in the system, and it does reference those complaints and how they can be brought to the attention of the Ombudsman.

Also, there is another avenue, depending on the type of complaint, that can go forward to the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the other appeal bodies that we have. We have of course the Health Facilities Review Committee, and I can go on. It maps out quite clearly the routes for the different types of concerns that people want to appeal and have dealt with.

Secondly, Madam Chairman, with respect to the overall matter of health workforce planning, we do have an overall health workforce planning initiative. It has a large number of stakeholder participants. Because they were referenced, I would like to indicate that the AARN and the UNA, the major nursing organizations, are part of this overall workforce planning initiative. Further, our budget does provide for additional funds for the hiring of frontline staff, of which the major component of course is nurses.

This is parallel to what has been the case with physicians; that is, we have an overall supply planning initiative there. The recent money that was announced was for the AMA physician pool and was simply to recognize additional doctors being attracted to this system just as we have for other members of the workforce recognized their cost and their addition to the system in our overall budget.

Finally, Madam Chairman, I'd like to just reference children's mental health. First of all, overall mental health spending in this budget is increased $16 million, or 9.5 percent. We have also added another $5 million particularly in the area of children's mental health in addition to the $5 million previously announced. We have a number of very significant initiatives across the province dealing with children's health, and I will speak specifically about mental health. We have just recently announced a $4 million program – and this is in addition to the mental health budget that is there – for an expanded program in the area of treating anorexia and bulimia, a very, very severe condition that affects certainly young people, particularly young ladies.

We have also added services in Edmonton and Calgary with respect to children's mental health. We have instituted crisis lines for mental health overall, including children's mental health. We have a number of expansions of children's mental health services in other parts of the province, such as Lethbridge, planned for and covered in this budget. We have worked on the children's health initiative with Alberta Learning and other partners to provide additional services in the mental health field to schools. So it is certainly an area which is receiving significant attention in this budget, Madam Chairman, and it is certainly a priority area in this business plan.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

Hugh.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, and good morning, everyone. I have a number of questions for the minister this morning regarding the health workforce. I note with interest that there is money being provided to hire health care professionals. Unfortunately, before Christmas, particularly in the Calgary regional health authority, there was money made available but the personnel just weren't there. I'm very concerned about this. I would urge the minister to get together with his counterparts across this country, the provincial health ministers. I would strongly urge him to do this. I think we need a national strategy to deal with the shortages of health care professionals not only in this province but across the country. If we wind up working one province against another to attract health care professionals, I don't think it's in the best interests of the medical system across the country. I think a co-ordinated strategy is the best way to deal with this problem.

It is not, as has been reported, a problem of the federal government. Manpower training is a provincial responsibility. I would just like to say that I would strongly encourage and urge the hon. minister, if he could. I think this is an issue that is almost a stand-alone reason, if I could use that term, for a meeting between him and his provincial colleagues to iron out how they're going to deal with this, because from what I can see, it's a national problem.

9:22

Now, what is the current situation regarding approval of regulations for the health professions? How many will be approved each year in this province, and how many have been submitted to date? The minister spoke with us earlier on the number of nurses each regional health authority will hire. How does the department make these decisions? Last year the department said that there was no standard of nursing care per patient population.

For the hon. minister: how many nurses took the 14-week advanced critical care nursing program at Mount Royal College in 1999? What has been implemented as a result of the action plan developed by the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses nursing resource planning group? They, along with their counterparts in other provinces, have done a very comprehensive study on the shortage of nursing professionals across this country. I would urge all hon. members, if they have not seen this report – it's from December '99 – if they have the time, to have a look at it. It's a good report. Could the minister or his officials also provide the baseline count for positions of each regional health authority?

The hours of direct care given patients. This is an issue that always comes up for discussion. Is there a way of comparing this before and after the cutbacks? Why can we not take data that was provided before 1992-93 and compare it? I'm sure the regional health authorities have data. Why couldn't this be compared?

Also, if I could have an answer to this in due time: the breakdown of the $15 million transition fund that was part of the health workforce restructuring between 1995 and 1998. Everyone's concerned about the shortage of registered nurses and LPNs and other health occupations. I find it odd that we're putting 35 percent back into the health care budget, yet the number of health occupations in the province – we're spending this money, and I understand it's going to frontline staff, but according to the government's own statistics, there are 4,000 less people working in health occupations than there were two years ago. If the minister could answer that for me in due time, I would be very grateful. This is something I've been following. I don't know where this money is going. Other people say that it's going to administration, but surely there is an answer for this.

Now, the physician workforce. I understand that the Physician Resource Planning Committee is working very hard and has presented options. What is the department doing to make more of this information available? We realize that there is training and that there has to be expansion of programs. What were the recommendations of the psychiatric working group and the Rural Physician Action Plan Co-ordinating Committee? There could be a solution here to our shortage of doctors. There are initiatives that have taken place in other provinces, and I'm wondering if the department has compared the situation here in Alberta to, say, what the Ontario government has done.

Could the minister or his officials answer: how many foreign doctors are currently delivering pizzas instead of babies? How long will it take to accurately determine the equivalencies and competencies of these foreign doctors? Could we get an explanation of what the Physician Resource Planning Committee means when it states that "in rural Alberta, recruitment is already directed more toward skill sets than formal certification"?

Now, as there is a shortage of psychiatrists and one of the leading costs to the health care system is emergencies in illness such as depression, what is happening, for instance, with re-entry positions in this specialty and others? What's being done to make psychiatry more attractive to graduating medical students?

What studies are occurring to find out why certain specialties are not attractive? I was almost horrified to read last year in the Alberta Health report, quite an extensive report on nurses and health occupation shortages across the province – this was in the Legislature Library – that so many people see a career in the health professions as not attractive. This was something that was identified by the minister's own study. I'm wondering how we can make this profession more attractive to young people. I don't know whether it's because there's just part-time or casual work. It's something that we really have to address.

Why will only 18 percent of graduates in radiology practise in this province? Why are there no resources identified by the psychiatry section of the AMA?

The cost savings of increased usage of residents versus doctors. This is not the time to get into a debate on Bill 11, but I have some concern about who is going to train the doctors. Are they going to be trained in the public sector and wind up in private clinics/hospitals?

Now, with the doctors, some have complained about the billing process. Why not process billings for Christmas over the Christmas and New Year period?

That takes care of that series of questions, but I have a few more regarding the business plan, one in particular, Madam Chairman, before I forget. I've been watching with interest – and I think it's a very good idea – the CHOICE program, which has been developed in the last four years by the Capital health authority. Is this going to become, if it has not already, a provincewide initiative? One of the solutions to an effective delivery system for health care is an increase in adequate home care, and this CHOICE program is certainly going to allow seniors who have some difficulty to remain independently in their own homes. It's a day program. I would like to know from the department exactly how much money this CHOICE program costs. There are three sites set up in the region that I'm aware of and one more that is in the planning stages, and if the minister could share that with me, I would be very grateful.

The goals and objectives of the business plan. One here that I note with interest is a goal "to sustain and improve the delivery of accessible, effective, quality health services to Albertans who need them." The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark was talking earlier of the wait list for MRI, joint replacements, heart surgery, and long-term care. I understand that $10 million will be allocated for specialized high-tech equipment. What measures are in place to ensure that this funding will go towards improving access to MRIs in public facilities?

9:32

A key objective is "to ensure sustainability of health services," and the first strategy to meet this objective is to "prohibit two-tiered health care, while permitting health authorities to contract for surgical services." This statement, I think, is a clear contradiction to the proposed Bill 11. Why is this government intent on contracting out surgical services in a manner that will clearly contradict its own stated goals and objectives in the business plan?

Another goal is "to improve the health and well-being of Albertans through provincial strategies for protection, promotion and prevention." The 2000-2003 business plan lists mortality rates for injury and suicide as a key performance measure, but of a total funding increase for the Alberta Mental Health Board of $16 million, I believe, over the previous fiscal year, only $5 million will be earmarked for community mental health programs. Now, my question would be this: does the government believe that this is a sufficient measure for addressing the problem of suicide?

The business plan also lists child and immunization rates as another key performance measure. What immunization strategies has the Department of Health and Wellness developed? I noted somewhere in the estimates that there is, I believe, a $5 million increase in money being set aside for vaccines. Is this as a result of the immunization campaign that was just conducted here successfully by the regional health authority? Also, the chicken pox vaccine: is there planning going on? I would commend the minister and his officials if there is long-term planning going on. Do they know about any other outbreaks that perhaps the public should be aware of? I did notice that, and I'm not sure if it's a $5 million increase from last year, but I think it was close. Will the immunization strategy address recent concerns from aboriginal communities for access to immunization against meningitis?

Now, in the business plan another goal is "to support and promote a system for health." The business plan cites "public ratings of the quality of the health system" as a key performance measure. It sets a target rate for the year 2003 of 70 percent of Albertans who rate the system as excellent or good. I don't know what the current target would be, but a recent poll said that 36 percent of Albertans were satisfied with the health care delivery system. Why is this target rate so low? The Premier has recently labeled Albertans who wish to contribute to the current debate on private surgical facilities as left-wing nuts. What are the ministry's plans for full and meaningful consultation with the public on current and proposed health care plans and actions? If he could share that with us, I would be delighted, because the recent public debate on the proposed Bill 11 reveals that this government has, I believe, not properly consulted with the key health care system stakeholders such as doctors, nurses, and the other health care professionals.

This leads to another question for the hon. minister. How does his ministry intend to involve key health care industry stakeholders in its present and future health care plans and actions? Is this advisory committee or council, as it's referred to in Bill 11, part of that?

Another goal from the business plan is "to optimize the effectiveness of the Ministry." The business plan states that one of its objectives is "to effectively manage available resources, including information and technology." How will the hon. minister ensure that the public's confidential medical records remain confidential?

Now, I have a few general questions before I wrap up. Many Health and Wellness programs will now be funded exclusively through lottery revenues. Is this the trend for health care financing? Is this method of financing sustainable? A key concern of this government is the affordability and sustainability of the health care system. My next question is: how does this province compare to other provinces or countries in terms of percentage of GDP versus health status indicators? What progress has the government made in convincing physicians to adopt alternative payment mechanisms which would offer the potential for cost savings and quality of care?

In this year's budget I notice that it provides for the Premier's Advisory Council on Health and the health service utilization commission. Can I get an explanation of what the rationale is for establishing these bodies? Do not regional health authorities already monitor their health services utilization? Does the creation of the Premier's Advisory Council on Health anticipate the acceptance of Bill 11?

In closing, what plans does the ministry have for health advisory and appeals services?

Thank you. I will cede the microphone to my colleague from Edmonton-Meadowlark.

THE CHAIRMAN: Did you want to say something first, Mr. Minister?

MR. JONSON: If I might, Madam Chairman, I would like to respond to a few of the issues raised by the previous questioner.

First of all, there was the first question, about overall national health workforce planning. There is at the national level a committee that involves the national stakeholders, involves the provincial governments, and that overall activity is expected to provide an overall report in May of this year. I just want to emphasize that there is such an activity that's been recognized by health ministers nationally. It is under way, and there will be the report.

A second item that I would like to respond to, Madam Chairman, is in terms of the number of physicians in the province. I can give you the actual number of doctors, but the important thing is that we have today almost exactly the same number of doctors per capita as we had in 1992-93. There has been a slight increase, of course, because our overall population has been increasing.

With respect to the health workforce as well, there has been over that same period of time, '92-93 to the present, an 11 percent increase in the total health workforce in the province. Right here I have 33,680 in 1995-96, and today, from the most recent statistics at least, 1998-99, I have 37,290. There are those stats that I just wanted to refer to.

9:42

I've referenced the physician resource planning activities. There was a reference to foreign doctors resident in Alberta. Although it's been a modest shift, we have for the first time in the province specifically recognized in a funding initiative for internships that a certain number of spaces should be reserved for those doctors who are resident here to qualify for practice.

The other two areas I'd like to touch on very quickly are the areas of mental health and particularly children's mental health. I've answered this question in the House, and that is that the overall proportion of the mental health budget for community mental health has doubled in the past period of time from 1992-93 to the present. The portion of the budget for hospital care and acute care has remained constant, I think, gone up about 2 or 3 percent, so there certainly has been a shift of resources there.

We are, as I've indicated, increasing our commitment to children's mental health. The amount of money that we're spending on children's mental health is not confined to the $5 million last year and $10 million this year recommended by the Bonnie Laing committee. Those funds are in addition to money that is internal to the mental health care budget that goes to children's mental health, and I've mentioned some of the initiatives there.

Finally, there was a question in reference to immunization. Alberta Health and Wellness has an overall five-year immunization plan. We are putting resources into that, and that is reflected in this budget. It's in the "protection, promotion and prevention" area of the budget, and that overall section is increasing significantly next year from $143.5 million to $168.6 million, approximately an 18 percent increase.

Finally, Madam Chairman, there was a reference earlier in the discussion this morning questioning rising administrative costs as a proportion of overall expenditure. I just want to indicate that with our health authorities, administration expenses have come down from, I think, running about 6 percent when they were established to an average across the system of 4.1 percent of their total expenditures.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

Hugh, you had another question?

MR. MacDONALD: Yes. Thank you. If you don't mind, I have one question for the hon. minister at this time, and that is regarding the teaching hospitals. We have to ensure, of course, that we educate future health care professionals and conduct research and provide clinical services. I was curious what initiatives have been taken – now, with all due respect, the Auditor General mentions this under advanced education and career development – regarding the teaching hospitals and the maintaining and recruitment of doctors for the medical schools, the teaching doctors to teach the next generation. There was some concern about compensation levels for these individuals, and I was wondering if the minister had any initiatives to ensure that there is a stable and satisfied staff at our teaching hospitals. The Auditor General had some concern about this.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

MR. JONSON: I'll just answer that. We have in this budget, as I recall, completed the implementation of the Bonnie Laing funding report recommendations with respect to teaching hospitals. We will add in this business plan the $12 million, which was phased in in steps, but we'll have raised our contribution by $12 million in terms of our support for the faculties. Specifically we're not supporting the academic side, but we're supporting the practicum side and the expenses the faculty incurs there.

Also, if you're referring to the agreement for reimbursement for residents, we have, as I understand it, reached an agreement there with them in terms of their salaries or reimbursement. There are also funds in the budget for that. So we certainly have a commitment here to our teaching hospitals.

MR. MacDONALD: Okay. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Go ahead, Linda.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Just for the record I would like to make note of the significant change in the reporting format and the fact that this business plan means less and less in terms of relevant actual statistical measures. The fact that the ministry is now putting in key performance measures but only identifying targets and omitting to provide past years' statistics and current year statistics is significant. I have been a critic of the performance measures utilized by this government since my election in '97, but this is a further reduction in accountable reporting, and I think it's of merit to report that on the public record.

[Mr. Broda in the chair]

There are numerous omissions in this report that are not mentioned. One of the huge areas relates to the issue of poverty and we have had consecutive initiatives and organizations, including the government's own children's summit, raise the increasing impact that poverty has on the health of Albertans, particularly our younger populations. I do not see mention made in your report, sir, of that particular issue. It's also surprising given the fact that the municipalities in this province recently formally published their own report on the concentration of poverty levels in our communities. I would like to ask just who might be the leader in this province in addressing that particular issue if not the department of health.

Further, we have seen on a national level Alberta cited in the report by Armine Yalnizyan, Canada's Great Divide: The Politics of the Growing Gap between Rich and Poor in the 1990s. Specifically, this report says:

In Alberta, income disparities spiked up in 1991 . . .

In 1993, policy changes started to exclude some people's eligibility for financial help . . . significantly reducing outlays for social assistance. . . . In less than three years [as we're all aware] welfare caseloads were cut in half . . .

After 1993, market incomes of the poorest 10 percent of families raising children rose more rapidly in Alberta than anywhere else . . . Yet after-tax incomes of this group, which includes families without market incomes and receiving social assistance, eroded throughout the period.

Between 1993 and 1996, Alberta saw the sharpest sustained rise in income disparities in this country. But in 1997, an election year the province introduced a tax credit for working-poor families.

That single contribution aside, Alberta has remained in the top three provinces with the largest income gap between rich and poor, and it is an enormous omission, sir, that your report does not acknowledge those types of realities that are in existence in this province.

I would like to also just briefly comment on the recent PDD report that was released this week and the fact that in my opinion this report did nothing more than regurgitate, recycle, and review the issues. There are no hard and fast commitments in this document relative to the critical issues that exist: the fact that the sector of disabilities has been consecutively underfunded by this province, that we have huge issues about the recruitment of professionals to work in this area and have huge issues about disparities in working conditions and in wages.

While the government talked at length about reviewing those particular areas, we really see no hard-and-fast commitments that would come into play before the next provincial election. I think that the tactic of announcing funding commitments for three years – it's not lost on us that there's going to be a provincial election in the next year. So to make a funding commitment over a three-year period is completely bogus, and the public realizes that. The next government is under absolutely no commitment to uphold the funding commitments that you made, sir. In fact, you may not be in this post six months from now. That reality is not lost, and regrettably, despite the criticalness of that particular area and the need for focus and priority, we do not see much in the Building Better Bridges report that is going to make a substantive difference on the frontline level in the disability sector or on the front line for the population living with disabilities.

9:52

I would like to also briefly raise issues relative to aboriginal health and the lack of specific data in the report relative to the health status of our aboriginal population, both in terms of physical, mental, and income-related issues. We intend to bring more specific questions relative to that issue at a later time, but if the government is undertaking initiatives in any of those areas that I've spoken about – poverty, PDD, aboriginal health – then I would be most interested in receiving them.

In the 1998 estimates both in Environment and in Health there was discussion about partnerships and projects relative to the departments' working. One particular citation related to correlating data on oil and gas wells and solution gas flaring and venting with data for pollutants, environmental receptors, and human and animal health. Further, Alberta Health committed that they would improve the collection of human health data respecting the impacts of solution gas flaring. They also committed that they would increase their collection of data relative to intensive livestock operations. Those, again, are not things that we see mentioned substantively, if at all, in this budgetary process or report.

My thanks. I'll pass the microphone over to my colleague from Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: I wonder, just before we go there, Mr. Chairman, if I could just comment briefly on the PDD aspect.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Is that all right? Any objections?

MS LEIBOVICI: It's just that there's 25, 27 minutes left. If the associate minister can promise me he'd do it two minutes, then that would be a yes, okay, but the reality is that he can put it in writing as well.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Well, I think it might take a couple of minutes more.

MS LEIBOVICI: Okay. That's what I thought.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Could we proceed, and then could you maybe answer that later?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Yes.

MR. JACQUES: Does it make any difference? I mean, aren't we just tracking their time in total?

MS LEIBOVICI: No, it's not. It's two hours from the onset.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Yes, it's two hours. So if he answers, then it'll be just added on.

MS LEIBOVICI: It takes off our time.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Is it taken off? It's taken off. Okay.

MS LEIBOVICI: If it were added on, it would be a different story.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: In fairness to the Official Opposition, I will make my comments later.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you. I appreciate that.

Just to continue on, I have a long list of questions. I doubt that I'll get through them, and what I will commit to do is to put them in writing this year and to table them as well. I know that we have one more opportunity to address the health budget, but that opportunity will be limited, and I believe these are questions that are important in determining how the $5 billion budget of Health and Wellness is being spent in this province.

Just to backtrack, though, to vaccines and the chicken pox vaccine, which wasn't answered by the minister, it's my understanding that the number of deaths of children from chicken pox is higher than from meningitis in this province. That is why I'm asking whether or not the chicken pox vaccine will be a vaccine that's available without cost to children in the province. Also, as part of the $5 million – it's under one of the votes; I don't have it in front of me right now – in terms of vaccines, does that $5 million provide dollars back to the regional health authorities for the cost of actually administering that vaccine through the workforce that's utilized in the administration of that vaccine, as well as for the supplies?

To go back to the votes that have to do with the regional health authorities at the point where I left off, one of the issues the minister keeps announcing is that there will be more major surgeries done within the regional health authorities, and what I find interesting is that there's an actual figure put on the number of people that will be able to access these procedures. I'm wondering how those numbers are derived and whether in fact those are hard-and-fast caps. If you happen to be number 3,452 and the number of heart operations that are done is 3,451, do you then not get your heart operation? I would doubt that very much, but I just find it interesting that there is an actual figure put on the number of operations for major surgeries that are provided on a yearly basis within this province. I'd like to know how that happens.

[Mrs. Tarchuk in the chair]

The minister may not be able to tell us this, but I would hope that with the contracts being up for negotiations I believe this year, there has been a percentage put into the budget to address those contracts and the increases within those contracts. I would hope that that is a realistic figure that has been put into the regional health authority budgets, because if not, we know that the budgets will therefore be diminished and less dollars be available for care. It would be interesting to know what, in fact, the minister did provide. In the past that has been available in the budgets as a workforce adjustment; I think that's what the line item was called. I'd like to know if that's available this year as well.

There are some other questions that I have with regards to the direction of the minister of health to the regional health authorities. A working group that the minister of health is part of, that all provincial ministers are part of as well as the federal minister of health, came to some decisions and recommendations around how to identify and how to ensure that services would be delivered in a timely manner to citizens. One of those requirements or requests was that hospitals be able to "identify provision of inappropriate care, and work to reduce inappropriateness by implementing tools of utilization review and utilization management." I'm wondering where we are in this province with regards to implementing that particular recommendation.

Another recommendation was that every hospital implement concurrent review of admission, continued stay and discharge processes using well validated protocols and criteria, and that this be implemented with a sense of immediacy.

I'm wondering where we are in this province in implementing that.

Also, "that hospitals encourage physicians in the implementation of evidence-based clinical practice guidelines." I know that actually a member of the government, I believe it was, asked a question with regards to why it is taking so long to implement and to come to conclusions on clinical practice guidelines. I'd like to know where we are in that process right now and what the implications are of not having CPGs in this province.

Another recommendation:

That hospitals apply utilization review and utilization management principles and protocols to all service departments, not just patient care areas, and that laboratory and diagnostic imaging services be specifically identified as high priority areas.

Again I refer back to my comments that in the regs it indicates that every hospital or every regional health authority has to have a utilization committee. What in fact has been occurring? Are those utilization committees the vehicle for ensuring that each hospital within an RHA does have the ability to implement these recommendations?

Another recommendation was that "timely access to services in either the hospital or the community must be guaranteed, and information about waiting times be made public," and that "waiting lists, where they exist, be prioritized by [CPGs] based on clinical need."

Now, I thought that one was interesting in that we have all this information about waiting lists, yet there doesn't seem to be any standardization with regards to how waiting lists are addressed in this province and across the country.

10:02

I know that we're all anxiously awaiting Tom Noseworthy's study, but the reality is that we seem to be heading down a path of privatization based on waiting lists that are not standardized. I guess the question is: are those figures accurate? What are the figures the department is using when they talk about waiting lists? Can those waiting lists be made public, and when will those waiting lists be made public?

Regionalization is a whole issue in and of itself. I understand there was a presentation made by Donna Wilson to the standing policy committee with regards to regionalization, and I would like to know what the recommendations were of that standing policy committee with regards to the analysis she brought up. One of the interesting shifts in our health care system over the last seven years has been a shift of responsibility, it seems, from the department of health to the regional health authorities, yet the department of health is footing the bill. It's quite a large bill as well.

The question is: how effective has this regionalization process been? Does the department have the answers as they're sending over the dollars to the RHAs? I'm going to provide a list of questions that I'm sure the department has answers to quite readily with regards to the costs of regionalization. They are as follows: what were the costs of setting up corporate offices and related corporate support services in each of the 19 health regions, including the Cancer Board and the Mental Health Board, for each year since 1993? What was the total cost of layoffs and other personnel changes resulting from merger, downsizing, and other changes as well? What happened to all the equipment that used to be in the hospitals, and what was the amount realized back to the department of health if that particular equipment was sold? Hospital beds, X-ray machines: the list goes on.

What was the cost of capital construction to develop offices, administrative offices and others, for the regional health authorities and their staff and the administration of the regional health authorities as well as the consolidation that occurred within the regional health authorities? What was the cost of hospital and health facility renovations for each year since 1993 as a direct result of regionalization? What was the total cost of Alberta Health and regional health authority personnel time to plan, host, attend, and develop reports for health roundtables, workshops, and summits since 1993, including rentals, travel, communications, personnel, and consulting fees? What was the cost of the government committees to address issues in health system redevelopment such as the Provincial Health Council of Alberta, the long-term care advisory committee, the MLA committee on the review of health boundaries, and the Health System Funding Review Committee, just to name a few?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: I think there should be a point of order raised here. I appreciate where the hon. member is going with these questions, but they seem much more of an historical nature, of things in the past. My impression is that we're here today dealing with Budget 2000-2001. While those are very valid questions, hon. member, I would submit to you, Madam Chairman, that those are the types of questions that frequently come up in another forum called Public Accounts, where we are reviewing historical actions and accounting for historical expenditures. I would ask the chair to please make a ruling on this point of order at this time.

MS LEBOVICI: In actual fact, Madam Chairman, the reality is that in order to know what the costs are of this current budget and whether the dollars within this current budget are being allocated appropriately, you need to have the historical facts. There has to be an analysis that the department of health has at its fingertips in order to ascertain what the costs are that are being provided to each RHA at this point in time – it only makes sense – in order to be able to evaluate what the department's budget is, which is what this process is about. We're not rubber-stamping a budget. We're asking questions in order to be able to evaluate whether taxpayers' dollars are being appropriately allocated. It's as simple as that. In order to do that, we need the historical background. I hope this isn't eating into my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: Hung, on this point.

MR. PHAM: On this point of order I agree with the hon. member about the need to know statistical and historical data, but that is part of the research process you do before you come to this committee meeting. I hope you are not doing the research on the spot. If you want to look for this information, you should have asked for the public accounts before you came here. That's what I'm suggesting.

MS LEIBOVICI: The reality is that I have tried to obtain this information, and it's not in the public accounts, so I assume it is within the department of health under a number of areas where they have research analysis capabilities. We are voting millions of dollars to deal with those particular areas. In particular, if you want to look at what they are, those services are under ministry support services. They are probably within the associate minister's office. It has to do with vote 1.0.5, policy and planning services. It has to do with vote 1.0.6, health information and accountability. The list goes on. So this is information that these branches of the department are providing and should provide. It should be available to the public in determining whether or not we should be paying $3,838,000 for the policy and planning services of the department of health.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Could I get some clarification, maybe some confirmation here? There are other mechanisms by which this information could be requested. Is that right?

MS LEIBOVICI: No. The reality is that in determining this budget which is in front of us, the only mechanism is the process we have right now. Public accounts is historical and is a year behind in terms of over-viewing what the expenses were of the department.

I'm not asking for an auditing of the expenses of the department. I'm asking: what is the research and the information that has led the department this year to spend $5.3 billion on health? As part of that $5.3 billion expenditure a huge amount goes to the regional health authorities which were established by this province. There has to be an analysis somewhere as to the efficiency of the regional health authorities.

MR. JACQUES: Well, it's an interesting take, but if you go back to the substance of the hon. member's questions, they're specifically asking for information relative to regional health authorities and, more particularly, financial information. I would submit, Madam Chairman, that if you look at the regional health authority audited financial statements, which are indeed a public document . . .

MS LEIBOVICI: And I have looked at them.

MR. JACQUES: . . . and if the member or the researcher spent a little time on that, they can provide the answer. I think the point of the point of order is very valid. Either we're here for the public accounts or we're here for the business plan, but we can't be here for both.

MR. MacDONALD: Madam Chairman, 63 percent of the total budget of the department of health goes to the regional health authorities.

MS LEIBOVICI: The reality is that the business plan talks about improving the continuity of health services. It talks about improving the quality of health services. It talks about ensuring the accessibility to quality health services. My questions directly relate to those particular issues that are outlined in the business plan to see whether in fact we are improving the quality of health services in this province by the expenditure of dollars under the regional health authority vote, whether we are improving the continuity of health services. How do you judge that unless in fact you know what the expenditures, what the effectiveness has been over the years? It is a logical question to put forward: where have we gone in the last while with regard to expenditures in the regional health authority budgets?

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. I wonder if I could ask the minister if he'd like to comment on this matter. Is this information that's readily available?

MR. JONSON: In my view the information is available. There are the annual reports of the regional health authorities. There is the avenue of the public accounts. There's also the avenue of motions for returns with respect to addressing this information. But I'm not the one to rule on a point of order. I would suggest, Madam Chairman, that we just proceed.

10:12

THE CHAIRMAN: And leave the questions as is. Okay. Let's just do that. Continue on.

MS LEIBOVICI: Okay. Thank you. I will then continue.

The other questions in terms of the analysis of the effectiveness of regionalization deal with the costs of duplication of services in health regions, for instance with regard to data analysis, computer systems, and communications; an analysis of why there's a threefold increase in medical procedures in the last three years given that the population has not increased by that amount; the total annual contracted-out services by for-profit and not-for-profit and the percentage of funding per regional health authority by classification; the contracts and the costs of all consultants who have been hired by the government to research, promote, and otherwise provide advice to the government relative to the contracting-out proposal; the number of empty beds and closed facilities by regional health authority; the cost of inpatient stay procedures by regional health authority, and – and I did touch on this earlier, as did the Member for Edmonton-Riverview – reports on the analysis of the capacity of the regional health authority relative to surgery, wait lists, and in-and-out patient services.

Another question that I have with regards to out-of-province costs is: how many people within this province are sent out of province, if any, to the United States or to other provinces for treatment? What was the cost, and what kind of treatments are being provided? That basically is the list of questions there.

Another question with regards to the regional health authorities is not an analysis of their efficiency but is with regards to their medical bylaws. Do all regional health authorities have staff medical bylaws approved, and if not, why not? Who determines what those standards are?

There are reports that are supposed to be available to the minister with regards to the number of people waiting for long-term care beds in acute hospitals. I believe the first report was due on August 31, 1999. Can the minister indicate what is the current number of people who are occupying acute care beds that should really be in long-term care facilities? Can the minister explain the rising costs of administration? You could do it over the last three years, or you could do it for this year, with regards to the administration within the regional health authority structures.

What is the percentage of admissions to hospital emergency departments that requires non-surgical intervention? We know that the minister has often said that the hospital structure is perhaps not the most efficient structure for dealing with procedures. It would be interesting to know what is the actual percentage of admissions to emergency departments that require non-surgical interventions.

Now, I have some specific questions with regards to some of the regional health authorities. There are questions with regards to the Calgary regional health authority to start with. Can the minister indicate what the situation is with regards to the hospital inventory system in the Calgary region at this point in time? Last year I was told by the minister that the Calgary regional health authority property management group would be able to identify the properties, the individual lease agreements, that the Calgary regional health authority has with providers. However, I was also told that there was difficulty in providing this information regarding ownership, cost of services, and number of contractors. Given the new willingness to open contracts that are provided with private companies, I am again asking this year regarding who owns these buildings – there were 22 leased facilities last year in the Calgary region – which real estate companies were utilized, what the lease dates are, and that the access to the contracts be maintained.

Also, with regards to the inventory of contracted clinical services, last year there were 169. It would be good in this spirit of openness that we would have not only the names but also the cost of the contracts and the ownership of the clinics.

The minister has indicated recently that the Consumers' Association study with regards to cataracts in Calgary is not accurate. It would be helpful if the department of health study that indicates that that is not accurate was released to the public and an explanation as to why younger individuals in Calgary are now requiring more cataract surgery to be done. Studies indicate that cataracts do not occur, on average, unless you are older. So the question is: why in Calgary are there so many younger individuals who require cataract surgery? [interjection] It might be all that sunshine. It would be nice to know.

The department of health has been involved with the Crowfoot Village Family Practice pilot project. Can the minister provide information as to the quote, unquote, rigorous monitoring and auditing system that's in place with regards to that pilot project? Can you provide a copy of the funding agreement? Who actually provides the funding for the evening nursing staff? It is my information that it's the regional health authority that provides the funding for the Crowfoot clinic and that it comes out of the 8th and 8th clinic. I'm asking for confirmation whether it's the family practice group that is paying for that or the regional health authority.

How does the Crowfoot Village Family Practice group interrelate with the Calgary regional health authority home care unit? As the program is now at least six months old, what analysis has been completed with regards to that particular program? The pilot project is, I think, a worthwhile one. I would just like to know what the monitoring and auditing one is, because I do agree that we have to look at different formats of providing care.

There has been a lot of discrepancy from the Calgary regional health authority with regards to the active beds that are available in the Calgary region, and I'm sure the department of health can clear up those discrepancies as to what the number of acute care beds was prior to restructuring, both active and inactive, what the numbers are now, and the ratio of active beds per population prior to restructuring in 1993 and now. We seem to be getting differing figures from the regional health authority itself with regards to that.

The Calgary regional health authority recently undertook to have a physician task force. I have asked them for the information as to who specifically was on that. I have not to date received that information, and I'm wondering if the minister can provide that information, because it was that task force that, it seems, has now led to the contracting out of the MRI services in the Calgary region, the recommendations of that task force.

The satellite emergency departments that are being planned in the Calgary regional health authority: is there money allocated in this year's budget for those satellite departments? The community health centres that the Calgary regional health authority was planning at a cost of $47 million: are those actually line items – which we don't get – that are in the regional health authority budget? Those were community health centres in the south, north, west, and northeast, and they were part of the primary care initiative.

10:22

Another issue that I've had brought up to me, that is a crossprovincial issue, is: what happens when provincial land is utilized in a public/private partnership? What are the tax laws that actually operate for those partnerships? Are they considered to be operating under public tax laws, the tax laws that would govern public health facilities, or are they tax laws that are for private health facilities?

The Palliser regional health authority. Can you explain the decision that was made, unless it's been reversed fairly recently, about South Country Village with regards to their capital funding request? If they have not received any, why not? It's a nonprofit, voluntary organization, to my understanding, and it's a model for aging in place.

There are some issues around the Northern Lights region, whether or not they are able to provide adequate coverage because of a lack of physicians. Does the minister of health see that there is any role for his involvement when there are citizens in this province who are unable to access health because of decisions made by regional health authorities?

The Lakeland regional health authority. I don't know that there was anything in the budget specifically, though the Minister of Infrastructure had indicated that there would be, with regards to retrofitting the Fort Saskatchewan health centre to bring it up to code because it is not up to code. Where does Fort Saskatchewan rank in terms of priority for a new facility? If the minister could also provide where the majority of Lakeland surgeries are performed and what the percentage is of surgeries performed at Fort Saskatchewan.

THE CHAIRMAN: If I could just interrupt for a second. The time is up, but we are adding another four minutes for the time I took for that point of order. So you have another four minutes left.

MS LEBOVICI: I appreciate that. Great. Thank you.

Congratulations on finally appointing a board to the Lakeland region. It's been a long haul. I have had one request as to finding out what the recommendations actually were from the committee that was chaired by Terry Cavanagh, with a footnote that there was no representation on the board from the county of Two Hills.

Health region No. 5. We did talk about that. I know that the Didsbury hospital is a thorny issue, that I will be watching with interest as to what the minister will do in that particular area.

Mistahia, with regards to the funding formulas, we have talked about as well. As I indicated earlier it has been recommended in the past to the department of health that the quality and time lines of the information used in the population-based funding formula be improved and that the consistency and predictability within that funding formula be improved as well. There were recommendations that were provided by the AG's department.

I've had some disturbing calls – and I think this is a provincial function to oversee – from areas throughout the region that some of the hospitals do not have adequate supplies on hand, that they run out of basics like syringes, salve, dressings. I'm wondering whether in fact that has ever been brought to the minister's attention, because it would appear that with the amounts being provided to each regional health authority, that should not be occurring, that the health professionals cannot perform their duties because of a lack of basic supplies within the hospitals.

The Chinook regional health authority: another interesting area to look at in this province as to the status of the plan. Can the minister explain – and this would be in conjunction with the long-term care review that was provided as well – how seniors will be guaranteed better care if they are moved from the nursing home environment to an assisted-living environment, if that is the case? We know that there are certain services that are not provided, that in fact the standards of care are less because of the different requirements for a nursing home versus an assisted-living environment, and that the out-of-pocket costs are increased to individuals who move into assisted-living environments. So can the minister explain some of those conditions that are made?

In particular, I have had a complaint with regards to the post acute rehab program being closed down, combined with the geriatrics assessment rehab unit. The facility that these individuals are being placed into, the auxiliary building, has inadequate heating, plumbing, and air conditioning. If the minister, as he's reviewing that whole area, could explain the decisions that have been made.

Also, there is an increasing concern that I'm hearing from across the province with regards to long-term care, home care, and other areas, that I won't be able to address but will send to the minister, with regards to the ratio of staff to residents, that those are unacceptable.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. We are at the end of the Official Opposition portion of the meeting. We can move forward to the next, which is specifically allocated to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Hearing no questions from that member, we can move on to government members.

We'll start with Dave, please.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Are we going to go for two hours or an hour just questioning, or can we go question by question with an answer back?

THE CHAIRMAN: You can go question by question. Whatever you want.

MR. BRODA: Okay. I have several questions, and I would like them addressed. I guess my first question would be to . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Can I just interrupt for a second?

MR. BRODA: Sure.

THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Minister, what is your preference with regards to his question?

MR. JONSON: I would suggest that government members perhaps give me their particular questions, and I'll try to respond. Madam Chairman, I wonder if I could request – and this is the government side's time for questioning. I think it is important to have, if it's acceptable, the associate minister respond on the questions that were raised with respect to the PDD area and also AADAC, if he wishes to comment.

THE CHAIRMAN: I think that would be fine.
Gene.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you. I want to respond to questions that were posed by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview with respect to the recently released PDD report, Building Better Bridges, the final report regarding programs and services in support of persons with developmental disabilities. She made some comments this morning that are not factual, and I would like to correct those for the record.

I believe she started by saying that there were no commitments made in the report or no commitments made by the government to this important area. In fact, that's not true. Commitments have been made, and I want to start by apprising that member of a couple of them. For example, in the area of current deficit forecasts, which is issue 1 under official recommendations, there was a recommendation that I made in the report that says that the province of Alberta should "eliminate the current PDD deficit by providing a further $5 million" for the PDD program. That commitment was made and demonstrated by the government of Alberta, and that $5 million deficit will be accounted for and eliminated in the new budget. So that's already been done.

Another important aspect and commitment that has been made and is also reflected and recommended in the report is with regard to issue 2, which is the future funding forecasts, wherein the recommendation states that the 2000/2001 Provincial budget for the PDD system incorporate:

- the $10 million infused in July, 1999; and,
- the additional $5 million recommended [for deficit elimination] as part of the base budget for PDD.

Surely she must know what base budgets are. That, too, has been done, and it's reflected in the report.

In fact, there are additional items within issue 2 on future funding that take into account issues like PDD recipient growth and the need for additional funds to deal with that as well as getting on with improving information gathering, information tracking, and accounting systems for PDD, all of which have been provided for, hon. member, in the budget. In fact, the total budget over this past year or so has gone from $283 million to this important area up to $293 million in July of 1999, and now a further $5 million is being added to eradicate the remainder of the deficit. On top of that we have a grand total expenditure over the next year projected at $321 million approximately, which is a very significant increase.

10:32

I might point out to that particular hon. member that that is one of the largest increases to any government program. The government of Alberta seriously, seriously recognizes how important this area is and how vulnerable many of the recipients of this program funding are. Therefore, we are committed to assisting them in a way that will arrive at what everyone wants: a more stable, a more predictable but also a sustainable level of program support and service support for persons with developmental disabilities.

I want to just mention a couple of other areas. Before I do, I would just say that in a general sense the recommendations that are presented in this particular report have come about as a result of a very extensive and a very thorough review process that involved literally hundreds and hundreds of PDD recipients, parents and guardians of PDD recipients, service providers, community agencies, board members who serve at the community level, and board members who serve at other levels within the PDD structure in their local areas. A couple of things were extremely extremely, emphatically, clearly pointed out to me and others who were listening to those various inputs.

One of them, Madam Chairman, was the fact that because of the extremely sensitive issues that affect persons with development disabilities the community, broadly speaking, wanted government to move cautiously and to move carefully with respect to any changes that might be made to this important PDD program. Equally important, that same constituent community also said: please, involve us in the process. That is why the balance of the recommendations are out there for additional feedback from the constituent community that we are helping and have traditionally done a very good job helping. Having said that, I would direct you, for example, to the issue with respect to support for acquired brain injury individuals, which is issue 5 on page 35 of the report.

I'll just end here by saying that there are various partnerships spelled out, Madam Chairman, and there are dates within which those particular recommendations have to be acted upon if the recommendations are absorbed. Suffice it to say that one of our more interested groups in this whole process, the Alberta Association for Community Living, for example, gave the report a very resounding two thumbs up by stating that they commend the government on ending the PDD funding crisis.

Now, I could go on with a lot of other stuff, but I just wanted to correct some of misimpressions the Member for Edmonton-River-view read into the record.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Thank you.

I've got Dave, Hung, Yvonne, and then Denis.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Over the past few months considerable public concern has been expressed across the province about the future of the publicly funded health care system. There have been a lot of innuendoes out there and some misinformation provided by the opposition and the Friends of Medicare and whoever else.

MRS. SLOAN: Would those be left-wing nuts?

MR. BRODA: They could very well be, yes.

My question is: what can I point to in this business plan that will assure Albertans about its sustainability with all of its founding principles intact? That is one question. The minister can respond, or he can give it to me in writing.

The next question that I have is: what are some of the strategies that the department hopes to investigate to ensure that the public system can be sustained within current levels of expenditure without compromising quality of service or people's health in the long run?

The next question. The allocation to Health and Wellness of 33 percent of the provincial expenditure I believe is the highest it's ever been. Is there enough to do what we need to do in the future, especially in light of all the CUPE demands right now for salary increases?

The next question that I would have. There's been mention of immunization, and I'd like to know what this government is doing to improve the prevention and control of influenza in long-term care facilities and similar institutions. Will the government make immunization of health care workers mandatory, as has been recommended in Ontario?

The next question: will Alberta Health and Wellness provide the drugs needed for long-term care to manage an outbreak should there ever be one?

I know that we had also brought up in the business plan here as well – there were some questions or comments on AADAC in there. What is AADAC really doing to maintain the priority of youth? We're finding a lot of problems with youth right now, whether it be alcohol or drugs. What plan is there on that? Again, maybe the associate minister could respond either orally or in writing. What are AADAC's long-term plans for the prevention that we're talking about? I know that there have been a lot of good things, positive things that have happened in AADAC, and I certainly encourage what's been happening, but there's more to be done. Maybe you could address the long-term plan we're looking at for prevention.

What partnering activities are established or planned to focus on this prevention? Are there public/private partnerships even within the communities themselves, within industry? Is there anything that we can see happening there?

Again to the minister. We've looked at the initiative for a $2.2 million increase in the budget for physicians in rural Alberta, the on-call physician program. I'd like to know how that is working. How successful is the physician plan regarding the recruitment and retention of physicians in rural and remote Alberta? We find that we've brought in some new physicians from South Africa or wherever. Once they've been established in rural Alberta for two or three years, do we see a migration into urban centres from rural Alberta? If that could be answered.

Also, does the minister foresee the need to continue recruitment of physicians from countries outside Canada in light of the comment made from the report that there were 255 physicians between September '98 and '99? I think that's very positive, and we do have to compliment the physicians that are out there. I know in my own constituency the physicians that have come from South Africa are well received within the community, and I don't see them moving into larger centres. I think they have some very viable businesses in the communities. I just wanted to see what's happening in general throughout the province.

Thank you, Mr. Minister.

THE CHAIRMAN: Did you want to make any comments on those questions at this point, Mr. Minister?

MR. JONSON: No, Madam Chairman. I think there are other government members that would like to pose their questions.

THE CHAIRMAN: Sure.

Okay. Hung.

MR. JONSON: We will, of course, respond as we will to the opposition.

MR. PHAM: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I would like to thank the minister and the associate minister and his staff for an excellent presentation. Before I begin, I would like to pass on my congratulations and special thanks to the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness on behalf of the PDD people. I have received many phone calls and letters in the last few weeks expressing their great satisfaction with the work you have done to address their concerns. So on behalf of those people I would like to thank you for an outstanding job.

10:42

I would like to focus my questions today on one particular area that I briefly raised in last year's budget debate. That is goal 1 of the department: "to sustain and improve the delivery of accessible, effective, quality health services to Albertans who need them." There is one area that is very troubling for me, and I have seen this happening and getting worse for the last year. That is the problem of access for new Canadians. I hope that the deputy minister and the staff that are here today take note of this, because I am going to follow up and ask for a detailed answer to this question.

We have in Alberta an average ratio of patient to doctor of about 580 patients per doctor. In some of the new-Canadian communities, some of the ethnic communities, that ratio is sometimes as high as 5,000 patients per doctor, and that poses tremendous problems for many of these new Canadians when they go and see their physician, because of the language barriers they have. Sometimes they have to wait two to three hours to get in to see a doctor.

Because of the high patient to doctor ratio, these ethnic doctors end up with a higher billing rate than average. Alberta Health has an investigation unit that goes after these people who have higher than average billing rates, and it gets to a point where these doctors are upset and they don't want to have the trouble, so they cut down on hours of operation. That compounds the problem. When they reduce operating hours, the number of patients does not get reduced; they just have to wait longer and longer.

Many of those doctors don't even bother to take appointments any more. They cannot afford to keep an appointment. So people just have to walk into the office and wait, two to three hours sometimes, to get in to see a physician, especially during flu season. Last year I had the flu and had to wait four hours, and I saw many people in that room. It was very, very unacceptable. I think that, you know, it gets to a point where they feel that they're being treated as second-class citizens and that we have two classes of treatment.

My colleague talked earlier about the program we have to recruit physicians from other countries, South Africa for example. We have many qualified physicians here in Canada, but because of the way we do things, those people are being barred from practising medicine. For every person who received medical training overseas, when they come to Canada, if they want to become doctors again, they have to take a qualifying examination. That examination will prove that they have the qualifications to practise medicine in Alberta, and most of the physicians pass that exam easily.

But a second requirement is that they take a two-year internship program, and these internship positions are created in exactly the same number as the number of people who graduate from our undergraduate medical programs. Because of that, these people have no chance at all of practising medicine again. We have many, many people whose talents are being wasted. When we spend money going outside Canada trying to recruit other people, that situation is unacceptable and is not logically making sense. I don't know how long it will take for the department to realize that and find solutions to address that issue.

Last week I had a meeting with many stakeholders from my Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Education Fund Advisory Committee. There were people at that meeting raising that issue. They are thinking of taking this to the Human Rights Commission, their challenge being on employment and discrimination on their country of origin. When they have all this training and all those qualifications and the system systematically locks them out by not providing the opportunity for them to take internship positions, it's not fair to those people or to the taxpayers of Alberta.

We have all this wealth of knowledge and experience that we can tap into. We don't have to spend a lot of money. All we have to do is look at the system and try to change it. I hope that the department staff and the deputy minister and the minister take these concerns into account and try to address them. This problem is not going to go away. It is getting worse and worse. I know that there are doctors who actually moved to B.C. because they could not stand the workload. They could not stand the demand. There are many things that are going right with our health care system, and I would like to have some attention paid to this area.

Thank you.

MRS. FRITZ: I am going to be very brief because I know Denis has a question as well. I wasn't going to make a comment, Mr. Minister, but I'm going to simply because the Member for Edmonton-Riverview commented that she believed that you are spending far too much on the area of prevention and screening programs in particular. I quite frankly was very pleased to see on page 217 that you have allocated $2.3 million for the breast cancer screening program. I happen to think that far too often it's treatment that gets our attention.

THE CHAIRMAN: Yvonne, just one second. I think Linda has a point of order, a clarification maybe.

MRS. SLOAN: I think the hon. member didn't clearly hear what I said. I didn't condemn the province for screening. I said that the incidence of breast cancer and cervical cancer is on the increase and that all they appear to be focused on doing is screening, not looking at the root causes or perhaps the contributing causes of those diseases. So to suggest that I was condemning them for screening is incorrect.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Thank you for that clarification. Yvonne.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I can look at Hansard later, but I was quite surprised at what was said, so I wrote it down verbatim.

I'll just make my comments. I really think it's important to have screening programs, and I think that far too often it's treatment that gets our attention. I know that there are those who believe that a disease care system is really what keeps us healthy, and I think that needs to be balanced with promotion and prevention.

My question to the minister once again – and I've asked it previously for a number of years. I really believe that this is the way in which you are going with this when I see it here in the budget. I know that you're a strong advocate for screening, especially in the area of women's issues, but I'm wondering whether or not this funding is going to be utilized for a desperately needed provincewide breast cancer screening program, which I think should have a holistic women's centered approach and should be targeted at the 50- to 69-year-old age group.

Having said that, as well I notice that just above that you've allocated $4.7 million to the implementation of the cervical cancer screening program. I was really pleased to see that in the budget as well, because I happen to believe it's long overdue. We know that the pap smear is the single most cost-effective screening test that there is in modern medicine. I will be following it closely, because this approach to cervical screening is fairly new this year in that it will be an organized approach. What I would ask in that regard is: how are Alberta women going to be accessing the program? I'm really pleased to see it in place.

Also, just a brief question – I asked you about it in the last estimates – about anorexia and bulimia, you know, the whole area of eating disorders, especially for our young women. I'll write you my questions in that regard, because I wanted to be brief here today.

Also, I did want to ask the associate minister about an area in AADAC, and I know that you are familiar with this issue. It's about the Oxford House Foundation proposal for AADAC funding. I really think it's important that you ask your officials to relook at their mandate for AADAC funding. It's behind the times. They should be looking at community-based, cost-effective approaches such as Oxford House, and they've neglected to do that and should be just far more sensitive to that type of programming. I know that you are as a minister, because we've had that discussion, and I appreciate it very much.

Also, as the previous member said as well, I really, really appreciate what you've done with the whole area of the PDD issue. You've worked very hard on that issue and have been very passionate about it, and your recommendations are outstanding. They are really going to help the community. So thank you and thank you, Mr. Minister.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Yvonne. Denis.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I, too, believe that this was a very good presentation. In fact, I've asked for copies of your notes, because it'll certainly help me with questions that I'm having with respect to constituents.

I just want to briefly touch on Bill 11 because it was brought up here so much this morning. I think one of the things that needs to be done is that we need to have some specific examples of the potential benefit, because there is so much falsehood. I won't call it lies because that attacks the people, but it's false information being distributed out there by those who don't want to see the health care system improve with time, improve with the technology changes that are occurring daily, all of those things. I think we need some very specific examples of potentials. Part of it, as I see it – and correct me if I'm wrong – is that there are roughly 130,000 WCB cases a year. I know that there are also other groups of people who are exempt from the Canada Health Act. I think RCMP, military . . .

10:52

MRS. SLOAN: It's a minority.

MR. HERARD: Pardon me?

MRS. SLOAN: It's a minority of people.

MR. HERARD: Excuse me. I'm asking the questions. You had your chance.

MR. JACQUES: A point of order. I thought the Member for Calgary-Egmont had the floor.

THE CHAIRMAN: He did.

MR. JACQUES: Would you please interject then?

We had the courtesy of extending to you in your deliberations . . .

MRS. SLOAN: There were several points of order.

MR. JACQUES: Okay. Here we go again. Can you not extend the simple courtesy to our members that we extended to each of yours? It would be most appreciated.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. You've made your point.

Denis, can you continue, please?

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Madam Chairman. You see, I don't know and I don't have the information to be able to determine just what potential there might be. Out of, say, the tens of thousands of cases, hundreds of thousands of cases perhaps, I don't know how many of those actually require surgery. I don't know how many of those could be safely done in an approved facility, given that the College of Physicians and Surgeons would provide an accreditation to a particular facility to do certain surgeries. I don't know what potential is there, but I think we need to know those kinds of potentials.

If you really look at the situation and see that currently our system provides services for people that are not covered under the Canada Health Act, you know, for reasons of having been exempted at the time that it was created, surely any clear-thinking Albertan would realize that if there are a number of these procedures that can be safely done, not because politicians say so but because the college says so in terms of accreditation and so on, then for every one of those that is done in one of those facilities, that opens up a spot in the public health care system. I think we need to know more details about the potentials that in fact exist in reality with respect to that. So those were a few comments with respect to Bill 11.

My first question deals with parents of graduate nurses and dietitians and so on that ask me why there are no full-time nursing positions available when we seem to have literally hundreds of postings and we can't seem to hire nurses. These people are telling me that they can't get jobs. I need to have a detailed explanation of how this whole thing works to provide to my constituents. It seems to me that we've got a number of nurses and other qualified practitioners that are graduating from our facilities, yet they don't seem to be able to find full-time jobs. We're crying for them. We need them. So I need to know what's wrong with this picture. What's the process? Are these perhaps contractual things that are preventing the hiring of these nurses on a full-time basis? I mean, do you have to bump up the whole line of nurses? Just how does this work? I can't explain to my constituents why that is, and I'd really like to hear a detailed explanation on that.

My second question deals with, again, constituents who ask me why it is that virtually any time of the day or night in the city of Calgary when you go to an emergency room you have a room full of people sitting there in various stages of discomfort and pain waiting to get in. I'm just wondering what's happened to this system when about 50 percent of our family physicians in the city of Calgary operate out of walk-in clinics. They no longer take any kind of hospital work whatsoever. They don't admit sick patients. They send them to emergency. So here we are duplicating the work, plus we have to hire doctors now to look after the cases that they won't look after but inside the hospital at a tremendously higher cost again. We have all these people waiting to get in, yet nobody points to where the problem is.

Why can't we get doctors to be doctors anymore? I just don't understand why we can't call a spade a spade. We have to find a solution to this. You know, if a doctor decides that they don't want to do any kind of hospital work, well, maybe there should be a different fee schedule for those folks because they're not doing the whole job. They're only doing part of the job. So if they want to be an up-front screener rather than a doctor, then maybe we should recognize that and pay them differently.

The bottom line is that it really upsets me, as you can probably tell, that we hear all these words from associations like the AMA, yet they've known of this problem for years. I know, because I brought it up many times when they used to sit at the SPCs here, yet nothing gets done. So, excuse me, you can't speak out of both sides of your mouth. We have to hold them accountable. They're professionals. We revere them – we look up to them; we trust them – yet they're the cause of the major problem here in this case, in my view. So when are we going to deal with that?

The last question, which is not going to be so emotionally charged, deals with Wellnet and where we're at with respect to that. You know, we've been working on this, I know, going all the way back to '94-95 and probably longer than that. Some of the people in this room have probably worked on it longer than that. So I'd sort of like to know: what has Wellnet achieved so far, and in the next budget year can we look forward to the potential, the possibility that we can improve the delivery of health care in this province at a lower cost without cutting another thing?

I've believed for all these years that if you put visibility into the system plus the potential of clinical practice guidelines affecting care throughout the province so that everybody solves the problem in the most cost-efficient way and the way that is best for the patient, then misuse, abuse, all of those kinds of factors – you can in fact do more with less without cutting another thing. Of course, we haven't been cutting since 1995. It's gone up by – I can't remember the number; I'm making it up – $1.8 billion or something. I mean, that's a huge, huge increase in spending. I'd like to know if Wellnet is going to in my lifetime produce the kinds of benefits that I know it could produce if we got on with respect to being able to put visibility into the system, because if you can't measure it, you can't control it.

Those are my questions. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: All right. Thank you.

Are there any other questions from government members?

Mr. Minister, would you like to have any final comments?

11:02

MR. JONSON: First of all, I thank members for their questions. They're, of course, fairly large in number and will require work to answer them in detail. We will provide our written booklet, although

I will not promise it immediately. It will take some time.

With respect to questions from government members – and I'm working backwards here very quickly – we can provide an overall update on Wellnet, but I think it's worth noting that we do have an actual on the ground and running program under what's titled the seniors' drug profile. It is possible in 22 hospital sites, which include the Misericordia and the University of Alberta hospitals, to access the drug profile of a patient who, for instance, in an emergency situation comes into one of those hospitals. This is particularly important with seniors so that you don't have to redo all the testing and so forth to decide what drug therapies they're getting before you decide on their treatment. It's often a very big problem with emergency situations.

The physician office systems are in the northeast part of Edmonton. They're working on a pilot project there to link up their information. We have a pharmaceutical information network under development. We're using Alberta Wellnet to develop our records and tracking for the Alberta breast cancer screening program. We're using the vehicle of Wellnet to look at the exchange of information on lab test results, pharmaceutical, telehealth, and telepsychiatry. Those are programs, particularly telehealth and telepsychiatry, that are actually up and running, serving patients on a daily basis. There's more to the program there. Metabolic screening for infants is another one where the information is being improved upon, and certainly efficiency is being improved there.

The other comment I'd just like to respond to – and I will respond to the Member for Redwater's questions, which were quite detailed. With respect to foreign-trained doctors, one of our initiatives this year is the expansion of the internship program. In that expansion there are places reserved for foreign-trained doctors: four in the coming year and then eight in the following year. It's perhaps modest, but it's in proportion to, say, what Ontario is doing. In Manitoba I think they've got two spaces. We do hope to expand that.

I think we also have to be sensitive to the long history of this area. It's being recognized and is something that I think is fair and needs to be done, but we have a long history here of the position of the physicians, particularly when there's been the domination of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and all the standards that they seem to feel had to be exactly the same as those of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons. It had a connection to the Commonwealth and so on as far as Canada is concerned. We're evolving and changing from that now, and I think that's good. That's a bit of the history of it. We are doing something there.

Finally, Madam Chairman, I thank members for their questions and attention. We are in Alberta Health and Wellness certainly committed to moving forward to strengthen our publicly administered, publicly funded health care system, to adhere to the principles of the Canada Health Act, and also I think it's very important to look at new and better ways of doing things. Whether we are referring to the utilization of technology through Alberta Wellnet or looking at new models of physician deployment or new models for workforce utilization, whether we're looking at new concepts in terms of caring for and providing housing for the aged, as outlined in the Broda report, I think we are in our business plan being responsible.

We're responding in a major way on the fiscal side in terms of actual resources, and we are not accepting the status quo in terms of our effort to change and to look for improvements and to be I think in some areas quite innovative. Some people in other provinces think we're kind of courageous in some of the very new things that we are piloting and looking to provide the basis for improvement on in the future.

Thank you, Madam Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Minister.

If there are no other questions from government members, I'd like to call for a motion to conclude discussion of the estimates and to rise and report.

Dave.

MR. BRODA: Yes. I move that pursuant to Standing Orders 56 and 57 the designated supply subcommittee on Health and Wellness now conclude its consideration and debate on the 2000-2001 estimates of the Department of Health and Wellness prior to the conclusion of the four-hour period allocated and rise and report.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Dave. All in favour?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Any opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE CHAIRMAN: Carried. Thank you very much.

[The subcommittee adjourned at 11:09 a.m.]

Title: Estimates of Children's Services, Monday, March 20, 2000

Date: 00/03/20

8:01 a.m.

[Mr. Melchin in the chair]

Designated Supply Subcommittee – Children's Services

Melchin, Greg, Chairman
Cao, Wayne
Cardinal, Mike
Johnson, LeRoy

Kryczka, Karen
Laing, Bonnie
Lougheed, Rob
MacDonald, Hugh

Massey, Don
Paul, Pamela
Shariff, Shiraz
Sloan, Linda

THE CHAIRMAN: Our time appointed is here. I'd like to welcome committee members. As far as procedure, we're here this morning for the designated supply subcommittee on Children's Services. We welcome the minister here with us and the members who were asked to be part of this committee.

I'd like to first put forward a motion for each of the members. We've actually discussed this amongst the various parties, and we will require, certainly, at some stage consent of the parties to approve this motion for the rules and procedures for this meeting this morning. I'd like to read it into the record to begin with. It says:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Orders 56 and 57 the designated supply subcommittee on Children's Services allocate the time for its consideration and debate of the 2000-2001 estimates of the Department of Children's Services as follows:

- (1) The time allocated for the subcommittee will be a maximum of three hours.
- (2) The minister responsible first addresses the subcommittee for a maximum of 20 minutes.
- (3) Official Opposition subcommittee members then have a maximum of two hours for questions and answers. Those members may allocate the time for questions among themselves as they see fit.
- (4) The independent Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs then has a maximum of 15 minutes for questions and answers.
- (5) Government subcommittee members have the remainder.

Be it further resolved that in the event government subcommittee members do not exercise their right to utilize the remaining time, the chair shall call for a motion to conclude discussion of the estimates and to rise and report.

Do we have any questions? I'd like to entertain, then, a motion to accept this resolution, if someone would like to so move. Okay; the Member for Calgary-West. Are we all agreed? Any opposed? Thank you.

Then pursuant to that resolution, we will turn the time over to the Minister of Children's Services for a maximum of 20 minutes for her opening comments.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to begin by introducing the staff that are with me today, asking and begging your indulgence that although we have a lot of staff present here this morning, this is a new ministry, in fact, carved out of the previous family and social services, and this becomes an opportunity for staff to hear what other people have to say about the ministry and to reflect on what they have provided you in earlier packages relative to the ministry itself. We supplemented – and I hope you found it useful – the supplementary sheets that explain and express the programs that are delivered in the ministry beyond what is in the business plan.

I'm accompanied by the deputy minister, Paula Tyler; Keray Henke, who is assistant deputy minister in charge of strategic planning and administrative support, and if I could direct your attention, I'll just introduce them as they sit: Darren Hedley, working in finance; Murray Finnerty, assistant deputy minister who is working in terms of accountability performance measures and the executive director with the partnerships and linkages that are part of the ministry; my assistant, Elan Gough. Bill Meade is here, very kindly, as the CEO from Calgary, who will be able to assist with any of the questions you might have about what is actually going on in the street in terms of the actual CFSAs; and Bill Rice from communications. Right behind Darren is Tim Moorhouse, who is better known as Mr. FCSS in the province, and Lynn Groves-Hautmann, who handles the things with handicapped children's service, and Bryan Kelly, who is assisting in the very important work of the caseload review. I think that's all my staff, and I welcome Lynn to the proceedings as well today.

If I may, coming to the speaking notes, I'll welcome every member here. I am going to attempt to be brief in order to maximize the opportunity for everybody to ask questions. We will also do our very best to get those answers back within one week, and what we can get back within one week, we will certainly so do. If it isn't to your satisfaction a proper response, then we'll follow through.

The department in the business plan is highlighted. The child and family service authorities who essentially deliver our businesses. FCSS, that's $38 million worth of our $532 million, delivers, as you know, in a partnership with municipalities and First Nations and with us – of course, at least in the most part funded by the federal government of Canada.

The three divisions I highlighted in the introduction. Partnership and innovation: through that we're looking not only at the research but at the integration that we have with other ministries, with health, with education, with intergovernmental relations, also with housing and community development and other ministries that are very important partners to us. That's the whole ACI initiative that's contained therein. Our accountability in provincial services: the best practices performance management, which is something for us to not only evolve and develop but to improve upon; our provincial programs; and of course family and community support programs. Then in our strategy and support services we have really our essential administrative arm: our finance, legal, human resources, and the responsibility for strategic planning.

Provincial programs that are delivered predominately by the department include adoption services. Many of you will be familiar with the fact that we keep records of children that have been under our care in the government for a hundred years, and that's part of the postadoption registry. The day care staff qualifications and a lot of the training arm. The Alberta children's initiative, again, is part of the linkages with other ministries and family and community support services. A lot of the programs there that are generated at the local level are supplemented. I'll use the illustration of the after school child care last year in Edmonton. When we have other pressing needs, then we try and involve ourselves to supplement those resources, and in that particular case, we did so in partnership with Human Resources and Employment. Our role in the department is allocating funding and resources, establishing policies for and with the authorities, and monitoring the authorities themselves and their performance. Our budget, as I've said already, is $537 million this year, and it includes $485 million for children and families and $38 million for family and community support services.

Through the 18 authorities we assess local needs, establish priorities, and plan for the region, ensuring that family and children have reasonable access to quality services, that they follow provincial standards, and we monitor and assess those services. Those services are delivered by staff. You'll note in your briefings that there are over 2,000 staff that are direct employees through the child and family service authorities, and there are also contract workers that work through contract to the authorities. There are over 3,000 of those people. You'll note further in information that you may have received either in the business plan of Human Resources or in the manner in which we have delivered information to you that there were increased dollars for contract staff to permit at least a 5 percent flexibility in funding of those staff.

We have a significant provision of services at the local level. Handicapped children's services is one of the biggest ones. You've read an awful lot recently about how Albertans, North Americans, and people all over the world are concerned about the incidence of handicapped children. In Alberta we have 70 children who cost between $45,000 and $70,000. In fact, speaking to one authority we have spent over $200,000 transferring this child back and forth to get programs that are very individually tailored in Colorado. So there are some very huge costs attributable to some of our caseload.

If I can reflect back, some of you will be very well aware that we had to go for supplementary estimates for two reasons. Number one, we had not forecast the number of children that we would actually serve. We served 12,922 children at the end of December of '99, and that's well over what we had ever anticipated.

8:11

The second thing is that much of the income for child welfare cases had rested within the income supports for families, and defining and reorganizing to have that income available has taken some work not only in adjusting our forecast but making sure there's enough to look after at least 200 more cases than we had in October, when I was first talking to Treasury about what we had. If you look at the children that are in care in their homes, about 61 children are receiving care in their homes, which was something that many of the government members had cited to me was an important thing to do. We also have children that are taken care of in group homes and foster homes, and we have an important responsibility in supplementing, on average, $323 per day care family that has assistance so that they can work with their budget and also have proper support for children. We also supplement families through family day homes, and those are through contracts. I believe there are 80 contracts with the child and family service authorities in the province, predominantly in the major urban settings. So there are a number of ways we are augmenting services that children receive at the local level, and those are part of the driving cost.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I think it's astonishing that this year there are no predictions for increasing the child population in Alberta. In fact, our rate of growth in caseload isn't as rapid as it was three years ago. Nonetheless, the cases are becoming increasingly more complex.

When you look at cases that are cited therein, they're almost too horrible to speak of, multiple partners, some absolutely ghastly things about children. About a third of those that we have in care have some alcohol-related defect who don't even learn from bad past experiences, like the child who was raped after getting into a white van who said: well, I guess I've learned my lesson; I shouldn't go into white vans. That was a very serious thing for her. We have to start earlier, start now, and build those bridges for children and families in the very first stages of development, from zero to six. That is increasingly what was discussed at the forum and in the task force for children at risk. That is increasingly our emphasis because of our overwhelming awareness of the gaps that exist when parents don't know how to parent or when 25 year olds that are going on mentally 15 have increasing numbers of children because they want somebody to love and to love them back. So that is, in fact, the very real challenge that we have.

Totally CFSAs received $370.8 million for managing their own caseloads. The authority budget is a very complex formula that was worked out in consultation with all the authorities, with all the providers coming together at a table and looking at the things that really impact the rising costs of dealing with children. They determined that the right factors were the number of children in the region, the number of children in single-parent families, the number of children in low-income families, the number of children in very low-income families, and the number of aboriginal children.

I've talked about First Nations, an important element, of course, with the CFSA boards, with representation equaling the number of both aboriginal and nonaboriginal. Thirty-seven of those First Nations groups deliver their own child welfare services, and eight use the local authorities and exclusively contract there. I'm very sensitive to the fact that by putting our executive director, Nancy Reynolds, in charge of these contracts, as we review and negotiate contracts with First Nations groups, we are increasingly being prompted by them to allow them to be total masters of their own destiny in the delivery of children's services within their boundaries and sometimes beyond. Many of them want to have relationships with other large urban CFSAs in order to take care of children that are off site so that those children never lose the cultural and spiritual influence of the original First Nations body.

Looking at our child welfare caseload, it is difficult and more complex to manage. The critical issues have seen us rise from 8,000 to 11,000 cases between '93-94 and '98-99. I've talked about the number of children that we have within our ministry. Many of these children with multiple needs have fetal alcohol syndrome, mental health concerns, behavioural issues, and physical disabilities, and naturally we don't do all of the service to children ourselves. We have at least 1,000 children that have been part of the PDD board's mission in the past that will be managed through the child and family services authorities. The Mental Health Board received $5 million last fall to work on the crisis management for children with mental health concerns. So a great part of what we do, not only with the FCSS and CFSAs, is managing programs for children and families with other partners.

We have needs for highly specialized treatment and a vast array of services from professionals. If I may, when you have noticed that you have clinical psychologists and other professionals who want a 50 percent upwards adjustment of their fees, it becomes very hard for local authorities to manage, and they are really challenged on those contracts. But I'm very confident that with the work we have by Bill Meade and other CEOs in this province, they will be extremely accountable and they will be much better monitored in the future than we've ever been able to do it in the past.

We have provided, in our review of caseload growth, terms of reference and other information and recent press releases to you. I just draw your attention to the fact that on March 16, Youth Connections links young Albertans to greater employment opportunities as part of our partnership with Clint Dunford, and the task force that was announced by the Minister of Justice on the 17th related to ways that we can work better with family court. These are all things that will impact our community-based delivery, and hopefully we'll get a lot of information from that.

One of the things I mentioned earlier was early support and prevention. Two years ago for programs for early intervention we provided about $2 million. Last year it was $18.5 million, and this year, in this coming year's budget, it is $21.5 million. So it is a re-emphasis of what we see as significant to do in our funding of local authorities.

Some may ask me about the Youth Secretariat. Gary Severtson, simply put, is in charge of reviewing all the youth needs throughout Alberta, and he's doing an excellent job of going about Alberta and talking with adolescents about ways and means by which we can serve their mental health issues and their transition to adulthood in a better fashion. Mr. Chairman, just like we do not kick out our 18 year olds and say good-bye, farewell, you cannot expect foster families and children who are still in need of family support to part, so we have significant numbers of extensions, which are actually increasing the costs as our child welfare caseload ages. I think that's an important element to remember when you're looking at our business plan.

Our task force will be reporting very soon; that's the Task Force for Children at Risk. Taber released some preliminary results from this past year, as you saw just last week. About $750,000 is identified in this budget, and it is not what our MLA task force is spending. It has been spent on other initiatives to support the community of Taber in their request to learn more about aftermath protocol and to provide programs and counseling and special services for those children.

I've commented about the Alberta children's initiative. I would ask every one of you later to become a crusader to get people to stop drinking. Our fetal alcohol initiative is delivered through the 18 committees at the local level, committees that partner various providers, but I'm not convinced that we're going far enough yet in actually telling people what the impact of alcohol is on pregnant women.

The Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act, family violence, and protection of the victims by removing the perpetrator, which was done in our legislation last year, is also administered here. We looked after last year about 4,900 women in shelters and over 6,000 children.

8:21

In conclusion – and I hope I'm still within my time frame – why invest in our children in Alberta? I'd say this: quite simply because somebody else isn't. I look at the fact that on Saturday night, attending a concert with singer Michael Burgess, I'm the only one there with a grandchild. It's because I can't bear the thought of him leaving; he's moving. But I looked around the audience, and people were surprised to see a child. We don't do what your parents and mine did. We don't go places as families the way we did. We don't do those kinds of things in society. It is not this government's fault. It's nobody's fault here, but it is a societal change that has seen us lever to babysitters and to other providers the kinds of things our parents used to do.

As long as society tolerates that type of approach, then we must do something, because if one of those children happened to grow up and lead a very at-risk existence and end up in the court system – and many of those who do end up in courts have a background of FAS or FAE or some other horrible negligent or sexual risk – if they happen to harm one of our children that have grown up in a different environment, then we'll only have ourselves to blame.

I'm here to answer your questions.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you, Minister Evans. We'll turn the time over to the Official Opposition subcommittee members for two hours. You'll have the time as you see fit, be it to rotate amongst yourselves as to how much time you want to take for questions. You could also have the opportunity for more of an open dialogue with the minister or for written questions, purely at your discretion.

From Edmonton-Riverview, Linda Sloan.

MRS. SLOAN: Good morning, everyone. My thanks to the minister and the members of the ministry for being here this morning.

To begin, I'd like to provide some positive statements with respect to the activities of the ministry over the last year. We have certainly seen an increase in the willingness of the minister and the ministry to provide information to us on critical issues relative to Children's Services and the provision of supports and programs for vulnerable children in this province, and we'd like to acknowledge that on the record. I think it's also important to indicate that with respect to vulnerable children and the developmental needs of children in this province in the critical period from birth to six years of age, personally I view those particular initiatives as nonpartisan initiatives and have endeavoured, with the receptivity of the minister, to provide support for those children for whom we have not succeeded in making interventions in those critical years and now have to cope with the aftermath, through providing services in child welfare and in the programs for disabilities.

I would also like to indicate on the record that the Official Opposition would like to see the government succeed in their efforts to review child welfare and the Children's Advocate's office, and we would also like to see this province have the lowest child welfare caseload in the country, not through initiatives that callously reduce the caseload but through meaningful initiatives that actually make the development of children and our family environments more healthy. So that is the philosophy Mr. Chairman, with which we are approaching these estimates this morning.

We recognize, though, that there is, as there always is, a political ideology that takes precedence, runs the machine if you will, and we recognize those challenges as they exist for this ministry. We see the increased degree of funding that is in this year's budget from lottery estimates. We see the increased allocation from the federal government.

As I sat in the Health and Wellness estimates last Friday and reviewed the increasing millions of dollars that we put into high-tech procedures in this province with no accompanying statistics about the survival rate or quality of life for those particular recipients, I think we would be well served if we put an equal amount of money into the development of children. That is a goal that I think we could commit ourselves to working together to achieve.

My questions this morning are going to be provided under some particular theme areas, and it's our intention, Mr. Chairman, to approach our two hours in 20-minute intervals. I will not be taking my full 20. I'd like to have the minister respond to the first two theme areas of questions, and then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods will proceed from there.

My first category of questions relates to the Social Care Facilities Review Committee, and I would like to ask the following questions. I could not find – and perhaps it was my own omission – where the funding allocation for this committee is in the budget. I'm wondering if it has been transferred or encompassed under another budget area. The minister is familiar, as am I, with some of the occurrences relative to this committee and its function in the last year, and I would like to ask the minister or deputy minister to explain how this committee was not fully apprized of its statutory mandate relative to investigations.

That reality came clear in the last – well, it actually arose through a complaint submitted in 1998 relative to the death of Mr. Wayne Oles. The committee was not informed of the complaint with regards to the death of this man or the subsequent request that it be investigated, and it is my understanding they were not fully aware that they had a statutory responsibility to investigate complaints. In the midst of that complaint being filed and that death occurring, a mandate change for this committee was instituted by the ministry which in essence breached the statute. It said that the mandate of the committee would now be to conduct reviews of the facilities, and that was the theme that was encompassed in the annual report tabled in the Legislature in November last year.

I would cite specifically from that report, and this is the report that's circulated to the public. The committee visits funded social care facilities in Alberta at least once every two years. These include group homes, vocational rehab centres, foster homes, day cares, family day homes, children's social care facilities, and women's shelters. The committee receives complaints and conducts investigations about the standards of care, treatment, and accommodations.

The reality is, however, Mr. Minister, that there are no regulations about how these investigations will occur, and I don't believe that they should be occurring or conducted on the basis of one case, but rather there should be a formalized process that is in regulations to guide it.

There is no incorporation in the performance measures of the ministry anything relative to the Social Care Facilities Review Committee: how many investigations they have conducted, how many complaints they've received, how many investigations were conducted by the ministry itself that perhaps in fact should have been conducted by this committee. I would ask whether or not there was any conscious or by omission directing of incidents requiring investigations away from this committee into the perhaps more controlled environment of the ministry itself. Accompanying that, how many investigations relative to incidents in social care facilities were done internally by the ministry in the last three years? I would also ask: what initiatives will be undertaken and what budget allocated to train and educate the committee re its investigative function and to put the necessary human resources in place to allow those investigations to occur? I would also ask if the ministry is prepared to make publicly available a policy and procedure manual for this committee like is accessible for the Citizens' Appeal Panel decision processes.

8:31

My second category of questions this morning is relative to deaths in care. Consecutively since assuming the responsibilities as critic for family and social services and now the Children's Services ministry, I have asked this government: how many children have died in care during the past fiscal year? These are not statistics that are annually published. If they are tracked, they are not publicly available. We also acknowledge and are aware that the medical examiner's report has not been published or available since 1994, and the reasons given when that was initially asked was because the funding allocations had not been there to permit them to publish an annual report on an annual basis.

In 1997 Minister Oberg released after a number of questions in the House an informal statement relative to deaths of children either known or in the care of child welfare up to 1997, and it was 52. We've had nothing, really, since that time to indicate what the number is today. This remains an issue that is not a performance measure. In fact the performance measure, as it's cited, is the "percentage of children who stay free from abuse or neglect while receiving child protection services." That, again, is a further step away from accountability, in my mind. Previously what the ministry tracked, at least had made available in '97, were deaths while a child was known or in the care of child welfare. So if they had received services in the last fiscal year and then had subsequently died, that death was included in those numbers. According to this measure, you're looking at only tracking those "who stay free from abuse or neglect" – no mention of deaths – "while receiving child protection services."

I would raise in this category of questions that we have seen for those children that have died an extensive delay in public inquiries in this province relative to their deaths, and I've raised Jordan Quinney as an example. Acknowledging the importance of the justice proceedings, is it not also equally important that there be some public investigation and accountability relative to the government's role and responsibility for these children while in care?

We've had one further reported death just in the early part of this year in Red Deer in a foster home. We've also been made aware that perhaps there was at least one other death that occurred in the latter part of last year that was not publicly reported. We would urge the government to make those statistics available. I think they are a measure. While not a positive measure they do assist in determining whether or not our interventions are being successful and to a great degree can guide the ministry and their authorities in the development of programs and interventions in the future.

I've raised in previous estimates the Grove inquiry, which was undertaken in B.C. in 1995 after the death of a child that was receiving care from child welfare. We've not seen that kind of substantive investigation. In that child's death they looked at every contact that had been made by the department with that child and family throughout the last, I believe it was, year or two years of his life. I would like to urge the government to try and make that something that is incorporated in the coming year's business plan and budget.

With those two groups of questions, Mr. Chairman, I would be most interested in hearing the minister's reply.

MS EVANS: Thank you for your opening statements and the acknowledgment of the work the staff are doing in the ministry to be open and accountable and as transparent as possible in the delivery of services to children.

I think, as usual, the member of Her Majesty's opposition has highlighted two areas of interest which are of deep concern to this government. First of all, I fully acknowledge the issues that have been brought before the government through her intervention of providing a notice and laying some question and complaint, and the endorsement of the Ombudsman that in fact the complaint was a valid complaint, I believe, was a letter that highlighted that there should be some review of this in the procedural sense.

I'm not going to be able to give full detail of that except to say that the Social Care Facilities Review Committee, although not highlighted within this – at the very first stages, while we were building the business plan, we were not sure what the final home would be for the Social Care Facilities Review Committee. Noting that the dollars for the committee rest with us – there's a reference to the review process on page 47 in the business plan, but the dollars for it come under our corporate administration. I believe that overall it's about $100,000 – is that correct? – to manage the whole committee, for the work that they do. That committee is still returning to me some response to the questions that have been raised and the concerns that have been identified by the Ombudsman.

I'd like to supplement that by just another acknowledgment, and perhaps it's illuminating to people here. You would be aware from reading recent newspaper articles that the present residence for group home inspections is also with this ministry. So the deputies from the various departments have been meeting to review those standards as well. I think that the points that have been made about having a proper manual, about having it as publicly accountable and transparent as the child welfare review panel are well made. I think that's the ultimate goal with the group home review, and some of those things that have been highlighted with it are not unlike some of the issues that may well have been raised with the Social Care Facilities Review Committee.

I was very satisfied when I released their report earlier in this present year, the year 2000, that the committee itself believed that there was much to be done both in the review of how staff are trained and how facilities are attended to, but I would ask the chair's indulgence and that of others here to provide more detailed information to that perhaps in response.

The second point I wanted to comment on is about deaths in care. I've actually looked at what our neighbours to the west have been doing, as has been highlighted here by the hon. member's question, what they do in British Columbia in very detailed investigations. They investigate in British Columbia not simply the death of children that are in care but the death of every child. There may well be merit because there could well be questions about the deaths of children that occur in this province. So through our review process, not only the review of the Children's Advocate but through the other work that the review committees are doing and even in our caseload review, I think it behooves us to take a look at whether we are doing this as prudently and learning as much as we can from that type of review.

I know there's no mention of deaths in the plan. To the hon. member I would highlight that one of the chief tasks of our assistant deputy minister on performance measures will be in fact to make sure that the performance measures more meaningfully focus on those things that can be primary indicators. I respect what you've said on performance measures on two counts: reviewing and reducing the child welfare caseload not because of poor practices but because the need simply no longer exists for some children. In terms of deaths of children in care, where we can learn from and do this better and abbreviate the process yet still have it thoroughly done, I think we would serve everyone well. I have spoken to families of children who have died while in care, and I know they would concur with that particular perspective. It leaves a shadow hanging for too long.

On the public accountability aspect I do agree, Mr. Chairman, with my officials. Later we will talk about an update on the release of those figures of deaths of children in care and provide what we can about our intent of when the next release will be relative to those.

8:41

One final point I would make on that. I have spoken directly with social workers who have been attending to families where a child has died in care. It is a most painful circumstance for them as well, so when we release those figures, we will try and be sure that we are releasing them with the thought that we will learn from that rather than affixing blame or attempting to punish anybody. I know that that would be the member's intent.

So further information to come, and the department is making note.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

Dr. Massey.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and good morning, Madam Minister. We all, at least most of us, come to the department through experiences in our constituency offices. I suspect that most often we don't hear from the people when things are going well, and we end up with those cases where things aren't going that well, but we've been well served in the office when we've called your department for help, and I appreciate that very much.

I wanted to ask some general questions, if I could. The Children's Forum. I went through and looked at a number of recommendations in the Children's Forum that would affect Learning; for instance, the recommendations on class size and the recommendations for early programs for young children. Who in the ministry is responsible for making sure that those things happen when they are really the responsibility of another ministry in terms of financing? [interjection] I'd rather have a conversation, if that's all right.

MS EVANS: If I may. The forum report in its entirety has gone to the deputies and the other ministers, and they will be responding in kind. Our package responding to the forum report will highlight what the Minister of Learning will bring back relative to class size, relative to things like school lunches, et cetera. That's how it will be done.

DR. MASSEY: So they won't fall through the cracks?

MS EVANS: No. In fact, that commitment has been made by Mrs. Klein and the volunteer committee as well as by our Premier that we would not allow them to fall through the cracks. Our ministry plays a co-ordinating role there.

If I may respond to something you might be asking. We have expended $244,000 on the forum, and the amount I believe I gave you earlier, hon. member, was about a $300,000, maybe $309,000 expenditure for the forum. I'm just responding to you now that so far $244,000 has been expended, and more bills are still coming in. It's relative to the printing and dissemination of the reports too. So you will hear both on the forum and on the task force hopefully later in the month of April, not that much later either. I'm hoping to have both of those reports out with at least our intent, what we would be doing with programs like the class size.

DR. MASSEY: Okay. It's going to be interesting to see what is actually done, because as you know from your previous life, it's very expensive when you start reducing those class sizes.

MS EVANS: Well, if they went to the extent that they implied within the report, hon. member, our building branch would be very busy. It would be 24-hours-a-day school.

DR. MASSEY: That's right. We wouldn't have to worry about the utilization formula. It would no longer be a problem for schools.

May I ask about staff? There's a reference on page 57 where it looks at the "percentage of front-line staff with greater than one year of experience." Can you talk a little bit about staff and how easy it is or not to secure qualified staff? Associated with that, are there problems with government salaries and agency salaries, a difference in those that there was when we were talking to Clint Dunford about social services.

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member has asked an excellent question. Absolutely there are problems. There are problems even with the student health initiative grabbing staff from our child and family services authorities, because school boards and regional health authorities pay more than our department currently does, or they seem to be able to afford to pay more.

Now, with our most recent settlement we will be coming up there, but there are also differences between staff that make it more attractive for staff to work with other parts of government even though their grid placement – and I've checked this very carefully – can seemingly describe similar duties. The contract agencies have been spending less. That's a bit of a blanket statement, acknowledging that there are various contracts, but there's about a 5 percent adjustment in the budget this year to hopefully help those contractors pay more.

I think we still have some work to do with day care situations, because since we removed that operational grant to day care, day cares have not been paying their staff as much. Now, by putting the benefits from the national child benefit directly to the low-income family, we have removed that situation. So when you're talking about staff with one year of experience, up in the north we have a hard time because people want to attract staff, that we train so very well, from other areas, even other provinces. I think it's part of the supply and demand.

To that end I will be meeting with members of the board of governors and the presidents of universities and colleges about the middle of April and talking about two things. First, about the staff training itself, so that we teach staff to train others, for trainers to train others, to recognize that the most important thing a child who's robbed of hope needs is to get some hope back and to build some of that hope within themselves. Counselors' training, social workers' training is an important element so that they feel capable of coping. The second thing is to make sure that in the articulation of the two- and four-year program we're recognizing that the two-year program was always intended to serve those far reaches of the province where we couldn't get four-year qualified staff. Members of the association of registered workers did accept that there could be a qualification differential yet still exist on the same grid, recognizing that there was a need for somebody with some degree of qualification.

So there are a number of issues in short, Mr. Chairman, that surround the overall staffing issue. At the very outset, when I first took over this ministry, my thought was that I had to find placements for children who needed care. My first mission, I believe, is to find ways of giving people the tools so that they can find placements for children in care, and this whole performance area is one of the parts that we will be intensely focusing on in the caseload review. That will be able to tell us just exactly what burdens are borne by staff, and it will tell us other things, how we can help those staff workers work better.

If I may just add to that point. I'm very satisfied that this government provided computers and some of the software and hardware that would go along with making the jobs of people in the field much easier, but the training that has to still be done to help – even the use of transcribers would often help social workers to do their work and have the flexibility in the management of their own caseload. I just wanted to point out that we're well aware of some of those issues that surround the staffing element, and when I do meet with child and family service authorities, they kindly arrange for me to meet with staff so that I can understand from the front lines what they're actually facing.

I may have gone on too long. I'm sorry.

DR. MASSEY: It just seems that stability for those workers who are working with families that are in such distress is really crucial, that they stay with them for a long period of time to get to know them and to help them solve their problems.

I have to confess that I'm not quite clear on the sorting out with the department of human resources. Has separating out the support for families caused any difficulty in trying to serve children, having the money in that human resources budget? It goes to a question I was able to ask in the human resources estimates, and that was on the support level for families: how was it determined how much families would receive each month? That seems to be so crucial and related to what happens to children.

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member has highlighted and profiled something I intend to take to agenda and priorities and to Treasury, and that is: how are we through the various ministries supporting those that are very low income or low income? We have through Community Development a housing rent supplement, for example. We have a number of programs for children in need. We have foster care programs. We have support for single-income families. But overall I don't think we have as clear a picture as I think would be useful for this government in defining the levels of support.

8:51

On the separation of the two ministries I'm not believing that we reduced or missed a beat in terms of the actual care that's provided for families. I haven't received that type of complaint, although it is true that people have profiled poverty. Where we're doing a lot of work with the Youth Secretariat and Gary Severtson's work is focusing on children in need and the support they get when they are over 18 and making that transition to adulthood. That's one area where we're working very hard with Human Resources and Employment.

I have to tell you that even when I was Minister of Municipal Affairs, it astounded me that when you met with some of the single-income families and very low-income families in Calgary, for example, they may not even be aware that their rent is supplemented through rent supplement to their landlord. In the articulation of any of these programs I think it's not to try and illustrate that we're spending more but to illustrate where the needs are greatest and where we could actually fill the gap with a more positive result. So I don't think it's exclusive to our ministry that we're looking at some of these potentials for dropping the ball.

DR. MASSEY: It's not your ministry but the support for those families that need assistance. I was surprised – and I guess I should have followed it up – that there is no real rationale for setting those levels of support, that there isn't a basket of costs that are looked at. At least, the minister seemed to indicate that it was sort of a political balancing act in terms of how much you could give without having people become upset, and I guess that upset me too.

MS EVANS: I heard last year several times, as we did in the House here, about LICO versus the MBM system of measuring the support that's required for a family. I don't know who will ever resolve the scale, but I think the important thing in Alberta is to make sure that we have the dollar support so that families don't go hungry. The bottom line for me is that if the family has the children fed but the mother not, that's not a successful program either. So we will work on that, and in responding more in-depth to your question, I will ask the Minister of Human Resources and Employment to help me in my written response to you.

DR. MASSEY: My question is more of a general question, and you may not even want to answer it. Does it in any way concern you where the money comes from for this department for education, for instance from lotteries, and the growing dependence upon that source of funding?

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, it is a philosophical question that I have asked myself a number of times. I know the revenue source is $1.4 million within this budget, and I suppose that I'd have to say that as politicians we kid ourselves if we gather revenue in and pretend that it's not going into one pot. It is all going into one pot. I think the most important thing is: are we assuring that needs should always be provided for with that $1.4 million? I believe they should be. I actually believe there might be some way that in the future we could work with the Ministry of Gaming to see if any of the programs that relate to addictions, to FAS/FAE could be very targeted with the dollars from that, because there is an element of education of people at the local level in the community-based programs. Just like the credit counseling services provided through the Minister of Government Services, it seems like there is a direct cause and effect or underlying tenets.

So, yes, if it was going to be threatened by it being pulled away, I think it would be tragic, but I can assure you that the dollars there would not be threatened. It would have to come from yet another revenue source. Mr. Chairman, I am saying that to some degree when we do gather revenues, when we do use them for provincial programs, they do become part of the general revenue fund no matter how we might want to describe it to ourselves.

DR. MASSEY: Okay. That's fine for now.

THE CHAIRMAN: Edmonton-Gold Bar, I guess. You can actually allocate the time amongst yourselves back and forth as you wish.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Good morning, hon. minister and everyone.

I have a number of questions at this time and specifically in regards to the regions or authorities. I see we have roughly the same number of authorities as we do regional health authorities in this province. I'm curious, as to whenever the department was set up, how these authorities were also determined. For the hon. minister's convenience, on page 83 of estimates is the list of course.

My first question would be: why is there consistently a decrease in the funding within 12 of the 18 child and family services authorities for day cares? How much of this can be attributed to the decrease in the operating allowance?

My next question would be: to what does the department attribute the variance of increased funding in the areas of child welfare for the different regions? Why is the Sun Country child and family services authority forecast to receive a 20 percent or better increase in funding for child welfare? This would lead one to question how many additional children this is anticipated to assist?

Then we go down to southeast Alberta. Why is Southeast Alberta child and family services authority forecast to receive an over 28 percent increase in funding for child welfare? Why does this region require a 17 percent increase in funding for other program costs, and what are these other costs?

Calgary Rocky View now. Why is Calgary Rocky View forecast to receive over a 30 percent increase, a large increase, in funding for child welfare? How many additional clients will be served by this money, and how many additional staff will be hired and in what positions? Why does Calgary Rocky View require an additional close to 20 percent, I believe, for other program costs, and what are these additional program costs?

Why is the Diamond Willow authority forecast to receive a 20 percent increase in funding for child welfare. Again, how many additional children is this anticipated to assist?

The Ribstone authority. Why is it now forecast to receive an over 27 percent increase in funding for child welfare? How many additional children is this anticipated to assist? Why is this region needing an additional 15 percent for other program costs, and what are these additional costs?

Now, over to West Yellowhead. Why is the West Yellowhead authority also receiving close to 12 percent less funding for day care?

The Keystone authority. Why is the Keystone authority receiving also close to 14 percent less for day care?

Now, the Ma'Mōwe Capital region is forecast to receive close to a 30 percent increase in funding for child welfare. I'm curious. How many additional children here are to be assisted with this increase? Why does this region need an additional over 17 percent in other program costs?

Now the next one. Why is the Sakaw authority forecasted to receive a 20 percent increase in funding for child welfare? How many additional children is this anticipated to assist?

I see the hon. Member for Athabasca-Wabasca here. I'm glad he is here.

9:01

MR. CARDINAL: Your Cree's not too bad.

MR. MacDONALD: Okay.

Now, the next authority down the list for me is the Sakaigun. They are forecasted to receive 12 percent less funding for their day care, as well.

Why is region 13 forecasted to receive a 30 percent increase in funding for child welfare, and how many additional children is this anticipated to assist? Why does this region receive an additional 18 percent in other program costs, and what are these additional costs?

Now region 14. Why is region 14 forecasted to receive a 14 percent increase in funding for child welfare? Again, how many additional children is this anticipated to assist? Why does this region receive 7 percent less for day care?

Why is the Awasak authority forecasted to receive a 14 percent increase in funding for child welfare, and how many additional children are going to be helped with this initiative? Why does this region receive 8 percent less for day care?

The Silver Birch authority. Why is the Silver Birch authority forecasted to receive a 16 percent increase in funding for child welfare? How many additional children is this anticipated to assist? Why does this region receive 6 percent less for day care?

There's one more authority here. Why is the Neegan authority forecasted to receive 11 percent less funding for day care? Where is the difference going to be made up there?

The last one on the list is the Métis settlements. Why is the Métis settlements authority forecasted to receive a 43 percent increase in funding for child welfare? Again, how much of this money that will be provided will result in frontline assistance? How many additional children is this anticipated to assist? Why does this region receive that amount of funds?

I'm also curious about the ministry income statement that has been provided. We look at the revenue, and in one section it is mentioned – I find it ironic that in internal government transfers so much of this money is funded through lotteries. I'd think there would be problems in some families certainly with the income earners having difficulty with gambling. The transfers from the federal government are a significant portion of the total funding. However, I see that in one income statement it's just mentioned as internal government transfers, and then in another one, which I do not have before me, lottery money is mentioned. Is that just an oversight, or is that part of the communications plan? I would be curious to know that.

I'm going to have some more questions, I believe, later on, but I would be very interested in the measure of low-income cutoff. Now, other people dismiss this as an entirely inappropriate measure of poverty or poverty-related conditions. How does this new department feel about the use of the low-income cutoff as an accurate measure to determine what is needed for people who have very little or very modest incomes? Is it a family of four? Is the benchmark going to be a $35,000 income or what? Now with this new department, what exactly can we expect with LICO, or low-income cutoff?

The increased incidence of low birth weight children in the province. I can see from the performance measures, which have yet to be expanded – and that's understandable. What are we going to do about this problem?

The money that is being allocated. I see at the back we're looking at full-time equivalents. There's a significant number of new employees that are going to be in the department. Is the ministry concerned about recruiting staff, particularly about recruiting staff to areas of the province where traditionally it's been difficult to get people to work, in the far north and in some of the rural areas? I think the staff and the professional services that they will provide are needed. What is the department at this time doing to ensure that they can recruit people to remote locations if they're needed?

At this time I will end my questioning and turn it over to one of my hon. colleagues. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Would you like a response first from the minister?

MR. MacDONALD: If she would like to, sure, but I can certainly wait until after my colleagues are done questioning.

THE CHAIRMAN: It's your choice.

MS EVANS: It's at the pleasure of the opposition. What's your preference? I could give some preliminary responses, and some more detail would be provided later. But I'd certainly have some responses.

MR. MacDONALD: Okay. That's good.

MS EVANS: I'll make it very brief. Many of the questions the hon. member has asked are questions I had myself. In fact, if I could just reflect back to last year, the 18 authorities got together and from estimates calculated budgetary funds assigned to each of the 18 authorities. All 18 agreed to vote on where the placement of those funds would be. So in actual fact Calgary and Edmonton received less in that adjustment and in that work that was done by the 18 authorities. The predictions, quite simply put, had not forecast as accurately as they could have the placement need for all the children. We overestimated some of the aboriginal needs, and we have not targeted them as well as they might be in some areas. We have also seen an adjustment based on the formula I talked about earlier, with the single parent, the low income, and the very low income adjusted to the actual needs.

We've also had huge growth in caseload in some particular areas. Sometimes children are fostered outside an authority, and this is one of the new wrinkles, Mr. Chairman, that's giving a lot of angst not only to the authorities but to our staff as they try to sort out the interauthority protocol of dealing with those children that are fostered somewhere else.

If I could just make one observation in response to the day care issue, Medicine Hat found to its astonishment that it had many more children who needed day care subsidy than they actually had subsidies assigned for. It is a policy of government to provide those subsidies, so we provide them. We just make those adjustments. We've tried to work the adjustments this year so that it's more clear who gets what within the context of the programs they are delivering to each.

9:11

If I may on the staff recruitment thank you for your comment and observation. It's something that we have to work on, that we are working on. My earlier remarks about the work we're doing with the training institutions hopefully will help us in making sure that we cover some of the circumstances.

I wanted to just comment on your low-income cutoff acknowledgment. As you know even our hon. Prime Minister Jean Chrétien, has questioned the use of this measure across Canada. It is a measure that has been challenged both for the elements it contains and the lack of recognition of some. There's no regional variance allowed in there, so it becomes problematic. It does reflect a judgment, too, of what it takes to live in our society, and it's different within some parts of Canada. So in a sense what we try to do with the authorities is balance those costs. We have a modest contingency. For example, if a far northern group needs additional support, they can get that by appealing to the ministry for additional dollars to be transferred for something like transportation for sparsity and distance and so on. So we have some modest capacity to help with that.

The other thing we have to always be very cognizant of – and the authorities themselves at the community base agreed with this formula because they recognize that while they may have a distance problem there, some of the children that are resident predominantly are fetal alcohol children and are probably in this community. Although I'm not saying they're not elsewhere, there's a good congregation of them here that it costs more to deliver the service to. You've probably heard me speak about estimates for a million dollars for a lifetime and some as high as $1.5 million if they're affected by FAS/FAE.

Mr. Chairman, can I assure you that on the very specifics of the adjustments both in child population and why we have done certain things to adjust those funding formulas as well as other references that have been made by the hon. member, we will get that detailed information back to you right away, but as you leave, just know that most of the time the general answer is adjustments in real population as opposed to projected population.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

The Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you. The next categories of my questions will relate to the goals and performance measures, children's authorities, and liability contingencies. With due respect to the minister, the goals and key performance measures contained within the business plan this year are simply not good enough. They really provide us with no information. The majority of them talk about targets, projections but give no actual statistics. The other reality is that these performance measures have changed from last year's budget, so there is no consistent tracking relative to the performance of the ministry or the welfare of our children.

I highlighted the performance measure around children who stay free from abuse and neglect earlier. I would just point out a couple of others that strike me. Again, percentage of aboriginal children receiving services from aboriginal service providers: there are no statistics there under Estimated, Projected, or Target.

We see as another example: proportion of children under guardianship who are adopted or in long-term family arrangements. Again, no statistics. Estimated, Projected, and Target are either not available or to be announced, if my copy is correct.

We're not looking for political ammunition in this, but we have to have some consistent ruler, if you will, to guide our priorities, our allocations, our programs, not only from the ministry's perspective but from the frontline perspective. Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, it's not so much a question as just a magnification that this particular area in the business plan, I believe, is one of the weakest, and I know that the staff are capable of providing more transparent, accountable measures and statistics, and I would encourage them to do so.

MS EVANS: Briefly, I am encouraged by your comment rather than dismayed, because I, too, believe that the support from all parties needs to reinforce the performance measures, and that's the capacity that we've built in now. Reverend Lang perhaps said it best when he said that Albertans like to sweep their child care problems under the carpet somewhere and not illuminate them, and the blessing of this ministry is that we will be illuminating them. If you noticed, we have structured the goals of the ministry to be very carefully child, family, community so that we can start building our core businesses, and the performance measures will adjust to reflect that. So your points are well made about the statistics.

When I have searched for longitudinal analysis of what we have for statistics, certainly it's not as easy to track as vital statistics, but on our Task Force on Children at Risk we have recognized that need, and without revealing much of what will come out in the publishing of that task force, that is one thing we have recommended. We really believe through all the partnering ministries that we have to have clearer data as a baseline but not so abstract, random as just suggesting something but giving more concrete examples of both what the need is and how we can target improving on that need.

If I look at the aboriginal one, it's our hope that by building the capacity within the aboriginal community either on the Métis settlements or within the 18 authorities and the various agreements – as I noted, we have eight that still contract services – we'll have much happier children in the First Nations communities. We will be working on those, and that is a very strong target of our performance measures and accountability section of the department. So thank you.

MRS. SLOAN: As a further example, perhaps, of a measure that the government might wish to explore, I'd just like to reference the indicators that were utilized in No Safeguards: A Profile of Urban Poverty in Alberta, that was prepared by Community Services Consulting Ltd. for the Inter City Forum on Social Policy, an extremely detailed and useful report. I would cite page 7 of that report. What they found was that there were approximately 96,000 children aged zero to 14 years living in poverty in selected communities.

In Calgary, almost one in four children this age lives in poverty. In Edmonton, the number is closer to one in three, or 40,400 children. Despite their smaller populations, the percentages of poor children in Lethbridge, Red Deer and Medicine Hat are comparable to Calgary's. There are 3,200 poor children [alone] under age 15 in Red Deer. Wetaskiwin stands out among the smallest municipalities with a child poverty rate of 29%.

And they show the distribution on that particular page.

What analysis has the department done on these statistics relative to the accompanying caseload statistics for that children's authority? I'm pointing it out not really for a response this morning but as an area, Mr. Chairman, where clearly there is some correlation between the two.

I would also reference in that same report the analysis of poor families. They talk about the distribution of poor families, both where there's one earner and two earners, and cite again some of the highest areas as being Lethbridge, Red Deer, et cetera.

Relative to performance measures and goals it would seem to me in the future that what we might want to try and do is look at some of these social indicators, if you will, accompanied by the indicators of infant mortality rate, infant low birth weight, teenage pregnancies, which regions have the highest incidence of those. Clearly we know that some of the northern regions do have that and subsequently have a need for an increased reliance on child welfare.

9:21

Now, we can continue to expend the dollars that are required to provide the services at the back end, if you will, for support for child welfare, but what are we doing about the addressing the root causes of those indicators? There is no mention of poverty or low birth weight or teenage pregnancies in the key performance measures and goals. These were questions and areas that were touched on in last year's estimates, and if I recall correctly, the minister actually committed at that time that there would be some investigation into looking at those particular areas. That was Minister Oberg at that point in time. I won't take the time to actually reference that, but that commitment was made in the estimates last year.

I'd like to move now to further questions relative to the children's authorities, and one particular area that we have noted with a high degree of scrutiny is the discrepancy between allocations for board governance between these authorities. Just to cite some examples, Sun Country receives $597,000 for board governance and core administration. We see that Windsong, in contrast, receives $360,000. Calgary Rocky View, up in the high end, receives $850,000. Why does that large discrepancy exist? I can see to some degree that administration costs would be greater because the population being served is greater, but for strictly board governance why is there such a discrepancy in that particular area?

There is not an overt mention of funding identified for standards, evaluation, and monitoring in the authority budgets or in the general ministry budget, and that is an area that is of the utmost importance as these authorities begin their existence. I would cite from the Auditor General's 1998-99 report, page 175, recommendation 34:

It is recommended that the Department of Children's Services require the business plans of Child and Family Services Authorities . . . to incorporate relevant measures and strategies to improve the overall accountability and effectiveness of the CFSAs.

He further cites that "some business plans lack the elements that are critical to accountability and effectiveness."

Some of the submitted plans were lacking in areas that are critical to the overall accountability and effectiveness of [the authorities]. Handbook III had required the identification of significant trends and issues in each region, as well as proposed solutions to deal with these issues. This requirement was not adequately covered by six of the regions. By not adequately identifying trends and issues, there is a risk that the strategies these regions developed were not based on the specific needs of the region. Eight regions had not completed the process of defining measurable indicators.

Again, it's the same point. We don't have leadership at the provincial level, and subsequently at the authority level the appointed authorities are not providing true or measurable indicators to guide them.

In order for the CFSAs to measure their progress, relevant performance measures are needed that, in the future, can be compared to previous years' statistics and targets.

Again, my exact point. He goes on to say that "the foundations of the redesign of services for children and families ("the four pillars") were not reflected adequately in the performance measures."

I would cite, then, on pages 176, 177, and 178, the specific mention made by the Auditor General to the Calgary Rocky View authority and the deficit accounting systems and recommendations.

The Calgary Rocky View Child and Family Services Authority and the Department of Children's Services maintain accounting systems that can be relied upon for the preparation of accurate financial control information.

Simply, Madam Minister, what I am asking for this morning is an update on the initiatives that the ministry has undertaken to address those recommendations from the Auditor General.

My third area of questions relates to liabilities. There is no information in the business plan about legal suits brought forward against the ministry. They have never been encompassed in the business plan, and I believe the public has an entitlement to know that information. So I would ask how many legal suits have in fact been filed against the previous ministry of family and social services or the current Ministry of Children's Services in the past year or in previous years, if that information is available.

Where does the ministry account for the funding both for legal representation costs and damages in these particular suits? Again, that's not a specific item in the budget itself.

I would ask what the annual expenditure for legal representation and damages has been from 1993 to current. Again, because of the restructuring of this particular department area, I believe this is relevant information. It's also an indication of the measure of success or failure of the department to fulfill their responsibilities.

Respecting confidentiality, of course, I would also ask for the nature of the legal suits brought against, as I've referenced previously, family and social services or Children's Services with the identifiable information removed.

Those conclude my questions in this category, Mr. Chairman, and I would invite the minister, if she's willing, to respond.

MS EVANS: With more detail later I'd just indicate that in the caseload review and in our review in the department of performance measures and the poverty issues and the root causes and the circumstances around certain critical issues raised by the intercity forum group, we will be doing that analysis and providing the hon. member information for what we have to date.

I'd like to just comment on the category budgets for board governance. They were defined as small, medium, and large. The nine small boards were given $360,000; the medium, $597,000; and the two large ones were given $850,000. It was an early estimate of budgeting requirements for those bodies.

If I may, in addressing the Auditor General's particular recommendations, we have not only started as a department to reorganize, to structure ourselves so that the business planning of Children's Services is on more solid ground and built on solid rationale, but I have met with department officials and the Auditor General to ensure that the issues that have been raised by the CEOs and CFSAs in the moneys that are assigned to them have been addressed. As we noted earlier by other hon. members' questions, why certain groups got certain amounts was raised but also: was it addressing the priorities of needs that were given? In the formation of the CFSAs some of the manner in which the budgets were given money and the tracking systems may have not properly accounted for those costs during the period of the annual review, but we have sorted that out. We have outcomes expected this year in the way we've developed procedures that will be more rigorous and appropriate management information to the authorities from government.

9:31

Mr. Chairman, most of you may be aware that we've had six shared-service modules providing financial and other information support to the authorities, to the PDD boards, and supporting Human Resources as well as Children's Services and also Health through the PDD boards. These six modules provide communication of figures that they share and financial people that they've shared. The authorities, in fact I think Calgary Rocky View initially at the first meeting, raised the fact that they required a much more focused attention than that, and through the assistant deputy minister here in charge of strategic planning and financial management I am assured that they will be getting that and more timely information. Over the next year I'm quite confident that the Auditor General will be happier than he was in the past about the outcomes and the accountability, and it's something that I, too, am concerned about.

On the liabilities and the question about where they are disclosed. They are in the annual report and become notes in the financial statements. If I may focus for a moment – and I'll have to provide more information later of a detailed nature or at least generic detail to the hon. member. We have $61 million outstanding in our present lawsuits. To tell you what they address, it would be better for me to just refer to getting some type of disclosure that is appropriate, as you've described, not disclosing detail that could not be revealed. Many of these relate to some cases that have been outstanding for some considerable period of time and to residential lodging for foster children in the past. I have provided direction to the department right from the outset on coming to the department that we must manage and deal with these in as human and financially responsible a way as possible.

There is considerable work going on with the Minister of Justice on these cases and some considerable review taken. I think his view like mine, is to accelerate the resolution so that long-standing issues that have been held between government and these families and particularly those individuals won't continue to be a sore in their situation. We will be providing more detail on that. That liability, as I said, currently exists in the annual reports, and perhaps later we could provide you the explanation of where it's been in the last two annual reports, if we could, just so you're able to see. I don't think there's been significant growth in that. It has been historic.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. I wonder if I could ask a couple of questions about day cares. The information you gave us in the little blue binder was really very useful. Thank you. It was very easy to access and readable. It indicates that there's a 32 percent vacancy rate in day cares, and I wondered why that is so. That seems like an awfully high vacancy rate for a service that I thought was in high demand.

MS EVANS: In part I think the answer comes to the 80 contracts that are held with family day homes, where families prefer to place their children into day cares rather than to place them into a family day home so that they can be looked after in a different measure. The contracts are held by the authorities with the providers, and the day homes are inspected and monitored in much the same way as the day cares would be. Also, I think that from my more recent months of experience on day cares, families have wanted other choices, and when we moved to provide the dollars to the people with low income wanting the subsidy, they wanted to have other choices provided to them.

Did you have some more specific things?

DR. MASSEY: I didn't understand that from what you had provided here. It said that there were 559 day care centres, and it goes on to say: with a 32 percent vacancy rate. Then it talks about day care homes, 2000 family day homes.

MS EVANS: I'm sorry. My deputy has drawn to my attention that I should have said family day homes as opposed to family day care homes. Okay? It's a different program.

DR. MASSEY: So that isn't the vacancy rate?

MS EVANS: No.

DR. MASSEY: So the question still remains: why would there be such a high vacancy rate in the day care centres?

MS EVANS: May I make that to my deputy, Mr. Chairman? Would that be all right?

THE CHAIRMAN: It would have to be a short one.

MS TYLER: As you know, the day care system in Alberta is largely run by for-profit organizations who will set up shop and be licensed by us and then provide the spaces. When we gather the statistics, we ask them what their capacity is versus who they currently have, with regard to children, and that's where we get our information. We have historically in Alberta had a fairly robust day care situation as compared to other parts of the country because, I think, we do have the private-sector involvement in it. What we can do is provide a little more information about what day cares are telling us about their rates and also over time, but consistently there has been a day care vacancy rate of approximately that amount in the province as operators set up shop and then adjust their capacity based on demand.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. If I might follow up on the day care homes, it indicates that they're inspected twice a year.

MS EVANS: As a minimum. Usually day cares receive four inspections annually. The response I gave to an hon. colleague in the House last week was relative to the computerized compliance management system. If a day care gets more frequent questions, they get more frequent, even monthly inspections that are not announced inspections but where the licensing officers go out from the authorities and inspect them. We keep a close eye on those that have shown previous problems, and that is a strong part of the due diligence expected of the CFSAs.

DR. MASSEY: I'm more interested in the family day homes. The day cares are really quite public in many ways. There's a lot of traffic in and out, but it seems to me that the family day homes are much more closed in terms of perhaps the youngsters. Twice a year seems to be – you know, I go back to my experience in ethnography and how long it takes to really find out what's going on inside a social setting. I wonder how secure you feel about those inspections.

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, I have asked this question of other authorities. There is a monthly inspection of those types of homes, and often in the community, for example in Mill Woods, there is the supplement of people who have been providing, in what I would call nonprofit organizations, other kinds of partnerships with parents and with providers to make sure that they go in and provide children extra training and provide the parents some assistance.

Mr. Chairman, I think that we are reasonably satisfied that we're doing well, but again, in the review of performance measures we will discuss this one with child and family service authorities. I intended to raise that at this next meeting of the authorities, given the nature of the recent incident that was here. I am not saying that all day care homes and authorities are experiencing problems, but I think the public has questions about inspections in family day homes, and it will come under that scrutiny and discussion as well.

DR. MASSEY: Just a technical question. Is there a requirement that day cares have an outdoor space?

MS EVANS: Yes. I'm told yes. All that I've visited have had it, so I guess they've met that.

DR. MASSEY: May I ask about the health initiative and your involvement? What has been the ministry's involvement in that health initiative?

MS EVANS: In the student health initiative?

DR. MASSEY: Yes.

9:41

MS EVANS: Predominantly, Mr. Chairman, the $26.5 million spent at the local level is voted between the partners at the local level. It is interesting that sometimes the partners don't always agree what the process should be or whose vote should matter most, especially as the student health initiative has been in the schools.

As I go back to the ones that have had the greatest difficulty adjusting to this more democratic form of assigning funds, I think it has generally been felt that the positive is that it's building some networks and relationships between the partnering providers. If we look at the placement of local CFSA providers, like a social worker or somebody who is providing service in a neighbourhood of a larger community like Edmonton, for example, it enables the school to have the social worker in there and sometimes in places where the hon. member would be familiar with vacancy rates. The Minister of Infrastructure has assured that we can use those without penalty to the school board to place a local social worker to work with the counselors and the administration in the school and with the health authority to make sure that there's a network that secures the provision of service to the student. It is that intent.

In its first year or so it has not been without some growing pains as people develop those relationships, but I have noted that sometimes it has been easier in smaller communities where they've actually known those providers and have already begun to work quite well and have not allowed themselves to be run by some rule and regulation of confidentiality but have learned of the practicality of dealing with the student.

I hope this initiative actually builds in a stronger partnership with the mental health providers and the mental health support teams in Alberta, because I think then we could help avoid some of the crises that I've seen where there are health needs that aren't always recognized because the child is walking and talking.

DR. MASSEY: I'm still trying to get a handle on what's happening with that money. Can you give me an example of a project? I looked, for instance, at the agreement between the school districts and the regional health authority in the city in terms of speech therapy, where it was very limited in the amount of resources. In fact, they give speech therapy up to third grade, and then there's nothing beyond that. I know some parents have an interest in that initiative in terms of preschool funding. Have you examples of projects that have actually been undertaken through the initiative?

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to ask the Ministry of Learning to help me with that, because what the member has highlighted is an actual one that in this district and in the capital region has not worked to its advantage because of the lack of speech therapists. We are in a grave shortage situation in having the speech pathologists here, and that has mitigated against the most desired results in the student health initiative.

More specific examples or other examples of where it's working well. I couldn't give you a really good one. I know of some, but I don't know how successfully they're operating, and I'd hesitate to mention one for the record and not do it appropriately. I think that ultimately the crisis in speech pathology and the lack of speech pathologists is separate and distinct from some of the successes that relate to the student health initiative. I will try and respond in written form to both: how we're managing the speech pathology needs of students in those situations, particularly in this region, and also where some of those student health initiatives are working particularly well.

DR. MASSEY: I'm being a little slow this morning, Madam Minister. I'm still not quite sure how your department is involved in the initiatives.

MS EVANS: We vote. They actually sit there and vote in some communities. They agree with their own process, and sometimes my own authorities come back to me and say that they lost the vote, that health and education voted together at the local level. At the local level the children's authority is almost the new boy on the street.

If I may mention it, I think ultimately children's authorities on the community basis will get increasing respect, but still they are new when you look at health and education and municipal councils. It is not that children's services haven't been at local authority levels, but they have not been recognized at the local level as decision-makers or priority-setters, because they have been delivered by the province. With the local community-based organizations it's our hope that they will come up in profile, will be recognized, and will be seen as a valued member.

In two places, both Calgary and Edmonton, you can see that work with the justice system through the community centres, work done by the police, both Chief Silverberg and Acting Chief Bob Wasylyshen, there are plans that are very much inclusive and, I think, will net really desired results. Today in most of them they vote, and some of them just make contributions. If the hon. member has some citing of where it's not working well, particularly I'd like to follow up on those because we do want to see the partnerships and the integration work.

DR. MASSEY: No. I think it was just from the perspective of trying to understand how the health initiative is working and the input.

Could I return to the question I asked before? I don't think the minister understood the perspective about the reliance on the use of lottery funding. A group of parents in Calgary indicated that they would not, for instance, work casinos or run bingos for school funding. Their objection was that it makes a difference where the money comes from, and the bishop of Calgary admonished parents in that city in terms of fund-raising through those kinds of activities. That was the root of my question: does it make a difference where the money comes from?

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, the member has highlighted something that I was unaware of and had not acknowledged in the manner in which we receive funds and dispense funds in this budget. So I will do some checking on that, but I have not yet had that raised by the authorities. I would assume that part of it would be a policy from the financial perspective. I believe the hon. member would be familiar with the fact that lottery funds in the past were just acknowledged in a different fashion in revenue, and now that they're being ascribed to each ministry, it raises some question about philosophy, that had not been previously discussed. So perhaps I can talk with you later about what my most appropriate response might have been.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks.

THE CHAIRMAN: You may do that at your leisure.
Mr. MacDonald.

MR. MacDONALD: Yes, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have a few additional questions at this time for the hon. minister. The first one deals with a difficult situation. I find some of the most difficult files I have doing constituency work are regarding this issue, and that's PGO status. I do not see an indication here of the proportion of children who move from PGO status to adoption, but many people, far too many, come to the office and have a great deal of difficulty with this process. I'm wondering how the department is dealing with this. It's an emotional issue on all sides, and since we have had this restructuring, I wonder what's going to be done to improve this.

That's also important whenever we talk about the child welfare caseload review that's going on. I understand this will be completed and it's a review of factors that lead to the rising child welfare caseloads. When will this be completed?

MS EVANS: August. The report should be to me hopefully before August, but it's pretty detailed, so at least by August.

MR. MacDONALD: Okay. Fair enough.

Now, in the ministry goals and measures and strategies on page 52 of the business plan, there is a strategy on line 1.2.2:

Work in partnership to educate and increase awareness of service providers and public on the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution legislation at the local level.

My question here would be: in partnership with whom? There has been noted success, particularly in Calgary and Edmonton, of course. There's been a decrease in the number of child prostitutes on the streets, but there are people who are telling me that they have now moved indoors. Out of sight, out of mind. I would strongly object to that, if it's true.

The massage centres are now places of operation, and I don't believe they are being effectively policed. You have to be 18 years or older to be employed there. My next question would be: are there plans to work with police forces across the province to monitor these establishments on a regular basis to ensure that this is not going on? If these places are turning into what is termed in the Calgary media as the mattress centres, then this is not a step in the right direction. It has just been passing this horrible practice from one level to another.

9:51

The performance measure here: I understand the baseline is to be established. But the percentage of children leaving prostitution: when will that be set up, and will there be any indication in there of what I spoke about here? You know, the child prostitutes are off the street, but they've just sort of moved behind closed doors.

I have at this time also a few more questions, if I could direct them to the minister. The incidence of teenage mothers applying for assistance. I see in part of your document on estimates that the rate of teenage pregnancies has gone down slightly. What is the number of teenage mothers applying for assistance?

Children in need, particularly teenagers, and suicide rates. What studies and what numbers can you provide to us on that horrible statistic?

When women enter a shelter, is there an accurate tracking made of the number of children who are admitted at the same time with the mother?

My next question would be: how many children suffering from mental illness are awaiting treatment? Is there a backlog here? I understand there is, but correct me, please, if I'm wrong.

I think those are all the questions I have at the moment, Mr. Chairman.

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, I have spoken to police in both Calgary and Edmonton. I have met with the Street Teams and also with police that are working on community services. They tell me that it is really a myth that they don't know where the trick pads are. They say you only have to look at the needles and syringes and the condoms outside the doors and you can find them, wherever they are, whether they're massage parlours or not. They even track traffic statistics in this city to know where the cars circle the block. The police here said that although some prostitutes and pimps would like to say that it's just moved it off the street and got it somewhere that's less obvious, they tell me: don't kid yourself; we know exactly where they are.

They have also been very satisfied that the legislation is working. Although it does not satisfy many children who feel, when apprehended, that they don't want their parents to know what they're doing, in actual fact most of the parents do know what they're doing. I've had a little bit of experience talking with them. Also, Street Teams in Calgary feel that our biggest need is transition housing or places to take them out of the cities or away from what I would describe as the near occasion of sin, if I may, so that they don't fall back into old habits, that their pimps aren't available to pick them up again, that they haven't tracked that.

Catholic Social Services is one of our best partners in this city and also, obviously, the local police through Justice and other social agencies that provide us counseling and support. We try to match the needs of the child with the strengths of the counselor. We're doing a lot with AADAC on the substance abuse part of it, because that becomes part of where we provide the child more service and they can be protected and removed from their addiction, most being addicted. In fact, Mr Chairman, apparently the record of addictions is very high among these children.

The question about PGO status and the questions the hon. member asked. One of the problems we have in improving the rate of adoptions is that many of these children are older, they have behavioural problems, or they are over 12 years of age and do not give legal consent to being adopted.

I might just say, too, that in terms of your questions on teenage moms, that would usually be under Human Resources and Employment. As it affects the child, we will try and follow up with that question, responding as well with some information on suicide rate.

Children in need are children that receive a supplement to other income or other financial support, and they are not like foster children, who receive a graduating scale. There is some discretion to provide them support through the child-in-need program, and we do work with HR and E on that.

We have over 4,900 women and over 6,000 children that have been in shelters this year, and we are tracking that. What we have not in the past tracked and does not show up on the statistics we gather is whether or not, when they have found the shelter to be full, they have taken advantage of the other placement that has been provided for them. I am assured by the Minister of Human Resources and Employment and by our department officials that we never, ever turn a mother or a mother and children away from providing them some type of facility with our partnerships. So there is some work to be done on those stats.

There has to be work done on the stats on PCHIP, because both Calgary and Edmonton, where the programs predominate, track those statistics differently through the police. The Calgary police chief told me recently: just tell us how you want us to track them, and we'll do that.

How many children are awaiting treatment and what the backlog is in terms of mental health? I couldn't provide that for you, but I will consult with the other ministry to see if we can provide more detail on that. Perhaps through our own department we have some statistics.

MR. MacDONALD: Mr. Chairman, I have one more question at this time, please. I believe it would be on line 2.2.4, corporate adoption services. I see a 25 percent decrease in the budget from one year to the next. The first question I have related to that: is this because of a reduction in user fees?

MS EVANS: It's co-ordination and matching of the adoption services as well as the rate paid the agency. It reflects the child welfare support. Perhaps Keray Henke could complete that one. I know from program 2 on page 54 that that's your reference point. Keray.

MR. HENKE: Yes. That's not in fact a decrease year over year; that's a reallocation. We've moved the actual budgeting responsibility for that from line 2.2.4 up to 2.1.1. So it's part of program support services now under the reorganized ministry.

MR. MacDONALD: Okay. Now, specifically I have some questions for the hon. minister related to international adoptions. It certainly is recognized that we are a signatory to international agreements, but the fees I have encountered are extremely high. When you consider that with the international agreements we have signed, we have agreed to do a case study of the homes where children who are to be adopted from foreign countries – that's understandable, but the majority of the people we are studying are new Canadians. Their disposable income I think is better used getting set up in this country, whether it's improving their education or purchasing their home or furniture or whatever. These fees are simply prohibitive. I think it would be an excellent idea to recognize that these fees are high and could be adjusted.

10:01

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, if I may. The overall intake of immigration and the federal policies on this have had ministers from all across Canada talking. There is proper placement of children but also things like making sure that their health needs have been respected, and of course we have involvement with the other agencies exclusive of government.

Rather than have you go through too much detail, I'd rather provide for you some more detailed information that relates both to the carving out of federal responsibility and to what this province does with international adoptions. I think you'll see that we are not the ones that are making it prohibitive for the families. Could we provide that for the member?

MR. MacDONALD: Well, I'm certainly quite willing to hear what the department has to say, but I have looked at this. I realize the federal government has a role in it, but the department has a role in it as well, and the department sets these fees. Where the family goes to have these assessments done – it could be Catholic Social Services; it could be any number of organizations. If we are interested in the reunification of families, whether it be extended family or not, this cost is quite high. I believe it can be in excess of $900 for a home assessment.

MS EVANS: But, Mr. Chairman, we do not set the fees. We will approve the adoption, but the role for our department is not to establish the fees.

MR. MacDONALD: So the private assessment agencies set the fees.

MS EVANS: They do the assessment and set the fees accordingly. That's what I'm given to understand. Would somebody else like to add to that?

MR. MacDONALD: Okay.

MS EVANS: If you'd like to provide us with some case specific to something that you are worried about with the high cost or some inordinately high costs, perhaps we could review that. This would be the first notice I've had of anybody being concerned about the high cost of fees, although we have certainly discussed among the ministers the concerns about the protocol and the costs associated with international adoptions. We'd follow up with that, hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Before the privatization became stylish in this province, I'm told that the fees were very, very modest whenever they were provided by the government.

MS EVANS: They were done by the department, and now they are levered out.

MR. MacDONALD: With respect to the department, this may have come before your watch – I can't recall – but department officials have been very gracious and have been very timely with the responses to my constituency of five when I have requested information from them.

MS EVANS: Thank you.

MR. MacDONALD: Yeah. You bet.

The length of time for these assessments is another question that I have because some people are very anxious to reunite their families in this country.

Thank you for that. I won't take up any more of the committee's time with that issue.

MS EVANS: Thank you.

MRS. SLOAN: Mr. Chairman, we have another block of questions, and we're wondering if the minister would refrain from responding for the remaining 15 minutes just so we may get these on the record?

MS EVANS: Agreed.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: There are 15 minutes remaining.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you. The next set of questions arises from the children's summit proceedings and report. You provided to us this morning an outline of expenses received to date and the estimate of total expenditures for that process. While we applauded the government in the release of this report and its comprehensiveness, we have not seen any written commitments or publicized commitments as to where the government is going with respect to the implementation of the report. I think that was certainly a weakness that was identified when the report was released. We're wondering when the action plan or implementation plan might be released by the department.

We would ask that question in the context that if we're planning to have such a proceeding on an annual basis, it would only seem appropriate that we'd be able to demonstrate that we've moved somewhere towards implementing the last year's report before we conduct the next summit. So it's a concern of ours, and we'd like to encourage the ministry to put something forward in terms of commitments relative to the implementation of these recommendations as soon as possible.

There were many areas that were aptly highlighted in the summit report and in the recommendations made by participants, but one particular area that I would like to highlight this morning is the area of aboriginal children and their needs. There were a number of specific recommendations that were highlighted in the children's summit report that spoke about placing "the focus on the Aboriginal pillar" and that government and community work together to promote greater education and awareness toward . . . building on the strengths and relationships of the Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal communities . . .

and the desire to have a "cross-ministry approach to address issues faced by Aboriginal children and youth."

Again, the performance measures don't give us much to go on with respect to the services provided or the needs of aboriginal children, but it was in the supplemental information that you provided to us prior to this morning's estimates. You did outline as of December '99 the child welfare caseload by racial origin. It would appear from the statistics you've provided that the aboriginal need component has decreased somewhat. I believe we were over 50 percent of the caseload at one time that required child welfare services. I would ask what you attribute the decrease to. Are you convinced that in fact this decrease has been a true decrease in need, or is it that through regionalization or through other causes these children are just not able to access the services they require in the same manner?

We also know that there is a high degree of disability in the aboriginal population that has placed accompanying needs on the child welfare system and on disability programs. We would ask for a breakdown or a cross-referencing of those figures for the last fiscal year at least. If they're available for other years, that would also be preferable.

We would like to have more details relative to where the ministry is currently at with respect to their negotiations with the bands in terms of the delivery of services, staffing, and the adoption process. We believe – and we haven't received any information to the contrary – that there still remains a very large list of children who are waiting for adoption in the aboriginal sector that have been approved for adoption but have not been able to achieve the consent of the bands to have those adoptions occur. Is the fact that that adoption list continues to grow and the wait for those children continues to grow truly in the best interests of those children? I would suggest that it is not.

I recognize the political difficulties in the area and the desire the government has to correspondingly strengthen relationships with the aboriginal sectors; however, these children will not wait. They are going to grow and develop whatever dysfunctions result from their having to wait for a strong and nurturing environment. They're not something that can be delayed because of government inaction or band inaction. So we would ask for more specific information relative to the status of those waiting lists and where the government is going in addressing that in short order.

10:11

Children's mental health. This was an area as well that was mentioned last year. It's been mentioned correspondingly in the ministry of health's estimates. I was highly critical of the minister not providing more priority to the area of children's mental health needs. Again, it's an area where waiting lists in this province continue to grow even for those children with the most critical mental health needs, where they are at risk of injuring themselves or others because of their mental state.

We recognize that we have the joint children's initiative. We recognize that we have the students' health initiative. That is not making an impact for these children or the families of these children at the frontline level. So we are asking for more detailed responses to this ministry's commitment to lobby for challenge and work towards a greater commitment and allocation for those particular children in the children's services area.

I know that my colleague from Edmonton-Mill Woods has some further questions that he would like to ask. Just in conclusion, I'd like to acknowledge Line Porfon's assistance in the preparation of questions for the estimates debates this year and give my thanks to her for her support and also thank my colleagues from Edmonton-Gold Bar and Edmonton-Mill Woods for assisting me in preparing for the debates this morning.

Thank you.

DR. MASSEY: I'm not sure how we are for time, but I just have a couple of questions.

THE CHAIRMAN: You still have nine minutes.

DR. MASSEY: Great.

I wanted to ask, if I could, Madam Minister, about the women's shelters. What kind of research capability is there within the ministry? For instance, if a woman has been in a shelter and moves to second-stage housing, is there tracking of those people to see what happens to them, to see if things are done that will help them not be in the same situation again?

MS EVANS: Just briefly, Mr. Chairman. I could consult with my colleague the Minister of Human Resources and Employment, who would be part of that, I believe. There is some work done, but I can't tell you whether it's definitive or whether it's consistent across Alberta.

Would you provide, Paula?

MS TYLER: Just a comment to that, and that would be that one of the challenges we have is that unless women want to be tracked, it's difficult to track them. Indeed, these services are voluntary. We do have a tracking in place. Follow-up women's shelters do provide follow-up for people who leave, but sometimes even they lose track of them as well as they move into other lives and sometimes other parts of the province. Any woman that is in significant danger as she is in our system is tracked very, very closely for sure. We can get some more for you.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks. It seems like such a hard problem to deal with, and I just wonder what we're learning in terms of trying to help.

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, I think one of the ways we are learning is through the removal of perpetrators of violence so that women don't have to leave home with their children. I think that will start showing some positive effect, but it is a problem.

It's also a problem for the women that leave home and never approach a shelter but find some other alternative accommodations. I think we have recognized that, and I believe we have a modest increase to the funding for shelters this year of about a million plus dollars to that section, so we are trying to recognize our partnership with the local level. But some of the nonprofits and even some of the communities like Slave Lake are looking for options for managing the issue. The visibility at the local level is significant, and that's one place that some of the First Nations people have certainly offered their shelters, saying that there's absolutely nobody that's going to get into them and try and challenge them relative to the placement of women in need.

So we are looking at this. I think we have more work this year, though, on that one.

DR. MASSEY: If I can just follow up in terms of the rural centres. There are only eight of them?

MS EVANS: Yes, that's correct.

DR. MASSEY: How well do they work in a rural area? It seems that visibility is . . .

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, people do tell me about that, the difficulty in the rural area, not only because of visibility but because they know that even the staff are very recognizable in the community. So they have talked about other things; for example, having homes where they would just take moms on an individual basis, harbour them in shelter, sort of safe houses that are refuges for just one or two.

I think the police there will tell you that in some communities they are incarcerated in sort of separate parts of their facility that would normally be held for incarceration purposes; in other words, not a jail, but it certainly is a safe part of the jail. I've heard people talk about that as an option, but at present we have not too many statistics of people going there.

Some of the First Nations placements are actually very solid and well-established placements, but I think here is part of where our partnership can work to help with those that need the help in that capacity.

DR. MASSEY: A final question is on the funding and the negotiations for funding the shelters. We hear: shelter under threat of closure. How is that negotiation handled?

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, where I've had those questions before, it has been somebody who has felt that comments by a CEO may have been intended to threaten their long-term funding. When we've investigated, that has never been proven to be the case or found to be the case. Some have absolutely ideal circumstances, but when you see a headline, you think there's something there that has been done. We haven't found anything to substantiate that. We have been aware, though, that CEOs who've gone out and who've worked on behalf of their board to evaluate programming have encountered programs that they'd like to improve, not specifically in shelters but some of the other counseling programs in communities, and then sometimes this question evolves. But I've been personally assured on every one I've inquired about, and I've had no evidence that any shelter funding has been cut back. Quite the contrary.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks.

MRS. SLOAN: Just a couple of quick questions in our remaining time. We saw a number of the children's authorities this year run deficits, and we're wondering if it's the ministry's plan in the next fiscal year to fund the deficits or to start to establish the budgetary process so we fund on the basis of what resources are required rather than underfunding and then covering the deficits at some later time.

Specifically in the program 1 area the increases relative to the ministers, 1.0.1 and 1.0.2, are perhaps close to the largest increases with a 39.5 percent and 52 percent increase in those two areas for this fiscal year. If it's possible, would the minister provide a breakdown of the additional costs relative to staff positions, responsibilities, and the justifications for those allocations being made?

MS EVANS: Mr. Chairman, the ministry was compared to the previous minister without portfolio, who had a budget of just over a million dollars. This is more like the human resources ministry. It is agreeing that the weight goes with the full ministry. We'd be pleased to provide more on both that and the establishment of the deputy's office. Previously the position was called the David Steeves position. He was not identified as either an ADM or DM or director of the Children's Secretariat.

I think it's somewhat unfortunate that we had to base our new ministry on the assumption that it was patterned after the secretariat rather than the ministry of social services. That reference point has caught us in this budget situation of looking like we have been spending with gay abandon. It's not that case at all. We will provide that in our summary to you.

10:21

MRS. SLOAN: One further area I would just identify in contrast. The Children's Advocate's office budget is only increasing by 1 percent, and this has been an area where I have voiced long-standing concerns about the ability of that office to truly be able to fully fulfill its advocacy role. I'm cognizant of the minister's review in progress for that office and am supportive, as you know, of expanding that role, not only with respect to children's needs in the area of child welfare but across a number of ministries, I think, as I referenced earlier.

We see as one example children's mental health needs being largely unrepresented and not a priority. I think it is something where an independent office or a well-funded office of the Children's Advocate could be able to identify some of those critical areas and perhaps conduct research to help us further understand some of the correlation between issues like poverty and the need for child welfare, the utilization of women's shelters, the accompanying relationship between low birth weights, teenage pregnancies, family poverty, and the reliance on government programs.

So that budget and the 1 percent increase in the budget, given the increase in the caseload, is not respectful of the additional demands and requirements that office must fulfill.

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd like to thank the Official Opposition and subcommittee members and the minister for their questions through this period of time. Pursuant to our resolution at the beginning of the meeting, we'd turn the time to any government members for questions, and I believe Mr. Cardinal, that you have a question.

MR. CARDINAL: Yeah, I just have a quick comment and a question for the minister in relation to aboriginal children in care. As most of you are aware, I was involved in the original restructuring of family and social services, which included child welfare and persons with disabilities. Of course, one of the phases I was involved in was the original design of children's services, but as a lot of you are aware, I was not involved in the implementation of the process. It is, I would have to say, a bit different from what the original plan was, not to say that it doesn't work. You know, it's a bit different.

The area that I want to mention is in relation to aboriginal children. Earlier today there was mention of poverty on reserves, poverty and the number of children in care in Calgary, Edmonton, Red Deer, Lethbridge, in the major centres across Alberta.

I've always said that children are not the problem. It's the families that have problems at home that create problems for children, and I want to make sure that's on the record, that we don't forget that. When it comes to aboriginal children, because close to 40 percent of children in care are aboriginal children, until we deal with the issue of poverty on the reserves and some of the remote communities in northern Alberta, we have a long road ahead of us, a major challenge in getting children in stable homes and families being self-sufficient and independent.

The issue of federal responsibility. I don't know if colleagues would want to hear that, but I'm sure you will. It will be in the record of Hansard anyway. Originally, when the program was designed, one of the first phases that was supposed to happen was to have the First Nations – and there were 45 First Nations bands who wanted to take over child welfare on and off the reserve and wanted federal legislation and federal dollars. They felt at the time – and they still feel the same way – that they are under federal jurisdiction and federal responsibility. Therefore, the legislation should be provided by the federal government, including dollars to administer child welfare programs on and off the reserve.

When you look at the caseload, you know, a high percentage of the caseload are First Nations, so that is where I'm leaning my question. I believe 37 of the 46 bands now have delegated authority I know that the bands want to go the next step, and that's to take over fully the administration of their children on and off the reserve with, again, federal funding. I just wonder, Madam Minister, what steps are being taken to review this again and ensure that the federal government is brought in and takes the responsibility of federal legislation and federal dollars on and off the reserve? That is what the First Nations want.

Now, if that were to happen, what you would have to do, then, is look at some restructuring of the existing system we've developed. The original plan was to do that first, which would have taken close to half the caseload right off the bat within the first two or three years with the federal system. Now you have this design in place that looks after all – you know, they haven't taken over fully. I just wondered what steps are being taken to pursue that further with the federal government and the First Nations? It's a major one.

MS EVANS: Thank you for the question. Many of the First Nations groups, as the hon. member is no doubt aware, are taking their issues directly. Even through the month of April I think there are about three dates set for them to meet in Ottawa on behalf of this issue and other issues.

In the appointment of Nancy Reynolds as executive director and working with the aboriginal agreements, she has contacted the various chiefs and tribal councils and has been engaged in meeting with them, trying to determine exactly what our status is with those particular First Nations bodies in the delivery of services and where the agreements cannot be fulfilled.

One of the challenges – yet I think it's an opportunity that's being worked on – is the agreements between the CFSAs and the arrangements that they're working on with the First Nations groups so those children that are off reserve aren't lost to the reserve forever. When you hear the First Nations people speak with such passion about having their children continue to be a part of their culture and a part of their spiritual community in a very meaningful sense, you recognize that we don't do justice to those children if we don't provide some of that type of approach. The hon. member has done a considerable amount as an MLA to bring these issues forward to me.

The other thing that we have had is a review of our staffing. As the hon. members have noted from the briefing sheets, there are 200 additional staff applied in this year's budget not only to relieve caseload, review circumstances, and assist the CFSAs but in part at least to address some of the needs aboriginal people have in terms of making sure we have people in the department, through the Children's Advocate, and at the local level who can deal and who are familiar with the issues of aboriginal people. I think that sensitivity is something where we're building some capacity in consultation with the associate minister in charge of Aboriginal Affairs, and as we get through the aboriginal policy and as we reflect on what we were told in our meeting recently with the Métis Nation as well, who are people that want us to be sensitive to their needs beyond the scope of the First Nations agreements – I think that's a very definite thrust of what Nancy Reynolds and her staff working under her direction there are providing. I'm very satisfied with the relationships beginning to build.

One more point to the hon. member. As he is so well aware, it is important to build the relationship first before you are actually able to effect some agreement, but I think we're moving closer to that. We have not been an intervenor, but we've provided support to those First Nations bodies that are speaking to the federal government about their concerns relative to the manner in which they receive funding and the funding levels that they receive from the federal government. It is different through different agreements.

10:31

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

MS KR YCZKA: I have two points, and I'm glad to have the opportunity to express them this morning. On page 9, family violence prevention, my question was whether this is related to a particular act or legislation and the year on which that occurred. I notice that obviously it's for women and children and to provide safety from abuse. My question – and it is related to a motion of mine that's coming up – would be: what about seniors? Was there ever any intent to address seniors? I guess I have a few concerns if there was.

You know, abused seniors could be male or female. This looks like it's mothers and children. There is a model that exists. It's a really new model in Calgary for seniors. It is the Rotary house for abused seniors through Kerby Centre. My premise, after doing some work in social housing, is that at this point in time anyway it's not really seen necessarily as a good step. Seniors don't really want to be integrated with younger families, although certainly I think that in the future social housing is something we certainly need to look at just in general but also perhaps in this area. So I'd just throw that out.

On page 7, early intervention programs. I guess this is something that just came out as we were going through this this morning. I just want to make a point that there is a citywide program in Calgary that's housed out of Ernest Manning high school, and it's for very high-risk teens and their babies. From the age range you talk about, from zero to 18 years, I think you have it at both ends of the spectrum. It's an excellent program. It's accepted within the school. It's run basically by Catholic Social Services, but it certainly is an interagency program. They have, like I say, an ongoing funding problem. I guess I have two questions related to that. How do you identify future EIP programs you might fund, for instance? To me this is a program that exists now, that doesn't have to be created. It seems to me it satisfies the goal of the department. I'd just ask whether the minister would review the mandate of this program for consideration of funding support.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just on the first issue, family violence prevention. As the hon. member would be aware, the Member for Calgary-Currie last year in June in Calgary announced the government's legislation for removing the perpetrator in the circumstance of family violence, and that has been one of the initiatives that I identified, in commenting to the member of the opposition, as something that we hope will begin to benefit our shelter statistics.

If I may reflect on what is happening in many communities, the FCSS, which is responsible for many of the local priorities and needs of communities, has worked on a lot of programs, not only in support of the counseling services for people with family violence but in support of programs like FLIP in Wetaskiwin, where people who perpetrate violence are given extra support and understanding and opportunities to learn and listen together in sharing circles. They are predominantly native men. There are programs similar to this that receive funding through family and community support services throughout Alberta. So I think that both through the child and family service authority and through its municipal partner, funded in part by our government, there are programs that are evolving to help families that have problems with family violence and the need for protection both of children and families.

The member has also brought my attention to the fact that in the Ministry of Children's Services there is a bit of an anomaly in that we are more than children's services. We are the families and the seniors and also the moms and children, and we are any range of family programs that are delivered through the FCSS boards with the $38 million that's expended in Alberta. Many of those programs are directed to children, but many of them are, quite appropriately, directed to other things, everything from support for after-school child care to specific training programs that help people who want to work on local volunteer boards.

Not being familiar with the program from Ernest Manning high school but looking at the Calgary Learning Centre, that I have personally visited, and the information that is disseminated from them, what we've asked the child and family service authorities and their boards to do, in co-operation with the Ministry of Learning or the ministry of health, is to review those programs and find out where those program dollars can best be expended, what the need is and where the programs are demonstrating the best performance results and outcomes. As much as the department in establishing the ministry is trying to get those things in order, so too are the local board members and the local CEOs attempting to do their best with that. We don't attempt to judge those from the department's perspective except to monitor, evaluating their business plans and also, with the agencies, providing support to the child and family service authority in the delivery of the programs that are working well.

Many of the Head Start programs in this city are supported through dollars that are gained from local groups that are given priority from the child and family service authority. In terms of certain early interventionist strategies I believe that we could provide our intent through the CFSA to you relative to where the dollars may be coming from next year, if they will be coming there at all.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Cao.

MR. CAO: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have a few comments. The first one is in my involvement with the United Nations club in Calgary. They have the culture of peace proclamation for the year 2000, and it's sort of with regard to violence resolution, resolving that in the community, and talking about moving and starting school, you know, through that. So my comment or question: do we have any participation in or sort of knowledge about that?

Number two is regarding the school system. The school system to me is where most of our children sort of go through. Do you have any programs besides the health initiatives? Do you have any programs or ideas where Children's Services could dovetail somehow and work closely with the school system?

The next question. I work in my constituency. There are a lot of community associations in my riding, and I found that they could be very good places. First of all, they know the neighbourhood and they know the families in need, with problems. So is there any focus on, say, utilizing that structure somehow? In fact, there is something there already called family resource centres in some communities, and they're doing work. I know that they have some city involvement, but I sense that the province has not tapped into their strength to be of service there.

10:41

Probably my last question here is regarding the demography in Calgary, to be specific. I know there are a lot of new Canadians. When new Canadians come to live here, they may have some cultural and language difficulties. I attended some citizenship ceremonies, and I realize that if we can promote the information about family and social services, about prevention, that the rules about living here are like this, then probably it's helpful to get that population to understand about living here. So that's my comment and a few ideas.

MS EVANS: Just a few brief comments. In terms of the first program you mentioned – I think it was a program of the United Nations against violence – we don't believe that our department has any affiliation with that particular one, at least not that we're aware of.

If I may, you asked about any other programs that we could be involved in. One of the other programs that you might know has been a big struggle for us in Calgary is the conductive education provided in Renfrew school, which is unproven in terms of both the assessment of the Canadian Physiotherapists' Association and some of the health strategy groups. The evaluation of that program will start to set a platform for policy development that I think would help the department frame where it will explore additional kinds of alternative strategies with parent support so that we can do things in the proper fashion but make sure that we limit any further risk to the child. You couldn't visit that school, like I have – and I'm sure you have too – and see those children with cerebral palsy getting that special attention and not believe that that must at least be a good program.

Through handicapped children's services, respite care, through interventionist strategies with some programs, through all of those and through our local delivery system of the child and family service authority there are other programs. Essentially, when the ministry was set up, the first intent was to make this more of a co-ordinating role when they looked at the Department of Children's Services in the past and that the services would be provided as community-based services really, to some degree autonomous from government. When the issues arose with the court challenge on successor rights with our staff, it was deemed that that was not going to happen. There are very strong ties. The ministry is tied to each child and family service authority just like a parent is tied to a child, with the accountability built within that.

To a large degree those authorities have felt that we have done a bit of a U-turn on them. They were originally going to be able to hire all their own staff, but today the way that it is structured, it is still a partnership arrangement, with the parent, being the department, having more the role of CFSA monitoring and the local groups having more the role of determining priorities and needs and doing the monitoring on that basis.

The family resource centres and the clusters that are being explored by the Calgary and Rocky View family service authority please me a great deal. I think there's a lot of work being done to try and get the action on the street where people live that need it. There are community centres like the McCauley centre in Calgary, that I visited, where a number of community programs similar to the Norwood centre here are attempting and endeavouring to support families and children.

If I could have one wish, it would be that every sweatshop environment in Alberta that houses employers who in fact may push too strongly on their employees or keep them away from families for extended periods of time would come forward and provide more support for those families and those children in the work that they do. Many of these families travel outside the city limits for long, extended trips away from the children every day. The care of the child in the new immigrant families that are being affected by that has left them without some of the tools that they really desperately need.

So I have been hoping to talk with the Minister of Economic Development about how we can prompt programs so the employers will feel a need to come in and support those new immigrants who are giving such strong support to Canada and their families through an entirely different workforce environment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

Mr. Johnson.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just a comment I'd like to make regarding the Alberta children's initiative. I want to say that you're doing wonderful things there, that the department is doing great things. In my constituency particularly the student health initiative is going very well. The partners are working together very well, and I really do like this concept of partners getting together and working in a community for greater efficiency. When people work together, when groups work together, I think a lot more can be accomplished. So that program is going very well in my constituency. Also the FAS program: I think wonderful things have been done in that area.

I'm very happy, then, to see the different departments working together, but I noticed that in your briefing you mentioned that Municipal Affairs and Infrastructure are the latest partners in this initiative, and that was news to me. What are they doing in this initiative? How are they involved?

MS EVANS: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, if I can look at when we first started doing our business plan, Municipal Affairs housed housing, so that was one part of it. But currently municipalities still receive some of their funding for transportation needs through the unconditional funding that is assigned to each municipality and supports, in part, transportation for disabled and others. It's a bit of an anomaly in the funding. Community Development now, of course, have taken the housing. You mentioned another one. Which other ministry?

MR. JOHNSON: Infrastructure.

MS EVANS: Infrastructure now is our very important partner – how could I forget? – that helps us with facilities for the local CFSAs. Many of them have chosen to provide their own, either through certain nonprofit or even church basement arrangements, which may not be ideal in the future but at least gives them a starting point in very small communities by practically offering space without large expenditure. For others vacated stores are accessed, but the Infrastructure ministry does go out and try and inspect and determine what places would be safest and what accesses would be most appropriate for the child and family services authority. As the redeployment of provincial buildings has taken place, some have found different assignments there as well, but we are not facility rich. If anything, we are facility stretched right now to try and make ends meet with those.

My hope is that while we're seeing a leveling off or even a modest decline – I believe Red Deer will have a 1 percent decline of children's population this year as an example. Maybe those schools could become places for additional cluster involvement.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you. I'd like, on behalf of all the subcommittee members, to express my appreciation to the Hon. Iris Evans, Minister of Children's Services, and to all of those in her department for the tremendous work they've done and for the assistance in answering the questions today.

Pursuant to our motion passed at the beginning of the meeting, I'd like to entertain a motion to adjourn from Shiraz.

MR. SHARIFF: I move that pursuant to Standing Orders 56 and 57 the designated supply subcommittee on Children's Services now conclude its considerations and debate on the 2000-2001 estimates of the Department of Children's Services prior to the conclusion of the four-hour period allocated and rise and report.

THE CHAIRMAN: All agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Any opposed?

MRS. SLOAN: Opposed.

THE CHAIRMAN: We need unanimous consent to actually adjourn prior to that.

MRS. SLOAN: I wasn't aware of that, but I would say, Mr. Chairman, that because of the needs in this particular area it causes me some discomfort to not exhaust our time relative to the questions this morning. I understood that the government members were going to be asking questions until the time had expired. In fact, I can also say for the record that this process did occur at Health and Wellness estimates on Friday. There was not unanimous consent, but the committee still adjourned.

10:51

THE CHAIRMAN: I would say, actually, that we have had a motion placed forward for which we did have unanimous consent at the beginning of the meeting which set the established rules for today. In that respect, I would say that we are able to adjourn because we did have unanimous consent earlier on the motion that we would allocate two hours to the Official Opposition subcommittee members and the remainder to government subcommittee members. On that basis, are we agreed to adjourn?

Agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

[The subcommittee adjourned at 10:52 a.m.]

Title: Estimates of Environment, Monday, March 20, 2000

Date: 00/03/20

8:05 a.m.

[Mr. Hierath in the chair]

Designated Supply Subcommittee – Environment

Hierath, Ron, Chairman
Amery, Moe
Boutilier, Guy
Carlson, Debby

Coutts, David
Ducharme, Denis
Langevin, Paul
Magnus, Richard

Pannu, Raj
Sloan, Linda
Strang, Ivan
White, Lance

THE CHAIRMAN: We may as well call the meeting to order this morning and welcome the members of the designated supply subcommittee on Environment. I spoke to most of the members before the meeting this morning to explain that there is an all-party agreement to allocate the time for the meeting. If there is no other agreement, there is a suggestion that an earlier model that has worked with other designated supply subcommittees would maybe work here. In this case, the minister would be allowed up to 20 minutes for making opening remarks and comments. The Official Opposition would then have a full two hours for questions and answers. I understand that the format would allow for debate with the minister to keep it on an informal basis during those two hours. Following the two hours the leader of the ND, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona – he'll probably show up a little bit later here – will be allowed 15 minutes for questions and answers from the minister, and if there are no other questions, then we would have a motion to adjourn. If all committee members agree to this process, then I would like to have a motion in that regard.

MR. LANGEVIN: I'll make that motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: All those in favour?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Carried. Thank you.

Okay. I'll turn it over to the Minister of Environment to make some opening comments.

MR. MAR: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, colleagues. It's my pleasure to present the budget for Alberta Environment to support our business plan for 2000 through 2003. This budget shows how we're going to allocate and build our internal resources to protect, preserve, and sustain our environmental resources.

I'm going to start by looking at the total budget and what the numbers mean. Then I want to highlight the specific areas where we're increasing spending, and then I also want to take a few moments to talk about where we did not increase spending and indicate why. Finally, in the interests of getting as much information out as possible, I'll be looking forward to taking your questions.

In many departments you can look at the current year forecast and get a context for the proposed budget because spending increases during the current fiscal year often continue into the new budget. However, that is seldom true for Environment mainly because of forest fires. Every year we start with a base amount of $50 million to fight forest fires. This total amount is found on page 134, line 3.0.1, $38 million, and on page 151, $12 million under the enhancement fund listed as forest fires.

Actual spending depends on the severity of the fire season, and 1999 was the second-worst fire year on record. At the time we prepared the budget, we expected the total cost to be around $184 million, which is the total in front of you. Current weather conditions have reduced that estimate by about $10 million to $174 million. Other increases and decreases in the forecast almost balance each other out, but fire suppression costs still leave us with a $118.5 million difference between the adjusted forecast and my proposed budget.

If we cannot easily compare the proposed budget to the forecast, how does it stack up against the last budget? This year that comparison is just as difficult to make. It looks like my budget for 2000-2001 is about $22 million less than in 1999-2000, when in fact I actually have $26 million more.

Now, the difference will require some explanation. Most of it, $35 million, is a change in accounting. Alberta Environment grants capital assets like Crown land to municipalities or nonprofit organizations or businesses. For example, land may be granted for locally administered parks that enrich the quality of life in the area by offering outdoor recreation or preserving habitat. A caveat ensures that the land is used for park purposes only. The land is granted for a nominal sum, often a dollar. We record the difference between this nominal sum and the estimated fair market value as a noncash grant under the nominal sum disposals.

In our budget we estimate the value of land we expect to grant in that year. We call it a nominal sum provision. In 1999 we estimated the provision at $45 million. However, attaching a park use caveat has an impact on land value. First of all, the market value is based on potential land use. Restricting the use to parks lowered the market value even though the intrinsic value remains unchanged. Secondly, not everyone wanted to accept land with a park use caveat attached, and therefore we were unable to grant the land. This reduced demand also affected the size of the nominal sum provision. Recognizing these two factors in Budget 2000, we reduced the nominal sum provision to $10 million, for a $35 million reduction from Budget 1999.

My budget also includes a reduction of $13 million in the fire reclamation program. Last year we had $17 million in lottery funds for replanting seedling trees destroyed by fire in the spring of 1998. In Budget 2000 we will extend the program to include seedlings destroyed in the summer and fall of 1998 at a much smaller cost of only $4 million plus another $4 million in Budget 2001, when the program ends.

That $13 million net reduction in the fire reclamation program plus the $35 million loss under the nominal sum disposals fully accounts for the difference between the $22 million reduction we see and the very real $26 million budget increase.

The bottom line is that for fiscal 2000-2001 the total voted department spending on operating and capital will be $332.5 million, an increase of $26 million targeted to specific environmental priorities. Almost half the increase, $12.9 million, is for our important internal resource, our staff: $8.9 million is for staffing costs and for training and staff development, $2.6 million will hire more enforcement officers as our frontline defence against environmental harm, and $1.4 million will help to staff the new bureau of climate change that will support Climate Change Central. Operational funding for Climate Change Central is coming out of the current fiscal year.

We're also making a strong commitment to enhanced forest protection. The department will spend $5 million to buy and operate the VHF FireNet radio system. This will bring our fire-fighting communications up to the North American standard for greater firefighter safety, greater tactical efficiency, and more effective fire-fighting operations.

My department will spend $3.1 million of its increase on infrastructure support, equipment operating costs, and site reclamation. I am increasing endangered species monitoring by $2.2 million to build our knowledge and understanding so that we can act to better preserve our wildlife. I am committing $1.6 million for emerging issues. This will help leverage support for new priorities like gas flaring research. Finally, there is $1.2 million for changes to dedicated revenues, amortization, and valuation adjustments.

Just as important as the money we spend are the dollars we're not spending and why. My department had responsibility for the petroleum storage tank remediation program, which is aimed at cleaning up petroleum storage sites like abandoned service stations. While the program has moved from Environment to Municipal Affairs, I will assist the Minister of Municipal Affairs with monitoring, advice, and other services. We both want the same result.

This budget also shows no increase in my $50 million base budget for fire suppression. With another dry winter our forests are suffering the accumulative impact of three low snow winters. I've already moved up the official start of the forest fire season by a month, to March 1, because we could have another very early and very hot start to the fire season. However, if we get another spring snowfall like we had on the 6th of March and if we get it in the north and north-central part of the province, where the trees are, it could drastically reduce our need for fire fighting, and so could a wet spring or summer. We will continue to address fire suppression costs throughout the year and if the need arises.

To conclude, this budget continues our essential regulatory monitoring, enforcement, and resource management work. The new dollars help to relieve cost pressures and address priorities in key areas, most notably in human resources, fire fighting, endangered species, and other priorities where additional investment will lay the groundwork for future long-term benefit. This budget sends the message that Alberta's environment in all its diversity remains a priority that this government has committed to meet. I ask your support for my 2000-2001 budget.

Mr. Chairman, for the record I'll read in and introduce the three people who are sitting with me at the table: the deputy minister, Doug Radke; assistant deputy minister, Cliff Henderson; and chief financial officer, Bruce Perry.

Thank you.

8:15

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Thanks, Gary.

Would you like to start, Debby?

MS CARLSON: Sure. Thanks. Thank you, Mr. Minister and all of your staff. It's nice to see you once a year. I know this isn't your favourite part of the year, but it certainly is mine.

It's been very helpful to get the answers to the questions in past years. Certainly last year we got more comprehensive answers than we've ever had before, and I really appreciate that. They didn't come until mid-February, which is better than not coming at all, but certainly the comprehensiveness of the answers was greatly appreciated and helps in the understanding of how the ministry operates and forestalls some issues that could otherwise be brought up that really aren't necessary to be handled in that manner.

My first question, Mr. Minister, is in regard to some comments you made in terms of endangered species. I'm very happy to see that there are some additional dollars there. Can you give us some explanation in terms of what you're doing in terms of expanding corridors? As you and I both know, that's a part of ensuring that species stay viable in this province.

THE CHAIRMAN: Are you going to continue?

MS CARLSON: No. That's all I'll ask him.

THE CHAIRMAN: Well, we'll keep this kind of informal, Gary, with questions back and forth and maybe not even through the chair.

MR. MAR: With respect to endangered species, we've had a very good program in the province of Alberta. We have made some changes to our legislation that have been necessary in order to meet Alberta's commitment under the accord for species protection, which is a national accord that Alberta was one of the first signatories to. We do have a committee headed up by Ivan Strang that is providing us with recommendations on the kinds of species that are in need of protection and programs for their recovery.

With respect to corridors, we're conscious of corridors, but with respect to any specifics, I might refer to the deputy minister.

MR. RADKE: Are you referring to wildlife corridors in the Bow Valley?

MS CARLSON: Throughout the province. My particular focus would be the Bow Valley.

MR. RADKE: As you know, we have a study under way with respect to the one corridor by Three Sisters, which has another year or year and a half to go. We have been examining the Y2Y proposal to see how our existing designations fit in along the eastern slopes, and we have a series of management plans under development and monitoring under the province and so on. Does that cover your question? We could get Morley to provide you with some more detail.

MS CARLSON: I wouldn't mind a little more detail. When those management plans are in place, will they be public?

MR. RADKE: Yes.

MS CARLSON: A little more detail in terms of what is happening in the rest of the province I would appreciate, if that's possible.

MR. MAR: Well, perhaps we'll have Morley Barrett answer that then.

MR. BARRETT: Good morning. There are a number of activities going on with respect to the wildlife corridors, and it is really the continuing broad-based habitat availability for the movements. I would bring your attention to, for example, the grizzly bears. A big part of the study in the northwest foothills around the Cheviot mine is related to the cumulative effects and the impact and the movement corridors appropriate for grizzly bears. A lot of the land management, the special places nominations, the forest land use zones established are made with that as an important element. There's a reason for establishing those sites.

I would also point out – and these are activities still under consideration – that some of the proposals under consideration as special places have as a basic element to the evaluation process they're undergoing right now the need to maintain continuity of corridor systems for the movements, particularly in the foothills, in the alpine range.

We want to have no loss or no dead ends for critical wildlife species, and I would say that part of the approach is looking at the requirements for the large carnivores in some of the sites, as I mentioned, because if we look after those, the same as in the Bow Valley and the Wind Valley, we will effectively look after many of the smaller species. The thinking is very much embodied in the decision process, much of which is still under way in some 40 different sites.

MS CARLSON: Just one more question while you're still here. Are you doing anything specific to address the increased pressure on caribou throughout the province?

MR. BARRETT: Yes, we are. In fact, through some of the new enrichment funding that the hon. Mr. Mar talked about earlier for endangered species, we'll support increased work with caribou in both the northwest and the northeast boreal. We're working closer with industry. We're bringing in industry, forestry, all the companies active in the area and having them at the table as we look at the special needs of caribou.

We look at both the seasonal and obviously the key wintering habitats, making sure we have access to them, and we're making joint decisions to minimize the cumulative impact as well as doing some studies to look for future ways to minimize the cumulative impacts of competing industries, if you will, on the same landscape with caribou. Industry is clearly at the table with us as a part of it, and we'll be doing some new specialized surveys and focusing staff on this with this new supportive funding. So that's very much a challenge but very much one in which we're actively engaged and will even be increasing our efforts.

MS CARLSON: Great. Mr. Minister, as those studies are available, could you send a copy to us?

MR. MAR: Yes.

MS CARLSON: That would be great.

Okay. My next questions are on climate change. Last year $6 million was spent. Could you give us some review of what happened in that regard, a little more detail in terms of what you're doing on climate change?

MR. MAR: The $6 million that has been set aside for climate change is based on the operational costs for climate change for each of the next three years. The $6 million was put in the budget in 1999-2000 but will be spent in the upcoming three years.

The first step for Climate Change Central will be for constating documents to create the legal entity of Climate Change Central. The second step will be to have a funding agreement between the department and the entity of Climate Change Central, where that $6 million can be moved into, and it is through the business plan of Climate Change Central that that $6 million will be allocated in the various operational aspects of the entity.

MS CARLSON: So the agreement between Climate Change Central and your department: does that extend to other departments that have been doing work in this area as well, as far as you know?

MR. MAR: No.

MS CARLSON: Will they be independently negotiating, or are all the dollars coming out of your budget?

MR. MAR: The $6 million is coming entirely out of our budget. However, that is just for the operations of Climate Change Central. Any dollars that may be levered up for projects, as an example, under the administration of Climate Change Central may come from other departments. Of course, we expect a great deal of leverage coming from the private sector and the not-for-profit organizations.

8:25

MS CARLSON: Okay. Thanks. I would have to say that what I know about the department's knowledge in climate change is that they've done an excellent job in that regard, and I think they're to be highly commended for the work they've done in that area. Certainly I look forward to seeing some of the outcomes in this next year.

What specific plans do you have dealing with both the federal government on this issue and also starting to negotiate some basis for trade credits so that industry has a road map in terms of where they need to be going?

MR. MAR: First of all, I thank you for your comments about the work that's been done in climate change to this point.

With respect to the federal government, I think there's a recognition also by the federal government that Alberta has been a leader among provinces in this regard. It's not only been the province as a government; the province as an industry has also been a leader in this particular area. It's of critical interest to the province that we maintain a leadership role in this with the federal government and with our counterparts across Canada because the stakes are so high for Albertans.

I think it'll be important for Canada to have a national strategy going into the next round of discussions at the Conference of the Parties at The Hague. There should not only be provincial strategy, but there should also be a national strategy. Many other provinces are engaged in this, although not nearly to the same extent as Alberta. We will continue to work with our federal government counterparts to ensure that the commitments that we make under climate change are realistic ones for Canada and realistic ones for Alberta.

There has been some recognition over the last few weeks that perhaps our commitments under Kyoto are not workable. In my discussions with federal Minister Goodale he indicated that the minus 6 percent reduction of greenhouse gases from 1990 levels was predicated on one of the things that you mentioned, and that is credit trading. The other one was a recognition for Canada's forest sinks, be they agricultural or forest sinks. I think Alberta's role must be, clearly, to move the yardsticks on both those issues. It is my opinion that the minus 6 percent is not achievable without a recognition of those two things.

Perhaps I'll have John Donner come to the table as well and give some of his insights into this particular matter, particularly as it relates to your question on credit trading.

MS CARLSON: Sure. I'd appreciate that.

MR. DONNER: Thank you, Mr. Minister. Good morning. The subject of credit trading within Canada has been a large part of the national process for the last year. It is difficult because it does require some framework of certainty around what the future context is of obligations for companies, what the baseline is of emissions from which they would achieve reductions and for which they would get credit. There's a considerable interest among the provinces to move ahead on credit trading within the country to make sure there's a parallel incentive to engage in investments for reductions in Canada as well as outside Canada. That's an active issue that would likely be on the agenda for the next series of ministers' meetings to try to figure out a national approach to credit trading.

MS CARLSON: As industry is looking at this issue, Mr. Minister, what would be your advice to them in terms of ensuring that dealing with climate change issues becomes a growth issue for them and not a handicap?

MR. MAR: Actually, I think Mr. Donner would be well equipped to answer that for you.

MS CARLSON: Great.

MR. DONNER: We found a number of industries that are very much on the leading edge of dealing with climate change and, as the minister said, many of them within Alberta. Those are companies that are seeking out new technologies which have markedly reduced emissions or in some cases even zero emissions associated with new technologies for achieving the same energy yield. They see themselves as positioned to make those investments within Canada over time but also to take those and export the technology and to do a business of reducing emissions throughout the world on a commercial basis. So technology opportunities positioning themselves to be competitive in a new emissions-constrained environment is one of the areas.

The other is exploring offsets and developing, as the minister said, forest sinks but also agricultural sinks, which are not yet recognized internationally. In Canada we've been at the forefront of developing the science to prove up the ability to restore carbon to soils and therefore take it out of the atmosphere. Many of these companies are exploring those kinds of activities. Many are also finding associated activities in terms of landfill gas, for example, or new synergies where they're working with the municipalities or other sectors for investment opportunities that complement their core business activities.

MS CARLSON: Does Alberta have a position on what a framework for a credit would consist of?

MR. DONNER: We've been working to put forward that framework with the other governments. We haven't put forward a position saying, "Here is an Alberta position," because we're trying to work in collaboration with other governments and with industry to make sure that we come up with a framework.

The first step, a fairly modest step, was taken with the announcement of baseline protection, which ensured that if a company achieves reductions on site and thereafter it becomes critical in terms of an allocation what their emissions are, they would have that reduction restored for their baseline. It addressed only one possible future. There's been ongoing work, and we've been well served with people on the management team trying to develop a common, national approach to the credit framework.

MS CARLSON: Have you got anything that you can share at this time in terms of the progress on that specifically?

MR. DONNER: After March, after the end of this month we would likely have something that we could share on that.

MS CARLSON: That'd be excellent, if you wouldn't mind doing that at that time.

What are you looking at as a date for the baseline for companies that have achieved reductions?

MR. DONNER: Most of the baseline material goes back to 1990, but one of the issues in terms of moving forward with credit is that one is looking at what is the cost-benefit return. So there has been some discussion about piloting on a go-forward basis as opposed to going back to 1990, but for most purposes we've been baselining 1990 because that is the standard for international. So everything tends to be reflective back to 1990.

MS CARLSON: Okay, good. Thank you. That's the end of my questions on climate change.

I would like to address just human resources in general for a moment. There's been a significant increase, 84 percent. We're happy to see that there are some more staff coming inside and, particularly, some staff on the ground. Could you give us an explanation in terms of why such a significant increase?

Also, if you could talk a bit about the morale in the department. I know that this past year more than any other year I've had a number of phone calls about people who were really concerned about their ability to do frontline work in the regions because of the staff reductions and just their basic inability to handle the volume of work out there. If you could address that, I would appreciate it.

MR. MAR: One of the areas that I view as being very important in the operations of the Department of Environment is with respect to the area of enforcement, and enforcement cannot be done without manpower. I think it would be fair to say on the issue of morale that with the changes that were made in bringing park rangers and wildlife officers into being conservation officers, it could be expected that there would be some effect on the morale of staff people. However, I believe that the conservation officers now are extremely proud of the work that they are able to do.

8:35

The issue of training is a significant one, and that's the reason why money was put towards training, so these people are well equipped to do their jobs. There's no doubt, though, that when you change your job description, if you've been doing something in a certain way historically and it's being changed without appropriate training, that can have an impact on moral. I believe we've addressed that: firstly, by putting in a more appropriate number of resources in terms of our field staff that are out there, whether it be in enforcement or in other areas and, secondly, by dealing with the area of training to ensure that these people are equipped with the right skills in order to do their jobs.

I'll have the deputy minister detail more if he wishes.

MR. RADKE: In terms of the actual additions in manpower, we're showing a 47.7 increase in FTEs. Eleven of those are from the transfer into the department from Alberta Resource Development of the climate change function. Twenty-one of those positions are going to new conservation officers across the province, allocated according to where the need is for more resources on the ground. The remainder of the increases are scattered throughout the regions.

In terms of the department's morale, I think the minister said it well when he talked about the change with respect to amalgamation of parks officers and fish and wildlife officers. There's been a great deal of change of that nature in the department over the last five or six years, and a department that's constantly under change – I prefer to call it continuous improvement – takes awhile to adjust and move forward.

During the staff survey that was taken last year, it was apparent that there was a need for concerted action on the part of management in respect of adding additional resources to help out with the hard work in terms of developing a better communication plan for internal use in the department so that staff felt involved and informed on what was going on and a heavy emphasis on training and development. We've added in this year's budget 1 and a half million dollars dedicated to training and development, 1 million of which is to be allocated for technical training and half a million of which is to be allocated to what we call corporate competencies. That would be things like communication, business planning, management development: those kinds of things which have an impact on how the field staff and management relate to each other.

We have just completed the second annual staff survey, and while the results are still very preliminary, it appears as if we have achieved in those four areas that we use to measure morale a fairly significant improvement in morale. Four questions that we asked last year and again this year – overall satisfaction with the department, I'm being kept informed of changes in the department, being kept informed about people issues, and I can talk openly and honestly – were all showing in the preliminary analysis significant improvement this year, and we're quite proud of that. The executive has made quite a concerted effort to work on morale, and all of us are under self-imposed instructions to get out to the field more and talk to staff, find out exactly what's happening, and see how we can address some of these moral issues. We think it's working.

MS CARLSON: That's good. I'm happy to see that progress being made there. One of the concerns that continually resurfaced to me was that supervisors and management didn't have the direct experience in terms of who they were supervising in the field, so I'm hoping that gets addressed at some point in the review.

My major concern in terms of staffing at this point is that with the drastic staff reductions we saw over the past few years, a great deal of the knowledge and history of what has happened in the province has been lost. How are you addressing that?

MR. MAR: Well, I would say that it is a fair statement that we have lost experienced people, but I don't think it would be fair to suggest that there is an overall loss of corporate knowledge within the department, because we have some exceptionally experienced and outstanding staff that remain with the department. It is true that we've lost good staff, but it is equally true that we retain people who are very dedicated to their jobs. I have to say that I'm very proud to be associated with such a department.

The people who work with the Department of Environment are an extremely dedicated group of people. They are knowledgeable. They do the work they do because they believe that there is intrinsic value in it, that there's something important about what they're doing. I don't think that should be discounted. While I regret the loss of experienced people who have gone on to other careers, I believe that we have the right staff that we want for the Department of Environment and that they're a dedicated staff. Whatever may be missing in terms of training is exactly the type of opportunities we're looking for in order to devote our resources with respect to training our existing staff.

MS CARLSON: Well, I'd certainly agree that the staff within the department are devoted and committed to their work and to the province, and that's certainly nice to see when I'm out in the province and having the opportunity to meet with these people.

My last question on this topic would be with regard to contracting out. How much contracting out are you doing? Could you give me some background on that first?

MR. RADKE: I'll let Bruce fill in the details, but we contract out quite a bit of our information technology, for example. We have three major contracts, one with IBM, one with . . . Help me here, guys.

MR. PERRY: ISM and LGS.

MR. RADKE: ISM, LGS, and the other one is Stewart & Stewart. Those are fairly significant contracts for the major part of our systems. For example, the system that sells fishing licences is contracted out to ISM. We have quite a number of delegated administrative organizations, and we have two agencies.

Do you want to provide some more detail, Bruce?

MR. PERRY: Yes. As the deputy mentioned, information technology is outsourced because of the requirement for the technical expertise. The other major area that wasn't mentioned is in the area of the fire suppression activities, whether it's water bombers or aircraft delivery systems where there's a person bringing in the gas to fill the planes with the fuel. Some of the resources are contracted out. Primarily it's in the areas of the emergency preparedness that we see the largest contracting dollars in the year, and as mentioned, that is variable depending upon whether you have a busy fire season or whether there's a flood or other natural disaster. Other than that, I think it's those two primary areas that are contracted out.

I think the other item would be that throughout the summer you do use wage staff in various capacities, so I don't know if you'd consider that to be contracted. It is seasonal work, whether it's in the park for a park ranger or for staff in Edmonton.

MS CARLSON: What about anything in specific projects, research and development kinds of issues?

MR. PERRY: Traditionally in the contracted-out nature if it's research, whether it's through the university or through a national affiliate that has that expertise or whether it's through, again, work on particular fire activities, those are usually not ongoing contracts; those are specific to the task at hand. I think what usually happens is that you assess whether we have the expertise, whether we have resources and who has that best expertise and best practices, and you go to the marketplace when you need that. Those are not normally ongoing; those are specific to projects. I think the goal of the ministry would be to retain. This is all part of the training initiative to have people who are familiar with that, because the part of the work that they like is the excitement part of the job. So it's very specific to tasks, and that could be either through a grant to the university or through a contract with an organization.

MS CARLSON: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll yield the floor to my colleague at this time.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Lance.

8:45

MR. WHITE: And that would be me. The questions will primarily, at least, start out with forest management and the like, recognizing that my caucus assignments are energy and forest management.

The first questions relate, not on this minister's watch but on the former minister's watch, to a series of occurrences that I would like some assurance will not be ongoing through the redesign of the ministry's culture, I suspect. In the late spring of '98 you'll recall that there was a known need for early fire suppression. I don't know about the department, but I certainly know about north-central Alberta. It was a drier winter and drier spring than we had for eons.

In early May, in the House, on record I asked some pointed questions, not to embarrass, to seek information, as to preparedness. You'll recall at the time that the budget was around $50 million, and to my knowledge and the knowledge of those that were on the ground at the time out in the area, particularly around the north and south of Slave Lake and Swan Hills, there was virtually no activity in preparedness at the time. This is proven by a KPMG report of this year. I was given the impression that my questions were less than reasonable, almost embarrassing. The information that came back was a virtual denial of any lack of preparedness. I asked the questions again in the spring session of '99 and received a similar sort of response.

Now, at this point I guess I would like the minister's assurance that that kind of occurrence would not be the design or the culture of the organization of this minister.

MR. MAR: Having regard for the fact that we're dealing with the department estimates for 2000-2001, I will say that 1998 was the worst fire year on record, followed by 1999, which was the second worst. Many of the recommendations that were made by both the Auditor General as well as in the KPMG report following the 1998 year have been implemented. You may recall that in my opening comments this morning I indicated that we were updating our capital with respect to the VHF FireNet system, that we were starting the fire season one month earlier than usual, that we are prepared for a potentially dry year. Of course that can all change with a good rainfall or a good amount of winter precipitation, so lessons have been learned from our experience in 1998.

Cliff Henderson would like to supplement on that.

MR. HENDERSON: Not other than the fact that we have, as the minister has indicated, advanced the fire season, and we have resources at hand and ready should fire season become dangerous this spring. As a matter of fact, we had a 2,000-hectare fire last week in northern Alberta, and we had resources on it and were able to contain it.

MR. WHITE: In a related area, it was through the middle '90s a concern of the staff, the lack of ongoing and continuing of training in the area. This member could understand at least in part why, because the history from the early to middle '80s was that fire suppression was a lesser priority. I don't have at hand anything other than the business plan, and it doesn't really outline what changes will occur in the training area of the entire fire suppression area.

MR. MAR: Well, again having regard for our review today of the 2000-2001 budget, I will say that if you look historically at the number of hectares burned versus the number of dollars spent on forest fire suppression in the last three years, you'll see that we've been very effective and very efficient. As an example – now you're testing my memory because these numbers aren't in front of me at this moment – if memory serves me correctly, in 1998 roughly three-quarters of a million hectares of land were burned. In 1999, a year with very similar conditions with respect to dryness, only about 130,000 hectares were burned. Is that roughly correct, Cliff? Therefore, even though we faced two fire years that were relatively similar with respect to dryness conditions, we were much more effective in the 1999 year, having learned some things about the importance of immediate action, early suppression of fires. It's costly to do, but it has proven itself to be a much more effective way of dealing with forest fires.

Perhaps the last thing I'll mention is with respect to the 1999 fire year, that over three-quarters of the fires were contained to being less than five hectares in size if I recall correctly. I might have to rely on Cliff again to provide me with the correct figures, but the point being that the overwhelming majority of fires were contained to being very, very small fires because of quick action that was taken. That can only be the consequence of learning from past practice and from training.

MR. WHITE: The question is really related to this budget year and the expected changes. It's not noted in the allocation for training of staff.

Now, I heard Mr. Perry earlier say that a number of the staff are contracted, so that would not be the department's responsibility, but there was a time when field staff training in these areas was required, and it was virtually eliminated at one point. I'd like to know whether it's back on now, or what's the status?

MR. HENDERSON: Yes. We have a very aggressive training program at Hinton with the Environmental Training Centre, and we're continuing to do significant amounts of training for our forest officers and for our firefighters. We also have the school at Hinton co-ordinating training standards that provide standards for training to the outlying colleges such as Grande Prairie or Grouard, where we have other field training carried out. Our contract wildland and firefighter crews do most of their training through the college at Grande Prairie, and these standards are set by our school at Hinton, so there is a significant amount of training that is occurring this year. The last couple of years, of course, with the very high fire frequencies that we've had, we had to put our staff on fighting fires rather than training. So many of our staff received hands-on experience, and we've had a significant upgrading in their certification levels.

MR. WHITE: Thank you.

Another area that was curtailed down to almost zero in this particular area of fire suppression and management of lands throughout the entire year was the travel budget, not the training but the travel. I suppose I'll back up a second and say, in recognition of the fact that there are other places in the world that do intense forest management by design, fire suppression being part of that, that there always is a great deal to be learned. For about seven or eight years, I gather, there was no budget and no real input from the outside. Has that been taken care of in this year's budget, or at least a portion of it?

8:55

MR. MAR: The province is a partner in a number of different forest management initiatives; as an example, the foothills model forest, which has precipitated a great deal of research: very positive, very beneficial, and very highly regarded throughout Canada and around the world. As a matter of interest, for example they have a grizzly bear research project that goes on in the foothills model forest that has been presented to the Chinese government as being a model of how they may wish to look after giant pandas in their bamboo forests in China. So it's very highly regarded, again not only in Canada but in other parts of the world as well.

The province has also been a partner with respect to the model training forest in partnership with Grande Prairie College in the city of Grande Prairie. That, I think, will provide an extremely valuable training ground for young foresters in the area of silviculture. Also, the province has participated with a forestry science management council in collaboration with the University of Alberta. Again that has provided outstanding research, as an example in answer to your specific question, on the subject of fire suppression.

I'll have Cliff supplement on any of those areas or add to it if he so wishes.

MR. HENDERSON: Thank you. We have continued quite an aggressive program to stay involved with national and international fire programs, and we are very involved with the Canadian forest fire centre out of Winnipeg. We attend all the meetings, and this spring there's a national fire equipment show in Nova Scotia, I believe, and we will have representatives there. So in North America our fire agency and program is regarded as one of the top programs.

MR. WHITE: To move to another and related area, of course, the minister said earlier that both the recommendations from the Auditor General in the years '97-98 and '98-99 and from the KPMG report on fire suppression and preparedness in '98 and '99 have been implemented. I don't expect the minister, but perhaps the associate deputy could outline what those areas were and the implementation of those.

MR. HENDERSON: I'm just seeing which specific area you'd like within his recommendations. We have prepared for and announced an early fire season. We have defined or reviewed our cost accounting for our fire programs. Are there other areas that you'd like detail on?

MR. WHITE: Unfortunately, I don't have the report at hand, but the minister said that all had been implemented. Perhaps it's not the time, sir. Perhaps, if you do have a moment afterwards, it would be advantageous to do a two-column recommendation. This member wouldn't expect an exhaustive study, of course. I mean, I'm not looking for that, but that would be handy to respond to in writing.

The other area I'd like to move on to is the question of forest resource allocation. It not only is confusing to the outside world, the business world or the environmental world – the relationship of this department to the Associate Minister of Forestry I suppose is the first question, recognizing that forest allocation is, I believe, still with this department and the final say. Some comment on those two areas, sir.

MR. MAR: If you look at a forest management agreement, or FMA as it is often referred to as, what you will find is that probably 75 or 80 percent of such an agreement relates to environmental practice and standards, 15 percent of it relates to the business case for the management of the area, and the environmental standards that are established and negotiated under FMAs remain the responsibility of this department. There is, of course, a cosign-off on such agreements with the Associate Minister of Forestry. But in simple terms the environmental standards remain the responsibility of the Department of Environment, and the business case and the promotion of the forestry business is the responsibility of the Associate Minister of Forestry.

With respect to allocation, the critical principle for the Department of Environment is that while recognizing that we have an abundant resource, we must treat it in such a way that it will always be abundant as a renewable resource. Our principle precipitates rules that say that we cannot cut more timber than the forest can regrow over a period of time, so we have plans in place that recognize that we have to look 80 to 100 years out to determine what our allowable annual cut is for a particular year. We are very conservative with respect to establishing what the annual allowable cut would be, recognizing that we always want to preserve this particular important resource.

I'll have Cliff Henderson talk about the calculations of allowable annual cuts and what percentage of our forests are cut and harvested each year.

MR. HENDERSON: Our ministry has the responsibility and the mandate to approve the annual allowable cuts for the province. Alberta is about 98 percent committed to our approved annual allowable cut, which is around 22.3 million cubic metres of wood.

The role of FID, or forest industry development, is to allocate any unallocated or unowned allowable cut through whichever process they use to enhance Alberta's development opportunities for the industry. To set the annual allowable cuts, we do it through a process of first obtaining a current and accurate inventory of the landscape – trees, other resources – and then it's about a three-year process to arrive at an approved annual allowable cut. Within that process there are stakeholder reviews and public reviews, which are the responsibilities of the various FMA holders to carry out.

MR. WHITE: There have been two substantive publications on the allocation of forest resources in this province. Two of them cited oil and gas activity as taking a great deal of the resource and it not being calculated because it's a whole different department and is reported after the fact to your department as to what actually has transpired. With 98 percent of the forest allocated, isn't there a better way of managing the allocations, with the inclusion of the advancement of oil and gas, cutlines, and the like?

9:05

MR. MAR: Without knowing what reports you're referring to – and I don't, I'm afraid – it would be hard for me to comment, but keep in mind that the allocation of forests is, again, based on a very conservative set of assumptions. If memory serves me correctly, the last year full statistics were available for was 1997. In 1997 .59 percent of the total of Alberta's forests was harvested, less than 1 percent. I think in that particular year we may have even lost more to forest fires than to harvesting. I'd be happy to see the reports that you're referring to. I don't have them now. I'm not sure which ones you're referring to.

To come to what is the annual allowable cut requires a number of assumptions with respect to what can be allocated. When you take into account national parks, provincial parks, protected areas, and wilderness areas and you start reducing all of those, then you get to a figure where you can say: that area can be harvested. Only a small percentage of that which can be harvested is actually harvested. I'll be happy to review your question on the record and provide you with some of the statistics with respect to how we actually get to the actual amount that is harvested in a particular year.

MR. WHITE: First of all, I'll endeavor to have those reports delivered to your attention.

The .59 percent in the calculation, as I understand it, includes all of the forests of the province, which would include all the parks and all that is included. Some augmentation of that particular statistic is required. That is not of harvestable – well, it's harvestable in the true sense.

MR. MAR: That is correct. It is .59 percent of the entire inventory of forests throughout the entire province. As I indicated, we take out that portion that's in national parks. We take out that which is in wilderness areas. We take out provincial parks and so on and so forth. It's correct that less than 1 percent of the total forest in the province is harvested. I can find for you – and I'll undertake to do so – the actual percentage that is harvested in a given year of the portion that is permitted for harvesting.

MR. WHITE: Just by way of illustration, 98 percent is allocatable.

MR. MAR: That's right, and that's not of the total number. As long as you understand that.

MR. WHITE: That's not of the parks and the wild reserves and urban areas and the like. You're not about to include the 40-year-old or 50-year-old mountain ash in front of my house, I'm sure.

In any event, the question still remains. As the oil and gas activity in the province is substantial and is increasing in the areas where the yield is considerably less, the utilization of a property can be fairly devastating to an FMA holder or a quarter holder and with very little compensation or, it appears, little planning and co-ordination between your department and those that allow the activity to occur. It begs the question: how conservative are the AAC calculations if this encroachment on the resource is not managed by your department?

MR. MAR: Again, I'll be happy to look at the report that you refer to and review it and provide you with my response accordingly. As an example of the conservative nature of calculating the annual allowable cut, we have, to my knowledge, timber quotas or FMAs that contemplate an annual allowable cut that is actually much lower than that which could actually be taken because of the uplift in the number of trees; that is to say, the amount of fibre that is within a particular area. That uplift may be in some cases 30 to 40 percent higher than was contemplated in the calculation of the allowable cut in a particular area. So there is some conservatism with respect to those calculations.

MR. WHITE: The question was on the management of the resource without having control of the oil and gas, that which is taken out for the exploration of same and its not being in the control of this department. That concerns ourselves, of course, and it concerns parts of the industry.

MR. HENDERSON: Maybe I could just add a bit more information to the minister's remarks. First, our allowable cuts are conservative. We use a 200-year cut projection, even flow for 200 years, so it's a very long, forward-looking annual allowable cut that is in place in the province. We don't only provide for unexpected land uses through the conservative nature of our allowable cut. We also carry out a process of integrated resource management on our landscape, and we do program the activities. We are improving on how we do this so that there is a lighter footprint in general on the landscape from both the timber industry and the oil industry.

The oil industry has also improved how they do business to reduce the timber losses and the impact. One example is limited-impact seismic lines, where the lines now instead of being dozer cut are hand cut and are very narrow, in fact nearly undetectable when you go through the forest. So there's been some very significant progress made.

The other aspect is that when any land disposition is approved, the FMA holder signs a consent for that disposition, and they also double-check to make sure that it's within the scheme or the plan for the detailed forest management plan. We do maintain projected losses from the oil industry in our allowable cuts, and these are updated once every 10 years. So we're very honest to that process.

MR. WHITE: The last question in this area relates to this long-term planning, the 200-year planning. I think it's generally agreed that in the last 10 years science in the nation and around the globe said that there's some global warming occurring here and that the significance of that change is incalculable. If 98 percent of the current resource is allocated and the annual allowable cut is based on a 200-year projection of growth, then without the complete knowledge of what actually is occurring and could occur in climate change, how can the citizens of Alberta be assured that the desired results and, as the minister quite rightly pointed out, the desire to maintain this resource in perpetuity can be rationalized, if you will?

MR. MAR: I listened carefully, but I'm not sure if I understand your question.

MR. WHITE: I shall try it again then. The resource is allocated to 98 percent on a 200-year basis. Science tells us that incalculable and major changes in climate are occurring. Climate does affect in a very direct way the growth pattern of a forest, and you say that you're calculating on a conservative basis. How can you rationalize the two statements?

9:15

MR. MAR: I'm not sure if I'm competent to answer that question from a scientific basis, because the impact of global warming is not exactly clear. I mean, there are those who would suggest that global warming may in fact improve our climate and allow trees to grow even better than they are now.

I might have to defer to Mr. Tupper to sort of give us some science on the area of climate change. He thought he was getting off easy today.

MR. TUPPER: I was hopeful.

In fact, the minister's answer is correct. The models that the federal government has run so far to try and show the regional impact of global warming suggest that Alberta would be considerably warmer than it is now and that the growing season, including for agriculture, could extend as far north as Yellowknife. Of course, there have to be the proper soil conditions for that kind of thing to happen.

The other aspect of global warming in any case is that the globe has been warming for a very long time. The issue here that we're really facing as a nation and as a world is the speed at which that is now occurring. Man's impact is certainly clear in much of the science, but there is still room for dispute, and that's going on internationally. The reality is that it's the speed of the change, so adapting to it has to happen quicker. It may even be within lifetimes as opposed to several hundred years. So with respect to the question you had, the minister I believe is quite correct given the models that are current at the moment, which show Alberta experiencing considerable warming in its climate and the growing season moving quite a bit north.

MR. WHITE: A supplementary question. Is the water management not a concern? I recognize that a minor change in water table elevation or a change in surface water will dramatically affect the growing conditions of the current species. Therefore, even though the growing season could be extended and all of the other factors and the soil conditions certainly wouldn't change, there could be a net and a dramatic lessening of the harvest. It could be. I mean, this is purely speculative, but the nature of the question is: how can it be conservative if this is still a substantive unknown in the hinterland, of course, in the areas we're talking about?

MR. MAR: It's conservative because in all of our policy decisions, whether we're talking about trees or whether we're talking about species, we use the best available science possible. There are all kinds of what ifs and could's, but we use the best knowledge that we have available.

Just on the broader issue of water, that is an area of concern that I think ought not to be understated. The chairman would certainly be familiar with the Milk River aquifer, down around his part of the province. There are some 1,800 wells that draw water from that aquifer. Roughly 1,200 of them are decommissioned wells that are unregulated, so the Department of Environment in collaboration with the people that work in that community and the agricultural community and the town of Foremost and others have been working on an education program to decommission those wells and cap them and to put in valves to regulate those wells that are pumping water out of that aquifer, because the levels have dropped over the last 20 or 30 years.

Water is an absolutely critical resource. There is a great deal of it out there, but that doesn't mean that we should treat it as if it were an unlimited resource. It is not. Programs like the one on the Milk River aquifer are important ones and are the types of models that we would use and like to see used in other parts of the province and other parts of Canada.

MR. WHITE: Those are all the questions I have at the moment. Thank you, sir.

MS CARLSON: Okay. I have some more questions. First of all, I'd just like to talk about forests for a moment as well. I'd like an update in terms of where you're going with the integrated management plans for forests where FMAs or quota holders share responsibility for both softwood and hardwood. I know that most of the FMAs are not managed in that regard right now, and I'm wondering how that's going and what your plans are.

MR. HENDERSON: Well, in fact we do manage our land bases for both species, and the detailed forest management plan that is submitted by a forest management holder – for example, if he's a coniferous operator – has to reflect a management strategy approved by the minister to provide for the sustainability of the deciduous disposition holder in his area. So we do require both sides of the sector, the coniferous and the deciduous, to submit compatible plans.

MS CARLSON: We don't seem to get such a favourable response from operators who are on the land now. They seem to think that the department is some ways away, in most cases, from adequately managing that, and in some instances it's because, as I understand it, the FMAs have older plans in place. Could you comment on that?

MR. HENDERSON: All the FMA holders are required to submit a new detailed forest management plan once every 10 years, so our plans are in various stages of currentness up to that 10 years. Some plans are only two or three years old. In all of these plans we do provide for the sustainability of either. A coniferous holder or a deciduous holder has a different authority to harvest timber than a forest management holder.

Certainly there are some discussions regarding opportunities between the two disposition holders, but the minister's mandate and authority is to provide direction to the FMA holder to develop and provide a sustainable plan for the other operator in his area, and we are doing that. I guess some of our operators vie for opportunistic solutions rather than the best solution.

MS CARLSON: In terms of this are you taking a look at the mandate being trying to replicate as much as possible a natural forest environment?

MR. HENDERSON: Our regeneration standards provide for the return to the land base of a forest that is similar to the one that was grown there. We are in the process of developing a broader and more scientific approach to how our harvesting should occur in a landscape by, I think, a more natural way, with larger regeneration areas and more structure on where we harvest so that it's more in tune with nature rather than the older system of small square blocks.

MS CARLSON: And how much of your budget is spent on the science of that process?

MR. HENDERSON: I don't quite understand.

MS CARLSON: As I understand it, there are a lot of studies being undertaken to determine what the best management practices are. Does the department contribute to that investigation, to the research and development side of that, or is that solely picked up by industry?

MR. HENDERSON: Well, I would have to have Bruce provide the exact dollars. We participate in three primary ways. We have provided funding to NCE and the model forest, and we provide annual funding to the Alberta Research Council for studies directed at forestry landscape type research. We also have requirements and participation with industry through their research programs, whether it's research carried out by FRIAA or company-specific research.

MS CARLSON: Okay. That's excellent. I wouldn't mind having those figures, but if you could provide them in the future, that would be all right. Also, I would like them, if it's possible, compared to what your expectations are in terms of what industry provides for dollars in that regard. That would be helpful.

MR. HENDERSON: We can do that.

MS CARLSON: I'd like to say that what I see happening out there in the last few years is certainly encouraging. I think that industry is working very hard to be responsible keepers of the landscape.

9:25

MR. MAR: If I could make one observation in that regard, I think that industry, whether it's the oil and gas industry or the forestry business, has been much more conscious of their environmental stewardship role, and I think it's because of a large public demand for the same. We only need to look at examples of what happened to the forest industry at a place like Clayoquot Sound in British Columbia. I think other stewards of the land, forestry or oil and gas, have looked at those examples seriously and realized that the last place they want to be is in a situation like that, where their products may be boycotted in places like Europe or somehow their practices associated with not being environmentally sound. So I think part of the reason is that the overall public consciousness for environmental stewardship has compelled industries to be much more proactive in their practices, and I applaud them for it.

MS CARLSON: One last forest question. In the event of a large forest fire that significantly impacts an FMA or a quota holder, what happens?

MR. HENDERSON: Well, if we have a forest fire that exceeds the annual allowable cut of that specific unit by more than 2 percent cumulative for the five-year control period, we require the company to complete a new inventory assessment of the burn area which considers the effectiveness of the salvage operations, and immediately after, if it's a large fire, we reduce the annual allowable cut based on what is supplied and verified by our foresters.

MR. WHITE: We understand that the Bighorn wildland recreation area may be harvested now. I'd rather have the assurance that that will not occur, but if it is to occur, could we understand the philosophy of it in light of the conservative nature of the allocations and the extent of that harvest?

MR. HENDERSON: Okay. There is no intent to provide large commercial harvesting within the Bighorn wildland area. As you know, the Sunpine forest management area stops shy of the Bighorn area. There are some areas that have a higher fire risk, timber around communities such as Nordegg and the Bighorn Indian reserve settlement area, and we are in the process of discussing with the local residents some programs that will reduce the fire hazard to the communities and as well incorporate into it some wildlife or biological improvements which could be as a result of timber harvesting.

So there is no foreseen goal to have commercial harvesting, but we realize that the age class of the timber there is becoming very high risk to fire, and there is some responsibility to provide preventative suppression programs to deal with trying to suppress a fire before it hits the communities. That's what we're reviewing now.

MR. WHITE: Would it be safe to say that that which is harvested in the wildlands area will be specifically to protect the habitable areas and some of the wildlife areas in the way of fire suppression or pre strike? Is that the philosophy behind the taking of the timber in the wildland area?

MR. HENDERSON: Yes.

MR. WHITE: Terrific. Thank you, sir.

The last area I'd like to address today is a report published by the Senate which dealt with forest management in North America particularly, not specifically in Alberta of course. One of the recommendations was that the commercial tenure for harvesting in a particular area be extended. This particular province has forest management agreements, FMAs if you will. With a 200-year horizon for planning of forestry and a growth pattern, depending on where you are in the province and where your FMA is from, in the area of a minimum of 60 years and sort of a maximum of 120 or so, how is it that FMAs are so short that it would put a company's planning in intensive forest management at jeopardy if their FMA is a 25-year when the payback period, if you will, on an intensive forest management could be 40 to 60?

MR. HENDERSON: Alberta, as you know, has a 20-year tenure for our FMA agreements, but through a review of the FMA tenures headed up by MLA Wayne Jacques, we did provide for interim reviews and extensions. Now after 10 years from date of signing, an FMA can be renewed and another 10 added on to the 20-year term. As long as the FMAs meet our obligations and requirements, they are essentially an evergreen document or tenure, so every 10 years there's a rolling 10 added on if they meet our obligations.

MR. WHITE: Coupled with that recommendation for much longer tenure and inseparable from it was a recommendation for a citizen review, a five-year. Not totally citizen of course; there would be expert evidence and public hearings would be held to test the efficacy of the five-year plan that had just been completed and therefore extend the period and design the environmental inhibitors, I guess, in the FMA for the next 10 years. Is that the effect of your new plan, that the company can actually look out and say: I can invest long term here, because all I have to really do is hit these targets. Is the effect of your change in plan of FMA review the same on a company and their harvesting as this Taylor report?

MR. HENDERSON: From the feedback I've received from most of the companies, they are comfortable with this rolling renewal process. They see that if they meet their obligations they will receive a renewal, and Alberta has always been very good in honouring our contracts. So they are reviewing these long-term opportunities.

MR. WHITE: Good. Thank you, sir.

9:35

MS CARLSON: Thanks. I have a number of other questions.

First of all I'd like to make a general comment about the number of letters I've written to you, Mr. Minister, over the past year. I know they must sometimes drive your staff crazy. They're certainly not make-work projects. They're almost entirely as a response to questions asked when I'm out around the province or those that come directly into our office, so I do appreciate your timely responses to them. The information provided is generally very informative, and if not, we ask some follow-up questions. I prefer to continue in that fashion rather than a more confrontational mode in terms of some of the other options open to us. So thanks to your staff for their response in that regard.

My next set of questions are in the fisheries and wildlife management area. We see that there's a little more than a doubling of the budget in this coming year. Could you give us an overview of where those additional dollars are going to be spent?

MR. MAR: Bruce.

MR. PERRY: I'll probably have to ask Mr. Barrett to help us, as well. Did you have a specific section? The budget is broken down between headquarters and a region, many of the activities specific to a region. Do you have a period?

MS CARLSON: I wouldn't mind a general overview in all regards there.

MR. PERRY: Well, perhaps on the program side, because you can get into real depth with the numbers, Mr. Barrett would just start with the activities.

MR. BARRETT: You want an overview of the fisheries and wildlife program activities and the enrichments particularly?

MS CARLSON: Yes.

MR. BARRETT: The enrichments are primarily related to the endangered species, just about exclusively, with minor increases elsewhere, whether we have co-operative programs for resourcing in wildlife populations in parks and some fisheries inventories in the parks, but the biggest single increase, much bigger than all others, is in the endangered species program.

Now, I can take you through some of the typical activities in both fisheries and wildlife management divisions, if that is your wish. With our fish culture program, I could take you into an inventory program, the season-setting process, our working relationship with endangered species, whatever you wish.

MS CARLSON: Well, let's talk about fish first of all. We still have a problem in the province in terms of maintaining fish stocks. So if you could tell me what you've discovered in terms of what you've been doing that hasn't been working and what you think is working and how long it looks like we're going to be having a problem in that regard.

MR. MAR: Let me start by saying that the pressures on our fisheries in the province of Alberta are serious. If you look at the number of lakes that have fish in them in the province of Alberta, it would number less than a thousand, and if you look at the number of fishers who get licences each year, it would result in numbers in the hundreds of thousands. I think something like 300,000 licences are issued each year.

The simplistic calculation I think is revealing, because when you look at the number of anglers per lake in Alberta, it would be perhaps 300 or 400 to 1. Compare that to the province of Saskatchewan or the province of Ontario. In Saskatchewan there are roughly 100,000 lakes with fish in them, and in the province of Ontario I believe there are about 200,000 lakes with fish in them. The number of anglers per lake in those provinces is in the single digits, two or three fishers per lake on average, compared to hundreds per lake here in the province of Alberta. So it is a serious issue, and we have a management program that reflects that, which is very different from what you'll find in Saskatchewan or Ontario. I think that's a good thing to do, because it's a very different set of conditions that we have in this province.

MR. BARRETT: Thank you, Mr. Minister. That backdrop is why we have to be perhaps more aggressive and why some things are changing here. Let me just take you back a few years. I don't think there's any doubt, with the increasing pressure and mobility of our increasing population, that the impact on our fisheries was found to be ongoing, and that would extend back through the '70s and the '80s.

We've had some of these conversations earlier, but let me just start with what would typically have been done. We'd do an intensive population investigation on a lake or two or three or on a river or two or three. To do a detailed population assessment might take one to two to three years, depending on the complexity, and we would bring in new regulations for that body of water. Meanwhile, all kinds of other lakes and rivers were undergoing similar pressures. So it became clear that for a piecemeal, one-off water basin, while those studies were continuing, it was not acting and giving us responsive enough information to deal with the broader picture, the broader issue.

So we started some years ago – and I'll bring you right up to the present in a moment – with the first one, the bull trout. We looked at and introduced a provincewide zero harvest limit on bull trout. I'm happy to report that we are seeing rather substantive increases in some bodies of water in the river systems where we have that, most notably in some of the Kananaskis Country and some of the other rivers in central Alberta, and we continue to monitor those and are evaluating the options of reintroducing them to key bodies of water where there's not a substantial population for effective recovery. By and large, the response has been good.

The next issue that we dealt with provincewide was the one of walleye, where we had a rather large-scale decline, by and large, over a lot of our lakes over a prolonged period of time with the increased targeting of these species by anglers and more mobility of boats, fish finders, tournaments, all manner of things. In that one we've introduced the provincewide system of classifying lakes into trophy, stable, vulnerable, or collapsed. We did this so that we could bring in some protection for all water bodies while individual studies reveal a change from one category to the next as we get the detailed information. But that brought in major changes with, I believe, major impacts.

The thing to remember here in terms of the timing – that was only four, five years ago – is the time it takes for maturity. We will not expect to see a change in the status until the fish that are in the lake have been allowed to mature, to spawn, to produce new recruitment; on average, eight to nine years for a female walleye to reach maturity. So we're looking, quite frankly, at a 10-year plus period to turn it around for walleye.

We are monitoring lakes. We're monitoring community effort over a wide amount of lakes. We're doing some specific studies on a few of them, and we have continued our introduction where we're trying to recover populations, like in Lac La Biche, like Pigeon Lake in the Wetaskiwin area. Those programs continue. I think we have to be more patient. I believe we have a very aggressive approach to management of fisheries, and we're picking them all up, so we have very few that aren't being caught in the gillnet's net of improved management. We still allow the fishing to occur, but we're reducing the killing or the harvesting of fish and allowing them to mature.

The next – and it happened last year – was the implementation of the new harvest regime for pike. Indeed, that system, generally speaking, put a 63-centimetre minimum size for pike, allowing them to mature essentially before they are harvested. Now, the one benefit that pike will have – I expect to see a quicker response here. Walleye tend to get to a size where they make good pan fish before they're mature, which is, as I said, eight to 10 years of age, whereas pike tend to mature in good conditions at three to four years of age, and they're still quite small. So I expect with favourable water conditions a quicker response with pike.

9:45

Also, we've got to think that over the last two or three years, as mentioned, fires brought a drought, and it's the spring-flooded grassland/marshland habitat which is primarily the spawning beds of pike. A drought with little runoff does not do us a lot of good in terms of recovering populations in the whole northeast, which has been the heart of our pike. The walleye situation, because they spawn in running water, in streams primarily, has not been helped by the drought in the last few years.

This year we're implementing a spring closure, essentially, for the pike and perch lakes from essentially April 1 to about May 19, just before the long weekend, in most of our water bodies. I think that's going to have the added benefit of protecting the spawning areas.

The one I didn't mention to date was that two years ago we introduced the new east slope regulations for cold water species, primarily the trout, Rocky Mountain whitefish, and grayling. I think that has been overwhelmingly successful. Again, it's not very long in terms of its implementation phase, but we hear nothing but very positive feedback from folks that are highly engaged and interested in those east slope populations.

I think we're going to see some fairly immediate benefits there, not unlike what we saw with the bull trout, but it's going to be quicker, as well, because the base population was in place for many of those species. We have something like 27 or 28 catch-and-release waters in Alberta now, and I think we're leading North America in that regard. The feedback, as I say, is extremely positive.

Now, that's kind of an overview of fish. We can provide more detail if you'd like.

MS CARLSON: Like we have in other budget years.

Just one question there, and that's in terms of compliance on the catch-and-release side of things. I hear increasingly from people who fish that they are concerned that there isn't a high level of compliance always. I particularly hear those concerns about Slave Lake. If you could comment on that.

MR. BARRETT: We are, likewise, concerned with compliance. Slave Lake has the potential to be impacted in four different ways, most principally from the recreation angler who may or may not be willing in some cases to stay within the limits. The second way is, of course, the commercial fishing. A third way is the domestic licences by native fishermen, and the fourth way is the illegal setting of nets and marketing of fish.

We have in the last three years paid special attention to Slave Lake and will continue to do so from all levels, both the visible and uniformed officers and some other folks who are not quite as visible, in some of our covert operations. Those things continue at a number of sites around the province. I can't go into any specifics there for obvious reasons. We have put new officers and will be putting two new officers at Slave Lake this April to increase the permanent complement of staff in that area.

One other thing that we're doing. We're looking at compliance on a broader basis as it relates to fisheries, and we are setting up the elements of what would be a graduate research program to actually investigate and provide more science to the issue of compliance. We will relate and analyze not only how well people are complying with the regulations but the impact of that noncompliance on the populations. This would give us a science basis to decide and target our enforcement efforts, the likes of which we really haven't had in the past, nor is that specific data available in the literature to the same extent. So it would be somewhat of a first in some of the lakes that we're talking about, particularly in the north-central and northeast. They would be the ones where we have a lot of background information that we would use in this study.

We'll also be putting one compliance enforcement officer in each of our six regions this year to support, analyze, and direct efforts related to the enforcement and to see in a more focused sense of how in fact we can be more strategic and more quantitative in assessing the impact of our efforts and how we can work more collaboratively with all environmental resources – like, in forestry it's the biologists and everybody in there – bringing those various interests and activities together. So we're doing quite a few things in the area of compliance, and those will be kicked off in April of this year.

MS CARLSON: That's good. That reminds me of an area where I think the government doesn't comply with its own regulations, and that's with regard to fish screens on irrigation ditches. Could you comment on that, please?

MR. BARRETT: The issue of screens in irrigation facilities obviously is a complex and ongoing issue, as you're well aware. Many of those facilities were in fact built decades and decades ago by the federal government and turned over to us without those, when no one was thinking along those lines at that time. A lot of the older facilities and the major facilities we acquired in that regard.

Now, at the new ones that we're doing – and I'll come back to some of the problem ones – such as Pine Coulee, we are building, at some considerable cost, a fish screen device and evaluating the effectiveness and the design parameters. For two years, though, for all the major ones like the Carson diversion and others we have had a federal/provincial group looking at it with the specialized committee whose primary interest is fishways, fish passages and diversions, again in a focused fashion to try and evaluate what it is that can be done on such a major waterway that would have the effectiveness of diverting fish without killing large numbers of small fish because of the volume of water and the currents created in those areas.

That work is ongoing. We will be looking at efforts and results from the Pine Coulee one and others, ongoing investigations to see what is possible. It's not small money that we're talking about here for a potential retrofit, and it's unlikely to be anything as close as a simple screen because of the volumes and flow of water and the debris in them, which would quickly clog and completely disrupt the whole system. It's likely got to be some other subtle deflectors in terms of creating different current approaches that would tend to move fish by their natural tendency away from being entrapped in the water flow.

We also have had the leading hydrologist in Canada, from the University of Waterloo, engaged in this on a contract basis to help us design these things. The experience he's bringing is that he's worked with intake flows to some of the nuclear power facilities in Lake Ontario and others, where they've looked at sound barriers, thermal screens, flow mechanisms.

So it is complex. The problem persists in a lot of areas. It's not that we're not working on it, but we have a lot of work yet to do. I agree with you there.

MS CARLSON: We'd certainly like to be kept apprised of what's happening in that regard. I have steered away from that particular issue in the Legislature at this time, but I'm getting increasing pressure to ensure that the issue is addressed, so if you have studies, we sure wouldn't mind having copies of those. As you make some progress, if we could be kept informed, that would help us inform people throughout the province so that this is an issue we can deal with outside of question period.

My biggest concern about the fisheries and wildlife management – and you've seen some written questions from me on it – is that the total budget for fish and wildlife is now combined. It would be a lot more beneficial for us if we could see the moneys that are spent on fisheries and the moneys that are spent on wildlife independently, not only because I think fisheries management is a huge issue in the province right now and we'd like to be able to monitor that on an ongoing fashion, but also because we get a lot of concerns from the general public, from people who believe that a disproportionate amount of money is spent on wildlife as compared to fisheries. Now, I can't even comment on that because we can't see how those respective budgets are changing over time when they're combined. Any comments on that?

MR. MAR: No.

MS CARLSON: No? Okay.

So a couple more on the endangered species. You talked about a large amount of the increased dollars being allocated to that, and I understand that $25,000 of that is the Endangered Species Conservation Committee scientific advisory. I'd like a little better breakdown in terms of what's happening with the money. There are going to be status reports for the main committee to evaluate, I expect, and as a result of that there will be some recommendations implemented. Have you targeted any dollars to implementing recommendations, or have we not got that far? Could you just elaborate on that for me?

9:55

MR. BARRETT: I think you're quite correct, as in most cases and perhaps in all cases we haven't got that far. What the main focus is on is that we'll be looking at the status of species that are thought to be vulnerable or endangered. Essentially the activity in the next period of time – in the next broad-scale activity we'll be doing the detailed assessments of the status of those and, more importantly, developing a recovery plan, the essence of a recovery plan. That will obviously have to be developed, of course, in conjunction not only with the scientific advisory committee to the Endangered Species Conservation Committee but with the local landowners or land base, whichever is involved with what species we're talking about.

The major effort is that we'll be determining the status, we'll be developing detailed recovery plans, and we will then be identifying other species that perhaps need to have the focus of similar activities over the next number of months in the next year. So the recovery plans will be brought forward and implemented; that is obviously the intent, clearly. Those will be implemented as soon as we have an acceptable recovery plan. But I want to make the point very clear that there will be a lot of consultation, as these recovery plans go forward, with affected parties, because we believe that without their active knowledge, participation, and support, these programs don't have a lot of chance to be successful. But with that, we believe they will be successful or have a high probability.

There's the human side of it as well as the science side of it, and both are critical. There are a number of species that currently are already in this process I've talked about for this coming summer.

MS CARLSON: Great. I see that our time is drawing to a close. I'd just like to make a few closing comments.

MR. WHITE: The chairman says we have till 10:15.

MS CARLSON: Oh, 10:15. Okay. Good, because I've only had a page and a half of my questions. I have a few more pages to go.

The regions. We certainly appreciate the breakdown of the regional budgets as they're coming through now. That's helpful, and thank you for that.

Enforcement services you talked about, Mr. Minister, in your opening comments. In terms of increased budgetary dollars there, can you give us the rationale? It looked to us like there was a big experiment happening out there in terms of the decrease in enforcement services, and now there's an increase again. I wouldn't mind some explanation in terms of that rationale. Also, if you could tell us specifically the aspects of enforcement that are being expanded. We just heard the comment: a couple more officers on Slave Lake. What else is happening out there?

MR. MAR: I can't comment knowledgeably on what the rationale was for the earlier reduction in the number of enforcement officers, so I won't be able to address that. With respect to trying to find the right size and the right number of enforcement staff out there, it has struck me during my tenure as Minister of Environment that we did need more people out in the field dealing with compliance issues. As a general observation, following up on your comment that the forestry industry is doing a better job of being proactive in terms of its environmental practices, I would say that I think that is generally true of other industries as well. As a consequence, I believe there is a need to shift away from the Department of Environment prescribing the ways in which industries can meet with environmental standards. I believe the Department of Environment's core mandate is to establish tough environmental standards that are stringent and enforce them but that we not tell industries how to satisfy those standards.

So my general tack in this area is to establish tough standards and not prescribe how those standards are met but enforce stringently whenever those standards are breached. It's for that reason that there's a greater emphasis on enforcement when it comes to our FTEs, which are going up in number. As the deputy minister already outlined in answering an earlier question, some of the FTEs that are coming over are transfers from another department, dealing with the issue of climate change, but there are quite a number of new conservation officers that are going in – I believe the number is 21 – throughout the province. That is by far and away the largest area that we're increasing in terms of our FTEs, of the 47 in total that we're going up this particular year.

MS CARLSON: Okay.

Special places: when can we expect the puzzle to be completed there?

MR. MAR: Special places has roughly 50 candidate sites that have been nominated and approved. There still remain another 45 to 55 sites that have reached some stage of approval or recommendation, but the expectation is that Special Places 2000 will be completed in the year 2000.

MS CARLSON: You're saying by December 31 of this year you expect it to be . . .

MR. MAR: Yes.

MS CARLSON: Okay. That's great. We're looking forward to some announcements.

Chinchaga. I just want to talk about that for a short while. Certainly we and many people feel that the area that was protected is not sufficiently large, that there is a missed opportunity there, particularly with regard to caribou habitat. The area that's been protected is primarily bog, not the treed area which is also essential in terms of habitat protection. Are there any plans for extending that area, and could you comment generally on it?

MR. MAR: No. But the area is a sizable one; it is roughly the same size as the Whaleback region to the southwest of Calgary. It is an area that has been nominated by a local committee. It has taken into account a number of different values, not just environmental ones but other local values as well. I think the Chinchaga region is an area that is important habitat for more than just caribou. I think it is an exceptionally good candidate site that will be protected.

MS CARLSON: Then in terms of the caribou, what do you expect to do to compensate for their lost habitat?

MR. MAR: With respect to the caribou, I can't comment specifically on that. I don't think I'm able to do that, but perhaps I'll ask Morley Barrett to do so.

MR. BARRETT: Thank you. Perhaps a point that needs to be made here – and I think it's an important one – is that the survival and the success of some of these large ungulates is not primarily linked at all to the special places. The success and the future of them is linked to broad-scale, good forest management in a general sense, and clearly that's why we as a department look at all aspects of improving operating plans and other aspects as it relates to forest management. So it would be short selling a species if we were to focus only on the special places that are in the protected areas as the ecological unit that they require, and I wouldn't want to reinforce that concept. While they're very vital, very important, the ecological complexities are things that need to be preserved, and benchmarks and others factors are only one of the elements needed for the species, especially those with migratory patterns. Clearly we will continue to work as a department with other industries and be involved to address the needs of caribou on a seasonal basis.

10:05

MS CARLSON: Well, certainly I agree with what you're saying, which only increases my concern in terms of the Chinchaga area. We know that one of the main problems for caribou is not only habitat but close exposure to people and industry. Now they're losing some of their habitat, and they're being increasingly exposed to industry in that area. Could you comment on that?

MR. BARRETT: I don't know that my answer would change substantially, other than the fact that we do deal with the industry and with approvals of the type of seismic activities, the sharing of roads, and as mentioned previously, there have been studies to look at reducing the impact, both short-term and long-term, of industry on the environment. I think that is an issue and a general direction we're trying to adopt broadly, not only with caribou, but it gives it special focus when there are caribou involved because of the sensitivity of the species. That is going on, and we'll be doing some additional inventory work, some additional consultation, and working closely with our forestry brethren and industry to make sure that as we understand more and more of the requirements and the movement patterns, we reflect that in the types of management plans we allow and approve in that area.

MS CARLSON: Thank you. If you could share any of that inventory work and the progress in the area of changes in populations in that region, that would be helpful to us in terms of eliminating some of our concerns.

MR. BARRETT: And perhaps we have some others that would be of interest.

MS CARLSON: Okay. Sure. That's excellent.

Spray Lakes, Mr. Minister. I'm getting more calls and letters of concern on that than I did on the Natural Heritage Act, which was considerable. It all has to do with the Genesis development, as you're well aware. We've seen one of the companies withdraw. What does the future look like in terms of that area?

MR. MAR: I think that the Kananaskis region and Spray Lakes in particular is a jewel of the province, and the main principle from the perspective of the Department of Environment is that we will not allow anything which will dramatically change the environmental values or the wilderness character of this particular area. Albertans have spoken out strongly with respect to their views on Kananaskis Country, and that is what precipitated in early 1999 the release of the provincial government's policy on development in Kananaskis Country, which is: no new development in that area.

At that time there were six projects that had received some previous review, and they had been grandfathered. Of those six projects, one, which was for a golf course, has been withdrawn by Kan-Alta Golf Management. A second one, by the Buffalo Nations Cultural Society, has not demonstrated sufficient clarity in terms of their project or any viability or any financial planning and accordingly has been rejected. One which remains on the books is to build condominiums on what is currently a parking lot at Fortress Mountain ski lodge. That will go through the appropriate process of review.

The remaining three are a Spray Lakes boat tour, a large four-season resort, and a heli-skiing operation. All of those are being proposed by the Genesis development company. I have ordered that a cumulative environmental impact assessment be done on all three, which from an environmental standpoint only makes sense. At this point the terms of reference have been out for submissions by the public and other interested stakeholders. The review of the three projects by Genesis has now closed, and they are being reviewed by department officials. I can say that I've received a great deal of comment on Genesis projects. I've not seen any positive comments with respect to the particular project, but there is a process which Genesis will have to go through. My expectation is that they will have a great deal of difficulty satisfying all of the public concern in this regard.

MS CARLSON: Well, we're very happy to see that there's a cumulative impact study under way there, and we're looking forward to seeing the results. Your comments in that regard are encouraging.

When do we see the Natural Heritage Act back in the Legislature? I understand that it would be helpful to your department to see that act come back in some sort of a revised way taking into account the public input.

MR. MAR: There's been a great deal of public input into what was then Bill 15, the Natural Heritage Act. Many of the comments that have been made have been very constructive. In particular, I note the comments made by the Environmental Law Centre here in the city of Edmonton. I believe that a number of changes can be made to that iteration of the act that can make it very beneficial. It will be tabled at such time as it can be appropriately drafted, because it is a devilishly difficult piece of legislation in many regards. We want to make sure, as best we can, that we table it in a format that recognizes the public input which has been put forward on that particular bill.

MS CARLSON: It's good news to see that you're still looking at that in a comprehensive fashion. Any chance of seeing it this spring?

MR. MAR: It'll be tabled when it's complete. I cannot comment on whether it would be spring or some other time.

MS CARLSON: Okay. Thank you.

I'd like to move to the performance measures for a moment. I was quite surprised to see that the surface water quality index is just gone. I understand that the new index is being prepared and I expect that the new index will be better, but wouldn't it have been good to at least have had the old index in place until the new one was ready so that we could compare them? Do you have any comments on that?

MR. RADKE: I'm trying to find the reference.

MS CARLSON: Page 99, performance measures.

THE CHAIRMAN: While you're looking for that, we're down to a couple of minutes.

MS CARLSON: Okay. Well, maybe we could get that response in writing. We have a number of other questions that we will provide to you in writing and expect the same excellent answers from you as in the past.

I'd like to put my plug in for this format of budget review process. It's very helpful to us. It's nice to be able to ask questions where we get detailed and comprehensive answers on-site, and I would hope that we could continue this process at least in this department if not in others.

So with that, then we'll conclude our questions.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you. This ends the Official Opposition section of the committee. We now move on to the time specifically allocated for the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Hearing no question from that member, we'll move to the last section of the committee, which is time allocated to government members.

Are there any questions of the Minister of Environment from government members? Ivan.

MR. STRANG: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. To the hon. minister. First and foremost I'd like to congratulate you and your department for your forethought and understanding of endangered species, for the simple reason that I think it's great you are looking into that, and also for your consideration of allocating some dollars and cents to it. I know you haven't ignored it in the past under the Wildlife Act and I know there has been a lot of work going on, but if we're going to look at recovery and get things going along in that line, we certainly need to show our commitment. You certainly have done that in this budget. I know that will certainly please the Endangered Species Conservation Committee as well as the scientific subcommittee, so I really appreciate that.

10:15

The other thing I wanted to sort of mention. When you were talking about corridors, could you maybe give us a little better insight on the aspect of wildlife corridors? Are you stating, then, that we're looking at the different corridors within the province and also sort of supporting the Y2Y, or are we just looking at the aspect of wildlife corridors within the province of Alberta?

The other question I have is on page 133, under water management. I notice that we've got almost a $6 million increase there, and I'm just wondering: is that, in effect, because of our incorporation of the Water Act starting January 1, 1999? Do you feel that's the reason we've got more pressure in that?

The other item that I have is on page 137, under forest protection. It might be a little self-centred on my part on this, but on the northeastern slopes I notice that we have had a dry year for the last two years, and this year it looks like we're going to have another one. That area has been really fortunate not to have any fires. We're only looking at a $76,000 increase, and I'm just wondering why. Maybe in one of my other questions we can clarify that.

Another question. On page 147 we're talking about areas of parks and natural reserves in Alberta. I also have to take my hat off to your department on that. If you look at from 1950 to 1998, we have about 18,153 square kilometres more, and I think that's an awfully giant step. I think we've got to sort of publicize that more. I think we are in the area of conserving.

The one thing that sort of concerns me is the aspect of parks visitation, on the same page, page 147. As you'll see, in 1993-94 we were up to 9,043, and we've progressively dropped since then. I know in some areas there have been a lot of aspects of the implication of costs moving in, the conditions of them. Also, I would strongly suggest that we sort of look at the aspect, especially in the green area, of making the forest companies come to the table in partnership with us on these. I think that displays also to the public that it's multi-use, and I think we should look at that in a stronger light.

I guess the other one I'd like to talk about is on page 148. I realize that in your opening remarks you talked about the aspect of fire. I don't know. I just feel we have to budget more. If you take a look at your line for fire suppression, from this year to last year's budget we're $2,706,000 down. If you look at forest protection from this year to last year, we're up $1,340,000, and then under forest management we're also up $1,759,000. In the total picture, especially with the budgets we have and the conditions we have, I just think it makes more budget sense to have more out. I realize what you're up against, but I just feel it's important that we do that so people understand the importance of the forest.

I guess the other one on the same page, 148, is the NRCB. I was quite curious on the aspect that you went with $1,355,000 for 2000-2001, yet we're only looking at $943,000 being spent. Then in the budget of 1999-2000 we're looking at $1,249,000, but for 2000-2001 we have an increase.

Then my last question is on codes of practice in the forestry industry. We're getting a lot of pressure – and I'm sure the rest are having the same as what I'm having in my area – as a lot of national companies like Revy are coming out to see the code of practice because of the public pressure that's put on. I'm just wondering: where are we sitting on that as the Department of Environment to co-ordinate this message on the forest practices that we have?

MR. MAR: With respect to codes of practice I'll have Cliff address that.

With respect to forest fires I will say: whatever amount is the appropriate amount for fighting forest fires. We have adopted a very aggressive forest fire fighting policy, and we will continue to do that. I won't say that whatever is budgeted is irrelevant, but whatever is necessary. I would never hesitate to come back in a supplementary estimate and ask for the appropriate amount to fight forest fires and return whatever money may be left over after that. We do have a policy of aggressive fire fighting, which has been confirmed by this government, not just by the department, and we'll continue to do that.

With respect to wildlife corridors, it's an area that we study carefully. As already outlined by Morley Barrett, we are looking at the Y2Y initiative, and we are paying particularly close attention to the whole area in the Bow Valley corridor, which appears to be a real bottleneck in that particular wildlife corridor. We know from our research that grizzly bears range incredibly wide areas. We know from our research that there are in my recollection at least 10 or 12 different grizzly bear studies that are being done in this province. Cougars range even wider areas than do grizzly bears. So wildlife corridors are critical to the well-being of those species.

With respect to the dollar questions that you had asked, I'll turn those over to the deputy minister.

With respect to your questions on page 147 and the numbers of visitors to our parks it's clear that people do get a great deal of value in visiting our parks. I'll certainly be interested to see how that trend continues. It goes currently up to '97-98, and I'd be interested to see what the subsequent years turn out.

With those comments, I'll turn them over to the respective individuals: Morley to talk about wildlife corridors, Doug to talk about the dollars, and Cliff to talk about the codes of practice in the forestry area.

MR. RADKE: Okay. Dealing with the water management question and an apparent increase of $6 million, you'll notice on page 133 that it shows a decrease in expenses funded by lotteries. The net number is $5.447 million. What that essentially means is that money from lotteries last year is now part of the general revenue funding. You will, however, see an increase of nearly $7.9 million in capital investments, and that's additional funding that we're putting into small water infrastructure projects, money that is very welcome because our ability to maintain and rehabilitate some of our small water infrastructure has started to cause us some concern, but we are making some progress on that now.

In terms of the NRCB's budget, traditionally the NRCB has spent assets that.

We look at protected areas. We look at zone 1s. We look at forest land use zones and other methods to see how they all fit into the puzzle, and that's part of the conscious decision-making and evaluation process. I should also mention that in this province we have marked and continue to study a substantial number of the large carnivores, particularly, and caribou and other species that have special problems in this type of situation, as I mentioned, with the connectivity as it relates to road construction, to mining, to forestry activity.

We're very actively looking at the response of animals to specific land use aspects and planning those activities and understanding better the response to specific activities. It's a very active approach that we have ongoing in a number of sites, even responses to haul roads or major access roads to large gas and oil fields or intensive seismic. We have ongoing studies which will help us understand the impact and the response of wildlife species to these and have marked animals to be able to give not only an anecdotal but very much a scientific, defensible response and understanding to those events.

THE CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions from government members? Seeing no further questions, I'd like to call for a motion to conclude the discussion of the estimates of the Minister of Environment. Is there anyone who'd like to make a motion?

MR. STRANG: Mr. Chairman, I'll move that under Standing Order 56(8) the designated supply subcommittee on Environment conclude discussion on the 2000-2001 estimates for the Department of Environment and rise and report.

THE CHAIRMAN: All those in favour?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

[The subcommittee adjourned at 10:31 a.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, March 20, 2000

1:30 p.m.

Date: 00/03/20

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. From our forests and parkland to our prairies and mountains comes the call of our land. From our farmsteads, towns, and cities comes the call of our people that as legislators of this province we act with responsibility and sensitivity. God grant us the wisdom to meet such challenges. Amen.

Hon. members, would you please remain standing now for the singing of our national anthem. We'll call on Mr. Paul Lorieau, who's in the Speaker's gallery, to lead us.

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

Please be seated.

Hon. members, before the Clerk calls the first order of business on the Routine today, I am also pleased to acknowledge that today marks the anniversary of 12 of our members who were first elected to the Legislative Assembly of Alberta in the general election of March 20, 1989.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition here that was organized by a student by the name of Steven Beasley in St. Albert. He took it around Paul Kane high school, and he got 661 names signed to this petition that urges "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition supporting public health care in Alberta which is urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care" signed by 220 Albertans from Rocky Mountain House, Alhambra, Leslieville, Wetaskiwin, and Rimbe.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, today it's my pleasure to present to the Assembly a petition that has been signed by 294 Albertans from Red Deer, Lacombe, Hinton, Edson, Rimbe, Calmar, Drayton Valley, Hines Creek, Eckville, and Rocky Mountain House. All of these Albertans are urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

MRS. MACBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table

a petition supporting public health care in Alberta. The undersigned citizens from Red Deer, Sylvan Lake, Olds, Didsbury, Eckville, Blackfalds, Bowden, Sundre, Innisfail, and Carstairs are urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining [our] public health care [system]." Today's total will be 2,227, and our total to date just from this petition alone will be 25,801 Albertans.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Now the hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table a petition signed by 1,145 Albertans who are residents of Athabasca, Fort McMurray, Island Lake, Boyle, Caslan, Calahoo, Smith, Calling Lake, Grassland, and other communities in the Athabasca area. These names are collected by the Athabasca Citizens for Public Healthcare, who are all opposed to Bill 11. Today this tabling brings the total number of signatures to 6,406. The petition reads as follows:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise this afternoon to also present a petition which requests "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining [our] public health care [system]." There are 404 individuals who signed this petition from Red Deer, Penhold, Caroline, Rocky Mountain House, Leslieville, Innisfail, Eckville, Tofield, Castor, Killam, Stettler, Camrose, Wainwright, Sedgewick, Devon, Bashaw, and Jasper.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real privilege today to stand and present a petition on behalf of 323 residents of Lethbridge, Raymond, Cardston, Magrath, Monarch, Coutts, Pincher Creek, Lundbreck, Cayley, Brooks, and Medicine Hat. This petitions "the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the petition with respect to public health care that I introduced on March 16 be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented to the Legislative Assembly on Thursday, March 16, requesting that the promotion of private health care and the undermining of public health care be stopped be read and received. Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I tabled last Thursday in this Legislative Assembly now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, I request that the petition which I presented to this Assembly on March 16 urging the government to stop promoting private health care now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the petition I tabled on Thursday, March 16 in favour of Bill 11 be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to urge the Government of Alberta to provide respective Regional Health Authorities with the flexibility necessary to provide the delivery of publicly funded, publicly administered overnight surgical services cost-effectively and efficiently through the contracting-out of such services if deemed necessary.

1:40

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to request that the petition I tabled on March 16, Thursday of last week, be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

head: Introduction of Bills

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Bill Pr. 1

Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the Province of Alberta Repeal Act

MR. COUTTS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill Pr. 1, being the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the Province of Alberta Repeal Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 1 read a first time]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Bill Pr. 2

William Roper Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2000

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill Pr. 2, being the William Roper Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2000.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 2 read a first time]

Bill Pr. 3

Westcastle Development Authority Repeal Act

MR. COUTTS: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to introduce Bill Pr. 3, being the Westcastle Development Authority Repeal Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 3 read a first time]

Bill Pr. 4

Calgary Municipal Heritage Properties Authority Amendment Act, 2000

MRS. LAING: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill Pr. 4, the Calgary Municipal Heritage Properties Authority Amendment Act, 2000.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 4 read a first time]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Bill Pr. 5

Calgary Foundation Act

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie I beg leave to introduce Bill Pr. 5, being the Calgary Foundation Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 5 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to table five copies of a letter that was sent to Dr. Robert Burns, the executive director of the Alberta Medical Association. The letter states in part that it is clear that the Alberta Medical Association does not represent the views or interests of the Cardiovascular and Thoracic Surgeons in the Province of Alberta on a number of important matters. Therefore this organization withdraws from the AMA.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I have two tablings this afternoon. The first one: for members who had been interested in the March 14 tabling of correspondence from the Minister of Health and Wellness to the Hon. Allan Rock, this is the response from the Hon. Allan Rock dated March 16, 2000.

The second item, Mr. Speaker, is an e-mail received from Mr. Joe Nagy dated March 15, 2000.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have several tablings here. The first one is a set of four letters from individuals in St. Paul, Okotoks, Sherwood Park, and Edmonton all opposing Bill 11.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a letter from Premier Romanow to Heather Smith, president of United Nurses of Alberta. It's dated March 7, and in part the Premier says:

In my view, a well managed, non-profit publicly funded system can provide a continuum of insured hospital and physician services more effectively and efficiently than for-profit private clinics or private hospitals.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Do you have another one?

DR. PANNU: I have two more, a couple of more.

THE SPEAKER: Please.

DR. PANNU: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I table a recent news article which shows that private, for-profit hospitals in Australia have not relieved the strain on the public system and have actually caused waiting lists to grow.

One more tabling, Mr. Speaker, with your permission. This is a copy of a motion that was passed at the Athabasca Citizens for Public Healthcare forum on March 16, and the motion says:

Be it resolved that all provincial government costs incurred in promoting Bill 11 . . . including the cost of circulating a copy of this bill, be levied against the salaries of those members of the Alberta Legislative Assembly who vote in favour of passage of this bill beyond the date of this Forum, March 16th, 2000.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to table five programs of this weekend's Edmonton/Calgary provincial hockey tournament, which was held in northeast Edmonton at the Clareview arena.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm tabling the appropriate number of copies of a petition signed by 29 residents of Alberta who are protesting the proposed Cheviot coal mine, that it's "in an area identified by the Provincial Government as a critical wildlife area."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first one is a decision from the Labour Relations Board dated March 19, 1998, and in it the board indicates that it "does not have the jurisdiction to initially determine which facilities are approved hospitals" in this province.

My second tabling this afternoon is a leaflet that was distributed to the public today, and it is from the Alberta pensions administration employees group urging the government to negotiate in good faith.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the appropriate number of copies from a number of Albertans who are expressing their opposition to Bill 11. For the sake of time I'll read their names into the record: William Stuart, Lee Melnychuk, R. Colborne, and Neil Bleakney.

Thank you.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, two tablings this afternoon with your permission. The first is a letter from Elisabeth deWynter from my constituency. It is a multiple-page letter which is her very sound analysis of Bill 11 and her reasons for not supporting this bill, and I would ask that the Premier pay particular attention to this letter and perhaps respond to Mrs. deWynter.

The second tabling I have is an exchange of correspondence between the office of the Auditor General and the then acting superintendent of the Alberta Treasury Branches, Mr. Elmer Leahy, as well as management letters exchanged between the former Provincial Treasurer, Jim Dinning, and Allister McPherson, all regarding connected accounts and loan practices of the Alberta Treasury Branch. It makes very interesting reading in regards to the West Edmonton Mall financing.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. The first is a press release from the board of directors of the Canadian Nurses Association, which recently condemned Bill 11 and indicated that private facilities are not the answers to solving the concerns within our health care system.

The second tabling that I have is a letter from the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees to the minister of health wherein they indicate that they are still awaiting a response with regards to their request as to what the criteria and process is for declaring approved hospitals in this province.

1:50

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 32 guests from Archbishop Jordan high school and their teacher, Mr. Jim Ryan. This class is from grade 10. They are energetic and bright. I'd ask that they rise and that we join in our appreciation of their attendance here today.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature 57 guests from the beautiful community of Vegreville. They're from the Vegreville composite high school. They're accompanied by teachers Mr. Bill Smolak and Mr. Greg Kurulok, parent helpers Mr. Marvin Topilko and Mrs. Carol Maskowitz, and of course their very famous bus driver, Mr. Terry Baydala. I would ask them to all rise in the public gallery and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very proud this afternoon to introduce two constituents of mine that are seated in your gallery, Marlene and Walter Chykerda, proud parents of one of our pages, Myles. Myles is a grade 12 student and attends Central Alberta Christian high school in Lacombe. He plays the saxophone in the Lacombe community band, and he's studying grade 8 piano. Myles' future plans include a degree in archeology. I'm very pleased that Myles is able to work in this Assembly, and I would ask his mom and dad to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

MR. AMERY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly the ever lovely, friendly, and always smiling, Mrs. Shariff. Mrs. Shariff is the wife of our colleague, the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall. Mina is here today in Edmonton along with her two lovely daughters, Fatima and Alysha, to join in the Eid al-Adha celebration which will be hosted by you, sir, this afternoon. The three lovely young ladies are seated in your gallery. I would like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The Associate Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.

MS CALAHASEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and to the Members of the Legislative Assembly three wonderful people who are seated in the members' gallery. Today Loretta Burden is seated there. She actually hails from near Las Vegas, Nevada, and is a proud Paiute. Loretta is a renowned artist, well known for her unique basket-making abilities and was recognized for these artistic skills in the book Distinguished Women of Southern Nevada. She moved here three years ago on an invite from her lucky husband, Mr. Harold Burden, who many people know in this Assembly. He is the sports director of White Buffalo athletic society, well known for his commitment to aboriginal youth and sports. In fact, included with them is my beautiful sister, Helen Calahasen. As the name indicates, she is related, but I'm related to most of northern Alberta. These three are all avid supporters and volunteers with Dreamspeakers Festival, and they're seated in the members' gallery, as I indicated. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

MR. THURBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe my guests are due to come in here in just a few moments, but they may be able to hear us from outside the door up there. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly 49 distinguished guests from the Eldorado elementary school. Six of these are three teachers and three parents and helpers. I just wanted to get it on the record that they are coming in here, and I'll be sending them a copy of Hansard so they can see that they were properly introduced. Could we give them the warm welcome of this House, please.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a great group of students from St. Thomas Aquinas school in Spruce Grove. They are here with their teacher, Mr. Nereo Bolzon. They are in law 10. There are 14 students seated in the public gallery. I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions. First, I would like to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly the president of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, Mr. Dan MacLennan. Mr. MacLennan, I think, is seated in the public gallery. I'll ask him to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, to you and to my colleagues in the Assembly: it's my pleasure to introduce two visitors from Lacombe who were at the citizens' vigil outside the Legislative Assembly today. They are Marylynne Stumpf and her mother, Myrt Nicholson. They're both from Lacombe and are opposed to Bill 11. I'll ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the Premier branded Albertans concerned with public health care as left-wing nuts. You know, the Premier is wrong, for if he would simply listen to Albertans, he would find out and he would know that they're not left-wing nuts. These are concerned parents and families and retired Albertans and teachers, business owners, and health care professionals who are worried about what this government is doing to dismantle our public health care system. My questions are to the Premier. Are the 5,000 people from Red Deer, Stettler, Lacombe, Innisfail, Rocky Mountain House, Blackfalds, Sylvan Lake who signed the petition tabled by the Member for Red Deer-South left-wing nuts in the eyes of the Premier?

MR. KLEIN: No, Mr. Speaker, they aren't. As a matter of fact, if the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition would send over her petition, I'll sign it too.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, the 25,801 Albertans to date who have signed the petition across Alberta: are they left-wing nuts in the eyes of the Premier too?

MR. KLEIN: No, Mr. Speaker, and I'll repeat. If the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition will send over her petition, we'll sign it too.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, the registered nurses, the doctors, the clergy, the teachers, the Consumers' Association, and the economists, all of whom have spoken out against this government's private hospitals legislation: are they left-wing nuts, too, in the eyes of the Premier?

MR. KLEIN: No, Mr. Speaker. Again, if the leader of the Liberal opposition will send over the petition that's being circulated, we'll be happy to sign it.

Speaker's Ruling Seeking Opinions

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, before we move to the next question, I might just make the comment that one of the violations in question period is to seek opinions. It may very well be that all of the last three questions were asking for an opinion.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that the Premier has met with the doctors of this province, will he get out from under the dome now and meet with the nurses and the teachers and the clergy and the Consumers' Association about their concerns about Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this householder was sent to about a million households in Alberta. That's what I consider to be complete and full consultation, especially when we're asking all Albertans to provide their responses to the proposed bill.

MRS. MacBETH: It's interesting that he'll meet with doctors but not with nurses, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, given that when a town hall is organized by us on this side of the House, it's open to all Albertans, why is it that when the Treasurer and the minister of energy hold their so-called town hall meetings, they handpick who can come, and then they screen the questions that are asked?

2:00

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, that statement is not the truth.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, can the Premier, then, explain an e-mail which we received from one Ann Lockwood of Vermilion, Alberta, sent about a week ago in which she describes a government sponsored meeting by the Treasurer and the minister of energy in Lloydminster?

The event was by registration only . . . when I tried to book for a number of people, I was told that they needed the names of every person . . . no verbal questions would be accepted, only written ones.

To top it off, Bill 11 questions were "studied . . . sorted and screened" by the organizers. I'd be happy to table the e-mail referred to.

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I don't know anything about the meeting, but I am advised that the meeting to which the leader of the Liberal opposition alludes was organized by the Chamber of Commerce. It was not organized in any way, shape, or form by the two ministers mentioned.

DR. WEST: That whole meeting was put on by the Lloydminster Chamber of Commerce on Budget 2000, and they invited the Provincial Treasurer to come there. I mean, these people came to the meeting. It was an open meeting, and they took their questions in written form and put them through a moderator. This is a complete falsehood, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, you know what? There are many different definitions floating around this province right now as to what constitutes a hospital. Many Albertans have heard this Premier say, a hospital is a hospital. Well, the Alberta Hospitals Act talks about general, about approved hospitals, and it talks about non-regional hospitals. As if that weren't enough, Bill 11 defines public hospitals and sets up new categories of hospitals in the province called "accredited" hospital surgical facilities, "designated surgical" facilities, and "approved surgical" facilities. Well, even though most Albertans know what a hospital is, it's obvious that this government doesn't know. My questions are to the Premier. Can the Premier tell us: what are the criteria for determining what an approved hospital is in this province?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, without wanting to sound facetious, if the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition wants to know what a hospital is, I would suggest that she go to University hospital or to the Royal Alex hospital or to the Grey Nuns hospital.

But this leader of the Liberal opposition knows what surgical clinics are all about. She likes to say that there was no publicly funded, privately delivered surgery happening when she was the minister of health, but there was. And don't just take my word for it. This 1991 Calgary Herald story talks about the 35 private surgical centres that existed in Alberta then doing everything from cataract surgery to plastic surgery to ear surgery. The headline says: Patients choose private treatment. "Growing ranks are bypassing hospitals for surgical clinics." Well, maybe we should call them Nancy's clinics.

Patients who are willing to pay a facility fee can have surgery at the time of their choosing rather than face the all-too-frequent waiting lists, and cancellations in hospitals.

Mr. Speaker, private facilities were doing insured services and charging patients facility fees, and this leader of the Liberal opposition when she was health minister did absolutely nothing about it. It was this government that banned facility fees, not her. Now the leader of the Liberal opposition is saying she wants to slam the door shut on the private sector, but when she had the chance, when she was the minister, she did absolutely nothing.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, that's the Premier that got fined, not me.

Mr. Speaker, can the Premier tell us why the freedom of information officer for Alberta Health indicated that there were no records available regarding the guidelines used by the minister of health to determine the standards of service necessary for a facility to be an approved hospital?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness respond. He's more familiar with the situation than I am.

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, a list of approved hospitals is maintained in the province pursuant to section 44(2) of Hospitals Act, and it is updated periodically as new facilities come on stream or the role of an existing facility changes. The last list in which there were significant changes was the 4th of March 1997.

Mr. Speaker, these are facilities which provide overall general hospital services. They are located, of course, across the province and vary considerably in size. They are subject to an accreditation process to make sure that they have the standards in place, the ability to offer the services that are part of their overall plan.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, why has the minister, then, failed for over two months to answer a very simple question regarding the criteria used by the minister to determine what is an approved hospital?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, to have a very detailed list of criteria which apply to all hospitals – all of the hospitals, of course, are not uniform in their ability to offer services. As I've said, the overall role of hospitals in this province is established through the overall planning process of Alberta Health and Wellness and the regional health authorities. They are designed to provide in combination the wide range of services that is needed across this province. The list can be provided, and I will do so when I have sufficient copies so that that is available to all members. Of course, I think the important thing here – and perhaps this is the thing that the member is pursuing – is that there is a process for reviewing and accrediting the quality of services offered in this system.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite the fact that an overwhelming majority of Albertans oppose Bill 11, the federal Liberals won't try to stop this government from legalizing private, for-profit hospitals. The federal Liberals are wimping out despite the fact that two constitutional lawyers concluded last week that Bill 11 violated at least three of the five principles of the Canada Health Act. My questions are to the Premier. Why is the Premier engaged in a phony fight with Ottawa when Jean Chretien and Allan Rock lack the political will to stand up for medicare?

MR. KLEIN: Well, that's a switch. All we're trying to get from Mr. Rock in particular are his comments on the bill as to whether he thinks the bill in its present form violates the Canada Health Act, and if it does, could he offer some suggestions as to how the bill could be made absolutely pure. That's all we're seeking from Mr. Rock.

I don't know of federal government constitutional lawyers who have commented on the bill, Mr. Speaker, because we have received no official response from the federal government relative to whether this bill, in fact, does violate the Canada Health Act. From our point of view it doesn't, because clearly in the preamble to the bill it purports to enshrine in law absolute adherence to the fundamental principles of the Canada Health Act.

2:10

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Then why is the Premier using this smokescreen of a phony war with Ottawa to obscure the fact that Alberta doctors, nurses, health care workers, teachers, clergy, churches, and ordinary citizens all oppose Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: That's not quite true. Mr. Speaker, I know that the hon. leader of the third party likes to table letters. I guess I could table letters as well. I tabled one today from a section of the Alberta Medical Association not supporting the position of the Alberta Medical Association on this particular bill.

We've had conversations with representatives of the archdiocese in the city of Edmonton, and it's the attitude of Archbishop Collins that the church will remain neutral. Yes, one bishop has spoken out on this issue, Mr. Speaker, but I've received letters from other Catholics who say that the opinions of Bishop Henry do not necessarily represent their opinions. I've received letters from nurses and other doctors who have the opposite opinions to those expressed by the hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier might want to know that not only Catholic clergy but United Church of Canada clergy also oppose Bill 11.

My last question to the Premier: why won't the Premier admit that the real opponents of his scheme to legalize private, for-profit hospitals are everyday, normal Albertans, not the federal Liberals, who seem willing to stand idly by and do nothing?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, there was no question; therefore there can be no answer.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister of Canada appears to be giving Alberta permission – permission – for this Legislature to proceed with Bill 11 apparently now without the federal ruling on whether the bill meets the terms of the Canada Health Act. Given his reported comments on the weekend, my questions are to the Premier. Has the federal government provided any official response to the province's repeated requests for them to express their concerns with Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: I have received no response from the Prime Minister. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo tabled a letter that was sent to our Minister of Health and Wellness dated March 16, where, first of all, he tries to vindicate himself from his disgraceful behaviour in Calgary. He goes on to say that he will not comment on the bill because perhaps there might be some amendments, Mr. Speaker. That's the only response to my knowledge that we have received from the federal government. Perhaps the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness can shed some further light on this matter.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, just to add, the federal minister and I have had two exchanges of correspondence since the bill was introduced, and we talked about its overall principles prior to that as well. In addition to what the Premier has indicated was the message of the letter, there were a number of other points raised. For instance, the federal minister feels that we should be fostering innovation, that we should be looking at new ways of doing things within our health care system, and we have certainly replied and indicated a number of the primary care projects that we have under way, a number of the other forward-looking and forward-thinking initiatives that we have going on in the province. He has also talked about having a ministers' meeting in the near future to talk about the best future directions for Alberta's and all provinces' health care systems as they work with the federal government.

So there has been certainly an exchange of correspondence, Mr. Speaker, but it's very important to note that in none of that correspondence is there any indication in any way at all that our bill is contrary to the Canada Health Act.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the minister of health. Would the minister tell Albertans how the government views the Prime Minister's remarks this weekend?

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, comments have already been made earlier in question period about the seeking of opinions.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was asking for the position of the government on their comments.

Nonetheless, my third question is to the Premier. Since the federal government is ignoring the serious plight of our farmers and is proposing to tax our oil industry at higher levels than other industries and is now refusing to comment on Bill 11, is the Alberta government still seeking comment from the federal government on Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: We are still seeking comment on Bill 11 ostensibly as it relates to the section for which the federal government is responsible, and that is the Canada Health Act. Mr. Speaker, we want to receive from the Prime Minister or the federal Minister of Health a clear and very definitive answer as to whether this bill in any way, shape, or form violates the Canada Health Act. That is a very simple question. It's a very simple question. That's all we want to know. All he has to do is provide an answer saying yes or no and, if the answer is yes, spell out where it violates the Canada Health Act.

I mean, Mr. Rock is a very intelligent individual, and he has a staff of about 6,000 people. Surely he has sufficient help in Ottawa to help him answer the question: does it violate the Canada Health Act? Mr. Rock, does it violate it or doesn't it violate it? Never mind getting into political rhetoric relative to his moral thoughts relative to the legislation. Does it violate the act? If it does, then tell us where it violates the act, and we'll fix it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Joe Nagy from Calgary took time to correspond with our caucus. In his March 15, 2000, e-mail Mr. Nagy says, "Her choices are as follows." He's referring to his wife who requires an MRI. Either "wait 9 months under health care," or "pay $600 and get it in one day." My questions this afternoon are to the Premier on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Nagy. Will the Premier explain to this young couple and to this Assembly exactly how their predicament is not an example of a two-tier system of health care?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, just recently the Calgary regional health authority announced that it was contracting out for the services of privately operated MRIs. They're doing this to reduce waiting lists and to make it easier and more accessible for people who need MRIs under insured services to get there much quicker, and hopefully that will work out for this family as well as for hundreds of others who are on the waiting list.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, my follow-up question to the Premier would be as follows: given that the specialist for this particular Calgary couple cannot proceed until Mr. Nagy's wife receives an MRI, will the Premier admit this afternoon that people right now with money are able to jump to the head of the queue to see specialists without delay?

MR. KLEIN: Yes, relative to MRIs, Mr. Speaker, that indeed is the case, but MRIs are not covered under the Canada Health Act. If this hon. member wants to fix that problem, I would suggest that he ask Mr. Rock. He might get an answer. We have been unable to get an answer on a number of questions.

MR. DICKSON: Finally, Mr. Speaker, a question as to the intentions of the Premier: despite Mr. Nagy's comment that "we have been loyal . . . Tory supporters," will they now be labeled left-wing nuts because they had the courage to show their concern about what this government is doing to undermine public health care?

2:20

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, you know, this hon. member was at the Liberal convention in Ottawa this week, and he has expressed concern about MRIs, which is something that is not addressed in the Canada Health Act. Did he approach Mr. Rock on behalf of his constituents? I think not. I think not. And you know what? I would ask him to stand up and answer why he didn't approach Mr. Rock on this very important matter.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Private Health Services (continued)

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Health care is an issue that touches all Albertans. Unlike changes to other government programs, changes to health care concern Albertans because people are afraid of change. Some of my constituents are calling concerned that we are seeing only the tip of the iceberg with respect to lengthy waiting lists, overcrowded emergency rooms, what it will be like in the future, and how Bill 11 will address these concerns. They have requested me to ask the Minister of Health and Wellness the following questions. Why would doctors want to work for a public hospital when they could earn much more working for a private clinic?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, first of all, in the legislation that we are proposing to the Assembly, the mode or method of payment via the AMA agreement, which would be the same for all doctors, is paramount in terms of contracts that would be arrived at or of course, as it is, payment within the public system. So there would not be any major direct financial incentive to physicians in these cases.

Mr. Speaker, we have had the exchange of information in terms of studies with respect to the clinics. However, I think there is a case that has been made by some physicians that they would prefer to concentrate on one very specific or narrow area of applying their expertise. They can see the potential of a specialized surgical clinic to be an area where their very concentrated specialization would be fully utilized, and it would work out to be a very efficient arrangement as far as the overall health care system is concerned.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government claims that private clinics will reduce waiting lists. How? [interjections] I'll ask again, then. The government . . .

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, you're on your third one now. The question's been asked. The minister may choose to answer or not respond.

Question number 3, please.

DR. TAYLOR: He didn't hear it.

THE SPEAKER: Well, I'm sorry. The Speaker has mentioned decorum time and time again. The hon. members are here to listen. The hon. member.

MRS. FORSYTH: The government claims that private clinics will reduce waiting lists. How?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, we are always looking at the health care system to innovate and improve the overall delivery of services. I think there are a number of illustrations in many walks of life, whether it be education or health care – we're talking about health care here. Specialization in a particular service, being able to move a particular service out of the hospitals, where they have a wide variety of varying needs on an ongoing basis through their emergency departments, through their outpatient clinics, through the general needs that are referred to a full-service hospital – there is a case to be made for a very specialized surgical facility to concentrate in a particular area of work where, as I've indicated before, the doctors concentrate on that area due to their speciality. They have a nursing team. They have a support staff team.

There is, of course, a debate in terms of the different items of research that have been published as to the record of this type of approach, but, Mr. Speaker, there are quite a few on the positive side, and I think it's an innovation that should be looked at here in the province.

Mr. Speaker, finally, I would just like to emphasize that the legislation makes this a possibility. It provides an opportunity. It is not something that is being forced on a regional health authority if they do not feel they have the evidence to go forward.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 11 is all about trust. When it comes to health care in this province, Albertans trust their doctors. My questions are to the Premier. Mr. Premier, why doesn't the Premier trust the AMA when they say that Bill 11 is the wrong prescription for health care in this province?

MR. KLEIN: They haven't quite said that. The AMA has said that they have some concerns. I'll tell you that the response to the media was a lot different than the response was to me in the meeting. It seemed that the AMA was quite conciliatory, the four members that I met. They had four concerns. We said that we would sit down with the AMA and address those concerns.

They are somewhat minor amendments, Mr. Speaker. They deal with the whole question of transparency. We've alluded to transparency and openness relative to the contracts as it relates to the possibility of RHAs contracting out. They talked about the privative clause, and they want some clarification on that particular issue. They talked also about the issue of conflict of interest, and I will give the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo some credit, because he raised that too. If there's a reasonable amendment relative to the standardization of conflict rules, we'll deal with that too.

So there hasn't been a rejection of the bill by the AMA, notwithstanding the way it was reported by the media. They want some clarification on a number of points and some possible amendments, and we're willing to consider those.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: is it the AMA and the doctors in this province who are standing up for public health care when they say no to Bill 11, or is it your government when they're trying to push it through against public reaction?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'm disappointed in this hon. member, that he would allude to his scripted questions rather than address some of the points that were raised in my answer.

MR. SAPERS: Your scripted answer.

MR. KLEIN: It's not a scripted answer. I'm not reading from any notes, Mr. Speaker. I'm recounting the details of a meeting that we had with the AMA.

I assume through his question that this member assumes that all doctors are in agreement with the AMA. Well, I tabled a letter earlier addressed to Dr. Burns, the executive director of the Alberta Medical Association. It says:

I have received a letter from every member of the Alberta Medical Association 'Section for Cardiovascular and Thoracic Surgery' recommending that the Section resign its affiliation with the Alberta Medical Association.

It is clear that the Alberta Medical Association does not represent the views or interests of the Cardiovascular and Thoracic Surgeons in the Province of Alberta on a number of important matters.

Please be informed, therefore, that the Alberta Medical Association will no longer represent the Cardiovascular and Thoracic Surgeons in the Province of Alberta effective immediately.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is again to the Premier. Since the AMA has said that Bill 11 is essentially beyond repair, why doesn't the Premier just do the right thing and withdraw it?

MR. KLEIN: No, the AMA has not said that at all. You know, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness was in that meeting as well, and perhaps he would like to comment on the tone and the nature of that meeting and what exactly we agreed to do relative to the AMA's concerns.

2:30

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, there were six points that were raised with respect to the legislation, and I would request your ruling, if you see fit, as to whether we should go through the specifics of these amendments. I would just like to illustrate with a couple of examples at least.

With respect to 25(1)(a) they were concerned about the concept in that particular clause whereby in their view the Lieutenant Governor in Council would define what happens, quote, in doctors' offices. The way the bill actually works out when you go to the regulation-making responsibility is that the intention there of course is that it be done by the College of Physicians and Surgeons in terms of accrediting these clinics. We indicated to the AMA that we would certainly be willing to clarify that in the legislation.

Another of their concerns, Mr. Speaker, was that they wanted to make sure that payment arrangements for physicians would be consistent with the AMA agreement as to principles, and we indicated that we would be prepared to work with them to fix that.

I would conclude at that point. I would just like to add, though, that there were three other points on which we agreed and, yes, Mr. Speaker, there were two on which we did not agree with respect to the legislation.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Health Care Facilities

MR. COUTTS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The costs of providing excellent health care are increasing dramatically, and although the government has reinvested billions of provincial dollars into program delivery, we still have waiting lists for many types of elective surgeries. Many people feel that the government has not reinvested in the hospital buildings themselves. Impressions of tearing down old hospitals and not opening closed operating theatres are on my constituents' minds. My question is to the Minister of Infrastructure. What has the government done to reinvest in health facilities?

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The province has spent nearly a billion dollars reinvesting in health facilities since '92-93. That close to a billion dollars is broken up into a number of either major projects or minor renovation and upgrading projects. Now, there are 52 major projects, meaning redeveloping, repairing, et cetera, in acute care, long-term care, and also in health units. As well, over that period of time, there have been 224 projects, what we call not major projects but minor projects, where we've been adapting the facilities and reconfiguring to changing technology and also new program delivery in those facilities.

MR. COUTTS: Mr. Minister, what will happen to the infrastructure of our public system if Bill 11 passes? Will the province stop investing in health care buildings?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, we'll obviously continue to reinvest in health facilities in all corners of this province. It's very crucial. Small communities across this province, of course, are just as important as the major communities, and we have to take into consideration not only acute care services but also long-term care. Over the next three years, of course, the budget that we've tabled in the House calls for a further investment in all of these facilities of $324 million. So that's adding almost a third of a billion more to the billion that we've already put in.

MR. COUTTS: My last question to the Minister of Infrastructure: with the focus on investing in the service and not into bricks and mortar, how can Albertans be guaranteed that they will still have a world-class, publicly funded health care facilities infrastructure?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, the government and certainly the RHAs are doing an excellent job of working together to ensure the best care possible. To ensure the best care possible requires the best facilities possible in order to bring this programming to Albertans. I can certainly point to a number of exciting projects that have been completed in the province of Alberta. We have the very modern ICU at Foothills hospital. We have the burn unit at the University of Alberta, one of only three or four in the whole world, and it's right here in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

We have a number of redeveloping projects in every corner of the province. We have the new hospital in Drumheller. There's High Level. There's Stony Plain. We have long-term care facilities, an increase in beds in Camrose, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Edmonton, Calgary, and we will also be looking at those facilities in smaller communities that can be converted from acute care to long-term care to ensure that the seniors that live in those communities stay in those communities that they've built. That's what they want to see.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMITH: Mr. Speaker, if I can just take a very quick moment of the Assembly to supplement that, when members go through the estimates of the Alberta lottery fund down the road, they'll find that over 60 percent of the lottery fund is directed towards infrastructure, health expenditures, and education expenditures. So this government is very clearly committed to reinvesting not only lotto funds but of course a large portion of general revenue funds directly into communities throughout Alberta for the purposes of infrastructure and capital restoration.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Private Health Services

(continued)

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The chair of the Calgary regional health authority recently said that he agreed with critics that private surgical clinics face extra costs, but he trusts that private clinics will make their money back and more through efficiencies and economies of scale and save taxpayer dollars. My questions are to the Premier. Has the chair of the Calgary health authority shared this evidence with the Premier showing that private hospitals won't cost more?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that the chair of the Calgary regional health authority wasn't talking about private hospitals. If he was talking about private hospitals, he's talking about something that is specifically banned in Bill 11. He's talking about surgical clinics, and indeed there are surgical clinics operating today. There were 35, as I pointed out earlier, operating and charging facility fees under the watch of the then health minister, who's now the leader of the Liberal opposition.

Mr. Speaker, basically there are 47 clinics operating right now, and, yes, there has been some evidence – I think if the hon. member were to sit down and have a little chat with the chair of the Calgary regional authority, he will find out that there has been a demonstrable increase in the number of cataract surgeries done from when they were done solely in hospitals. Now that they're done almost solely in surgical clinics, it has reduced tremendously the pressure on full-scale hospitals.

That's what this bill is all about. It's about allowing regional health authorities to explore some options within the publicly funded system, Mr. Speaker, and it also puts some clear rules and regulations in place relative to contracting out. Those rules and regulations were never in place before. That's what it's all about. It's as simple as that.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is to the Premier. If the evidence exists, then why isn't cost-effectiveness a mandatory requirement in Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, it is. Again, if the hon. member needs another clinic – and I know he's an educated man. If he hasn't read the bill, I would encourage him to do so. If he has read the bill, then obviously he doesn't understand it, and I'll have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness explain it to him.

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I know that we're not supposed to quote directly from the legislation, which is now before the Assembly. There is a rather extensive section in Bill 11 which outlines the procedure that has to be gone through with respect to contracting. It refers to the overall responsibilities of the regional health authority to look at the overall cost benefit of the particular project to make sure that it meets standards with respect to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, approves the qualifications of physicians involved, and makes sure they are organized in a way that will provide good, safe care.

2:40

There is reference to a second level of approval, and that is, quote, the office of the minister, where there would have to be an indication of the contracts approved. This would be a second protection as far as the legislation is concerned. That's in the legislation, I think the hon. members across the way know, and that will be pointed out in more detail when we get to the legislation if they have to have it then.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: does the Premier agree with that chair of the Calgary health authority that the delivery of health care through private hospitals is nothing more than an experiment and the fact is that there's no real evidence that it's going to work?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, again the question is somewhat irrelevant because there is no mention anywhere of private hospitals or the promotion of private hospitals. As a matter of fact, the bill specifically, section 1, bans private hospitals. So what is he talking about?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, if I might. I think in the question and also the extra remarks made by the hon. opposition there is the inference that there is not a section in the legislation on this particular topic. I would like to reference for the hon. members – evidently they have not read it. Go to page 6, section 8(1), and then go through the subsections (1), (2), (3)(a) and (b), and then over on the next part, (c), (d), (e), and (f). That would get you along the road to understanding the coverage of this bill.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

Home Care

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A constituent of Calgary-Fort raised a personal concern about a situation that I think would apply to many Albertans. There is a concern about reliable and continuous home care services to their severely disabled adult son who is deaf and quadriplegic. While both parents have full-time work, too many times, due to the unavailability of timely services, the father has to take time off work without pay to help the son. The employer could not keep employment for the father. My question is to the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness. How do the home care services work through the government funding?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, home care services are available to our disabled population in the province, as they are to anyone who needs that type of service. In a general sense let me just say that the local regional health authorities are responsible for providing that service and for ensuring that it's there when it's needed by those who require it. Here in the province we have 17 of these regional health authorities who are working on this issue every day. The issue has also been addressed in the long-term care review report that was done by our colleague from Redwater, and there are some ongoing discussions with regard to the types of services being provided, the level of services being provided, and how some of those issues can be improved to provide even better services under home care. We're also going to be adding an additional $15 million to this program, which will benefit many of our disabled community members as well as others.

I should just point out that the number of hours that we now provide in terms of home care services has climbed about threefold, to the point where we're now providing approximately 6 million hours as compared to 2.3 million or so just a short while ago. There are a number of very valuable services that come under this area, Mr. Speaker, that the public should be even more aware of. That includes everything from nursing care to physical therapy care to occupational therapy and so on.

I'm hoping that if there is a specific constituent here that is being referred to, perhaps the member will let me know who that constituent is, and if I can be of some assistance or if the minister of health can be of assistance, then we'd be happy to look into the details for the member.

MR. CAO: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the same minister. Is there any consideration to encourage relatives to provide home care services for their loved ones?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, the home care policy under the department of Alberta Health and Wellness does not as such allow for the provision of payment to family members to become paid caregivers for specifically home care services. However, it is entirely possible that there might be some exceptional circumstances that warrant a review. I'm thinking in terms of locations in the province where perhaps a home care provider is not available and therefore could not be contracted for that service through a regional health authority. Certain areas that are what we call remote areas might possibly be considered under that particular issue.

However, on the other hand, I would just reiterate that this entire issue of home care services, which are extremely important to all Albertans, is being studied further as a result of some of the recommendations that came out of the long-term care review report that was recently authored by our colleague from Redwater. It is a valid question, an important one, and I want to assure the Member for Calgary-Fort and particularly the constituents for whom he's raising this issue that we are taking that issue under advisement and we are reviewing it further in the next few months.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, in a few seconds I will call upon the first of three members today to participate in Recognitions.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Provincial Minor Hockey Tournament

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past weekend the Edmonton Minor Hockey Association hosted the Edmonton/Calgary provincial hockey tournament 2000. Parents, fans, and participants had an opportunity to see a number of exciting and entertaining hockey games. As Albertans and hockey fans we should commend this group of young athletes who represented their cities in a sportsmanlike fashion. The games held at Clareview arena in northeast Edmonton featured games at the recreational federation level and were a tremendous success.

I'd like to thank the Edmonton Minor Hockey Association, the Minor Hockey Association of Calgary, and individual category directors who were instrumental in co-ordinating the games. These category directors and their volunteers were tremendous in planning and hosting the tournament: from Edmonton Jeannie Feader, peewee director; Betsy Turner, bantam director; George Pheasey, midget director; and from Calgary Perry Cavanagh, peewee director; Wayne Hansen, bantam director; and Paul Whitelaw, midget director. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the coaches and managers of the teams involved as well as the thousands of volunteers.

In a three-team sweep the peewees from St. Albert won, the midgets from Edmonton won, and the bantams from Edmonton won.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

2:50 Protection for Persons in Care Act

MR. DICKSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wanted to spend but a moment to recognize an excellent workshop that took place in Calgary on Wednesday, March 15, on the Protection for Persons in Care Act. An agent of mine attended that workshop, which was co-sponsored by the Alberta Association for Community Living, the Developmental Disabilities Resource Center of Calgary, and FAIRE, which is an acronym for Families Allied to Influence Responsible Eldercare.

Some of the key points raised in the course of that very important and interesting workshop were that the act really protects no one, that it is not much more than a reporting mechanism, and that the act is simply too narrow in scope to be effective. Those who attended found that there was no evidence that the act worked to safeguard vulnerable persons when they became institutionalized. There was a concern that the act didn't address substantive issues of abuse and that proving intent under the act is very difficult. Safeguards for vulnerable persons need to be multiple, not singular, in approach. Those are some of the concerns raised at that important conference.

Thank you.

Provincial Minor Soccer Tournament

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, Edmonton hosted the provincial minor soccer playoffs over this past weekend. Teams of young men and women from throughout Alberta came to the capital city and played like the champions they are. Thanks to the Edmonton Minor Soccer Association, officials, coaches, and corporate sponsor, Telus, for putting on a great tournament. Special recognition to the boys under-11 teams, particularly the gold medal winners from Sherwood Park; the silver medal team, Edmonton Kenilworth; and the team on which my son plays keeper, the bronze medal winning team, the Edmonton West Belmead Raiders.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo on a point of order.

Point of Order Ministerial Responsibilities

MR. DICKSON: Yes, Mr. Speaker, as an agent for the Official Opposition leader. This relates to the first set of questions asked . . .

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agent?

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to make the point I had authority to raise this.

The authority is Beauchesne 409(6), 410(10), and 412. This had to do with a question from the Official Opposition leader to the Premier with respect to a meeting and with respect to government policy. The question related to two ministers who allegedly participated in a meeting, and we were read parts of an e-mail message.

The authorities are clear that ministers are here to answer questions, not as witnesses to an event they've attended or participated in but to answer with respect to departments they have responsibilities for. The Minister of Resource Development got up to supplement the answer of the Premier. You, sir, dealt with this on April 28, 1999, or at least a similar situation. It can be referenced in Hansard, page 1317, where you made it abundantly clear at that time that questions and answers must focus on ministerial responsibilities.

Now, it may be that the Minister of Resource Development has much to say about a meeting he attended, as many of us have much to say about different meetings we attend. The issue was one of policy of the government with respect to inclusiveness or exclusiveness of consultations on the most important bill many of us have ever seen in this Legislative Assembly. I'd suggest, sir, that for the Minister of Resource Development to have attempted to supplement was as a witness, not as a responsible minister.

THE SPEAKER: On this point of order the hon. Minister of Resource Development.

DR. WEST: On this point of order. Mr. Speaker, if I had not risen at the time I did to retort to what had been alleged here in the Assembly, it would have damaged my ability to serve my constituents at home. There has been a very damaging statement made here of mistruth, misleading this Assembly.

If Hansard were taken from this Assembly and sent out to my constituents after what was said by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, then I think we don't have a point of order here, that it's close to a point of privilege. The hon. Leader of the Opposition insinuated that on March 9 we called a private, by invitation only meeting in the constituency of Vermilion-Lloydminster. Indeed, the Lloydminster Chamber of Commerce advertised in the Lloyd Times and the Meridian Booster a night with the Treasurer, Budget 2000. It was advertised openly and was put on by the Lloyd Chamber of Commerce. It was moderated by a Mr. Rob Saunders, and the chamber president chaired the meeting, Mrs. Glenda Elkow. All questions that night were in written form and through the moderator.

Now, I just don't understand how an individual can stand in this House and level frivolous and vexatious comments that are untrue without another member being able to stand and defend themselves in this Assembly. I know that you could say that I should have stood at the time and put a point of privilege in place, but this hon. member has put a point of order in here, and I have the right to stand up and address that point of order and defend my position in this House.

I would say that I deserve an apology as well as the hon. Provincial Treasurer for an abuse of this Assembly when people are trying to score political points on a sensitive issue in this province. I'm ashamed today, because over the years I in this Assembly have had lots of things said and alleged about me over periods of time, but this one here is an insult to my constituency and does – does – damage my ability to serve them unless this stands corrected.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Provincial Treasurer on this point of order.

MR. DAY: Yes, Mr. Speaker, further to the point of order. The apologies, in my view, should also go out to the people who were organizing this meeting and the people who were there. It was organized, as I understand it, by the Chamber of Commerce. It was advertised. It was a very good turnout, I might add, and people from all walks of life were there. The commentator and the person who chaired the meeting are to be commended for their neutrality. There were a number of questions related to a variety of issues, and the moderator actually took the time to read out almost every health question that was sent in. There was no censoring of any question. There was no sparing of any of the concerns that were brought from the floor.

There were people there who identified themselves as the so-called Friends of Medicare, which we actually all are a part of – we are all friends of medicare – from that actual group. There were people there wearing T-shirts which did not seem to be certainly complimentary of the government. Those people had questions sent in, read out, and answered. I had the opportunity to meet with them after the meeting and hear their concerns in detail, concerns which I took to the minister of health.

So this type of shabby, absolutely unconscionable approach – we heard the expression last week about a drive-by smear. The good people of this community of Lloydminster have been drive-by smeared, if that's a technical term, by the Leader of the Official Opposition, who has taken no conscience whatsoever to the hard work that they put in, to the very neutral way in which they handled this. I would hope that these members who are here would convey to their particular leader that they have insulted the good citizens of this particular community who did a fine job of putting on a public meeting.

[Mr. Dickson rose]

THE SPEAKER: You've already spoken on this point of order.

MR. DICKSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thought we had a question of privilege.

THE SPEAKER: No. There's no question of privilege raised that I'm aware of, but if there are any additional members who would like to participate on this point of order, we'll recognize them. [interjection] I'm sorry, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. I'll recognize you.

MR. WHITE: Sir, obviously the member opposite was quite upset, but being quite upset in this House . . .

THE SPEAKER: On the point of order that was raised.

MR. WHITE: Sir, I contend that it is not a point of order. There are many people who get upset, but a point of order is really quite specific. The objection from the other side was with no citations whatsoever. [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder has the floor.

MR. WHITE: Sir, it's no point of privilege, up to the alleged . . .

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, please. There was no point of privilege raised, but you should know that I do agree with you. There was no point of order. I say that specifically, because in essence the point of order being raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo – it certainly was not outside the competence of a minister of the government to answer the question. Surely if it has to do with the meeting, it had nothing to do with the administrative competence of anybody in the government, and the question itself was outside the same argument he used for ruling it out that had to be used for ruling out the first of the questions. So, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, your arguments have certainly swayed the chair in upholding your thoughts.

Point of Order Provoking Debate

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, with trepidation I raise the second point of order, and I'm not sure whether I'm going to have more support from colleagues on my second point of order similar to the support I had on the first one. This one will be very brief. It has to do with the second set of questions from the Leader of the Official Opposition. The authority would again be the old favourite, Beauchesne 408(2), about answers not provoking debate.

3:00

The Premier has yet again suggested that the Leader of the Official Opposition allowed private facilities doing overnight services in reference to 47 clinics. This has been raised before. It's abundantly clear that the Leader of the Opposition had never at any time during her term as a minister of the Crown of this province sanctioned private hospitals or clinics doing overnight stays, which is very different from surgical one-day stays. The Premier's repetition and a republication time and time again of this inaccuracy I think is something that requires an admonition or some intervention from the chair.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader on this point of order.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At best it's an attempt to clarify the misinformation that comes out day after day in the preambles to questions. There's no point of order here. The Premier is quite validly responding to questions in this House dealing with the whole question of surgical facilities and what surgical facilities have been operational in this province and when they became operational. The opposition on a daily basis tries to indicate that the government supports private hospitals, which is, of course, absolutely false. The bill says no private hospitals. So the characterization that has been made in preambles and throughout questions and in the petitions that are tabled about the support for private hospitals or being opposed to public health care is absolutely wrong.

Coming to the specifics of this question, the member opposite should well be aware that many surgical facilities, many clinics have been opened in this province, and many of them were opened during the tenure of the now Leader of the Opposition when she was health minister, and it's not inappropriate for the Premier of this province to refer to that in response to some of the questions relating to private clinics being opened in this province. I fail to understand what he's even trying to clarify, but at most it's a point of clarification rather than a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, there is the benefit of Hansard with respect to this, and I would like to quote. It's the response from the Premier with respect to the text that gave rise to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo rising.

Mr. Speaker, without wanting to sound facetious, if the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition wants to know what a hospital is, I would suggest that she go to the University hospital, or to the Royal Alexandra hospital, or to the Grey Nuns hospital, but this leader of the Liberal opposition knows what surgical clinics are all about. She likes to say that there were no publicly funded, privately delivered surgery happening when she was the minister of health. But there was and just don't take my word for it.

This 1991 Calgary Herald story talks about the 35 private surgical centres that existed in Alberta then doing everything from cataract surgery to plastic surgery to ear surgery. The headline says: Patients choose private treatment; growing ranks are bypassing hospitals for surgical clinics. Well, maybe we should call them Nancy's clinics.

There's absolutely nothing in the quotation in here that basically says that one individual did certain things. There's a reference to an article in the paper, and that article was tabled, as I recall. I would like to caution that the referring to individuals' names and personalities, such as Nancy's clinics, is really not appropriate.

There's really no point of order, and I'm not even sure it was a point of clarification other than that which was given by the chair.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Government Bills and Orders

head: Second Reading

Bill 17

Fair Trading Amendment Act, 2000

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

MR. DUCHARME: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 17 contains three proposed amendments to the Fair Trading Act, which came into effect on September 1, 1999. These amendments will fix a couple of drafting errors to this act and rectify a problem that occurred after the act was passed by the Legislature.

Section 43(e) as it is now written means that a regulation has to be amended every time a new reporting agency sets up business. By changing "and" to "or" in this section we are ensuring that reporting agencies are covered by the act as soon as they are established.

Section 109 of the act currently refers to a collector as being a person. Legally "person" includes corporate bodies, which is not what was originally intended. We are amending the act to make it clear that we only license individuals in this area.

Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, creditors don't pursue debtors who don't repay their debts because the debtors can't be found or the debt is too small to be worth pursuing. It was always intended that credit-reporting agencies could keep this information on a debtor's record for six years, as is the case in all other provinces. An amendment to the Alberta limitations act will come into force on March 1, 2001, that affects section 45(3)(b), so this type of information will have to be purged from the records of Alberta debtors after two years. If we don't make the change proposed here, the credit industry will have to treat Albertans differently from all other Canadians and charge them more for credit.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I encourage all members to vote in favour of Bill 17, the Fair Trading Amendment Act, 2000.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I stand to speak to Bill 17, the Fair Trading Amendment Act, I understand by looking at it that it is only around changing and clarifying three different sections in this. It was brought forward on September 1, 1999. As far as can be determined, the amendments are minor.

Looking at the "and" and the "or," I can only see that it must have been a mistake at the particular time. Under section 43(e) it's part of the credit and personal reports section of the act. As the legislation currently stands, the "reporting agency"

- (i) furnishes reports for gain or profit or on a reciprocal non-profit basis, and
- (ii) is designated by the regulations.

The amendment would change this "and" to an "or." It means that a reporting agency that fulfills the first set of criteria, set out in subclause (i), can be considered as an official reporting agency without being designated by the regulations. It also means that the minister can designate a person as a reporting agency without having to meet the said criteria in subclause (i).

Now, as we look at the next one, section 45, it's also the credit and personal reports section of the act. It deals with the information that cannot be included in a report. Subsection (b) deals with reporting debt. As it currently stands, actions, accounts, or debts cannot be reported if they "cannot be pursued because of the expiration of limitation periods." The amendment clarifies the term "limitation period," and as I'm listening to the hon. member that presented Bill 17, it's a drive towards being consistent with other provinces and making it consistent throughout Canada. I can commend what's being done there.

Then going to the six years, the amendment clarifies the term "limitation period" by stating that unfavourable information about a debt cannot be reported if it has been more than six years since the last payment on the debt or more than six years since the debt was incurred. The amendment section only amends "debt" and deletes "actions" and "accounts." So with that one it's quite obvious. I agree with it, and I understand by making some inquiries into that one that this seems to be the proposed and proper way of doing it.

Under section 109(b) the amendment changes "a person" to the term "an individual" in the definition of "collector" in the collection practices section of the act. It's interesting, though, that the previous subsection (a) defining "collection agency," in which the term "a person" is also used, is not similarly changed. So maybe that can be clarified to our side before proceeding.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will sit.

3:10

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll just take this opportunity to rise and talk about some of the items that are being changed in the Fair Trading Amendment Act, 2000, under the title Bill 17. The main thing that is important about this is that as bills get put into place and they get passed through the Legislature and the implementation of those bills starts to be worked through the system, we see in a lot of cases that the wording that was put into the legislation doesn't ring true in application. We see here now basically three different amendments to the Fair Trading Act of 1999 that will help to make that bill work more clearly and work more in line with the kinds of initiatives that were intended when the Fair Trading Act was passed.

Mr. Speaker, what we see is that the basic sections go through and talk about clarity and making sure that the intention is true. The inclusion is not there in the first part as we look at how we identify reporting agencies and base that on the types of reports that they must furnish. It's very clear as you read it and look at the intent that this correction has to be made and has to be more clearly stipulated, and the appropriate changes are being made under the amendment through section 43.

As we get into looking at the others, I think the member has talked about the need for clarifying the consistency across Canada. As we look at these issues of reporting, I know that I've had a number of cases come to my constituency office where people are trying to get clarification on how their data are reported under different credit acts. They're talking about situations that exist as they've traveled across Canada and lived in different provinces, and they're concerned that some of the things that are happening here in Alberta or, in some cases, in other provinces are not consistent with kind of the standard or the norm that everybody expects. So I think that as the government goes through and makes its changes in section 45, that brings about the kind of consistency that'll make understanding and acceptance of these kinds of reporting procedures much more common across Canada and to have our province now essentially take the initiative to come in line with the rest of the provinces. By changing to the six years, this is the kind of thing that will make that consistency and will provide for the general acceptance and the general ease of understanding for all Albertans or all Canadians as they travel from one province to the other.

The last part of it then deals again with another clarification that looks at how we're going to separate actions or reports that are effectively being reported on individuals as opposed to the more inclusive generic term "person," which would include corporate and individual data holders. I think the effect that we see here now is to really clarify and separate out the individual from the all-inclusive persons type of approach to this. It essentially gives a different standard of expectation than for private individuals as opposed to the all-inclusive corporate entity. So I think this is basically making our legislation much more consistent and much easier to understand and probably much more usable in the end.

Mr. Speaker, I think it would be appropriate for us all to accept this legislation, and with those few comments I'll take my seat. Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Just a couple of observations with Bill 17, the Fair Trading Amendment Act, 2000. Part of what's happening, particularly with section 3, is the notion of wrestling with the fact that when we march bravely down the road of creating a new limitation-of-actions regime in Alberta, in some respects we're out of step with some other jurisdictions that may not have moved as quickly or as progressively as Alberta has. I suppose one of the concerns had been – and we see it now in hindsight. You know, it's interesting how one's perspective gets even sharper reflecting back in time, but remember that our limitation-of-actions regime in Alberta changed not in the usual way through a government bill but through a private member's bill.

Now, the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake may say: so what's this got to do with me; I can't be responsible for the fact that the government of the day made a very fundamental change to the law of the land without letting people know by bringing in a private member's bill, that then was sort of partway along the process adopted by government and went on to become law. Then after the fact we discovered that one of the most basic rights, the right to be able to bring an action, may be affected perhaps to the prejudice of a number of Alberta individuals without adequate notice.

You know, I suspect that if perhaps the government had been more up front with the limitation act by bringing it in as a government bill, properly signaling its intention, we would have been able then to deal with some of the consequential changes like the one that we're doing here with section 3.

That isn't, when all is said and done, an argument necessarily against the change that's proposed. The proposal would be in terms of what kind of information is going to be proscribed, the kinds of things that will not be part of a reporting agency report. We've changed this from simply saying that those matters that are stale dated couldn't be the subject of a current action – the substitution is to simply say: if “more than 6 years has elapsed.” That used to be our limitation-of-actions provision for debt of course, six years from the time that the debt arose, unlike the two-year provision for most tort claims.

The other observation I'd just make is that when I see a bill like this come forward, even one that you know there's no good reason we shouldn't accept it on its merits – I think it does point out that we can still do a better job in terms of passing bills the first time through. I think this reminds us that if it takes a little more time to make sure we've got it right, it's vastly fairer to Albertans. It's vastly more efficient, and I think it's just a far superior way of making legislation to try and make sure we identify these things the first time round.

I recognize that no government achieves perfection. This is in no way to diminish the hard work that the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake has done around the issue. I give him full credit for that. I think sometimes in our – and I say “our” generously, because as a member of the opposition I'm not part of the internal bill review process the government goes through. I wish I were. I'm still waiting for that invitation. You know, we have these little mailbox cubbyholes in the caucus office.

MS CALAHASEN: Would you join us?

MR. DICKSON: Do you want me?

Mr. Speaker, I was making the point that as a Calgary MLA sometimes I don't get a lot of mail up here, and it's always quite exciting to go through it. I rush to my little mail cubbyhole to see if there's an invitation there to join my friend from Calgary-Glenmore on the government bill review process, but I haven't received that invitation yet. Because I haven't been invited to that very exciting, stimulating, energizing process, I'm stuck here at second reading having to try and make some of these observations when maybe I'd sooner be talking about another bill.

I've made those comments about the process. I'm going to run back and check my box again to see if I've got an invitation. I think that committee is still meeting on bills. We may be close to the end of the bills – I don't know – but I'm still waiting for that invitation.

It doesn't have to be gilt edged. It doesn't even have to be in an envelope, Mr. Speaker. I'd take a handwritten note just passed across the aisle here. In any event, while I'm waiting for it, I make that observation.

3:20

I compliment the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for his persistence and hard work, but I say that I think we can always encourage government to do better. I think we've got to try and reduce the number of errors that we see in government legislation, the number of things that haven't been adequately addressed. The Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake has done a darn good job. We see ministers coming in with 30-page remedial bills a year or two after they're passed. He probably has a better record than many on his front bench. I wanted to make those observations, Mr. Speaker.

Despite all of that, I will be voting in support of Bill 17, but I hope that someone back there in the Annex or someone in the legislative bureau takes note and maybe puts a little note above their desk: this time we're going to try to get whatever bill I'm working on right the first time.

Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 10 Securities Amendment Act, 2000

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

MR. HLADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today at second reading of Bill 10, the Securities Amendment Act, 2000.

The amendments that are before the Legislative Assembly today represent another important initiative of this government to ensure that our capital market continues to attract and encourage investment in Alberta by providing for a regulatory framework that is responsive to the needs of both industry and investors.

Last March the Alberta, Vancouver, Toronto, and Montreal stock exchanges announced a restructuring proposal under which the senior equity market would be relocated to the Toronto Stock Exchange, all derivative trading would move to the Montreal exchange, and the Alberta and Vancouver stock exchanges would merge to form a Canadian junior exchange. The first step of this restructuring came to fruition on November 29, 1999, when the Canadian Venture Exchange, or CDNx, commenced operation as the Canadian junior exchange.

The Canadian Venture Exchange has quickly established itself as the Canadian market for junior equities. In its first three months of operation the Canadian Venture Exchange has significantly exceeded the trading volumes of both its predecessors. In February alone the Canadian Venture Exchange set and surpassed record levels for both the volume of shares traded and the number of transactions conducted through the facilities of the exchange on four separate occasions.

Under the merger process the CDNx lost most of the powers granted to the Alberta and Vancouver stock exchanges under their special acts. One of the primary purposes of these amendments is to restore these powers to the Canadian Venture Exchange to give it the statutory authority to regulate the operations and business conduct of its member shareholders and their representatives. These powers will also be extended to recognize self-regulatory organizations such as the Investment Dealers Association, or IDA. The Canadian Venture Exchange and IDA have recently agreed to consolidate all member regulation responsibilities under the IDA, while the CDNx concentrates on market regulation.

These amendments will give the Canadian Venture Exchange and the IDA and any other recognized self-regulatory organization the power to regulate the operations of current and former members, regulate the business conduct of current and former members and their representatives under member regulations, issue subpoenas to enforce attendance at hearings, seek the appointment of a receiver manager over members' business affairs, enforce decisions by registering them with the court, as well as give both the right to appear and make representations at any appeal of a decision of CDNx or the IDA to the commission or the Court of Appeal. These amendments will establish a flexible regulatory framework under which members of the CDNx and the IDA can conduct their business activities while safeguarding the interests of the investing public inside and outside of Alberta.

The establishment of the Canadian Venture Exchange as a national junior equity market illustrates the increasing globalization of capital markets and the proliferation of cross-border relationships between buyers, sellers, and exchanges. Trading in securities and exchange contracts is no longer confined to traditional exchanges on the trading floor but is now completed electronically through remote-access computer terminals accessing an electronic trading platform.

Traditional exchanges are having to reorganize their operations in order to compete with the proliferation of alternative trading systems. This has also required a fundamental rethinking by securities regulators as to effectively regulate the activities and operations of all market participants in their jurisdictions whether traditional exchanges or new alternative trading systems.

The commission is seeking additional powers under part 4 of the Securities Amendment Act to require that anyone wishing to operate a quotation or trade-reporting system in Alberta be recognized and to deem an alternative trading system to be an exchange in appropriate circumstances. These additional powers will ensure that the commission is positioned to respond to changing needs of the capital markets arising out of the activities of alternative trading systems.

The commission is also working with other members of the Canadian Securities Administrators to develop a regulatory framework under which traditional markets such as exchanges and new markets such as alternative trading systems can operate. In July 1999 the members of the CSA published for comment a discussion paper and draft rules regulating marketplace operations and establishing trading rules for market participants.

The remainder of the amendments before us today are intended to update, clarify, and harmonize provisions of the Securities Act with securities legislation in other jurisdictions. This is particularly important as joint regulatory oversight of the Canadian Venture Exchange lies both with the Alberta and the British Columbia securities commissions, and appeals from a decision of the exchange could be made to one or both of the commissions at different times.

I wish to highlight several amendments, beginning with one that will significantly enhance investor protection. The first is the introduction of a requirement to "file a personal information form," or PIF, with the commission. Issuers seeking a listing on CDNx must ensure that each senior officer, director, promoter, and significant shareholder of the issuer files a personal information form with the exchange. Any new officer or director is also required to submit a personal information form to the exchange. CDNx uses this information to determine whether these individuals are acceptable management candidates under the continued listing process.

The only recourse available to the exchange if the individual fails to accurately complete the personal information form is to find that individual to be unacceptable and to disqualify them from acting as an officer or a director. This new requirement will permit the commission to take enforcement action against the individual for failing to provide full and accurate disclosure in the personal information form, just as the B.C. Securities Commission is able to do under section 90 of the B.C. Securities Act today.

Introducing the concept of "Alberta securities laws," which includes the Securities Act, the regulations and rules made under the act and any decision of the commission or executive director to replace arcane references to the act and the regulations.

Changing all references of "salesman" to "salespersons."

Replacing the requirement in the seed capital exemptions in sections 65 and 107 of the act to provide a "statutory declaration," changing it to a "written acknowledgment" to reflect a long-standing commission practice already today.

Finally an amendment to section 110.2 to fix a drafting glitch by requiring that an offerer be a reporting issuer at the time a bid circular is filed in order to have free trading shares issued to the target shareholders.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for the support of the members in second reading of Bill 10, the Securities Amendment Act, 2000.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The object of Bill 10, as the Member for Calgary-Mountain View has put forward, is to restore powers previously available to the Alberta Stock Exchange to the new Canadian Venture Exchange. There have been some little premerger, postmerger glitches along the way, but, you know, what's really remarkable is the success that the new Canadian junior exchange has achieved. I think it's worth while commenting for just a moment on that success.

3:30

Mr. Speaker, the initial roster of the Canadian Venture Exchange is made up of some 2,500 venture companies previously listed on both the Alberta and Vancouver stock exchanges. Upon completion of the Canadian capital market restructuring process it's expected that this number will grow considerably and that there will be regional service centres in at least four cities: Calgary, Vancouver, Winnipeg, and Toronto. Currently, only two of these four centres, Calgary and Vancouver, are operational.

By the end of the first quarter of the year 2000 the junior listings on the over-the-counter Canadian dealing system, which is now part of the Toronto exchange, are also going to be brought into the Canadian Venture Exchange. Now, that's going to bring, I think, remarkable growth to what's already proven to be a rapidly expanding stock exchange.

Mr. Speaker, on March 2 of this year the Canadian Venture Exchange reported a record-setting day, reaching a new high on the index of 4,026.61, the value of trades of $258 million, and the number of trading transactions exceeding 52,200. The very next day, on March 3, 2000, the Canadian Venture Exchange broke its own record for the number of trading transactions with 52,281.

So this has really been quite a success in spite of some of the problems that you might expect when a venture of this magnitude is being undertaken. I think it speaks volumes to the foresight of the men and women who've been involved in planning the transition, who about a year and a half ago brought the idea to conclusion that there should be this restructuring, particularly, Mr. Speaker, when you think that it was only just a year ago almost to the day that the restructuring plan was formalized.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

So we're happy to see that success and glad to be looking at legislation that's going to further that success. I think we do have to keep in mind that Alberta still has some problems in terms of attracting capital. We can't understate the importance of a healthy and effective capital market here in Alberta. This would help stimulate job growth and economic development. We need continuing growth in investment, and I think a healthy junior exchange will be a big part of that.

The last fiscal year, 1998-99, capital in the amount of $8.6 billion was raised through various offerings, mutual funds and private placements. This represents about 9.4 percent of the total capital raised in Canada. This in and of itself provided a strong foundation for the Canadian Venture Exchange to build upon, but I'm afraid that it's not enough. We still need greater access to venture capital for junior companies and start-up firms here in Alberta. Business and industry report to the government of Alberta through the growth summit that the formation and expansion of small and medium-sized enterprises have limited access to appropriate sources of capital. There are continuing gaps in the availability of equity capital seed in early stage situations where capital of less than half a million dollars is required and commercialization or growth situations requiring amounts from, let's say, $500,000 to $5 million.

Only 5 percent of the total investment of venture capital occurs here in Alberta. This is according to Alberta Innovation and Science in their annual report, 1998-99. Only 2 percent of the risk capital under management in Canada as of 1998 is managed here in Alberta, according to the same government department. We have to do something to get these numbers up, and I believe that a strong junior exchange headquartered in Calgary will help accomplish the goal of increasing access to capital and moving up the amount of capital that is under management by Alberta firms.

Now, Bill 10 does leave a number of issues regarding the operation of the exchange to regulation and to rule-making by subordinate organizations particularly concerned about the breadth and scope of section 196 in Bill 10, in the amended section. Of course we'll be talking more about this in committee.

Now, while the Official Opposition recognizes that the use of rule making and regulation making have resulted in an Alberta Securities Commission that is more flexible and accommodating to changing market conditions and the move towards harmonization and integration of capital markets across Canada, we need to ensure that the use of regulation and rule making is conducive to a climate of ensuring that the public and stakeholders are informed and are provided with an opportunity to provide input. We recognize that the Alberta Securities Commission has been very accommodating in seeking input from stakeholders, and we are hopeful that this open and accountable approach will continue.

Previously in the Assembly I've had an opportunity to talk about the success. I think I would be doing a disservice to some businessmen and women in this province if I didn't mention some of the warning signs that are also out there. Just recently I was approached by two businessmen who came to me with their story, their experience with the Alberta Securities Commission, which really, from their perspective, was one of overregulation, lots of red tape, lots of interference in the marketplace, which resulted personally to them and to their colleague investors in a loss of a considerable amount of money and, more importantly, a loss of what has proven to be a viable business to Alberta owners. The particular business that they're in isn't really important, and the circumstances don't need to be put on record here in the Assembly because there is an ongoing judicial matter, as well, regarding this firm and their experience. So I don't really want to interfere in that process.

I do think it's fair to say that not everything is sunshine and roses in the equity and capital business in this province. As strong as the economy is and as successful as the CDNx has become, the reality is that there are some businesses that still don't get access to the capital that they need and some businesses which get access to the capital or who depend on being listed in the stock exchange for access to capital who run into what they see as a brick wall. We are supportive of the new junior exchange. We're supportive of this bill, but there are a few issues that need to be resolved.

Now, I did say that I'll spend some more time talking about regulation when we get to the committee stage on this bill. At this point in time suffice to say that a lot of the bill talks about disclosure and openness and transparency in the system, and I think what we could use in this Assembly is a little dose of that ourselves when it comes to the regulations sections of not just Bill 10 but so many bills that we have before the Assembly.

Now, most of Bill 10 and in fact most of the Securities Act in Alberta does not stand alone. It is in part modeled after the experience of other jurisdictions, and other jurisdictions in part model their legislation after what's going on here in Alberta. There is a good degree of sharing across the country, and there are amendments similar to Bill 10 being debated in British Columbia. There is already similar legislation which governs Ontario and I believe Manitoba and Quebec. So what we have is a growing confluence of thinking about how we should organize capital markets in this country and how we should regulate them. I think this is important because we often talk about the global nature of business, and we forget, while we're talking about the global nature of business, that we have to pay a lot of attention to make sure that we don't have interprovincial barriers and inconsistencies which get in the way of business doing what it does best; that is, innovating and creating wealth, Mr. Speaker.

I'm happy to see that there is some integration going on across the country, and I'm pleased to see Bill 10 come so quickly into the House after we dealt with the enabling legislation a short while ago. I'd like to thank the Member for Calgary-Mountain View for his efforts to keep me informed. Also, I'd like to thank the people that work in both the commission and the exchange who are also working hard to make sure that members on both sides of the Assembly are informed about the hopes and aspirations of the exchange but, more importantly, about the details of this legislation as it was being developed.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

3:40

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to rise this afternoon and make a couple of comments about Bill 10. We've heard both the Member for Calgary-Mountain View and the Member for Edmonton-Glenora talk about how this has been such a successful move, trying to combine the venture exchanges across Canada into one in Calgary. I think it has been really a tribute to the business community and the investment community across Canada that they saw this as an opportunity to bring to Canada some kind of a co-ordination and a geographic focus but also a momentum and a critical mass focus so that we can get the kind of financing for the businesses that are going to start.

Mr. Speaker, this act is going to change some of the issues that are in the original bill and provide us with some more clarification and some operational ease in how the community does operate. We hear that it's going to bring in a lot of definition and effective guidelines for some of the agencies that are there in terms of how they operate, how they report, how they get enforcement. These are the kinds of things that have to be clearly defined for Canadian investment to get the takeoff that we need if we're going to help to diversify our economy here in Alberta and also participate more fully and more equally in the international financial markets and the international business markets that result from the investments that are developed through those security ventures.

The interesting thing, Mr. Speaker, is that we always hear a lot of people talk about this new Canadian Venture Exchange being the, quote, junior market. I think it's more appropriate to make sure we always use the term Venture Exchange. This is where new companies get started, where new companies get the takeoff that allows them to get established in a public corporate environment and get the financing that is necessary to move into a stable, long-term functioning either local business, national business, or in a lot of cases international business.

We hear a lot of cases of entrepreneurs now seeking out new ways to finance their ideas to get them put in place. If they're going to be able to approach some of these investment opportunities, a stock offering through the Canadian Venture Exchange, they're going to have to have that confidence that exists, that shows that our Venture Exchange does operate fairly, does operate openly, and does provide them with a degree of predictability and openness in how they deal with getting their finances and getting their company developed into a going concern.

So I think it's quite appropriate that we look on this as the true Venture Exchange in Canada. I don't think there's anything junior about the venture. It's the whole idea of a different type of capital. It's a different type of business environment. The risk levels are different than in the more stable kind of environment. In a lot of cases this is where the U.S. stock market, the Dow-Jones, and the Nasdaq worked for a long time, although the Nasdaq now has developed to where it has a lot of long-term, fully financed, very stable companies on it as well, but it's still in many ways the venture capital exchange in the U.S., if we take out some of the more regional exchanges that exist down there as well. I think this is the kind of approach that we're now going to have to provide this financing.

I want to encourage the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View to keep this moving and to make sure that we do get these issues clearly defined and put in place so that that degree of confidence and fair play can be recognized by the businesses in Canada that are going to float their offerings through the Canadian Venture Exchange. To the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View: this is a good bill, keep up the good work, and let's keep our Venture Exchange moving.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View to conclude debate.

MR. HLADY: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll just say to the people who spoke: thank you very much; I appreciate the questions and the concerns raised. If they're rather minor, that's great. I'll address them during committee.

Thank you.

[Motion carried unanimously; Bill 10 read a second time]

Bill 13
Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2000

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

MR. HLADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I'm pleased to rise today and move second reading of Bill 13, the Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2000.

Before I outline the purpose of the bill, Mr. Speaker, I would like to provide some historical background for the proposed legislative framework contained in the Energy Statutes Amendment Act. I'd also like to thank the opposition for their continued work with the EUB in regards to making sure that they're feeling comfortable with what's going forward here.

The background, Mr. Speaker. Starting in 1994 with the passage of Bill 5, the orphan well program as it exists today was first implemented. The legislative regulatory framework which this created was considered a positive first step to improving the management of energy industry abandonment liabilities. The orphan well program at that time was developed in response to concerns raised about the growing number of ownerless, or orphan, wells. However, it was recognized by all as being the initial step towards a comprehensive orphan well program and was subsequently passed unanimously by this Legislature. The one concern which was raised by the House at that time was that the program did not go far enough and that in particular it did not address pipelines, facilities, or matters respecting reclamation.

Mr. Speaker, the House is aware that the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board administers a unique Alberta program, referred to as the orphan well program, which sees the petroleum industry pay for the abandonment of orphan wells, that have no financially viable, responsible owner. As the Alberta petroleum industry matures, increasing numbers of oil and gas facilities, not only wells but also pipelines, gas plants, batteries, satellites, and compressor stations are reaching the end of their operational lives. It is critical to the public interest that these facilities are properly abandoned and the sites reclaimed. Unless the owners of these facilities are known and held responsible and industry funding is in place for orphan facilities, the costs could be passed on to the public purse.

With this in mind and building on the success of the orphan well program, in 1996 industry stakeholders, namely CAPP, SEPAC, the EUB, and other government departments endorsed the expansion of the orphan well program. The stakeholders agreed that the next logical step with regard to the development of the program would be to extend the scope of the industry-funded program to include the reclamation of well sites and the abandonment and reclamation of pipelines and upstream production facilities. This will be known as the orphan well program.

A joint industry/government committee has developed the proposed legislative changes contained in Bill 13. Mr. Speaker, these amendments have been reviewed in detail with oil and gas industry associations and have been endorsed by the board of governors of the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers and the Small Explorers and Producers Association of Canada. As well, a number of interested landowner and surface rights groups have been provided with information regarding the expansion of the orphan well program and the proposed legislation and are supportive of the proposed changes being put forth here today.

3:50

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to expand the orphan well program to the broader orphan program supported by the strong industry orphan fund and to protect the Alberta public from bearing the financial burden for the abandonment and site reclamation of orphan wells, pipelines, and upstream facilities. The objective is to minimize the potential number of orphan wells, pipelines, and facilities and to effectively manage and minimize their liability.

Mr. Speaker, this is to be accomplished by either clarifying or providing the EUB with the authority to expand the orphan fund to cover abandonment and reclamation of wells, pipelines, and most production facilities; provide for licensing of new and existing upstream oil and gas production facilities; impose responsibilities for abandonment on parties responsible for facilities and pipelines; regulate the transfer of licences for facilities and pipelines to prevent the transfer of high-liability properties to financially nonviable parties; expand the annual orphan fund levy to include inactive facilities and abandonment and reclamation of well sites and unreclaimed well sites; collect and administer abandonment and reclamation deposits for wells, facilities, and pipelines. The authority of the EUB is not being expanded to include regulation of reclamation but only to provide a one-window service to industry for the collection of security deposits, which is supported by AEUB.

Mr. Speaker, the amendments contained in the Energy Statutes Amendment Act can be categorized as follows: operational; matters pertaining to cost recovery and deposits; licensing and responsibility; fund administration and enforcement. A significant change is to be found . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: Question.

MR. HLADY: This is very important, hon. member.

. . . in terms of regulatory enforcement against parties that avoid their abandonment responsibilities. The current legislative provisions allow the EUB to assign personal liability for well abandonment costs to persons in control of a corporation. This, in effect, has meant a piercing of the corporate veil. The actual administration of this provision has proven both ineffective and inefficient. The requirement to pursue personal liability has resulted in limited success but has contributed greatly to the time required to actually abandon wells where the licensee no longer has the means. In some instances landowners have been faced with significant delays in the abandonment of wells and the reclamation of their land.

The piercing of the corporate veil is to be replaced with provisions that will enable the EUB to hold accountable individuals with corporate authority for actions that result in serious noncompliance or outstanding debt. The companies in which these individuals occupy a position of control will face serious restrictions on activities regulated by the EUB. The objective, Mr. Speaker, is responsible resource development by responsible corporations in Alberta. As well, the EUB will have enhanced authority to garnishee revenue from a licensee that chooses to disregard an outstanding debt to the EUB or to the orphan fund.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a good-news story for government, industry, and private landowners as it will minimize the risk to the public purse; strike a balance between future growth and the need to manage the liabilities; protect landowners from inheriting ownerless, unused, and unreclaimed oil and gas sites; provide a level playing field so that compliant companies do not bear the costs associated with liability left by noncompliant companies; expedite the abandonment and reclamation of orphan sites; increase public safety and environmental protection.

Mr. Speaker, the oil and gas industry will be assuming additional financial responsibility for the abandonment and reclamation of wells, pipelines, and upstream oil and gas facilities that would otherwise be left for the public purse. I think we should commend the oil and gas industry for coming forward and acting responsibly on behalf of their industry.

Mr. Speaker, I now welcome comments from the members on this bill and look forward to their subsequent support of the changes to the Energy Statutes Amendment Act.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It really, truly is a pleasure to rise and to be able to address this bill. This is precisely the kind of bill and the method of getting to a bill that should stand as a model in this Legislature. Not only did the member opposite consult the opposition prior to bringing the bill forward but sought on a number of occasions to have any difficulties that the bill would bring brought to the opposition so the opposition could see that there may be some problems with it. He certainly extended the open invitation to modify the bill or at least to speak of modification of the bill prior to introduction to save that difficulty that does often happen and is a major consternation: hurrying and scurrying around to find what could be done to rectify a drafting error, perhaps, or an error of intent.

This particular piece of legislation was a long time coming, in that it had a great deal of consultation with the industry. In fact, the industry is to a great deal responsible for drafting and redrafting the sections of the act in order to get to what we have today. The short history of this kind of legislation should be reviewed in the province of Alberta, too, in that if it's not unique, then it must be close to unique, if you can be close to unique I suppose. But in this member's view, it is unique that the joint industry and government initiative has been improved upon.

Certainly the original position of the government of Alberta, and rightly so, was that the government and therefore the people of the province of Alberta are the owners of the resource that is extracted. The people of Alberta are not those that do the extraction and therefore cause the owners of the surface rights some difficulty with unclean sites, sites that are contaminated, sites that for various reasons are left in a state that they really should not be. This government quite some time ago decided that it would be in the best interest of all if the industry took some responsibility as a whole for wells and oil sands projects and all the facilities from production, through all private lands and public lands, to deliverance of crude oil and gas in various forms to a refinery.

The interest was in the interests of all of us citizens, including the companies that are good operators that would never consider abandonment of a well unless they had done a proper cleanup, or if they suspended the operations of a well that required being temporarily shut in for whatever reason, they would always leave that site in very, very good condition. There are of course those operators, as occurs in any free market, where whether by design or by error or by financial difficulty, a site is left in a state that simply is below standard.

The fundamentals of this bill are that the industry would in effect finance the policing of itself. Of course, the policeman would still be that independent body, the AEUB, but aided and abetted by the industry. The bill is a modification and a strengthening of the Oil and Gas Conservation Act. This bill, being the Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2000, goes a long ways to satisfying the needs of all citizens about all of the facilities, including not just wells but all of the facilities – pipelines, batteries, and the like – that go along from initial extraction to final production of oil and gas in this province.

I'm told that there are some 5 million dollars in the orphan fund account at the moment, which is very healthy. In fact, there is some regulation, I believe – if it isn't enacted now, it shortly will be – to reduce the cost per well, because the project is working very well, working as envisaged and working to the extent that a reduction so as not to get the fund too great is in order for the payees or the industry applicants.

The final agreement in this matter was achieved, I believe, in the act. In 1992 there was an agreement in the industry for down hole abandonment and then subsequent amendments to the Oil and Gas Conservation Act in 1994. In 1996 there was a further agreement to expand the program because the philosophy obviously had worked well, in the management it had worked well, and it was brought forward to this point.

4:00

The bill is specifically designed, the best this member can tell, having been allowed the opportunity to review a three-column study of the changes in the act, specifically to limit the potential liability for expanding the orphan well program and by giving the AEUB enhanced and new authority in the following key areas.

First, in licensing facilities: the cost of new licensing and restricting those new licences to those that have in fact performed in the past, not just corporations but those individuals and major players in those facilities that did not meet the standard.

Secondly, in the assignment of responsibilities for abandoned facilities and pipelines. As the chair will know, many times there are questions of ownership and responsibility. The board has enhanced opportunities and facilities to determine who in fact is responsible, corporations and individuals.

Finally, new and what appears to be well-drafted enforcement facilities to effect the act. These new enforcement facilities are garnishees of revenue, which is a fairly substantive piece of legislation, to have an industry agree to that on the determination of a third body, the AEUB. It also attaches responsibility for failing to comply with a high level of enforcement to one or more of the officers or directors of the company, which is a marked departure from most other legislation in this province and in others, too, I'm told.

This goes a long ways to effecting change surely. It also adds some enforcement provisions for the actions against a company controlled by those persons or person, and that presumably is a third entity. You'll recall that moments ago I made a comment on the AEUB's option of refusing new licences or suspending existing licences or even requiring abandonment and reclamation deposits on other related sites. It does give the AEUB a great deal of latitude, with the concurrence of those that are regulated by this act.

I would also like to congratulate CAPP, and I believe there are three or four of the contractors in the oil business that certainly deserve credit because they spent a great deal of time dealing with this and setting up regulations so as to effect this change.

The proposer, the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, has said that this is a good-news story. He is absolutely correct, sir. This is a good-news story, and it is a government at its best, taking responsibility for its actions and the actions of its industries.

Thank you, sir.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 14

Alberta Treasury Branches Amendment Act, 2000

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader on behalf of the Provincial Treasurer.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to move on behalf of the hon. the Provincial Treasurer the Treasury Branches Amendment Act, 2000. As the Provincial Treasurer mentioned during his introduction for first reading, this bill will put in place some mechanisms which will allow the Treasury Branches to take control of their own destiny. It will allow the board to make the decisions with respect to the appointment of the chief executive officer. It will amend the fiscal year-end of the Alberta Treasury Branches to conform more with the fiscal year-ends which are in line with the rest of the financial industry, and it will put in place a number of other mechanisms which deal with issues outstanding such as unclaimed deposits and how to deal with unclaimed deposits. It's a piece of legislation which will assist the Alberta Treasury Branch in modernizing their operations, and I commend it to the members of the Legislature for their support.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The future of the Alberta Treasury Branches is, I'm sure, going to be an interesting one, and one of these days the government of Alberta will reveal exactly what they have in mind and when.

As we progress towards the next election, I know there's going to be lots of other political issues on the landscape. There's going to be the protection of our health care system. There's going to be flat tax. There's going to be sound funding for our public education system. There are going to be issues to do with children's services and social welfare. My fear is that with all of those important, significant issues on the minds of Albertans and weighing heavy upon their hearts, they may lose track momentarily about the future of the Alberta Treasury Branches. That would really be a shame, because Alberta Treasury Branches have been a very important part of Alberta's history for so many decades now, and they're finally actually turning a profit. It's interesting that as soon as the government sort of took their hands off the rudder, the Treasury Branches actually began to operate more like a business and began to turn a profit.

I love talking to the people in my constituency and elsewhere in this province about that experience, about how the only nationalized bank in this country, the only bank that's owned by a province, the Alberta Treasury Branch, was, you know, a money loser for so many years while it was being run by this supposedly business-minded, dollar and bottom-line sense government, and then as soon as they made the moves towards freeing it up, it began to operate on a much more sound basis.

Of course, the history of the Treasury Branch is interwoven with the history of this province in modern times. It's the history of interference in the marketplace on the negative side, and on the positive side it's the history of providing financing and capital to Albertans when they couldn't get it anywhere else to help grow Alberta businesses and help maintain strength in Alberta communities. Again it seems to be a bit of a metaphor for this government, because like so many other things about this government, you have the dark side just looming whenever you're looking at a positive or a bright side.

Alberta Treasury Branches a couple of years ago changed in a major way the manner in which they were structured. The board, however, was appointed by the Treasurer, and that is a bit of a concern to us. Even more importantly, the chief executive officer continued to be appointed by the government, which of course could lead to confusion in the minds of the public whether or not Treasury Branches was still a unit of the Alberta Treasury or whether it was in fact a stand-alone economic entity.

Now, Bill 14 would have the board of directors fully responsible for the recruitment and appointment of the chief executive officer of the Alberta Treasury Branch. You know, I've had a chance to talk with some of the chief executives of the ATB, and they're in favour of this. I'm sure that Mr. Haggis would like to know who his boss is and whether it's the Provincial Treasurer or it's his own board of directors. While there may be some confusion in the minds of some people about who's calling the shots at Treasury Branch, I think the men and women and the businesses that depend on the ATB as their financial institution of choice should have it clear that the buck stops with the board of directors. Now, if we could only get the government's hands off the appointment process of the board, I think we'd be much better served.

4:10

The future of the Alberta Treasury Branches I think also has to do with the future of many small communities throughout Alberta. As major banks consolidate, it's increasingly true that Alberta Treasury Branch or Treasury Branch agents continue to be the only financial institution that's available to some Alberta residents in a very timely way for quick access to banking services.

Before there's going to be any major change with the status of Treasury Branch, whether it goes it entirely alone and tries to establish itself as a regional bank, whether it amalgamates with other smaller regional banks, whether it is absorbed into the credit union system, or whether it is just sold off lock, stock, and barrel to a larger financial organization, I think there is a responsibility that the government would have to go to the people of Alberta and have a consultation. Once upon a time we had some grudging interest on the part of the government in having an all-party committee look at the future of the Alberta Treasury Branch, and I guess I regret that we didn't have the opportunity in a nonpartisan way to meet with Albertans and to discuss with them the future of their Alberta Treasury Branch.

It is clear that changes will be coming. It's also clear that the current government has no intention of making those changes manifest until after the election, and you know, there's going to be an election sooner than later. I understand that the Prime Minister as recently as this weekend suggested there will be a federal election within 15 months. I know that's of particular interest to the Provincial Treasurer; he's marking his calendar as I speak. What we have to do, of course, is make a decision here in Alberta whether or not the provincial election will come before or after the 15 months, so we have a couple of calculations we have to make. I'm not a betting man, Mr. Speaker, and of course that's another thing that distinguishes members of the Liberal opposition from the Conservative members in this House; that is, that we tend not to support gambling, particularly on matters of public importance. [interjection] Well, as the Treasurer points out, there are exceptions on both sides of the House.

While I'm not a betting man, I guess I would say that I expect that there will be a provincial election inside that 15-month window, so maybe Albertans don't have much more than a year, maybe even 10 months, maybe even eight months before they find out what's in store for the Treasury Branches. That's assuming that the current government has a chance to put their Treasury Branch policy into action. The electorate of this province will decide that, and I won't make any predictions right now because of course the outcome of that contest would be nothing but a partisan prediction on my part.

While the men and women in the businesses in Alberta that depend on Treasury Branches are pondering the future of their financial institution of choice, I think the men and women of this Legislature should also be thinking about what's the best way we can be giving assurances to them about the soundness of their wisdom when it came to choosing Alberta Treasury Branch. Now, I've stood in this Chamber on many occasions and raised questions and issues surrounding Treasury Branch practices when it comes to extending loans and credit. I've quizzed the government time after time after time on things like loan agreements and interference with the decision-making and guarantees offered by Treasury Branch.

Of course, unfortunately there are more than just a handful of examples where there have been criminal proceedings brought against former Treasury Branch employees to do with fraud and kickbacks and those kinds of things. Of course, we have the whole West Edmonton Mall scandal still relatively unresolved, at least when it comes to the several court proceedings exploring that part of Alberta Treasury Branch's legacy to Alberta. So all of those questions have been raised, and I know that that also raises a cloud of suspicion.

I've had depositors of Treasury Branch or businesspeople who use Treasury Branch come to me and say, "Well, look; should we stop doing business with the ATB if there are all of these problems?" I've said: "No, you shouldn't. You should choose to do business with the ATB on the same basis that you would choose to do business with any other financial institution. Are you getting the service that you were promised at a fair price? Are they giving you the kind of advice that you require from a banker, from a financial institution? Do you feel comfortable with the service you're receiving? Are you getting access in a timely way to money, to reports, and all of the other things a financial institution can provide? If you can answer yes to all those questions and you have a good relationship with the advisers, then you should stay doing business with the ATB."

That's about the extent of any business advice I've given any of my constituents or others who have asked me about the Alberta Treasury Branch. But inside this Chamber and in my role as the finance critic for the Official Opposition and therefore the person who has the responsibility to be keeping a weather watch on the Alberta Treasury Branch, what I'll say is: the more uncertainty there is about the future of the Alberta Treasury Branch, the harder it is for that institution to grow and to flourish.

That uncertainty comes about as a result of not the accusations about improper government interference or not the reality of some criminal charges brought against some former employees, but it comes about because there has been a bit of a game of ping-pong being played. The government has moved from commissioning reports on the future of the ATB to find out when would be a good time to spin it off or to move it on, then not talking about the reports, then talking about the reports, then saying, "Well, we'll protect the status quo," but then giving some hints that maybe things will change a little bit faster. Of course, it's all geared around the political necessity to tie these kinds of decisions around an election.

So I would suggest that the best thing we can do to secure the future of the Alberta Treasury Branch is for the government to as quickly as possible just paint the clearest picture it can regarding their plans. If in fact there's going to be some kind of major change, I think that in fairness to taxpayers they should know that before they're asked to pass this in the House. If there's going to be a move towards the Treasury Branches disappearing and that's the policy of the government, I think they should tell us now and not later.

Mr. Speaker, I know that's just going to be seen and heard and read as a partisan statement, but you know, there have been many examples of government policy changing abruptly after an election. Whether it has to do with the cross-border importation of hazardous waste, whether it has to do with the manner in which health care decisions are made, or whether it has to do with decisions about gaming, it seems to me that it's kind of like policy-making by stealth. Present a package of ideas before an election, go to the electorate, and then implement an entirely different agenda after the election. I don't think that that kind of governance by stealth is appropriate, I think it does a disservice to taxpayers, and obviously I think it speaks to a certain understanding of why the electorate becomes so cynical about politicians and the political process.

We have here an opportunity with the Alberta Treasury Branches at least together in this Legislature to say: "No. This is what we think the future holds. Make it clear, and then voters will know before they go to the ballot box."

All that being said, Mr. Speaker, there are three major changes that are contemplated in Bill 14. One, it would require the chief executive officer of the ATB to be appointed by the board. Second, it changes the fiscal year-end for the Alberta Treasury Branch from March 31 to October 31. Then it establishes, through regulation, policy and procedures for the treatment of unclaimed balances and the disclosure of personal information respecting both unclaimed balances and unclaimed accounts, as recommended by the Auditor General. I must say that I'm very happy that at least in this regard we see some quick resolution to problems identified by the Auditor General and that some recommendations are being put into place. I could only hope that the recommendations of the Auditor General as they pertain to health care management information would be acted on so quickly.

4:20

You know, according to the Auditor General's report the accounting for contracted-out services is so poor that there's nearly $600 million worth of contracts that were inadequately accounted for last year. The Auditor General has made some recommendations in that regard. The Auditor General has also observed that we don't even have a bed census for all of the health care facilities in this province. They don't have a complete census, so the government can't even say exactly how many beds are open in what facilities for what kind of purpose because the information hasn't been collected.

The good news is that the government seems to be paying attention to the Auditor General when it comes to the future of the Alberta Treasury Branches, at least in one part. I would only hope that they would see that as an example, learn from that example, and quickly pay as much attention to the Auditor General in an area that certainly has captured the attention of Albertans, and it has to do with how we operate our health care system in this province.

Mr. Speaker, the change in the fiscal year is one that I can fully support. It would be seen, I guess, as a relatively minor issue, but we believe that the change in the fiscal year-end of the ATB from its current March 31 to October 31 is a positive step that will permit more effective benchmarking of performance against other financial institutions both in Canada and the United States. The Alberta Treasury Branch does provide some good benchmarking information in its annual reports, and we should recognize that all of Canada's chartered banks use the October 31 fiscal year-end. Currently the March 31 year-end makes it difficult to compare ATB's performance versus other comparable financial institutions which operate on an October 31 year-end basis.

This benchmarking becomes important, of course, because any potential buyers that are out there in the wings are going to want to be able to make an apples-to-apples comparison when it comes to the value of the Alberta Treasury Branch. Currently the ATB uses the following performance measures to benchmark itself against comparable financial institutions. They look at operating revenue growth, net interest margin, net interest spread on average earning assets, other income to operating revenue, return on assets, operating expense growth, net impaired loans to total gross loans, credit losses to total loans, loan growth, deposit growth, and asset growth. But all of this is done in this situation that is out of sync with comparable financial institutions. Establishing policies and procedures relating to benchmarking and making it consistent will only make it easier both for taxpayers to get an idea of the true value and the true strength of the Alberta Treasury Branch and also for potential suitors who may be waiting in the wings to either become owners or partners in the future of the Alberta Treasury Branch.

So, Mr. Speaker, those are just a few of my opening comments. We could talk a little bit about unclaimed customer balances. The current ATB act does not provide for disposition of unclaimed balances. It's noted in the Bank Act, Alberta Loan and Trust Corporations Act and regulations, and the Credit Union Act. They include detailed rules regarding unclaimed balances. Unclaimed balances in Alberta Treasury Branch, according to the last Auditor General's report, have accrued to the amount of some $6 million. They are recorded as a liability, and a record of customer details is maintained, but we don't have any clear rules in terms of disposition or other public reporting. So $6 million worth of unclaimed balances probably represents a goodly number of Alberta depositors and businesses, and it would be nice if we got that all clarified. I think Bill 14 does achieve that goal.

Mr. Speaker, I'll have some more to say about the details of the amendments when we get to committee. I understand that some of my colleagues have some general comments to make, both about Bill 14 and the future of the Alberta Treasury Branches and the role they play in Alberta communities, at this stage of the bill while we're talking about the principle. I look forward to those comments and also to the response from the provincial government regarding some of the concerns that I've raised.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

MRS. NELSON: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. At this point I'd like to adjourn debate on Bill 14, the Alberta Treasury Branches Amendment Act, 2000.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 15

Business Corporations Amendment Act, 2000

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and move second reading of Bill 15, being the Business Corporations Amendment Act, 2000.

The intent of this act is to amend one specific section, section 42, of the existing Business Corporations Act. The amendment in particular will rectify a number of problems existing with the sections that are unworkable and cause Alberta businesses unnecessary expenses and delays in certain transactions.

I'd like to first give thanks to many who have taken a substantial amount of time in the review of this and to look at the options – those on a committee that has had unanimous agreement, stakeholders representing small businesses, creditors, shareholders, banks, large corporations, and certainly the legal and accounting professions – and for their coming together with a solution that will be workable for businesses.

In the present act section 42 actually is written in a format that restricts a corporation from giving financial assistance in certain circumstances, such as to shareholders, directors, or affiliated corporations; to associates of directors, shareholders, or affiliated corporations; or to any person for the purpose of a purchase of shares of the corporation. Now, they have these restrictions unless there are reasonable grounds to believe that a solvency test consisting of two items could be met. That solvency test in the existing act requires that

- (d) the corporation is, or after giving the financial assistance would be, unable to pay its liabilities as they become due, or
- (e) the realizable value of the corporation's assets, excluding the amount of any financial assistance in the form of a loan or in the form of assets pledged or encumbered to secure a guarantee . . . would be less than the aggregate of the corporation's liabilities.

This was put in certainly as a protection for minority shareholders in particular and for creditors so that their interests would be protected from giving away or lending or guaranteeing beyond the ability of a corporation and potentially not in its best interests. However, it has become really unworkable for that solvency test to be met in practice.

This has been under considerable review over the last decade. I go back and quote a little bit from the Alberta Law Reform Institute. It says:

Section 42 was intended to protect shareholders and creditors by preventing the directors of corporations from using corporate funds for personal profit. To accomplish this, Section 42 prohibits a corporation from giving financial assistance to its shareholders or directors or those of its affiliates, or to the associates of such persons, when the corporation cannot satisfy the two-part solvency test.

It further went on and said:

Major complaints arose from the unusual two-part solvency test and the failure of Section 42 to differentiate between distributing and non-distributing corporations. Directors and their advisers had difficulty determining whether the corporation could satisfy the two-part solvency test. In addition, while most of the financial assistance prohibited in Section 42 harms the corporation granting it, there are some situations where giving financial assistance is of benefit to the corporation and in its interest. Section 42 prevented corporations in these instances from using proper financing arrangements necessary for their survival.

So we have those in the law profession, both knowing and working with their clients, saying that their clients were unable to come forward even in the best interest of the corporation and substantially meet this solvency test that was required.

4:30

Further, when businesses would then be asked in what fashion they could meet it, in going to financial advisers, being the accounting professions, and asking if they could at least render an opinion in that regard, the accounting professions under an assurance and related services guideline in the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants' handbook stated a number of things that actually prevent those in the accounting professions from rendering such an opinion. One is because of terms such as "directly or indirectly," "loan, guarantee or otherwise." Such terms are a legal interpretation and not so much accounting within the definition of professional expertise of public accountants.

In addition,

- (b) the public accountant is asked to provide assurance on the corporation's ability to pay its liabilities as they become due. No timeframe is provided for this assurance and it is unclear whether "liabilities" would include contingent liabilities as may be the case in the giving of a guarantee.
- (c) The public accountant is asked to provide assurance on the "realizable value" of the corporation's assets. The term "realizable value" is not defined and the value of assets could be determined in a number of different ways.

- (d) The public accountant is being requested to provide either positive or negative assurance on matters relating to solvency. Since these matters are not clearly defined in an accounting sense, there are no appropriate criteria to establish the framework within which the public accountant can form an opinion.

As a result of the factors set out in the preceding paragraph, it is the opinion of the Auditing Standards Steering Committee that practitioners should not provide an opinion (i.e., positive or negative assurance) on matters relating to solvency.

So here you see that both the legal and accounting professions, when asked under circumstances by their clients to provide that assurance required in the existing act, are unable and actually prevented from doing such. The request has been, not just here but certainly in legislation in other provinces of Canada that have similar clauses in their business corporations acts, that all of them look to either one of two approaches. One was the solvency approach, which in practice has not been working in many instances. The second would be, then, a disclosure approach.

It really comes to the second methodology that is being recommended. The act, rather than sticking with an unworkable solvency test, now proposes under section 42(2) that "a corporation may give financial assistance to any person for any purpose if it is in the best interest of the corporation." So now the test, which should always be the test, that directors should follow is "in the best interest of the corporation."

If it's given to those parties to which it was previously prohibited, subsection (3) now outlines that those same parties – shareholders, directors, associates of such parties – will now have to meet a disclosure requirement in accordance with the regulation. Such disclosure will actually enhance the ability of minority shareholders and creditors to act in a more timely fashion. The regulation will require that within 90 days disclosure of the type and nature of the financial assistance or guarantee certainly will have to be disclosed in the financial statements of a private corporation. There are already many disclosure requirements for those, being distributing or public corporations.

Now, with disclosure and best interest being the test, there are already many remedies available to shareholders and creditors provided in the Business Corporations Act. There are three specific remedies to protect all shareholders, and now if shareholders are made aware in a more timely fashion, they could probably take corrective actions if, in their opinion, it would not be in the best interest of the corporation. Shareholders have options such as derivative actions, oppressive remedies, and appraisal remedies already outlined in various sections of the Business Corporations Act.

Creditors have always had the ability to protect themselves by requiring security or guarantees before extending credit to corporations. Also, the oppression remedy is available to shareholders. One addition to this act will be in section 4(b)(iii), where "a creditor" will be added under "complainant," so they will now also have an ability to proceed towards the courts to ask them to step in for derivative actions.

In this fashion, by giving the shareholders and creditors disclosure, by giving them timely notice, by ensuring that the act continues to enshrine the remedies available to them, they will now have an opportunity to provide loans or assistance and guarantees in all instances when it's in the best interests of their corporation. This certainly is going to be a lot more workable for all parties. It will reduce the fees both to the lending institutions and to the borrowers in consulting their lawyers and accountants and will in a much more timely fashion facilitate securing, lending, or their natural and normal business transactions.

I am pleased at this stage to conclude my remarks and would ask all members to support Bill 15 in second reading. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand in this Assembly today to speak at second reading on Bill 15, the Business Corporations Amendment Act, 2000. I'd like to thank the Member for Calgary-North West, the sponsor of this bill, for the availability to be briefed. We were able to follow up immediately after that with the stakeholders – the Alberta Law Reform Institute, the Law Society of Alberta, the chartered accountants, and the Canadian Bar Association in both Edmonton and Calgary – and that helped, because of the timing on this actual bill, in bringing it forward.

Getting to the point of this bill brought forward, one might think that we in the opposition must be against business-proposed amendments, but it's not so in my case on this particular one. Mr. Speaker, this particular bill removes the requirement to meet solvency before giving financial assistance under loan guarantees to stakeholders, directors, and associated parties while adding the requirement that any financial assistance must be in the best interests of the corporation.

The object of Bill 15, the Business Corporations Amendment Act, 2000, is to remove the requirement for corporations to meet solvency tests before giving financial assistance, loans, guarantees to shareholders, directors, and other associated parties while adding the requirement that any financial assistance must be in the best interest of the corporation. The current section in the Business Corporations Act outlines the solvency tests that must be met for the corporation to give financial assistance to stakeholders, directors, and other associated parties.

Financial assistance to stakeholders, directors, and associated parties could not be given if the corporation would be "unable to pay its liabilities as they become due, or . . . the realizable value of the corporation's assets, [less] the amount of any financial assistance . . . would be less than the aggregate of the corporation's liabilities and stated capital of all classes." Section 42 has become an obstacle in legalized transactions and prevents corporations from lending to related entities or securing loans made to the entities by a third party. This makes it difficult to obtain loans from the third party and to restructure corporations even if it is in the best interest of the corporation to do so.

There are also requirements of full written disclosure to shareholders and creditors within 90 days of the financial assistance provided by the corporations to shareholders, directors, or other associated parties. This will allow shareholders and creditors to seek existing remedies available under the act should it be determined that the corporation's shareholders and directors have entered into a transaction that is inappropriate and not in the best interests of the corporation.

4:40

You know, we look at the solvency and asset test under section 42, another source of difficulty. There is no acceptable definition of "realizable value" of assets. There is also uncertainty as to what should be included in the liabilities. As a result of this, chartered accountants were often unwilling to give an opinion as to the value of the corporation. This required companies to hire legal counsel at a cost anywhere from $3,000 to $50,000 per transaction to ensure that this transaction was in accordance with the requirements of the

BCA. The uncertainty created by section 42 raised transaction costs for business and prevented them from undertaking beneficial transactions for the shareholders and creditors.

Under the amendment to the Business Corporations Act contained in this bill, the solvency test for financial assistance to shareholders, directors, and associated parties is to be eliminated and replaced with a provision that "a corporation may give financial assistance . . . if it is in the best interest of the corporation to do so." The corporation is required to disclose within 90 days to all the shareholders the terms and the conditions of the financial assistance given to shareholders and directors of a corporation. This replaces the current provision of the act and requires disclosure within the notes of the financial statement at year-end. The enhanced disclosure requirement permits shareholders and creditors to take actions through the courts in the event that the transaction is deemed to be inappropriate or not in the best interests of the corporation. Now, that is under section 231(b).

Currently section 42 of the Business Corporations Act seeks to protect creditors and shareholders by prohibiting corporations from making loans and giving guarantees to shareholders and related parties subject to solvency tests. The prohibition applies to loans and guarantees made in relationship with the related parties and share-purchase transactions. This could include loans to directors or guarantees to an affiliated corporation. This could also have a negative impact on the claims of creditors and minor shareholders, who have no effective voice as to how the corporation should be managed.

As we look at the overview and whether or not there should be major support of this bill from our side, we've looked at a few different things. These amendments are designed to enhance legitimate business activity and are deemed to be in the best interests of the shareholder, director, and creditor. We feel that in this particular case it's following within that.

The current solvency tests under section 42 are unworkable and increase the transaction costs for businesses in order to approve beneficial transactions designed to improve the financial viability of the corporation. There are already remedies under the act available to shareholders and creditors if they feel that a financial transaction approved by directors or some shareholders is not in the best interests of the corporation. The elimination of the solvency test does not weaken the remedy available to the shareholders and creditors. In fact, it reduces the transaction costs for businesses. I think that's what we should be actually looking at in most cases: how are we going to reduce certain costs so that it does make it easier for a businessperson to be solvent?

Bill 15 improves disclosure requirements by requiring that the terms and conditions of the financial assistance be provided to all shareholders within 90 days. This is a major improvement over the previous requirement that only discloses at year-end in the annual financial statement. Similar legislation, which I've followed up on from the briefing, has been enforced in Saskatchewan since the early 1990s. Ontario has recently introduced amendments to its Business Corporations Act, and the federal government is contemplating changes to the Canadian business act as well.

I'd like to ask the sponsor of the bill at this time about the status of the negotiations with the Alberta Securities Commission to extend these provisions to public companies and reporting issuers.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I'm going to take my leave and sit down.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

head: Government Bills and Orders
head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd now call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 1
Alberta Heritage Foundation for
Science and Engineering Research Act

THE CHAIRMAN: Any comments, questions, or amendments that may be offered with respect to this act? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm happy to have an opportunity to speak to Bill 1. I have just a few comments, because I know that we are eager to pass this bill on both sides of the House in the Legislature. My colleague from Edmonton-Glenora has an amendment that he's looking forward to bringing forward in the House this afternoon.

I agree with what's been said here in the Assembly in terms of this bill being a very positive step for science and research in Alberta. Certainly it's the type of initiative that we have supported for years, and it's nice to see it being given such a high focus at this particular time. There is no doubt that we have said on this side of the House for many years – and in fact we have heard it said in the province for literally decades – that in order for us to be able to maximize the kinds of benefits that we have gained from oil and gas and other primary industries in this province, a focus on science and research is necessary and in fact should be a mandatory focus for us to see the business community and therefore the province thrive and grow.

It's been long a concern of mine that we do not put enough focus on value-added products in this province and that we never have given them the kind of importance they need. Ultimately we run out of those primary products, and it's in the value-added that the real gains for the people of this province lie, Mr. Chairman.

4:50

Having spoken to a number of people from the business community over the past couple of weeks, I know that this is an increasing focus for the business community, particularly in Edmonton. I say particularly there because those are the people that I've been speaking to. They think that the Premier is not giving enough attention to value-added products and a value-added focus in terms of economic development in this province at this time. They are hoping that he will increase that focus, and I am sure that with this minister's push and the focus on this bill, we can look forward to some announcements in the near future in terms of the leadership that this Premier and this government will be taking on value-added commodities, taking existing commodities and looking at their relative value-added components.

Certainly as we put a focus on science and research, that will help in that regard. No doubt if we do not see focus on value-added products and development within this industry, those people that I was talking to in business may decide to take their focus elsewhere, Mr. Chairman, so it's something that I think the Premier should be taking under direct consideration. It's leadership that's required at this particular time. We are in a boom market in this province. It is the ideal time to take a look at what we can do to maximize benefits not just now during boom times but to level out the valleys that we have seen occur in the very cyclical nature that we have in this economy.

Mr. Chairman, I am hoping that this bill will be a first step that we will see in terms of leveling out those economic valleys we have seen, that we will see a sincere push on behalf of the government to value-added products so that all Albertans can continue to share in the growth that we see in this economy not just during this particular business cycle but in business cycles to come. Now, when there are lots of dollars in the economy, is the time to do it. We can't start to worry about these kinds of problems when we start to see the economy fall.

There wasn't a focus on this from '93 to '97 within this government that I could see at all. They were strictly looking at cost reductions. Well, now the story is different. There is a lot of money in the Treasury. There is an opportunity for the Premier to lift his head up and take some vision in terms of where he can take economic development in this province. Truly there are a number of people who are looking at his performance in this regard, who are looking for leadership on this issue, and who if they don't find the leadership will be looking elsewhere when it comes time to vote.

So with those few comments, Mr. Chairman, I will take my seat.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thanks to my colleague for Edmonton-Ellerslie. I think it's worth noting once again on the record that Bill 1 has received the quick approval of the Official Opposition, and that has in fact come about as a result of this bill being a good idea. The minister is to be thanked not just for the efforts that he and his staff have made in meeting with the Official Opposition, in meeting with other stakeholders in the process, but also for what would have been, I think, quite a challenge in cabinet. He's probably got scars that can attest to some of those fights, but good on him for doing it.

You know, we've had some general discussion about the strengths of Bill 1 and the establishment of the foundation. We've had a couple of cautionary tales. I won't bother repeating those. I will note that there are three opportunities at least for members of the public or stakeholder groups to become involved in what will become the Alberta heritage foundation for science and engineering research. One is on the corporation board itself, which is established under section 2, and I'll come back to that in just a minute. There is also of course the science and engineering advisory council, which is established under section 19, and then the international board of review. Now, I hope that the same care and attention will go into establishing the advisory council and the board of review as we've seen with the Heritage Foundation for Medical Research.

I'm also hopeful that the nonpartisan, arm's length from government approach to collecting names for candidates to the appointment of these bodies will be handled in the same way as the search is being conducted right now for members to the foundation board. I did receive the letter from the search firm asking for input into the foundation board, and I'm happy to tell the minister, through the good graces of Hansard, that I will be providing names. I hope that they'll be fairly considered. You know, I don't know whether I should just quietly provide the names or formally provide the names. I don't want my endorsement to be seen as a disincentive to the minister, because the men and women that I'm going to suggest to him are more than capable of the public service they'll be called upon to do. I hope they'll have a chance. [interjection] The minister says, through the chair, that maybe I should just encourage them to provide their own names straight through.

The advisory council intrigues me because the foundation will develop all of the terms and conditions about the appointment of its members, the terms of office, remuneration if any is called for, whatever. They'll also make all of the rules for procedure governing the calling of the meetings. I'm a little concerned that we're a little shy on guidelines here in the bill. What I would ask the minister to do, because I don't want to prolong debate, is when this rule-making is done, if that can be brought forward in the form of a report to the Assembly. I'm assuming that the minister is going to be looking for many opportunities to keep his colleagues informed as to the progress of the foundation. This would be one of those opportunities. Let us know about how we've filled out the details on the rules around the advisory council.

I'll make the same comments about the international board of review. However, I understand that this international board of review is going to be made up of some of the top minds and brains in science and engineering from around the globe. I think we'll be lucky to have their services and will be, obviously, well served. Still, we're enshrining into legislation a process that allows for a certain loss of accountability, and to overcome that loss of accountability, I would just ask the minister to keep us posted and to perhaps, when it comes to some of the decision-making, present members of this Assembly with an opportunity to provide input. We'd be happy to do that. It doesn't have to happen necessarily in the formality of a debate, but certainly we can take the opportunity to provide the input and provide a little bit more direction on what is, after all, not a partisan exercise at all but something that is going to benefit Albertans for generations to come.

Now, back to section 2, the section which establishes the foundation itself. I note that the foundation board will be established by Executive Council through the Lieutenant Governor appointing a number of trustees for five-year terms. As I read the act, the terms are renewable and cannot exceed five years, but it's not clear that they will all be five-year appointments. So that is a question I have for the minister.

I would also like to say that while I'm happy to see that a member of the board of the University of Alberta, a member of the board of the University of Calgary, and a member of the board of the University of Lethbridge will be appointed, I'm not sure that we have all of the representation we need from the technical institutes and colleges. I recognize this also shows some movement on the part of the minister, because my understanding is that originally there wasn't going to be a designated position for the council of board chairs of the public colleges and technical institutes. I'm glad to see that that's been included, but I'd like to keep my eye on this, because as colleges and technical postsecondary institutions around the province begin to have program expansion and growth in the science and engineering fields and while there's increasing specialization, we may find that we want to specify a particular board member from a particular institution in the future, so I'm hoping that this is going to be open for second thought.

5:00

There already has been some discussion in second reading on the inclusion of professional engineers and agronomists and the suggestion that perhaps other scientific specialties should have been named, and I appreciate the difficulty in doing that. Again, I would say: let's keep our eyes open and our ears open and get the feedback to see whether or not we have weakened the foundation by excluding somebody from a named position.

Most importantly, what I would like to focus on is subsection (g), which mentions that "not more than 6 other individuals" will be named to the board. It may go without saying that the intent behind the "not more than 6 other individuals" is that we would be able to capture some of these other scientific specialties and subspecialties, that we would be able to capture any oversights from other technical institutions or organizations, and of course we may be able then to bring in some members of the general public, those taxpaying Albertans that are, after all, in one way or another footing the bill for all of us here. While it may go without saying, I'm not happy leaving it without saying. While this section does give the flexibility to appoint up to six others, I guess I would like to be more specific to ensure that two members at least of the general public – so two members of the board should be comprised of men and/or women who don't have a particular vested interest, don't represent any other organization or group of professionals, and in fact are there for no other reason than their willingness to provide public service for the public good to the people of Alberta and support an initiative that is one hundred percent worthy of support.

With that in mind, I'd like to move an amendment to section 2(1) by striking out the existing clause (g) and adding a new clause (g), and I'll just pause for a moment to make sure that all members of the Chamber have a copy of the amendment before them, and then I'll continue my remarks.

THE CHAIRMAN: The amendment that is being circulated to all members is that which is moved by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora and will be called A1. I believe we've nearly caught everyone. I say "nearly." I guess we'll wait a moment.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I believe that all members have a copy of the amendment now, and as you can see, it's a very straightforward amendment. I don't recall whether I formally moved it or not, so if I didn't, I will. The amendment is as it's printed before you, that section 2(1) is amended (a) by striking out clause (g) and substituting the following, "(g) two members of the general public;" and (b) by adding the following after clause (g), "(h) not more than 4 other individuals."

The purpose is, as I stated in my earlier comments, just to ensure that there is a public voice heard that is not identified with any particular stakeholder group, still allowing the inclusion of up to four other individuals, which may be drawn from those other groups or organizations that I earlier alluded to. I believe that this will strengthen the public support of the foundation. I think it's definitely within the public interest. I hope that all members of the House will agree that it's important to leave in the legislation to demonstrate the leadership that we place in Albertans and to recognize the importance of having a public voice on all of these government-created entities.

Mr. Chairman, I'll see whether or not there's any response from other members of the Chamber, and then we'll carry on with committee stage of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Science.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes. I've seen this amendment, and I think it makes good sense because it guarantees in perpetuity that there will always be two members of the public on the board. I would thank the member for this amendment. I think it's a good amendment. It makes sense. I would encourage all my members that are paying attention to please vote in favour of this amendment, particularly the ones that don't seem to be paying attention on the other side of the House. Please support the amendment.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

MR. SAPERS: Well, I want to thank the minister and I want to thank members from both sides of the House. Mr. Chairman, it's an unusual experience that I'm having right now, so I won't let it go to my head. I do have some suggestions for some other bills, and hopefully we'll have the same level of co-operation and support. [interjection] Yeah, I was going to say – well, I won't say it.

Anyway, that was an amendment from a member of the wing nut club, you could say, Mr. Chairman. The bill as amended, I believe, will set the stage for a foundation that will bring Alberta the same international reputation and the same standing in science and engineering research as the Alberta foundation for medical research has brought us when it comes to the life sciences. I would hope that the minister continues his efforts to press his colleagues into understanding the importance of fostering science and engineering research. I hope that that awareness and acceptance will spill over into a new understanding of the importance of supporting basic research and our postsecondary institutions. I hope that we are truly looking at the beginning of a new level of political support for advanced education in this province and that we are going to be able to quickly recover from the days in the mid '90s when we saw funding erode library collections and funding erode laboratories and funding diminish to the point that our salary levels were no longer competitive and we were losing bright young men and women to other jurisdictions.

So I'm hoping that this government's support of this bill does signal in fact a new era and that we'll be able to stand on both sides in this Assembly in support and in recognition of a government that truly understands the importance of not just lifelong learning and education but specifically the need to invest and foster and encourage primary research. Again, I will say that it is my hope that the research is not just being sought for its commercial value, that we're not just going to be encouraging research that can be quickly commercialized but that in fact we're going to encourage scientific exploration because that in itself is the promise of our future, the application of the scientific method to understanding the world around us and all of the potentials and possibilities that it has to offer.

So with those few comments, Mr. Chairman, I'll take my seat.

5:10

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. A couple of observations I wanted to make with respect to a bill which I think is going to potentially have an enormous impact on my constituents and indeed, I think, on all of Alberta.

A couple of observations I wanted to make, Mr. Chairman: firstly, a concern with respect to patience. Patience is something that I think we don't see a lot of from our provincial government, patience in terms of recognizing that the most enduring rewards and achievements are things that don't often happen overnight. It takes a clear vision, a lot of discipline, and a lot of focus. Those, in my view, are prerequisites to achieving a measure of success in terms of important areas like education and other government services. It seems to me that there's a glimmer of hope with Bill 1 to take and build on the Alberta heritage medical research program, which has been so outstanding. That, in fact, is one of the most positive achievements of the Lougheed era and something I think all Albertans can take pride in.

We have a different government now. This is not the government that brought in and created the Alberta heritage medical research organization. This is a government that's been characterized too often by short-term decisions, a focus on how you can deliver a service as cheaply as possible. I mean, those are the hallmarks of the government we see now. I may not have persuaded the Member for Calgary-Foothills, Mr. Chairman, but, you know, I think there are a lot of Albertans that from their own experience see and understand what I'm talking about.

Mr. Chairman, I want to make the observation that when I hear the responsible minister speak, there are times it's clear that he's sort of, to speak colloquially, got religion. He's animated and he's excited and he talks about the bill. I've heard him speak at McDougall Centre when he's spoken at news conferences. I've heard him speak in the House, and he's very, very excited about the future that this kind of research can provide for the province of Alberta. But every now and again I hear that minister lapse into sort of government speak, which is all about short-term measurements to the extent there are measurements at all. It's about: what difference is it going to make in the current budget year?

I don't think you can talk in those terms, and my concern is that this government has created a bit of a paradigm, that's been manifest since they've been in power, going back to 1993, a paradigm that values things that may show an illusion of energy and progress and action and discount almost completely long-term investments, where the rewards are not going to be seen for some time.

Now, Mr. Chairman, you wonder why I'm rambling on like this. What's the point, and how is this relevant to the bill we're dealing with? Well, let me try and come to the point as crisply as I'm able.

The observation would be this, Mr. Chairman: I'm very apprehensive that this government is going to be focused on applied research, on applied engineering. I'm sure it's been said before that all of the great advances in science, virtually all of those great advances, have come from not applied science but from pure science, from more academic research, where things have been developed and applications have been discovered after the fact, after a process has been discovered and identified and catalogued.

I'm hopeful that in the application and the rolling out of Bill 1 we're going to see that sort of disciplined commitment and focus on pure research, because it's very tempting to turn this into simply a vehicle to meet the short-term interests of large corporations that do some research work in the province that will offer to give some money or a secondment or some gifts in kind to create some short-term research. But that's not going to ultimately provide as many high-skill, high-pay jobs, which is what I want and my constituents want for their children, as a very long-term commitment that may not show immediate economic results.

I mean, it may be a long time before some new processes, some new inventions, some new industrial designs, some new applications are found. I want to make sure, Mr. Chairman, that government will find the patience to see those kinds of things nurtured, and for once I want to see this government say: we're prepared to invest beyond the current fiscal year, the current budget year. So that's a concern I've got.

Now, the other one: as a graduate of the Faculty of Arts at the University of Alberta I was very struck by the value of the commentary provided by Kenneth Norrie, who's dean of the Faculty of Arts at my alma mater, the University of Alberta. I think that Dean Norrie makes a compelling argument. [interjections] Mr. Chairman, I know people are excited with the commentary they're hearing now, and they want to chat vigorously about it with their neighbours in their seats, and that's okay too.

The point I wanted to make is that I think this is a bit narrow. I've called in the past for Alberta at the postsecondary education level to use the model for health research and expand it, but I'd hoped it would be expanded more broadly than what we see in Bill 1.

We've done some amazing work, and we've had some amazing projects, and we've provided some huge progress and innovation through the University of Alberta, not in that wonderful engineering faculty they've got or their biosciences section or necessarily in their medical faculty but through other faculties. There's a very strong arts program here, whether we're talking classics or history or political science or English. You know, the English department at the University of Alberta has produced probably more award-winning and best-selling authors – some of the best writers this nation has ever seen have been produced here and have worked through the University of Alberta. I want to see those concerns also addressed.

Mr. Chairman, is that abstract? Well, you know, that is no more abstract – in some respects it's more concrete – than some kinds of research that will be done in the area of science and engineering. I know that this is a matter that's been spoken of I think in compelling terms by my colleague who's responsible as the opposition critic for advanced education and for Learning, but I just wanted to reiterate some of those comments.

I might just finish with the commentary from Dr. Norrie in Folio magazine, produced by the University of Alberta. This will be the February 18, 2000, edition, where he said:

This is what we need to guarantee our society remains flourishing, economically productive and socially beneficial to the vast majority of its citizens.

What he's talking about is research that goes beyond technology and technical know-how to deal with the humanities, the social sciences, the fine arts. Those are also areas where we have been leaders in the past. We can be even more dominant leaders in the future, but it takes a much broader sort of mandate than anyone will have with Bill 1.

5:20

I support Bill 1. You know, we have here the Member for Calgary-Varsity, and I'm thinking to myself that if there's any member that should appreciate the value of an expanded role for education, it would be that Member for Calgary-Varsity. He has that outstanding University of Calgary campus smack in the middle of his constituency. I'm not sure, Mr. Chairman, whether he's had an opportunity to talk about the importance of taking the Bill 1 model and expanding it further. I didn't hear that in the throne speech. I haven't seen it in the budget. I'm waiting to hear his comments before we vote on this bill. I know the Member for Calgary-Varsity, the Minister of Gaming, is not so shallow as to be focused only on gambling and gaming. I know he's interested in making sure the University of Calgary is a much stronger institution. So I'm looking to see some leadership from him and many other members in the Assembly as well.

Those are the comments I wanted to make before we get to vote this bill out of committee. I will be voting in support, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you very much.

[The clauses of Bill 1 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report Bill 1.

[Motion to report progress on Bill 1 carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

MR. RENNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports Bill 1 with some amendments. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I move that we adjourn until 8 this evening, at which time we will reconvene in Committee of Supply.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader has moved that we now adjourn until 8 this evening and that when we reconvene, we do so in Committee of Supply. All those in support of this motion, please say aye.

HON. MEMBERS: Aye.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Those opposed, please say no. Carried. Accordingly the House stands adjourned until Committee of Supply this evening at 8 o'clock.

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:23 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, March 20, 2000

8:00 p.m.

Date: 00/03/20

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: Good evening. I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order. I would say for the benefit of those in the audience that this is the informal part of the Legislature. In this part hon. members are allowed to kind of wander around to hopefully . . .

MR. TAYLOR: Talk out loud?

THE CHAIRMAN: Not to talk out loud, hon. minister, but to take off their jackets and have juice or coffee, that kind of thing. It permits a kind of back and forth detail type of analysis with regard to the debate between opposition and other members and the ministers whose estimates are up. So it'll be a little less formal than the regular part.

To begin this evening, I'd like to receive permission from hon. members of the committee to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

head: Introduction of Guests

MS EVANS: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It is my distinct pleasure and honour tonight to introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly assembled here this evening 18 Girl Guides and 22 Brownies from Sherwood Park. Their teachers and group leaders are Kristyn Schopf, Cheryl Stone, Kelly Meters, Francine Jans, Barbara Mostat, Corinne Johnson, Susan Jensen, Kaye Potter, Karen Laine, Monique MacDonald, Robert Ross, Evelyn Weger, Marie Gamroth. They are the 15th Mills Haven Brownies and 12th Girl Guides of Sherwood Park. We also have one little Spark. Would you please join me in welcoming them warmly to the Legislative Assembly this evening.

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

THE CHAIRMAN: We'll begin this evening's deliberations with the report on the designated subcommittee that was dealing with Health and Wellness. Just to check again to see whether or not we are in agreement as to the procedure, we have the chairman for 20 minutes, the opposition critic for 20 minutes, and, if necessary, five minutes for the other two members should they be here. If that's agreed, then we can begin.

Health and Wellness

MR. JONSON: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the chairperson of the committee I would like to report that we had a productive designated supply subcommittee on Friday morning, March 17. During that period of time, some three hours plus, members of the committee asked a number of questions to which I was able to reply but only with respect to some of the key issues raised. An undertaking was given that we will have Alberta Health and Wellness provide written or printed replies to the host of questions that were put forward.

Mr. Chairman, during the committee meeting I outlined fiscal allocations as they relate to this government's six-point health plan to protect and improve publicly funded and publicly administered health care in this province. At this point I would just like to briefly elaborate on the six-point plan, because the application of the very significant budget, some $5.2 billion, revolves around this overall plan.

While significant new funding is being provided over the next three years, we know that money alone will not solve all the pressures involved in the health system. The six-point plan for health focuses on doing things better. It focuses on working with stakeholders in the health system to use innovation, imagination, and strong management skills and to work at making our health system accessible and sustainable both now and into the future.

On Friday I spoke about the first key direction, improved access to publicly funded health services in this province. Budget 2000 also supports strategies to improve the management of the health system, our second key direction. It is increasingly important to be able to illustrate how the health system is effectively meeting Alberta's health needs. An analysis of the use and delivery of health services provides accurate information to help make the decisions that continuously improve health outcomes in the management of the overall system.

Mr. Chairman, in the coming months a new health services utilization commission will be launched in Alberta to enhance the public accountability of the health system and to do the kind of research and analysis that will support and improve management and delivery of health services.

Mr. Chairman, another strategy to improve the management of the health system is the health innovation fund. Through the fund our government is supporting the health authorities and other health care providers as they look for innovations; that is, better ways of delivering health care services and managing them. In the coming weeks our government will be announcing the launch of over 30 of the most innovative and promising of these projects.

The third key direction identified in the six-point plan is to enhance the quality of health services. Our work with regional health authorities and health professionals is going on to improve primary health care in the province, and this falls under this overall key direction as another very innovative focal point. The idea of primary health care is to help Albertans get the care they need from the person who can best provide it while minimizing the need to use acute care hospitals and emergency wards. In each case there are multidisciplinary teams that include medical, pharmaceutical, public health, mental health, and other professionals, all either located in the same building or traveling together as a team throughout a rural part of Alberta, making it easier for patients to access and receive the care they need.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, I emphasize this because this has been a focus of comments from the federal government, yes, but also has been a focus and a recommendation for the health care system from many sources: from the academic community, from other provinces. I think Alberta is leading in this particular area.

There are 26 projects under way in Alberta currently that focus on this particular primary care initiative. For instance, Alberta Health and Wellness and the Alberta Medical Association are co-operating on another seven pilot projects focusing on alternative compensation strategies and the integration of physician services with non-physician health services. We are examining new methods of physician service delivery and funding. Several of these projects are directly in support of primary health care reform.

Our government is also encouraging greater partnerships and teamwork among health professionals to make the best use of our overall health workforce. This includes looking at new ways to use nurse practitioners and implementing the new Health Professions Act.

Another strategy to enhance the quality of health services in our province is our continuing work with Alberta Wellnet. This provincewide health information network will allow health professionals to share necessary information and best practices while ensuring that patient health information remains private and confidential. Mr. Chairman, overall management of the health system will improve as a result, because it will enable us to provide better, more comprehensive, more knowledge-based health care to all parts of the province.

The fourth key direction under the six-point plan is to increase the emphasis on wellness promotion and on disease and injury prevention. Mr. Chairman, I don't mind mentioning that it is a priority of our department to shift more resources to the whole area of promotion of wellness, but of course it is always a challenge when there are many needs in the acute and long-term care treatment areas.

Budget 2000 will enable Alberta Health and Wellness and the health authorities to launch a new five-year immunization strategy aimed primarily at children. Immunization programs are among the most cost-effective health interventions available and result in substantial savings to the health care system as well as improved quality of life.

I would like to just mention, Mr. Chairman, and give recognition at this point in time to the tremendous team work, the tremendous dedication that was shown by the hundreds and hundreds of health care providers and other people that were involved in the recent meningitis vaccination campaign. It was a great effort and showed how regions could come together, professions and occupations could come together. We had a great deal of support from outside the health community. The armed forces were involved; they helped with their medical resources. We had people doing work as security guards. A whole host of people just rallied to that particular need, and I want to say a thank you to all of them.

8:10

Budget 2000, Mr. Chairman, will also enable health authorities to implement a new early detection breast cancer screening plan for all women in their high-risk years. A major initiative under this fourth key direction is to increase the emphasis on wellness, wellness promotion, and injury and disease prevention. This strategy also builds on the final report of the long-term care review, which deals with the prevention and promotion of various conditions that affect our aging population.

Further with respect to the long-term care report, or the Broda report as it's sometimes called, our government's aging-in-place strategy includes two components. The first involves the healthy aging initiatives that Alberta Health and Wellness will work with health authorities on. Professional associations will be involved as well as volunteer community agencies. We're also working, Mr. Chairman, on the whole area of providing suitable housing and suitable transition for the people who are in their senior years. We're looking right now in this budget at providing support funding for a number of innovative housing projects and continuing care initiatives.

Mr. Chairman, we also reflect in this budget that the Alberta children's initiative has set an agenda for action. Work is under way in children's mental health, children with special health needs in schools, children involved in prostitution, children with fetal alcohol syndrome, and prenatal and early childhood development. This whole range of areas is something that Alberta Health and Wellness is very much involved in.

Further, Mr. Chairman, a provincewide initiative is under way to ensure that all newborns are screened for metabolic disorders at birth to avoid future health problems. Also there are several long-term studies under way looking at maternal risk factors and low birth weight babies and congenital abnormalities. All children are being vaccinated for hepatitis B, and that's been referred to before.

New curriculum programs are being prepared in health, life skills, and physical education for kindergarten to grade 12 students, and these programs emphasize the importance of a healthy, active lifestyle. As well, job safety skills are being incorporated into several new courses that prepare students for the workforce.

So we have here, I think, a balanced overall business plan, Mr. Chairman, one which has emphasis on our seniors population, the founders of this province. We need to have a very sound health care system for them. Also, at the other end of the spectrum there are a number of initiatives here, particularly in the area of health promotion and wellness, that focus on the youngest component of our population.

Moving on to our fifth point under the six-point plan, Mr. Chairman, Budget 2000 provides for the new Premier's Advisory Council on Health. The council will help ensure the continued exploration of new ideas to protect and improve Alberta's health system, and it will provide arm's-length advice to government on health system reform. As has been previously announced, the council will be chaired by Don Mazankowski, a former Member of Parliament for 25 years and the former Deputy Prime Minister of Canada, former federal Finance minister. Of course he has quite an impressive resume. On behalf of all Albertans the chair will lead the dialogue nationally with recognized experts to identify significant emerging health system issues that face our system in this province.

Mr. Chairman, it is in this same spirit that our government has introduced the sixth direction in our business plan, and that is to protect publicly funded and publicly administered health care in this health system in this province. The government has introduced Bill 11 to put in place those legislative protections. Since the bill is before the House and will be debated in the fullness of time, I will move on to my closing remarks, but I think it is very important that that particular piece of legislation be mentioned as a very important protection of the overall health care system and also a piece of legislation which provides the opportunity for some innovation in the health care system as well.

Finally, looking toward to the future, Mr. Chairman, Albertans are in very good health generally and have access to a health system that is admired for its quality and adaptability and innovation. Our government is deeply committed to effectively planning for the future to ensure that the quality and adaptability is sustainable within our health care system.

So in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, over the next three years we will further empower Albertans to manage their health by providing them with information that enables them to protect and improve their health. We will evaluate the performance of the health system, and to play a key role in making improvements, we will call upon all stakeholders and Albertans to provide us the needed advice and the direction on which we will act.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll just go through the list of questions that I have. I have quite a few and very limited time. I'll start where I left off in the committee on Friday morning, and that was going through the different votes with regards to the different regional health authorities.

When we look at the David Thompson region, I have questions with regards to how the department will help that region address the large number of problems that currently exist with regards to the recruitment of nurses and licensed practical nurses. Where are the dollars allocated to the Red Deer assisted living for seniors partnership pilot project, which is a project for low-income seniors, which appeared to make economic sense the way the community put it together? Have there in fact been any recommendations from the department to approve that particular project? How will this budget help the specialists deal with the concerns in that particular regional health authority and expand the third floor of the Red Deer regional hospital? Also, what are the plans for the hospital renovations that are required to be undertaken in the David Thompson region?

I also will go back to a question that I didn't ask with regards to the Chinook regional health authority, and that is: what is the department's position on the report regarding the concerns of citizens in Chinook on the effects of the feedlots? It's my understanding that the regulatory review of the livestock operations, which was tabled earlier and was subsequently changed by the steering committee in order to achieve consensus with the livestock industry, has now been put on hold for at least a two-year period. Can the minister explain that?

With regards to the Premier's Advisory Council on Health I have a number of questions, starting with: why is that needed when we have a whole department of health? Is it not the role of Alberta Health to advise not only the minister but the Premier? How are we going to measure the effectiveness of the committee? Will there be an annual report that accounts for how the dollars are going to be spent by this particular committee? If the Premier needed an advisory board, why in fact was the Provincial Health Council disbanded, and what was wrong, if we can call it that, with the way that particular health council operated that we now need another advisory board? Will this particular committee be directed to deal with the population health issues that have a huge impact on health such as the number of children on welfare rolls, poverty, housing, homelessness, and education? Last but not least, how does a chair of an advisory committee get appointed when that committee does not exist? Bill 11 hasn't been passed, and in fact there is no advisory committee, yet we have a chair and no regulations for how that chair would operate. So those are a number of questions with regards to the Premier's council.

With regards to physicians, just to finish the questions that we had on that. The regional physician action plan: we hear that the plan was successful. Can we know what the retention rate was for the 85 doctors that were recruited in the particular rural communities? Can the minister explain the inaction at this point in time in terms of addressing the recommendations in the RPAP? How many of the 20 new positions that the minister announced recently in the budget statement are announced for the rural stream?

With regards to the emergency designation under section 5 of the special register of the college, how often has that been used to recruit physicians in the rural areas? These are physicians who are not eligible for full licensure. How many physicians have practised under section 5? How many, subsequent to their term being over, have actually passed the exam, and what is the retention rate of those particular physicians? Which specialists were approved, from which countries, and where eventually did they go in Alberta?

With regards to the foreign-trained doctors – actually I'm glad that the minister of human resources can potentially hear this question – it's my understanding that some of the foreign doctors who are in the accelerated RN program at Grant MacEwan do not have adequate funding to continue in that particular program. It would be helpful if the minister of human resources could look into that particular area.

8:20

I have some questions with regards to other health professions besides the physicians. The minister has recently put out news releases that are very positive regarding the hiring of frontline workers and how in fact we have exceeded the goals with regards to that hiring. On further analysis within each region, it appears that the majority of RHAs have actually not met their goals in hiring registered nurses. In fact, the reality is that Edmonton and Calgary have overshot their allocation, and that is why we are hiring more frontline workers. There is a slim majority, I believe, of RHAs who have not met the goals for hiring RNs.

I believe that in the postsecondary expansions, from what I remember, over the next four years there are only 48 new positions for medical lab and diagnostic imaging. With the shortages that we have currently in those particular professions, I would be interested in knowing what the actual workforce analysis says that the requirements are and why in fact there are not more positions available.

Alternative medicine is always an interesting one. Has the minister or the minister's department looked at any of the alternative medicines in terms of recommendations, whether it's naturopathy, homeopathic medicine. I believe that in B.C. naturopathy is covered.

Also, a question with regards to acupuncturists. It's interesting that if a physio performs acupuncture – I don't know if that's the verb – then in fact it is covered, but if it's performed under Alberta health care by an acupuncturist, it is not. I'd like to know why there is that difference if there is that kind of difference.

I was reading recently about an interesting concept. It's called parish nursing, and I believe that the department does provide some funding. How much does the department provide for that, how many are enrolled in that program, and what are the outcomes?

With regards to mental health, it would be interesting to know – and we have tried to get this breakdown from the Mental Health Board – the breakdown of all the grants and funds that are distributed by the Alberta Mental Health Board to community-based agencies. What are the criteria for providing those breakdowns? I also understand that in '97-98 there was a surplus of $26.3 million in the Alberta Mental Health Board, and I'm wondering whether there was any surplus in last year's budget or a carryover. I had asked some questions about the clubhouse project last year and would like to find out more information with regard to the clubhouse approach: how long is the demonstration, and what have the results been to this point in time?

It is my understanding as well that the crisis lines throughout this province are not funded through the Alberta Mental Health Board or the regional health authorities. I would think that that is a very crucial service as a frontline service, as an intake service for individuals who are having difficulties within their communities. It's my understanding that the crisis lines have to depend on funding that they access through fund-raising as opposed to having a stable source of funding through either Alberta Mental Health or the regional health authorities.

A further breakdown on the $95 million that is being allocated to Ponoka. Will this be for inpatient beds? How many inpatient beds will result as a result of that $95 million? How much is allocated for materials, management, support services, and administration?

The community mental health recommendations that have come forward to the minister and that the minister's department itself has been part of putting together seem to be languishing, and I guess the question is: why is the department not enacting recommendations that in fact the department has agreed to? In fact, there is no real increase in the budget for community mental health services or for satellite inpatient services such as are required up in Grande Prairie.

The minister announced just the other day that there was an eating disorders program and that dollars were allocated to that program. Where in the budget has that allocation occurred? Actually the program will be community based, and it is positive that that is the direction of that particular program.

I have some questions around the mental health community indicators. Are those particular indicators integrated with the health indicators? I think they're being tracked differently by each RHA and also by public health. Has there been a more recent report than the September 24, 1998, report regarding the community mental health indicators? Are these measures used by Alberta Health and the regional health authorities to ascertain the effectiveness of mental health services? If not, why not? If yes, how?

Is there information on the Red Deer community clinics, whose funding was going to be suspended? Now there's a bit of an extension on that. That should be part of the community mental health information system. If so, how do these particular community agencies rank as compared to other facilities?

If you look at the social problem index – and unfortunately 1992 was the most recent that I could find – the far northern region as per that social problem index ranks in the top five. So the question is: why are there no psychiatric beds planned for hospitals in the northern region and more of a concentration on how to deal with the problems that occur there?

The other question that I have. It appears that in the health department's performance measures and in its plan the issues like poverty and homelessness, the real population health indicators that affect a population's health, are not addressed in any concrete fashion.

With regard to some public health issues, there was some discussion, it appeared, regarding establishment of a protocol to immunize health care workers working in nursing homes, long-term care facilities, and home care with regards to the flu vaccination. Who is the minister consulting on this particular policy, and will it in fact be a policy that will be enacted this coming winter? If it will be, are there any costs allocated in the budget right now for the costs of the vaccines and also costs that will have to be provided to the employees who will have to take time off, perhaps, in order to be vaccinated, especially if those employees are in the private sector? How in fact does that occur?

The cost of the meningitis immunization program. How are those dollars allocated? Are they in the budget right now, or will that be through a supplementary estimate? As the rates for E coli, salmonella, and TB are increasing by the department's records, what concrete action is the government taking with regards to that?

There was also, I noticed, an item – I think it was in one of the budget documents – that the department is involved in the national food retail and food services code and regulations. What was the input? Was there any discussion around genetically modified foods?

There was some indication that the minister was interested in an agency or centre to do research on chemical sensitivity. I did not notice that anywhere in the budget or in any of the budget documents, and I'm wondering whether the department is still going to be looking at setting up a centre for research along those particular lines.

Could the minister also indicate what the role of the Sustainable Development Co-ordinating Council is and some examples of the initiatives undertaken by the health department – it indicates in the budget that the health department has undertaken some initiatives – pertaining to sustainable resource management of diseases? I believe that's what was referred to. Also, given the fact that the population health determinants are extremely important, why hasn't there been a larger increase in the role of public health?

8:30

Injury prevention. The department has taken a very important step in setting up the centre for injury prevention. I have a number of questions with regards to possible policy direction that the government may take. One, there was a new study from the United States with regards to banning contact in hockey for children under the age of 15. Has the department ever looked at enacting something like that or looking at whether or not that is a direction the government would want to go to? I'm not sure; I'm asking. There appear to be a fair number of accidents due to contact in hockey.

Another question that I have is with regards to snowmobile usage for children. Is the government looking at any initiatives with regards to that? Also, where is the whole issue around bike helmets? What support is going to be provided particularly to neurotrauma programs? Some of the other provinces are looking at proposals where a portion of the relevant traffic violations go to a neurotrauma fund. What other funding mechanisms is the government looking at?

Ambulances I believe are an integral part of our health care delivery system, yet I keep hearing from paramedics that there are concerns especially in some of the rural areas with regards to the safety of the vehicle. Some of the vehicles are very old, have lots of mileage, and the frequency of inspection is not very often and inadequate. One person indicated to me that the cardiac monitors in the ambulances in some of the rural areas are so old that the company who provides those monitors refuses to service them anymore. So there may be a requirement to look at the regulations with regards to ambulances in this province. I also have a question as to what the minister is going to do about the AAMD and C resolution on ambulance service and funding, and how many recommendations of the Judy Gordon report, which is about four years old now, have been enacted and which ones? Is the province looking at standardizing the usage of paramedics across the province at all?

Home care, long-term care, and lodges are a whole huge area that almost requires a session to deal with in terms of the questions that I would like to ask, as are issues around laboratory services, telemedicine, Wellnet, women's health, primary health care, and pharmacare, whether the government is considering a program, if not national, like Quebec's program. Have there been any studies or recommendations made with regards to pharmacare? Has the department given any thoughts to a pharmacy audit program at all to determine how the dollars are being spent?

There is an issue around the approval of drugs, in particular drugs with regards to helping individuals who are suffering from MS and diabetes – I will provide some information to the minister on that – whether or not it will be possible to cover those drugs. I had one letter from an individual who indicated that their daughter-in-law almost died because of the fact that she could not afford the insulin that was required. That is a huge, huge area.

The waiting lists with regards to cancer and some other areas I will probably not be able to cover in full detail.

With regards to home care my questions centre around what percentage of the market in home care provision in this province right now do large corporations and their subsidiaries have, corporations such as Olsten and Comcare. Does the Auditor General or the minister's office overview the number of beds, the contracts, and quality of care with regards to home care that's being provided throughout this province? If not, why not? Is this something that the Health Services Utilization Commission will or can monitor? If so, how will they monitor that? What systems are currently in place to ensure that private companies spending public funds are being monitored and that the dollars are being used wisely?

I will forward the rest of my questions to the minister, and I will table them in the Legislative Assembly so that he can answer them as well. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business at hand and the proposed estimates for the Department of Health and Wellness, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$5,623,442,000
--	-----------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE CHAIRMAN: Carried.

Learning

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin the 20, 20 period we have the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to give a report of the meeting of the designated supply subcommittee on Learning which was held on Monday, March 6, at 8 a.m. In my view we had a very good meeting, indeed. By unanimous agreement of our subcommittee members we met for about two and a half of the usual four hours. The minister and members engaged in what amounted to a relaxed yet very informative dialogue. Each member appeared to have plenty of opportunity to ask the questions they wanted to ask of the minister. With that, I thought it was important that everybody had an appropriate opportunity to address Alberta Learning's estimates. Most of the questions that were asked during the meeting were most ably answered by the Minister of Learning, and he will be tabling the answers to the remaining questions in the coming weeks. There were no recommendations that came out of this designated supply subcommittee.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I conclude my summary. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I have a few questions for the minister that I didn't have an opportunity to raise during our previous session. A lot of these questions arise out of the review of the framework for funding school boards that was conducted for the previous minister of education in May of 1999. I know that the ministry has acted on some of these recommendations, but there are a number of others that I would be interested in knowing the progress the department has made and whether or not the recommendations are going to eventually be accepted or rejected.

8:40

The context for this year's budget estimates is rather unusual. There are a large number of parents across the province that firmly believe that the education system is underfunded, and the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan and myself heard from those parents at a meeting in Fort Saskatchewan where six of the schools chronicled the effect of underfunding on their particular schools. We heard the same message at a forum in northeast Edmonton where a series of schools went through the same exercise and listed the impact of underfunding on their schools. That underfunding has resulted in larger-than-acceptable classes. It's resulted in youngsters not getting the individual attention that they require, and it's placed a strain on schools and school parent support groups in terms of fund-raising.

A second piece of information that applies to this year's estimates is a question that has been raised by the Premier himself when he asks the question: how much is enough? We've heard that question raised by the Premier in this Legislature a number of times, and that's the very question that a number of parents are beginning to address themselves to. It's a question, I think, that they have decided is very important to be answered.

A third factor in these estimates is that as you examine the business plans – and that's not peculiar to this business plan but the previous business plans – there's never been set forth a rationale for the funds that are provided to schools. Other than taking the number of students and the number of dollars the government wants to spend on learning and doing some quick division, there's never been a rationale for why money is allocated, for instance on a per pupil basis, the way that it is from the ministry. So there are those factors working on this set of estimates.

I'd like to ask the questions from the review of the funding framework within that kind of a context. If you look at recommendation 1, you will see that the recommendation is that the ministry "initiate a review to ensure that all socio-economic and other demographic factors that may have an impact on instruction costs are being addressed equitably for all [schools]." So recommendation 1 of the review focuses on equity and socioeconomic status of students' parents.

Recommendation 2 reads: "Initiate a study to identify an alternative funding approach that will not unduly limit boards' capacity to meet the needs of [their] students." Then it says that "the scope of the study should be broad enough to identify causes and to develop recommendations and strategies that may reduce incidence rates." They're talking about severe and emotional behavioural disabilities. So again a call for an alternative funding approach.

Now, recommendations 4 and 5 are in the same vein. Recommendation 4 asks that the ministry "implement an equity adjustment for above average teacher grid placement costs on a three-year trial . . . effective September 1, 1999." If I could maybe just continue with number 5: the ministry undertake a complete analysis of the cost of utilities, services and trades, the impact of travel within a school jurisdiction and space utilization. Use this information to determine cost variances across the province that are beyond a board's control.

So all of those recommendations are aimed at trying to either improve or replace the funding formula that the department is currently using. I guess my question to the minister is: what is the ministry doing in terms of looking into alternate funding formulas, and how are they approaching determining how much is enough?

There are some computer models that I know have been developed elsewhere that address that very problem. There's a model called a resource cost model that's being used south of the border. It's a model that claims to address both equity and adequacy of funding. It is the equity the government has claimed has been addressed, but the question that the Premier and those parents are raising is the question of adequacy. How much is enough? How much is needed to fund youngsters adequately in schools?

The resource cost model that's being used elsewhere is one that takes units that school boards have to deal with. For instance, the unit might be a 6th grade class, and to cost out that resource, to provide the resources for that class, what that actually cost - for instance, for a full-time teacher it might cost part of a teacher aide. There's obviously capital equipment in terms of desks, tables, and chairs in the classroom, and there are supplies and materials that the youngsters need. They go through a list. They have a rather lengthy inventory they use to sort out what those costs are for a particular classroom. One of the claims they make for their model is that it is able to accommodate differences in school sizes. It doesn't make any difference whether the school is a large high school like Harry Ainlay or a small rural school with 32 students; this formula will identify the costs.

It can also accommodate school location, whether that location is in a remote part of the province, whether it's in an inner-city location or it's in a suburb. The model will also accommodate for a mix of students. So if you have a number of special-needs students or if you have a program like the international baccalaureate program, this cost resource model claims that it can accommodate those differences and come up with costing that makes sense, and it allows administrators and school boards and parents to look at a school situation and say: what is it costing right now, and how much more would it cost to do the kinds of things we think should be done in our school? So they argue. I have to admit that I have no personal experience with the model, Mr. Chairman, but I put it forth as one proposal that the ministry might look at.

I think it's that more global looking at the funding formula that all of these recommendations are addressing, at least these first five recommendations from the framework for funding school boards review, and in one way or another they're picking away at parts of the current formula and trying to suggest improvements. I would submit that the task is larger than that, that there needs to be an overall look at the funding.

I think we shouldn't go without noting that the ministry has acted on one of the recommendations, recommendation 8, which dealt with the cash flow to school boards. Making monthly payments to school boards from the general revenue fund and the Alberta school foundation fund has made a huge difference to boards in terms of the interest they've had to pay and again is making sure that the money that is allocated goes to educational use and not to support interest payments at the bank.

8:50

One of the other items in the review that causes great concern among school board members and teachers and principals is the use of earmarked funding, and we made reference to this in the previous session on estimates. Earmarked funding is rejected as much by school boards as it is by the provincial government when the federal government earmarks funds. No one likes them. They take the money and say, "Yes, we can use it," but they don't like the restrictions that are placed on them.

My question to the minister in terms of earmarked funding would be: how much has been done to meet the recommendations in the review? They asked for a number of things; for instance, that when there are earmarked funds, there be a set of specific objectives laid out for those funds. They asked that measures be in place in terms of: how will they determine whether or not the earmarked funds have been successful in achieving the goals for which they were originally intended? They also asked that there be sunset clauses, where applicable, at the very beginning of the initiatives, so that if it's the early literacy initiative, those people that put in place those programs will know that the program has a definitive end and can plan accordingly; that when an earmarked fund is proven successful, it be added to the basic instructional grant. So my question to the minister would be: just what kind of progress have they made in terms of meeting the recommendations of the review panel in terms of earmarked funds?

There was a great deal of attention paid in the review to differences in costs among boards. In the highway 2 corridor teacher costs are much higher than they are in other parts of the province, and there have been a number of reasons put forth for that. One was the proximity of universities and colleges, that teachers want access to those facilities. There are additional costs, for instance, in Lethbridge if they have a policy where they would like to hire graduates of their own university. Their program requires a minimum of five years of teacher education before you can practise, so they are faced immediately with additional costs. So I would ask the minister: what has been done in terms of trying to in some way make some adjustments for costs that are often out of the control of school boards and which put those who have costs above the average at a disadvantage in trying to serve youngsters? That was what recommendation 21 was getting at, that they look at some of the variances among school jurisdictions and try to adjust the formulas for that.

One of the major criticisms of those people who were interviewed was the almost commonly held view that the funding framework does not provide the kind of flexibility that school boards need to meet local decisions. Again my question would be: what moves has the ministry made? Are there moves in these estimates that will add to the flexibility of school boards and allow them to better address local needs?

I've talked about earmarked grants and just would like to raise a number of other issues that I think I would appreciate some comment on from the ministry. There's been talk about fund-raising, and I'd like to know the kind of progress and what the budget intends in terms of parent fund-raising and the source of funds. Does this source of funds make a difference to the ministry? I know that there's a court case right now. Again, in the interests of making school boards more accountable to local ratepayers and allowing them to tailor-make programs for the particular student population they serve, has there been consideration to giving them some access to the tax base?

Has any work been done on addressing the inequities resulting from the accumulated reserves before regionalization and the joining together of a number of boards? Some of those boards had reserve funds set aside, others had deficits, and that has resulted in some inequities. Has any work been done on addressing those inequities?

The last one, of course, is a perennial for us, and that's early childhood services. Has there been any move or is there going to be any move to fund them at .5 of the rates of all the funding categories for grades 1 to 12?

Before I come to the end of my time, Mr. Chairman, I would like to propose an amendment. I believe you have a copy of the amendment. If I might read the amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, hon. member. This will be known as amendment A1. Go ahead.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you.

Be it resolved that the estimates for the standing policy committee on Learning under reference 1.0.11 of the 2000-2001 estimates of the Department of Learning be reduced by $96,000 so that the operating expense and capital investment to be voted is $3,105,307,000.

Mr. Chairman, this is the perennial motion that we put forward. The effect would be to eliminate the money for the standing policy committee on learning. Our arguments are the arguments that we have made in the past, that those are committees that all elected members of the Legislature should have an opportunity to speak to and to take part in, and if it's being paid for out of tax dollars, as legislators we all should have access to those committees.

So that's my amendment. Thanks, Mr. Chairman.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering, then, the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Learning, are you ready for the vote?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE CHAIRMAN: Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$3,105,403,000
Non-budgetary Disbursements	$65,800,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Hon. members, just some guidance from you. It looks like in the past we have been doing a similar 20, 20, and five.

9:00

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Satisfactory.

THE CHAIRMAN: That's satisfactory? That's agreeable?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Justice and Attorney General

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin this evening's deliberations, we'll call upon the Minister of Justice.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to be here to continue our discussion pertaining to the main estimates and business plan for Alberta Justice, that we started discussion on on March 6 in subcommittee B. Again I'd like to draw the members' attention to Deputy Minister and Deputy Attorney General Mr. Paul Bourque; Mr. Dan Mercer, executive director of strategic services; Mr. Shawkat Sabur, director of financial services; and Jack Janssen from my office, all of whom continue to prevail with us this evening, having had the opportunity to persevere through the earlier reports. I'd like to ask members of the House to give them a warm welcome.

At the last meeting on March 6 I reviewed with the subcommittee the environment in which we operate, the relevant aspects of the Summit on Justice, our budget estimates, and what's new and improved with respect to goals and strategic initiatives. Since I went over that material in some detail and I know my hon. colleagues would like to hear more, I'll go through it in detail. No, I won't, but I will mention a few highlights and talk about some of the significant changes from the previous year.

We've eliminated the goal of partnering with outside stakeholders to support the administration of justice from this year's business plans, but I want to emphasize again, as I did in committee on March 6, that that does not mean we intend to stop collaborating with our stakeholders, nor does it mean we intend to stop partnering. Rather, it means quite the opposite. We have integrated and included partnering as part of our operation in a significant manner, and it's now a standard practice in the department.

DR. TAYLOR: You're finally going to get tough on crime.

MR. HANCOCK: We're going to be tough on crime.

More significantly, we've removed public satisfaction with the justice system as a performance measure. From our surveys we've learned that over 90 percent of Albertans do not realize that crime in their communities is going down.

DR. TAYLOR: No. I can't believe it.

MR. HANCOCK: Even in your community it's going down.

Almost 70 percent are unaware that the province is responsible for administering justice in Alberta. Because of these findings we're recommending a more effective measure of public satisfaction with the justice system. Instead of asking the public how satisfied they are with the job Alberta Justice is doing, we plan to ask them how safe they feel in their homes and neighbourhoods, and we plan to ask them how satisfied they are with the level of policing in their communities. These questions will provide a truer picture of how satisfied Albertans are with the administration of justice in the province.

A final change is that we've added a performance measure specifying the number of community service hours provided by offenders. While this may not be the best way of measuring community involvement and contribution to the community, one of the objectives of our corrections program is to challenge offenders to give something back to their communities, challenge offenders to learn in many ways the benefit of making a contribution to communities. As a result, we'll measure how many hours of service Alberta offenders provide to nonprofit organizations, community groups, municipalities, and other government ministries.

Many of our initiatives, Mr. Chairman, respond to what we heard from the summit. Others recognize and respond to the ever changing social and economic climate of the province. All these initiatives are broadly based and will result in a justice system which is more sensitive to the needs of citizens.

I'd like to briefly review the financial context of the business plan. Our spending targets are approximately $457 million, $447 million, and $452 million over the next three years. This represents an increase of about $45.5 million for the year 2000-2001. Of this, $30.5 million is committed to nondiscretionary expenditures such as judicial and general employee compensation and contracted services. Approximately $6.2 million will be cost recovered either from the federal government or through self-funded programs and directed to victims of crime and youth criminal justice program implementation. The remaining $8.8 million represents discretionary funding increases and will be used to implement the recommendations of the Summit on Justice. This includes funding for provincial and criminal and family and youth courts, additional Crown counsel, court mediation programs, First Nations policing, and restorative justice programs.

As I reviewed with the subcommittee in detail on March 6, our major initiatives this year are in the areas of family law reform, and in that context I'd like to once again thank the Member for Calgary-Lougheed for taking on the job as the chair of the unified family court task force. I think this is a very important initiative, one that's long overdue in Alberta, and I believe that under the capable guidance of the Member for Calgary-Lougheed, which she's shown in a number of other justice reviews in the past, this initiative will be one whose time has come.

[Mrs. Laing in the chair]

We have, of course, the review of the Police Act happening. We have initiatives in the area of youth justice, improving our courts, restorative justice approaches, First Nations policing and prosecution, policing and crime prevention, private trustee monitoring, and victim services. As well as these objectives related to the summit, we'll be undertaking corporate development objectives to build support for our programs, and we will undertake a communications plan to better inform Albertans about how the justice system works and, more importantly, how they can get access to it.

In our previous subcommittee meetings I heard many comments from members relating to the administration of justice, which is, Madam Chairman, as it should be. The administration of justice touches every Albertan. I know that we're all interested in ensuring that it continues to work in the public interest. We have a major focus on community justice, and we'll be discussing a community justice policy over the course of the next year. I continue to maintain that justice begins in the community, that we all have an important stake and an important role to play in making sure we have safe communities. So with this in mind I've taken careful note of the comments made by subcommittee members in the past. I will listen carefully to comments made this evening.

I'd like to take this opportunity to table responses to those questions that I was unable to answer before the House at the time of the subcommittee meeting, and I'd be more than happy to deal with any other issues that might come up.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Madam Chairman. Good evening, Mr. Minister. A couple of observations I want to make straight off. Sometimes the members on this side have been accused of being too miserly with praise when government does things properly. I'm not sure I'd ever agree with that assessment.

I do want to make the observation that there should be some recognition that it's extremely encouraging to have as our top justice official in the province, the Minister of Justice, somebody who understands that in fact our communities are very safe, that Albertans are exceedingly fortunate in terms of the level of public safety they're able to enjoy in their communities, and also and perhaps most importantly, a Minister of Justice who understands that he has a huge, an enormous responsibility to explain the justice system to the people of this province instead of playing on their prejudices and fears, torquing issues, which has the effect of doing such a huge disservice to the importance of the issues of the people who work in the field, the people who work in the system, the excellent men and women who make up the judiciary in this province whether at the Court of Appeal or Queen's Bench or Provincial Court. So I make that observation just to say that it's recognized and certainly noted by members of the opposition.

Also, some of the steps in terms of dealing with performance measures are heartening, because I think it suggests a more thoughtful, analytical, rational approach to trying to measure whether the dollars that are spent by the Department of Justice are well spent.

9:10

Now, we don't want to go on with praise too long, because time is short and there are lots of things that haven't done as well as we'd like. Let me start with aboriginal justice. Madam Chairman, the Cawsey commission – it was a number of years ago, but it's still very fresh in this member's mind – made a number of recommendations. I mean, they looked at the absolutely miserable job we do in this province, as many of the other prairie provinces do as well, in terms of dealing with issues unique to aboriginal offenders and aboriginal communities. That resulted in a host of recommendations that the Cawsey commission made.

You know, to the government's credit – and even this minister can't claim credit for some of the things his predecessors did – there was a move to try and adopt some of the Cawsey recommendations, but one of the chief recommendations was nixed by the government, and that was the recommendation to create an aboriginal justice commission. The purpose of that was to create a body that would be able to provide a degree of high-profile leadership, a body that would be able to challenge the Justice minister and the provincial government to move in areas where progress and reform were proceeding at a glacial pace. What was identified by the Cawsey commission was the need for somebody to audit, supervise, manage, assess progress in terms of the aboriginal community justice reform.

Now, what happened is that the provincial government said no to an aboriginal justice commission. The reasons have never been satisfactorily explained to me, but I've deduced it comes down to this. The provincial government is fearful, absolutely fearful of having an independent body of some considerable stature that would be able to blow the whistle on aboriginal justice reforms that are either not meeting the test, not proceeding adequately, or not having satisfactory results.

This is what the Justice department did, and this was a number of years ago, before the current minister, before the current deputy minister assumed their offices. They created a sort of aboriginal justice secretariat. A very capable woman was appointed to coordinate some different initiatives, to report to the minister, but that was the rub, Madam Chairman. It was reporting to the minister. You don't have anybody keeping the Minister of Justice on his toes, challenging the minister.

If we accept that the one area where probably our Justice department has been least effective is dealing with the aboriginal justice issues in this province, this is the thing that really needed to be kick started. What the province did was look at the Cawsey report, which called for a very bold initiative, and didn't want to go there. Instead, they decided they wanted to fiddle with incremental progress. Well, Mr. Minister, the incremental progress is too slow. We're not making the headway that the Cawsey report had called for, had envisioned with an aboriginal justice commission. I want to ask the minister whether he's reconsidered that position, whether he now is prepared to do what the Cawsey commission recommended, which is to create an aboriginal justice commission.

This is a little bit like putting a bus on the road and talking about how nicely outfitted it is but not putting a driver behind the wheel. I suppose if you take the brakes off and put it into neutral, the bus, if you've got a bit of a slope, can roll down the hill a little bit, but it can't go uphill and it can't negotiate turns and the rest of those things. That's sort of where we're at in terms of aboriginal justice.

It's not to denigrate or deny that some positive developments have happened. From my perspective, Madam Chairman, it's too little; it's too slow. I think we can do more, and having an aboriginal justice commission doing an annual report, which the minister would have to bring in – his deputy minister and his assistants would not want to have to deal with the embarrassment of a bad report card. You know, I'm not sure they pay much attention when they get bad report cards from us in the opposition. Maybe they'd pay more attention if we had a high-powered commission doing that kind of assessment. That continues to be a problem, and I don't know what the minister's current position on that is.

The other question I raise with the minister. When I look at Hansard, the minister talked about the federal Youth Criminal Justice Act. In fact, I've highlighted the note here because I was interested. This is at page B24. He said: "We've had commentary on that. We've had concerns about how far it goes." Then he goes on to say, "We've encouraged the federal government to make changes to that act to deal with some of the issues and concerns we have." That would be the end of the quote.

The point is this. This Minister of Justice is obviously putting forward a set of recommendations for legislative change to the Parliament of Canada. But do you know what, Madam Chairman? The elected members of this Assembly don't know what the government of Alberta is putting forward. What's scary is that the one example used by the Minister of Justice is one that caused me great concern, and that's reducing the age to throw out a great big dragnet and bring in more of those children – we're talking about people under the current age caught by the Young Offender Act – under this misguided notion, in my view, that these children are somehow going to benefit by being ensnared by the criminal justice system.

Madam Chairman, the evidence is absolutely overwhelming that younger children may well need help if they're in homes where they're at risk of abuse, if they're not being properly supervised, guided, supported, but the answer is not to make criminals of them, to bring them into the criminal justice system. The answer is for this minister to talk to the minister responsible for Children's Services and to talk to the Minister of Learning and the Minister of Health and Wellness and identify what kinds of programs have to be put in place to catch those children at risk and deal with them.

If this is an example, if this minister's idea of making recommendations to the federal government on this act is to reduce the age and drop more kids into this hole, then I'm scared stiff about what other recommendations he's making on our behalf. Will the Minister of Justice provide us with a list of all the recommendations, provide us with the submission he's made to federal Justice minister Anne McLellan or to whomever else in the federal government he's making that submission to? [interjection] Well, we'll see who ignores anything. We just gave you an example of a strong recommendation to this government that they ignored, that they choose not to accept.

I'm less worried, frankly, about what the federal government is doing than what recommendations our provincial government is making allegedly on our behalf. Will the Minister of Justice commit to provide us in detail the submissions that are being made to the federal government in terms of what changes they want in the Youth Criminal Justice Act? As I say, if I look at B24, I only see the one example.

Speaking of young offenders, there was some good information given by the minister last time on youth justice committees. If the minister would give us a list, perhaps, of the alternative measures committees that exist under section 4 of the Young Offenders Act, give us a list of the youth justice committees that currently exist under section 69 of the Young Offenders Act.

Just to go back in history a little bit, Madam Chairman, in terms of youth justice committees we lag badly behind. We had Wabasca-Desmarais, and we had Slave Lake, and there was a third aboriginal-based youth justice committee years ago. But that was it. Beyond that, we weren't spreading out. Then a couple of years ago, perhaps three years ago, finally a bit of a fire under our former Minister of Justice, and we started seeing a big push in terms of implementing and establishing a lot of youth justice committees. I know we have a considerable number. I'd like the minister to tell us what evaluation is being done on the effectiveness of those. When we looked back to the early days in New Zealand, where they'd done a lot of work with youth justice committees, and Maryland, Massachusetts, and I think some other states like that that had a lot of experience with them, we saw that there were some pretty exciting developments.

9:20

This is a government that says they believe in performance measures, in evaluation, so I'm asking the Minister of Justice to tell us what evaluation is being undertaken to determine what kind of success those alternative justice committees under section 4, the youth justice committees under section 6(9) are having, what kind of difference they're making in those communities. If we can have that update from the minister, we'd sure appreciate it.

Now, if the minister looks at his business plan summary on page 322 of the budget book, we have the number of eligible persons receiving legal aid services. We see that in 1999-2000 the target was 93,190, and in 2000-2001 the target is 94,177. Does this minister not recognize the rate at which this province is growing? I don't know where this projection comes from unless you start off by accepting that a whole lot of people are going to be denied access to their own court system because they're not going to get legal aid certificates.

On what possible basis would this minister think that it's realistic to increase the number of legal aid certificates – I take it these are certificates, not clients, because some clients may have multiple certificates. Firstly, the minister might indicate whether that chart on the bottom of page 322 represents 93,190 clients or 93,190 certificates and the same for 2000-01. Then can he particularize what specific criteria he's using to project such a modest increase?

I can tell you just from my own experience in Calgary that not everybody coming to the city of Calgary – Madam Chairman, you know better than anybody how quickly this city is growing, and they're not all people with PhDs and marketable job skills. They're not all journeyman carpenters or electricians. A lot of those people are young people from P.E.I. or Newfoundland or Quebec that couldn't find a job in their home province. They've come out here looking for work. Those people don't have a lot of job skills. That may be an area where some of those people are going to be involved in activity that requires legal aid certificates. That's part of the reality of that population growth. So I don't know why the government is projecting such a modest increase when we know the way this province is growing.

Perhaps the minister can particularize what the basis of that projected target is. How many people are going to be denied legal aid certificates?

I'm also a bit concerned – despite what the Minister of Resource Development suggests, it's been a long time since I've done very much legal aid work. I'm not as much of an expert in it as he tries to suggest, Madam Chairman. But I do know this, that we have difficulty . . . [interjection]

You know, somebody suggests that it's almost 9:30, and they'd like me to sit down. Well, the short answer to that is that we have too little time to challenge your colleagues and your cabinet to make sure we're providing the kind of access to legal services that Albertans should be entitled to, and I don't feel badly at all, Madam Minister, through the chair.

MRS. NELSON: Calgary-Foothills.

MR. DICKSON: Calgary-Foothills. I have relatives living in that constituency. I'm constantly reminded of the work being done that . . .

MRS. NELSON: They all voted for me, Gary.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman, now the Member for Calgary-Foothills is just being outright provocative. So I'm not even going to look her in the eye, because I know she's going to get me going, talking about the next election campaign in Calgary-Foothills and who is taking a campaign sign for her and who isn't. I'm not going to be baited so easily.

Madam Chairman, I was very disappointed in the response I got when we were talking on March 6. That was the time when I pointed out to the minister that we have this inequality, and while the Member for Calgary-Lougheed is on the premises, I want to remind her that we have a problem with ages in terms of support obligations. I'm not going to go through it all. I'll just refer the minister to page B21. The minister said in answer, "We're reviewing in total the family law legislation, doing a comprehensive review of it." Now, when I read Hansard, I was frightened for a moment, because my response was, "Excellent." I hasten to add that I'm delighted to see movement on it, but I've learned there's no prospect that we're going to see legislation in this respect for the balance of 2000. Since many of us expect there's going to be an election, there's a real concern.

MR. HANCOCK: That won't stop us from bringing it back after the election, Gary.

MR. DICKSON: Well, we will bring it back after the election, Madam Minister.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Madam Chairman.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman. I'm sorry. Nobody more richly deserves than you a seat at the cabinet table, and every time I see you, I cannot believe that the Premier overlooks your talents and your hard work in Calgary-Bow. In fact, it makes me wonder. If the Premier of this province overlooks the good talent he has available languishing on the backbenches of this Legislature, you wonder what other kinds of errors of judgment he's making when it comes to ensuring good access to the legal system in this province.

Finally, just changing the subject completely, the Justice department of this province did a terrific thing in terms of making those renovations to the youth and family court, Provincial Court in the city of Calgary in the John J. Bowlen Building. But I come back and ask again – and the minister may say that this is Infrastructure, but you know, Madam Chairman, he's got a responsibility too. When are we going to see that new courthouse in Calgary?

Thanks very much, Madam Chairman.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Any other speakers?

After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Justice, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$419,916,000
--	---------------

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Carried.

Municipal Affairs

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Mr. Minister. [interjections]

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Is it okay for me to talk too?

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Yes. Go ahead.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Madam Chairman, I'm pleased to . . . [interjections]

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, would you like to begin, please?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I'm pleased to provide responses for the vast majority of the questions that were not answered in detail last Monday evening. There are a few that were raised last week that remain outstanding, and I'll forward the responses to those in writing as soon as they are completed. In the meantime I'd like to table the questions that we have answers for.

9:30

Madam Chairman, I would only offer a few comments in addition to the discussion of last week. I want to thank the members for Edmonton-Manning, Edmonton-Rutherford, Calgary-Buffalo, West Yellowhead, and Edmonton-Mill Woods for their questions and their comments.

On the subject of education property taxes I'd reiterate my comments of last week to the members opposite to bring forward any ideas and thoughts they may have to the MLA committee, headed by our hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane. I remember the words of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods when he said that we're all in this together, that tax money is pooled for the common interest, that we can't continually attack each other if the system is going to work, and that it's built on trust and sharing and trying to do the best we can for each other.

Those were wise words and certainly should be repeated and quoted. I'm encouraged by those words, Madam Chairman, and look forward to his and Edmonton-Manning's participation in phase 2 of the MLA committee's work.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

In reflecting on the question raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo last Monday evening, I was very interested to hear from a constituent on the weekend who in an obvious moment of boredom while flipping through channels happened to catch some of the coverage of the federal Liberal convention in Ottawa this past week. It appears that the Member for Calgary-Buffalo was questioning the Prime Minister on the federal freedom of information legislation. He told the Prime Minister and the entire federal cabinet that the federal act was outdated. He said, and I quote: the existing federal legislation has been eclipsed by much stronger laws in Ontario, in British Columbia, and in Alberta. I find it very interesting that the Member for Calgary-Buffalo repeatedly criticizes our legislation, adopts one point of view in this House in nothing more than a very vocal attempt to score political points and then contradicts himself with a completely different assessment of our freedom of information legislation in front of the federal counterparts in Ottawa.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, the members of the subcommittee will recall the comments of the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo regarding federal Bill C-6. He pointed out to this Assembly that Albertans were not being involved in consultation on this very important legislation. He questioned the awareness of Albertans on this matter. As I pointed out last Monday, this is a federal government bill, and the federal government's complete failure to consult with Canadians on this matter is shocking. Given the Member for Calgary-Buffalo's interest in this matter and his strong words just seven days ago, I'm at a loss to understand why the hon. member opposite while at a national forum – in fact, it was on a national stage with an opportunity to be heard on national television and make the point directly to the Prime Minister, the entire federal cabinet, and other provincial Liberal leaders from across the country – chose to ignore the very real concerns of Albertans and Bill C-6.

Mr. Chairman, I find it very interesting that he had the opportunity to raise these concerns about the lack of consultation and to indeed communicate on this, quote, important matter at the highest possible level, but he chose not to. This hon. member chose not to raise the concerns he raised in this House just last week on Bill C-6 and the need for more and more meaningful consultation by the federal government. Once again, we have a situation where the hon. member opposite seems to have one critical point of view in this House and is completely silent on the matter when he is in front of his federal counterparts.

Those are a few of the comments that I have for tonight, Mr. Chairman. I conclude my remarks, and I will listen with great interest to the comments from the other side.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning on the estimates.

MR. GIBBONS: Mr. Chairman, I think you know what kind of a temper I have.

It was interesting listening to the minister, and actually I hope there are lots of answers in what he's tabled tonight, because we had to go to the Blues, to Hansard, to get any answers on this particular item.

Over the last week we actually got an information news release, Municipal Grant Program Offers Bonus for Intermunicipal Cooperation. This is a very good program – and I don't want to sit here knocking it – to the point of emphasizing that some of the items in here are actually very good, that I hope all municipalities actually go forward on. Last weekend at the home show I was talking to quite a few towns and municipalities that were actually displaying their wares, and the town of Viking and the town of Wetaskiwin said that they are going to participate and submit something to the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program.

I'm going to ask a few more questions so that we can get it on record. I'm going to start with the Municipal Government Board. The gross budget for the MGB was $1.805 million, and the forecast expenses are $2.157 million. The 2000-2001 gross expenses are estimated at $1.847 million. The forecast is $352,000, which is 19 percent over budget, and the estimate gives the MGB an increase of $42,000. Will the minister explain why the MGB overspent its budget by $352,000? Why is the MGB receiving an increase of $42,000 for its 2000-2001 budget? What is the backlog of appeals currently facing the MGB, and how many appeals were heard in 1999-2000? How many of these would be considered major appeals requiring a significant amount of the board's resources? Has the minister plans for increased mediation to relieve some of the caseload with which the board was previously backlogged? How is the minister evaluating the success of mediation in municipal disputes?

We have quite a few different items under disaster recovery. Will the minister provide details of where the $10.283 million for disaster recovery was spent? Why, despite the forecast being over 800 percent over the previous budget, has the minister reduced the 2000-2001 budget in disaster recovery by 45 percent?

We're reading in the paper and following a few items on fire commissioners. Will the minister explain what expenses are included under program 3.3.4, fire commissioners, and why the forecast is 235 percent over budget? Why is the budget for the fire commissioners receiving an increase of 16 percent in 2000-2001? Is that because it is proposed to be a very dry year?

There are a number of items, like petroleum storage tanks. What expenses are going to be covered by the $10 million budget for the petroleum storage tanks in 2000-2001, and how many tanks does the province have to deal with under this program? Are the taxpayers having to pay to support errors made by the private sector?

Regional services, 3.3.3. Will the minister provide details of the type of services included under regional services and explain why, even though the forecast is under budget, the program is still receiving an increase in 2000-2001?

Branch management and programs. Will the minister detail what types of spending are covered under branch management and programs for disaster services and explain why the program is receiving a budget increase of $85,000 for 2001? That relays into some of the other questions I asked around disaster recovery.

9:40

It was interesting to listen in the committee to the questions to the members presented from AUMA. We're talking about grants. We're talking about dollars and cents. They're looking for stable, predictable funding. When we're still relying on grants, I think this is the biggest problem we do have. If they were treated like true partners and as a true government that could govern themselves, maybe they wouldn't need a grant. Maybe we have to look at the three-year plan that is proposed. Don't wag the carrot. Don't put the one-year dollars out there. Don't base all your budgeting on the difference between $12 and $32 a barrel for oil. Actually sit down and do an overall view of what's happening. They came with some good lobbying factors and very good deliberations to the people in room 512. I hope that everything I've said in Municipal Affairs, everything I've said in my deliveries is that we have to look at our local governments, treat them as true partners.

To put things on record that they presented, municipal governments must have a fiscal capacity to fulfill their mandate through primary access to the property tax base. Now, it would be better to sit down and look at how tax base dollars are going back to them instead of throwing back the question: "Well, what do you want? What's your answer?" I believe they should not be pressed into a corner. Don't give them grants. Treat it like their own tax base so that they can go out there and look after a stable, long-term, and progressive source of revenue.

You know, we've looked in the last five, six years actually at the downloading from the federal government to the provincial, from the provincial down to the local governments. The time for playing that one-string guitar from both levels of government should be over and long gone. There is probably a better ruling factor, and that is that the municipalities throughout this province try their best. I believe, from everybody that I have gone to, that they're doing a very good job.

I put some questions out on the table last week on what is actually being said to me out in local Alberta and some of the items that they're actually stressing. This is what I put into Infrastructure on Thursday. Their number one item is downloading. That's their biggest concern. The fourth one is infrastructure, fast moving up into second, and the second, in my tabulation, is being treated as a child of the provincial government and the lack of respect from those MLAs that actually did sit in local government in their background.

Education tax. Here we are. We are tinkering. I brought this up before. I know that the people from AUMA didn't come forward with a direct answer on what should be happening with education tax. I believe that what was mentioned today is that the 60-40 is actually 62-38 on the overall average. In some areas of this province it's 70-30, and in some areas it's 75-25. I hope that we are looking at that. I'm tired of looking at the tinkering, listening to the tinkering. We have to look at, hopefully, what was mentioned by the minister, that the committee is working long and hard on it, consulting maybe for the first time on this particular item. That's major.

I could talk throughout this whole thing on what was brought forward. I'm glad, like you said yourself, Mr. Minister, about what was coming forward on the MGA changes. I brought my thoughts to the AUMA at the end of January, saying that there were too many submissions to the MGA each year and that it seems to be coming from the two cities with all the legal beagles that are actually pushing all these different items forward. But I do believe that there were some good thoughts being brought forward at the AUMA in the fall when they worked on their policies and their submissions to the MGA. I do know that there is a committee headed up by the mayor of Claresholm, and I've had a number of communications with him on this particular item.

I'm looking at another item in here – it's actually under the budget system – that hadn't been put on the table; that is, 2.4.3, grants in place of taxes. The grants in place of taxes program was budgeted at $37.392 million for 1999-2000. The comparable forecast is 29 percent less, at $28.98 million. The gross estimate for 2000-2001 is $32 million. This represents a 15 percent decrease from the gross comparable budget of 1999-2000. Will the minister provide a list of where the $28.98 million for grants in place of taxes was distributed? Why is there a 15 percent decrease in the budget for grants in place of taxes programs in 2000-2001? This might seem kind of weird, me asking questions like that, but until we come to a plan where we can have a stable financing system without wagging the carrot of grants, we're never going anywhere.

Under financial support to local authorities, will the minister provide the criteria for distribution of funds under the financial support to local authorities program as well as a list of which municipalities received money under this program in '99-2000? Why did this program have spending that was 186 percent over budget in '99-2000?

Like I mentioned before, with your announcement last week on the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program, will the minister provide a list, a complete list instead of just what I got in the release, of which municipalities received funding throughout this '99-2000 program? We actually got a good list from you last year, but if there is more to it, we're asking just to keep our own records in place.

The municipal debenture interest rebates under 2.4.2. Will the minister provide a breakdown of where the $14.368 million for the municipal debenture interest rebates program was distributed? Why is the minister budgeting for a 13 percent decrease in the spending for municipal debenture interest programs for 2000-2001?

Working a little bit backwards in our book here is 2.4.1, unconditional municipal grants. The unconditional municipal grants are estimated at $39.619 million in 2000-2001. This is an increase of $2.999 million, or 8.18 percent, from the $36.62 million in 1999-

2000. Will the minister provide a list of how $36.62 million was distributed among Alberta's municipalities in forms of unconditional grants in '99-2000? How does the minister anticipate the $39.619 million will be distributed in 2000-2001? Why is the extra $2.999 million required for municipalities?

9:50

It's interesting, as I peruse the AUMA Urban Perspective and as different ministers have actually gone and talked to the AUMA and their board, that it seems like both sides of the House here are talking the same language. I'm asking questions and pursuing different things under infrastructure, pursuing things under property tax, pursuing things under a lot of cases. On January 27 and 28, when ministers met with them, when the Leader of the Official Opposition and myself met with the AUMA, I believe they were talking about how good a conversation they had with the ministers. Yet when the budget came out, the number one thing I'm seeing in this mailing to me was that absent from Budget 2000 were any clear steps in confronting the problems of seniors and affordable housing, and homelessness. The province has shown a disappointing lack of leadership in addressing these difficult issues.

That is so true, and it hasn't been something just brought up over the last few months. It's actually been brought up, studied to death from both the federal and the provincial, yet we're seeing no movement on this particular item.

I can read other things.

Unfortunately, the Province has been less than bold in its treatment of Alberta's property owners. In spite of huge surpluses and planned reductions in other tax sources, they failed to reduce the $1.3 billion Provincial tax demand on property owners. I sympathize with members' concerns over their restricted ability to provide basic local services . . .

This is really what was emphasized today in our meeting at 6 o'clock, and it's continuing on here.

. . . and their frustration in accessing a long-term, stable funding source. Provincial property taxes are too high, and tangible tax relief to property owners is long overdue. It is clear that a significant reduction of Provincial property tax is needed to help municipalities properly fund local services.

So paying lip service isn't answering the questions. They're stressing the fact that they want to get involved with the provincial government and the Premier's Task Force on Infrastructure – which relays, really, back onto municipal, because you can divide up the ministries and try to make them sound as if they're working, but the actual fact is that the only thing I could see was that you took all the deputy ministers out of their silos and just confused the populace of Alberta a bit more. It took most municipalities six months to recover, but now they're back on track, and they're asking where we are going from here, Mr. Minister.

I do know that I could continue on for a long time, but I know that I have a member on our side who would like to ask a few questions. I'm looking forward to looking at your answers, Mr. Minister, and I'm going to sit down and have somebody else stand up.

THE CHAIRMAN: Calgary-Buffalo, in the three minutes remaining.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Chairman, I don't know what's more distressing, the fact that the Minister of Municipal Affairs has nothing else to do on a Saturday afternoon than watch a Liberal convention in Ottawa or the fact that he doesn't recognize the difference between the statute and the regime surrounding it.

You know, I've always said that this minister is new to the FOIP responsibility, but the Liberal opposition has consistently said that we have one of the strongest FOIP laws anywhere in Canada. It was modeled on Ontario and British Columbia, and we went a couple better. But what we hadn't counted on when we passed that law and when we supported that law was that just before October 1, 1995, this government was going to bring in a set of fees that would make these the highest application fees for a FOIP access request anywhere in Canada.

That $25 fee was way higher than anybody else was charging. The only place that had an application fee was the federal government, and it was a $5 fee. I'd expect that the Minister of Municipal Affairs would be delighted that the Liberal opposition would be working as hard to hold the federal government accountable in the interests of Albertans as we work to hold this provincial government accountable.

The other comment I would make, Mr. Chairman, is that with respect to Bill C-6 we had tried to suggest to this minister that he could take a leadership role like other provinces had, like the select special committee.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: You could've last weekend.

MR. DICKSON: Well, for the minister's benefit, I spent an hour and a half with Mr. John Reid, the access to information commissioner, and I want that minister to know that I think I'm working at least as hard as the government of the province of Alberta is to protect those interests of Albertans when it comes to protecting their privacy. I don't know whether he spent any time talking to the national access commissioner.

The final point I wanted to make with respect to Bill C-6 is simply this. In about 1970 a select special committee of this Legislature made up mainly of Social Credit government members was concerned enough about privacy of Albertans to flag the concern to urge the government to build legislative safeguards to protect the privacy of Albertans when it came to information held by private corporations. You know, that was about 1970, and here we are in 2000, 30 years later, and we have not had a government that's had the courage, the foresight, the initiative, the resourcefulness, or the imagination to start addressing that. This government ought to know better. They've been told better. They've got bureaucrats that have told them better, but they haven't seen the light.

Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Municipal Affairs for the fiscal year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$142,890,000
--	---------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the Committee of Supply rise and report the estimates of Health and Wellness, Learning, Justice and Attorney General, and Municipal Affairs.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

MRS. LAING: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

Resolved that a sum not exceeding the following be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, for the following departments:

Department of Health and Wellness: operating expense and capital investment, $5,623,442,000.

Department of Learning: operating expense and capital investment, $3,105,403,000; nonbudgetary disbursements, $65,800,000.

Department of Justice and Attorney General: operating expense and capital investment, $419,916,000.

Department of Municipal Affairs: operating expense and capital investment, $142,890,000.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of Supply on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to table copies of the documents tabled during Committee of Supply on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

10:00

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If that's all the reporting we can do tonight, I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[At 10:01 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, March 21, 2000

1:30 p.m.

Date: 00/03/21

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O Lord, grant us a daily awareness of the precious gift of life which You have given us. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we dedicate our lives anew to the service of our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition here signed by 206 people from the Blackfalds, Bowden, Bashaw, Red Deer, Olds, Rocky Mountain House, Lacombe, Mirror, Delburne, Innisfail, and Torrington areas, and they are petitioning the government of Alberta “to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system].”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also have a petition to present to the Assembly this afternoon. It is signed by over 200 residents. They’re from Red Deer, Vegreville, Mundare, Innisfree, Willingdon, Two Hills, Didsbury, Carstairs, Eckville, Innisfail, and Peers. These citizens of Alberta “petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition signed by 302 Albertans from Slave Lake, Grande Prairie, Widewater, Canyon Creek, Woking, and Fairview that states:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system].

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition supporting public health care in Alberta, urging “the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.” This is on behalf of 252 Alberta residents from Lac La Biche, St. Paul, Ashmont, Myram, Fort Saskatchewan, Redwater, Bruderheim, and the town of Gibbons.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, sir. I have the pleasure today to present a petition on behalf of 238 people, all from Edson and area. They “urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am presenting a petition signed by 200 people from Rocky Mountain House who are urging “the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure today to present a petition signed by 200 Albertans primarily from Edmonton-Glengarry constituency. This was a petition they drew up for themselves where they state:

We believe, after careful assessment of all the information available on this matter, that this legislation will have far reaching, destructive consequences for all of us and all of our children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to present a petition signed by 170 residents of Red Deer, Innisfail, Jasper, Stettler, Rimbey, Bluffton, Calmar, and Bowden urging the government “to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system].”

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to introduce a petition into the Assembly today. It’s been signed by 248 residents coming from Red Deer, Lacombe, Sylvan Lake, Bowden, Didsbury, Carstairs, Peers, Mundare, Vegreville, and Innisfail. These Albertans are joining with other Albertans and petitioning the Assembly “to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on behalf of 307 Albertans from Lethbridge, Coaldale, Water Valley, Cochrane, Black Diamond, Claresholm, Stavelly, and Taber to submit a petition. They “petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system].”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition with 175 signatures on it. Residents from Rimbey, Red Deer, Innisfail, Huxley, Luzan, Gibbons, Hinton, Edson, Cold Lake, St. Paul, and Lac La Biche are all urging the government “to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system].”

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table this petition signed by 396 Albertans from Hinton, Edmonton, Donnelly, Falher, Girouxville, McLennan, Blackfalds, Westlock, Lethbridge, Canmore, and Leduc. The petitioners request this Assembly “to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.”

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented on March 16 against private health care be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would ask that the petition I presented regarding the undermining of public health care be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition with respect to support of public health care that I introduced yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

MR. SAPERS: Mr. Speaker, I request that the petition which I presented to the Assembly yesterday urging the government to stop destroying our public health care system now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd request that the petition standing on the Order Paper under my name now be read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure this afternoon to ask that the petition I tabled the other day be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

head: Notices of Motions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(2)(a) to give notice that tomorrow I will move that written questions appearing on the Order Paper stand and retain their places with the exception of Written Question 9.

I am also giving notice that tomorrow I will move that motions for returns appearing on the Order Paper stand and retain their places with the exception of motions for returns 11, 12, and 23.

Thank you.

1:40

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased today to table the Treasury ministry business plan, 2000-2003. It shows that the goals are very clear, maintaining Alberta's healthy position at a level that's sustainable and continuing to ensure that the people of this province enjoy the strongest fiscal advantage of any province in the country and also maintains very clearly that we'll continue our award-winning tradition of being open and accountable by making sure Albertans have all the accounting fully available to them of our financial goals and performance.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to table today five copies of a recent Fraser Institute study. This compares all provinces and federal budgets from '95 to '99. It shows very clearly that Alberta received top marks, leading all provinces and the federal government in overall fiscal performance. It points very clearly to Alberta's prudent approach to budgeting and that it's working. It says that Alberta scored top marks: 77.9, top rank on the classification of tax rates and revenue. When it comes to debt management, under debt and deficit marks – as I've said, we scored overall top marks in everything, and in this particular category we scored a perfect 100.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. WOLOSHYN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two tablings. The first one: in recognition of the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, I'm pleased to table five copies of a letter addressed to Ms Charlene Hay, who is co-ordinator of the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations, congratulating NAARR for its commitment to addressing issues of discrimination.

Secondly, I'm also pleased to table an information bulletin from Alberta Community Development encouraging all Albertans to speak out against discrimination. As I'm sure all members are aware, today, March 21, is the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, and it's the 11th anniversary of that day in Canada.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Learning.

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I will be tabling five copies of a document entitled Supporting Safe, Secure & Caring Schools in Alberta. This will provide administrators and educators with a comprehensive framework to deal with and prevent violence in schools.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. JONSON: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table five copies of a letter I sent to A-Channel today, pointing out some concerns with respect to the nature of the recent poll on Bill 11.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Highwood.

MR. TANNAS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies of the March 14 editorial of the High River Times. The editorial lead is Bill 11 Is Far from the Devil in Disguise. The editor advises, "Before High Riverites buy into the hysteria mounting around this legislation, we suggest they read it themselves" and see what it really means.

THE SPEAKER: Well, hon. members, all of my cautions with respect to tablings and reports today will apply the same opportunity for others to editorialize.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This information speaks for itself, so it really doesn't require editorial comment. I'm going to table with the Assembly five copies of a meeting with representatives of the Auditor General's office on March 23, 1995. It was a presentation between the Auditor General and representatives of the Alberta Treasury Branch regarding West Edmonton Mall financing, and curiously this particular presentation was not discussed in the Auditor General's special audit report on West Edmonton Mall.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a tabling this afternoon as well. It's from Mr. Keith Purdy, who is the president of CUPE local 8 and a concerned citizen, who indicates that he is requesting that the government "stop Bill 11 now and protect universal medicare. Listen to the public and perform your public duty to speak for the people."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In honour of this day to eliminate racism I'd like to table two different documents, which I have found helpful and I hope others do. The first is an article, White Privilege: Unpacking the Invisible Knapsack, by Peggy McIntosh.

The second is an article from the multicultural community project called Working With People With Differences.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the appropriate number of copies of a newspaper from the Edmonton Police Service.

It's called Community Connections, and it outlines a number of things that can really happen in a great way when there's real consultation with community.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm tabling a letter to Genesis Land Development that outlines concerns around the Spray Lakes proposed development in Kananaskis Country. This letter is written by Laureen Wright of Calgary, but in addition to that it is signed by 17 other concerned citizens in Calgary who would also like to express their concern about the proposed development in Kananaskis Country and share that concern with the government.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first one is a letter from Mr. Keith Purdy, president of CUPE local 8, and he is expressing his concern about health care and the direction it is going in this province.

The second letter is a letter I received through freedom of information, and it is entitled Rotting Government Approved Pine Shakes. I was delighted to receive this last year.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, if a tabling has been made once, it need not be repeated.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two tablings, if you will. The first is from Peter Nettleton of Calgary, and he is a fellow graduate engineer of long standing, 47 years in the oil and gas business. He starts off a letter to the Premier: "As my M.L.A.," so this is directed primarily at the Premier. He is most adamant in his letter that he is categorically against any further development in the Spray Lakes resort in Kananaskis Pathways Corporation and the Mount Sparrowhawk heli/cat skiing operation. He strongly objects to both developments there.

The other one is also directed to the Premier. It is from Nancy Hansen of the city of Calgary. She also strongly objects to the Spray Lakes development as it concerns our "endangered species," "wildlife movement," "the impact on the ecology" in the region, and particularly "Canmore's drinking water."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got two tablings here. The first one is a letter from Dr. William Olsen, professor emeritus of nuclear physics at the University of Alberta. He's expressing his opposition to Bill 11 and calls on the Premier to call a plebiscite on the bill before proceeding with it.

The second letter, Mr. Speaker, is from Fairview, signed by 10 residents of Fairview also opposed to Bill 11.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a program from the celebration of the Muslim festival of Eid al-Adha by the Legislative Assembly yesterday. The constituency of Edmonton-Glengarry is the home of two very active mosques, and we would like to thank them for their participation in yesterday's celebration and congratulate them on the feast of Eid al-Adha.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, I'm tabling today two letters, one dated March 15, 2000, and one dated March 20, 2000, received from the Ethics Commissioner indicating that he will not be investigating the matter referred to him by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Redwater.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly 29 enthusiastic grade 7 students from the H.A. Kostash school from Smoky Lake. Accompanying them are teachers Mr. Denis Harris and Mrs. Phyllis Sadoway and parent helper Mrs. Delores Jarema. I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

1:50

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

MR. LANGEVIN: Merci, M. le President. C'est un honneur et un plaisir pour moi cet apres-midi de vous presenter 15 etudiants de la province de Quebec, de la ville de Pohenegamook. Ils sont ici en echange a l'ecole F.G. Miller de Elk Point. Ils sont accompagnes aujourd'hui par un professeur et sa dame, M. et Mme Guy Genest.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 30 students and seven adults. Of these 30 students, 15 are from the F.G. Miller junior and senior high school in Elk Point. They are accompanied today by two teachers, Mrs. Lily Pentek and Mrs. Cheri Lindquist, also by bus driver Mr. Laverne Wilson, and by two parent supervisors, Mrs. Doris Wilson and Mrs. Zapesocki. The other 15 students are visitors from Quebec from the community of Pohenegamook. They are accompanied today by one teacher and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Genest. The students are exchange students with the F.G. Miller high school in Elk Point. They are seated in the public gallery. I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome from all the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 31 members of a tour that has been organized by the professional businessmen's club called the Probus Club of Edmonton. Their tour leader is Mr. Holmes. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly four students that are with us today from Wye school. Their names are Sharnell O'Donnell, Brett Keith, Amanda Malowski, and a grade 2 student Daniel O'Donnell. All students are stars at Wye school and are accompanied today by the father of two of the students, a man who distributes the famous Hygaard Fine Foods across the world, Mr. Rick O'Donnell. If they would please rise, then we could show our appreciation for their attendance.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Liberal Party of Canada is the only political party that has an Aboriginal People's Commission within its party framework. Last Thursday at the national convention in Ottawa a new executive for the Aboriginal People's Commission was elected. Aboriginal convention delegates elected four prominent aboriginal Albertans, and it gives me great pleasure to introduce them to you and through you and to members of the Assembly today.

The new national co-president is Mrs. Irene Morin. The new national vice-president of finance is Mr. Garry Parenteau. The national vice-president of women is Ms Martha Campiou. The new national vice-president for communications is Robert Coulter. Also joining the new executive is Phillip Campiou, a photographer from Cree First Nations, and Brad Enge, president of the Alberta Aboriginal People's Commission for the Liberal Party of Canada. Mr. Enge is also the director of the indigenous law program at the University of Alberta. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce a good friend of mine and a good friend to many of my colleagues. She is a senior member of the Edmonton women's Liberal policy association, an active member in the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods, an active member in the federal constituency of Edmonton Southeast, and just recently back from a fun-filled weekend at the federal convention. I would ask that Heather Rempel please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm please to introduce 37 very special visitors from Edmonton-Highlands, all of them seated in the public gallery. They are members of Club 55 and are accompanied by their president, Roy Matvie; by their group leader, Edward Sharun; and helper Joseph Wasylchuk. This seniors' club was established in 1979 and is involved in community building projects and seniors' recreational activities. They have donated thousands of hours of their time and their dollars in support of many charitable organizations. They've all participated in the Alberta Seniors Games since 1980 and have won many medals. I'll request that they all rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First main question. The hon. deputy Leader of the Official Opposition.

Regional Health Authorities

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1997 the Premier promised Albertans that the boards for regional health authorities would be elected, but they were reappointed instead, one of this Premier's broken promises. More proof is reported in a number of recent polls, which show that Albertans just don't trust this Premier anymore on health care. My question today is to the Premier. Given that the Premier broke his promise to elect regional health boards, why should Albertans believe you on Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, it wasn't a broken promise. It was a postponement based on requests from various regional health authorities who were simply in the midst of restructuring. The election of two-thirds of the board will take place in conjunction with the next municipal elections.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: was this postponement in the election of regional health authorities so that the appointed boards could follow through with the initiation of contracts for private hospitals?

MR. KLEIN: No. It was done so that they could complete their work mapping out pathways to health in the various authorities in the various regions, Mr. Speaker. Most of them have completed their work and are now prepared to face the challenge of elections in conjunction with the next municipal elections.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier admit that the appointment of the RHA boards was necessary to implement this hidden agenda of privatization of the public health system?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, you know, I'm very disappointed with the tone and the language of the particular question.

I will take the hon. member back to The Rainbow Report. One of the very specific recommendations in The Rainbow Report was that there be the regionalization of health authorities. Mr. Speaker, there were something like 200 various health boards and health authorities in this province. Very few of them were elected. As a matter of fact, about 99 percent of them were appointed boards.

We have said that there will be elected boards. Two-thirds of the members will be elected for each of the 17 authorities in conjunction with the next municipal elections. Most of the authorities, if not all, have completed their pathways to health, and now it's time to get on with the elections.

THE SPEAKER: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Private Health Services

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans learned that they couldn't trust this Premier on his promises on the expansion of the Alberta special waste treatment plant, and they know they can't trust him on his promises about Bill 11 either. The Premier promised that he would never bring in hazardous waste without consulting with Albertans, but he did. My questions are all to the Premier. How can Albertans trust the Premier on Bill 11, when he broke his promise and did not consult Albertans before importing foreign hazardous waste?

2:00

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, relative to the importation of waste from other jurisdictions, there were in fact hearings before the Natural Resources Conservation Board, and I made sure that those hearings took place.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, on this issue I quote the Premier on September 3, 1994, when he said: if there was something to hide, we'd do it.

Will he answer this question? Will the Premier admit that he has no more intention of keeping foreign private hospitals out of Alberta than he did about keeping foreign hazardous waste out of Alberta? Another broken promise.

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, when this bill is passed, the Alberta Health Care Protection Act, when it becomes law, I will obey the law. I have a sworn oath and a duty to obey the law. I would hope that they will too.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, when the Premier broke his word on the waste treatment plant, why should Albertans believe that he is ever going to keep his word on Bill 11 or that they should believe anything he says on this bill?

MR. KLEIN: I never broke my word on that particular issue, Mr. Speaker. There were hearings before the Natural Resources Conservation Board.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans learned that they couldn't trust the Premier on Swan Hills, and they know that they can't trust him on Bill 11 either. On Swan Hills the Premier prepared a secret communication plan in January 1993 to keep the $100 million loan guarantee to Bovar under wraps until after the election. On Bill 11 the Premier's secret communications plan consists of these blank pages that he is withholding from Albertans. My questions are to the Premier. Why should Albertans trust this Premier on Bill 11 when they couldn't trust him on Swan Hills?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't have any letter from any Albertans relative to any decisions vis-a-vis Swan Hills in 1993 saying that they didn't trust me on this issue. Relative to the importation of waste from jurisdictions other than Alberta, there were hearings before the Natural Resources Conservation Board, a board, by the way, that was set up under my ministry when I was minister of the environment.

Now, if you want talk about honesty in the distribution of a publication, this publication, this bill has been sent to every household in Alberta, Mr. Speaker. That is open and honest, and as I've said before in this House, a bill that purports to become law is the most important document that one can consider in this Legislative Assembly. That's being open and honest.

MS LEIBOVICI: Why doesn't the Premier just admit that Bill 11 is a front being used to hide private hospitals, just like this secret communications plan was to hide the truth behind the Swan Hills loan guarantee?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this is hardly a secret plan. I mean, this is hardly a secret plan. It's only gone out to 3 million people in the province. There is nothing secret about this. This is open. It's honest. It's straightforward. The only thing secretive and sinister is the malicious and vicious campaign of misinformation being conducted by the Liberals.

MS LEIBOVICI: Will the Premier stop hiding behind Bill 11 and table the true action plan, the one that was developed by his Public Affairs Bureau that sets up private hospitals in this province that you will not release the details on? You have the authority to release those details, you and the minister of health do. Why don't you just do it, Mr. Premier?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this is the plan. There is nothing more; there is nothing less. This is the plan. Read it. Understand it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. More evidence of Albertans' overwhelming opposition to Bill 11 came out last night when a poll was released showing that Albertans opposed the bill by a margin of 3 to 1. Meanwhile, despite massive public opposition to the bill and despite the fact that two constitutional lawyers have shown that Bill 11 violates the Canada Health Act, the federal Liberals sit idly by allowing this government to push arrogantly forward. My questions are to the Premier. If the opposition of churches, seniors, nurses, doctors, labour groups, and now a new poll which shows overwhelming popular opposition to Bill 11 won't make this Premier blink, then Albertans are asking today: what will it take for the Premier to blink?

MR. KLEIN: Certainly I'm not going to blink on a poll that was faulty in its questions, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness has tabled a letter sent to Chris Duncan, the news director of A-Channel, whereby he complains, quite rightfully so, about the questions that were posed.

A specific example:

Question #4 in your news release with respect to Albertans having an option to pay extra for faster service implies that such an option would be available under Bill 11. This is absolutely [false and] inaccurate. Bill 11 [specifically] prohibits anyone from paying to get faster service and prohibits anyone from receiving payment to provide faster service. The Bill contains harsh penalties for anyone contravening this provision of the legislation.

Again, that shows how faulty the question was. I mean, I would be concerned if it were implied that that was in the bill. It's not in the bill. Quite the opposite is true, Mr. Speaker.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, as usual the Premier blames the Albertan for asking the question.

Rather than withdrawing Bill 11 now, why is the Premier waiting for the federal Liberals to get a spine transplant before they respond to his request when two constitutional lawyers have already convincingly argued that Bill 11 violates the Canada Health Act?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, when you get more than one lawyer on a case, there are going to be some differences of opinion. The person whose opinion really matters is the federal Minister of Health, who is responsible for the administration of the Canada Health Act. As it pertains to the Canada Health Act, the federal minister is responsible for the administration of that act, and we have asked him. I'll be speaking to the Prime Minister in Calgary later this week to ask the same question, to see if we can get clarification relative to the bill, which has been sent to the minister, as to whether or not it contravenes the Canada Health Act.

That's all we want to know: yes or no. If the answer is yes, then what do we need to do to fix it? That's all.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, why is the Premier using the federal Liberals, then, as an excuse when citizens here in Alberta are demanding that this bill be withdrawn now?

MR. KLEIN: No, that isn't quite true, Mr. Speaker. When you pose a question to Albertans that implies that you can get faster service by paying extra, yes, that creates concerns. That is wrong, because the bill prohibits that, quite specifically prohibits that. The bill prohibits and proposes to levy very harsh penalties for people who charge extra.

Mr. Speaker, the truth is in the bill that purports to become law. The law is the truth.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

2:10

Diabetes Treatment

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've been asked by constituents to investigate the need for broader coverage of diabetic supplies. Since these supplies are important in the management of the disease and in avoiding the costly complications associated with diabetes and since our government is placing an emphasis on wellness and the prevention of illness, it seems appropriate to consider expanding coverage to 100 percent of diabetes medication and supplies to diabetes patients. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: is Alberta Health and Wellness considering extending Alberta's coverage as part of the provincial strategy regarding diabetes?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, the answer is yes.

That's too short an answer for the tradition of the Assembly, so I would like to elaborate just a little bit. We are working with the Alberta Medical Association and the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research to develop an expanded program and make sure the proper clinical practice guidelines and other protections are in place. Yes, we are expanding the program.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you for that good news.

To the same minister: how does the level of coverage Alberta provides compare to that of other provinces?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I think our overall coverage for kidney dialysis is very important. Of course, one of our emphases is on trying to prevent diabetic conditions from being developed in individuals across the province through health promotion activities related to diabetes.

In direct answer to the question, Mr. Speaker, I think we can indicate on behalf of the Alberta health system that they rank in the top third of the provinces in this nation. We want to be number one, but certainly in the number of people that we serve and the costs that are associated with being diabetic in terms of monitoring devices and so forth, our coverage goes far beyond what is deemed to be medically required under the Canada Health Act. As I said, the coverage compares favourably with the rest of Canada.

MR. JOHNSON: My final question to the same minister: what is the response of Alberta Health and Wellness to the October 1999 position papers of the Canadian Diabetes Association, Alberta and Northwest Territories division?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, quite frankly, I do not have committed to memory the provisions of that particular study. However, related to this, through the funding provided under provincewide services in Alberta Health and Wellness's budget, there is additional money for the expansion of kidney dialysis sites across the province.

As I've said before, we have more emphasis on the prevention of diabetes. We have committed some additional $2.4 million in that area in the budget, so we are certainly making this a priority within our overall program.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do have the plan. It's now clear that Bill 11 is all about kicking the doors open to private hospitals in this province. Yesterday the Premier confirmed as much for Albertans when he tabled a letter from Dr. Dennis Modry. It seems that the only people supporting Bill 11 are the Premier's special interest backers, those who want to build their own private thoracic park in Alberta. My questions are to the Premier. Why should Albertans trust the Premier on Bill 11 when the real blueprint for private hospitals is right here in Dr. Modry's 1996 report? Why should they trust you, Mr. Premier?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I consider that question and the comments contained in the preamble to be an absolute insult to one of the most renowned heart transplant surgeons in the world, and this member should apologize.

MS OLSEN: I'll table this document for the Premier.

Will the Premier admit that Bill 11 is all about private hospitals when Dr. Modry's report on Building Partnerships in Health Care Restructuring leaves the door open for the deinsurance of services in this province? Why should they trust you, Mr. Premier?

MR. KLEIN: This bill in no way, shape, or form speaks to the deinsuring of services. It does speak to the issue, however, of private hospitals. As a matter of fact, section 1, part 1: "No person shall operate a private hospital in Alberta." That will become the law.

MS OLSEN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I never thought I'd see it. When will the Premier stop being a puppet for special interests like Dr. Modry and listen to the AMA, the nurses, teachers, seniors, and the majority of Albertans who want this bill pulled?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that the majority of Albertans, having read the bill and understanding the bill, want it pulled. The bill protects public health care as we know it today.

In response to this question I have two Toronto Star articles and one Globe and Mail article that I would like to table and read a couple of sentences from, because they allude to the so-called opposition that the Liberals say is out there against Bill 11. In the first, a public service union employee is quoted. She says, "We are opposed to [the] Bill . . . because it will place health care at the mercy of profit-hungry operators." And the hon. member alluded to that.

The second says:

For better or worse, the health system itself is being fundamentally altered. For most of this century, the trend . . . has been toward more public ownership of the means of health, more public control. [This new law] will permit something quite different to flourish.

Finally – and this in agreement with what the hon. member said – the third is headlined Health Bill May Flout Free Trade Pact, referring to NAFTA and the Canada/U.S. free trade agreement.

Mr. Speaker, they are not talking about Bill 11, quite surprisingly. Oh, no. These articles are from 1988 and 1989, and they are talking about Bill 147, the Independent Health Facilities Act, which was passed in Ontario over 10 years ago. According to the Globe and Mail the act gave Ontario the power to regulate, license, and finance private clinics and pay for surgery that was otherwise performed in public hospitals.

Guess who brought in that legislation, Mr. Speaker? Was it some evil Progressive Conservative Party? No. It was a Liberal government, and the health minister who championed this bill was none other than Elinor Caplan, who just happens to be a minister today in the Chretien cabinet along with Allan Rock.

So, Mr. Speaker, all the fears being raised by the Liberals in Alberta and Ottawa today were raised against the Liberals in Ontario

10 years ago. In Ontario the fears have not been borne out. There has been no trouble with NAFTA. So why today are the Liberals in Alberta and in Ottawa attacking Alberta for something the Liberals in Ontario did over 10 years ago?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Child Poverty

MR. AMERY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A recent report by the Inter City Forum on Social Policy stated that there are over 90,000 children living in poverty in urban areas throughout Alberta. In addition, the report stated that in Calgary 1 in 4 children lives in poverty while in Edmonton the number is closer to 1 in 3 children. My question is to the hon. Minister of Children's Services. What is the minister doing to improve the lives of children living in poverty throughout this province?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to rise today in answer to the hon. member's question. We have received the intercity forum report, and we are studying it very carefully, but beyond that the government in the last three years, four years at the most, has implemented the family tax credit, endeavoured to reduce taxes for families, worked with the national agenda on the national child benefit, and provided free health care benefits through the Alberta child health benefit for low-income families. In terms of expanding the early intervention programs, we've moved from $2 million two years ago to $21.5 million in this budget.

Mr. Speaker, we are concerned if any child is hungry at night or if any child lives in poverty, and we are looking very carefully at how we measure poverty and how we improve the lives of families and children, particularly in Alberta.

2:20

MR. AMERY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: since this report contained a number of recommendations related to support for low-income families, how will this minister and this government respond to these recommendations, and when will we see some action?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, last October Mrs. Klein chaired the Children's Forum, which also addressed the issues of poverty, and it was Mrs. Klein herself who insisted that poverty come on the agenda as one of the five themes, recognizing that poverty does exist in Alberta.

From that, we saw on February 9 the release of the forum report, which similarly talks about several recommendations. These recommendations, Mr. Speaker, are being taken by all of the partners in the Alberta children's initiative. Every minister is reviewing those recommendations and will no doubt review them in the context as well of the intercity forum report and determine and release later this spring some of the action statements that will be implicit this year and also follow through on our Premier's recommendation and commitment that within the three years following the release of the forum report, we would respond in action or in kind to each one of those recommendations.

So, Mr. Speaker, simply put, we have in fact got an agenda addressing the poverty issue. We've got a plan for it, and that plan will be released later this spring.

MR. AMERY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Since that same report contained a number of strategies for addressing the factors common to poverty, what is the minister doing to promote and address these strategies?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, the first comment I would make is that we are ensuring that those Albertans who need support are in fact getting it. I think it's important to advise the member that we're also trying to ensure that other Albertans, then, are given the tools they need to work their way out of poverty.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I've said in question period previously that I do have some difficulty with various groups at times in defining poverty. Nevertheless, referring to this report, they do allude to some of the underlying reasons for poverty, and let me address those. One of the characteristics addressed was disability. All of the members here in the House know that assured income for the severely handicapped benefits were increased last fall. We've announced just recently a minister's Employability Council. That council will be providing advice to this government as to how we can work more of the disabled into the workplace.

Another characteristic was lack of education. Again, we're taking action, Mr. Speaker. Training is being provided to welfare clients to enhance their employability. Youth Connections has now spread right across the province. It started here in Edmonton and in Calgary and has now gone throughout the province to help youth make connections to the workplace.

Another characteristic was income support. All of us know and recognize the great strides that the government of Alberta has made with low provincial tax rates, and also the Alberta family employment tax credit has just done wonders for many of these families in providing for their children. The minimum wage was increased. The maintenance enforcement program works to make sure that both parents are providing for the children, and then, of course, we have the shelter allowance.

So the changes that we are making, Mr. Speaker, are based on one simple philosophy: you don't help families get out of poverty by keeping them on welfare.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MR. SAPERS: When it comes to Bill 11, Mr. Speaker, this Premier has quite a track record of talking about the truth yet still managing to avoid it. Now, the Premier thinks he can trick Albertans with a propaganda campaign on health care just like he thinks he fooled Albertans about his role in orchestrating the West Edmonton Mall refinancing. Handwritten notes on a February 15, 1994, memo from the Premier to a certain Jim and a certain Ken provide ample evidence of his personal involvement. My questions are to the Premier. How can Albertans believe the Premier about Bill 11 when he didn't come clean about the February 15, 1994, memo, which reveals that he was orchestrating the West Edmonton Mall refinancing right out of his own office?

MR. KLEIN: Everything that was asked for by the Auditor General was provided to the Auditor General in his investigation of this affair, Mr. Speaker. To say that we were trying to hide something or that something was done secretly is absolutely false. It is wrong. It's a mistruth. I know I can't say that it's a lie, but it's close to it if it's not.

If it's about a matter of trust, well, I recall an election in 1993, and the people elected this government because they trusted us. I remember an election in 1997. And you know what, Mr. Speaker? There are now 64 of us in this Legislature, and there are only a few of them. That speaks to the issue of trust. When people elect us to govern them, they're saying to this party, they're saying to this government that they trust us.

MR. SAPERS: Hang on to those past glories, Mr. Premier. Hang on.

Isn't the real reason that Bill 11 puts the government above the law that the Premier knows that his private hospital scheme, or what he likes to call approved surgical facilities, is destined to end up in court just like the West Edmonton Mall refinancing deal that pumped public money into a private venture? Isn't that what Bill 11 is all about?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the legislation, as I pointed out before and I'll point out again, says that "no person shall operate a private hospital in Alberta." So any reference to private hospitals and the promotion of private hospitals is irrelevant, because the bill proposes to do absolutely the opposite.

I just find that those questions are irrelevant, and I'm going to answer them in that fashion in the future.

MR. SAPERS: How much longer, Mr. Speaker, is the Premier going to continue to deny the truth, shave words, twist language about his private hospital scheme? Are Albertans going to have to drag the truth out of him just like they had to do with West Edmonton Mall?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, again the truth is in the bill. Part 1, section 1: "No person shall operate a private hospital in Alberta." Nothing could be clearer than that. The truth again is in the bill, the bill that purports to become law. The law is supreme. If they don't believe in the law, then stand up and say so. When it comes to information, nothing can be clearer – nothing can be clearer – than the bill that has been sent to every household in Alberta. The only misinformation that is being spread is being spread by the Liberals and their cohorts, Mr. Speaker. It's vicious, it's malicious, and it's wrong. It's wrong for them to do it, and they know it. [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: With your permission, hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, we'll proceed.

MRS. SOETAERT: Okay.

THE SPEAKER: I'll check with you again later too.

The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MR. DUCHARME: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my understanding that a year or two ago a group wishing to establish a private, for-profit hospital asked the College of Physicians and Surgeons to accredit their proposed hospital. Can the Minister of Health and Wellness clarify: what is the role, legislated or otherwise, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in respect of their powers to accredit or reject proposals for private, for-profit hospitals in Alberta?

2:30

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, the role of the College of Physicians and Surgeons is one of looking at the proposed services to be offered by a clinic or a surgical clinic or a full-scale hospital and determining whether certain criteria are met with respect to, first of all, the qualification of staff that will be providing those services, with respect to the suitability of the facility to some extent – at least the assurance must be there that the equipment and the resources are available to provide these services – and of course they look at the whole area of patient safety and the viability of the particular services that are to be offered in that particular facility.

Mr. Speaker, yes, there was a request that went to the College of Physicians and Surgeons from a group known as the Health Resource Group, or HRG. The College of Physicians and Surgeons did consider that particular request.

MR. DUCHARME: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: since the College of Physicians and Surgeons has the authority to have said no to the possibility of private, for-profit hospitals, why did the college not make that determination?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, correspondence from the college would indicate, first of all, that initially they were positive towards the application of HRG but purely from the point of view, as I said, of the qualifications of their staff, their capability to offer the services they were proposing to offer. I would like to say that the College of Physicians and Surgeons in this respect were fulfilling their mandate. Their initial determination was that HRG was able to fulfill the requirements of the college with respect to quality controls, et cetera, and qualifications of staff.

However, Mr. Speaker, the college did not proceed with the accreditation of HRG because they were concerned about its place within the public health care system, and they again in their correspondence indicate that this is a responsibility of government to determine. However, as all members of the Assembly know and most acknowledge, we did not anticipate this particular type of proposal in legislation that was passed many years ago. There is a legislative gap or a legislative vacuum in current health care legislation, and we need to fill that gap. We need to have the proper legislation in place so that we can say yes or no through our health care system and through our regional health authorities to proposals of this particular type that come forward. That is, I think, one of the really very, very important reasons for Bill 11 being before the Assembly and its necessity of being passed.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. This Premier is spending millions of taxpayer dollars on a propaganda campaign designed to sell the unsellable in this province: private hospitals or approved surgical facilities, if you prefer. Over 60 percent of Albertans polled firmly rejected private hospitals in this province. Phase 1 of the propaganda plan was an absolute failure. It shows that Albertans just don't trust this Premier anymore. My questions are to the Premier. How much more taxpayer money is this Premier going to inject to try to stop Albertans from rejecting Bill 11: $3 million, $4 million? How much more money?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this is the major campaign, sending out the bill. Nothing could be more open or more honest, more straight-forward than that. We're waiting for the comments of Albertans, and we seek the wisdom and the guidance and the intelligence of Albertans relative to the drafting of this bill.

One thing that is highlighted in the bill is that "no person shall operate a private hospital." "No person shall operate a private hospital."

Mr. Speaker, just to make sure that there's absolute clarification on this matter, there are already – and the Liberals know it, because a number of these clinics were established under the watch of the then health minister, who is now leader of the Liberal Party. There are 47 private surgical clinics now operating in the province of Alberta. What this bill does is put some fences around them and provide some rules and regulations.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, my next question is also to the Premier. Given that phase 1 and the truth squads have failed, what's the next step in the propaganda campaign? The ads didn't work. The TV commercials didn't work. What's next? Please share it with us.

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, there is no propaganda campaign. The truth is in the bill. The only propaganda campaign being conducted is being conducted by the Liberal Party. It's a campaign of vicious misinformation, malicious and vicious misinformation, and they should be ashamed of themselves.

MS BLAKEMAN: Okay, Mr. Premier. What other special interest groups does this government have lined up to join in his propaganda campaign for Bill 11? Insurance companies? Private clinic operators? Private home care companies? Who else is lined up, Mr. Premier?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, hopefully who is lined up are the 3 million good-thinking Albertans, the people we've asked to provide us with their guidance and their intelligence and their wisdom to make sure that the bill is right. The truth is in the bill. The truth will be in the law.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many rural people come to urban centres for surgery in private clinics. Given that fact, my question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister explain where these patients go when they have adverse effects to anesthetics?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, in clinics across the province the staff, whether it be a dentist or a physician, of course has basic training in first aid and in resuscitation. All the clinics, doctors offices across the province have a protocol or a procedure whereby if there is a difficulty with a surgical procedure of some type, they would be immediately transferred to the nearest emergency facility. That is standard procedure, and such professionals in these clinics, I think, take their responsibility in that regard very seriously and would act accordingly.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. Some rural Albertans have told me that the 12-hour rule for private surgical clinics discriminates against rural patients who must spend money to stay in a motel if they are required to stay away from home. Could the minister tell me if this is true?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not in any way think the existence of surgical clinics discriminates against rural Albertans. It is a fact of life in this province that there is only the economy of scale to have certain highly specialized procedures, whether we're talking about certain types of dental surgery or certain types of cosmetic surgery or if we are talking about major operations – it's only practical to have them centred in cities. I as a rural MLA would like to see urban people come out to centres we can establish in Fairview and Ponoka and other parts of the province, but that is not the current reality.

So with respect to specialized hospital and medical services generally, there are going to be times, particularly when people travel long distances in this province, when, yes, they do incur an extra cost of having to stay in the urban centres overnight or maybe for several nights.

2:40

MR. MARZ: Again to the same minister: could the minister explain if Bill 11 would change what some people see as a problem for rural Albertans?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would not want to predict where specialized surgical clinics would locate, but I think it has the potential of benefiting rural and urban Albertans by providing for more effective and efficient delivery of specialized surgical facilities and therefore taking the load off our full-service hospitals and utilizing the expertise or the advantage of highly specialized, repetitive, efficient provision of surgical services. So in a general sense I think it would benefit all Albertans, rural and urban.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Redwater.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Private, for-profit health has been proven conclusively to be a bad idea for almost everyone except health care managers and their investors. Nonetheless, this government has made a clear public policy decision, choosing private profit over public interest. To the minister of health: will the minister explain why the overwhelming evidence condemning private health care was rejected out of hand?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I do not accept the assertion of the member. He does not refer to who has rejected our proposal out of hand. We certainly are offering an alternative through this legislation under very controlled circumstances.

The hon. member says that types of private health care have failed. Well, Mr. Speaker, it was pointed out earlier this afternoon that in Ontario a Liberal government established an independent hospitals act under which, as I understand it, there are four independent surgical centres or hospitals in operation in Ontario. They seem to be providing good service. In fact, the Shouldice clinic is internationally recognized for their expertise in their particular area of surgery.

So, Mr. Speaker, the premise on which the member's question is based is, in my view, faulty as usual, and I do not think he has a point.

MR. WHITE: Perhaps I could rephrase the question for the minister. Would the minister table any reports other than the ones from 1988 that were cited today or any evidence from any source that private, for-profit health care is of net benefit to the citizens of Alberta?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's move across the country then. It has been pointed out in this Assembly before – but in view of the question it bears repeating – that in the province of Manitoba the government of that province continues to contract with four different surgical services. The one in downtown Winnipeg offers quite a comprehensive list of surgical procedures, and the people involved are quoted as saying that this particular surgical centre, the one in Winnipeg, provides good service, that it takes a load off their busy hospitals. They at the moment at least have certainly no plans of changing its role or disbanding it. It's evidently serving the people of Manitoba rather well, and I could work my way across the country. Maybe that's the next question.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No, that is not the next question. The question is the same as the first question. Will you as minister of health in the province of Alberta table reports, studies, findings, whether it be from Manitoba or from Ontario or from any province, anywhere in the world, that say conclusively that privately owned hospitals aren't profitable? Would you table something, sir?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I do wish to commend the hon. member for getting one of his comments correct, and that is that, yes, we do have private enterprise. We do have private operators operating within our publicly funded, publicly administered health care system across Canada, so that is certainly correct.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, is that we have tabled with this Assembly studies from reputable sources which indicate the potential advantages of certain types of private surgical services being provided in the health care system. Certainly we acknowledge, for instance, that on other issues, such as compliance with NAFTA, where I understand the Canadian Union of Public Employees has hired lawyers to interpret NAFTA, they come up in a negative fashion, so the debate is going on. But I think there is demonstrable evidence across Canada that Canadians and the governments of the various provinces, even the federal government, seem to have found acceptable and viable and worth having, many, many examples of private surgical facilities in the country right now.

head: Members' Statements

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, there will be three members' statements today, and we'll begin them a few seconds from now.

Francophone Secretariat

MR. DUCHARME: M. le Président, l'an dernier à ce même temps je me levais devant cette Assemblée pour annoncer l'établissement par notre province du Secrétariat Francophone. C'était le début de l'Année Canadienne de la Francophonie, et pour démontrer son appui à la communauté Francophone, notre gouvernement avait décidé de donner à la communauté Franco-Albertaine un porte-parole à l'intérieur du gouvernement par la création du Secrétariat Francophone.

A cause de ce développement majeur l'année 1999 s'inscrit comme une année importante dans les annales de l'histoire des Francophones de l'Alberta. Au cours de l'année les représentants de la communauté m'ont souvent répété combien ce geste a été apprécié et continue d'être apprécié par la communauté. Aussi, je dois faire remarquer que notre gouvernement a reçu des éloges et des félicitations de plusieurs ministres du gouvernement fédéral et de presque tous les gouvernements provinciaux et territoriaux pour ce geste important.

Depuis quelques années nous marquons partout au Canada la Semaine des Rendez-vous de la Francophonie. C'est une initiative pan-Canadienne qui vise à mettre l'accent sur la contribution des Francophones à notre beau pays, le Canada.

Aujourd'hui, à l'invitation du Président de cette Assemblée, nous avons accueilli la communauté Francophone et étions heureux de célébrer avec eux, à la ronde, les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie et le premier anniversaire de l'établissement du Secrétariat Francophone.

Je voudrais terminer en remerciant les deux ministres qui ont été responsables du Secrétariat Francophone au cours de la première année de son existence, le Ministre de Justice, qui a établi le secrétariat, et le Ministre du Développement Communautaire, présentement responsable pour ce secrétariat, de leur appui et de leur support dans mon travail comme président du secrétariat.

[Translation] A year ago at this time I was happy to stand before this Assembly to speak on the occasion of the establishment of the Francophone Secretariat. It was the beginning of the Canadian Year of the Francophonie, a year dedicated to the celebration of our French-Canadian heritage, and our government had agreed to give our Franco-Albertan community a voice within government through the creation of a Francophone Secretariat.

Due to this major development 1999 will be remembered as an important year in the history of our Francophone community. During the course of the year Francophone leaders have often expressed their appreciation for this important government action. Also, it is of importance to note that numerous congratulatory letters were received from many federal ministers as well as from almost all the provincial and territorial governments.

In the last few years, at this time in March celebrations are held to mark the contribution of French-Canadians to our great country, Canada. To mark the week's celebration and on the Speaker of the House's invitation, we hosted today in the rotunda the leaders of the Francophone community and celebrated with them the first anniversary of the establishment of the Francophone Secretariat.

To conclude, I would like to thank the two ministers responsible for the Francophone Secretariat in its first year of existence, the hon. Minister of Justice, who was responsible for the establishment of the secretariat, and the present minister responsible for the secretariat, the hon. Minister of Community Development, for their support in my work as chair of the Francophone Secretariat. [as submitted]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

2:50 International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Today, March 21, is the UN day to eliminate all forms of racial discrimination. In the community a number of events have taken place: a team of teenagers from Canmore traveled across the country with their message on racism and met up with other national and international teams, a kickoff at city hall in Edmonton with guest speaker Stephen Lewis, the annual Harmony breakfast sponsored by the Canadian Multiculturalism Educational Foundation that I and my colleague the MLA for Edmonton-Ellerslie attended on Sunday, and a wonderful citizenship court presided over by Judge Bhatia, which featured Mehreen Rashid from Holy Trinity school reading her award-winning essay on discrimination and tolerance.

But this morning for me was the most inspiring event. I attended a special racism event at McDougall school sponsored by the Edmonton Viets Association, the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations, and the Department of Canadian Heritage. It was the most inspiring because it set the best example for us to follow.

Racism is not genetic. It is learned behaviour. The kids from McDougall supported by students from neighbouring St. Catherines did some wonderful skits on racism and, more than that, on how to break that learned behaviour and turn it into tolerance. Students also presented essays and posters.

All of these events are worthy and needed to bring people together and to acknowledge the continuation of racism in Alberta and how to eliminate it. We don't have an Alberta advantage on this issue. The government has seen fit to offer to screen legislation for gender-neutral language. But what can we as legislators, as leaders be doing to eliminate all forms of discrimination in Alberta and not just on this day but on all days? We could learn a lot from the kids, from Mehreen, and from the kids at McDougall and St. Catherines. That in my opinion would be an Alberta advantage.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

MR. PHAM: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. This day serves to remind us that racism continues to exist in the year 2000. It remains as real as life itself. Today it is up to each one of us to do our best to ensure that it is eliminated. For most of us racism is something we only read about or see on the television news. For many others it is something they experience daily in their own lives.

I know we remember the racial ideology that led to the massive destruction during the Second World War. More recently we can also remember the apartheid of the government of South Africa. This was a way of life supported by that government. Not long ago in our own country many citizens' rights that we take for granted today were denied to many Canadian pioneers because they belonged to a certain race. When a person cannot achieve his full potential simply because of the colour of his skin, we as a society suffer a tremendous loss as well.

As chair of the Alberta Advisory Committee on the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Education Fund I am encouraged to see that the number of racism complaints filed with the Human Rights Commission has declined steadily over the past few years. This proves that our proactive approach to combat this problem is working. We need to emphasize the importance of educating our society in order to reduce the need for disciplinary action by the Human Rights Commission. I am confident that with all your support we can achieve a prosperous Alberta that is free of discrimination not only during our time but for all generations to come as well.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The Government House Leader on a point of order.

Point of Order
Offensive Language

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rose during question period today during a preamble to a question by the Member for Edmonton-Glenora. I rose under Standing Order 23(h), (i), and (j) and under Beauchesne 485 and 487 as well as the provisions of the memorandum which you sent to Members of the Legislative Assembly on February 11. In a general sense the preambles to questions are becoming more and more offensive to our parliamentary tradition, and the preamble to this particular question was particularly offensive to our parliamentary tradition.

One of the general rules, which I didn't quote, from Beauchesne's indicates – I think it's 409 – that questions should not provoke debate, and when you lace a preamble to a question with such coloured language, with the clear intent to impugn the integrity of a member, that cannot but provoke debate. So in a general sense those preambles, Mr. Speaker, and this preamble in particular should be ruled out of order, and the member should be asked to apologize.

I would take it a little bit further, and I don't have the benefit of the Blues, so I would look to your guidance in this. I believe the word dishonest was used, and in your memorandum on page D of the schedule it particularly indicates that the words dishonest and dishonesty are unparliamentary.

In addition, the member referred to hiding information with respect to West Edmonton Mall and an Auditor General's report. The Auditor General is an officer of this Legislature and did look into the West Edmonton Mall matter and made a report, and in that report he clearly indicated that the Premier had not done anything wrong. So the member should be asked to withdraw his remarks from that perspective.

The member also, however, I believe, made allegations against another member and imputed false and unavowed motives to another member under 23(h) and (i) and did so by asking a question – I'm paraphrasing because I don't have the Blues – of the nature of: is it your intention to hide or be dishonest to members of the public with respect to Bill 11, as you were with West Edmonton Mall?

Now, first of all, clearly that question is out of order because it provokes debate, because it requires a response, and I think a lengthy response should have been given indicating that the member is absolutely wrong about the question of dishonesty entirely. So it provokes debate from that perspective, but it also makes an allegation of dishonesty, which is not correct and is totally improper to levy against an hon. member in this House, and it also imputes false or unavowed motives, suggesting that the Premier was trying to hide something or be dishonest to Albertans when nothing could be more honest than to send out the exact wording of a bill that's going to be discussed in the House and ask Albertans for their response to it. Nothing dishonest about that.

But, Mr. Speaker, we've come to expect that kind of slugging in debate in this House. It's inappropriate, but we've come to expect it. We really should be listening to your advice in this House to deal with the issues above and beyond the personalities and take that emotional rhetoric out of it. I think it's time to call a halt to this. I think it's time to ask the member to rise and apologize. I think it's time to bring us back to parliamentary tradition, talking about issues in this House in an appropriate and respectful manner and not bringing in false and unavowed allegations, not slanging people's personal characters, not denigrating hon. members of this House, not trying to denigrate the Premier, who's doing an honest and wonderful job for this province. If they have a problem with issues that we're discussing, that's what this Legislature is about. But it's inappropriate for that hon. member and for any of those hon. members opposite to raise in preambles to questions or at any other time such inappropriate descriptions of the personalities of members or the intentions or integrity of members.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I must confess I got a little lost in terms of following my friend's submission in terms of understanding precisely what he is focusing on. I took his general observation that he's unhappy with the overall demeanor of question period and the questions asked, but this is a matter that you have addressed on past occasions. Specifically, let me try and deal with the things that I think have been raised that would appropriately warrant a response.

Firstly, I didn't hear my colleague use the word dishonest. Now, I don't have Hansard in front of me. I've had the benefit of reading some notes that my colleague used in asking the question. The word dishonest is not there. Hopefully with the benefit of Hansard we can resolve that. I'm further advised by my colleague that his recollection is that he did not use the word dishonest.

3:00

Now, the Government House Leader spoke of the Auditor General's report, and this takes us in a field we've already plowed, Mr. Speaker. I think it's well known and it's certainly in the Hansard record of this Assembly that the Auditor General found, and I paraphrase, no evidence of any inappropriate government involvement, but that is circumscribed by all of the limitations of the study. He didn't talk to Elmer Leahy, I understand. He didn't take sworn evidence from Elmer Leahy. There's a list of areas that were not reviewed by the Auditor General, so this Government House Leader . . .

THE SPEAKER: Get to your point.

MR. DICKSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I tried to preface my comments by saying that the Government House Leader in my view wandered a circuitous route, and I'm trying to address the points that I took from it. So I don't know where you're going to go with it.

Let me sum up by saying that I didn't hear the word dishonest being used. The Auditor General's report did not sanitize everything that happened, as the Government House Leader wished it might have and the Premier wished it might have. It is bound and circumscribed by the limitations in the terms of reference and the limitations in the scope of the investigation, and that record speaks for itself.

The one other item I would say is this. I note there was reference to a document that wasn't tabled, and I have from my colleague the memorandum he referred to. That quite properly should have been tabled, and I think in the excitement of the question-and-answer exchange it was not. I have the requisite number of copies of the document that was referred to, so I'd table that now, Mr. Speaker.

Those are the comments I'd make. We could spend a long time talking generally about what happens in question period and about answers that are provocative and provoke debate, but I'm not sure this is the appropriate forum to do that.

Thank you, sir.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, I'm not going to go through a whole series of readings from Beauchesne with respect to this matter but simply draw to hon. members' attention those sections of Beauchesne. There are many, many sections, but there certainly are some sections dealing with unparliamentary language. There's certainly 485 in Beauchesne, and 486(1) indicates that "much depends upon the tone and manner, and intention, of the person speaking." Beauchesne 487 has got a really interesting series of clauses.

(1) Threatening language is unparliamentary.

(2) Words may not be used hypothetically or conditionally, if they are plainly intended to convey a direct imputation. Putting a hypothetical case is not the way to evade what would be in itself disorderly.

Now, what we've got here today is a situation – and I will quote from the Blues, because we do have the Blues. This is the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

When it comes to Bill 11, Mr. Speaker, this Premier has quite a track record of talking about the truth yet still managing to avoid it. Now, the Premier thinks that he can trick Albertans with a propaganda campaign on health care just like he thinks he fooled Albertans about his role in orchestrating the West Edmonton Mall refinancing. Handwritten notes on a February 15, 1994, memo from the Premier to a certain Jim and a certain Ken provide ample evidence of his personal involvement. My questions are to the Premier. How can Albertans believe the Premier about Bill 11 when he didn't come clean about the February 15, 1994, memo, which reveals that he was orchestrating the West Edmonton Mall refinancing right out of his . . . office?

Perhaps I could go back to 487(2) again. "Words may not be used hypothetically or conditionally, if they are plainly intended to convey a direct imputation."

Now, I've got a series of scribbled notes from my table officers, who are very good and listen very attentively, just as attentively as

me. Their comments with respect to this question in particular ranged from: the question potentially is out of order and not really seeking factual information but really tied to how can we trust, the preamble and the question really weren't proper, a chance to make a statement about something not really linked, and on and on it goes with respect to other questions in terms of preambles not linked to actual questions.

We've had quite a series of these kinds of discussions lately with respect to these points of order, and I do not like the demeanour, and I do not like the tone. It seems to me that there's one way to solve all of this, and I'm going to suggest this to all members of the House, and it's something that the House itself might want to consider. The basic rules that we have in this Assembly call for brevity, brevity in terms of question and brevity in terms of answer. As each day comes and each day goes, there is a rather long list of members who haven't had an opportunity to raise a question or to seek the information that's so important. The purpose of question period is to seek, basically, urgent information with respect to pressing public matters.

Because we cannot define what the term brevity means in terms of a question and because we cannot define what brevity means in terms of an answer and because we tend to come and go on a daily basis, perhaps it might be better, hand in hand with what we want to do, if we carefully look to see what the rule is in the Canadian House of Commons. The Canadian House of Commons has struggled with this matter for years and years and years and has come to this conclusion. They've now adopted time limits for the question and time limits for the answer. The time limit is 35 seconds for the question and 35 seconds for the answer.

Now, that is a wonderful conclusion to a lot of problems. It seems that many of the points of order that are raised have to deal with the types of questions, and many of the points of order raised on another side have to deal with the types of answers. Well, the longer we have to participate, I guess, and with the dialogue that we have, the greater the chances and the greater the opportunities are for us to find the hole and just simply dig deeper into the hole. So perhaps brevity might best be dealt with in terms of a time factor.

It works very simply: 35 seconds to ask the question and 35 seconds to give the response, and your mike is immediately turned off. It seems to have done a great deal of service in terms of eliminating a lot of points of order on a daily basis. But, secondly, it has one other great objective and service that it provides. It allows for a greater number of questions, and it allows for a greater number of members to participate in doing the job that they were elected to do, to seek information.

I've got notes flying around here, and I sent a whole series of notes advising certain members that they might want to read Hansard, page 480, when I ruled on a point of order, allegations against a member and using names of outside people, dealt with that. Other notes here with respect to violations and probably Beauchesne 409(8), exactly the same question as another member had already asked, and again constant numbers of notes about not tying preambles with the ultimate question.

I think the comments are made. All hon. members can stand up and ask the question that they feel they are entitled to ask, and I will do everything possible to make sure that they have the benefit of all doubt with respect to it, because I believe very, very strongly that private members must have an opportunity to ask questions that they have. But it seems to me that if the bottom line of the question is, and I quote, we do not trust that person, why doesn't the question just come out and say, you know, "How can we trust you" or something else? There's a lot of unrelated preamble which has nothing to do with the question and violates the fundamental rules of the House and doesn't appear to be in the best interests of any hon. member unless the major theme of the day is a certain thing, and it's not my right to know what that theme is, nor am I desiring to know what that theme is.

I just really believe fundamentally that decorum is very, very, very important. Decorum is important. There's a way of seeking the information one wants, and there's a way of making a political point. This question period is not supposed to be histrionics and not supposed to be theatrics. It's actually supposed to be serving the people of Alberta in ascertaining an answer for a pressing public matter. If it's Stampede Wrestling, well, so be it. It's entertainment for some, but the citizens of Alberta know what's going on. They know. They call my office. They give all kinds of comments. Not one of our best days. The point is made.

3:10

head: Orders of the Day

head: Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders

head: Committee of the Whole

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 205
Emblems of Alberta (Alberta Dress Tartan)
Amendment Act, 2000

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I'd like to make a few comments about this very good bill, Bill 205, Emblems of Alberta (Alberta Dress Tartan) Amendment Act, 2000, at this Committee of the Whole stage. I would remind members that this bill will provide yet another way in which Albertans may express their pride in the province of Alberta and that the Alberta dress tartan was an idea that came forward from two Calgaryans, Gail Danysek and Ashley Stowkowy, who designed the Alberta dress tartan in conjunction with Fiona Hall, who is a tartan designer in England with Locharron of Scotland.

There was one point that was raised with me by a colleague that I would like to address. They sent me a note during a debate that said that in reading the bill, they noticed that the weave of the Alberta dress tartan, in particular the first block of the weave, is dominated by white and that clearly discriminates against green. It was their concern that this discrimination was clearly at a most basic level.

I must say that I would like to congratulate this hon. member, to start with, because they clearly read the bill carefully, and in fact they're very correct. The first block has 96 threads, and all but 12 of those threads are white. The other 12 are green. I would point out to the hon. member that that type of differential does however explain why this first block is known as the white block rather than the green block. I would also point out to this hon. member that there is a second block of weave as part of the Alberta dress tartan and that it contains 136 threads, 16 of which are green. So this hon. member should take some comfort in the fact that there is green reflected not only in the first block but also in the second block.

The other point I would like to make. I would refer all members to the explanatory notes that form part of Bill 205, which refer to the weave of the existing Alberta tartan, and in particular I would point out that it, too, has two blocks. In this particular case the first block of the Alberta tartan consists of 48 threads, all of which are green, none of which are white, and accordingly there is clear discrimination in favour of the green thread. All in all, I think that if one takes into account the fact that there is green thread both in the first and second block of the Alberta dress tartan and a clear discrimination in the first block of the Alberta tartan in favour of green, there is a certain balance here.

It's also important to remember what these colours represent in the Alberta dress tartan. The addition of the field of white coloured stripes represents something that is not reflected currently in the Alberta tartan, and that of course is Alberta's clean, bright, snowy days, which are something that is known throughout the province, including, I believe, down in the Medicine Hat/Cypress area.

The dress tartan remains true to the original colour scheme that we have in our Alberta tartan, with the green of our forests being represented, the gold of our wheat fields, the blue of our clear skies and sparkling lakes, the pink of our wild rose, and the black of our coal and petroleum.

Once again, Madam Chairman, I would recommend to all members that they support this particular bill and the weave as currently outlined. I would particularly ask for the support of the hon. member who sent me that note, because I believe that I have clearly indicated that greens are well represented in the Alberta dress tartan.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I rise today to enter into the debate on Bill 205, the Emblems of Alberta (Alberta Dress Tartan) Amendment Act, 2000. I think it's important for the Assembly to understand the origins of tartans.

Every isle differs from each other in their fancy making plads, as to the stripes and Breadth and Colours. This Humour is as different thro the . . . land of the Highlands in-so-far that they who have seen those places, are able, at the first view of a man's plad, to guess the place of his residence.

So said Martin Martin, writing in 1703, making the first documented reference to tartan as a means of identification. Since that time, the spirit of the idea has grown to the extent that we have come to believe that the pattern of woven coloured stripe has become an important part of our cultural identity.

Now, it is generally accepted that clan tartans were established and named towards the end of the 18th century. Prior to that time, while clan, district, and tartan were often closely associated, the idea of a single uniform clan tartan had not yet emerged. It would be wrong, however, to assume that the tartan patterns were created at that time. William Wilson, the foremost weaving manufacturer, took a great interest in reproducing perfectly genuine patterns and engaged in extensive correspondence with his Highland agent to gather information and actual samples of the cloth woven in the clan districts.

The natural development and the art of tartan manufacturing in the Highlands had been completely curtailed for over 50 years. The battle of Culloden in 1746 was still within living memory, and the disarming acts which followed included the ban of Highland dress, which was repealed in 1782. Tartan manufacture survived only in the hands of the military and their Lowlands suppliers.

3:20

Madam Chairman, I think it's important to understand where tartans come from and why we're bringing this forward. References to tartans occur in various historical documents, paintings, illustrations. A charter granted to Hector MacLean of Duart in 1587 for the lands in Islay details cloth of white, black, and green colours, the colours of the Hunting MacLean of Duart tartan, and an eyewitness account of the battle. Many references support the role of tartans within the country and with different sectors. New tartans accredited by the Scottish Tartans Society must have the approval of the chief.

Dress tartans are designed by altering one of the background colours of the formal sett to white. Originally, tartans had two main colours. Madam Chairman, today we have before us Bill 205, Albertans' own tartan, and we are looking at seven colours of thread.

Bill 205 joins nine other official emblems in this province, and I am proud to be part of the debate.

Madam Chairman, some 27 short years ago I was married in a full Scottish wedding; yes, bagpipes, kilts, the full works. My family's history also shows that we have our own tartan.

I congratulate the Member for Calgary-Glenmore and encourage all members of the Assembly to support Bill 205.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. I just wanted to say a couple of words in support of Bill 205 with respect to Alberta emblems and the symbols that we hold dear in the name of and in the symbol of our province. Of course, I can't imagine that anyone would speak against this bill, but I'd like to note a couple of things that perhaps people do not know about the weave of the tartan, and we can think about it when we do look at this symbol in the future.

It's understood that when we think of the tartan now, most of us think of a very colourful pattern of the cloth of the Scottish Highlands. It's evident in the tartan that we currently use to symbolize the province of Alberta and certainly in the tartan that is being proposed through this bill to symbolize the tartan of Alberta for the future. Originally, the word tartan described the way a thread was woven to make the cloth. Each thread passed over two threads, then under two threads, and so on. Hence we have the name tartan.

It's also interesting to know that the oldest known piece of tartan is one that was found buried in the ground near Falkirk. It was found in a pot filled with over 1,900 silver Roman coins and was thought to be about 1,700 years old. It's quite different from many of the colourful tartans that we all know today. Again, that's why I would like to commend the tartan that is proposed here in Bill 205, because it is lighter and it is brighter in colour and it certainly speaks to what we see as our role and what we want to have as our symbol for this new century.

As I say, the oldest piece of tartan was found in a pot with the Roman coins. It's quite different from many of the tartans that we know today, and it's believed that it was made from the undyed wool, dark brown and light brownish green, of the Soay sheep, which once inhabited Scotland and which still can be found on the island of St. Kilda.

Just a little bit of history of how the Scottish people found the original tartan and hence have carried that symbol forward.

So in recognition of what we are signifying and symbolizing today and in the year 2000 in the province of Alberta, I think it's very fitting that we endorse and unanimously support Bill 205, as we look, I would say, to a brighter, a lighter, a more colourful symbol for our province so that it can be displayed, it can be worn, and it can show forth the colours of our province.

With those remarks, Madam Chairman, I would like to call the question in support of this bill and ask everyone in this Assembly now present to vote in support of Bill 205.

[The clauses of Bill 205 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The chair would have you note that most of the speakers on this particular bill happen to be of Scottish heritage.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I am not of Scottish ancestry, but I have a keen affinity for the game of golf, which is of Scottish origin, and on behalf of my constituent Jim McLean I want to just officially say that I support the official tartan bill that we just discussed.

However, on other matters I would now move that this committee rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports Bill 205.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

The chair is going to call a one-minute recess.

[The Assembly adjourned from 3:29 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.]

head: Motions Other than Government Motions

Citizens' Commission on the Future of Education

504. Mrs. MacBeth moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to create an Alberta citizens' commission on the future of education which would set goals and direction for education, acknowledging its fundamental importance to the prosperity and well-being of all Albertans and defining a clear vision for its future.

[Debate adjourned March 14: Dr. Massey speaking]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks, Madam Speaker. When I left off talking about Motion 504 last time, I had spent a few minutes talking about the need for the commission and how this commission differed from previous commissions in the way it was going to be operating in terms of having citizens in control of the agenda. I'd also spent a little time looking at some of the changes that have occurred in the province and in education since the last commission, the Worth commission, deliberated in the late '60s and the early '70s. I thought I would take the few remaining minutes that I have to look at some of the other changes that I think a commission would want to look at and evaluate.

There have been some tremendous changes, particularly in the role of technology. We've seen, since that last commission was reported, the advent of computers, and none of us, I think, at that time ever dreamed they would take over our schools, our classrooms, and in fact our lives. So I think a commission would want to spend some time looking at those developments, again assessing where we may be going in the future and setting out maybe a vision for technology and the role that technology might play in learning in the future.

The role of schools has changed dramatically. Community use is now taken for granted. I remember running for school trustee in 1974, running at that time on a platform of more community use of our schools, and being labeled by the opposition to that motion as the booze and bingo candidate. Some of the people running at that time thought that opening up schools for community use would invite all kinds of vices and that community life would certainly be hurt if those school gymnasiums were opened any time after 4 o'clock for community use. We've changed a great deal on how we view our community buildings, our school buildings.

The role of school boards has changed, and many of us think that that role has changed for the worse. There is a court case now that's going to adjudicate that. School boards, in terms of their ability to respond to local issues, I think have been weakened. Is that really what we want in the province? What kind of value do we place on local control?

The Department of Learning has changed. It's being collapsed into two departments: basic education and advanced education. Is that a good thing? Is that what Albertans want? Are they being well served by this new configuration?

There are changes in terms of our funding. Many of us in this province who come from humble beginnings have been blessed with being able to access the best education in the world. We were able to do that even though our parents had rather limited or no means that would have helped us had that public education not been there and not been tax supported so that there was no charge to the family.

That's gradually changed over the last 10 years. Instructional fees and parents out funding-raising for a lot of the things that happen in our schools have gradually taken over. If you walk into the gymnasiums of our local high schools, you'll see the signs of local contractors and electrical firms adorning gymnasium walls. The whole role of paying, parents' role, and who should support public education – should it be supported totally from the public purse? Are these other incursions the wave of the future? I think those are some of the questions, some of the issues that the Alberta citizens' commission would examine.

If you look at school programs, there have been dramatic changes in the kinds of school programs that are being offered in the province. I look at the number of alternative programs that now accommodate a much wider range of student interests and capabilities and parent interest than were available previously: the heritage language programs in this city where Ukrainian, Cree, and a variety of languages have been made available to students. I look at the international baccalaureate program, a program for talented high school students where they can have their talents tested and their intellectual capabilities challenged. I look at the incorporation under the umbrella of the local school board of the first Christian school, the Logos school. I look at the involvement of business as huge changes in the public school system. I think it's timely that a commission sit down and look at those changes and say: is this the way we want to go in public education? Are these the kinds of changes that strengthen the system and further the kind of vision that many have for a truly public school system?

If you look at postsecondary education, there's a tremendous worry about the balance at postsecondary institutions between the sciences and the technical fields and the humanities and the social sciences. Is that balance the correct one? Are we supporting social sciences and humanities in a way that will benefit the community? What about the role that the universities play in social criticism? What's happened to that role?

We've seen huge changes in tuition and tuition policy. I'm one of those fortunate few who on entering university had my tuition paid, and I was the recipient of a bursary of a small amount but a very important amount of money at the time to help me further my education. We've moved a long way from that kind of public support of students to an almost unending debate in our institutions about tuition. It's one of the things that I think a commission could look at and help make some judgments about, could talk to Albertans to find out how they feel about access to our postsecondary institutions and how that access should be either furthered or curtailed.

The role of research has again changed, a great deal of focus recently on what's been called gizmo research, research that pays off in the marketplace at some fairly near time frame. Again, questions have been raised about what that does in terms of research, more basic research, research where ideas are explored without any thought of the implications of that for commercialization.

We've seen a growing role for private schools in the province. Does that meet with the general approval of the citizens? The Alberta citizens' commission could examine that and maybe plot out for us a future and some guidelines in terms of the development of private schools and their role in the education system of the province.

There have been some vast changes in teacher education. When the Worth report was tabled in the province, most of the elementary teachers in the province had one or two years of teacher education in the early '70s, and the Lougheed government in a rather brave move said that we were going to increase the amount of education that teachers had until we got to the point where they all had at least one university degree.

3:40

I remember the kind of public debate at the time, the gloom and doom warnings that if they moved to that kind of a system, where teachers had to have at least one university degree to teach, first of all the system wouldn't be able to afford all of those teachers with degrees. It would bankrupt the government. There were cries about not having enough teachers, that there would be a teacher shortage if they tried to move to everyone having at least a university degree. Lo and behold here we are 30 years later and the system is in place. All teachers in the province have at least one university degree, many of them two, and some three or more university degrees, something that would have been unheard of 30 years ago. It took some visionaries to make it happen.

We also have seen some changing patterns in terms of the teacher education that's offered. We have the University of Lethbridge where you have to have a minimum of 5 years before you're credentialed to go into the classroom, the University of Alberta where you can still take a four-year pattern, and then the differences at the University of Calgary. So across the province the degree-granting institutions have changed their requirements and, again, at a rate and with content that we wouldn't have expected a number of years ago. I think this is an area that the citizens' commission would be most interested in looking at. The previous commission and the Cameron commission before that had some solid statements about teacher education at that time.

So with those comments, Madam Speaker, I would urge passage of the Alberta citizens' commission . . .

THE ACTING SPEAKER: I'm sorry, hon. member. The time for this particular item has now expired, and I must put the question to you.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 504 lost]

Advisory Council on Women's Health

505. Mrs. Fritz moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to establish an advisory council on women's health to support education and research promoting women's health and to address issues relating to the prevention and treatment of diseases including osteoporosis, eating disorders, heart disease, and breast cancer as well as diseases to which women are becoming increasingly susceptible such as lung cancer and autoimmune diseases.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Cross.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This has been a long time coming. As you know, it was before the Legislature previously as a bill, and I'm just pleased that it's back here as a motion and that it is before the Assembly today.

I'd like to note that this important proposal would not have been brought before the House without the support, guidance, and influence of many people. I'm thankful to all that it was created, revised, and completed with the ideas and assistance of Alberta Health, Community Development, our caucus research, my office, regional health authorities, women's groups, organizations, and associations, and the public at large. The wise counsel of my colleagues and friends, many of whom are here today, added to the insight that resulted in this proposal, which I believe will ultimately lead to Alberta women living their lives more fully because they'll have a deeper understanding of the health of their bodies.

Madam Speaker, Motion 505 will assist in creating new models for women's wellness. It will offer support in the areas of education and research that will help women to gain, regain, and maintain their health. The motion will also assist our government and its affiliates as well as health care practitioners with necessary constant learning processes.

An advisory council would provide a forum for promoting awareness of women's health issues, and it would enable health organizations to submit information and recommendations to the government. It would also gather research and synthesize the information and ensure that it is ultimately made available to those that would benefit from it. Women, health care professionals, and government officials must work together to make women's health a top priority.

Madam Speaker, I wish to acknowledge that the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness has demonstrated in Budget 2000 a commitment to health initiatives and programs, and I thank you, hon. minister, for this being in Budget 2000 this year. It's very welcome. You've added $4.7 million for the implementation of a cervical cancer screening program, and that would include the Pap smear, which is the most effective screening test known to modern medicine. Also, $2.3 million has been added for the breast cancer screening program, which will assist in diagnosing breast cancer in its earliest stages. Hopefully, Mr. Minister, these funds will be used for a provincewide program to target those in the 50- to 69-year-old age group through a holistic woman-centred approach. Knowing your commitment to women's health issues, I'm sure that that's what will be happening in that area.

These welcome funds will add to vital preventative screening programs that I believe will ultimately save lives. The outcome would also lead to good, solid, up-to-date information that an advisory council could use to assist women in improving their health. Madam Speaker, it is no small task to address the vast issues of women's health and wellness, which is why this motion advocates an advisory council.

The council is anticipated to have 10 appointed board members, with a Member of the Legislative Assembly to act as chairman, and at least one member would be appointed from the following: the Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Alberta health care association, the Alberta Medical Association, a university as defined in the Universities Act, the Alberta Cancer Board, and the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses. The four remaining members hopefully would be from the public at large. I realize that there are those here who will ask why half the council is comprised of members with an explicit medical focus. I happen to believe that the importance of their expertise and guidance should not be underestimated and, in fact, should be highly valued. The medical advice and dynamics that this group will offer to the committee is essential to the discussion which will ultimately point us in the direction that we need to go.

Women need to be able to make informed, responsible decisions regarding their health and lifestyles, and to do this they must have access to accurate, up-to-date, comprehensive, and user-friendly information. The council would assist in the management of women's health services and lead to a coherent long-term health strategy. It would also assist in the promotion of awareness and understanding of women's health issues, the risks they face and the treatments that are available. Madam Speaker, over the past decade we have seen some of these diseases increase at an alarming rate. I'm thinking of HIV and the AIDS virus, which is on the increase for women. As well, the statistics relating to eating disorders such as anorexia, bulimia, and other addictive disorders speak for themselves.

When you consider the purposes of the advisory council, you will notice that concepts such as advise, foster, report, encourage public discussion, review, analyze, consult, and make recommendations will all offer a wide range of processes to access and distribute information. I know that for some here today it will be a leap of faith to accept that these concepts are necessary for the health and wellness of women. Well, Madam Speaker, in order to explore the discomforts, diseases, and dysfunctions of female organs and systems and to give medical suggestions and advice on how to heal them, it is a must to buy into the very purposes of this motion.

I have had the question asked, "How do women's health needs differ from those of others?" which is, of course, addressing the fundamental question of why we need a women's health advisory council. In acknowledging this question and providing answers, it is necessary to provide you with a list of a few – and I stress "a few," although it will seem long to you – physical, psychological, and emotional illnesses that predominantly affect women. Autoimmune disease, which, simply stated, occurs when an organ attacks itself, affects women far more frequently than it does men. These diseases include systemic lupus erythematosus; 90 percent of those affected are women. Myasthenia gravis: 85 percent affected are women. Autoimmune thyroid disease: 80 percent are women. Rheumatoid arthritis: 75 percent are women. And 70 percent of those afflicted with multiple sclerosis are women.

3:50

Menses is a basic cycle for females, and during this cycle as many as 60 percent of those affected suffer from abdominal discomfort which is known as dysmenorrhea. As well, at least 60 percent of females suffer from premenstrual syndrome. PMS is most likely to occur in the 30-year-old age group and, sadly, often occurs at the same time as dysmenorrhea. Complications that relate to the ovaries, fallopian tubes, and uterus are far too vast to mention here today, and each organ is intimately connected to the next.

Endometriosis is a disease experienced by women in which the tissue normally growing inside the uterus actually grows in other parts of the body and causes a great deal of pain. Uterine fibroid tumors, ovarian cysts, and cancer are all devastating and can lead to chronic pelvic pain, infertility, and even death. Madam Speaker, the list continues and includes disorders such as urinary tract infections, incontinence, fibrocystic breast disease, childbirth complications, and symptoms related to menopause.

I'd like to take a moment to highlight other significant health issues and point out the potential impact that each one may have on Alberta women and on Albertans as a whole. Osteoporosis, or porous bone, is a disease that is characterized by low bone mass and structural deterioration of bone tissue, leading to bone fragility and an increased susceptibility to fractures of the hip, the spine, and the wrist. This is a disease that can be prevented and treated. Chances of developing osteoporosis are greater if you are a woman. They have less bone tissue and lose bone more rapidly than men because of the changes involved in menopause. One in four Canadian women over the age of 50 has osteo. It is often called the silent disease because bone loss occurs without any symptoms. They may not know they have this disease until their bones become so weak that a sudden strain, bump, or fall causes a hip fracture or a vertebra to collapse.

Females may be surprised to discover that there is a 20 percent mortality rate within the first six months following a hip fracture, and about 50 percent of those who suffer one will need help walking the rest of their lives. In fact, the lifetime risk of death due to hip fracture is comparable to the risk of death from breast cancer. The rate of hip fractures related to osteoporosis is two to three times higher in women than men. A woman's risk of hip fracture is equal to her combined risk of breast, uterine, and ovarian cancer, and, Madam Speaker, 75 percent of women aged 45 to 75 have never even talked to a doctor about osteo.

Heart disease and stroke are the leading causes of death in women over the age of 50 in Canada. Heart disease is also the second leading medical condition that limits the activities and independence of females. Although it is often characterized as a man's disease, Madam Speaker, shockingly, more women than men die from cardiovascular disease. Yet virtually all randomized controlled trials, risk, and treatment have focused on men, and the majority of cardiovascular procedures are conducted on men. Heart disease in women often goes undetected and untreated until the disease has become severe. Regrettably, 44 percent of those who have heart attacks die within one year as compared to 27 percent of men.

Madam Speaker, there's an obvious male bias in medical research and treatment related to heart disease in Canada. Once we recognize the need for a more balanced approach, we can work toward addressing the health issues that have previously been ignored or underappreciated, especially those that affect women.

Cancer is the second leading cause of death in women, after heart disease and stroke, and approximately 11 percent will develop breast cancer in their lifetime. Each day in our own province at least four women are diagnosed with or die from this disease; that's each day. The risk of breast cancer increases with age, with approximately 75 percent of breast cancer diagnosed found in those over the age of 50. Today lung cancer is the most common cause of cancer death in females. There are no screening tests for lung cancer, and it can be very difficult to diagnose. Nearly 90 percent of patients diagnosed with lung cancer do not receive care until it is too late to be cured.

Increased education and communication about these diseases, their risk factors, and their treatment will save women's lives. I said that I would name only a few, which is why I will stop here. The point is, Madam Speaker, these conditions predominantly affect women, which is why this advisory council is so necessary. Women make three-quarters of the health care decisions in households, and more than 61 percent of physician visits are made by females. Fifty-nine percent of prescription drugs are purchased by them, and 75 percent of nursing home residents over the age of 75 are women. Their health has been ignored for far too long, and they are uniquely affected and, I believe, should be uniquely addressed.

Madam Speaker, implementing Motion 505 will allow us to keep our finger on the pulse of women's health care in a much broader and more diverse way than ever before. The intent of the council will be to assist in providing information and research data on how nutrients, hormonal supplements, herbs, exercise, drugs, prescribed medications, surgery, acupuncture, emotional support, and many, many other ways of delivering health care will optimally create healthier conditions for women.

Madam Speaker, the benefits to be derived from implementing Motion 505 could be achieved for approximately 1 percent of what our province spends in one day on health care. That is so minimal. Think about it. It's 1 percent of what we spend in one day on health care.

To conclude, I'm urging the Assembly to recognize the unique nature of women's bodies, their symptoms, and the issues that surround their overall health. An advisory council on women's health will allow us to promote and address these issues in a proactive, accountable, and cost-effective manner.

Madam Speaker, I ask that the members of the Assembly make a commitment to the health and wellness of all women in the province by voting to support Motion 505. Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks very much, Madam Speaker. I'd like to commend the Member for Calgary-Cross for her tenacity in following through on this idea, in that it was presented as Bill 213 in the 1999 spring session but died on the Order Paper. So the same idea but coming back as a motion.

Secondly, I have to admit that I am really torn about this motion. I think a large part of that is my frustration with a sort of piecemeal approach that's being taken. Many of the members here were in this same Chamber, including the Member for Calgary-Cross I think, when the Alberta Advisory Council on Women's Issues was disbanded. The budget was taken away, and that was the end of it. That was a very useful organization and from my point of view had a more holistic approach to women's health because it dealt with all aspects of women's lives: the economic factors, the legal factors, the social health factors.

So I'm very frustrated when I look at what's being proposed in this motion and see that it's a very tiny piece of what women's lives are all about. We cannot continue to take a chunk, a piece of a person's life and say, "Well, if we deal with this, then all things will be cared for," because we know that that is not the truth. You cannot deal with women's health without looking at issues of poverty, of stress – the list is very long. I'll try and come back and address some of that, but the economic and legal factors that affect women's lives in this day and age obviously affect their health.

4:00

I listened carefully to the Member for Calgary-Cross and what she was proposing, and it sounds very similar to what was in Bill 213. So it is based on the advisory council on women's health act but, again, is only taking a little section of it out.

I think one of the things that is most important to me about a council – if I have to accept a council that is restricted to women's health, I will do so, begrudgingly. I will do so, because I think anything that the women in Alberta can get out of this government is a great thing, because it's been pretty tough in the past.

One of the most important things is the representation of the people who are appointed to the council. Where the Advisory Council on Women's Issues was really successful was in bringing together a great diversity of representation. They were women from all different geographic areas in the province. They covered different kinds of work. Some were in the workforce. Some were at home or students, with different kinds of family backgrounds, different kinds of educational attainments. It was a real diversity of representation, and I had the privilege of working with that council for five years, so I know of what I speak. I think I go down in history now as the only executive director for that organization in its 10 years, and I was there for almost five.

MRS. SOETAERT: And a good job you did.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you.

That diversity of representation also gave that council a real close connection to the women in the community. For example, at one point we were approached about mobile breast screening units. The idea was presented to the council members, who then fanned out back into their communities, held coffee parties, talked to people in supermarket lineups, whatever they did to connect with the women in their communities, and together brought all that information back. They really picked up some good stuff from approaching women in a very realistic way and just listening to what their genuine response was to the proposal. I think we have a better mobile breast screening program now as a result of that.

The council also had a very strong research component. Frankly, a lot of the budget money was put into that research, and it was very good value for the money. As I mentioned before, we did research under three areas: legal, economic, and social health. The drawback for that advisory council – and perhaps this is a warning for possible barriers to overcome with the suggestion of this council – was the appointment of people. I think it has to be done in a way where people are coming to serve the best interests of the council, and it shouldn't be about the best interests of any given political ideology.

One of our constant struggles with the old advisory council was budget. It was a way for government to control the activities of the council. There needs to be a reasonable budget. It's not a lot. I mean, I think the member has already pointed out that all things considered, it's a minuscule amount. But the budget should not be used as a way of controlling the council. It's very good value for money.

The last thing was the will of the government to implement the recommendations that were brought forward from the council. Recommendations in my time were brought forward on a very wide variety of issues affecting women in Alberta, and the government did not have the will to implement them. I think today we can look back on some of them and dearly wish that the government had.

The Member for Calgary-Cross had listed off the organizations that she was suggesting representatives be sought from to sit on this council. She anticipated me saying that those are all representatives of the medical/clinical model, and indeed that is my point. Once again we're taking a little slice, a little organ out of women and saying: okay, this is all we're going to deal with; this is the one little piece. I think it's really important, if you are going to have a council on women's health, that you have wider representation than just the medical/clinical model. I really feel strongly about that.

To the member's credit, she has now included that there would be representatives from the public on the council, and that was a flaw identified in the bill that was presented last year, in that it listed all of the medical organizations from whom representatives would be pulled and said that there could be 10 members in total but didn't sort of fill in the blanks and say that the rest of those members will be from the public. She's now said that, which I think is a good thing.

When the member talks about, you know, women needing good factual medical information, yes, they do, but they also need other information that's about what happens in their lives. We're more than a walking component of body organs. We exist in society. We exist in families. We have stresses on our lives. We have religious faiths we follow. There are a lot of other things that are affecting women and that affect their health.

As a small example of only getting information from medical personnel, let's look at the hormone therapy debate. You can line up as many doctors on one side of the room as you want that are pro hormone replacement therapy and line up just as many on the other side of the room. Well, if women can't get access to some other information, all we have is a battle of medical information that's not moving the issue forward.

The member talked about it being holistic. I think she and I are going to have to agree to disagree on our definition of what holistic is, because I'm looking for other factors besides a medical/clinical model of women's health. I would like to see spots set aside for representatives from alternative health, public health, mental health, social services, and other organizations that are dealing specifically with women. There's a wonderful osteoporosis mature women's health clinic at the Grey Nuns.

Another issue is that there is primarily a research function for this council, but there seems to only be one representative from a research institution, and I think that needs to be looked at as well. You probably want more academic research that's available there.

Now let me talk about some of the things I'd referred to earlier. Where will the issues of poverty be discussed as they impact on women's health? Or employment issues? For instance, if you're a part-time person or a seasonal worker, whether you get benefits or don't get benefits, whether you have a pension or don't have a pension, that affects you very much.

Where are the legal/judicial issues about access? I mean, if you want to see women in stress, look at some of the family courts and the people going in and out of those doors. That's one of the most stressful things in their lives. You think that doesn't impact their health and the health of their families?

What about the social issues? Drug and alcohol abuse, gambling issues, what kind of housing they have available. Can they afford to live in a safe neighbourhood? All of those issues, once again, really affect women's health.

What are the other issues affecting women? Well, what about availability of home care and the range of home care services that are actually available, or even the expectation that women will be the home care, the one and only home care? If you don't think that affects every woman sitting in this Chamber and elsewhere, you've got another thing coming. We've got a sandwiched generation of women who have elderly parents they're caring for and still have children that may be at home or very near to home. They are the primary caregivers for both sets of people, and they're sandwiched. I think that affects women's health.

Where have we gotten with midwifery? That was a recommendation that was brought forward, a very concrete one, with three points to the recommendation. The government has only accomplished two of those points. They still have not covered midwifery services under health care. Oh, get a move on.

4:10

We have issues like respite care, palliative care. You see, I think there's an assumption still that women will step in and take over all these caregiving duties, particularly around the issues of health. I don't think people are looking around at women and the age that they are today. You know, all the women in this House are working. It's not as though we could drop everything and run to provide that kind of specialized care for somebody. Most of the women are working because they have to work and because they want to work, and there's nothing wrong with that.

MRS. SOETAERT: For pay. Every woman works.

MS BLAKEMAN: For pay, yeah. I mean, every woman works, but many of them are working outside of the home for money, and that's because they have to.

You know, this is all about treatment that I'm hearing, and the list the member sort of ran off at the end of her remarks were all treatments, acupuncture and a number of other things. Again I react by saying: where's the prevention? A dollar in prevention is worth a million bucks in cure, and when do I get this government to understand that? It's true, and it's always after the fact. It's always money going in after the fact. We have the knowledge, we have the research to understand these issues from the beginning.

Another question: how would this council fit within the Alberta health care population health strategies? I think there are a lot of issues to be raised there.

The member didn't talk about adequate funding for the council. I spoke of it a bit, but I also think the other thing that needs to be considered here is remuneration of the directors that are appointed to the council. I think there's been an assumption here for the representatives that the medical agencies they would be pulled from would be paying their salary for the day they're at the meeting. But that really makes it difficult to get the public representatives, if they have to be giving up a day's work. Why isn't this a concern? Why am I not seeing some effort being put into acknowledging this fact? Not all women have jobs where they can take a day off without having their pay taken away. Most women work on a wage basis, on an hourly basis. If they don't work, they don't get paid. So that issue of not remunerating the directors for a council is one that I think you have to look at very carefully. I would encourage the member to pursue it, because I think you're going to preclude having representatives of the public on the council because they simply cannot afford to give up the earnings. It would cost them too much.

The other thing I would like to see and have not heard the member mention is: will there be gender parity on this council? From everything I saw in the previous bill that was introduced and in anything the member has said now, this could be a council of 10 men. I'm reminded of that little cartoon that you see resurface every now and then where there's an entire, great, huge board table full of men all the way around it. The chairperson calls the committee of women's issues to order, and there isn't a woman at the table. So I would like to see something worked into this that actually acknowledged . . . [interjections]

Oh, I see people are a little sensitive about the thought of gender parity. You cannot be serious that you would want a women's health council with all men on it. No, no. You're not serious. I know you're not.

I think the member should look to incorporating something like that. I would suggest a 60-40 amendment that says: no more than 60 or less than 40 of either gender. Of course, for this purpose I would prefer to see that 60 percent of the representatives were women. That only makes sense to me.

I'm glad the member brought forward the bill and now the motion. It does show some sensitivity to how women's lives are different than men's, but I think there are a lot of other things that could have been done with this. I think the whole idea of narrowing women to just that collection of organs and bone and skin walking around is a very narrow view of women, and I would really like to see it expanded to a better understanding of women's lives. There are a lot of ways that the suggestion in the motion brought forward by Calgary-Cross could be improved so we could have a much stronger idea here. I do commend her for the work that she's done. I can tell by the remarks she made today that she's done more work, a lot of work, on research into some of the identified medical problems that women have, but I urge her to cast the net a little wider so that we can start understanding the social impact of the world that women really live in and how that affects their health.

I appreciate having the time to speak to the motion. As I said, I will support it, but you know, with the resources this government has, it could have been so much better. It really could have.

Thank you very much.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

MR. STEVENS: Thanks, Madam Speaker. It's my pleasure this afternoon to say a few words regarding Motion 505, the very excellent motion from the Member for Calgary-Cross to establish an Alberta advisory council on women's health.

Madam Speaker, women's health is a growing concern for all Albertans. There are few of us in this Assembly today who have not been affected in some way by this issue. We all know sisters or daughters or mothers or aunts or nieces or wives that have at some point been affected by the health issues outlined by the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross. Currently I have the good fortune to serve as chair of the standing policy committee on learning, and I would like to focus my comments this afternoon on the educational and informational advantages that an advisory committee on women's health would have for Alberta women and indeed for all Albertans.

I believe that phenomenal strides can be made in educating and informing all Albertans on the health issues that affect women within our province. We can and should do more to improve the health prospects of Alberta women. Madam Speaker, the creation of an advisory council would provide women with current and up-to-date information on new treatment regimes that are coming on-line in Alberta, experimental initiatives that are in the planning process, and contact information for locally based expert or support organizations. An advisory council would act as the conduit through which the government could consult with women's groups on the overall health planning process within Alberta.

In these many ways the creation of a council would give women's organizations the opportunity to assess essential information in a timely manner with a relative amount of ease. A good example of how this council could play this valuable role is in the area of drug and alcohol abuse. More and more women in Alberta are being affected either directly or indirectly by drug and alcohol abuse. As things stand right now, Madam Speaker, I believe that there is far too little knowledge shared on the part of health professionals both on the role they can play in treating this disease and also on the effect it has on women themselves and their bodies. An advisory council on women's health could assist in educating Alberta women in this critical area and help decrease the number of women suffering from the effects of drug and alcohol abuse.

Madam Speaker, the effects of alcohol and other drug abuse on women's health is considerable. Statistically, each year Canadian hospitals treat women for an average of 11,000 alcohol-related problems. The physiological consequences of alcohol and drug abuse common in women include increased risk of tuberculosis, hypertension, and sexually transmitted diseases such as HIV infection and infertility. There can also be effects to unborn children, namely fetal alcohol syndrome and fetal alcohol effect, two completely preventable afflictions that have a permanent impact on the lives of Albertans. Moreover, health experts and scientists are beginning to find that women with alcohol and other drug problems are more likely to have mental disorders than men. Clinical research reveals that depressive and anxiety disorders as well as low self-esteem are more frequently found in female addicts.

4:20

Another special problem for women is the effect of tobacco use. The mortality rate of lung cancer in women has surpassed that of breast cancer as the most common cause of death from cancer in North America. Women are not only susceptible to the smoking-related diseases commonly seen in males; women are also vulnerable to special risks related to the female reproductive system and pregnancy. Despite these risks, the prevalence of smoking among women has remained steady since the 1960s, whereas smoking rates for men have been continually dropping.

Madam Speaker, today there are more female new smokers than male new smokers, a phenomenon that certainly has significant implications. According to the 1996 statistics 48 percent of Alberta females aged 15 to 24 are smokers. In fact, teenage girls are now more likely to smoke than their male counterparts. The Alberta Tobacco Reduction Alliance recently estimated that in 1992 the cost to Alberta's economy of tobacco use was approximately $728 million. Of this total, approximately $215 million can be directly attributed to costs on the health care system, while the remaining $508 million can be attributed to productivity losses due to illness or premature death.

This new wave of smokers bodes poorly for the health of Alberta's women in the future. Greater knowledge and effort are required to successfully reach women about the negative health impacts of smoking and to lower the numbers of female smokers. In spite of all the warnings on cigarette packages, many young women may not realize that the risks to their own health may not be that far down the road. Pregnant women who smoke increase the risk of complications to their baby such as miscarriage, premature delivery, low birth weight, stillbirth, eye defects, and sudden infant death syndrome. Women and adolescent girls who smoke and use birth control pills are 10 to 20 times more likely to have heart attacks or strokes than women who do not smoke. Smokers are also at increased risk of cervical cancer.

Substance abuse and addiction is a field in which research that is specifically oriented on the impact it has on women's health is sorely lacking. Clearly this research gap and lack of baseline data is something that needs to be urgently addressed and corrected because it is absolutely crucial to our future and to maintaining a healthy population. The most critical research needed in this area is the examination of what can be termed as women at risk. These women are generally described as young, involved in pressure to drink and smoke from peer groups, having a heavy-drinking spouse, depressed, experiencing a life crisis or loss, and frequently drinking or using substances to escape daily problems.

Research of this group is critical because women are no more homogeneous a group than men. Women with substance problems differ in terms of age, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, occupational and marital status, and other demographic factors, just as men do. Identifying groups of women at high risk may lead to early intervention strategies targeted specifically at these groups of women. These strategies could range from substance-specific programs aimed at women at high risk to nonspecific programs aimed towards improving women's mental health. Consciousness-raising groups, awareness workshops, sports and exercise, job counseling, and parenting skill training are just a few examples of such programs.

Physical activity by women has also been identified as a problem. Women of all ages do not engage sufficiently in physical activity despite its many positive effects on health. The health system must learn how to encourage healthy behaviour in women in developing approaches that take into account their values, lifestyles, and roles.

Madam Speaker, it's all too clear that many women are not adequately aware of current prevention strategies that can dramatically improve their health. We must educate these women if we hope to help them, and the establishment of an advisory council on women's health can help co-ordinate this effort. Women's health is also impacted by life circumstances, and often these circumstances contribute to the amount of motivation a woman has to take preventative measures to safeguard her health. A good example of this fact is invasive cervical cancer. Invasive cervical cancer is commonly found in those women who have never been screened or who are not screened regularly. Aboriginal women fall into this category, and statistically they are overrepresented in cervical cancer statistics.

An advisory council on women's health could help develop programs for aboriginal women, a group for which special measures must be taken to improve the use of known preventative measures. It could also play a valuable role in raising awareness about cervical cancer and the fact that early detection makes all the difference in the treatment of the disease. An advisory council on women's health, that would provide information and education on women's health issues, is crucial because of the disturbing phenomenon of women continuing to die from preventable diseases.

Madam Speaker, women continue to die from largely preventable conditions such as cervical cancer. Unprecedented numbers are now dying from lung cancer, which is, again, another largely preventable disease. As mentioned previously, in 1994 for the first time lung cancer surpassed breast cancer as the leading cancer killer of women. Women themselves, when asked what illness puts them at greatest risk of death, will usually identify breast cancer without realizing that cardiovascular disease carries greater risks.

To make smart, responsible decisions regarding their health and lifestyles, women must have access to accurate, comprehensive, and intelligent information. It's for this reason that I support Motion 505 and the creation of an advisory council on women's health.

To conclude, I urge the Assembly to recognize the unique nature of women's health and the issues that surround it. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I realize I only have a short moment before we change the business of the day.

It's interesting. I remember a few years ago when the women's advisory council was scrapped by this government a year before it should have been, before the sunset clause that was stated for it. That advisory council did some really good work, and there were good people on that from all over the province. I'm really glad this is before us, and I will be supporting it, but it goes to show that there's just no vision on that side of the House about where we need to be with women's issues, certainly one of the weaker points of this government.

When we talk about the need for a women's health advisory committee, the reality is that women's health is different. So often tests are done on male subjects rather than . . .

THE ACTING SPEAKER: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but the time limit for consideration of this item today has now expired.

4:30

head: Committee of Supply

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I will call the committee to order.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

Executive Council

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Treasurer.

MR. DAY: Thank you, Madam Chairman. It's an honour to appear before the committee on behalf of the Premier to conclude discussion on Executive Council's 2000-2003 business plan and estimates. I hope to be able to answer a number of the questions that were asked by the members at the committee's last session. That would have been the evening of Wednesday, March 8.

There was a question from one of the members asking for an explanation on the increase to the Executive Council budget. This was actually discussed in previous sessions. Just to do a recap for the member, the bureau's budget actually shows an increase of approximately $1 million in 2001-2002 to complete the Revised Statutes of Alberta project, an exciting project. I know there's probably not a lineup at the theatres to see it, but it is an important work that was done. Revenue from the new project is projected to offset that additional spending. The balance of that budget increase for the bureau works out to approximately $100,000 to allow for salary increases for staff, and there are also the same increases that will be seen across government in this year's estimates.

An increase of approximately $1.8 million is also showing under Executive Council for the Alberta Corporate Service Centre. I'm sure the member is familiar with some of the projected work to be done there. Members of the committee should note that the centre is also going to generate revenue because it will charge back its costs to ministries, and that will result in actually no net spending increase. Members also may be aware that the Alberta Corporate Service Centre is a new program that will be consolidating and providing administrative services to ministries so that they can focus on the delivery of programs and services to Albertans. So you'll see the effect of some of that in a positive way.

[Mr. Renner in the chair]

There was also a question, Mr. Chairman, from one member of the committee who wanted to know what kind of courses are included in the bureau's in-house training program. There are actually a variety of courses that are offered to help staff improve their specialized and general professional skills. Some of those would include courses about the latest developments in computer software and other technologies, sessions to help staff upgrade their writing and editing skills, and other general topics such as consulting and leadership. So a variety of skills upgrading and courses being offered there.

Then there was a question related to improving access to the RITE telephone system. Due to the consolidation of these centres, the result of that has actually been a higher volume in calls, which would make sense. The call volumes through the RITE telephone system have increased every year over the last three years, with more people moving into the province and provincial programs being of higher interest. So there has been that increase.

Just to give members some idea of the increase, the system logged a total of some 4.8 million calls in '97-98. A year later that number rose to a total of 5.9 million calls. That was an increase of 21 percent, an increase of more than a million calls from the previous year, from '97-98 to '98-99. As far as we can tell from the projections, the total volume for '99-2000 will probably reach some 6.2 million calls. That would be an estimated increase of approximately 6 percent, so very significant business being generated there. We are trying to make information easily available to our citizens and to broadcast that out to them, and we're certainly seeing that in the response.

Members of the committee should also note that consolidating to two RITE centres from six centres has resulted in improved service levels. The extended hours are something that we're getting positive feedback on in terms of the hours of service that are available to Albertans. Albertans can use that toll-free provincewide service to reach Alberta government offices weekdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. That's better than bankers' hours. The new system also allows callers to reach government offices after hours by the direct-dialing option and the voice messaging service. Certainly this may be unparalleled in the country. I'm not sure what other provinces offer, but I understand that the level of service that's being offered is very significant.

The '98-99 performance measures for the RITE system showed a 97 percent satisfaction rating among the surveyed RITE system callers. They were called back and surveys done. A 97 percent satisfaction rate with that service is phenomenal, and to all of the operators and the people involved in delivering that service our congratulations should go out.

Another question dealt with the cost of the Premier's annual TV address to Albertans. This year's broadcast was on January 31. I know the members can remember that because I'm sure they were glued to their TV sets, as were we. The cost was approximately $75,000. That works out to less than 3 cents per Albertan. If there is any difficulty with that from any of the members across, I've got a nickel for each one of you. That would give you 2 cents change, and it wouldn't have cost you a thing. Three cents. What price communication, Mr. Chairman? What price truth? Three cents per Albertan. Actually, it's interesting to note that this year's address cost the same as the Premier's address last year.

One member also asked about the process that's used to tender and award government advertising contracts. I can tell you that the Public Affairs Bureau has a very comprehensive policy in place, and that's to ensure that advertising agencies are dealt with and contracts are awarded in a fair and open manner. This particular process was actually created hand in hand with advice from the advertising community in conjunction with the Advertising Agency Association of Alberta. It was a very open process, not just in the contracting itself but in the process of developing the process. So there was open process on the process. It has resulted in a very satisfactory ability for agencies to get those bids in on those contracts. This whole process continues to be replicated, either in whole or in part, by other jurisdictions, so clearly this is a system that not only works well but is seen as working well, and that's very important.

Basically, it goes like this. Anyone who's listed on the Alberta government's registry of qualified advertising agencies gets notified of competitions as these competitions come forward, and the agencies then compete for the various advertising jobs. Submissions are received from agencies. They're evaluated by a cross-departmental committee that's created for each particular competition. It's important to note also that all through this process the Public Affairs Bureau serves in a consultative role. It does not vote on the agency choice, and any contracts are negotiated between the client department and the selected agency. The service is very direct there.

Members of the committee also should note that each of the 26 agencies included in the government's registry of eligible agencies was required to demonstrate that they had financial solvency and had to have professional credentials before being added to the list. There is a sense of comfort there that the agencies that are on that list have the capability to handle the contract should they indeed receive the award of the contract. By keeping this registry of qualified agencies, combined with a competitive tendering process, that all works to ensure that quality work will be delivered and at the same time offers that open and fair competition process for everyone involved.

Also, a member of the committee asked for information on what steps government takes to ensure that Albertans' priorities are reflected in its plans. Well, I can tell you that we have always maintained a very firm commitment in this particular approach to ensure that Albertans not only have the ability but know that they have the ability for full and meaningful input into the plans and priorities of the government. We realize totally that when all is said and done, we work for the Alberta taxpayer. The taxpayers are our bosses. Albertans have every right to see their needs and priorities reflected in the work that we do on their behalf. The most important thing we can do, I believe, Mr. Chairman, is to ensure that Albertans' priorities are reflected in government programs. That means we need to provide the people we serve with a variety of opportunities to voice their opinions.

4:40

Just to give some examples of major public involvement initiatives in the past year, they include the Children's Forum, the health summit, the justice summit, and the aging summit. I know that members opposite, many of whom attended any number of these summits, know full well the degree of openness and inclusiveness that went into the preparation of these particular summits, the incredible amount of input that was received and validated before reports were made. So extreme care is taken to make sure that a good and healthy cross-section of Albertans' views are involved in all of our policy development. Also, the information and the feedback options are there for everybody to see, as you know, when the reports are printed. All the attendees, who had input, and what was done and what was said are all reported to Albertans.

Last year's summary of government public involvement initiatives is very significant, and I know that members opposite would want to congratulate the government on just how widespread these were. The report shows that more than 800,000 Albertans participated in at least one of these consultation events with the government. Eight hundred thousand Albertans. I'll just say that one more time, because I don't know if the full impact of that was significantly noted by members opposite. That was 800,000 Albertans who participated in any number of these events. I don't think there's another province that could match that in terms of participatory democracy and citizen initiative in terms of policymaking.

That would break down into some 30,000 Albertans who attended nearly 1,200 meetings, hearings, and workshops and another 116,000 oral and written submissions that were provided at public hearings and meetings. Last year some 770,000 Albertans also used government information lines to express their opinions. Think of that.

AN HON. MEMBER: How many?

MR. DAY: I'm glad you asked how many. Hon. member, 770,000 Albertans used government information lines to express their opinions. That is almost three-quarters of a million people using the access to those lines.

Of course, there are other ways in which public consultation happens. That's listed in the report, including public meetings held around the province to hear what Albertans had to say about a variety of issues, including taxes. We listened to what they had to say and acted on that feedback. The result, of course, is the new tax plan, backed by a firm commitment to keeping Alberta's taxes low, something that's near and dear to my heart and, I know, to the hearts of all my colleagues.

If you look at last year's public consultation report, you can see that these opportunities offered to Albertans dealt with a wide range of topics from several ministries across government. You can see that those public consultation opportunities spanned the province geographically, from one end of the province to the other, east to west, north to south, with roundtables and consultations in every corner of this province.

The stats for '99 will be available around the coming fiscal year-end, and I'm sure members of the committee will see continued opportunities for public consultation as well as the continued high levels of participation across the province. Albertans know what they want, they know how to get their views across, they know how to speak to their government, and those opportunities are made available. I think that's why we continue to be seen as having one of the most open processes of policy development in government, as one of the most responsive governments if not the most responsive government in the country. That's all a trademark of how the Premier listens and involves Albertans in these processes and insists that these processes be open.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I hope that I've been able to answer many of the members' questions.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. At this time in the Committee of Supply on Executive Council I have just a few questions. I have three specifically.

Mr. Chairman, I have, like others, very grave concerns regarding the government's plan to outsource many of the jobs in the public service, whether it be in technology, finance, human resources. I'm talking about the Alberta Corporate Service Centre and what's going to happen here. I've been given assurances that there are going to be no layoffs, but at this present time I'm not buying that.

I have specifically these questions. The first one is: what is the current cost to the Alberta government of providing the transactions that have occurred to date for the Alberta Corporate Service Centre? The cost savings target, I understand, is 20 percent over three years, but what exactly is the amount of money that is determined to be saved here? What amount of taxpayers' money is being saved?

Mr. Chairman, my second question is: will outsourced contracts with service providers be publicly tendered to ensure that they will be awarded in a selection process that is independent? If that question could be addressed, I would be grateful.

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

My third question is: how much public money was spent on the Pricewaterhouse consulting fee for the Alberta Corporate Service Centre, and what recommendations will be implemented as a result of the funds spent?

At this time, Madam Chairman, that is the extent of my questioning, but I believe they're very important questions for not only the stability but also the future of Alberta's public service.

I shall cede the floor to my hon. colleague from Edmonton-Glenora, who has many questions to ask. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Madam Chairman. First of all, I want to thank the Treasurer for being with us, because I know that he has some other things on his mind. It's good of him to be here when the Premier couldn't be. I also want to thank him for reading those notes.

A couple of comments, first of all, on the Treasurer's response to the earlier part of this budget examination process. He talked about the million dollar increase in the budget, most of it going to the Revised Statutes of Alberta project, and we did talk about that before. Some of that is for salary increases. I'm curious to know how much of that is for out-of-scope positions versus union positions. I've had some comments from some folks in the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees who tell me that they're being treated relatively unfairly compared to their non-union bosses and managers, so I'd just be curious to know what's going on in the department of Executive Council.

Before I go much further, Madam Chairman, I'd like to acknowledge as well the presence in the gallery of so many of the staff of Executive Council, from the deputy minister on down. They were here with us the other night as well, and we appreciated their presence there. It's nice to know that at least somebody is listening in the galleries, taking the notes so that we can get some responses to some of our questions.

The point made about the 3 cents per Albertan for the television broadcast is a curious one. I'm aware of a public broadcaster that reaches just about every home in Alberta and would have provided that broadcast for zero cents per Albertan. While the Treasurer was making the point about what democracy costs and isn't that an affordable rate, I know this Treasurer's penchant for squeezing a penny. I know that what he would want to do is not spend any more of Alberta taxpayers' money than they've already contributed through their federal taxes to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

If we were really looking at the most cost-efficient way for Albertans to hear from their Premier through the medium of television, of course it would have been using that public broadcaster. I can only suggest that the reason why the government would choose to spend tax money as opposed to taking advantage of the money that Albertans have already contributed to the CBC is, of course, because of the CBC's policy of giving equal time to other political parties. That's really a shame, particularly in context of the Treasurer's comments that this was all in the name of democracy. It seems to me that the most democratic thing to do would have been to go for these equal-time broadcasts. But, Madam Chairman, water under the bridge. These arguments have been raised before, and of course the government, despite its protestations that it's open and listens, absolutely turns a blind eye and a deaf ear to these matters.

4:50

Now, the access to the RITE system. I have to say that I've used the RITE system many times. I find it to be a pretty reliable system. I think some good-quality decisions have been made in terms of the technology that's in place and the way it's being managed. It is an impressive track record that they have in terms of call volume. The projection of dealing with over 6 million calls in the fiscal year ending March 31, 2000, is staggering when you think about the number of calls per day that that would boil down to. My question, though, to the Premier through the Treasurer is: how many of the volume of calls have to do with people calling in to express a particular concern about a government initiative versus how many are calls that are simply trying to get the telephone number to a registry agent in their community or something to that effect? It seems to me that to make those numbers more meaningful, we'd have to make a distinction between those calls which are coming in commenting on government policy versus those calls which are seeking information about access to a government service.

While we're talking about government policy, I do note that the Treasurer spent some portion of his comments talking about the consultation process which involved Albertans in summits and talked about that being a hallmark of how open and accountable this government is and how it's willing to receive input. My concern about that is that many of these events are highly controlled, highly orchestrated. In many of the events panelists are handpicked. The presentations are choreographed down to the last minute. Even the guest list and who it's open to is often highly massaged, and then the opportunities for discussion and debate around ideas that aren't scripted are curtailed. So I would like to know if this is in fact something that's happening out of Executive Council or if it's happening through Community Development.

I'm a little bit confused. I know that in this latest round of meetings dealing with Bill 11, the meetings held by what the Premier dubbed truth squads, it seems that there are professional facilitators who have been engaged to run these meetings. My understanding is that these facilitators come from the Department of Community Development. I would like to know whether or not Executive Council is a client of Community Development or the other way around and exactly who it is that's paying for these professional meeting managers at these so-called truth squad sessions. My report back from the latest one in St. Albert is chilling to me because it really talked about a meeting that was so tightly orchestrated that people apparently weren't even allowed to hold the microphone on their own, that there was some facilitator who would hold the microphone up to somebody. I guess if they said the wrong word, the microphone would just be yanked away. Of course, that's a really chilling experience.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, the chair would like to ask what this has to do with the reporting of Executive Council.

MR. SAPERS: Well, I think you could check the Blues to understand the connection with the question I raised, which is: is Community Development a client of Executive Council or the other way around? With these facilitators that go to these meetings – I was using that one as an example. So I think it's a pretty clear direction.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Let's move on.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you for your advice.

Now, these facilitators of course do a very good job, and I'm not for a minute suggesting that they don't. In fact, I'm so impressed by the job that these paid public employees do, I would like to ask the Treasurer to ask the Premier on my behalf whether or not Executive Council would be willing to make a budget available to any Member of the Legislative Assembly so that they could use the same services of the same government employees doing facilitation at public meetings.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Use your own budget.

MR. SAPERS: The Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations just said – and I'm sure she meant to say it through the chair – to use your own budget.

Well, the point is, of course, that this is a departmental budget, which is the budget of a government department which is supposed to act on behalf of all Albertans, all taxpayers, versus caucus or party budgets, which do caucus or party business. So if the government of Alberta is paying for private members such as the Member for St. Albert to have these paid facilitators organize their meetings, then of course they should make the same budget and the same paid facilitators available to any private member if they need them to organize their meetings. I would like to know whether or not those dollars are built into this budget.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, the chair would think that that type of discussion is for Public Accounts. You're now talking about current. Right now we are dealing with what is in this document here as far as reporting.

Now, let's move on.

MR. SAPERS: Do these interruptions come off my time? I would hope they don't.

Another number that the Treasurer used had to do with 770,000 Albertans, over three-quarters of a million, who provided input to the government on, I believe he said, policy matters or matters of public concern. Now, I don't know whether in fact it's 770,000 different Albertans or 77,000 calling in a thousand times or what it was in terms of his numbers. What I'd like is some clarification from the Treasurer as to the breakdown of that number of 770,000. On what matters did Albertans contact Executive Council or the Premier's office? Were they providing advice, and if they were, was the advice tabulated in some way? Is there a record or a logbook someplace that the government has which says that this many Albertans phoned in and provided us this advice? For example, on Bill 11 or on any other matter of public policy we've had 770,000 telephone calls, and this is how many said that they liked it and this is how many said that they don't.

If the Treasurer is going to use numbers like 770,000 Albertans calling in and providing advice, I think he has a responsibility to tell us what that number means, to put it into context. Otherwise it becomes very much an irrelevancy, and I know that the Treasurer does not want to be irrelevant to the provincial Legislature. Well, then again, Madam Chairman, maybe he does.

Now, during the earlier discussion on Executive Council I raised a number of questions to the Premier that had to do with performance measures, and not one of those questions was answered. I asked some questions about the form of the performance measures in his business plan. Not one of those questions was answered. I asked some questions about some new performance measures on satisfaction to do with correspondence, and his response was: well, that hon. member doesn't understand the volume of correspondence that we receive. Well, I would argue with the Premier. I think that I do. Not only would my comments from the last time we were dealing with this department reflect that understanding, but also most Albertans of course tend to copy members of the opposition when they're writing letters of concern to the Premier. I think we have a pretty fair idea of the volume, but the measure wasn't one to describe volume. The measure was one to describe satisfaction. Albertans really don't like getting back those rather limited form letters that say: thank you for your letter; I'll advise the Premier. When Albertans sit down and take the time to provide their analysis to the government, they expect a little fairer treatment than that.

The second measure that I asked about was compliance with freedom of information requests. Not a peep from the government in terms of a response in terms of developing a performance measure from Executive Council along those lines.

I had also asked about a measure that would determine the degree to which the government has been successful in defending public institutions such as our advanced education system, our K to 12 public education system, our public health care system, our judicial system, our criminal justice process, and in fact this Legislative Assembly, specific performance measures that would look at what the government has done or not done to protect these public institutions. Of course, no response to that measure whatsoever. This is particularly troubling, because today we heard that the Premier said the truth about Bill 11 is in the law, yet we know that when laws become inconvenient, this government simply changes them. We had the example most recently with the Fiscal Responsibility Act, where the government recognized that they had made a huge error, so they simply rewrote the law to suit them at the time.

5:00

Now it also asks for the Executive Council to develop a performance measure dealing with truth and accuracy or a truth and accuracy scale in terms of their advertising. I had used the example of a newspaper ad, and I think it was at that point, Madam Chairman, that I got cut off. I had run out of time. You know, this was an ad in the Edmonton Examiner from the middle of February, and it talked about a number of issues including health care and taxation, and it would lead Albertans to believe that many things had in fact become law that hadn't been, whether it had to do with the $500 million endowment for the science and engineering foundation or it had to do with Bill 11 or it had to do with the flat tax strategy. So I'm very concerned when the government pays for advertising using tax dollars and the ads are misleading and false, because the ads are to bring you to a conclusion that something has happened that hasn't.

The word for that kind of advertising is propaganda, and I don't think the taxpayers should be forced to pay for what would be clearly seen as political partisan propaganda. If the Progressive Conservative Party wants to put out their propaganda, let them, and let them pay for it with their own funds. I don't think taxpayers should have to pay for that propaganda.

Another issue that the Treasurer did mention. He talked about the planning and priorities of government and the good track record they have. I guess I won't reread into the record all of the comments that I have made at other times about the Auditor General's concern about the mismatch in the business plans between performance measures and outcomes or tying outcomes to dollars spent, et cetera, but I will note that this government does not have a great track record when it comes to meeting its own performance measures. Remember, I'm not talking about performance measures that were imposed by any outside authority. I'm talking about performance measures developed by government departments, many of the performance measures very superficial, and even at that, I believe that last year this government missed over 120 of their own performance measures. So I don't think that's anything to brag about, and I was kind of surprised to hear the Treasurer raise it.

A couple of other thoughts that I have that I wish the Treasurer would reflect on. Where exactly in this Executive Council budget, particularly when it relates to the Public Affairs Bureau, or perhaps it's in the Corporate Service Centre, are we going to find the money for the continuing campaign around Bill 11? For example, we know that Learning has given up some of its time so that a debate can be televised on Bill 11, and the Premier announced today that that debate was going to be on April 4. So I'm assuming that's going to be Tuesday night, April 4, and I understand it's a three-hour chunk of time. Now, since that time was already paid for by Learning, does that mean it's never going to show up in the accounting of all the money that was spent on the government's campaign to try to sell Bill 11? I would like to know, for example, where the continuing newspaper ad campaign is going to be paid from, out of what budget.

The Premier has also said that he's anticipating many amendments, and in fact I believe some of these amendments are going to be introduced by the government right off the bat, probably when second reading commences. So this means the government has already come to the conclusion that the bill is deeply flawed and must be rescued by some amendments. I'd be curious to know which sections of the bill the government has already found are flawed. I think Albertans would like to know that as well.

More importantly, you know, this householder that went out even with the typo to a million households apparently – at least that's what the government has claimed – are they going to send out another million with the corrections, with the amendments? [Mr. Sapers' speaking time expired.] I'll come back and finish my thoughts later, Madam Chairman.

MR. DAY: I'll be brief, Madam Chairman. There were a number of questions that were asked, and we will follow up on those, as is the habit of this government to respond to the questions. To the member for way out there in Edmonton-Gold Bar, just a comment you made in terms of the shared services and our corporate services. The goal and the aim there is to achieve the administrative efficiencies, and as the member quite rightly noted, there hasn't been a stated goal to reduce jobs.

But I do want to say something. The member reflects a view which, of course, is not necessarily shared by those who understand the principles of limited government. When you stand up and demand that all jobs be preserved, it shows a line of thinking actually from another century. If you want to see jobs preserved, you create opportunities. You don't blindly stand and say: jobs will be preserved in this one particular area. Now, I'm saying and I'm making it very clear: the goal of the corporate registries and shared services is not to reduce personnel; it's to achieve and maximize efficiencies.

I would remind the member that since 1993 the goal of this government has been to create opportunities for all citizens, and here we are with record-low unemployment rates, the lowest ever seen. I can't remember in Edmonton-Gold Bar where the member has ever seen unemployment rates as low as they are right now. That's because we pursue a policy of creating opportunities outside of government, opportunities to which the rest of the country is responding by moving here. Even the opportunities that have been created are so incredible that the huge migration from other provinces is in fact being absorbed. I'd like the member to keep that in mind when he just blindly is ideologically spouting forth a 19th century view. We've left the 20th century. We're into the 21st, and we're showing how we care for people: by creating opportunities. People respond, and we will continue to have the lowest unemployment rate if we continue to follow those very valid policies.

On the issue related to the consultations. Again, it must be difficult for the members across to absorb good news, because the huge level of involvement by Albertans in the consultation process that has been set up and guided by the Public Affairs Bureau and others – I just have to take issue with the comments that these meetings are somehow scripted and there are certain registered lists. I'm sure the member has attended. I have attended and watched the development in the health summits, certainly the Children's Forum, and the reports around the province and consultation on issues related to seniors and the aging. I have attended those, and I have seen citizens walk up, register, and take part in very significant discussion, and they do not leave those meetings saying these were scripted. So I want to congratulate the different areas of government, the Public Affairs Bureau and others, who have organized these meetings and made sure that everybody has input. They are not scripted. I can tell you there's a good diversity of views, and I want to make that very clear.

I would also like clarification from the Member for Edmonton-Glenora, because I was listening very carefully, and I heard him reflect that caucus budgets are used for caucus business and party business. I would ask him just to check Hansard because that, of course, would be quite a violation of fiscal policy, and that should just be included.

So, again, to the members opposite, we always value their input. Certainly their response is not scripted, and we do take it into account very carefully. The criticisms that we get we are open to because good criticism makes for even better processes. Our commitment through the Public Affairs Bureau and the other groups and organizations within government that seek the opinion of Albertans is to continue to maintain the highest standards in this nation for policy development and public involvement, and we will do so, taking in the valid criticisms that we have heard from members opposite.

That concludes my remarks today, Madam Chairman.

5:10

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: According to practice and precedent, I will now call the question. [interjection] Excuse me, hon. member. Please sit down. [interjection] Edmonton-Glenora and Edmonton-Norwood, please sit down. [interjections] I said: according to practice. [interjection] Sit down. Sit down.

According to what has been done to date in dealing with Committee of Supply and reporting, this is what we are doing. We have a letter, that we have been using for the last several reporting sessions, that was signed by House leaders, and this is what the chair . . .

MR. SAPERS: Not on reporting.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Yes, hon. member, it is on reporting.

MR. DICKSON: Point of order, Madam Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Yes, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Point of Order

Explanation of Chairman's Ruling

MR. DICKSON: This would be in the nature of an item under Standing Order 13(2) probably. So that we're sure we're talking about the same agreement, I've got copies of House leader agreements here. Perhaps you'd be good enough to reference the particular one you're referring to dealing with the report back and the time limits.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The one I am referring to: the subject is Committee of Supply reporting. The date is May 6, 1997. It was between the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, the then leader of the New Democrats, and the Government House Leader was the hon. Minister of Economic Development.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman, if I might. If you'd indulge me on this one, I don't have a copy of the agreement. Would it be possible just to briefly read the reference that refers to the report back? I don't have that copy with me.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I'll tell you what, hon. member. Since I am in the chair, I'm going to call the question. I will make a copy of this and then you can look at it after and you can deal with the appropriate House leaders. All right?

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, the chair has made a decision here. [interjections] Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, this is what we have been following to date, and this is what this chair as well as the Chairman of Committees has been following to date without incident.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman, just further to 13(2) then. I want to be clear whether this is stipulated in the agreement you cited or whether we're referring to what you understand to be the practice.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: It is the practice, hon. member.

MR. DICKSON: It's not, I take it then, pursuant to the terms of an agreement which is subsisting and in effect right now. Is that accurate, Madam Chairman?

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: It is basically the agreement that the people of the day, not the time, agreed to. We have nothing else except what is in Standing Orders, but we have been using this.

MR. SAPERS: But three years ago – it doesn't carry through.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, we used this last year. [interjections]

It is the chair's understanding that Standing Orders still prevail. The chair and the Chairman of Committees have been following this particular letter, but in essence Standing Orders do prevail. According to the practice we've been using last year and have been using recently, this is what we have been going on. You can ignore this under Standing Orders, and you continue to speak if you so desire.

MR. DICKSON: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Debate Continued

MR. SAPERS: Thanks very much, Madam Chairman. I appreciate that. The questions that I have are actually just a couple. I wanted to finish off with the point I was making before I ran out of time during my first round. With the government now moving the debate ahead – as I was saying, we're going to be looking at April 4 – what are the government's plans for communicating with Albertans about the amendments? Will that be found in the Public Affairs Bureau budget, or where else are we going to be seeing the expenses recorded for that, if at all?

What's going to happen in terms of the feedback that the provincial government has been receiving? Will there be a report that will be prepared for all Albertans that will reflect the number of those pamphlets that have been returned with the return to sender message on them or the number of e-mails or other messages? I'm assuming that's all work that's going to come in the coming fiscal year. Where are we going to see that expenditure listed? How will we know whether in fact the government has made adequate plans to accommodate this volume of correspondence and feedback they're receiving from Albertans?

I think we should get some answers to these questions, Madam Chairman, prior to any request that we vote on the estimates for Executive Council. Again, I would have to say that this whole process, as evidenced from this last little go-round that we just went through, is a flawed process in terms of examining the government's budget estimates.

I don't think we can rely on agreements that were particular to a point in time in the life of this Assembly without ensuring that they are revisited at every opportunity. The way this process works is that it's based on the fact that the opposition has every opportunity to ask every question it has regarding government's plans to spend taxpayers' dollars. I don't think that's asking too much, to use our time in this Assembly so that we can all together, all 83 of us, account to the taxpayers who sent us here to represent their best interests.

I'm looking forward to responses from the government before we are asked to provide our final approval for these spending estimates, and I will now yield the floor to any other member that has some questions on Executive Council.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I just have a couple of questions in relation to this. I note that the hon. Treasurer spoke about the outsourcing of some 400 or 500 administrative service folks for the shared services program and that he is looking for efficiencies.

You know, we've discussed the Public Affairs Bureau a lot during this particular session, and it comes to mind, Mr. Treasurer, that you have millions of dollars going into that. The Public Affairs Bureau is not playing the role they should be playing. In fact, I'm wondering when it is that you're going to go to outsourcing in the Public Affairs Bureau and maybe come back with some nonpartisan type contracts for those people in higher levels within the Premier's office and those kinds of things.

You know, for the most part the folks I know do a very good job, but to talk about the Public Affairs Bureau as being a nonpartisan or unbiased group of people – they're doing a job where as far as I'm concerned they should be focusing on government issues, not political issues. Often they're told exactly the opposite, and we know that from folks we know who work in the Public Affairs Bureau.

5:20

I'm just interested, Mr. Treasurer, if there is a plan to outsource all of those folks too. Or are you going to keep them? And what about the Community Development people who do all these functions? You know, they were at the function that the hon. Member for St. Albert had last night. There they were doing their job at what essentially is a political function. So my question is: why are those people there? Why are they being drawn into the politics? If you're looking at outsourcing, are you going to get rid of those folks? They're at every summit you have.

When are you going to stop, Mr. Treasurer? When are you going to decide that – you get rid of all your employees, and you've reached your efficiencies, and nobody can do the job. You know, people are already overworked within this organization. Outsourcing more people is not the answer. It's not the answer, Mr. Treasurer. It's looking for efficiencies within, being cost-effective within. It's not getting rid of a bunch of folks that know the jobs they're doing. How is that going to impact – I guess that's my question. By outsourcing all these folks, how is that going to impact your new images boondoggle, the program that's cost this government way more money than it should have?

Those are the very folks that do the inputting on that program. Those are the very folks that you have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars training, Mr. Treasurer. How are you going to recoup those costs? Who's going to do the work required under that program? If you're looking for efficiencies, explain that to me if you could. Explain to me why it's okay for one area to be outsourced, but it isn't okay to outsource the other that seems to serve the purpose of the government. Where's the equality in that?

Those are my questions. I'd be interested in hearing back from the Treasurer.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Seeing no speakers, the chair will now call the question. We are dealing with Executive Council. After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Executive Council, are you ready for the vote.

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense	$15,298,000
Nonbudgetary Disbursements	$250,000

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Opposed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Carried.

MR. DAY: I move that we rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

MR. RENNER: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

Resolved that a sum not exceeding the following be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, for the following department.

Executive Council: operating expense, $15,298,000; nonbudgetary disbursements, $250,000.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? Carried.
The Deputy Government House Leader.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In view of the hour I move that we call it 5:30 and adjourn and then reconvene this evening at 8 in Committee of Supply.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Opposed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Carried. We stand adjourned until 8 o'clock tonight, when we'll reconvene in Committee of Supply.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Having heard the motion by the hon. Deputy Government House Leader, does the Assembly agree?

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:27 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, March 21, 2000

8:00 p.m.

Date: 00/03/21

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: Good evening. I'd like to call the committee to order. This evening in Committee of Supply we have designated subcommittees to report, and I presume we will continue with the traditional 20, 20, and 5.

HON. MEMBER: Agreed.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Peace River will start off this evening's deliberations, followed Calgary-Buffalo.

Human Resources and Employment

MR. FRIEDEL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. You caught me a little unawares. I wasn't aware that I was first up to bat.

I'm pleased to report that the designated supply subcommittee on human resources met on the morning of March 13 to review the business plan and the budget estimates of the Ministry of Human Resources and Employment. The minister started out the meeting with an overview of the new people-and-workplace department and provided a summary of the 1999-2000 estimates. The ministry's 2000-2001 budget is increasing by $43 million, or 4.3 percent, over the 1999-2000 forecast of $992 million. This increase provides Albertans with the quality programs and services they need to help them lead more productive and fulfilling lives.

Our training programs and initiatives are just some of the ways we can help Albertans achieve their goals. By providing supports for independence clients with basic foundation skills programs and other work experience programs, more Albertans are working.

The ministry's budget review covered each of the major program areas of the ministry, and in particular the minister highlighted various program increases including a significant increase in funding for the AISH program, our training and employment support programs, child health benefit programs, workplace service programs, and shelters for homeless adults. The minister also gave a brief overview of the Labour Relations Board and the personnel administration office.

The opposition subcommittee members were provided with two hours to ask questions and receive answers from the minister, and the government subcommittee members were allocated the remaining time. There were numerous questions asked by opposition members. A significant number of these questions related to the ministry's programs as well as specific questions covering the budget estimates.

The minister did a commendable job answering the questions given the very large number and the long list of questions that were asked by the opposition. The minister also provided explanations of the ministry's programs and plans to meet the various needs and expectations of Albertans. The minister committed to review the numerous questions and to provide written answers to any of the budget and business plan related questions that were not answered during the meeting.

I'd like to thank all the members of the subcommittee of supply for their contributions to the review. I particularly want to commend the members of the opposition for agreeing to a format that made the dialogue, although a little bit informal, more beneficial – it tended to be more of a discussion debate, allowing, I think, a maximum number of questions – and the minister for also participating in this format. I think it was a pleasant alternative to some of the confrontational types of questions and answers that we have seen from time to time. I think it certainly did provide the maximum amount of opportunity for questions. The members of the government obviously have opportunities at other times, such as through standing policy committee discussions and caucus, so allocating a little extra time to the opposition I think was beneficial.

I believe that should pretty much cover it, Mr. Chairman. With that, I'll take my place and let those others who are designated to speak take their turn.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Just so you know, what the opposition proposes to do tonight: I have a few comments, and then we're bringing in our colleague from Edmonton-Manning, who is going to finish up the time we've got.

A couple of things I want to raise straight off. Mr. Chairman, when you look at the ministry business plan summary on page 248, we see the highlight that "the Supports for Independence budget reflects the continued success of welfare reforms and reduced caseloads." Calgary-Buffalo has over 30,000 residents, but 18,000 of them live in low-income households, which is a huge number. Many of these are seniors. Many of them are single mothers. A significant number of these people at one time or another require supports for independence. Calgary also happens to be the tightest rental market in the entire province.

I see that there's provision for additional money for medical and dental in terms of people on supports for independence. What I have not seen is something that's been talked about certainly in the last two years as the population pressures have brought so much difficulty to the business of finding safe, affordable accommodation. I want to know what concrete plans this government has in the forthcoming budget year to address the fact that it makes no sense to give the same supports for independence cheque to that mother with two young children in downtown Calgary as it does to somebody in Drumheller.

This is not a new issue by any means, but I recall that at least in perhaps the last two years opposition members have challenged the government to recognize that needs are different in different parts of the province, and what that requires is some flexibility in terms of the supports for independence program. I'm extremely disappointed and I know that many of my constituents will be even more disappointed to see that there's no provision for that, at least that I can see, in the budget. Now, I wasn't a member of the panel for the designated subcommittee of supply. Maybe that was addressed. I've reviewed the Hansard from that, and frankly I can't see it having been raised and answered.

MR. DOERKSEN: Hansard must have missed it.

MR. DICKSON: The suggestion of my colleague from Red Deer-South is that Hansard must have missed it. Hansard misses nothing, Mr. Chairman. I know how scrupulous those people are. Would that the provincial cabinet were as thorough as the men and women responsible for churning out Hansard on a daily basis. We'd all be further ahead. But that's another matter. I'm not trying to curry favour just so my name is spelled correctly in this evening's proceedings.

Anyway, Mr. Chairman, that's a particular concern.

We have an increase of "$500,000 to $10 million to accommodate an increased demand for beds” in the homeless adults budget. There’s some excellent work being done by the Calgary Homeless Foundation, certainly supported by the Member for Calgary-Bow and Art Smith and John Currie, all of that group of that foundation, and they’re looking at a multiple initiative strategy in terms of dealing with people who are presently homeless and a much larger population who are at risk of being homeless.

8:10

What I need to hear from this minister is how he’s tying in his work around homeless adult shelters with the excellent work that’s being done by the Calgary Homeless Foundation. You see, I’ve had the opportunity to go McDougall Centre. Yes, Mr. Chairman, occasionally I manage to sneak in the door. I put on my nose and fake glasses and moustache, and they think I’m a government MLA. I run by the security people, and I get access to Government House South.

I remember going there when Claudette Bradshaw, the federal Minister of Labour and the minister responsible for homelessness, came and made a presentation. What struck me – and there may be members here who may have a contrary view – is that the federal government has finally got the message in terms of the homeless crisis in Canada. We’re starting to see some creativity, some flexibility in terms of their approach.

I think I’ve asked this question before, maybe of other ministers. I need to see how this is knitting together, because we have some opportunity. I’d like to see government match the Calgary Homeless Foundation in terms of creativity, in terms of energy, in terms of resourcefulness. If that could be done, we’d come as close to solving the homeless and those at risk of being homeless crisis as probably I could ever imagine. So I’m interested in finding out about that.

The other issue I’m interested in finding out about – I get real confused in terms of how we are dealing with persons with developmental disabilities. This is an area I’ve been particularly interested in. The responsibility for developmental disabilities has been split in at least three different directions. The Minister of Health and Wellness and his associate minister have got a chunk of that. The associate minister just finished producing, incidentally, a very useful report, and I congratulate him on actually getting the message. I went to some of those meetings. So that’s good. But we have sort of taken responsibility and parceled it out.

One of the ironies I find, Mr. Chairman, is that there’s so much talk about co-ordination, consolidation, efficiency, yet as we saw the other day with the whole area of information technology and access to information, we then sort of bifurcate. What’s the counterpart of bifurcate if you’ve got three splits? Trifurcate? Well, whatever the word is, we’ve got responsibility split off in too many areas.

I see support to dependent adult agencies, line 7.0.2. Is this when the VRRRI or some of those agencies in Calgary or Edmonton receive funding to be able to provide certain kinds of school services, job linkup things? I assume that’s coming through program 7, supports to dependent adults. I’m assuming that’s where that is going.

There have been lots of problems, Mr. Chairman, in this area. We’ve got the report from the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness. I have to understand how this is being organized. You’ve got three different departments with some responsibility. You’ve got the Department of Children’s Services dealing with children with developmental disabilities, you’ve got the Minister of Health and Wellness dealing with some PDD clients over 18, and then we’ve got the agencies. If I understand it correctly, the agencies, the PDD agencies, fall under the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. If I’ve got that wrong . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: You’re not wrong.

MR. DICKSON: Okay.

What I have to understand then is – and it’s a basic question, but as I say, if the minister will bear with me, I wasn’t part of that subcommittee. Program 7.0.2, support to dependent adult agencies, I take it is dealing with agencies that provide services to PDD adult clients.

MR. DUNFORD: We don’t have a program 7. Are you on health? You need to be on human resources.

MR. DICKSON: Human Resources and Employment. I’m looking at page 244 of the 2000-2001 budget book, line 7.0.2.

MR. DUNFORD: That’s the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

MR. DICKSON: Okay. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that this isn’t PDD clients at all. Okay. So all of that then is between the Department of Children’s Services and the Department of Health and Wellness. Okay. Well, that’s helpful. I appreciate the clarification.

Now, the other item I wanted to ask appears in Hansard when the DSS committee was under way. This would be page 23 from March 13, 2000. There’s a reference there that “our partnership program, regulatory enforcement, and regulatory review contribute to our success.” Well, I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if the minister will provide us with a detailed schedule of the regulations reviewed in the last fiscal year by the regulatory enforcement mechanism and the regulatory review committee or task force, whatever it’s called, and provide us with advice as to the number of regulations that have been put forward by a department and not accepted by this regulatory review process. I know initially it was focused on that body of regulations. We make about 700 to 800 regulations a year in this province, and I’m not even talking ministerial orders. I know that the Member for Peace River chaired that committee. I had been dealing with past regulations, but I assume that also part of what they do is deal with ongoing regulations.

It’s a big mystery to me, Mr. Chairman – and that may be just because I’m not real swift – just what regulations are being reviewed. One of my concerns is how rigorous the scrutiny has been of regulations. I need some measure to know how many times this regulatory review scheme rejects regulations, finds regulations to be excessive, unreasonable, unnecessary, inefficient. Without that, how do we have any way of knowing whether this process is achieving anything useful at all? It’s an exercise up there in the ether world. I think what Albertans want to see is less inappropriate red tape, but I think they’re anxious to get that done.

I have some other questions, Mr. Chairman, but I know I have a colleague that wants some time, and time is short. Thanks for the opportunity to ask these questions and raise these concerns.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning in these almost seven minutes remaining.

MR. GIBBONS: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Minister, I did sit in for a brief while in your committee, and I appreciate a lot of the answers you did give us and what I’ve been reading in Hansard, but a few things I wanted to point out and ask about. I do understand it’s a newly created department, and you emphasized it as a newly created people-and-workplace department. Around the outlook for Alberta looking bright for the next few years – you put it in terms of having to wear welding goggles – I hope to see a business plan. I would like to see something like I've been emphasizing in Infrastructure and Municipal Affairs, which is three to five years so we can actually build on something over the next few years. With this new department and everything coming together within your new department and listening to you and reading what you put in Hansard, I think it might be going somewhere.

8:20

One of the questions I do have on this particular one is referring to the performance measure on the "percentage of participants employed post-intervention." What does the department consider to be "employed"? What is considered to be appropriate contact to determine the employment status? How did the department determine that the projected caseload for all four main areas – supports for independence, AISH, widows' pension, and the Alberta child benefit – come together?

Now, looking under the training program, I did emphasize a few things that I would like to see around apprenticeship. Hopefully it will be brought up under Learning. But training programs, from what you're saying in Hansard, are a big part of what your department is about. So I do hope there is some cohesion between the silos of your deputy ministers and working together on this particular item and emphasizing that if we're going to proceed into this new millennium, with the booms that we had in the 1970s that I worked through – we didn't think there was ever going to be an end to it, that the streets were paved with gold. Most people didn't learn how to budget for the next 10 years afterwards. But it's a fact that we have to train our young people and get them into the trade programs that I came out of, anywhere from welding, machinists, sheet metal, electrical. We're interested in actually how fast we're going to be producing some of our own tradespeople, our own young Albertans that are coming out of our schools.

Another comment you made was that "Overall our employment and training initiatives are showing a great return on dollars invested." This is very interesting, to the point that I'm going to put a couple of points on record on this one. What accounts for the anticipated increase of 36.9 percent in the budget for program delivery of benefits for people not expected to work? Are there additional staff that are going to be hired on this particular item?

Another item. "Today there are greater opportunities for Albertans to find employment because of our growing and booming economy" is what the minister has said. On this particular one I have a question. Given that the first two major budget areas are showing an increase in the funding for program delivery, why is there an anticipated decrease of 31.3 percent in the program delivery area for training and employment support? Given the focus of this government on the employment of persons receiving living assistance, why is there an anticipated decrease?

The AISH program. This is one that through our constituency office we deal with quite a bit, just due to the makeup of portions of our constituency and also the fact that Alberta Hospital is within the boundaries and it's the closest residential area to the Alberta hospital. One thing you mentioned was that "We think this will show tremendous increases in part-time employment." Well, I do see that. I see a lot of our restaurants hiring people, but I do hope that in terms of employment initiatives, between the AISH funding and the dollars and cents that are coming from working part-time, it isn't a detriment to some of the people there. That's a big concern that I do get in phone calls.

I'm very supportive of people on AISH. I'm very supportive as they call in stressing that it's better for them to be out there working part-time instead of sitting around wondering where the rest of their lives is going to be going. I'd like to ask the question: what percentage of the amount of funding is being allocated for employment initiatives for Albertans with disabilities?

Now, the mentally ill. You can tell by the questions I do ask in the House around the fact that a full moon – I never did understand it until after getting elected, but it is a very big part of life in our office. With the very little bit of funding that we have for a constituency office for people having offices in big cities and the costs of operating, two people would be very essential in an office like my own when it came time for the full moon to come around.

Now we have a new ministry out there around children's services. This is a ministry that is way overdue. It was timely considering what has happened in the world, in North America, and as close to us as southern Alberta last year.

It is so important that I do hope that there's another case where your deputy ministers take their two silos and work together there too. On this particular one I have a question that I'd like to pose right now and see if we can get an answer later. How many additional clients will be served to justify the 24 percent increase in funding of Youth Connections?

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Human Resources and Employment for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$1,034,970,000
--	-----------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall this vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Children's Services

THE CHAIRMAN: The place of the chair will be taken by the Minister of Children's Services. Hon. minister.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In the interest of brevity, we have had a full accounting for the Department of Children's Services and met on Monday, March 20, and agreed to report here that the designated subcommittee has agreed to affirm what was presented and provide it for you here this evening.

Just briefly, we have three divisions in the newly restructured Children's Services, with provincial programs ranging from adoption services, day care staff qualifications, and the children's initiative, ever expanding, to family and community support services.

Predominately, Mr. Chairman, we address children's issues through the child and family services authorities, who, though newly set up, are established to set and monitor standards at the local level. The budget for 2000-2001 is $537 million, including $485 million for direct services for children and families. The role of the authorities had been discussed at the presentation, and the role of the First Nations delivery system was also highlighted.

We have 2,082 staff in Children's Services in direct delivery, along with approximately 3,000 contract workers and other ancillary contracts dealing with support systems. Our most predominate concern this year is our review of the child welfare caseload. As of December 31, 1999, we have 12,922 children receiving protective services.

Mr. Chairman, sometime in the next couple of months we will respond to the Children's Forum and the Task Force on Children at Risk, which has been highlighted as a dominant public theme in the last year. We will also hear ongoing reports from the Youth Secretariat, a newly established part of our ministry which is providing a great strategy in building relationships with needy adolescents.

We would be prepared to answer any questions and will be responding to questions that were raised on staff experience and training, the legal suits and liabilities against the ministry, and vacancy rates in day care, among others.

From my point of view as minister, I thank everyone for their participation on the committee and, with that, would await any further responses that may be required. Thank you.

8:30

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Mr. Chairman, and good evening, Madam Minister. The difficulty here is that the designated supply subcommittee dealing with Children's Services met only yesterday morning, Monday morning. The reality is that we have no Hansard. I regret that because I'd like to not waste the minister's time or the House's time by not knowing exactly what's been covered and what's been responded to. Mr. Chairman, you will appreciate that not having been there on Monday and not having the benefit of Hansard, I've got to ask the questions that are important from my perspective, so I'll apologize to the House if in fact I'm treading on some ground that's already been covered.

My first question to the minister. Madam Minister, in the event that the Court of Queen's Bench determines that the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act is ultra vires or in fact offends the Charter – I understand that the government is going to vigorously assert the position of the province – in the event that the act is struck down, I'd like to know what contingency plans the provincial government has. Typically, if the court were to find that the Charter was offended by that particular bill, Mr. Chairman, then what normally would happen is that there would be like a suspensive veto. The court would give the provincial Legislature a period of time, six months, a year, whatever, to recast the bill, to make appropriate amendments, whatever.

Now, you know, the last time I looked, we've got about 250 lawyers in this giant law department called the Department of Justice.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Question.

MR. DICKSON: Well, other members have questions. That's great to see. It's great to see Calgary MLAs are getting impatient already. It's only 8:34, Mr. Chairman, and we've got a lot more questions to ask yet tonight.

The point, Mr. Chairman, is simply this. I'd like to know what arrangements have been made. To me it would be inexcusable to have the act struck down, if that should happen, and then for the province to have to spend six months or a year deciding what they're going to do. Specifically, since there are a number of young women who are already in the program, if you will, where the jurisdiction has been invoked under the act, it would seem to me that the most important thing would be to make sure that the safety programs and the support for those young women aren't compromised because the government was caught flat footed in the event of that kind of court ruling. So I'm interested in knowing what the contingency plans are.

Now, one of the things that concerned me is in terms of what happens with child welfare caseloads. There's some core information we need. Would the minister tell us how many children are currently the subject of a support agreement under part 2 of the Child Welfare Act, how many children are subject to a custody agreement under part 2 of the Child Welfare Act, and how many permanent guardianship agreements were entered into in the last fiscal year? For each of these items I'd like to know what's projected by the Department of Children's Services for the 2000-2001 budget year.

I'd like to know how many supervision orders were sought in the last year, how many were granted, and what the expectation is for the next year. I'd like to know how many temporary guardianship orders were sought in the last budget year, how many were granted, and what the expectation is for the next year. In terms of permanent guardianship orders, I'd like to know how many permanent guardianship orders were sought in the last budget year, how many were granted, and what the projection is for next year.

Now, one of the reasons for asking this. The minister, who's writing furiously as I pose the questions, may be muttering under her breath: why would she be asked for this information? Well, part of the thing we can do from this is determine how effectively and efficiently those child and family service authorities are operating. We get to determine whether we're intervening appropriately. It gives us a chance to sort of measure the effectiveness of the system and so on.

I'd like to know how many apprehension orders were sought in the last year, how many were granted, and what the projection is for the next year. I assume that all this stuff has been pulled together, presumably, for the children's summit, and I assume it's there. Some departments produce an annual report. It might be in there. I haven't had the benefit of seeing any of those things, so I don't know if that information exists.

I'd like to know how many restraining orders were granted pursuant to section 28 of the Child Welfare Act, how many were applied for, and what the projection is for the next year. I'd like to know how many secure treatment certificates were sought in the last year, how many were granted, and what's projected for the ensuing budget year.

There is provision in section 46 for search and apprehension orders. How many search and apprehension orders were applied for in the last year, how many were granted, what's the projection, and what's anticipated for 2000-2001?

Under part 5, private guardianships, for the last budget year how many private guardianships were sought, how many were granted, and what's projected for the next budget year?

Now, adoptions. How many adoptions by stepparents were sought in the last year, how many were granted, and what's projected for 2000-2001? We're not talking about stepparent adoptions, so what I'd look for, then, broken out separately would be stepparent adoptions. They may be treated through the adoption bureau, but it's typically a different file and a somewhat different process.

When I first got elected, Mr. Chairman, and came rushing in here to change the world, I remember that one of my pet issues had to do with a baby-adoption pipeline that was going on where children in various U.S. states were born and where the birth mother didn't want the father to be involved. You had people being sent up here, referred by a Los Angeles lawyer to counsel in Calgary, and we were doing adoptions. I mean, it was a really smarmy, distasteful, prejudicial kind of process that we were running in this province, not that the provincial government was doing it. Justice Blair Mason I think had tried to send the strongest possible message to the Legislature. This was about 1993 when that happened.

Now, there were some modifications made, but I guess I'd like to know if that is still a problem. Maybe it's not even a blip on the horizon. This isn't something I've been following recently, but I'm interested in terms of knowing whether that continues to be an issue, whether the minister is satisfied that we currently have adequate safeguards to make sure that we don't have children being brought up here for adoption purposes, basically to frustrate requirements in a number of U.S. states that natural fathers be given notice of birth. That's of interest to me, and I'd be interested in what the minister has to say about that.

The minister may not have been here earlier, when I was asking some questions about PDD, persons with developmental disabilities. I'm interested in currently how many children there are in this province with identified developmental disabilities.

8:40

The other thing. The minister has been to the Renfrew school in Calgary, and I've had quite a bit to do with a group of parents there. There are a group of children in the province who benefit from a particular educational program that's run at that Renfrew school, and there's been a real issue with fairness in funding. There was a legal challenge. Now, I haven't checked in with this group for a while, and I'm close to running out of time, but my recollection is that there had been some undertakings by this minister. I know the minister, and she gets full marks for working hard and trying to respond to issues as they come to her attention. I remember she came to Calgary and toured the school, I think, and probably met with some of the parents. There was some talk of some additional funding, and I haven't heard what the last chapter on that is. I hope it's positive news. The fact that I haven't heard from any of the parents recently suggests that maybe we made some progress there, and maybe the minister has been able to ameliorate what's been a pretty tough situation for families with those children with some pretty severe disabilities.

I know I've got a colleague who wants to share some of the time, Madam Minister, but I'd just make the observation that the reporting back doesn't work so well when it's less than 48 hours after the designated subcommittee of supply. I think when we originally set this rule up, the notion was that there would be time to ask the questions, time for the department to respond, and then we'd sort of come in and wrap things up.

Those are the comments I wanted to make. Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Thanks, Madam Minister.

THE CHAIRMAN: Before I call upon the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood, would the committee give consent to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, sir. It's a pleasure to introduce two guests this evening, Cameron and Kyle Gudmundson from west Edmonton. They have come along to be educated in the ways and the processes of this House, and we'd like to extend them a warm welcome and hope they enjoy and learn a little at the same time. Would you please rise.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood to finish off. You have a little over eight and a half minutes.

MS OLSEN: Thank you. It makes me feel good when I see a young person wearing a DARE T-shirt. It's a program that I support a hundred percent. That young man up there gets an A.

Children's Services (continued)

MS OLSEN: I have a few questions for the minister. Some very serious concerns have come my way recently about the applications to bring a child into the custody of the government. What appears to be happening – and there are matters before the court right now and matters that in fact have been dismissed – is that if there's been an apprehension under section 17 of the Child Welfare Act, if that's occurred, then “an application under subsection (1) shall be heard not more than 10 days after the child is apprehended”. Now, what's happening is that it's become 30 days or 40 days, so what judges are doing is dismissing that because the government is breaking their own law. They're saying: look; you were supposed to come before me a maximum of 10 days after the child was apprehended, and you've chosen not to do that for whatever reasons.

My understanding is that many social workers have caseloads so big now because of this increase in child welfare apprehensions that they can't possibly get to court in those days. Now we have kids, vulnerable children, if the issue of guardianship is dismissed, who will go back to the home they are apprehended from. In fact, the government doesn't even think they should be going back there. So you've got a big problem here. There are appeals before the courts. There are all sorts of things happening. Quite frankly, there's going to be a high price to pay when we have another one of those kids who's seriously injured or suffers death at the hands of either a parent or stepparent or whoever it is that they're being apprehended from.

I would urge the minister to look into this right away. This is not something that can wait. This is absolutely urgent. You know, for judges to say “You're breaking your own law” is sending a message to me that there aren't enough people doing the work and that they cannot handle the caseloads they have. It's not the fault of the social worker; it's the fault of the system. It's the issue of not having enough people to deal with those cases. So if they can get those ones flagged, if they're TGOs or if they're going for permanent guardianship orders, then they must come to the top of the line. They must be in that court before 10 days. I urge the minister please to deal with that.

In terms of child welfare cases, I brought this up at the Justice budget debates; however, I think it's something the hon. minister should be aware of as well. When looking at some of the child welfare court cases for days and dates for two- and three-day trials, you're looking at waiting eight to 10 months. That's the backlog in the system. That's unacceptable, because what you have are children who are left hanging within the child welfare system, and nobody is attending to the needs of that child. That is unfair, and it's absolutely astounding to me that this government, who has all these programs and that says “We care about children,” is leaving these kids hanging. I'm getting more disillusioned by the day, hon. minister. I know you're working hard and I know you're looking at changes, but these are critical areas of change. We measure time to trial for criminal or civil trials, criminal trials for sure, but we don't measure time to trial dates for these civil applications under the Child Welfare Act. I honestly believe there's got to be some change there, and it has to come quickly.

I'm interested, hon. minister, in knowing how many cases the children at risk response team is dealing with on any given night or any given week. The children at risk response team is that social worker/police officer pair, and I know social workers and police officers who are involved in that. In fact, I was a sub when I worked downtown and worked on those teams as well. I know where we took those kids. That's the other question I have. Where are you putting these kids? Foster homes are often filled up, so where are these kids going? Are they still going to hotels? I know we used to take them to hotels. I know that they would have one-on-ones in some homes that were quite abusive, and they should never put a social worker into a home situation like that to do a one-on-one. I'm wondering where these things are at.

Back to the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act. I'm a little bit concerned about the lag. The young kids that were on the street have said: look; we need more than 72 hours. To be quite honest, I told you that a long time ago. I told this Assembly, when this act was being brought in: 72 hours is not going to be sufficient for kids. I don't like to see kids incarcerated for not committing a crime. However, we talked about a voluntary long-term program. Where is that at? I sent you a letter on that, Madam Minister. What more have you done? The kids were asking for a place out of town so that they could become detached from the environment they're in. They've got drug problems. They've got all sorts of issues they need to deal with. I'm just wondering where you went with that.

I'm wondering what your position is once this file goes to the Supreme Court of Canada. The likelihood of it getting struck down is probably quite high. Where do you go from there? Are you going to go back to the Child Welfare Act, where the powers belong? What's going to happen? There's obviously a need for something like this out there. I'm not sure it's apprehending kids against their will. It doesn't seem to be doing anything. We've got a high recidivism rate in that program, almost 50 percent or more in fact. We've got a small number of kids responsible for a huge number of arrests, so that to me says that maybe it's not working as well as we had anticipated. It doesn't mean it's not working, because some kids have been taken off the street, and some things have worked out really well. But what about those kids that aren't making it? Where are you going with that, Madam Minister?

I think my time is just about up. When the minister can respond to those, I would appreciate it. I'm especially concerned about this court issue, Madam Minister, if we can look into that as soon as possible. I can speak to you about the courtrooms you might want to be looking at.

8:50

THE CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Children's Services for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense	$535,540,000
-------------------	---------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Environment

THE CHAIRMAN: For a report on this department I'll call on the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

MR. HIERATH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to report on the meeting of the designated supply subcommittee for the budget estimates for the Department of Environment. The subcommittee met yesterday morning at 8. The meeting was approximately two and a half hours in length, which allowed members an opportunity to address their questions and comments to the minister. The questions provided a frank discussion on many key issues faced by Environment and were comprehensively answered by the minister. The minister also committed to respond in writing to any questions which required further information and research and that these responses would be also tabled in the House for the record.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I was taken by surprise by the brevity of the report from the chairman of the committee.

A couple of observations I want to make. The first one is that once again we have a designated subcommittee of supply. I've got a complete set of Hansard. I looked through it. I can't find Hansard for the designated subcommittee of supply dealing with Environment. So once again some of the questions I'm asking may be because I was not one of the three opposition members on that particular panel. We may be going over some territory we dealt with before.

Let me start off by asking this. It has to do with the Natural Heritage Act. Members will remember that last year we spent a lot of time talking about the Natural Heritage Act, not as much time as we wanted because we got cut off at second reading. There had been lots of concern. There were to be some public consultations. Then the government said that they had done that. We thought that at least there would be some broader consultation. We thought we'd see legislation. Well, here we are almost at the end of the budget process – I'm starting to feel nostalgic already, Mr. Chairman, that we're going to be looking at the nasty old appropriation bill any day; that makes me think we're sort of well past the halfway point of the spring session – and I haven't seen the natural heritage legislation. I don't know whether it slipped in while I wasn't paying adequate attention. Maybe it's been passed out. Maybe everybody knows about it but me, but I'd like to know.

[Mr. Herard in the chair]

There's been some kind of an MLA committee reviewing it. Well, I haven't seen a report. Has there been a report tabled in the Assembly with respect to that MLA consultation? This reminds me, Mr. Chairman, of sort of secret societies, where right in this very room there may be members who have participated in an MLA consultation on the Natural Heritage Act and I don't know. If anybody is, would you put your hand up, please, so we know who you are? You see, I suspect that right in this room there are people that were part of that so-called MLA consultation. Well, it was no MLA consultation; it was a government caucus consultation. It wasn't a consultation of this Legislative Assembly. My colleague who's the critic in this area certainly wasn't part of that MLA consultation.

My questions would be along this line: where's the report from the MLA review committee? Mr. Chairman, I'd like to know: where is the committee, and when are we going to see that report? When will it be tabled in this Assembly? I'd like to know what the recommendations are from that MLA review committee. This is something that's far too important to be done as some kind of an internal, quiet secret. My constituents in Calgary-Buffalo have a huge interest in the environment. They would like to be let in on the secret. So maybe we could just sort of lift up that great big blanket of secrecy and have a peek at what the government proposes to do with the Natural Heritage Act.

You know, what's interesting, Mr. Chairman, is that if you look at page 145, Highlights for 2000-2001 – this is the highlight, members – it says, “Respond to the MLA Committee’s review of the draft Natural Heritage legislation.” What does that mean? A thank you letter to the people that made submissions? Does it mean that one Conservative caucus meeting is going to have that as item 1(a)? Most unsatisfactory. I think what we want is not a response. What we want to know is if there's going to be legislation. Is there going to be adequate, proper legislation to protect those special places? We don't know. Most unsatisfactory information in the ministry business plan.

Now, one of the things that I note was the issue of park visitation. I'd like a progress report from the minister. There had been that area – I'll think of the name in a moment. It's west of Cochrane. If you start driving from Cochrane . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: Waiparous.

MR. DICKSON: Yes, Waiparous. It's a recreational area where there had been huge problems, Mr. Chairman. For anybody who heard a Calgary media outlet, I think it was last summer, there was a huge problem, and there were some additional people hired by the department to go in there and try and police that area. There was actually a major problem, and you know, the minister, to his credit, said that he was going to deal with it. I understand there were some additional patrols and supervision. Some of the volunteer groups that were in there were helping out.

Mr. Chairman, I'm not sure, but it looks like Mr. Don MacDonald is up in the public gallery. Mr. MacDonald at one point was a member of this Assembly, a member for the Three Hills constituency. In fact, could I invite Mr. MacDonald to stand and receive the customary warm welcome of members of the Assembly?

In any event, Mr. Chairman, I'd like an update in terms of whether that problem has been fixed not just for last summer but whether we're going to see any recurrences of that in the next summer. So I'd like some information with respect to that.

It may seem odd that in the most urban constituency in the province the concern I hear a lot of in Calgary-Buffalo, usually about the number two issue in my constituency office, is the concern around Kananaskis and the Banff-Canmore corridor and that entire area. I've got some questions in terms of whether the province is now prepared to take an excellent idea that was put forward by the Liberal opposition in late 1996, early 1997, which was to make all of Kananaskis a provincial park, to outlaw forestry and mining and drilling.

9:00

Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I think the government would earn huge rave reviews from Calgarians certainly and probably from Albertans everywhere if they had the fortitude to do that. It seems to me that month after month we see this to-ing and fro-ing in terms of what's going to be allowed, what development is going to be permitted, and what's going to be curtailed in the Kananaskis area. It just seems to me that it's long past time when our provincial government should go in and say: we're not just going to make Peter Lougheed park at the far end of Kananaskis Country a protected area; we're going to take the whole Kananaskis Country. There may be a requirement for grandfathering. We've got two downhill ski facilities. There are some existing uses of the park, and there may be grandfathering issues.

If you look at the population of Calgary, Mr. Chairman, you know like I that we're soon going to hit a million people, the largest unicity in Canada. What that's going to mean is that that highway to Kananaskis is going to get busier and busier and busier. That's going to mean more people who are going to start saying: well, let's build a few more motels; let's put in a couple more golf courses; let's put in bowling alleys and movie theatres. We don't want to see that, so the best way of not getting incrementally taken to that place is just to take a firm stand and say: we're not going to allow development. It was a Liberal idea, but like so many good Liberal ideas we'd be prepared to have the government take it and use it.

MS OLSEN: They don't even have to ask.

MR. DICKSON: That's true. My colleagues are urging the government to take this gift. We make it as a gift to them, that suggestion.

Now, I had some other questions in terms of the major strategies. I'd like to know specifically in this year the details of what the performance measures are going to be around implementation of the Commitment to Sustainable Resource and Environmental Management. There's an issue of revising and implementing forest fire management policy to incorporate more meaningful and attainable goals. When is that going to happen? Is that the last week of February in 2001? We'll probably be in an election by then, Mr. Chairman. Can we see some detail in terms of specifically what's planned?

The forest fire management policy. I think it's now been a couple of years that there have been deficiencies and shortcomings identified in that. It seems a bit lame, a bit limp for the minister to say that we're going to revise and implement the management policy. I would have thought that we'd be much further along than that.

“Contribute to the development and implementation of government's [strategic] direction on climate change and greenhouse gases.” Well, can we particularize? How is that going to be done? Who's going to do it? How are we going to know whether it's been successful? When are we going to know when a measurement can be taken in terms of the extent to which government has achieved any measure of success at all in those things? I mean, those are pretty obvious issues that I think we'd like to see.

Now, I'm not sure – I may have some colleagues that wish to speak to this thing, but in the meantime I'm going to take advantage of this chance.

With respect to the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act, there's a five-year review under way, and the province has said: look, we're going to make some submissions to that. Has anybody considered that it might be a good idea to share with Albertans what you're going to take to the table federally? Before our provincial government, before the Member for Calgary-Nose Creek goes off to a meeting in Ottawa to sort of lay down the law with his colleagues and say, “This is what the province of Alberta wants in terms of changes to the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act,” why wouldn't the minister sort of test that on Canadians?

You know, Mr. Chairman, I have a great location for my constituency office right on 11th Avenue. I'd be happy to put a big poster there and invite Calgarians. When the Minister of Gaming drives by 11th Avenue, he'd be able to drive right up beside my constituency office. He'd drop off some petitions in the mailbox: stop private hospitals. He could also review this. When the Minister of Health and Wellness is at McDougall Centre, he could pop over to the Calgary-Buffalo constituency office. We would have this thing there so Canadians could stop by, take a look, and say: okay, this is what our government proposes to do in terms of making a submission to the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act. But we don't do that.

This is like my other pet beef. That has to do with the Bill C-5, the whole business of privacy protection. Other provinces hold public hearings so citizens have a chance. [interjection] You know, Mr. Chairman, if I could digress for a moment.

I remember going into Calgary-Varsity because there were seniors that called me. They had a big concern. There are three or four big apartment buildings right across from Market Mall, a large number of seniors there. They had a real concern with what was happening in terms of rent increases, and they wanted to be able to talk to somebody in the provincial Legislature, so I had a chance to attend that meeting. What those constituents wanted – and I undertook to communicate to their MLA, to remind their MLA of some of their concerns, because he's probably too darn busy in Edmonton to be able to come at the drop of a hat. I understand that.

The minister is very busy. There are gaming machines to check out from lounges in Fort McMurray to Milk River.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, I was prepared for a little digression, but this is getting to be quite a long, long story, so we could maybe get back to the budget.

MR. DICKSON: It's the story of my life, Mr. Chairman. You get sort of caught up in the flight of the moment. Thank you very much for bringing me back and keeping me on task.

Just as a fundamental rule, if the government of the province of Alberta on a major issue like the federal environmental legislation is going to make representations on our behalf, let us in on the secret. You know, take out a little ad in the paper; highlight it. Even if they sent out some material to my constituency office, I could share. I would like to be able to do that. When constituents come in and go through the budget book – and I do have constituents who are interested, say, in Environment – I just give them the budget book and tell them to go through and identify things, questions they've got, and I'll see if I can find answers for them.

If they ask about this, I don't know a darn thing about that. There may be other MLAs that are better versed than I am in it, but I don't like not being able to assist and be responsive when I hear those kind of concerns.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Those are matters that I think are particularly important. I have a couple of colleagues that wanted to make some observations too. The last one, though, that I did want to make – and this is interesting. If you look at element 2.0.6, freedom of information and privacy, we're forecasting an increase from $582,000 to $603,000. This is one of the few departments where I've seen them forecasting an increase in FOIP costs. [interjections] I saved the best to the last, Mr. Chairman.

What I want to know is: why is the department contemplating an increase in fees instead of a more aggressive strategy in terms of making publicly available the information that the people want? You know, any MLA in Calgary worth his or her salt should be able to tell you right now the kinds of environmental information that . . .

9:10

MR. SMITH: You sound like Allan Rock, telling people what's good for you.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Chairman, I'm trying to stay on task. I'm being baited mightily by the Minister of Gaming, but I'm not going to gamble with him.

You know, there are times that you wish you had ministers here provincially with the courage to be able to stand up and fight for public health care. I'm proud that the federal minister of health was able to come to the city of Calgary, be respectful by coming to the city of Calgary rather than issuing statements from Ottawa, and have a chance to listen to the Minister of Gaming. The Minister of Gaming was there. I had no idea he had so much interest in health care, but he was there and was taking notes. He looked very solemn. He looked quite hurt. He looked quite offended that the . . . [interjections]

THE CHAIRMAN: Order. He only has one minute left. Let him speak.

DR. TAYLOR: Well, maybe he would answer this question.

THE CHAIRMAN: Order, hon. minister.

MR. DICKSON: In any event, Mr. Chairman, what I would like is answers in terms of the basis for the projected increase in element 2.0.6 over last year and why the provincial government chooses not to adopt a more aggressive strategy in terms of getting information out to constituents.

Mr. Chairman, after the buzzer rings, I'm going to go over and sit beside my friend from Cypress-Medicine Hat, and I'm going to share with him . . . [interjections] I think those are the observations that I wanted to make at this time. I can't concentrate on the subject at hand any further.

Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman.

MR. WHITE: Sir, a couple of questions for the minister very quickly, because my hon. colleague was baited into taking much more time than he actually really wanted to take. I'd like to ask the minister a number of questions surrounding: in his business plan under strategy 4 it says "cooperate with Municipal Affairs in the delivery of the Petroleum Storage Tank Remediation [plan]." How, in fact, is this going to be done? We haven't heard about this plan for quite some time. Is the fund established, and will those current owners who are not responsible for the contamination be actually compensated?

Thank you kindly, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Environment for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$332,506,000
--	---------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Treasury

THE CHAIRMAN: Now, are we agreed on the adjudication of time that we've had in the past: 20, 20, and five? Is that agreeable?

MR. SAPERS: As long as it doesn't set a precedent for any other meeting of this committee.

THE CHAIRMAN: No. It's for this evening. The committee makes . . . [interjection] Right.

All right, with that in mind we'll call upon the hon. Provincial Treasurer to give his report.

MR. DAY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The previous evening which we spent in estimates of Treasury was very helpful for me both to share a message that I think is an important one and also to receive input from Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, which I did. We are still working on the huge volume of questions which we were given, but it is our intention of course, as in the past, to complete that list. I would be pleased to take any other input from my colleagues or those across the floor at this time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Let me start off by saying that I'm pleased that the minister was able to be here tonight and give that brief response and join in the discussion. I must say that I find it a little disconcerting that here we are at the culmination of the budget process, and we've heard not from other ministers tonight but from some committee chairmen, and that leaves me with a very hollow feeling on behalf of the taxpayers of this province. The least I think they would expect is that the ministers would defend their own budgets through to the end of the process.

I would certainly take the Treasurer at his word that he will be providing written responses to the many, many questions. He has a good track record actually in his department of doing that, but the bad news is that they come months and months and months and months after we have voted on the estimates. We're in that position again where we're being asked to approve business plans of this department, which of course are core to the overall business of government as they talk about the tax strategies of the government, et cetera, not to mention this minister's own budget estimates of some 9 and a half billion dollars or so when he talks about the revenue. So when we look at the consolidated statement, we're talking about a considerable amount of money, and I just wish that we had answers to the very good questions from the Official Opposition – and I'll stress that they're questions from the Official Opposition – before we're asked to vote on these estimates.

I want to focus my comments tonight to the Provincial Treasurer on his business plan and performance measures. I note under goal 1, "a healthy and sustainable financial position," that one of the performance measures is "a measure that tracks Alberta's wealth creation, achievement of fiscal sustainability and reduction in dependence on resource revenues," and the measure is to be developed. Now, as I recall, this is a measure that in one form or another has been under construction for quite a time, and I'm a little disappointed to see that at this point in the province's evolution it is still to be developed.

We've had the government take a rather bold step in creating a $500 million endowment for science and engineering research. We've seen some other commitments that will bring us into a new economy. Yet we see Treasury lagging behind with a performance measure in terms of "fiscal sustainability and reduction in dependence on resource revenues." Obviously one of the key goals of this government since it came to power has been economic diversification, and it's a little surprising that this performance measure is still not fully developed.

Going on with goal 1, another performance measure has to do with the pension plan. I must say that I join with many other Albertans who are confused about what is the real goal of the provincial government when it comes to reforming the Canada pension plan. We see joint communiques from finance ministers talking about the future of the pension plan and talking about working with the federal government, and we've seen, of course, reports that a made-in-Alberta pension plan doesn't seem to be really sustainable, that there's too much debt to be assumed, that there are too many administrative problems, that there's too much risk and uncertainty. Yet right in the government's business plan under Strategies/Outputs it talks about this two-track approach. One is working with the federal government, but the other is to "investigate the advantages and disadvantages of establishing an Alberta Pension Plan."

Now, the performance measure attached to this is even more surprising. It is the "agreement by Finance Ministers on legislative amendments to the Canada Pension Plan Act at the end of the current renewal period December 2002." This is either very clever by design, which is to hold out some little carrot to those Albertans who are convinced that we should move to a made-in-Alberta pension plan, and it makes it look as though this government is ready to opt out at the first opportunity, which would be 2002, or what it says is that because of all the contrary evidence and all the advice from finance ministers in other jurisdictions, in fact the agreement will be to renew involvement in the federal plan, in the Canada pension plan.

9:20

I guess I'm asking the Treasurer to be clear: which is it? Are we actively investigating the possibility of a made-in-Alberta pension plan and therefore opting out of the Canada pension plan? If so, could we see the work in progress? Could we see how we're going to deal with the assumed debt obligations, et cetera. Or is this just written this way so that it can be all things to all people, so it can appeal to people on both sides of the argument?

Mr. Chairman, the next performance measure also has to do with pension plans; in this case, the local authorities and university academic pension plans, which are not without their own controversies. I don't want to dwell on all the issues associated with those pension plans and pension plan reform in this province, but I specifically want to look at the performance measure that says that there will be "less day-to-day involvement of the government in pension plan decisions."

Now, the way that performance measure is worded, of course, it would give me ample opportunity to have fun at the Treasurer's expense in terms of there being less day-to-day involvement and the fact that he may be moving on to bigger and better things. So I suppose I could say that this performance measure may be accomplished simply because of the ambition of the Treasurer, but that would be a cheap and hollow attempt at humour. What I will ask is if the Treasurer would please ensure that his performance measures have a little bit more substance than this.

I don't know, Mr. Treasurer, what "less day-to-day involvement" means. Compared to what? One less phone call? I mean, what's less day-to-day involvement? What is the issue that is being addressed in this performance measure, and how are you going to tell that you dealt with it? This is an example of a very poorly worded performance measure, very unsatisfactory, and it really doesn't give a reader any information about what it is that's going to be accomplished through this strategy and by this performance measure.

The next performance measure I want to look at is under goal 2: "Appropriate financial and performance information available to allow Albertans to hold government accountable." The first performance measure is the "portion of Albertans aware of government's financial performance in the past year; target: 80% of Albertans aware." It's not a satisfaction measure. It doesn't say that they're satisfied with it. It says that they're aware of it. I'm wondering exactly how that performance measure is measured. Is there a survey? Is there a poll? Is it a mail-out? Is it part of those 770,000 phone calls that the Treasurer was talking about today when he was reporting for Executive Council? How do they get to that number? The target is 80 percent. Where are we in actuality, Mr. Chairman?

The next is one of my favourite performance measures in this minister's business plan, because it is so self-congratulatory that I find it hard to believe it would be here. The performance measure has to do with the relationship between Treasury and other ministries, and it's the "satisfaction of deputy heads with the government's accountability system; target: all satisfied or very satisfied." All of the deputy ministers are satisfied or very satisfied.

I'd like a show of hands here in the Assembly, Mr. Chairman, if you'd permit me, to see who would be surprised if not all the deputy heads were satisfied or very satisfied in terms of the accountability and financial management relationship they have with Treasury. And if they weren't, another show of hands, how many think that they would officially report it? Just curious, Mr. Chairman. It seems to me that this is another one of those performance measures that is there simply to take up space on the page, because it really doesn't mean a darn thing.

Now we get to goal 3: "a fair, competitive and simple provincial tax system managed efficiently and effectively," and we get to this performance measure under the first set of strategies, which again is one under construction. It says, "A measure to compare Alberta's tax competitiveness to major international competitors," and it's to be developed. Mr. Chairman, how can this be? We have a Treasurer who's going across the country coast-to-coast-to-coast talking about Alberta's tax competitiveness and holding it out as a model for the rest of the country and hoping he'll even have a chance to impose it on the rest of the country, and they haven't even developed a core performance measure to determine the benefit of Alberta's tax strategy right here at home.

Now, I would like to give the Treasurer some advice that I found in the 20th report of the Standing Committee on Finance, which was issued by the federal Parliament in June of 1999. The title is Productivity with a Purpose: Improving the Standard of Living of Canadians. It's referring to the work of Jonathan Kesselman, a noted professor from the University of British Columbia, who has reported on the role of tax and tax reform as it relates to productivity. One of the conclusions of the report is:

The more appropriate way to link taxation to the standard of living is the manner in which it affects the incentives faced by individuals and corporations. What is important is not just the level of taxation but the composition of those taxes and the way in which they are imposed on the economy. For example, a variety of European countries face higher tax burdens than Canada, yet they have been able to achieve better productivity and faster growth than we have.

I hope the Treasurer is paying attention to that because I think he'll find that it's constructive. Taxation is a complex problem and requires much more than a simple flat solution.

While we're on the topic of flat simple solutions, let me say that the much-touted flat tax is beginning to go the same way as those people who believe in a flat earth, and that is that it just doesn't make sense and it's not true that it'll be helpful, Mr. Chairman.

The fact is that if you look at what it would take to flow through tax savings to Albertans, it would take into the fiscal year 2008, including a reduction of the 11 percent rate to a 7.8 percent rate before Albertans achieve the full benefit of the federal tax cuts. In fact, if we don't do anything, if we don't move that rate down and raise the personal exemption, Albertans are going to be hosed by this Treasurer's tax plan. We're going to see Albertans losing a tax advantage, and we're going to see Albertans, for example, in the $35,000 tax range having to pay well over $200 more under the flat tax system.

Even if it were moved down to 10.5 percent, Mr. Chairman, at $50,000 Alberta taxpayers will have to pay over $190 more under the Treasurer's proposed plan. For those Albertans earning $65,000 a year, even if we move the flat tax rate down from 11 to 10.5 percent, Albertans again are going to come out on the losing end and will have to pay nearly $200 more in income tax to this Treasurer than they would if we stayed at the tax-on-tax rate. So I would ask that the Treasurer take a close look at his tax plans and these performance measures.

The next goal I want to look at is "an efficient, fair and competitive capital market and an efficient and fair regulatory environment for financial institutions and private pension plans." One of the performance measures is that Alberta's market share of investment capital be maintained. Mr. Chairman, Alberta's share of investment capital is not sufficient. I think the Minister of Innovation and Science will back me on this. We don't have enough access to capital in this province, and there are things that have to happen in terms of tax policy and investment policy and management issues that will raise that. We have to attract more venture capital. It is simply not good enough for this Treasurer to say that the performance measure target will be achieved if our share of investment capital is maintained. It has to grow. I am looking toward this Treasurer and this government to demonstrate some leadership in that regard and not be satisfied with the status quo.

Mr. Chairman, the last one I want to deal with is also in goal 5, and it's the development of "a risk assessment system to help identify pension plans needing special attention and assistance to maintain registered status." Now, the performance measure here is another one of those that's under construction. It is: "compliance problems in 'at risk' pension plans resolved within an acceptable period of time," and the measure again is to be developed. This is another example not just of a performance measure that should already be on the books and that we should already be measuring progress towards, but the language here is incredibly soft and mushy, and it doesn't make much sense. What is this acceptable period of time, and acceptable to whom? I would say that for those men and women who are waiting for their pension issues to be resolved, a day is too much of a delay.

I would ask that this Treasurer pay some attention to these performance measures. His department is supposed to be setting the standard across government, and these performance measures in many cases just simply don't add up.

Mr. Chairman, I have one other general comment that I want to make about the business plans of Treasury, and that has to do with the effort that these business plans go to to try and convince Albertans that this government is being aggressive about tax cuts. Now, let me say that if we compare the Alberta tax cut plan to the federal tax cut plan and we take a look at how much effort is truly being made in this province compared to the federal government, what we find is that under the leadership of the federal government, the Prime Minister and the Finance minister federally, there is a total effort of 42 percent of the fiscal dividend being used right now for tax cuts, and 23 percent is going into program spending.

Let's look at Alberta this fiscal year. What we find is that program spending is going up by 61 percent, throwing money at problems, often in an untargeted way. Debt repayment is good, at 20 percent, although the feds outstrip them there as well, with 35 percent of the federal surplus going towards debt repayment.

9:30

On this issue of tax cuts, where we see this government pounding its chest and trying to claim some primacy and some leadership, what we see is the most striking comparison, and that is that while the federal government is able to contribute 42 percent of its surplus to tax cuts this year, the provincial government has only allocated 12 percent. I think that in itself takes away the bragging rights from this Treasurer and this provincial government.

Mr. Chairman, the last comment I want to make has to do with this government's use of taxpayers' money to run what are in essence caucus committees of the PC Party. It's the issue that we've raised in this Assembly many, many times, and that is that the standing policy committees are really nothing more than caucus committees and in fact are extensions of the PC Party's policy development process. In that regard they should not be paid for out of the departmental budgets. Taxpayers' money should not be going towards these committees. These committees are not an extension of democracy. In fact, they are exactly the opposite.

I would like to propose an amendment to the motion which would approve the estimates of Treasury. I believe the amendment has been circulated, so I will move it now and read it into the record.

Be it resolved that the estimates for the standing policy committee on financial planning and human resources under reference 1.0.8 of the 2000-2001 estimates of the department of Treasury be reduced by $95,000 so that the operating expense and capital investment to be voted is $139,343,000.

Mr. Chairman, obviously the purpose of this is to protect the taxpayers . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: This amendment, hon. members, will be known as amendment A1.

Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you. As I was saying, Mr. Chairman, obviously the purpose of this amendment is to protect the taxpayers from an expenditure of their money that would be inappropriate and contrary to the stated intention of this Treasurer: to make sure he gets value out of every loonie that he collects from Albertans. I would hope that the committee tonight will approve this motion. I think it will send a message to government.

Some people may say that it's not a significant amount of money, that it's only $95,000. I say two things to that, Mr. Chairman. Number one, $95,000 is a lot of money in my household. Number two, $95,000 may pale in comparison to the budget surplus of this government, but it's $95,000 that could be spent to hire a couple of nurses or $95,000 that could be used to provide a couple more teachers or $95,000 that could be used to provide some more funding for school hot lunch programs or $95,000 that could be put to use in any of a number of the priorities of the people of Alberta.

Not in one survey, not in one public opinion poll, and not in one conversation I've had with any constituent has anybody ever said to me: "It's a priority. I want to see my tax money go to buy sandwiches and cookies for Conservative MLAs so that they can get together behind closed doors, in secret, in camera, and have their policy committee meetings. That's how I want to see my tax money spent." That conversation has never taken place, Mr. Chairman, and I don't think that conversation ever would take place. I think taxpayers deserve a break, and I would suggest that one way to start giving them that break is to support this motion and send a message to this government that they can't be wasteful with taxpayers' money.

Thank you.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the department of Treasury for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$139,438,000
Nonbudgetary Disbursements	$98,941,000

Gaming

THE CHAIRMAN: First of all, we'll call upon the minister to start off the deliberations on this department.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a welcome opportunity both to thank the Minister of Infrastructure for being able to move us up with some dispatch to discuss the Gaming ministry budget estimates and also to table responses to questions from February 29, 2000. I'm happy to be able to do that. Considering that we were fighting a considerable bout of the flu that night, we have worked diligently on the answers to the key questions put forward by the opposition. We are tabling that tonight, and we look forward to comments from the critic.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have in front of me a copy of the annual report for the year ended March 31, 1999, for the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission. Now, I'm not going to refer to the document tonight, because tomorrow night and Thursday afternoon, of course, we deal with lotteries specifically. Tonight we're dealing with the wrap-up for Gaming, but I have lots of questions from this booklet that over the next two days I'm going to be touching on, so the minister should be prepared for those.

Let me say first of all that I had anticipated that by now I would have gotten the written responses to the questions that were raised in the committee stage upstairs, and that's one of the disadvantages of this process we're into where we're split into two different areas on one particular night. There are many of you that didn't have the opportunity, of course, to hear the questions that were raised, and the minister had assured that the answers we didn't get that night we would get in writing. As I say, up to now we haven't gotten them. Had we gotten them by now, it would have made my job a whole lot easier tonight because then I wouldn't have to repeat myself. All of you would have copies of the responses, so you'd know exactly what I'm talking about.

So I'm going to be forced to kind of go over the issues that were raised to sort of educate or inform the rest of the Members of the Legislative Assembly, that I know would be so interested in what's happening in the area of Gaming. I don't want to take too much time doing it, Mr. Chairman, because there are other members of this caucus that want to speak within that allocated period of time. I will keep my comments relatively short, knowing at the same time that we also have two days coming, tomorrow and the day after, dealing specifically with lotteries, which will give us ample opportunity to raise additional concerns and such.

One of the first things I talked about at the committee stage when we dealt with the budget for Gaming was the freeze that was put in place by the minister, the freeze that was announced. We read about it in the paper. I was never sent any type of formal or written report or memo or letter as the critic for Gaming, for lotteries, saying: I've proposed a freeze, and this is what the freeze is going to entail. That never was done, so I'm not familiar with the terms of reference, for example, for the freeze. I'm not sure if the freeze is going to be wrapped up by this summer or if we were talking in terms of it wrapping up next summer.

I'm not sure how many slot machines were kind of jammed into the casinos at the last minute that had apparently been approved prior to the freeze being announced, not installed but that had been committed. I understand it's something like an additional thousand machines that are either in already or else working their way in. I understand that the Palace Casino, for example, in West Edmonton Mall is once again expanding. We have another new nonprofit casino coming on board on the Yellowhead Trail.

9:40

Let's make it very, very clear that from this caucus's point of view, we've never taken the position that we would expect Alberta would be what we would call a totally gambling-free zone. I don't think that's realistic. I don't think in any province you would see that type of thing. We've grown accustomed to the 6/49s, to the scratch and wins, to the bingos, to the horse races and such, and I've participated as a spectator and wagered the odd 2 dollar bill at the racetrack myself in the past. We've all had the opportunity to gamble to some extent, some to a very, very limited degree.

The position of our caucus really is – and had the plebiscites that were held addressed that particular option – to restrict gambling activities to the nonprofit casino centres, where the bulk of the proceeds from the gambling activities goes to nonprofit groups, the very, very many nonprofit groups that we see now being benefited to some extent by foundations like the Wild Rose Foundation and such. Poring through this report, there are hundreds and hundreds of worthwhile organizations throughout the province that do benefit from lottery proceeds, not necessarily VLT proceeds but lottery proceeds. If in fact Albertans had been given the option of restricting gambling activities to the many nonprofit casinos, I think Albertans by a majority of 70 percent would have opted for that particular alternative. That would have put to an end the controversy surrounding the question of the VLTs in the bars, the drain on the local communities and such, but that option wasn't there. Possibly some day we'll see that option being provided to Albertans.

I think that most of the anti VLT groups or those groups that headed up the plebiscite – I shouldn't call them anti VLT groups. I think by and large they would have accepted the fact if the gambling activities were restricted to the nonprofit or charitable type casinos. That would have been acceptable all around.

Questions were raised at the committee stage. Would this freeze, for example, look at the presentation that was made by the offspring of the Hotel Association that proposed turning a number of the hotels throughout the province into minicasinos, not charitable minicasinos but minicasinos where the hotel operators or the operators of that gambling centre would receive a chunk of the action? If I recall correctly, something like 15 percent. Then they were allocating another 15 percent, whatever, to be given to . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Are you rising on a point of order, hon. Minister of Gaming?

Point of Order Questioning a Member

MR. SMITH: A point of order, Mr. Chairman. Would the good member entertain a question under Beauchesne 333?

MR. WICKMAN: Mr. Chairman, I would love to. The difficulty is that I've agreed to a relatively narrow time frame to make my comments, and because these questions weren't addressed by the minister during the earlier budget process, first I'd like to see him answer our questions before he starts tossing us questions. Now, had he answered all our questions, then I'd have been glad to answer his question.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. member just has to say yes or no.

MR. WICKMAN: I'll just continue, because I know this member is anxious to get going.

Debate Continued

MR. WICKMAN: Is that freeze going to involve a review of the possibilities of larger-type casinos in areas like Banff, for example? Is it going to see an expansion of electronic gambling into the bingo halls?

Now, I want to talk just a bit about addiction. I commend the decision made by the government, the previous minister, to spend $1.5 million in terms of setting up a research institute in terms of addiction and for appointing as a board member a reformed addict to VLTs, who lost, by his own admission, something close to a million dollars, who lost his business in Fort Saskatchewan as a result of his addiction to those machines. Coupled with the $3.4 million to fight addiction, that brings a total expenditure there of $4.9 million, and that's getting to be a more respectable figure than we've seen in the past. However, I'd like to see it just tied to a percentage, that 1 percent of all gambling proceeds be set aside that would be used to try and fight the addiction problems and the other social problems that result from those that can't control their gambling urges.

We also talked in terms of the distribution of the lottery dollars. The gaming summit, of course, that was held in Medicine Hat talked in terms specifically of gambling proceeds not going to general revenue, and we do see a portion of it going to general revenue to be used for nonprofit community charitable type organizations. We see the biggest portion of gambling profits now going to various government departments. Virtually every government department now gets a chunk of the action. We even see the lottery boards turn around and funnel some of their millions of dollars that they receive to branches within their jurisdiction; in other words, bypassing the true nonprofit organizations and turning some of it over to parks and recreation and so on and so forth that they may call a nonprofit activity.

We also talked about the court actions. What ever happened to this? During question period today questions were asked of the Premier about trust, promises that are made. One of the promises made by this Premier was that within seven days of a successful plebiscite or resolution by a municipality, the machines would be removed. The VLTs would be gone. Up in the Fort McMurray area – and the member could nod his head – I believe we're now talking in terms of 24 months and the machines are still humming away, still spitting out the big bucks for the hotel operator but a bigger share of the proceeds, a much bigger share of the proceeds, going towards the government coffers, of course.

Some of the questions talked in terms of the distribution of liquor and the possibilities of rule changes that would allow certain advantages to some of the larger retailers. A question was raised by the Member for Lacombe-Stettler, and I often wonder whatever happened to her recommendations that were made in one of her reports, why they were never acted on. She asked some questions in a session here one day that sounded to me like she was questioning whether some of these representatives of the distillers are – I think the term that was used was bribing – bribing the retailers by giving them freebies, kickbacks, giving them gifts.

A N HON. MEMBER: They call them incentives.

MR. WICKMAN: Incentives, yes. That, according to legislation, is supposed to be outlawed. It's supposed to be banned. It's not supposed to be allowed. But it is going on. I know it's going on. It's going on in the form of sweatshirts, advertising, various little things like that to allow a retailer to display.

Now, I've used up a portion of the time we're allocated, and I know the Member for Edmonton-Glenora is anxious to go. I'll have more opportunities in the next two days, so I'll let him take it away from here.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Could you give me a time count?

THE CHAIRMAN: Eight minutes and 45 seconds.

MR. SAPERS: Oh, that's terrific. Thank you very much, Edmonton-Rutherford. That's terrific.

I just had a chance to read the responses to questions that the minister tabled at the beginning of his remarks, and he goes through I believe 10 questions that he answers in this document that was tabled. What I note is that while the minister in his comments said, "I'm going to table responses to the unanswered questions," it would leave one with the impression that all the unanswered questions were in this document, and in fact that's not the case. There are many questions that were put to the minister regarding his performance measures, regarding the issue of the so-called incentives from breweries and distillers and their agents to Alberta retailers, regarding the operation of the gaming commission. Many, many questions are left unanswered.

9:50

I find it a real shame – when we're talking about almost a billion dollars of lottery funds coming into the provincial coffers, when we're dealing with significant issues that touch on addiction, that touch on fraud, that have been so controversial that there have been plebiscites in several Alberta communities about things like VLTs, that they have been the discussion of sermons in places of worship – that an issue as important as this does not deserve or does not get the complete attention of the minister and that for the men and women of this Assembly who come here to ask the minister appropriate questions about his responsibilities and about his government, he doesn't take his responsibilities seriously enough and doesn't feel any sense of obligation to answer those questions.

Of course, this is an extension of the rather dismissive way in which he handled himself during the subcommittee debate in which he even at one point, in the middle of questioning, got up and left the room and then made the observation that maybe he would answer some questions but not some others, because those others perhaps weren't deserving in his opinion.

You know what? His opinion isn't really what counts, Mr. Chairman. What counts is that the people of this province get answers to questions about (a) how their money is being spent and, even more importantly, (b) how it is that this government is scheming and conniving to find new ways to pick their pockets through gaming and lottery schemes. So I would ask that this minister rethink his approach to his responsibilities as a member of Executive Council and start answering questions that are put to him by members of the opposition. After all, the questions we bring forward during this process are questions that are raised to us by the taxpayers of this province.

Whether the minister wants to acknowledge that or not, that is in fact the case. It is our role at this point in time as members of the Official Opposition to, amongst other things, hold the government accountable. You see, their responsibility is to reciprocate and to be accountable. I think Albertans are going to not feel positively inclined towards this minister and the government he's part of if they tend to continue to dismiss the questions that are raised and they don't feel any sense of responsibility to be accountable.

Mr. Chairman, I must say, though, that this minister's attitude doesn't surprise me in terms of the overall budget examination process as it's evolved in the province of Alberta. It seems to me that this examination process has become an inconvenience to the government. While they can no longer govern by special warrant, they still have to bring in supplementary supplies, and we've had lots of those, but this government seems to have been doing everything it can to dismiss and diminish the role of the Legislative Assembly when it comes to examining the budget and the business plans of the government.

While they would like to think that what happens during this process is not relevant, I can tell you that the three million citizens of this province don't think it's irrelevant at all. They certainly don't think it's irrelevant when it comes to the money that's been taken out of their pockets to contribute to the areas of priority that they believe in as opposed to the areas of priority that the government has told them they should simply trust them on. Mr. Chairman, it's insufficient, it's inadequate, and it's contentious. It simply is disservice.

I have a list of perhaps another two dozen questions for this minister regarding his business plans and his budget estimates. I could read them into the record now. I could write them like I've done in the past. I could table them in the Assembly, which I've also done in the past for other departments. I guess I'm a slow learner, but I finally caught on. This government just doesn't care enough to answer those kinds of questions. They don't want to take the tough questions. They don't want to address them, and they certainly don't want to account to the taxpayers of this province when it comes to anything that makes them feel uncomfortable or would indicate that maybe they haven't done all their homework.

In spite of the waste of time that it has often become asking certain members of Executive Council questions about their budget estimates, I guess I'll continue to do so because that's certainly what my constituents would expect of me, but I would just hope that one day soon these members of Executive Council will reciprocate in kind and will provide full, complete answers to legitimate questions. Until that day comes, Mr. Chairman, I'll be reminding them of that obligation, and of course I look forward to the day when my colleagues and I will have an opportunity to answer their questions, although I can't imagine for the life of me that their questions will be very difficult. I'll undertake right now that when given the opportunity, I'll respond more than in kind. I'll be accountable to the taxpayers.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Gaming for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense $183,191,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Lottery fund payments, $837,500,000. Are you agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE CHAIRMAN: Carried.*

Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Infrastructure

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin this evening's deliberations on this department, we'll call upon the hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. STELMACH: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. Last Thursday, the week before, we had the opportunity to answer a number of questions with respect to our budget presentation. Earlier today I dispatched the last answers to questions that were raised by hon. members in the House.

Over the next three years in the province we'll see tremendous growth attributed to infrastructure development in all areas: roads, health facilities, and schools. On the road side approximately 13,500 person-years of work, about another 500 miles of road, four-lanes, including numerous other improvements.

I think we've answered conclusively any of the questions that were raised, and I'll just leave it at that this evening and ask for the vote.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just have a few questions for the minister. When we debated the budget over a week ago, I asked the minister about infrastructure in relation to the new aboriginal school that is trying to come onstream. At that time the government had said: no, we are not going to build a new school; we've only got a 70 percent utilization rate in the city of Edmonton, and 85 percent is what we're looking for. So what they offered to this particular school was separate classrooms around the city, an environment where all the kids going to the new schools wouldn't be able to go to one school at one time. It was somewhat segmented in the way that the space was going to be used. The reality was that there wasn't one facility that could house 600 to 800 students, and that's what the school was looking for, the actual school board and the principal-in-waiting, if you will, Phyllis Cardinal.

Now, as of yet I'm not sure, Mr. Minister, how far those negotiations have gone, but I understand we still don't have any funding for the needed building. What we have is a school board having to negotiate another facility with a private enterprise. I'm not impressed. I'm absolutely not impressed.

10:00

We are going to have the largest growth in aboriginal young people in front of us in the next 10 to 15 years. These kids are faring better in schools like Ben Calf Robe, in the Awasis program. As I mentioned before, their parents are putting them in the program because the kids are learning. They're not just hard-to-handle kids any more. They're not kids that are going there because no other school will take them. These are kids who want to learn Cree, who want to learn, who want to be in a school environment where they're actually learning, and that is the thing that has been brought forward to me.

I also alluded at that time, Mr. Minister, to some of the feel-good stuff like the bill before us, Bill 2. It's great for the Premier to come in here and put on his feathers and sit in his chair, but he still won't fund a school. That has far more weight, in my view, and has a real, real potential to start graduating some kids from high school. When we're looking at the costs associated, at one point I was told that up in Lac La Biche and St. Paul $6,000 per student is going into some of these schools. That's what they're getting. That's what the school is getting per student because it's federal funding. Okay? They're not graduating one kid. Not one aboriginal kid is graduating from those schools.

Mr. Minister, I am going to urge you at this point to drop the arbitrary 85 percent utilization rate. I'm going to urge you to drop that, and I'm going to suggest to you that for this particular program you ought to not worry about that rate. You need to focus on the program, the school program as it is, and the needs of the school.

So while the education minister is over there, you should be talking. The two of you should be talking, and he should be saying to you, "Look; we need that school in Edmonton." You should be saying: "You know what? I'm a responsible member of this government. I want aboriginal kids in this province to pass. I want them to carry on and become leaders in the community and become members of the Legislature or wherever they choose to go." But you know what? It isn't going to happen if you don't play your part. So I'm just asking, Mr. Minister, where you are on that. Have you gotten any further than our last discussion? I'll let you ponder on that while I ask a couple of other questions.

I wanted to know, Mr. Minister, if the government has a clear statement showing the cost per unit length of highway per region for maintaining primary highways. We received some information in response to our written questions but not enough, and it's difficult to determine cost-effectiveness from the information supplied. So I'm wondering if the minister could provide additional information, if he could do a cost comparison showing costs before and after privatization, the cost now associated to municipalities as a result of that. Mr. Minister, will you table any studies, reports, cost-benefit analyses that were done by this government to support the argument for privatization in transportation? I'm wondering if the minister would undertake to do that for us.

The reason I'm asking that, Mr. Minister, is that I was in Public Accounts last week, when the minister of energy was asked to table reports, cost-benefit analyses, and studies in relation to his electrical deregulation plan. The end result of that was that he didn't have any studies; he didn't have any reports. He didn't have to provide them, you see, because this was based on ideology, and ideology, I'm afraid, Mr. Minister, doesn't necessarily realize the savings you think you might be endeavouring to end up with. So I'm wondering, Mr. Minister, if you could possibly do that for us. I think that would be really helpful so that all Albertans, not just us but all Albertans, will have an understanding of how the Department of Infrastructure and the then department of transportation came to believe that they should privatize the transportation department. Was it just ideology, so you didn't have to provide those things?

*see page 578, left col., para. 10

You know, I'm glad the Minister of Health and Wellness is here today, because I'm a little worried that his health bill is just ideology. We've seen it in electrical deregulation, I think it exists in Infrastructure, and now I'm almost a hundred percent sure that this ideology has expanded into that private health care bill. It would be really helpful, Mr. Minister, if you could do that for us.

The other issue that I wanted to speak to specifically was not the notion of the national infrastructure program, Mr. Minister, but if this government has had any discussions with the federal government or other provincial governments in relation to a national highways program. I'm just wondering, if that has come to your attention, what your perspective is on that. Are you going to invest any time and energy into something like that? Maybe you can help us out with that too.

I know other members of my caucus have some questions they would like to ask, so I'll take my seat.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Minister, I had a chance to watch tonight on TV the Francophone program which was held here today. I watched as you toured some students through your office, and it was reported that you were lobbied for Infrastructure money to build new schools. The students interviewed mentioned that many students were riding buses in the urban areas for one to two hours. What my question is leading up to is that when I was questioning you last week, I think there was a misunderstanding of my question to you, and you came back only with the answer that rural students ride buses from one to two hours. When I brought up the fact of questioning the hundred percent utilization, I suppose my question to yourself, Mr. Minister, around new schools, construction in communities or areas like large cities where rapid growth is happening, wasn't too clear.

When this government is fixated on a hundred percent utilization and I read that some people are proposing that inner-city schools aren't needed, well, the fact that they have 100 students now, and when they were built 40 years ago, there were 180 students there, doesn't mean that the school isn't required. I tried to emphasize that students in the inner-city settings need a school within walking distance. These students, if made to ride Edmonton Transit, in most cases wouldn't even attend school due to the lack of parental support in taking them to school, lack of money and food, lack of bus fare. I also brought up the fact that I've attended two different seminars that highlighted no new schools since 1994.

A hundred percent utilization is what I'm really concerned with. There's no problem with hundred percent utilization in, say, my end of town from 127th Avenue north to 149th Avenue, because I don't have any schools past 149th Avenue, and they are filled to one hundred percent capacity. But I am talking about inner-city schools, maybe from the river north to 127th Avenue, varying between 60, 70, or 75 percent, whatever you want to play the game with. Then anything farther north of 127th Avenue must have a hundred percent utilization to trigger anything.

I do know that if you went into this type of thing, you would have to build new schools. I don't care if it's on 153rd Avenue or it's on 167th Avenue, but with this method it would also help south of the river, where we're seeing the same case in the last few years in the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Creek or the constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. They would benefit from the same kind of solution that I'm suggesting to you.

10:10

We have looked at existing schools and when they were built.

Schools built from the early 1970s, when the Conservatives did come in, until the late 1970s were constructed with reasonably good structure, but any school within my constituency that was built in the 1980s, within a few blocks of these schools, are totally inept, if that's the right word for it. They're infrastructurally in bad shape because they weren't built with any money. It was a time when everybody started to cut back on money. We are going to see with schools even from 1980 to 1994, when they quit building in Edmonton or quit building throughout the province, that these schools aren't built to the standard of the last number of years.

I traveled the province and talked to different areas in the province; for example, Exshaw school. Last year we brought up a lot of questions on this particular school. It's overcrowded, it's old, and it's got health problems because of its age. It's also in an area of the province that is paying the highest education tax into the province's kitty. Mr. Minister, when you were traveling in the area last August, your only answer to the people then was to wait until next spring, that you have lots of demands on your budget and they'd just have to put up with it and wait. Well, my concern is that we have to start spending some of this money and start planning properly and start to build schools in areas where they are required. We shouldn't be forced into a hundred percent utilization throughout the whole school, which is a cop-out by this government and playing the one-string guitar instead of actually going out and building a plan around it.

Mr. Chairman, that ends my questions.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Well, thank you, sir. Just two very, very quick points, Mr. Minister. They're centred about a bit of a home request. I happen to represent an area that Edmonton-Calder has within its boundaries, a school called Prince Charles. It has a great history of educating a great deal of the native population in the city of Edmonton, the urban natives. They are doing very well. The Awasis program is doing exceedingly well in this province, but it needs a little of your help, along with the Minister of Learning, in order to extend into a high school program.

It seems that there are some difficulties with funding it in that currently there's an 85 percent occupancy requirement. I don't understand all of the ins and outs of this issue. All I do know is that the school board, Edmonton public, hopes to open this September with this very worthwhile program, and there is some concern that they may not be able to. If you would be so kind as to look into that for this year's budgeting, this member would certainly be appreciative.

I must explain that this particular program has had a great deal of success, and it plays a great deal upon the self-confidence of the children within the program. They learn a lot about native culture and begin to feel much more proud of it. It appears that in the general population of society they feel themselves being put down a lot of times, and these particular programs have been nothing but of great benefit to the students that are going there. So it would be a great service, sir, if you could spend a little time looking into that program.

Another area that, again, is a homegrown constituency concern centres around the 149th Street intersection with Yellowhead Trail. It is a very accident-prone area, the highest in the city. The entire length of the Yellowhead needs upgrading. You yourself would know from traveling the route a great number of times that it does have stop-and-go traffic; it's certainly not a freeway. This particular intersection needs some support badly. I know you don't directly tell the cities where to put their money, because it's a co-operative effort. This particular area needs either more money from the department to say, "Look; this just has to be done to save Albertans' lives," or some other safety program. It needs to be worked on. There are just too many people dying. There's too much loss of productive time for the companies that have to use that intersection. It's dangerous, it's slow to get through, and it really bottles the traffic up.

That's the extent of my questions tonight, sir. I thank you for the time.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of Infrastructure for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense and Capital Investment $2,152,558,000

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The chair would like to note that an error was made in the estimates for Gaming. Inadvertently we had called for a vote on the lottery fund payments, and of course we have not yet debated those. Those are due tomorrow and presumably the next day, so that vote would be invalid. So it will not be reflected in the report nor on the official records of the Assembly.*

Innovation and Science

THE CHAIRMAN: To begin this part of our deliberations we will call on the minister.

DR. TAYLOR: On the evening of March 7 I presented my estimates to subcommittee D, and we had a very fruitful discussion. We had a lot of good questions and a lot of interaction. There were some questions from the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora that I didn't feel I answered quite with enough information, so I have five copies of some additions to the responses that I would like to file with the House to the questions that were asked of me at the subcommittee D. As I said, it was a fruitful discussion and good questions from both sides.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Thanks to the minister. I look forward to getting these responses and reading them over. I'll incorporate some of my earlier comments, but the timing of the responses – it would have been helpful to get them a little sooner. I recognize that it's a busy time, but we're talking about a lot of money, and they were important questions.

You know, the ministry is, generally speaking, moving in the right path. A couple of points that I would like to make, though. One, I would like to see this minister continue being as aggressive as he has been in putting technology issues forward and in helping the government understand the importance of moving Alberta into the new economy. Just today, I think, Nortel Networks announced that there was another billion dollar plus acquisition, another Canadian company leading the way, buying a U.S. based switching company with now, I believe, the fastest Internet switches made on the planet. You know, we have a big role to play here in Alberta in taking advantage of this technology and also in developing and fostering it. I'm not sure that these business plans are ambitious enough, if I can put it that way.

The report of the Canadian E-Business Opportunities Roundtable, prepared by The Boston Consulting Group, a document titled, Fast Forward: Accelerating Canada's Leadership in the Internet Economy, makes very interesting reading. I know the minister is familiar with it, but I'm not sure that all members of the Assembly are. This document I think lays out pretty clearly what some of the challenges are when it comes to fully leveraging a commercial advantage out of the Internet. I believe that there is a role for some government policy and leadership in this regard.

10:20

One of the conclusions that The Boston Consulting Group reached in their report on the roundtable was that "Canada's business-to-business e-commerce [is] estimated to be only 7.7% of U.S. levels by 2003." So even though we are growing at a steady pace here in Canada, we won't even reach 10 percent of the market that the United States will have achieved over the next three years. I don't think this is good enough. I think Alberta could establish itself as a leader. I guess I'd like to see a performance measure in this minister's plan that says that Alberta will lead the charge in Canada when it comes to business-to-business e-commerce.

I recently had an opportunity to meet with a purchasing agent for Syncrude, who tells me that they're going to be dealing with all of their vendors in a paperless way, that they want to make sure they are linked electronically to all of their suppliers even if it comes down to where they have to send people and technology into the businesses that provide goods and services to Syncrude and get them online and up and operating. So there are some good business partners out there, and I guess I'd just like to see, as I say, just a little bit more ambition on the part of this government, particularly through this ministry.

The report that I refer to, compiled by The Boston Consulting Group, also said that "Canadian businesses also trail their U.S. counterparts in e-commerce with fewer companies offering their products or services online." I've been talking to several retailers about their e-business plans, and what they tell me is that they were absolutely surprised, overwhelmed by the response over this last Christmas season to their e-commerce offerings. Whether it be the com that Sam built, when we're talking about buying your music and videotapes et cetera online, or whether it be any of the other vendors that are out there, whether they be clothing vendors such as Eddie Bauer or some of the others that have very sophisticated electronic sites, they report to me that they were just taken aback with how successful those initiatives were over this last Christmas period.

So I think we need to sit down with some of these companies that have had success, and to the extent that they're willing, find out what their secrets of success are so we can develop some appropriate policy that can assist Alberta businesses in taking advantage of this coming boom in e-commerce. That would be something I could wholeheartedly support and endorse.

Also, Mr. Minister, for your interest. I don't know whether you've had a chance to read it or not, but I had a chance to mention it earlier in debate. There is the 20th report of the Standing Committee on Finance, entitled Productivity with a Purpose: Improving the Standard of Living of Canadians. It was tabled in June of 1999. They go through a rather interesting exercise of talking about where we stand in Canada, what the forces are behind productivity trends, what drives productivity and economic growth. Interesting reading. But I found one paragraph in here that I thought would be relevant to tonight's discussion. What it really talks about is that governments and others have been slow to recognize the importance of technology as a driver.

*See page 576, left col., para. 7

I want to quote from page 22 of the report under the heading Evidence of Benefits from High Technology. The quote is this:

In the United States, some economists are now accepting the fact that high-technology does indeed have the potential to enhance productivity. They cite the fact that productivity has been picking up in recent years, well into the current business cycle. Typically, the big productivity gains tend to occur early in the business cycle, when output is growing but firms are not yet rehiring.

The reason for this, as some economists at the U.S. Federal Reserve Board are now suggesting, is that computers had little positive impact on productivity early in this decade but that they are now contributing significantly to growth.

I cite this quote not just for the earlier reason, that I think it speaks to this growing awareness of governments about the role of technology as a driver, but also to say that there is this theory of lag time, and the investments that we make now may not pay off for a decade or more. Whether it comes to the plans to have high-speed, wideband Internet access throughout rural Alberta or whether it comes to investing in high-speed computers themselves, the hardware, or whether it comes to investing in software or whether it comes to putting money into advanced education so that we are graduating more technologists and more engineers, what we're really looking at is a generational thing. We're really looking at something that this government will be able to look back on with pride as opposed to something that this government is going to be able to take credit for in the short term.

I know that doesn't make it a very political issue. We can't look at government policy and leadership in this regard as something to take to the voters in the next 18 months or whenever the next election call is going to be. This is something where this government has a chance to really demonstrate some leadership in a nonpolitical way, in a nonpartisan way, and say: we are going to build a foundation here that is going to serve our children and our grandchildren and our great-grandchildren, and we're going to do this in a way that is going to bring stability and some predictability into the area, and we're going to recognize that it's a legacy that we're creating, not just some opportunism.

The way that governments used to deal with this would be to build hospitals and provincial buildings and pave roads. It was something you could turn to and say: "Look what I delivered to my constituency. You know, that hospital wouldn't be there if I wasn't your MLA. That road wouldn't be paved if I wasn't your guy." This is entirely different. I daresay that when every man and woman in this Chamber is well retired and beyond their political productivity years themselves, this is something that they would be able to look back on and say: "You know, I was part of something that was good and proper. I was part of something that had wide acceptance from all political quarters in this province. It was the good and right thing to do, and we're proud of it."

Mr. Minister, as long as you keep on encouraging your government to move down this path, we'd be pleased to be there providing input and advice and ensuring some accountability. We have raised some concerns. We've addressed them in the earlier questions. I have had an opportunity to talk with the minister and some of his staff about those concerns. We will continue to probe when it comes to some of the gaps that we've identified, but all in all this is a bright pinhole of light in an otherwise dark set of government business plans. I'm pleased to talk about this for the Official Opposition when it comes to this government stating its importance in terms of getting behind science and innovation in the province.

I will conclude my comments by asking one question that was asked of me just the other day, believe it or not, by a taxi driver who was dispatched to deliver a package to Coronation Plaza. I still think of it as the old Woodward's warehouse. Then it was a Costco. Then it was a flea market. Basically it's 149 Street. I think it's called Coronation Plaza. It's a big warehouse. It's leased property, I think, from Infrastructure, leased in part to Innovation and Science. The taxi driver said that he was asked to deliver a small box to the Innovation and Science offices in this Innovation and Science building. He said, and I quote: do you know what the hell's going on in there? I said: I really don't. He said: "Well, I had to bring this little box in, and there were all these guys running around. It looked like they were busy, but I couldn't really figure out what they were busy doing, and they wouldn't tell me what was in the box, and it's really driving me crazy."

So I guess on behalf of this taxi driver that gave me a ride to the airport about 10 days ago, I just want to ask the minister: could you find out for us what's going on in that space, and could you report back so I can put this gentleman's mind at ease that his tax dollars are being put to good use in that facility and so the next time somebody asks me just what's going on in that building, I'll be able to explain to him with certainty what purpose we're putting those public servants to in that leased space?

Thank you very much.

THE CHAIRMAN: After considering the business plan and the proposed estimates for the Department of Innovation and Science for the year 2000-2001, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$184,867,000
--	---------------

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

10:30

THE CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

MR. RENNER: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

Resolved that a sum not exceeding the following be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, for the following departments.

Department of Human Resources and Employment: operating expense and capital investment,	$1,034,970,000.
---	------------------

Department of Children's Services: operating expense,	$535,540,000.
---	----------------

Department of Environment: operating expense and capital investment, $332,506,000.

Treasury Department: operating expense and capital investment, $139,438,000; nonbudgetary disbursements, $98,941,000.

Department of Gaming: operating expense, $183,191,000.

Department of Infrastructure: operating expense and capital investment, $2,152,558,000.

Department of Innovation and Science: operating expense, $184,867,000.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of Supply on this date for the official records of the Assembly. I would also like to table copies of documents tabled during Committee of Supply this day for the official records of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

head: Government Bills and Orders

head: Third Reading

Bill 1

Alberta Heritage Foundation for Science and Engineering Research Act

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, I think this is one of the most excellent, most progressive bills that we've had discussed in this Assembly. I'm fully in favour of it, as I'm sure most other colleagues here are. With that, I would move that we proceed further with the vote.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I was hoping to hear again from the Minister of Innovation and Science on this bill. I know that at third reading I can't yield the floor and then have an opportunity to get back up. I don't know if he's going to say anything about this bill or not. I think it's a real shame if he isn't.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say that the Official Opposition is pleased to support Bill 1, particularly as amended. I again want to thank the House for its co-operation on the amendment during the committee stage. I think Albertans are going to be well served by this foundation.

Mr. Speaker, think for a minute about an Alberta that is as rich in high-technology activity as it has been in agriculture and the exportation of natural resources. Think about an Alberta where boys and girls in schools have access to the Internet no matter where they live, no matter what grade level they're in. Think about an Alberta where there are community kiosks that provide high-speed access to information and communications technology. Think about an Alberta where we have reduced the barriers to postsecondary education to such an extent that there's not one qualified student that's unable to access postsecondary education and training should they so desire it. Think about an Alberta where we have been able to take full advantage of the growth in communications technology and information technology. Think about an Alberta that is truly geared towards a maximum-wage mentality instead of one that until recently has been at the bottom of the minimum-wage list in this country.

Think about an Alberta, Mr. Speaker, where we provide leadership to the entire world when it comes to models of co-operation in the pursuit of science and in the pursuit of knowledge and, through that, in the creation of a high, high standard of living and quality of life. If you think about all that, what you will find in part is that you are thinking about what the intent is behind Bill 1, the establishment of this foundation for science and engineering research. That is in fact at least half of what will bring Alberta to that kind of future. This kind of legislation is at least half, and that's why I'm here to support it.

Now, of course, the other half that's necessary, Mr. Speaker, to bring Alberta that kind of future is a Liberal government. I am very happy to support Bill 1 because it's the first step in that two-step process we have to take to get to that kind of Alberta. So we'll support this bill now, and then we'll be well poised, when there's a Liberal government in this province, to take full advantage of it so we can achieve that vision of that kind of Alberta.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Science to close debate.

DR. TAYLOR: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased that we have managed to pass this bill as quickly as it's being passed. It is Bill 1. It is a momentous bill. I think it's something that everybody in this House will be able to look at in the future, when we're all out of politics, at some stage in our lives . . .

DR. OBERG: Duck; there's lightning coming.

DR. TAYLOR: Duck; there's lightning coming. Thank you, Minister of Learning.

We'll all be able to look back and say that this was a good thing that we've done. It started a new millennium, and it created a real future for our children and grandchildren.

Thank you, everybody.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a third time]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've made excellent progress tonight, and in view of that, I would move that we adjourn until tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

[At 10:40 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, March 22, 2000 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 00/03/22
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Our Father, we confidently ask for Your strength and encouragement in our service of You through our service of others. We ask for Your gift of wisdom to guide us in making good laws and good decisions for the present and the future of Alberta. Amen.
 Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to present to the Assembly a petition signed by 219 Albertans from Edmonton, St. Albert, Spruce Grove, Devon, and Bon Accord. These petitions are urging "the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."
 Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition. It is signed by 233 citizens of Alberta from the communities of Leduc, St. Albert, Fort Saskatchewan, Bon Accord, and of course Edmonton. These citizens are petitioning the Legislative Assembly "to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."
 Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the distinct pleasure to table with the Assembly today the hard work of two seniors in the Edmonton-Calder constituency. This is just part of their work. There are some 234 signatures from their friends, acquaintances, and new acquaintances in and around the city, some of them from as far away as St. Albert and Sherwood Park. They do collectively urge "the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."
 Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I, too, would like to present a petition signed by 186 individuals from Edmonton, Sherwood Park, St. Albert, Spruce Grove, and Gibbons. They are urging "the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."
 Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I would present a petition signed by 238 citizens of Edmonton and Sherwood Park urging "the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining the public health care system."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table a petition with another 500 signatures on it; close to 6,000 signatures have already been tabled. The individuals whose signatures are on today's petition are from Edmonton, St. Albert, St. Vincent, St. Paul, Hilda, Pincher Creek, Calgary, and Hinton. The petitioners are requesting this Assembly "to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to request that the petition standing in my name from March 20, 2000, regarding the nonsupport for private health care be read and received by the Assembly.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

MR. WICKMAN: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the petition I tabled yesterday denouncing private health care now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the petition standing on the Order Paper under my name now be read and received, please.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would now ask that the petition which I presented to this Assembly yesterday urging the government to stop its pursuit of privatizing our health care system now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, sir. I do ask that the petition I tabled yesterday in this House urging the government to stop privatizing health care be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented yesterday urging this government to stop privatizing health care now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented regarding the undermining of public health care be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I request that the petition I presented on March 21 regarding government promotion of private health care now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition from 225 Albertans that I presented to the Assembly on Tuesday, March 21 requesting that the promotion of private health care be stopped be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, request that the petition I presented yesterday to the Assembly signed by 302 Albertans requesting that the promotion of private health care and the undermining of public health care be stopped be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask that the petition with respect to support for public health care that I presented yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly today five copies of an article by Joel Christie, who has a PhD in health care planning from the University of Alberta. The article appears in the current issue of the publication entitled Profile, Alberta's knowledge-based business magazine. The article titled Health Care Crossroads examines the growth of the publicly funded system and its constant need for change and concludes that:

Carefully extending private delivery beyond the private practices of physicians will enable us to build our health care to the next level without losing what we have gained and learned over the last 30 years of publicly funded health care delivery . . . Private delivery of appropriate health services would help alleviate the current line-ups, improve access to treatment within clinically appropriate timeframes and improve accountability. All at no extra cost to the person receiving medically necessary services.

1:40

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I have four tablings this afternoon. First of all, a letter to the registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons from the Hon. Allan Rock. This is in response to his concern about the college getting on with providing guidelines for the operation of private surgical clinics. In one paragraph that I would just like to quote he indicates:

I am writing separately to Health Minister Jonson to encourage him to fill the legislative vacuum which currently exists and which could have been addressed by Bill 37.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Mental Health Patient Advocate for the year ended December 31, 1999.

And, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Alberta Health Facilities Review Committee for the period ended March 31, 1999.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Public Health Appeal Board for the year ended December 31, 1999.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly today the responses to questions raised during International and Intergovernmental Relations estimates on Tuesday, February 29. They're directed to Edmonton-Riverview, Edmonton-Norwood, and Edmonton-Ellerslie. I note that in case they haven't received them in their office.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today on behalf of the Minister of Environment I'd like to table a letter from the minister to Duncan Ellison of the Canadian Water and Wastewater Association in recognition of World Day for Water, which is today. The Canadian wastewater association represents the municipal and wastewater sectors in Canada, which work to protect and preserve our water resources through safe water treatment and efficient use.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling the appropriate number of copies of four letters today. These are letters to the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, the Member for Dunvegan, the Member for Peace River, and the Member for Rocky Mountain House. In these letters I am providing an opportunity to all of them to debate the merits of Bill 11 with me at a mutually agreeable time. I am looking forward to them accepting the offer.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. I have the appropriate number of copies to the hon. Associate Minister of Forestry, the hon. Minister of Economic Development, the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, and the hon. Member for Red Deer-South asking them to debate Bill 11 publicly.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a resolution passed at the national convention of the Liberal Party of Canada. It states:

Be it resolved that the Liberal Party of Canada urge the federal government to express its opposition to any provincial legislation (including Alberta's Bill 11) extending private-for-profit health care delivery.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings today, with your permission. The first are excerpts from Bovar Inc.'s 1999 annual report, which shows that revenue-sharing from the net income of the Premier's special waste management facility in the year 1999 was zero. This is a rate of return of .00535 percent, I'm sure not as high as the profit expected from these private hospitals.

The second tabling that I have is an analysis by Brad Severin of BDO Dunwoody of the dividend tax credit as set out under section 21 of the Provincial Treasurer's 11 percent flat tax bill. What this shows is that Albertans who have dividend income of approximately $24,000 will now have to pay over $100 in income tax under the Treasurer's scheme, but if he'd just left things alone, if he'd just left well enough alone, that income would be tax free.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, what I have are the appropriate number of copies from myself to the Member for Calgary-Currie, the Member for Lacombe-Stettler, the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, and the Member for Red Deer-North inviting them to meet with me at a mutually agreeable time and place to discuss the merits of Bill 11.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, sir. I wish to table five copies of letters that are going out to the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, the Member for Calgary-Fort, the Member for Calgary-North Hill, and of course my favourite and longtime friend and acquaintance, the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. They are in fact invitations to debate the merits of Bill 11 in their constituency at a mutually agreed upon time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to table five copies of an invitation letter to four members on the government benches: the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, the hon. Member for Leduc, the hon. Member for Little Bow, and the hon. Member for Wainwright. It's an opportunity to debate the merits of Bill 11 with me at mutually agreed time at a place of their choosing.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I have three tablings today. The first is a letter I sent to the MLAs for the constituencies of Calgary-Egmont, Cardston-Taber-Warner, Lesser Slave Lake, and West Yellowhead. This letter provides an opportunity for them to debate the merits of Bill 11 with me at a mutually agreed time and at a place of their choosing.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a letter to the minister responsible for tourism from the general manager and chief operating officer of Alberta's number one tourist attraction. In this letter he outlines that Alberta Tourism has undergone a major reorganization in the past three years to establish a fair and balanced approach to provincial tourism marketing. . . . Sadly, this Destination Awareness Campaign for the Americas achieves precisely the opposite.

My third tabling today, Mr. Speaker, is a media release from the Spiritus group, a grassroots Catholic organization in Alberta advocating and mobilizing on issues that impact faith and life.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings this afternoon. They are letters to the Minister of Health and Wellness, the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness, and the members for Calgary-Cross and Calgary-Montrose requesting that they agree to a debate to talk about the merits of Bill 11. As the government and its members always say that there is not enough information out there for people to be able to make a decision, this provides ample opportunity to do it in your ridings.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have five letters to table this afternoon. They are letters providing the following members an opportunity to debate the merits of Bill 11 with me at a mutually agreeable time and a place of their choosing. The hon. members are the hon. Member for Calgary-North West, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray, and the hon. Member for Highwood.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have copies of four letters that I'm sending to the members for Calgary-Foothills, Stony Plain, Redwater, and Lac La Biche-St. Paul asking them to take the opportunity to publicly debate in their ridings the merits of Bill 11.

DR. MASSEY: Mr. Speaker, with permission I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of letters to the hon. members for Calgary-Nose Creek, Strathmore-Brooks, Calgary-McCall, and Calgary-East asking them to debate the merits of Bill 11 in their constituencies at a mutually agreeable and convenient time.

1:50

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to table five copies when I get them of a note to the Liberal caucus House leader, the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, inviting all members of the Liberal caucus to debate Bill 11 in the Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, it appears that they are very reluctant. We offered them three hours of television debate; now they only want one hour. What have they got to fear?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the Premier, but we'd also like to get out from under the dome. Therefore, I'm tabling the appropriate number of copies of an invitation to the hon. members for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, Banff-Cochrane, Airdrie-Rocky View, and Grande Prairie-Wapiti inviting them to debate the merits of Bill 11 with me in their constituency at a mutually agreed upon time and place.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got four tablings today. The first one is a set of some letters representing correspondence between John Newton, who's my constituent, and he introduces himself as an average Albertan, nonpartisan infoseeker, professional musician, award-winning teacher, City of Edmonton Salute to Excellence '98-99, BA honours sociology, and new father. The letters express frustration and are a clear example of how this government manipulates statistics regarding health care and the difficulties inherent in being an informed member of what is supposedly a democracy.

Mr. Speaker, the second tabling is the position paper on health care privatization in Alberta, and this is the position paper of the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses.

The third tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a letter that I wrote today to the hon. Official Opposition House Leader, a letter in which I express serious concerns with his refusal to agree to "amend the House Leader's Agreement, which sets out the structure for the televised portion of the Second Reading of Bill 11."

MR. KLEIN: Way to go, Raj. They're afraid.

DR. PANNU: I think you're right, Mr. Premier, this time around.

The last tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a copy of a letter that I wrote to Robert Clark, the Ethics Commissioner, in which I express with respect my profound disagreement with his decision not to conduct an investigation into my complaint regarding the Member for Calgary-Currie.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. I have the distinct honour of inviting two hon. members to debate Bill 11: the Member for Sherwood Park, and I'm particularly looking forward to debating the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, getting back to my old stomping grounds. I'm sure both of them would be willing to discuss Bill 11 in a public forum, any time, any place.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I have appropriate copies of letters from four Albertans very, very concerned about Bill 11: Ailwin Boulet, Keith Purdy, Cecelia Hund-Reid, and Norman Matthew.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me pleasure to table copies of five letters. These letters are addressed to the members for Grande Prairie-Smoky, Livingstone-Macleod, Medicine Hat, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, and Vegreville-Viking asking them to arrange a mutually agreeable time to debate the merits of Bill 11.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to recognize the Member for Lethbridge-West. We've already had our debate in Lethbridge.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I have two tablings. Firstly, a copy of my letter to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona of even a date.

Secondly, given that the Premier has now discovered that this place is a refuge instead of a disease, the dome of course, I'm tabling the requisite number of copies of an invitation to the members for Calgary-Glenmore, Calgary-Fish Creek, Calgary-West, and the minister of intergovernmental affairs to participate in a discussion so people in Calgary and Drumheller will also be able to find out what Bill 11 is all about.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. And finally, my letter to the Premier challenging him to a debate on Bill 11 out from under the dome.

Speaker's Ruling Tabling Documents

THE SPEAKER: Well, hon. members, that was exciting. We're now at 3 minutes to 2, and I'd like to point out to all hon. members that everyone who participated in Tabling Returns and Reports today, other than the hon. Minister of Intergovernmental and International Relations and the hon. Minister of Children's Services, violated the rules of this House.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports
(continued)

THE SPEAKER: If the hon. members would like to know the model for tabling, I will now read one to you. Hon. members, I would like to table an agreement made by the House leader of the government of Alberta, the House leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, the Leader of the Alberta New Democratic opposition, and the independent Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs dated March 20, 2000, relating to the debate on second reading of Bill 11, the Health Care Protection Act.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and to all members of this Assembly 92 students from Neil M. Ross community school in St. Albert. They are accompanied by their teachers, Mrs. Bagdan, Mr. Sharun, Mrs. Crockett, Miss Lafranchise, Miss Siobhan Whelehan, and Mrs. Hazelwood, and also some parents and assistants who have come with them: Mrs. Komarnicki, Mr. Gamble, and Mr. Stasynec. They are seated in both the members' gallery and the public gallery. I would ask them all to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I have another introduction too, a person who is in the members' gallery. His name is Roger MacKinnon. He is a University of Alberta student who is here today doing some research and interviews for his bioethics class. He came with his fellow student Luke Miller, who had to return to class. I would ask Roger to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

DR. TAYLOR: I'm pleased to rise today, Mr. Speaker, and introduce two people from my constituency. I don't often get them up from Medicine Hat, so I'm pleased they are here. They are here for the Alberta chamber meetings. One is Kent Smith, who's president of the local chamber, and Dana Cooper, who's the CEO of the chamber. They publish this excellent magazine, Profile, and I'd encourage all members to read it, particularly the comments on health care. I'd ask those guests to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

2:00

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly individuals that are seated in the members' gallery and who represent the beginning today of the return of Wednesday's Child, an exciting series that has assisted in adoption of children in Alberta. With us today are Marg Pullishy, the producer; Anne Scully, manager of adoption services; and Nadia Zubach, the Wednesday's Child matching and media recruitment co-ordinator. As they rise, please join me and give them a warm welcome today.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

MR. STRANG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure today that I introduce a very special group of young students from the Vanier community school. They're accompanied by teachers Mr. Fogarty, Mrs. Sorensen, and Mrs. Wittig. They're also with another great group of parents. I would have them rise now, please, and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you a constituent of mine that's visiting the Legislature today who resides in Stettler, Alberta. This gentleman is one of my favourite ministers of the cloth. I would ask the Reverend Don Axford, seated in the members' gallery, to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to introduce a former colleague from Keyano College in my city of Fort McMurray. She presently is the program chair at the NAIT school of business. Shirley Carroll is truly a dynamic and energetic young lady who lives up to our city slogan, Nous Avons l'Énergie.

I'd like to ask Shirley to rise and receive the warm welcome of our legislators here today.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a bright young man from Edmonton-McClung, Fraser Betkowski. Fraser is a downhill skier, he's a golfer, and most importantly he's the son of the Leader of the Official Opposition. With your permission I would ask Fraser to stand and receive the traditional welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a student from St. Thomas Aquinas high school in Spruce Grove. Her name is Patricia Schirmmacher. She is doing a job shadow project today. I would ask you all to please give her a warm welcome.

Thanks.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly today a very well-known constituent of mine, Charlene Hay, who is the co-ordinator for Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations. I have known Charlene for at least 15 years. She is seated in the public gallery. I will now request her to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Ministerial Statements

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Wednesday's Child

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All children want and need and deserve a family. In fact, loving, stable relationships are essential to a child's healthy development.

Since 1981 Children's Services has been finding adoptive homes for children through the Wednesday's Child television series. The series consists of one-minute video profiles of special-needs children in government's care, children who are seeking adoptive families. It's the only program of its kind in Canada, and its success rate is remarkable. Since its inception 70 percent of the children featured have found adoptive homes.

Another season of the Wednesday's Child series begins today, and I encourage all Albertans to watch. The one-minute profiles air on CFRN TV in Edmonton, CFCN TV in Calgary three times each Wednesday: during 11 a.m. and noon, at about 12:58 p.m., and during 3 to 4 p.m. This series is an outstanding example of the benefits to children when government, the private sector, the community, and most importantly, Mr. Speaker, the parents who choose to give of themselves work on behalf of the children.

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank our partners: CTV, which provides free air time on CFRN TV in Edmonton and CFCN TV in Calgary; the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption, which provides the funds required for filming and promotes special-needs adoption by displaying posters in Wendy's restaurants in Alberta; and the Adoption Council of Canada, which provides a toll-free response line for prospective families. To all of you my sincere thanks and appreciation. Together we are ensuring that more children in Alberta are provided with loving and caring families.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Wednesday's Child is certainly one useful and commendable mechanism to provide for the adoption of Alberta's children. This is but one initiative, however, required to address the thousands of children in our child welfare system who are awaiting a permanent home.

High-profile campaigns like Wednesday's Child help to inform the public of the plight of these children. It is, however, the frontline staff who struggle on a day-to-day basis to seek out safe and nurturing environments for children that must also be recognized. Their efforts must be recognized, respected, and valued to a greater degree than has been this government's practice.

The developmental needs of such children must also not be ignored, like their literacy rates, academic achievement, and social interaction. Opportunities must also be created for these children to experience hope and love until in fact they find a permanent home.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Members, a few minutes ago during Tabling Returns and Reports I tabled a document which is a House leader's agreement. I wish to advise the House that at the conclusion of question period today it would be my intent to rise and read into the record the contents of this agreement and recognize the Government House Leader, who will then proceed to ask for unanimous consent of the Assembly for the implementation of this agreement.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First main question. The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's only when you get out from under the dome amongst your constituents that you understand that there is another reality. Not my words but those of the Premier. My questions are to the Premier. Will the Premier now get out from under the dome, follow his own advice, come out and debate with me in front of Albertans and answer their questions on Bill 11?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank God that we're all going to get out from under the dome on Thursday and have a break. I don't know about the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition. She seems to be suffering from dome disease. I know that I am. But I'll be refreshed and rejuvenated and ready to come back and ready to engage her in a debate in the Legislature on Bill 11.

I would throw the leader of the Liberal opposition's words back at her. A press release dated November 15, 1999, says, "MacBeth has challenged the Premier to a debate in the Legislature on contracting out public health care to the private sector". You know, Mr. Speaker, they raised the question yesterday. How can you trust the leader of the Liberal opposition when she says one thing a few months ago and is saying another thing today? How can they trust her when last week she challenged me to a TV debate, but in 1992 she refused to debate me during the leadership campaign for the Progressive Conservatives, saying: I'm not going to participate; a debate merely polarizes two sides? My goodness.

2:10

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, there've been a lot of changes.

He's now over there, and I'm now over here, and he's afraid to debate me on Bill 11. Why won't he do it?

MR. KLEIN: I'm not afraid to debate at all. As a matter of fact, the Liberals now appear to be afraid to debate. I understand from the hon. Government House Leader, Mr. Speaker, that they were offered nine hours of debate. No. They only want three. What are they afraid of?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: What are you talking about?

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, nobody knows what the Premier is talking about.

Why is he so afraid to get out and talk to Albertans and hear their questions on Bill 11? Is it because he's afraid they're going to tell him to withdraw his legislation?

MR. KLEIN: I'm not afraid at all. I'm out and about all the time. I like to talk to Albertans about all issues. I like to talk to Albertans about agriculture issues. I like to talk to Albertans about energy issues. I like to talk to Albertans about the environment, about justice, about the federal government, about elected Senators. I like to talk to Albertans about their attitude toward Ottawa and Mr. Rock and the hypocrisy of Mr. Rock. So I get out and about.

As a matter of fact, I was in Calgary last week, where I spoke to – what? – about 1,250 Albertans about health care, went on and on . . . [interjections] No. There were a lot of Liberals there. And thank God. They paid about $375 to come and hear me speak, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, it's clear that Bill 11 is nothing more than a scheme to use taxpayers' dollars to subsidize private hospitals and to force Albertans on the waiting lists to pay for enhanced services, creating a huge windfall for private hospital owners. Now we're learning just how huge that windfall is going to be. A price comparison of surgical procedures – this is real data. A price comparison of surgical procedures in the U.S. and Canadian hospitals was published in the April '98 edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, and it shows that the median cost of a total knee replacement in a U.S. hospital is nearly $27,000 compared to $11,000 for a similar procedure in a Canadian hospital. Interesting data. My questions are to the Premier. Will the Premier admit that enhanced services within Bill 11 really means that private hospitals will be performing knee replacements at more than twice the cost of the service in the public sector?

MR. KLEIN: No, it doesn't mean that at all, Mr. Speaker. I think it's absolutely and totally – well, I don't think; I know – irrelevant to even be talking about the American system in any comparisons, because we aren't talking about that at all. We're talking about protecting the publicly funded health care system as we know it today and abiding by the principles of the Canada Health Act. That's what we're talking about.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that knee replacements are more than twice the cost in private hospitals, what profit margins has the Premier promised private hospital operators in Alberta when this bill goes through? Is it 20 percent, 30 percent, 40 percent? What's the private option that's going to be paid for by the taxpayers?

MR. KLEIN: The only promise that is guaranteed in the bill relative to payment, Mr. Speaker, is that all any Albertan will need is their Alberta health care card. Nothing more. Nothing less.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, why would the Premier be pushing a bill that opens the door to $27,000 private knee replacements subsidized by Alberta taxpayers when he could simply increase the capacity in the public hospitals and pay a mere $11,000 for the same procedure?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, this hon. member should know all about private clinics. I would ask Albertans: how can they trust this hon. member when she allowed 35 or more private clinics to operate under her watch when she was minister of health and allowed some of them to illegally charge facility fees? Right. How can they trust an hon. member who allowed that to happen?

THE SPEAKER: Third main question. The Leader of the Official Opposition.

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 11 is all about bringing in two-tiered medicine and promoting private hospitals or, as the Premier likes to call them, approved surgical facilities. This is a second study the Premier might want to look at. A 1998 study by DeCoster and others entitled Waiting Times for Surgery in Manitoba demonstrated that patients in the public health care system had to wait 14 to 23 weeks for cataract surgeries if they went to a surgeon who practiced in both the public and the private hospital sector. On the other hand, patients who went to surgeons operating solely in the public system in Manitoba had waits of only 7 to 10 weeks, half the wait. To quote the summary of the report, "Patients awaiting public sector surgery would wait up to 13 weeks longer if their surgeon also operated privately." My question is to the Premier. Why is the Premier so desperately trying to push Bill 11 and establish a two-tiered system that will see waiting times for surgery double for the majority of Albertans who will always have to rely on the public health care system?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to have the hon. minister of health supplement, but I am going to comment on one statement in her preamble, because this speaks to the malicious, vicious kind of misinformation that the Liberals are spreading, and that is reference to two-tiered American style health care. This bill specifically prohibits that from happening. They know it, and they're afraid to get out there and tell the truth. They're either afraid or unwilling to tell the truth. That statement about two-tiered health care is the kind of malicious information that they are spreading. It's wrong, and they should be ashamed of themselves.

MR. JONSON: If I might just supplement, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would respectfully suggest to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that she is confusing her references to the United States with ours when she should be comparing her references to the policy that she has enunciated with respect to private health care, and that is that doctors should completely opt out of the health care system in this province and charge on their own. She also is on record saying that a private hospital should be completely outside the public health care system, and I assume unregulated. Then you really get the true two-tiered system, which then I agree: if they're comparing their own policy, they should compare it to the United States. But that is not what Bill 11 is about.

Another thing, Mr. Speaker, I think is very important here. With respect to Manitoba, which was the reference point, they do have private surgical facilities operating in Manitoba. I understand that they're fairly well received. I do not see the federal minister or the Leader of the Opposition here condemning them.

More importantly, in Ontario they have a private facilities act, a piece of legislation which, as I recall – I think there was a Premier in Ontario by the name of Peterson, and it was passed under his jurisdiction. They have the legislation. The Prime Minister is not asking for that legislation to be repealed. I really think there should be some consistency in the way the Liberals portray this whole situation.

2:20

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure what the minister of health is talking about. This is about waiting lists in Manitoba. You know, a Canadian province.

In pushing Bill 11, where is the Premier's evidence that contracting out to the private hospitals or approved surgical facilities, as he likes to call them, will reduce waiting lists? Albertans need to know.

MR. KLEIN: Well, yes, and they need to know from the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition, Mr. Speaker. Why should Albertans trust her when she says now that the private sector will destroy health care, but in 1998 she said that the private sector could set up in this province. If it can find its place, it should get in there: that's a direct quote right from her mouth on CHED on Dave Rutherford's show. How can they trust her when she says one thing today and a totally different thing two years ago?

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, just in case Albertans missed that, that's the Premier refusing to answer on the evidence because he doesn't have any.

Given that the great majority of Albertans do not want Bill 11, Mr. Speaker, and given that the Premier hasn't shown one shred of real evidence to support his move to private hospitals, why doesn't he simply do the right thing and pull the bill?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, relative to the hon. member's statement that Albertans don't want this bill, that's not quite true. I have five letters. One from a farmer:

I would like to congratulate you and your Conservative Party on the way you've financially managed the province and for your vision of Alberta for the future in regards to Health Care.

Here's another letter.

I am an emeritus professor of surgery at the University of Calgary and I would like to let you know that I fully support your actions with Bill 11. I admire your courage in once again taking on the battle with the socialists and trade unions – and the Federal Government.

Here's a letter from a Mr. Tabler, and he says:

I would have to say that if anyone in Alberta, and indeed in Canada, is to have the balls – the guts – the courage – whatever you want to call it – to lead Alberta and Canada into new thinking about the delivery of health care, it is you, Mr. Premier.

Another letter from a lawyer in Calgary, a QC. He says:

I am shocked, appalled and upset at the abuse to which you are being subjected by the doctors' union, the nurses' union, C.U.P.E., A.U.P.E. and others over Bill 11. The criticism is unfair, outrageous, dishonest, untruthful and disingenuous, and the people involved know it full well.

I'm sure he's including the Liberals in that as well.

Just a small note of encouragement.

I'm with you all the way, don't be discouraged by all the nay-sayers out there. I think the majority of Albertans still believe in what you and your people are doing. Keep your chin up and smile.

Well, I'm doing that.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, those documents will be tabled?

MR. KLEIN: Yes, they will.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party does have the floor.

Security at Constituency Meeting

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, Albertans are democratically and peacefully voicing their strong opposition to Bill 11. Some of these Albertans attended a carefully orchestrated meeting yesterday evening. The meeting was organized by the Minister of Justice in his capacity as the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud. My questions are to the Premier. I don't ask them lightly. Why is the government so afraid of public reaction to Bill 11 that it asked two Legislature Building security personnel dressed in plain clothes to be on duty at the Edmonton-Whitemud meeting?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, he's asking me a question that certainly pertains to a forum or a meeting that was arranged by the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General to address some concerns around Bill 11. I don't know any of the details surrounding that meeting. I know that the question is germane to the meeting itself, and the only person who can properly answer that question is the hon. minister. Now, I don't know if you would allow that, Mr. Speaker, but if you will, I would have the hon. minister respond.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the security personnel are employees of the Department of Justice and were asked by my office staff in an abundance of caution, not at my request but in an abundance of caution, because I have in fact had forms of threats, not relating at all to Bill 11 but relating to some people who are dissatisfied with certain things in terms of the care they perceive they've received, items which I can't discuss and names that I can't disclose. We have had threats in the office relating to that, and I have had security personnel at a number of meetings including a January 13 meeting that I had in my constituency and prior meetings. My office staff, I presume, will continue to arrange for security personnel to attend those meetings for as long as they believe there may be any threat.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, my second question to the Premier: what evidence does the government have that Albertans are doing anything other than expressing their peaceful opposition to Bill 11 that would warrant the stationing of security personnel at a Conservative MLA's meeting?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, again I will have the hon. minister respond to that question, but I can tell you that as the Minister of Justice in particular and to some degree as the Attorney General this hon. minister deals with some cases involving some very unsavoury characters.

MR. HANCOCK: Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, I could just supplement to say that I'm extremely disappointed to see a news release that's been issued by the New Democrat opposition. I had occasion, as you well know, to speak with the hon. member this morning. He didn't raise this question with me, didn't take the opportunity to ask whether there was a need for security personnel to be attending a meeting, did not in any way give me any forewarning of this issue.

I could have explained to him quite reasonably the attendance of security personnel at this meeting, at the last meeting I held, and on other occasions when I've been out in a circumstance where we thought there might be the presence of a person who had made a threat. I could have explained that to him, and there wouldn't have been any need for these sorts of histrionics.

The meeting I had in Edmonton-Whitemud last night, Mr. Speaker, was a very peaceful meeting. I think the Journal accurately reported it as a very polite meeting. We had a very good discussion. There were no problems at that meeting, and we didn't anticipate any problems from the constituents of Edmonton-Whitemud, who I invited to attend that meeting. The threat came from someone who is not a constituent of Edmonton-Whitemud but we reasonably believed might attend the meeting.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, the minister himself has recognized that there was no security threat, so I ask the Premier: why are your government resources being used to monitor ordinary Albertans who were only exercising their democratic right to oppose Bill 11 at a public meeting? That's the issue.

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, I think I've made it perfectly clear that the attendance of security personnel at that meeting had absolutely nothing to do with the constituents of Edmonton-Whitemud, whom I invited by a personal circular to all residents of Edmonton-Whitemud letting them know that the meeting would be there. It was a peaceful meeting. It was intended to be a peaceful meeting. The attendance of security personnel had nothing to do with the discussion on Bill 11.

I'll reiterate again, because the member obviously couldn't listen the first or second times: security personnel were there solely because my office was concerned about certain threatening phone calls and threats that we've received in the office related to an unrelated matter, which he well knows because I've said it twice already. I cannot disclose the content of it because it might lead to the identification of the individual who made the threats. It has nothing to do with the debate on Bill 11. If he can't accept my word for it, I think it might be a question of privilege that would be raised later on.

Speaker's Ruling Improper Questions

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, the chair is deeply disturbed by this last series of questions. There has to be some honour in this place among all of us. I have had the privilege of being in here for going on 21 years, and I do know that from time to time Members of the Legislative Assembly do receive threats upon their person or persons in their family. This is not an uncommon occurrence. This happens.

2:30

Systems have been put in place for the protection of individuals. Certain ministers of the Crown are more likely to receive abusive calls and actual physical threats upon them because of their ministerial portfolio. Not in the least of them is the Minister of Justice and the Attorney General. It's a requirement, in fact, for the safeguarding of a democracy that the appropriate security measures are put in place.

From time to time, members of this Assembly who are private members have the need to seek security assistance. There are members in this Assembly now who visited with the Speaker and asked for and received such security provisions and security arrangements. This is not uncommon. What is uncommon and of disturbance to me today is that this matter would be raised in this Assembly in this manner. An hon. member . . . [interjections] Please. Please.

We did have an opportunity, as was correctly pointed out by the hon. Government House Leader, to meet with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona at 11 o'clock this morning. This was ample provision to discuss such a matter not only between the two of you but among other individuals including the Opposition House Leader, which might have helped clarify this matter.

I'm really sorry this type of questioning occurred in this Assembly today. [interjections] Please. Let us move on.

The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Gasoline Prices

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are to the hon. Provincial Treasurer. The federal government, the federal Liberals recently announced that they will spend $750,000 worth of hard-earned taxpayer money to study pricing practices of the oil and gas industry. Essentially all of this money is going to figure out why the price of gasoline we pay at the pumps is so high. Another study but no action. I certainly hope that Alberta will not follow suit and launch a study. To the Provincial Treasurer: what can this gas pricing study done by the Conference Board of Canada possibly achieve? Can we hope for a reduction of gas prices on the federal side?

MR. DAY: Well, Mr. Speaker, as far as the province of Alberta being implicated in that, that amount of money that's going into doing a study on why gas prices are going up, whether it is $750,000 or $600,000 – I think I can answer it, and it won't cost of dime. Simply, the demand for crude based on the supply that's available drives the price up, and as the supply increases, the price goes down.

Now, some time ago there was an agreement signed between OPEC and non-OPEC nations related to a reduction of something like 5 million barrels a day in production, and naturally when that supply begins to drop, price is going to go up. As a matter of fact, today, Mr. Speaker, because that agreement that was signed indicated that those production reductions would hold until March of 2000 – and as you know, this is the time which we are in now. Given the anticipation of those production reductions and production starting to rise again, the market already seems to be anticipating that. We were looking at a west Texas price at noon today of $27.60. That's a drop of about 20 percent in the price going back over the last couple of weeks.

The province of Alberta will not be investing any money in such a study as is being done. We know why these prices go up, we know why they come down, and we know that we are also prepared for that rise and fall.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Treasurer tell me how our farmers will be impacted by these high fuel costs and whether or not there are programs in place or programs anticipated to help them deal with these current high prices as they plan for spring seeding? [interjection]

MR. DAY: I will give the facts on that, Mr. Speaker. The fact of the matter is that there are a couple of programs in place right now directly related to fuel for farmers. The fuel benefit, first of all, allows for the fact that farmers are exempt from the 9 cent per litre provincial tax, the lowest tax in the country, and there is also a fuel benefit that reduces the price of diesel by another 6 cents. Those programs cost between $110 million and $115 million.

Further to that, our minister of agriculture has been working very closely with producers, because there have been rising costs facing our agriculture producers. The federal government, of course, has not seen fit to give any assistance to Alberta farmers on this particular area. So not just an increase in the farm disaster program but in fact a new approach: farm assistance 2000 is in place to address a variety of these costs, including the high cost of fuel. Part of that is involved in an acreage payment of $4.29 per acre to farmers, and that is going to go a significant distance to making that available in time for spring planting. We care about our farmers in this province, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. GORDON: Again to the Provincial Treasurer. As I'm meeting with farmers in the Stettler area on Saturday morning, could you please tell me so I can tell them: what is the direct proportion of Alberta tax versus federal tax, and is there tax on tax?

MR. DAY: Well, that's a key point, Mr. Speaker. The member can feel free to share some things with the constituents with whom she'll be meeting.

On the federal side – and this should be very carefully noted. Of course every province has a tax per litre on gasoline, and ours is 9 cents in this province. It's the lowest in Canada. The fact of the matter is that the federal government has a 10 cent excise tax on every single litre, and unbeknownst to most Canadians, part of that tax was put in place several years ago as a deficit elimination tax.

Now, a number of provinces have achieved surplus positions over the last few years because of provincial policies. The federal government has skimmed the excess away from the provinces and has walked around bragging about a surplus, yet they continue to tax every Canadian a deficit elimination tax when thanks to the work of the provinces the federal deficit has been eliminated. Not only do they do that, but after all the taxes are in place, they add the GST on top. [interjections]

I know the Liberals are getting excited when I talk about this, but the fact is that Canadians need to remember that every time you put gasoline in your car, you pay the GST on top of all the other taxes. As the price of gas goes up, you pay more. The federal government gets richer; you as a taxpayer get poorer every time you fill that tank.

I'll just close with this thought, Mr. Speaker. The Liberals here in the province sent the Member for Calgary-Buffalo down to the Liberal convention this weekend. Now, he could have talked to his friends about the federal government not helping our farmers. He could have talked to his friends about the federal government interfering in health care. He could have talked to his friends about the GST on tax. Did he do any of that? No. Do you know what he said was the compelling issue on the minds of Albertans? He went down there, and he whined about the federal Access to Information Act. Those people are out of touch, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Private Health Services (continued)

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Spiritus, a Catholic organization that has representatives from the Catholic Women's League, the Knights of Columbus, and the Catholic school trustees has raised important questions about Bill 11. My questions today are to the Premier. Why is this government promoting Bill 11, which fosters further division and mistrust within the community and where the goal of some could very well become the selling of a product rather than the reaching out to those who are suffering?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, Bill 11 is there to protect the publicly funded health care system and to put some fences and rules and regulations around contracting out.

I would remind this hon. member, if he doesn't already know, that Caritas is an example. Caritas contracts to the Capital regional health authority, and it's a very good arrangement.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Consistent with the Spiritus concern with equality, I would like to ask the Premier: why is the government pushing Bill 11, that maximizes the opportunity for certain people's personal and financial gain, and seems oblivious to patient care, employee remuneration, and the efficient use of public resources?

2:40

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, obviously the hon. member has not read the bill. I'll read it to him and see which parts he disagrees with. Does he disagree with this statement? "Whereas Albertans cherish Alberta's publicly funded and publicly administered health system." Does he disagree with that statement?

Does he disagree with this statement?

Whereas the Government of Alberta is committed to the preservation of the principles of universality, comprehensiveness, accessibility, portability and public administration, as described in the Canada Health Act . . . as the foundation of the health system [here] in Alberta.

Does he oppose that? If he does, stand up and say so now, because it's in the bill and it will become law.

Whereas the Government of Alberta is committed to the pursuit of excellence in the health system in Alberta through the efficient delivery of quality publicly funded services based on high standards, best practices and effective patient outcomes.

Does he oppose that? Does he oppose that principle? If he does, stand up and say so. And it goes on and on and on.

They are out there opposing these principles that Albertans hold dear. Hold dear. They are out there opposing the principles that Albertans hold dear, the principles of a publicly funded system. They're out there opposing it.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Consistent with Spiritus' concern with the responsible use of resources, I would like to ask the Premier why Bill 11 ignores their concerns that limited public funds are being used to pay private operators for bricks and mortar, which will cost taxpayers more in the long run.

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, the bill also says – and I would think they would support this provision in the bill – that the RHAs contemplating contracting out must demonstrate cost efficiencies. It must be demonstrated that waiting lists are going to be shortened. There are plenty of checks and balances, and I'm sure that the group to which the hon. member alludes would agree with those principles.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Education Property Tax

MR. THURBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On January 26 of this year this government announced a reduction in the provincial education property tax mill rate and an overall reduction of the amount of money collected by $46.7 million for the 2000-2001 year. At the same time, the province announced that increases in both residential and nonresidential properties would be capped at 5 percent and that individual municipal requisition increases would be limited to 2.3 percent over last year. My question to the Municipal Affairs minister is: why were these specific measures adopted in this province?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Mr. Speaker, this government believes and is committed to the principles that all Alberta children are entitled to the same education no matter where they live in this province. All Albertans benefit from a highly educated and skilled population, and therefore the method of funding education must be fair and must be equitable. We have responded to suggestions that there may be a better way of funding education. We're trying to seek that out and have commissioned an MLA committee to review the current system of funding. Whether through, indeed, the general revenue or through the property tax, are there other ways? Are there other creative ways? We're certainly open to any funding options that may be available, and we'll continue to explore any suggestions that may be brought forward by anyone in this province.

MR. THURBER: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: can you tell this Legislative Assembly what the current status of the MLA committee reviewing the education property taxes is today?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Yes. My understanding is that the committee recently met with the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, on March 9. They met with the School Boards Association on March 13, and they will be meeting with the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties later on this coming week to discuss recent measures, to discuss any potentials that may be coming forward as to dealing with the new process of funding education. Over the next few months the committee will be developing options, and we'll be presenting those options for public consultation throughout the year.

MR. THURBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister: can you tell us what is currently being done to address concerns of communities such as Edmonton that capping and averaging of requisitions results in an unfair and unacceptable taxation system?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It should be pointed out that in 1999 Edmontonians benefited from the capping program on residential properties in the amount of $5.7 million. One must consider this in light of the $5.5 million increase in Edmonton's education requisition this year. Even with this year's increase Edmonton is paying $27 million less than they paid in 1994 as far as the education portion of the property taxes is concerned.

This year, Mr. Speaker, Edmonton's two school boards will receive about $26 million more in funding from the Alberta school foundation fund than is collected from the citizens of Edmonton. In other words, Edmonton's two school boards will receive $26 million in property tax funding from other Alberta municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, it's important to note that Edmonton has been and remains a net benefactor from the taxation system that exists today. I know that the members of the MLA committee reviewing this issue as well as myself and my colleagues remain open to any suggestions that the city may have or that any other citizens of this province may have to continue to develop the fairest and most equitable funding mechanism that we can have for Alberta students regardless of where they live, regardless of what part of Alberta they reside in.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Redwater.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. If the private health bill is supposed to protect public health care, why is a health ombudsman not included in the legislation so Albertans have somewhere to go when the private system breaks down?

MR. JONSON: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to repeat and emphasize for the hon. member that the legislation has nothing to do with a, quote, private health care system. It refers to contracting to a regional health authority through a publicly funded, publicly administered health care system in this province. Therefore, the question is rather irrelevant, I think.

MR. GIBBONS: To the same minister: why are there no details or commitments in the bill that private clinics will be subject to investigation by the Health Facilities Review Committee or the provincial Ombudsman?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's first of all reference the provincial Ombudsman. Some time ago, I believe it was 1998, we established an overall dispute or conflict or complaint resolution mechanism for the operation of our regional health authorities. This step-by-step process does provide that concerns that are raised, be they with a laboratory service which might be private or be they with the hospitals, which are public – there would be a step-by-step process whereby complaints could be filed and disputes resolved. In that overall policy statement there is, as I said, a step-by-step process whereby if it is a matter of doctor performance or that type of issue, then that would be referred to the College of Physicians and Surgeons. If it is an issue with respect to alleged unfair treatment of patients within the system, that would end up ultimately, if not resolved at the local level, in the Ombudsman's office. So we are utilizing the office of the Ombudsman in an appropriate way within the structure of our overall health care system, and Bill 11 does nothing to change that overall approach.

MR. GIBBONS: If the private hospital bill is supposed to protect public health care, why are there no details or mechanisms to clarify how the deinsuring or the de-enlisting will occur to the new private health system?

2:50

MR. JONSON: Well, first of all, once again, Mr. Speaker, we do need to repeat – and I guess it is shown that certain people do need to have things repeated and repeated to them; occasionally they understand – that there is not any private hospitals act or any private hospitals contemplated in this particular piece of legislation. As I've indicated to the Assembly and to the hon. member, we do have in the system currently a number of processes for resolving disputes and dealing with issues within our overall health care system.

The member referenced the Health Facilities Review Committee process. This committee, which I think is very useful, very helpful, very good for the system, visits health facilities all across the province, and they would visit private nursing homes as well as public nursing homes. I'm sure you're aware of that. We also have the Protection for Persons in Care Act, which deals with individual concerns, Mr. Speaker, and they today visit the private nursing homes and the public facilities. Those would still stay in place with the passage of Bill 11.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we have heard many times lately in this Legislature, surgeries are done today in private surgical clinics providing that the patient stays less than 12 hours. As we all know, every individual reacts differently to anesthetic agents. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: what happens today when a patient coming out of anesthesia has an adverse effect requiring more than 12 hours of care?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, we do have, yes, clinics in the province which provide medical services, in some cases surgical services, provided that the overall expertise applied to that area of treatment indicates that recovery from the treatment will be well within the 12-hour limit; that is, less than 12 hours. But in a system where there are thousands and thousands of people treated throughout the year, yes, there could be the possibility of some unforeseen reaction to the anesthetic. The provision, of course, that also has to be kept in mind is that the people who give anesthetic have to be well qualified through the overall medical training and accreditation process. I only know of one case in the past three years where there has been an adverse reaction, but in all cases, should that unfortunate event occur, the clear protocol for clinics is to get that person to a hospital, to an emergency room, as quickly as possible by ambulance to be properly treated.

MR. BRODA: Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness: does the surgeon who did the surgery on the patient and a nurse who works in recovery continue to care for that patient past the 12-hour time limit?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, there may be instances in the clinics where a patient requires more than 12 hours' recovery time, but the guidelines and expectations are quite clear, and that is that the professional staff, doctors and nurses, would stay with the patient, would care for the patient until they are ready to go home, quite frankly. As I indicated earlier, if there is any complication, they are there and they'll make sure that that patient gets the proper additional care should that be required.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: if surgery is done at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, does the patient stay until 3 a.m., and does the facility remain open until 3 a.m. so that the patient can recover?

MR. JONSON: It is my understanding, Mr. Speaker, that it is generally common practice with respect to day surgical clinics that surgery is scheduled starting quite early in the morning, perhaps 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning. The target that is established is that a person having day surgery should be able to be discharged by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but if there are circumstances which require that a surgery be scheduled later, I would like to just emphasize again that the professionals, the doctors and the nurses and the support staff, would of course monitor and care for that patient until they are in a condition to be released and go home.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-West.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier's private hospital bill – well, sometimes it's camouflaged as the private surgical clinic bill, but really it's Bill 11 – has led to a firestorm of opposition throughout Alberta.

MR. HANCOCK: Point of order.

MRS. SOETAERT: A firestorm, obviously. Doctors, nurses, seniors, small businesspeople, teachers, and over 29,000 Albertans have signed petitions against the Premier's private hospital scheme. They want to preserve medicare in the public interest, not promote the Premier's special-interest backers. Bill 11 is headed for the ditch, because Albertans just don't trust this Premier anymore on health care. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. How can Albertans trust the Premier, trust the minister, trust this government on Bill 11 when there is not one shred of evidence – not one shred of evidence – that the purchase of surgical services from private providers will reduce costs or waiting lists for surgeries?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to indicate – and I won't go on at length about this – that it has been reported in this Assembly that with respect to the provision of eye surgery in Calgary through contracts with surgical clinics, the Calgary regional health authority has been able to provide more of those types of operations under the funding of the regional health authority, so there is no additional charge. They are able to provide more than they did before with the same amount of moneys, and the quality of the service has been very good. I could go on to mention some other examples. I could move over to Manitoba if she wishes.

MRS. SOETAERT: Will the minister admit that there is no evidence that shows that the introduction of private hospitals will reduce costs per day, costs per case, and total hospital costs while improving the quality of care and health outcomes? There is no proof, Mr. Minister.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I've just given one example. Perhaps if she doesn't like Alberta, we can move over to Manitoba, where the government of Manitoba, a previous government, mind you, has seen fit to contract, incidentally without any legislation being in place, with private surgical clinics. My indication, having read material on that particular situation, is that they are finding that the specialized clinics providing surgical services take the load off their very, very busy hospitals, the quality is being maintained, and the cost is basically the same.

MRS. SOETAERT: My final question to the minister: why doesn't the minister just admit that Bill 11 opens the door to two-tiered American medicine by allowing special-interest backers to charge Albertans for enhanced medical services? That's the truth.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I categorically oppose or deny that that is the case with respect to Bill 11. I really wonder why the hon. member across the way really cares, because their policy, the statement of their leader indicates that doctors should be able to opt out completely and practise outside the public health care system. Also, there are references indicating that anybody wanting to set up a private hospital should be completely out of the health care system, and they would have their nice little private system. That's what's so ironic about this and how inconsistent the opposition is in this whole matter.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, the time for question period has now left us this day.

3:00

head: Statement by the Speaker

Television Broadcast of Bill 11 Debate

THE SPEAKER: I did indicate at the beginning of question period that I would be rising at the conclusion of question period and reading into the record a letter that was agreed to today and then would be recognizing the Government House Leader, and it's now my intent to do that. In the past few minutes all members should have received a copy of this letter as well. Essentially, it is a letter from the Government House Leader to the House leader of the Official Opposition and the leader of the ND opposition and as well a letter to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs. I want this in the record.

As per our discussions, I would confirm our agreement that the debate on Second Reading of Bill 11, Health Care Protection Act, be televised on ACCESS television from 8 to 11 p.m. the first day of its introduction for Second Reading. The Government House Leader guarantees at least one week's notice to the Assembly prior to the calling of Bill 11 for Second Reading.

The elements of our agreement are as follows:

1. All parties will use reasonable efforts in good faith to give effect to this agreement.
2. This Agreement embodies an understanding between the Government, the Official Opposition, the New Democrat Opposition and Independent MLA Paul within the Legislative Assembly and as such is not intended to be legally enforceable.
3. The debate will proceed as follows:

	Maximum
Honourable Premier	30 minutes
Leader of the Official Opposition	30 minutes
Minister of Health and Wellness	20 minutes
Opposition Health Critic	20 minutes
Leader of ND Opposition	20 minutes
PC member	20 minutes
Liberal member	20 minutes
PC member	20 minutes

With the rest of the debate proceeding in accordance with the usual practices of the Assembly.

4. It is further agreed that during the 3 hours of television coverage of the 2nd Reading debate, all Points of Order and any other procedural items will be brought to the attention of the Speaker in the form of a note to the Chair and that the Chair may deal with those items following question period the following day.
5. It is agreed that each House Leader will prevail upon their respective caucus for full cooperation in maintaining decorum of the house, with no interruption of speakers recognized by the Speaker.
6. It is further agreed that during the 3 hours of television coverage of the 2nd Reading debate, if a disagreement about the mechanics of this agreement should arise, the Speaker shall be the sole interpreter of this agreement and shall rule forthwith how the Assembly is to proceed.
7. The Speaker be requested, through Members Services Committee and the Legislative Assembly offices to finalize arrangement for the provision of television coverage as agreed.

In the document for the House are the signatures of the hon. House leader of the government of Alberta, the House leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, the leader of the opposition New Democrats, and the independent Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs. It's acknowledged and was agreed to in a meeting with me, and in my enthusiasm my signature there says March 23. Of course, it should have said March 22, 2000.

I'd simply like to add several other items to this agreement as per the discussions that occurred between myself and the three House leaders. In essence, the control of this feed out of this Assembly of course rests only with the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. There will be no commentary attached to the three hours of television coverage and there will be no editing, this request being made by the Speaker to Access television. The contract will be signed between the Legislative Assembly of the province of Alberta and Access to give effect to this agreement. The costs will be paid for by the Legislative Assembly of the province of Alberta for this particular event, and the costs may very well be in the neighbourhood of $5,000. That's for the three hours of coverage.

I would only add one additional thing. In invoking this and in looking at this, I want all members to know that a discussion was held with respect to heckling, interjections, interruptions, and the three leaders assured me that in fact all of their members would honour an agreement that will see no heckling, no interjections, and no disrespectful connotations and language. The chair responded that should such an event occur, the chair would simply, very briefly, rise and invite the hon. member identified who would fall under the category of interjections, hecklings, or disruptive behaviour to leave the Assembly. This would be done once, and it would be done on provincewide television. We will conduct ourselves in the highest degree of integrity.

Now, further to this discussion that was held this morning, it was also agreed among the four that at this point the chair should recognize the Government House Leader, who will now proceed to make an announcement and ask for unanimous consent of the Assembly to give approval to this.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege on behalf of all three House leaders, I believe, to ask for unanimous consent of the House that these rules as provided in the House leader agreement and as extrapolated upon by yourself be adopted as rules of the House instead of the Standing Orders for the period specified in the letter, to the extent that they supersede the Standing Orders. I can advise the House in so asking that Bill 11 would be called for second reading at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 4.

[Unanimous consent granted]

THE SPEAKER: Let me just say to the four hon. people who participated in the writing of this agreement: congratulations; well done. It's a good example of what can happen.

Now, today during question period we also had another event. There was an interjection from the chair. I now want to call on the hon. leader of the third party.

Point of Order Member's Apology

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise on a point of privilege to apologize without any equivocation to the Government House Leader, to all my colleagues in the Assembly, and to you for the questions that were raised which seemed to question the integrity of the Minister of Justice. I must say – and I want to iterate this quite clearly – that I hold the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of this province in the highest regard. In my dealings with him as Government House Leader and in my dealings with him as a colleague I have nothing but respect for him. So if in my questions I have erred, I apologize to him personally and apologize to the House for not realizing that the security threats, as the minister said, were a fact.

I did not learn, Mr. Speaker, about the presence of the security personnel at last night's meeting until 15 minutes past noon today; 12:15 was the first time I knew about it. Being alone I had a very busy time before I walked into the House at 1:30. It didn't even cross my mind to call the minister to ask whether or not the presence of the security guards were caused by security threats. Now that I've learned about it, I'm sorry I raised those questions, and I apologize again.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, let us move on to Recognitions in 30 seconds from now. Then I'll come back to the various points of order.

3:10

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Sunday, March 19, the Canadian Multicultural Educational Foundation sponsored their annual Harmony brunch in commemoration of International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. The Harmony brunch is a community celebration of reaffirmation of equality and a celebration of harmony and diversity among us all. This year the guest speaker was Senator Douglas Roche, who addressed the issues facing our Canadian immigration department and its policies and their implementation.

My government colleague the MLA for Edmonton-Mill Creek and I, who have attended many of these brunches along with others, wish to express our appreciation to the organizers of this function, which is an awareness raising occasion for the elimination of racial discrimination.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Edmonton-Gold Bar Bill 11 Forum

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to recognize every person who came to the debate on Bill 11 last week at The King's University College. Many of those who attended were against the bill, and some were there in favour of it. Regardless of their stance on the issue I recognize each and every one of them for taking the time to exercise their democratic right to be heard. I especially want to recognize those people from my constituency, Edmonton-Gold Bar, who attended the meeting and made their voices heard.

All of these people, either for or against the bill, should not be casually dismissed by those in power as left-wing nuts. The people at this meeting were nothing of the sort. They are concerned and hardworking Albertans, young and old, from every walk of life. I recognize all of them for coming out to the debate, especially in a province where their government is so quick to brand them as left-wing nuts because they are interested and concerned about something as important as protecting our public health care system. I believe the Premier and those who so casually dismiss these people as left-wing nuts owe them an apology.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

World Day for Water

MR. DUCHARME: Mr. Speaker, you and the other members have in front of you a glass of clean, refreshing Alberta water. We are fortunate in Alberta to have an abundance of this precious natural resource, and therefore I am very pleased to rise in the House today to draw the attention of the Legislature and Albertans to World Day for Water.

Water is enormously important to our health and our quality of life. Clean and abundant water supplies have long been recognized as one of the major determinants of good health. Today the overall quality of our drinking water in Alberta is high, and the incidence of water-borne diseases is among the lowest in the world. Keeping Alberta's water resources clean for both human consumption and recreational use remains a priority of our government and Albertans in general. Sadly, many people around the world do not have access to clean water, and the impact on their health is very serious. For this reason, the United Nations has selected the theme Water for the 21st Century in order to focus on the challenges for water resources for the next century.

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Water & Wastewater Association has identified March 22, 2000, as the World Day for Water celebration and to this end has asked that we as Albertans and, indeed, members of this Legislature reflect upon the importance of clean and abundant water in our lives and the importance of wise management of this valuable resource.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Managers of Volunteer Resources in Lethbridge

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to recognize Managers of Volunteer Resources in Lethbridge. This is a group of managers of the different volunteer associations that provide service through volunteer activity in the city of Lethbridge. On March 9 they had a function in the evening, which the Member for Lethbridge-West and I had invitations to attend, where they recognized their volunteers. Maria Craft and her association took that opportunity to provide an evening of recognition to the people who volunteer in our community and make Lethbridge the kind of community it is. So to Managers of Volunteer Resources I say thank you for everything you've done and thank you for recognizing the volunteers in our community.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Eating Disorders

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Eating disorders such as anorexia and bulimia are chronic debilitating illnesses that affect more than 30,000 Albertans. They interfere with an individual's ability to function in everyday life. Ten percent of those with eating disorders die within one year of the original diagnosis. For those who have been ill for 10 to 20 years, the mortality rate reaches 20 percent, approximately half by suicide and half by psychological collapse.

Eating disorders impact entire families. The illnesses impact all ages, even those as young as age 8. Early intervention has been shown to reduce the intensity of the illness and the mortality rate. Health promotion and prevention efforts are critical to reducing the prevalence of eating disorders. In fact, the establishment of a provincial eating disorder program is one of the recommendations of the children's mental health initiative action plan, which was developed by the Mental Health Board and supported by government.

This is why I was pleased when the Minister of Health and Wellness announced last week $4 million in funding to support a coordinated provincial program for Albertans at risk or who are suffering from these dreadful diseases and their families.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's with great pleasure that I'm able to recognize formally the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations, also known as NAARR.

NAARR's mission is to eliminate racial discrimination, to encourage children, youth, and adults to respect people of all colours, races, and creeds. To this end they facilitate public forums, workshops, and conferences, invite high-profile speakers, and host a series of initiatives around the March 21 International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. March 21 marks the anniversary of the 1960 Sharpeville massacre in South Africa, when scores of peaceful demonstrators against apartheid were wounded or killed.

At this time I'd like to commend the hard work of NAARR's coordinator, Charlene Hay, whom I introduced earlier to this Legislature. Charlene is very committed to the goal of ending racism, as is her husband Gordon, both of whom, I'm very honoured to say, are former graduate students of mine. In the spirit of raising awareness and changing attitudes, I recognize and praise Charlene and Gordon Hay and the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

National Women's College Basketball Championship

MRS. BURGNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Saturday, March 18, the Canadian Colleges Athletic Association hosted the national women's basketball championship at Mount Royal College, and the home team won. Mount Royal College Cougars won their first gold medal championship in a contest that went down to the wire with a final score of 61 to 58 over the College Montmorency Nomades. Paula Walker drained the final free throw of her collegiate career. A victory won on the free throw line was augmented by her own sister's success of scoring 21 points. Annie, Paula's sister, was recognized as the tournament's most valuable player.

In addition to this success, the Cougars will be hosting the national championship again in both 2001 and 2002. On Monday of this week the Minister of Learning and I met with the board, faculty, and students of Mount Royal College, and you can appreciate that the energy in that meeting was quite upbeat following the victory of the team.

Athletically, Mount Royal College is considered a leader in Canadian collegiate athletics, having recently been named the Canadian Colleges Athletic Association's overall sports supremacy champions for the first 25 years. My congratulations to the coach, Donovan Martin, the staff, the team, the faculty, and the college for this tremendous national championship.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Opposition House Leader on a point of order.

Point of Order Clarification

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Just quickly, my authority would be Beauchesne 417. I think it was the first or second exchange between the opposition leader and the Premier. The Premier in his answer talked about the agreement that was in fact the subject of a tabling earlier, and then you read out the text of the agreement. He said something to the effect that the Liberals passed up a chance to have nine hours of televised debate to take three hours. I just want to make this observation briefly.

I practised law long enough to do lots of negotiation, and it's usually not tremendously helpful for parties to go back into a negotiation and pick out something somebody said because that's in the context of offers and counteroffers. The point is: it resolved itself in an agreement that everybody signed.

But now that the Premier has gone there, I have to say, so that we're clear, that the offer of nine hours, as best I can recall and subject to confirmation or contrary advice from the Government House Leader, was on the basis that we would not have people able to speak for their block of time but that we would have perhaps everybody in this Assembly speaking for six minutes or eight minutes or something like that. That was the proposal. That would not have allowed, in my view, the kind of full development of analysis of the bill. It would be very different than what we get in the normal second reading debate. So I simply wanted to make it clear.

3:20

I also wanted to make a request that if we're going to have good-faith negotiations to try and make this place work well, it works best if people respect the fact that there's a give-and-take to negotiations. People take positions, and they adjust and compromise those positions. To the extent that people come in and start trying to use elements of a negotiation, it tends to undermine the process and make people less forthcoming.

That's the observation I wanted to make in a point of order. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously there's not really a point of order but a point of clarification.

While I would concur to some degree with the concept that's raised by the hon. Opposition House Leader, that one normally wants to have the opportunity to have discussions about the parameters of the House business with some degree of understanding that those discussions are between the parties, clearly this issue came up today as a result of cute tricks again being suffered on the House by the opposition in tabling invitations to debate. In that context it's quite understandable that the hon. Premier would refer back to the concept that had been offered of a nine-hour debate, three days of three hours.

Yes, the Opposition House Leader, for clarity, is quite correct that that would have resulted in a need to truncate the normal time for debate for certain members of the House if all members of the House were to be allowed to be heard, televised across the province on Access TV for the full second reading debate on Bill 11. However, that was offered as an option for discussion, obviously – because televising debates in this House is the parameter of the House, of course – and because it was felt that this is an important bill and that it was important that all Albertans have a chance and that all members actually have a chance to be heard on television.

The member is quite right. For other than the Premier, the Leader of the Opposition, the health minister, the opposition critic, and the ND House leader it would have resulted in a truncated period of time for each of the private members. For that reason, as he's indicated, they felt that that wouldn't allow them to develop their appropriate analysis. I'm of the view that there's not really a lot important to be said that can't be said in five or six good minutes. If the opposition doesn't agree with that, that's their prerogative. Obviously, without agreement on that, we couldn't bring it to that point.

I think this was an unusual situation where the opposition was raising particularly pointed concepts about debate, about debate being heard by all Albertans. In that context it was quite appropriate for the Premier to make the remark that he did relating to the offer of televised debate in the Legislature, which, of course, as the Opposition House Leader has said on occasion and has been quoted in this House as saying and is on record in Hansard as saying, is the most appropriate debating forum that we have – I've obviously paraphrased the words – and as the Leader of the Opposition was quoted today as well as having said on earlier occasions, challenging the Premier to debate in the House.

Clearly, the point is not a point of order. It's a point of clarification. I take his point with respect to our discussions. I think this was an unusual situation, quite an appropriate one for the comment to be made.

THE SPEAKER: I would view that as a point of clarification. I think both hon. members have had a chance to provide the background that was not afforded to them prior to their asking for unanimous request to the agreement. I think it was a useful exchange, useful for the benefit of all members.

The hon. Government House Leader on a point of order.

Point of Order Provoking Debate

MR. HANCOCK: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I rose on a point of order with respect to inappropriate comments. I would use Standing Order 23(j), "uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder," and the citation in Beauchesne which refers to the concept that one should not provoke debate. I raise it in the same manner that I raised it on a previous occasion when a member of the House rose and referred to a bill that's before this House as the private hospitals bill. The bill has a name. It's called the Alberta Health Care Protection Act. It's Bill 11.

Regardless of what type of spin or permutation the opposition might want to put on their questions, I think it's only appropriate, when they're using something which they're alleging to be the actual name of a bill, that they should be called to order if they do not use the actual name of the bill, because they're misleading Albertans by suggesting that there's a bill before the House called the private hospitals bill. There is not. There is the Health Care Protection Act. They may put whatever connotations they want on the content of that act while they're debating it, but it's improper, inappropriate, and certainly begs debate if in referring to the bill in the House they refer to it as the private hospitals bill.

MR. DICKSON: You know, it's fascinating to me that a little opposition of 16 people could be accused of massaging public opinion. We don't have the benefit of that $8 million Public Affairs Bureau.

On that point, Mr. Speaker, I'd just make this observation. It was Professor Peter Lown of the Alberta Law Reform Institute, who chaired the panel of eminent persons, whatever it was called, who said that an accredited surgical facility – and it's basically the same beast in the old Bill 38, version 1, version 2 as we see in the current Bill 11 – is in effect a private hospital. He could see through that. The reference was clearly to Bill 11. I think we're entitled to use the adjectives we choose as long as we mention the bill title.

I don't think any Albertans were confused by the reference, and in fact it was the government's own study that pointed out the semantical game that's being played by refusing to call an accredited surgical facility a private hospital.

Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you both very much, hon. gentlemen. The reality is that a bill does have a name. A bill does have a title. One can use a synonym or an adjective to describe it, and all that ever does is lead to provocations and a whole series of other things. In other words, it leads to a debate in the question period. Of course, the purpose of question period is not to have a debate. The purpose of question period is to raise a question.

I do believe there is some merit to the point raised by the hon. Government House Leader with respect to this and would like to advise all members of the House that I really wonder what this question period is going to be like as of April 4, when second reading is given to Bill 11. If one looks at the traditions in anticipation of what's on the Order Paper for that particular day, perhaps the environment in here will be quite different. So we can think about that and how we're going to deal with all that and read the rules.

This is not a lecture. This is just a suggestion or advice. Bill 11 does have a name, as all hon. members have names, and all hon. members are referred to that way. We don't denigrate the names of their constituencies or other individuals or anybody else. It's kind of an honourable thing.

Thank you very much.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Written Questions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given yesterday, it's my pleasure now to move that written questions which appear on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of Written Question 9.

[Motion carried]

3:30

Women's Shelters

Q9. Ms Olsen moved on behalf of Ms Blakeman that the following question be accepted.

How many women were turned away from all Alberta women's shelters in the fiscal year 1998-1999?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, today I'd like to table my response to Written Question 9 and a copy of the Women's Shelter Information System '98-99 statistical report.

Family violence is a horrific social issue that devastates families. Its harm is deeply felt and often long lasting. The effects of family violence upon children are particularly distressing. Statistics show that a child who witnesses abuse at home or is the victim of abuse is more likely to become an abusive adult. The cycle of abuse is perpetuated. We must do everything possible to prevent family violence from occurring and to break that cycle. We must clearly demonstrate that family violence will not be tolerated in our homes, our communities, or in our province. It is simply unacceptable.

Children's Services works to help and support children and families in abusive situations in a number of ways. For example, Children's Services provides funding to women's shelters. In Alberta there are 19 women's shelters, eight rural family violence prevention centres, and two second-stage housing programs. Women's shelters play a key role. Shelters provide temporary accommodation to victims who are fleeing an abusive home. If these facilities are full, we will work with our colleagues in Human Resources and Employment to find emergency accommodation for these family members. Sometimes victims choose to stay with family or friends instead, or they may choose to wait until accommodation is available at a shelter.

It is extremely important to remember that no one needs to return to an abusive situation. Alternative arrangements are always possible. When you examine the number of women who were turned away by a shelter, in other words not admitted to the shelter, because it was full, it's important to note that accommodation was found for them elsewhere. Again, I must emphasize that no one needs to return to an abusive situation.

Another way in which we're working to help victims of family violence is through the Protection against Family Violence Act, which became law last year. Through this law victims of family violence can obtain an emergency protection order, which is available 24 hours daily through police. An emergency protection order provides immediate protection and can enable victims to remain in the home, requiring the abuser to temporarily leave and find accommodation elsewhere. This measure is important for several reasons. First, it enables victims to remain in their communities and maintain their ties to schools, neighbours, and support systems. As well, staying in their own homes minimizes disruption to the lives of their children and provides for greater stability, security, and continuity.

This legislation is also important because it provides short-term and long-term protection. An emergency protection order available through police 24 hours daily provides immediate short-term protection. Long-term protection is provided through a Queen's Bench protection order, which can remain in effect for up to one year.

Another measure provided by the act is a warrant of entry. If someone is not allowed to see a family member and believes that that individual may be a victim of family violence, that family member can call police. Police can ask for a warrant of entry, which allows them to go into a family member's home and make sure that individual is safe. If the family member wants to leave or needs assistance, police can help. The Protection against Family Violence Act has provided us yet another tool for helping children and families.

Children's Services funding for women's shelters in fact has increased since 1997 by nearly $2 million. This year, a total of $11 million has been allocated, and approximately 95 percent of this funding is going directly to the shelters.

Education and prevention are also key components of our work in reducing the incidence of family violence in Alberta. Through 18 child and family services authorities located throughout the province, prevention and education initiatives continue. The office of the prevention of family violence is also offering training materials and opportunities for people to learn more about this most horrific kind of example of societal issues.

With all these initiatives, Mr. Speaker, and the help and support of our community we will ensure that children and families in abusive situations obtain the assistance they need to deal with family violence and build a better life.

THE SPEAKER: Before calling on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood to conclude the debate, did I hear the hon. Minister of Children's Services correctly? Did the hon. minister say that she had tabled a response?

MS EVANS: I also tabled copies of a report that was supplementary to it. It was, Mr. Speaker, the 1998-99 statistics from the women's shelters, that were released last fall, that in fact addressed the question.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. minister, this is a fine constitutional point. Did the hon. minister table the response to the question?

MS EVANS: Oh, yes, I did.

THE SPEAKER: Well, then, hon. minister, I have to tell you that that was inappropriate because the House still has not dealt with the question. But that's okay. We'll get through this.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood to conclude the debate.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will certainly thank the hon. minister for providing us with the data. We'll get a copy of that tabling right away.

[Written Question 9 carried]

THE SPEAKER: Now it's most appropriate, hon. minister, to table the response.

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I would move and table the response as provided.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you so much.

head: Motions for Returns

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given yesterday, it's now my pleasure to move that motions for returns appearing on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of Motion for a Return 11, Motion for a Return 12, and Motion for a Return 23.

[Motion carried]

School Property Tax

M11. Mr. Gibbons moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a breakdown of projections of provincial revenues collected from the school property tax for the fiscal years 2000-01, 2001-02, and 2002-03 by residential/farm property, nonresidential, and linear assessment classes.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to move an amendment to Motion for a Return 11. Alberta Municipal Affairs collects assessment data for school requisitioning purposes according to the requirements of the School Act and the Municipal Government Act. Section 158(1.3) of the School Act requires that there be one tax rate for residential and farmland properties and one tax rate for nonresidential properties, as defined in section 297(1) of the Municipal Government Act. Section 297(1) of the Municipal Government Act includes linear assessment in its definition of nonresidential assessment class.

Beginning in the 1999 tax year the School Act no longer allows a separate education tax for linear or property assessment. Consequently, education property tax revenue projection data are only available in residential, farmland, and nonresidential assessment classes. Further, Alberta Learning's total education revenue projections are available for public review in its three-year business plan.

Therefore, the amended Motion for a Return 11 would read as follows:

that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a breakdown of projections of provincial revenues collected from the school property tax for the fiscal years 2000-01, 2001-02, and 2002-03 by residential/farm property and nonresidential assessment classes.

If Motion for a Return 11 is accepted as amended, the following options are available. I can provide the immediate tabling information, or we can table it 30 days from the motion for a return. But I can table it today if that is accepted.

THE SPEAKER: Before recognizing the hon. Opposition House Leader with respect to this matter, we do have a policy with respect to amendments and notification of questioners with respect to the amendments. This is something that hon. members have been following with a great deal of diligence in recent years.

Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, you must have a copy of this amendment for everyone, and I take it there was no conveyance of this amendment to the hon. originator of the question.

MR. GIBBONS: No.

3:40

THE SPEAKER: Okay. So we've got another procedural – there is a policy.

Hon. Opposition House Leader, do you want to raise a point further to this or just point out the policy?

MR. DICKSON: Sir, you anticipated precisely what I was going to raise.

THE SPEAKER: Okay.

If I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, this concludes the debate. But we have a procedural – it's not a significant procedural problem, but it is a courtesy procedure that we have here. Can you shake your head one way or the other, that you think it may or may not be okay, before I call it? You don't have to say anything. I'm not going to put you on the spot.

The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I have an opportunity to resolve the conundrum here. Given that I've erred in terms of the procedure, I being the House leader have to take responsibility for it. We'll ask the hon. minister to reject the question. He's already indicated that he has the information, and he's offered to table the information tomorrow.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning to conclude the debate.

MR. GIBBONS: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I'll be pleased to accept the information tomorrow. I understand what he was saying, that he has the amendment, and I'll accept that.

[Motion for a Return 11 lost]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

Education Tax Review Committee

M12. Mr. Gibbons moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all reports and studies prepared by or for the education tax review committee between January 1, 1998, and February 17, 2000.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: First of all, I'd apologize for the procedural error, and we will try and right that tomorrow, if that is acceptable.

Regarding Motion for a Return 12. Madam Speaker, on researching this request, my officials advise that this material has been the subject of two freedom of information requests. In fact, much of the information that the Member for Edmonton-Manning is seeking is available in these past FOIP requests. I'm pleased to make the information gathered by Municipal Affairs in response to those requests available for review by the hon. member, and this material can be viewed by contacting the freedom of information co-ordinator for Alberta Municipal Affairs, who would be pleased to schedule an appointment.

In addition, my staff has also advised that a third FOIP request for this information is currently under way, and I'd be pleased to commit to the hon. member that this information would also be available for viewing by appointment once it's been released to the applicant.

In the meantime, Madam Speaker, I'll provide the member with a copy of the committee's interim report, which is a culmination of the reports and studies prepared by the committee during its initial review. This report is also available for all Albertans to review on our Municipal Affairs web site at www.gov.ab.ca/ma/corp/educationcomm.htm.

Madam Speaker, as much of the information the hon. member is seeking through this motion is available for public viewing, the government rejects Motion 12.

MR. GIBBONS: I'm hearing two things: it's been rejected on behalf of a tabling or a submission, but I am able to look at it and peruse it. This particular copy I'm talking about is this one right here that I FOIPed last year and got 13 severed pages. I FOIPed again. I know I've FOIPed a third time, and it's in process right now, but the motion was put in a number of months ago. If I'm understanding this correctly, I am going to be receiving something.

The provincial government has an obligation to actually fulfill and not just for perusing but to actually have this information out so that we can research it, do our study, and we can answer questions for those in Alberta that call us instead of calling the government. It is a very important item. It's a very important document. I believe that three MLAs are working on it diligently, and even if it did start a year ago March, there was no review actually submitted from that. I also want to mention that this review committee has gone out and hired people to do things, and we wouldn't mind having a report on that.

So I will sit down, Madam Speaker.

[Motion for a Return 12 lost]

Education Property Tax

M23. Mr. Gibbons moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all reports and studies prepared by or for the MLA Education Property Tax Committee between March 1, 1999, and March 8, 2000, on the provincial education property tax.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Madam Speaker, as previously noted in my response to Motion for a Return 12, much of the information that has been requested is subject to the past few FOIP requests, and the one that's currently under way is available. Once again I'm prepared to make information from the past few FOIP requests and the one pending available for public viewing by appointment through the FOIP co-ordinator of my department.

Therefore, the government rejects Motion for a Return 23.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning to close debate.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I just want to mention that the reason we need this is because of a number of letters we've sent back and forth, and this is doing my diligent job for the citizens of Alberta. It must be important enough information that we see on the Order Paper, under Motions Other than Government Motions, Motion 518 from the Member for Medicine Hat. It reads:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to explore alternative means of funding education other than through municipal property taxes and to begin discussions with municipal governments to develop new cost-sharing formulas that could be implemented after the provincial government removes requisitions for school taxes.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the hon. Member for Medicine Hat, as he spoke at a committee meeting the other night in room 512 with AUMA, is looking for a structural answer. I do believe that the hon. minister probably is, too, because he spoke quite enlighteningly at that particular meeting.

You know, for the interest of Albertans and the minister, he must be concerned enough that his whole management staff were listening to the AUMA presentation the other evening in room 512. For the record, that was on March 12 at 6 p.m. The AUMA gave a great presentation. I think they're concerned enough that in their latest newsletter they do have quite an issue on that particular item.

We want to emphasize that this committee has been in place since March of 1999. The first report came out in September 1999, but at that particular time all we noticed was a little bit of tinkering and capping. Instead of freezing the tax at a particular level, we should be coming out, I would suggest, with a much speedier answer on this one, considering that we're reading in the paper now how the city of Edmonton, the mayor of Edmonton, who'd never speak against this government, is coming out. Actually, yesterday on the radio I heard that he said that this government has a tiger by the tail with the health bill. Well, they're going to have a lion by the tail with this education tax.

You know, all Albertans are asking for is some answers. Like I mentioned before, there have been people hired by the committee to consult on this, and we'd like to be able to read, share, and help develop something for the future.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

[Motion for a Return 23 lost]

3:50

head: Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders

head: Second Reading

Bill 206

School (Students' Code of Conduct) Amendment Act, 2000

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

MR. COUTTS: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to rise and bring forward Bill 206, which will amend the School Act to include a student code of conduct.

Specifically, Madam Speaker, Bill 206 adds to section 44 of the School Act, which defines the powers and the responsibilities of school boards. I say that it adds to that section because the school boards already have some powers and responsibilities in making sure that there is obedience in school, but this will add to the school boards' ability to come up with, and hopefully involve everyone in making, a code of conduct for each individual school.

Bill 206 will require each school board to solicit input from the relevant stakeholders that are involved in the school. That means the students as well as the staff, being teachers and principals and the administrative staff as well, if they wish, and parent councils in creating a code of conduct for their individual school.

Madam Speaker, after this extensive consultation process, each school would be required to have their code of conduct also put in writing. This code would set minimum standards of behaviour and the consequences for violating them. In essence, the code is a written agreement amongst educational stakeholders in the community about what is acceptable in our schools and what is not.

Madam Speaker, when the rules of the school are clear to everyone, then students can focus on learning and teachers can focus on teaching. Presently the rules that have been set in schools are in some cases unclear and also inconsistently enforced. Just recently we have heard a number of reports of incidents, but one of the most prime examples was a week or two ago with the greater St. Albert Catholic school board's actions or their inactions in dealing with a student sexual assault case. The board was really unsure on how to proceed in that case, and in the end far too much time was spent in making a decision. The decision also left many students and teachers and parents confused about the rules of the school, and it disrupted the entire proceedings of the school for a good length of time. That's not the best use of students' time, and it's not the best use of teachers' time.

As I have stated, a code of conduct is a tool that can be used by our schools, and it certainly could have been a tool that the St. Albert Catholic board could have used to set levels of acceptable behaviour and the sanctions that students will expect if they violate it. The code of conduct is a tool that schools can use to act quickly when the school environment is disrupted and to rectify the situation. But, Madam Speaker, the code of conduct that I am proposing also takes into account that students are not commodities that can be thrown away when they become a problem. Included in this bill are alternative penalty options that allow disruptive students to pursue their studies and also get any counseling they need to help them with their problems.

As well as dealing with serious problems by including the relevant stakeholders in the community, we will ensure that the values and unique circumstances of each community in Alberta are represented in the code. Madam Speaker, what I'm talking about are communities taking control of their schools.

I first ran across this statement about communities taking control of their schools from a retired staff sergeant who now resides in my community. In talking one day, he let me know how he ran his detachments in small towns. He said: I've often instructed my staff to take control of their community. What that means is not to run roughshod over the community and its people but to work with the community, to understand it and work within the law to enforce what you must do in that community in the name of protecting society, to help the community understand what will and will not be tolerated, to have his officers reach out into that community to accomplish the goals of the community right from young people up to senior citizens so that continuity and progress are made in educating everyone, so that in the name of safety, in the name of security, and in the respect of one another we can make and maintain a better community.

Bill 206 will help every school in Alberta maintain a learning atmosphere which is safe and conducive to the learning process and free from unnecessary disruption. As well, the code of conduct will communicate to parents and the community that unacceptable behaviour by students will not be tolerated. Madam Speaker, this takes us back to the key question that needs to be asked. Are our schools safe? By and large the answer is yes. Schools in Alberta are safe. They are also caring places and are places for students to learn, yet where the problem lies is in the severity of danger and the pressure our students face. This is why there is great timeliness in introducing this bill into the House.

Recent occurrences of school violence—for example, just recently in Toronto, Ontario, three people, two of them students, were wounded in a gunfight in a local high school. In the United States between 1993 and early 1999 there were 186 school shooting deaths. In Surrey, British Columbia, earlier this month a 14-year-old student jumped off a bridge over the Fraser River. In his suicide note he said that he could not tolerate being relentlessly picked on. He was tormented at school and called a geek, four-eyes, and a fag. In Mount Morris, Michigan, a six-year-old boy walked into an elementary school and shot and killed another six year old with whom he had just had an earlier quarrel. Madam Speaker, right in my own constituency just this last week a headline in the local newspaper read: knife found on student at school. The incident was looked after, but it was rather disturbing to everyone in the community.

So, Madam Speaker, what does this tell us? This tells us that we must go back to the key questions on what is needed and what are the things that should be asked. We're seeing more and more in the news and on television, as I've just recounted, that our communities have an increase in the severity of school violence, problems associated with drug and alcohol abuse by students, and criminal acts committed by students.

In pointing out some of the occurrences of school violence, I did not mention the one that we're all so very well aware of. We all know of the tragic events that occurred in the W.R. Myers school in Taber that took the life of one student and injured another. This event that ended a vibrant young man's life so unfortunately also showed Albertans that these acts of extreme violence are not isolated just to American schools, but they are prevalent here at home as well.

4:00

Madam Speaker, what I do know is that although we may not be able to predict when violence breaks out or occurs, we can take and should take preventative actions. This means that we can first promote positive behaviour in our students and make it clear that we will not tolerate negative behaviour like bullying, harassment, or peer pressure, which sow the seeds of extreme violence. This is where a code of conduct could be an effective tool.

There is also data from across Canada that illustrates this increased school violence, as I had indicated earlier, and a 1995 study sponsored by the Solicitor General of Canada showed that Ontario schools reported an increase in school violence of 150 percent from 1989 to 1991. So it is appropriate that, as we have just heard in the last few days, the Ontario government is looking at a crackdown on student misconduct and is putting together a provincial code of conduct that they want all schools to abide by.

It's also well known in our own province that the ATA reported that in 1992, 50 percent of teachers had experienced some form of physical or emotional abuse. Of that number, 18 percent said that their schools had no policy to deal with abuse, and 62 percent did not know if their schools did have a policy. These statistics are just a few examples of why a code of conduct is needed, and when the rules are clearly defined, schools can act in an appropriate manner if they are broken.

Madam Speaker, a code of conduct is also needed to give schools the ability to act swiftly and with certainty against school disruption. A code of conduct will allow boards to get involved in making sure that the rules are set by an individual school, because they need to be clearly defined, and the actions they could take of a preventative nature could also clearly be defined.

With a clear code of conduct, situations can be resolved immediately and not linger on. A clear message can be sent to all students that they can have faith in not only their own decisions but the decisions that were put together by the principals, staff, teachers, and their parents, which will protect them, keep them in a safe environment, and will not let them down. Students go to school to learn and to grow and should not be subject to the kind of disorder that occurs in many schools.

The code of conduct proposed in Bill 206 will make sure that students who perpetrate sexual assaults will get the help they need to have a chance to rehabilitate themselves and become responsible citizens.

What I'm proposing, Madam Speaker, is a balanced approach to school discipline and student responsibility. A code of conduct stabilizes the school environment, removes students unwilling to follow the rules, and promotes responsible behaviour. I think if there's one thing that needs to be perpetuated throughout our schools, right from elementary up to high school, it's that for every rule that's broken, you have to accept responsibility for doing that. Responsible behaviour will go a long way to ensuring that in Alberta each student will have a quality education free from disruptions which hinder and interfere with the educational process.

Yet on the other side of the balance are the problem students. When they're a problem in a school, the question always arises: do they not also deserve an education? If they don't want an education, it's our responsibility to try and make them see the light and get a good education. However, if they continue to violate rules created by the community, they must pay the consequences. We're not talking in the school code of conduct about the breaking of the laws of our land, because we have a system in place to handle that. What we're talking about is making sure there are appropriate rules in place within our community and within the school community. When someone violates the rules and they must pay the consequences, we must do everything we can to find a place for these kids.

This balanced approach to student responsibility and discipline will draw much of its strength from the consultation process that will drive this code of conduct. Essentially, it is important for students to view the document as legitimate. With input from students on what they deem as acceptable behaviour and acceptable punishment, they would be more inclined to respect and follow the code of conduct. This would create a spirit of co-operation in pursuing quality education and effective discipline. We must remember that students are intelligent, thoughtful, and capable of determining what is right and what is wrong.

Through consultation a code of conduct can empower students in their pursuit of education because it eliminates unwanted distractions. The code can also be a reflection of the values of the student and be something they can look to as theirs. In other words, there's ownership in this. It's something they helped create, and possibly they will be more inclined to support it. In the end, what will be created is a document all stakeholders will have a vested interest in and will be able to communicate to the community in a unique way.

Madam Speaker, communities need to take back their schools for the benefit of everyone. With the strength of the community behind them and following the code of conduct within the bill, school boards can rest assured that they won't have to make difficult decisions, as I pointed out earlier, as in the situation in St. Albert.

I've got to say that many school boards across the province have said to me in my consultations: "We already have a code of conduct. Will we have to do something more? Will we have to do something that is mandated by the province?" My answer to that has been no, that you can come up with your own code of conduct. If you have one in place that's working effectively, working very well at this point in time, that's great. Keep it, use it, put it in written form so that everyone understands it, make it work, and make it continue to work for those schools. For those that don't, this would be a good exercise for all schools to go through. Maybe as students go through grade by grade and learn that a code of conduct will help make their school a better place and a safer place, they will grow up to extend that experience into their daily life, so not only did they take control of their school, but they also learned to grow up and take control of their community and be responsible individuals in society.

With that, I'd like to thank all my colleagues for listening to my comments today, and I urge them to please support this bill for the betterment of our students and our school communities. Thank you.

4:10

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thanks, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and make comments on Bill 206, School (Students' Code of Conduct) Amendment Act, 2000. I guess when I first saw the bill, my first question was: how many school boards in the province don't have a code of conduct policy in place? It's a question I would ask the mover of the bill maybe to address at a later time. In preparing the bill, I'm certain that that information was gathered, so I would be curious as to how many boards don't have a code of conduct. I ask the question because I know that a code of conduct policy has been the subject of at least one of the Alberta School Boards Association's publications. It has also been a subject of publications by the Alberta Teachers' Association, and there have been a wide variety of community groups involved in making sure there are code of conduct standards in our schools. So I would like to know from the member's research just exactly how many boards are going to be affected by this legislation.

I guess one of the other reactions I had to it, Madam Speaker, is that it lists and will list now in the act a laundry list of abhorrent behaviours – physical violence, sexual assault, sexual abuse, vandalism, the use of a firearm, the possession of a narcotic, the possession of alcohol or tobacco – and it stands in such sharp contrast to what was tabled yesterday in the Legislature by the Minister of Learning.

Yesterday the Minister of Learning tabled a document entitled Safe, Secure & Caring Schools in Alberta, which had been sponsored in part by his department but involved a wide range of groups in the province in putting it together. As you page through that document, there's very much an accent on the positive and a desire to talk in terms of positive actions that can be taken to create a safe and a caring and a secure school environment. It ranges far beyond a listing of the kinds of actions that we see in Bill 206.

One part of that document that I noted with particular care was a section that was devoted to: how do you create a caring and a safe and a secure school environment? They listed the characteristics. They started off, of course, with caring. How do we have schools where youngsters feel that they are cared for, that they're respected? They had a number of really good, positive suggestions: that we spend some time in schools celebrating students' success, that there be a systematic celebration of students' success in schools, that there be an opportunity provided in schools for all students to exercise leadership skills, and that there be attempts to build team and school spirit. Again, a number of suggestions as to how that environment can be made more caring and students can feel that they are part of it.

A number of years ago I had the opportunity to study under Paul Gump at an American university. Paul had written a book called Big School, Small School, and although that book is very dated now, it had some information that has relevance to this very problem. One of the things that Gump and his associates found was that the size of school makes a difference in student behaviour. For instance, in small high schools students are forced to take part in more activities. That is, they have to exercise leadership if there's going to be a yearbook; they have to be part of it. If there's going to be a basketball team, they have to be part of it. So there's pressure on small schools for students to become involved, and that same pressure doesn't exist in large high schools.

In large high schools the people that are on the basketball team, the people that are involved in student council are really the stars, and it's very, very possible for students to survive in one of our large high schools and to be quite anonymous. A number of those high schools, I know for a fact, have taken actions to make sure that they re-create in those large high schools the advantages of some of the small schools. By having students be registered in houses, they are identified with a smaller group within the building, or they're identified with teams or identified with teaching teams. Again, taking actions to make sure that students cannot be left to feel anonymous, that they know someone, that they know teachers, that they know other students and that those students are supportive of them. The requirement in the book that part of a safe, secure environment is one where students feel cared for is an important one.

Another of their listings was that a safe and a caring school makes sure that commonly held values and beliefs are made public; for instance, the very notion of civility, that we treat and talk to each other in a civil manner. As long as they're in the building or on the school grounds, that's the kind of behaviour that is expected of them: that they will treat each other civilly, that they'll treat each with dignity and respect.

Some of the values that cause young people trouble are the very values that we promote. We promote, for instance, loyalty. We indicate that loyalty is a good thing. When loyalty is applied in a peer situation, that can lead to difficulties. By making public the values and the beliefs that the school supports or that should be supported in a caring school, I think it helps students better understand the kinds of value dilemmas they may find themselves in and be better prepared to meet them when they arise.

They called for respect for democratic values, rights, and responsibilities. We do this in a number of situations in schools, but it has to be done systematically. As Canadians we're all guaranteed under the Charter of Rights the freedom of religion, the freedom of speech, the freedom of thought, the freedom of belief, and the freedom of association. Those freedoms are precious, but they are bestowed on all citizens of this country, and schools and students have to make those freedoms evident. They have to make sure that students know what their rights are and what is expected of them in terms of their treatment of other individuals.

The member previous mentioned the respect for law and order, and there are a number of really good things going on in a number of high schools. The officer-in-the-school program, which I'm familiar with in this city, I think is one of those programs that contributes to a safe and a caring school. When officers are housed in the school, they get to know the students. They're part of that student culture, and they can help youngsters as they work through some of the difficulties they face in growing up in our society, those teenage years.

I would be surprised if there are many schools in this province, at the junior high school level at least, that don't have some sort of school handbook that students have helped compile, with the help of teachers and parents, which sets out fairly carefully the code of conduct and rules and regulations that govern what's expected in terms of behaviour in the school. Again, I think it's a positive move in terms of making the school environment secure.

One of the important aspects of a safe school, which I think has been mentioned, is that there are clear and consistent behavioural expectations; that is, making sure that students know the consequences of their behaviour, that if they engage in certain kinds of activity, the consequences are firmly established. I think when that is done in conjunction with students, with their parents, community leaders, teachers, principals, and administrative personnel, it has much better acceptance and doesn't lead to inappropriate behaviour on the part of students but also on the part of people supervising those students. This particular bill focuses on student conduct, but there's also an expectation in a number of those handbooks that I spoke of for staff and administrative behaviour, the kinds of things students should be able to expect when they're being dealt with by those in authority.

4:20

An important part of a caring and secure and safe school is respect for individual differences, and those differences of course are more acute in some settings than others. In Mill Woods we have two high schools that deal with a very large multicultural population. To the credit of both of those high schools, they have exercised a continued effort to make sure that students that enter the doors of those buildings are fully apprised of our obligation to others and are made aware of the impact of racial discrimination and the consequences of racial discrimination.

They have an ongoing set of annual activities. They had a special celebration of the UN declaration of human rights, the 50th anniversary of that declaration. When you go to the ceremonies and to the educational kinds of activities they stage to promote racial harmony in those schools, you can't help but come away impressed. The most impressive part about it for me is always that it's student driven, that students are the ones who are trying to make certain that they and their colleagues are fully aware of the consequences of discrimination. They do a good job, I think, in terms of education and try to help make people who do discriminate understand the source of their actions, why they behave in that way. I think they do a really good job in helping people understand that we have to respect individual differences, not only respect individual differences but celebrate those differences.

A safe and secure school will have effective anger management strategies in place, and we've seen that in terms of peer mediation. We have teams of students who help resolve conflicts amongst students. There will be a whole range of strategies that are employed by teachers and supported by students, from time-outs in classrooms when anger becomes a problem to the involvement, which is part of this bill, at a different level with counseling and counseling activities.

One of the most important aspects of a safe, secure, and caring school is the setting in which that school finds itself and the conclusion that those kinds of schools are best created when they're involved with the community, when there are a wide variety of community members and parents who are involved with the school and helping to make it a better place, when the efforts of the school are supported. In fact, in many cases there's leadership from outside the school in terms of making it a good place for students to come to feel good about themselves and to feel good about the kinds of learning activities and extracurricular activities they're going to be engaged in.

Part of the problem in terms of creating safe and secure schools I think comes from the very way we organize learning in the province. It's curious that we send high school students and junior high school students out of our communities at the very time when you would hope that there would be community pressure on those youngsters to meet social norms. We put them in buses or let them drive cars and send them across the city, where they can be completely anonymous, where there's no obligation to community members. It's a bit of an anomaly when we do that and keep close to us, of course for other reasons, very good reasons, the youngest children, probably the children that you could send away from the community without fearing that they were going to get into difficulties or not act responsibly. In part, I think, we bring some of the problems on ourselves just in the way that we organize learning instruction in the province.

I've looked at Bill 206 and have talked about it briefly with some of my colleagues. We're going to support the bill, but as I said at the outset, I guess I would have felt much more comfortable had this been part of a positive recommendation that the School Act would require school boards to have a policy on supporting safe, secure, and caring schools. That certainly would have been my preference.

I do thank the member for bringing it forward. It's a problem, has been a problem for a long time. It's been addressed by a number of groups and parents and Albertans in a variety of ways. Although we hear the horror stories – and some of them are extremely tragic – our schools are very, very safe places for our students when you consider the number of schools that we have in this province, over 1,800. If you consider the number of students that are involved in those buildings, we really do have an environment across the province where, for the most part, people can send their children and young adults off to school feeling secure that they're going to be cared for and that they won't come to a bad end.

With those comments I'd conclude. I would be interested if the member who proposed Bill 206 does have information on the number of boards who don't have policies on school conduct in place and could share that with me.

Thanks, Madam Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm happy to rise today and enter into the debate on Bill 206. I would like to start by congratulating my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod for sponsoring this timely bill.

Madam Speaker, I would like to start by saying that in Alberta the vast majority of kids are responsible and caring young members of society. It is easy to forget how good our kids actually are when we are bombarded by news of violence occurring in schools committed by young people. I want to make it clear that the majority of the violence is occurring in the U.S. and not in Canada. School violence is much more prevalent south of the border. I think that probably 99 percent of kids in this province have minimal or no problems with respect for the rules, but it is that 1 percent of kids we must deal with because they have a devastating consequence on the other 99 percent. It is with this understanding that I want to proceed.

4:30

The code of conduct that the hon. member is proposing will go a long way to ensure that Alberta schools are safe. It's about promoting respect and civility and community rights and responsibilities, and that means that students can go to school and receive a high-quality education without the threat of violence. I wholeheartedly agree with the hon. member's comments that creating a code of conduct and a safe school works best when they are generated not only by school staff but also by students, parents, and representatives from the community. Madam Speaker, this way a true consensus can be developed about what everyone wants their school to be like and the rules everyone is willing to uphold to make this happen. This also makes all members of the community stakeholders in their schools and in the futures of the students in them.

Madam Speaker, I believe that violence amongst youth is placing a lot of pressure on schools, students, parents, and the community at large. Although I do not think there is a general lawlessness amongst our young people, there are many things that need to be done to improve the state of the school environment and to promote good behaviour. School violence – and not just when it erupts into a criminal act – is the single most disruptive factor in the school environment. This includes things like bullying, harassment, taunting, or excessive peer pressure, and my colleague was correct in stating that these acts sow the seeds for future violent outbursts.

Statistics from a 1997 study by the National Crime Prevention Council of Canada show that bullying on the playground occurs once every seven minutes and in the classroom once every 25 minutes. According to the council, bullying is an early behaviour that can contribute to the development of antisocial behaviour patterns, which in turn are causing violence and aggressiveness in our society. As well, school violence, on top of creating an environment of fear, diverts energy and resources from instruction and the learning process. Too often those not interested in learning get the attention of school staff to the detriment of students genuinely there to learn.

I think what the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod wants to see from his code of conduct is a promotion of respect amongst students for each other and for the rules of the school. Respect is a small word with a huge impact that is getting lost in society today. As a member of the Task Force on Children at Risk I share the vision of the Member for Livingstone-Macleod and hope that all members will join me to support that vision. But, Madam Speaker, we as a government must also show our respect for students by ensuring that every jurisdiction has good facilities and resources, access to the latest technologies and to every opportunity to succeed. I think we are then showing our respect. This is illustrated in programs like the Alberta initiative for school improvement, which creates a community-based partnership for school improvement.

The journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. Each school jurisdiction consults with parents, teachers, school administrators, and others on ways to improve schools and identify school needs. Jurisdictions then develop programs in consultation with the school community to best meet the needs of the students. It is important to put the decision-making powers in the hands of the young people. Children need to have a voice and be able to participate on issues that affect them. Who best understands school issues but those parents, students, and teachers who are there every day?

Our commitment to our students was also illustrated in the provincial budget, where our government earmarked $4.6 billion for education for 2000-2001. This includes $160 million to renovate and build new schools. In fact, spending on education will increase by $776 million over the next three years. These government commitments are the foundation on which schools can build a safe and stable and productive learning environment. Yet there is also an onus on students and school staff to do their part in creating a safe and stable learning environment, and this is where a code of conduct can be implemented. Institutionalizing a code of conduct demonstrates a commitment to violence prevention and helps students and teachers feel safe. When the code clearly explains school rules and sanctions for violence, everyone knows what is expected from them and what to expect from their schools.

A big problem with the current codes of conduct or policies on school discipline is that there is no consistency in their application. Students and for that matter teachers are not clear on what the rules are and how to deal with someone who breaks them. Madam Speaker, there is sometimes a contradiction between school policies and school practices. We know that every school in Alberta has a comprehensive set of policies dealing with violence and other offences, but enforcement of those policies may be uneven. This can lead to a situation where teachers do not feel supported in imposing discipline, where students do not feel protected by the policies, and those students prone to disruptive behaviours do not think that they will be punished.

I know that the school environment is, by and large, a safe and caring place for young people to develop and further their education. Schools are places where students are surrounded by their peers and educated by hardworking and very caring teachers. Yet problems do arise in this environment, and when they do, rules need to be clear, concise, and action needs to be taken swiftly.

Madam Speaker, I am drawn, like my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod, to the events that occurred in the greater St. Albert Catholic school division. This school division had a code of conduct for its students, but that code had holes in it. There is no way that the two students involved, the attacker and the victim, should have been in the same school. In the end the school board did rectify the situation, but far, far too much time had passed. The emotional pain experienced by the victim could have been far lessened if the appropriate course of action had been followed in the first place. Both students should have been allowed to get on with their lives but in different schools. So there is obviously a problem with the current way of doing things if situations like that can happen.

Madam Speaker, I am happy to see that Bill 206 takes into account the need of all young people to be educated. It would do society no good if students like the one who committed the sexual assault are simply marginalized. I'm aware that some students simply cannot function in the regular school environment. They may be too disruptive or have broken too many rules to be allowed in the classroom. These are the students that need alternative methods of education and counseling. It is through this education and counseling that some students can turn around their disruptive ways and behaviours. Many of the so-called problem students suffer from low self-esteem and engage in self-destructive behaviour as a call for help. If these students can be reached, we should make every effort to do so.

Madam Speaker, this is a way of making schools safer. First we must establish clear, concise rules for everyone in the school. Then if the students choose to break those rules, they may be dealt with quickly so that the learning environment has as little disruption as possible, but we must not disregard those students who need help.

What it boils down to is keeping our schools safe for Alberta students. We want to do everything we can to prevent violence, because once it occurs, we cannot fix the damage. A student code of conduct may not ensure that outbursts of violence like what occurred in Taber never happen again, but what it will do is work to stop the roots of violence, things like bullying, harassment, or excessive peer pressure. A code of conduct will make a clear statement to students that those things are unacceptable in Alberta schools. Madam Speaker, a code will also give schools the ability to swiftly rectify any disruptive situation that may occur in our schools, ensuring that those disruptions are kept to a minimum and do not escalate in frequency and severity.

I will finish by again commending my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod for putting forth much-needed legislation in Alberta. I also commend him for promoting safety in the schools through a balanced look at school discipline and student responsibility.

Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.
4:40

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to speak, as usual, to both sides of the bill. First, I'd like to fully understand the need for it, particularly in light of a publication that the hon. Minister of Learning tabled yesterday in the Legislature. It makes some fascinating reading. For one who has two children that are just going out of the public school system into the postsecondary school system, it makes very interesting reading.

I'm also a past Cub master of some years with, most recently, nine years of coaching hockey and 11 years of outdoor soccer as coach and 10 years of indoor soccer. Although I do not have directly related education experience in the proper sense, I have some experience in guiding young people, particularly in areas where violence is very, very close to what you do in sport. You want to minimize that. With that experience I look at this particular bill and say en Francais, bien sûr. I mean: of course. Why would you not have a code of conduct?

Well, I took the trouble to speak to two principals, one elementary and one high school. They said: "Well, of course we have policies and the guiding principles, but we don't always have it written. We don't have it written out that thou shall do this and this is the line." Quite frankly, from my experience being a parent and a leader of children, oftentimes the same occurrence under a different set of circumstances is punishable by a totally different means. Whether the child had the intent to do something or had some forethought has to be taken into consideration. The other instance, of course, is: what is the current situation? What is the effect on that child? If you're not about to have any effect whatever, then save the trouble of embarrassing yourself and the child, because all you're doing is pushing that child farther and farther and farther away from the authority figure and from understanding that the boundaries are there to be exercised with a certain amount of caution.

Now, I have to commend the member opposite for bringing the bill forward, in any event, because it does give one the opportunity to think about these things and to speak of them, but I'm not too sure that legislation is in order. The member himself went through part of his speech to explain that we already have a perfectly good criminal law system. He explained that that was not the intent of this bill and then went on to say that the bill is needed. Well, a bill is a law. A bill does have the force of law, and quite frankly I'm not too sure how this set of principles or written policies would not and could not be construed as same.

If one wishes to set boundaries, those boundaries should be set fairly firmly, and it should be clearly recognized when those boundaries are crossed. To set it down in this hard fashion leaves this member a little less than impressed with the method that this bill intends to lay out. The publication Supporting Safe, Secure & Caring Schools in Alberta, filed just yesterday in the Legislature, is by far a better approach. It cares. It takes into consideration an individual child and what is fundamentally best for the child in the school setting. It clearly recognizes that a child misbehaving affects the entire class or the entire school and has to be in some manner dealt with.

It has been this father's experience that example in actions and reactions to events is the best teacher of children and certainly in assisting a child in recognizing the need for boundaries. If you've ever as a parent had 10 or 15 children in the backyard and thrown a ball or a toy or whatever it happens to be, instantly a game ensues. You'll note, if you're observant, that rules are applied. They change, yes. They may amount to that you can't touch this fence and you can't do that and you have to jump twice to get here and there, all of those sorts of things in children's games. Those are boundaries that are set, and they recognize that. If there is to be any kind of guideline or support structure, I suggest to you that if it's not contained in the volume that I described earlier, it certainly is outlined and does seem to give the impression that it has at least been considered.

Now, in this member's experience, assisting that child in finding their way and channeling that energy to a better purpose is a much, much better way of dealing with a problem or with a problem child. This member's experience is that if you have cast the rules so stiff and so hard, it becomes a debate as to whether it crossed the line or not, totally disregarding the circumstances of the child and/or the institution that has written the rules. I am a little leery in supporting this legislation, but I don't see any malice of intent at all, and I expect that when it gets to the board level and down to the school level, the appropriate choices will be made, as they invariably have been made in most instances in this province to date.

In closing, it is clear that these kinds of boundaries, if you will, and the consequences for crossing those boundaries have been laid out from the first time there was a school and a pupil in the province of Alberta. I'm not too sure that recording it would be absolutely the right thing to do. In any event, until some other debate sways me to the opinion that this bill should not be supported, I suspect that I shall be supporting the bill.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

MR. JACQUES: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am pleased to rise this afternoon to express my support for Bill 206, which amends the School Act to include a community-based written code of student conduct for each school in our province. My colleague from Livingstone-Macleod is to be commended for bringing forward this important amendment to the School Act.

The code of conduct will set out expected and acceptable standards of conduct for students and the consequences that will be incurred for failing to live up to these standards. Each code will prohibit activities such as physical violence, sexual assault, sexual abuse, vandalism, and the use or possession of a dangerous weapon, narcotic, alcohol, or tobacco products. The prohibition will extend to activities in the school, on school grounds, or during school-sponsored activities.

The code proposed by Bill 206 will be more specific than the very general requirement set out in the current act, which only requires students to be diligent in their studies, attend school regularly and punctually, co-operate fully with school officials and school rules, account to their teachers for their conduct, and respect the rights of others. The existing legislation sets forth objectives involving student behaviour but is short on specifics. What Bill 206 will bring about, Madam Speaker, is a clearly laid out and specific code of conduct that every student will see, appreciate, and understand and that shows the consequences of their actions.

More importantly, Madam Speaker, each code will be community-based. It will not be prescribed by the provincial Department of Learning, the Alberta Teachers' Association, or any other provincial organization but will instead be based on input from parents, students, teachers, and principals that reflects local concerns and community needs.

4:50

Madam Speaker, the climate in our schools is changing. Over the past decade we have seen a marked increase in both incidence and varying types of disciplinary problems occurring in Alberta schools. Disciplinary problems have always existed in schools and have always presented challenges to teachers, parents, and school boards, but the nature of the disciplinary problems is changing. The levels and types of violence are increasing, particularly in large urban centres. Gangs are making their way into our schools, as are alcohol and street drugs. In fact, the Alberta School Boards Association has identified a number of trends which are emerging in our schools, including a greater number of incidents overall: possession of weapons, the existence of gangs, female involvement in violent acts and incidents, involvement of elementary students, and extortion. As a result, there is an increasing public awareness that safety in our schools is an issue and that further remedial actions are required.

A 1998 Angus Reid poll showed that two-thirds of Canadians believed that public schools in their own communities had become less safe over the preceding five-year period. Albertans who responded to the survey attributed school violence to a number of factors including parenting, disciplining practice of schools and teachers, a lower degree of respect, changing values of morality, peer pressure, and increased levels of violence in movies and in television programming.

Madam Speaker, schools have been finding that some of the traditional disciplinary methods are less effective than in the past. They're looking for more effective ways to promote a more orderly and safe environment for students, teachers, and the surrounding community. The penalty options envisaged by Bill 206 involve a broad range from the more traditional forms of discipline, such as expulsion or suspension of students committing serious offences, to more rehabilitative options such as counseling. In addition, the bill requires penalty options that would enable a student to continue pursuing his or her studies while serving a penalty.

Madam Speaker, I introduced a private member's bill in the 1998 spring session of this Legislature which addressed similar issues as identified by my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod. However, due to its position on the Order Paper, the bill never reached debate. The bill I proposed was similar to Bill 206 in that it dealt with the problems of school violence and substance abuse, and it proposed that in cases of suspected illegal activity such as physical violence involving sexual assault and harassment, misconduct, vandalism, and possession of weapons or narcotics, school principals would be required to contact the local police service and the school superintendent at the earliest opportunity.

The sponsor of Bill 206 and myself are hardly alone in our concern for disciplinary problems and their impact on our schools, students, families, and communities. Madam Speaker, the province of Ontario has also been examining school codes of conduct, and one of the Ontario schools that has been proactive in this respect is Sir Sanford Fleming Academy, which has instituted both a code of conduct and a school uniform policy. The response from students and parents at this high school has been very positive, and in particular they note the improvements in the school's learning environment. As a result, Ontario is considering the creation of a code of conduct in its provincial school legislation which would impose minimum standards for students' behaviour and set out the consequences for infractions of the code.

At this point I'd like to refer to – and I will table this document – a copy that has come off the Internet of some press releases dated March 21. It's regarding specific legislation that the Ontario government has announced that it will be bringing forward in the spring agenda. I just want to note a few excerpts from a columnist's article regarding the code of conduct. If I could, Madam Speaker, point out:

Expulsion automatic for students who bring weapons onto school property, provide drugs or alcohol to others or who commit criminal assault.

Suspension the minimum penalty for possessing drugs or alcohol, for threatening or swearing at teachers and for vandalism.

Teachers given power to impose detentions and suspensions.

Principals and vice-principals given right to expel students.

Expelled students to be sent to strict discipline programs.

Parents of students with attitude and behaviour problems given power to apply to have their children sent to strict discipline programs.

School property off-limits to all but teachers, students, parents and registered visitors between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Mandatory criminal-background checks for everyone teaching or working in schools.

School uniforms and dress codes to be established if supported by a majority of a school's parents.

Parents to be made financially responsible for property damage and other consequences of their children breaking the law.

Schools in the United States are also addressing the issues surrounding school discipline problems. The American situation, I would suggest, differs substantially from the Canadian position or indeed what we are experiencing in the province of Alberta with respect to the levels and the types of discipline problems, particularly violence. Nevertheless, it may be worth while to consider some of the approaches that they are adopting.

It's interesting to note, Madam Speaker, that three-quarters or more of all American schools in a recent survey reported having zero-tolerance policies for various student offences. Zero-tolerance policies were defined as policies that mandate predetermined serious consequences for specific disciplinary offences. About 90 percent of schools reported zero-tolerance policies for firearms and weapons other than firearms. Eighty-eight percent had policies of zero tolerance for alcohol and drugs. In addition, 79 percent had zero-tolerance policies for violent behaviour and tobacco use. Actions to address disciplinary problems take other forms in American schools, including increased reporting of serious incidents to law enforcement officials and the institution of school uniform policies.

Madam Speaker, the establishment of school codes of conduct will help to create a climate of responsibility and clear expectations for students, teachers, parents, and principals. Our schools and students would benefit from instituting these codes in our province. Bill 206 is not a panacea for all the circumstances involving unacceptable conduct in our schools. I would suggest that all of us acknowledge collectively as legislators, as parents, as students, as teachers, as administrators, and as school trustees that we share a duty and a responsibility to do everything we can to eliminate unacceptable conduct in our schools. Bill 206 is one cog within the total wheel of our collective responsibility. I would ask and urge all members of this Assembly to support Bill 206.

Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm not, to be honest, quite sure whether I support this bill or not. There are a number of reasons. We talked about the school uniform policy in here and the pros and cons of the school uniform policy. I'm not an advocate of that, simply because I think our kids have to have some independence along the way.

However, I will say that I happened to have had a group of young people from St. Gerard school down at the Legislature for a week. I posed that question to them, and three of the kids said: yeah, school uniforms would be okay, but you know, not really. So three kids said: yeah, we would be okay with that. The rest of the class said: no way. Interestingly enough, the girls said: yeah, it wouldn't be a big deal. The boys said: no way. It was quite an interesting debate that they had in relation to this. A lot of it revolved around their ability to express themselves in what they wear, what they don't wear, what they choose to wear, if they have long hair, short hair, or, in my son's case, red hair, a good Liberal colour I might add. But it is their choice. That's part of the picture.

5:00

I want to also point out that I've been involved in my son's school since grade 1, and at the elementary school level, yeah, they had a policy for conduct. It wasn't as tough a policy as from grades 7 to 9. In fact, my son's school was one of the first schools involved in the Safe and Caring Schools program in Alberta. It was one of the schools that the district felt needed to be part of that. In fact – and I'll be very honest – I had contemplated whether or not I was going to send my son to that school. In discussion with many of the parents in the community that we live in, we all asked that question because we had heard that the particular school was particularly rough. So we thought: well, maybe we'll send our kids out of the community. Then my thought was: why would I do that? There's a school four blocks from home. The kids have lived in this community all their lives, grown up in this community, but I needed as a parent to see some change in the school.

The first time I entered that junior high school, there was a dimly lit hallway. There were no posters on the wall. There wasn't a trophy cabinet. There was nothing in the school that would say to me: gee, this is a delightful place to go. As a police officer my area of expertise was in something called crime prevention through environmental design, and that whole concept focused around using the built environment to construct a safe environment, if you will. I took all the principles and concepts that were involved in the acronym CPTED, and I thought: boy, a lot of work needs to be done at this school. I brought that up prior to my son going to that school.

The next year we had a principal change; we had Safe and Caring Schools. Through this program we have seen the level of achievement go up, we have seen fewer disciplinary problems in the school, and we have kids coming out for sports teams, some which never existed in that school, and now there's a full range of athletic opportunities, there's a full range of leadership opportunities, those kinds of things. I credit the parents of the community for participating and getting involved and saying: "You know, we don't want to lose our community school. We want our kids to be able to go here, and we want to feel good about it," those kinds of things.

We had a policy not only with the directive from the Safe and Caring Schools project, but we ensured that kids weren't allowed to smoke around the school – well, in the neighbourhood. The school got phone calls if they did. They were also encouraged to stay on the school grounds at lunchtime, not necessarily go off but encouraged to stick around. They had a policy of expulsion for weapons in the school. They had a policy of expulsions and suspensions for other issues such as drugs and alcohol and the use of those on the school grounds or around the school.

Also, in relation to cell phones and pagers we have a particular concern with what's called a dial-a-doper. In the police vocabulary, a dial-a-doper, the young person, is generally the courier, so you can call up, you can order your dope, and then you get a courier to run out and deliver it. So the kid has a pager on him. He gets paged by the dealer. He goes and picks up his dope and delivers it to somebody else. Well, of course they use kids; right? They use kids because the penalty isn't as high. We decided we were going to take pagers and cellular phones away from kids in the school so that we can try and circumvent that particular issue.

So all sorts of things were happening in this particular school, and to date they're doing very well. They're doing well under the program. We've seen all sorts of things change. The achievement levels are going up. As a parent council we put together a specific strategy to deal with some of the issues on the student survey put out by the school board. In fact, we went one further. For the next year's survey we developed a questionnaire that would in fact not just ask the kids: do you feel safe in your school? And the kid would answer yes or no. We went one further and said: why don't you feel safe in your school? You have to have that information to develop a strategy to deal with it. So we were able to do a little bit of an analysis on that and put a strategy together as parents in the community, and it works for the kids.

Then my son moved on. Now he's in his first year of high school. The same type of thing. They have the same rules, only now they're even more strict.

I found it interesting, Madam Speaker, because I was, as you know, opposed to the youth smoking law in the Legislature, the private member's bill brought up. When I asked my son about it, he said: well, yeah, it should be against the law. So, you know, we had a little bit of a difference in our home. His reason for that is: well, it's not good for you, so why allow smoking? Yet he still wants red hair. So I say, "I don't like your red hair. Maybe you should get rid of it." So it's kind of an interesting dynamic when you're talking to kids and how these things play out.

MR. HANCOCK: Red hair won't kill him.

MS OLSEN: Well, you're right, hon. Justice minister. Red hair won't kill him. But do you want to know what it does to shirt collars and pillows?

Given that, I have seen through my son's school career a level of accountability from the parents, the principals, and the teachers in developing solid criteria. The school he's in now, again, as I say, has a specific policy: zero tolerance for weapons and drugs and alcohol, suspensions, in-school suspensions, out-of-school suspensions. They've got a range of remedies, but in my view the number one issue should be dealing with the kids in a manner that's going to keep them involved in school, you know, having them disciplined in a manner that's going to help the child and not discourage the young person.

I've also seen a number of other schools turn around in this city. You know, as a police officer I had ample opportunity to be at any number of schools. I can tell you that 12 years ago at the high school my son goes to right now, I happened to be working as a special-duty constable at a school dance, and the biggest fight broke out at that school after the dance. It was a particularly violent fight. It wasn't just fists and those kinds of things. In essence, we had to call down a number of other police officers to come and help us out. But because of the turnaround of that school over the last 10 years, when it was time for school selection, I thought: well, is this where I want my son to go? When I searched out all the schools, it's a good school. It's turned full circle.

Part of it is that schools do that. They change. Their culture changes. Their programs change. The student population changes. The other part of it is that they adopt policies that they're very strict on. This particular school has focused on getting all kids through school and into some form of postsecondary education, which is a good goal. It doesn't necessarily have to be high academics but at least getting those kids to a point where they can make it in a postsecondary school.

So I don't believe the sky is falling. Part of it is my personal experience, my personal experience as a parent and my experience as a police officer. We've always had drug and alcohol problems in schools. Always. We've always had violence in schools. We've always had a number of these gang issues in schools, boy, forever.

5:10

You know, I was a police officer. I started years and years ago, and we still have some of the same issues. If we looked on a continuum of some of these things or if we were to chart them on a graph, some of these issues would rise and fall. There would be a fluctuation. It's not always bad, and maybe one particular high-profile incident will lead to another. I certainly won't deny the fact that we're seeing more gang activity in schools. Absolutely. We are seeing that, and I think that's a particular focus, but not just for one school, for many schools that are in urban areas. It might not be necessary to deal with a rural school in the same manner. I think you have to let, in my view, the parties who are responsible for our kids make some decisions. You know, for the most part they do make good decisions.

I would comment on the issues that arose out of some sexual assaults and harassments at schools. I would suggest that if we all took the sexual harassment issue a little more to heart, then we would be teaching our kids a good lesson about harassment.

The issue of sexual assault. I believe that those issues were resolved, and I'm hoping the boards put policies in place to deal with these kids so the victims don't have to be revictimized by attending the same school.

There are other options, too, Madam Speaker. The community conferencing that occurs, I think, is something that is starting to occur more often in schools. Sometimes if you take a model like that and you take your victim and your offender and bring them together and you try to resolve the problem – that's exactly what's happening in the Department of Justice. They're promoting community conferencing or family group conferencing. It's an ideal model to help break down some of those issues, and maybe in some situations – I'm not saying all, by any stretch of the imagination – where there is an ability for the victim and the offender, especially in the schools, depending on the issue, maybe they will come together and maybe they will be able to resolve some of those issues.

Bullying is an issue in schools, again, where I think the restorative justice model works. We use it in some of the schools here. In fact, the police officers in the schools in Edmonton endeavor to use that model all the time or as often as they can because they've seen it work.

Let's not forget, Madam Speaker, that under 2 percent of all those youth are serious habitual offenders. So under 2 percent of every youth that commits a crime under the Criminal Code is considered a serious habitual offender. We're talking about a small group of people who are serious offenders. Those offenders are not likely to be in our schools, in fact. They're looking at alternative forms of education, or they're maybe at AYOC. There's a tremendous program that Alberta Justice has at AYOC. There are all sorts of options that are happening.

When I say that I have difficulties supporting this, I do believe that schools, boards, parents, and students are all endeavoring to manage violence in the schools. We've absolutely seen some issues we need to deal with. We don't want kids in the same school if they can't overcome their difficulties, especially in a case of sexual assault or date rape, if you will, those kinds of things. Those are power issues, and unless those are resolved between the victim and offender, then you can't have them both in the same school. That's just common sense, and there shouldn't be a big fight over that.

But I do look at all the alternatives, not just for the criminal offences in schools that are committed but for many other offences. I guess I'm not buying into the sky-is-falling notion in the schools just yet. Yes, there are problems. Absolutely there are problems. Absolutely parents and teachers and boards are taking care of business. They should all be commended for the work they're doing. We've got tremendous programs by the government, and I will in fact say that this is an excellent program. The Safe and Caring Schools program has worked wonders. I've seen the changes in the schools that this has operated in. I've seen the changes in the kids.

I want to draw to your attention, though, just before I close – we talk about all of these things; we talk about violence, and we talk about drugs and alcohol – a Pollara poll that was just recently delivered on the weekend. In fact, I was present at the presentation, and it was a very good presentation. The number three issue that Canadians said would get worse before it got better was child poverty. Okay? That was the number three issue. In the priorities for Canadians, the number two priority was child poverty. Health care was number one in both those instances.

So when we're talking about all the issues identified in this Assembly, when we're talking about criminal offences, when we're talking about behaviours and attitudes of students and that kind of thing, we really need to focus on prevention. And do you know what? All of those programs out there that target zero to six, that target teen mums, that target mums who are pregnant for some prenatal care and introduce them into different programs, that's what's going to help in our schools, Madam Speaker. That's what's going to help. This bill is going to make into law and is going to have the effect of law, as my colleague from Edmonton-Calder said, something that's already happening. I wish we could redirect our focus on prevention, put more money into prevention.

Madam Speaker, I think crime prevention is not just target-hardening. It's not just putting bolts and locks on your doors and alarm systems in your homes. It's attacking child poverty. It's attacking youth issues, education, access to education, health, racism, those issues. They're all part of the big picture.

With that, I would cede the floor to somebody else. I really haven't made up my mind, to be honest, whether I'm going to support this or not. Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

MR. HLADY: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and enter into the debate on Bill 206. I'll start off by applauding my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod for having the resolve to sponsor this timely bill. Bill 206 is the culmination of his hard work and consultation with Albertans, and he should be commended for it. Congratulations.

Madam Speaker, I'd also like to say that I'm actually shocked and disappointed with a lot of the comments that I heard from the last member speaking, from Edmonton-Norwood. You know, I have well over a thousand police officers in the city of Calgary who would strongly disagree with a lot of the comments that she made today. I think it's very, very unfortunate that she feels, being a police officer, sitting in here, and making those kind of comments, that they don't need a code of conduct in schools. That's unbelievable, and I think that's very disappointing.

Madam Speaker, my comments today will deal with some of the issues and concerns my constituents and Albertans across the province have expressed to me. Recently I have had the opportunity to hear what my constituents are saying about the state of education in Calgary and in Alberta as a whole. I've been going across the province and hearing from school boards, 60 out of 64 school boards, on the growth and density study that I'm doing for the Minister of Learning. Much has been done through my work on this committee, and it's been very good information that pertains directly to Bill 206.

5:20

Madam Speaker, what has been a constant throughout these discussions is the need for Alberta, both the government and the people, to embrace innovation and change in dealing with the educational issues. Whether I'm talking to the trustees or the chief superintendents, chief financial officers, or parents, we need to also get back to some basics in our changes. We as a society have put teaching values into our classroom rather than learning them in our homes and in our community. School jurisdictions today cannot fill in for family anymore in regards to teaching, if they don't have the tools to enforce responsible behaviour.

A good example is Ontario's code of conduct which has been introduced. It's very popular with parents and the public and school boards and teachers. I'd like to read a couple of the codes of conduct that they have in Ontario.

Expulsion automatic for students who bring weapons onto school property, provide drugs or alcohol to others or who commit criminal assault.

Suspension the minimum penalty for possessing drugs or alcohol, for threatening or swearing at teachers and for vandalism.

Teachers given power to impose detentions and suspensions.

Principals and vice-principals given right to expel students.

Expelled students to be sent to strict discipline programs.

Parents of students with attitude and behaviour problems given power to apply to have their children sent to strict discipline programs . . .

Parents to be made financially responsible for property damage and other consequences of their children breaking the law.

Very powerful statements made by the Ontario government.

Madam Speaker, as I have just described, the impetus is there for change in our schools. I would like to say that our government has never been afraid of change, especially when Albertans tell us we need to change. This is why I am supporting my colleague's proposed bill. The hon. member is not afraid to challenge the status quo when it is change for the better.

I want to make it clear, Madam Speaker, that Alberta has some of the best schools and students in Canada, if not in the entire globe. Our government has acknowledged the need to embrace science and focus on knowledge-based sectors in our economy. These knowledge-based sectors include industries vital to Alberta's continued prosperity, areas like oil and agriculture, which have adapted and grown as the global economy becomes more complex and integrated.

Madam Speaker, how does this fit with the bill proposed today to create a student code of conduct? I think that by implementing a code of conduct in Alberta's schools, student and school responsibilities are clearly laid out, hence creating a stable school environment, which is vital to the learning process. I agree with many of the comments made by my colleagues today, especially with respect to getting the problem students out of schools and into counseling and rehabilitation settings so that serious violent situations can be avoided at all costs.

This, Madam Speaker, is what my colleague is proposing. The zero tolerance buzzword is thrown around today in the school discipline and school violence debate. Zero tolerance for things like weapons or drug offences are needed as deterrents to keep our schools safe for all our children.

Madam Speaker, when you remove a student from school, you can't forget about him or her as soon as they're out the door. Disruptive students often act out because of deeper emotional factors like a dysfunctional family unit or feelings of isolation and anger. These students need to be helped; otherwise, their cycle of destructive behaviour will never be broken.

I believe a code of conduct is a needed component in an overall discipline and early intervention strategy. It is an approach based on self-discipline, mutual respect, equity, and co-operation. It is fair to both students and educators.

I'll finish by again urging my colleagues to support this bill as the right strategy for keeping our schools safe and encouraging a stable and co-operative learning environment.

Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's a real privilege to stand this afternoon and speak to the Member for Livingstone-Macleod's Bill 206. This basically puts in place an option so that schools can develop a code of conduct.

This in essence creates a lot of options for the schools. I notice that it's not being put in at a provincial level. It's being put in so that the communities can put in the kind of plan they want. This makes it very appropriate for parents to be able to then go to the school and decide whether or not that's the school they want to enroll their children in based on their willingness to participate in that code of conduct and determine whether or not they are going to look after their children, make sure their children interact with others, and protect their children from outside violence in a way that the parent sees as beneficial to their willingness and want to bring up their children. So this, in essence, provides us with that kind of an option.

I guess the question that we have is kind of determining the breadth: how much consultation, how much the parents will be brought into this? Will this be a way in the end of differentiating between schools? It's going to be the kind of thing that we need to have set out so that as parents begin to put more and more emphasis on the environment that their children are being taught in, then they'll be able to, as I said, make that choice.

The other thing that I would like to just make a few comments on is the kind of process that would have to be put in place here to deal with enforcement. What are the options for parents to get clarification on issues, to deal with the kind of relationship between the students and the teachers? How are they going to be able to make sure that the code of conduct enforcement activities don't affect the way they are going to be able to interact with the teachers, with other students?

Madam Speaker, we've been following a case in southern Alberta where there's been a real disagreement created between the students and the teachers and subsequently, then, between the teachers and the principal, all based on the kind of conduct the students are being disciplined for. So I think that this bill, which will amend the School Act, in essence provides those schools with a chance to make sure that parents, teachers, students, and administrators all understand the ground rules when code of conduct issues are going to be brought up. This is the kind of thing that we don't want to have indiscriminately imposed on students.

I think this should be put in place, and I hope that as the schools and school boards undertake to put these code of conduct guidelines in place, the students play an important role in it. I think the kind of conduct that students are willing to impose on themselves is probably at least as stringent as we as parents or administrators in the school system would be willing to put on. So if the students are involved, it gives them a buy-in to it. It gives them a chance to develop and formulate the kinds of things that they are going to enforce on each other in terms of behaviour patterns.

You're looking at the clock. Does that mean that I should be sitting down? It's 5:30.

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, March 22, 2000 8:00 p.m.
 Date: 00/03/22
 [Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

head: Committee of Supply

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I'd like to call the committee to order.

head: Main Estimates 2000-2001

Offices of the Legislative Assembly

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Yes. Speaking, as I understand it, to the estimates for the Legislative Assembly.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Yes.

MR. DICKSON: Excellent. There was a question I had for the Minister of Health and Wellness. There was a matter that came up earlier today. I was interested in the response, and I wasn't able to hear the response.

I sit on the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, and one of the things with respect to the budget that was dealt with was a budget for the Ombudsman. The budget has been set up with an expectation that the provincial Ombudsman will be hearing complaints, concerns with respect to different elements of the health sector. There was an anticipation that there would be budget implications in 2000-2001.

Now, we see some of that reflected in the budget, but we don't see any legislation that's going to accommodate that, Madam Chairman. I heard the Health and Wellness minister addressing a collateral but related point earlier today, but I'm afraid I haven't seen the Blues yet, and I didn't hear his comments. I'm inviting the Minister of Health and Wellness to clarify when he expects we will see legislation, when that legislation will be passed.

Madam Chairman, I'm receiving more than the usual number of frowns from the table. If I'm talking about the wrong item, I hope somebody will tell me.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The chair would say, hon. member, that I am really wondering why you're asking the Minister of Health and Wellness about the office of the Ombudsman.

MR. DICKSON: The reason is that the Legislative Offices Committee, which supervises each of the legislative offices, received a budget submission for the Ombudsman, and it's included in here. Each of the legislative officer's budgets is included in these estimates we're dealing with tonight. I think that's accurate. One of the elements here, the budget for the Ombudsman, was built around the anticipation that there would be a legislative basis for the provincial Ombudsman, Mr. Sutton, to be able to investigate concerns that people have at the regional health authority level.

So we see the budget appropriation, but there's no legislative jurisdiction to be able to do that. We're now well into the spring session. I've seen no legislation that expands the authority of the Ombudsman. So, Madam Chairman, is it not a question, then, that we have a budget requisition that was based on a contingent expectation. If that contingency is not going to be realized, if we're not going to see the legislation, then shouldn't we know about it? That's my question. It's quite innocent, and maybe we can have clarification. Maybe the Government House Leader has the answer.

Absent such legislation, then maybe we should have some question about the amount that's going to the Ombudsman. I'm happy to see the Ombudsman do his work, but he can't investigate things he doesn't have legislative authority to do. The current Ombudsman Act does not permit him to deal with concerns from regional health authorities. What happened to that legislation? When are we going to see it? If we're not going to see it, let the minister tell us so we can consider moving the appropriate amendment to the estimates.

I'll sit down for a moment to see if I get a response on this question. I know that my colleague from Edmonton-Norwood is also a member of the same committee, and I suspect she had the same understanding I did. That's the question, Madam Chairman. Hopefully, we'll get some resolution to that.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Well, before the chairman comments on that, I would ask that I have unanimous consent so we can revert to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Justice.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. It's my pleasure and honour tonight to introduce to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly 15 Cubs and their Cub leaders: Akela Mrs. Shelly Olsen; Mrs. Christy Mulholland; Hati Mrs. Shelley Dubyk; Rakshaw Mrs. Elda Foote, and Bagheera Mr. Gleb Gladwin, all from the 176 Cub pack in my riding of Edmonton-Whitemud. They're seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Offices of the Legislative Assembly (continued)

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, the chair wishes to say something. This is very unusual tonight, that there are questions asked on the Legislative Assembly estimates. The Assembly – and you know perfectly well, hon. member – is independent from asking government ministers to deal with the Legislative Assembly. As well, if you have questions, you can direct them to the chairman of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices. You know that as well.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman, I may not have been clear. What I'm talking about is that there's an increase here from $1.4 million to $1.6 million. That is contingent on some things happening that have nothing to do with the Ombudsman and have everything to do with the Minister of Health and Wellness. So that's . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, as chairman of tonight's proceedings, I suggest that you take that up with the chairman of the standing committee that looks after Leg. Offices. As I said, the Assembly is very much independent from the government. So my question to you is: why are you doing it at this point in time instead of taking it up in the appropriate place with the appropriate person?

8:10

MR. DICKSON: I was hoping that the chairman of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices would be here to confirm, when we're dealing with the budget for this, that the expectation in terms of statutory reform in fact has been dealt with. I'm happy to get the clarification. This is the last clear chance, Madam Chairman. I'm happy to have the chairman of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices answer the question.

We're now well past the halfway point of the spring legislative session. We have seen no legislation yet to expand the jurisdiction of the Ombudsman to deal with regional health authorities, yet the requisition that we're being asked to vote on tonight is a $200,000 increase, plus or minus, in element 3.0.1. So I'm simply asking for an assurance I guess from the chairman of the committee that the legislation is coming forward in the spring session. If you won't let me ask the question of the minister, I'll ask the chairman of the committee to clarify that, please.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, this is very irregular, but I will recognize the Minister of Justice and Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. The hon. member should have raised questions with respect to the efficacy of health legislation at the time of reviewing the business plans for the department of health. The budget for the Legislative Assembly comes through the Members' Services Committee, and the normal practice and custom of this House is that Members' Services recommends the budget to the Assembly, and the Assembly passes it. Government members and Executive Council members are not in a position to defend the estimates of the Legislative Assembly. The hon. member knows that. Let's get on with the traditions of the House.

I might add that it's a common practice to do business plans based on what you anticipate happening. If the legislative framework necessary to bring something into fruition doesn't occur, it would be quite normal to lapse funds that were provided to encompass that.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

MR. RENNER: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I hesitate to get into this discussion, because I am not a member of the Members' Services Committee, but I would like to point out that the member indicated that there is no legislation that this Assembly has passed that affects the Ombudsman's office. In fact, this Legislature just recently passed the Health Professions Act, and the Health Professions Act has extensive involvement in the Ombudsman's office and in an appeal process involving all of the colleges.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you. I, too, am a member of the Standing Committee on Leg. Offices, and my understanding of the budget process and the budget that was approved for the Ombudsman's particular part was that it was based on new legislation coming forward so he could in fact have adequate resources to deal with that legislation. I think it's very fair, Madam Chairman, that we ask the question about when that legislation can be anticipated to come through. We have approved the budget for that. It is not an unreasonable question. So the issue still stands. I'm wondering if the minister of health can help us out here. It would be really easy. He just has to answer the question.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: All right. We're going to deal with the main estimates to do with the offices of the Legislative Assembly.

Agreed to:

Support to the Legislative Assembly
Operating Expense	$26,727,215
Office of the Auditor General
Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$14,638,551
Office of the Ombudsman
Operating Expense	$1,644,100
Office of the Chief Electoral Officer
Operating Expense	$10,678,270
Office of the Ethics Commissioner
Operating Expense	$215,030
Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner
Operating Expense	$2,718,536

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

International and Intergovernmental Relations

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I'm pleased to be here this evening to continue the discussion on the estimates of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Our previous discussions on February 29 really focused on the ministry's role in leading the development of governmentwide strategies and policies for our relations with other governments within Canada and with governments around the world and with the aboriginal community. In addition, the goals, objectives, and performance measures of the ministry were discussed. My colleague the associate minister and I outlined our priorities for the year ahead as well.

We will continue to aggressively defend and promote Alberta's interests in our dealings with the federal government. We'll focus on implementing our framework for international strategies, expanding trade, and strengthening relations between government and aboriginal people.

The associate minister and I were pleased with the enthusiasm and the questions posed to us by the members during that debate. We were able to respond to many of those questions that evening, but there were a number of questions raised that we were unable to address that evening, so this afternoon I responded in writing to the hon. members who raised those questions. I also tabled my responses in the Legislature.

Edmonton-Ellerslie asked several questions on various subjects. Many of them we were able to deal with that evening, but for those that we weren't, questions related to trade, budget changes in the international section of the department, and the ministry's performance measures, I responded in writing.

8:20

The Member for Edmonton-Norwood was also very thorough in her questions. The questions we've responded to in the areas where she requested clarification were on the aboriginal policy framework, land claims litigation, other aboriginal issues, and how our ministry measures outcomes.

The Member for Edmonton-Riverview asked about Alberta's involvement in the World Trade Organization, polling data that the ministry utilizes for its performance measures, conflict of interest policies for Metis settlements, and the role of the ministry in planning for the needs of aboriginal children. Again, I tabled those responses as well as providing them to the member today. I apologize that they didn't come to you sooner than today. We had anticipated having them to you earlier in the week. However, I hope you had the opportunity to review them.

In closing, I want to again thank the hon. members for their thoughtful questions and comments. We'll take good notes, and if there are any questions tonight that we are unable to respond to, again we will respond in writing.

Thank you very much, Madam Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo. But, hon. member, the chairman would ask that you just sit a minute.

After what happened when I was in the chair yesterday, I'm going to ask for a vote on whether we will in fact use the 20-20 scenario as far as dealing with the votes on this particular department and the reporting of that department so that I don't get into the same thing as yesterday; that is, 20 minutes here and 20 minutes there.

I would ask that the committee vote on utilizing the agreement that is in place and that I referred to yesterday, if you happened to be in the House. All those in favour, please say aye.

HON. MEMBERS: Aye.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed, please say no.

Thank you, hon. member. You may now rise.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Madam Chairman. I've got a question. It's in an area where I haven't seen the responses that the minister has provided to different people who had asked specific questions, so I'm inviting the minister to signal me if this is an area that's already been thoroughly covered. I find this department always the most difficult department to examine from a budget perspective because you're a facilitator, you're a conduit, you're a co-ordinator, and everything is sort of pieced out. All the substantive work is done by the different departments. I'm mindful of that before I walk into the pit.

My comment would be this. In the budget committees I have been part of, I've been particularly interested in information technology, leadership in terms of various information applications. I've been interested in the government's response to Bill C-6, which is currently just about finished in the House of Commons after coming back from the Senate. I'm interested in the way we respond to the European Union privacy directive that came into force in September. [interjection] Well, I'm still waiting for responses. So here's what I've got so far, Madam Minister. I'm looking for leadership, and I'm looking for who has responsibility in this sort of confusing process.

Now, I've been able to ask questions of the Minister of Innovation and Science, whatever that ministry is called these days. I think the chief information council is under his wing. The chief information council is focused in part on providing leadership – this is what I was told – in the area of information technology. Then we went to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. The FOIP unit, the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act application, is under that ministry. There's yet a third ministry that's involved. The Ministry of Government Services is also involved in information technology. What I try to pursue and I get no clear resolution of is what role each of the different departments play. Who is providing the ultimate leadership in terms of privacy protection, the protection of Albertans' information in a world of increasing electronic technology?

You know, one would think that the perfect ministry would be this ministry because you deal with Ottawa, you deal with other provinces, and you co-ordinate things going on in other ministries. But that's not the advice I got when I talked to your colleague.

The minister is signaling me. She would make a great charades player. When she sends me signals across the chasm here between opposition and government, I usually know what she means. Her colleagues aren't always so clear. She'd be the person I'd want on my charades team.

My point is simply this. Madam Minister, what discussions have you had with your colleague the Minister of Municipal Affairs? What discussions have you had with your colleague the Minister of Government Services? I don't want to unfairly represent their positions, but my impression from speaking to both was that they were not looking to your ministry to provide leadership in this area, not just on Bill C-6, because that's a federal statute, but on how we comply as a jurisdiction with the European Union privacy directive, so that we don't forfeit and put at risk some $18 million of trade in services and goods. I wonder if the minister could answer that.

Madam Chairman, I'd like to give the minister some of my time. In other words, I'm going to sit down, and I'd like to give the minister a chance to get up and answer me on what communications she's had with her two colleagues so that it's clear not just to me – I mean, I have an advantage. I'm in the House. I have a little better sense of what's going on than many of my constituents. I'm not sure that other Albertans see that. I wonder if the minister could help me understand the specific role that her department plays in this area of privacy protection and information technology. I'll sit down and give the minister a chance to respond.

MRS. McCLELLAN: I will attempt to respond in a brief way. The co-ordination of the activities around C-6 has been led by my ministry, working very closely with the Minister of Municipal Affairs, with the Minister of Government Services, and with . . . [interjection] For Hansard, the member is asking if I discussed this directly with the chief information council, and the answer to that would be no.

However, we have made representations to the federal government on C-6. We have made representation to the chair of the Senate committee to raise our concerns on behalf of Albertans with that particular piece of legislation. I'm recalling the details as I'm standing here. One of our primary concerns was the lack of time and consultation that was spent with us on this legislation and the fact that our businesspeople whom this would impact had not had an opportunity to be fully prepared for this legislation. So we have been involved in those discussions.

As I recall, the Minister of Municipal Affairs and I cosigned the letter certainly that went to the chair of the Senate committee. I believe, if I recall, that I also wrote to my counterpart the Hon. Stephane Dion on that, on the concern of interaction between the federal government and the province on an issue that impacted businesses and so on in our province. I would see no reason I wouldn't share with the hon. member the letter in particular that we wrote to the chair of the Senate committee to outline our concerns. I'd have no trouble doing that at all.

8:30

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Madam Chairman, it's always a treat to ask questions of a minister who's as co-operative and forthright as this one. I appreciate the undertaking to make that material available.

Will the minister indicate why we have not done what the provinces of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and Ontario have done, which is take this out to their citizens? In those provinces, for the very reason the minister mentioned, most small businesses, big business, maybe some of the big internationally trading businesses are conscious of the European Union, Bill C-6, and what's going on in other places. Most small businesses in my constituency, I suspect, have no idea about this.

Given the lack of awareness, will this minister commit to undertaking at least limited public hearings around this issue, as at least four other provinces already have? It doesn't have to simply be responding to Bill C-6. It's finding out what individuals and businesses would like to see in the area of privacy protection in the nongovernment area, in the private sector. So would the minister respond to that request, please?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Madam Chairman, again, I'm sorry that I don't have more of my notes with me on this particular area for the discussion this evening. There has been consultation with the business community. That's why we knew they were very concerned about this legislation. I would have to get the information for the hon. member as to how that was held, whether it was through associations or the chambers. I just don't have it in my mind at this moment, but I would be happy to share that.

We've made the representations. I'm afraid we haven't been heard, or we've been heard and there isn't going to be a change. However, I'm hoping that because of our interventions in this area, there will be a commitment to some time for this action that will affect our business community, that there will be some time for them to prepare for it, which is really what we were asking for.

I'll take his advice on public hearings and talk it over with my department or look at what vehicle would be the best to make sure that all our business community is informed. Quite often we do work through their associations, such as chambers and so on, because they have a very good network with their membership and the ability to take information out to them. So I'll take that advice on possible public hearings. The fact is that I'm not sure our interventions are going to have any effect. I haven't seen any changes.

The one effect I hope it does have is on the importance of the time that is required to make sure our business community and others that are affected by this have the time to prepare properly for it and make sure they know. I recall other initiatives that have come through – and I'll mention the GST, which was a good example – that sort of came about and people weren't prepared, and it's not a very helpful thing.

So thank you for that suggestion. We'll look at it.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Madam Chairman. My suggestion would be to the minister. You know, I think Manitoba was the first province to announce public hearings, and how clever, I thought. By holding the public hearings, it strengthens the provincial hand, because those same people who are being consulted and whose input is being solicited are also federal voters. You know, this isn't a case of the same taxpayer; it's also the same voter, the same constituent federally or provincially. You know, I may have a different perspective from some of the business community. I may want stronger legislation, and some would want weaker legislation, but the notion of broadening the consultation, just giving people more information seems to me a no-lose proposition.

I'd offer this one caution. We went through Bill 40 in the fall, and that was a question where your colleague the Minister of Health and Wellness was talking about how extensive the consultation was. Yet we saw evidence of a large degree of concern. Certainly the people whose information was at risk had not been consulted; namely, Joe and Jane Albertan, Calgarian.

I'm hopeful, Madam Minister. I appreciate your openness to the suggestion, and I'd just offer the comment that holding public hearings is not a sort of one-way street. It actually strengthens the government's hand when you sit down with your colleagues in other areas.

Now, there was another concern, and I don't know whether it was addressed. I'd asked the minister: what specific role has her department played in the work that's being done by Minister Claudette Bradshaw around the homeless initiative? There has been a great deal of federal/provincial interaction around providing funding for those either homeless or at risk of being homeless. Curiously, I've never heard the Department of International and Intergovernmental Relations involved in any of those. I go to meetings in Calgary when federal Minister Claudette Bradshaw is in town, and I see the Member for Calgary-Bow. I wasn't sure who she was representing other than the government generally. Now I'm wondering what brief this ministry has on that issue and what role this ministry has played around that very important issue.

I'd remind the minister that in Calgary-Buffalo the single biggest concern continues to be affordable housing. I wouldn't extrapolate that to be a provincewide thing. It has a big parochial interest to me as well as a more general one.

MR. CARDINAL: No federal money. They cut it out.

MR. DICKSON: There is actually substantial federal money going in.

One of the minister's colleagues obviously has not been following what's gone on. The federal government is now providing substantial money, and they are providing it as the agencies on the ground wanted, which is without unreasonable strings attached. There's flexibility.

Anyway, I'll sit down to allow the minister a chance to respond.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Madam Chairman, I will tell the hon. member: very little involvement and a great deal of disappointment. This minister is the minister representing Alberta on the social union framework. I can tell you there was a great deal of disappointment that the homeless initiative rather skirted the social union framework in coming into play. The Minister of Community Development responsible for housing will certainly be the minister who'll be interacting with Minister Bradshaw on this initiative. But it was a source of disappointment to me and I think a source of disappointment to all ministers responsible for the social union framework that this indeed rather went around the framework, because it seems to me that this is very much a social issue. It is a natural for the social union framework, which all our Premiers and the Prime Minister signed. There was a great opportunity for us to work together.

However, I think the issue, as you pointed out, is a serious one. Having registered that disappointment, we now move ahead to make this initiative work. The work beyond the framework of the social union will be carried out by the Minister of Community Development working with other departments. I agree it's an issue that we need to deal with. The member for Calgary-Bow certainly did a lot of work, as the hon. member would know, on the task force in Calgary leading up to the initiatives. I am just hopeful that this initiative will work with our community agencies that are trying to deal with this and we'll address it.

So having registered our displeasure at the manner in which it came about, the lack of meaningful consultation on the issue – I was at a social union ministers' framework when this initiative was announced. I didn't know anything about what was in the announcement until after it was concluded. As I say, I think that's been registered, our feeling that initiatives like this should be a natural for the social union framework. It was intended to ensure that we work together across Canada on social issues, and hopefully in the future we'll do that, but we put that behind us now and get on with the important work of dealing with the homeless in our communities wherever they are.

8:40

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I would appreciate approaching this debate this evening in the same type of format that the minister has afforded to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

I'm referencing the Auditor General's reports from both 1998-99 and 1997-98. In both of those last two years' reports, the Auditor General spoke about the relationship and payments made by the province to the Metis settlements. In the '98-99 report specifically the Auditor General raised reservations, in fact stated that "a significant risk facing the Ministry is whether these funds will achieve their intended purpose." These funds are referenced as being a total of $253 million in support of eight Metis settlements pursuant to the Metis Settlements Accord Implementation Act. Additional payments totaling $80 million, plus certain matching payments to be determined, are also required by this legislation to be paid between 1999-2000 and 2006-2007.

Referencing that same report, the government responded to a concern raised by the Auditor General relative to the same area in '97-98, and the ministry committed that they would assist the Metis Settlements in their efforts to utilize and improve business planning processes. The Transition Commission will also work with individual Settlements in establishing more performance measures which can be measured quantitatively.

My request, Madam Chairman. I'm wondering if the minister would update us on the progress in that area.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Yes, I'd be pleased to. In fact, we had a very thorough discussion of that in Public Accounts this morning because it was referenced that the Auditor General had raised this. The chair, Mr. Hardy, was there and was able to discuss this issue, as well as the associate minister.

There is a great deal of work being done in that area, the consultation with the settlements, working with them on the development of business plans, and I believe that almost all settlements have reached the goal of having business plans that are consistent so that when you look at them they're consistent over the eight settlements and looking at the accountability factor. There's been a great deal of work done by the settlements.

I think it's a process that will be a work in the making maybe throughout the rest of this year, but we're certainly pleased with the guidance we received from the Auditor General and the suggestions and advice he gave us on how to improve the accountability and how to put in place performance measures that, indeed, would record that the funding was actually meeting the goals it was intended for. I think we've had very good co-operation from the settlements and from the commission. It is my hope, certainly my desire and, I know, the associate minister's, that in the next reporting function we will see a lot of progress made in that area.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I'm not sure if those business plans are publicly available or if they're in a form yet to be publicly available, but I think there would be interest, once the work is complete, in being able to examine those business plans. In future years it may even be appropriate that they be encompassed in some form in the government's annual report.

I'd like to turn now to the Get Ready Alberta: Strengthening the Alberta Advantage report that was released this year and specifically ask the minister about her department's involvement relative to two particular areas. There are goals identified throughout this document. On page 8, goal: "Alberta is a world leader in innovation, research, development and commercialization of new ideas." The report outlines a number of strategies that primarily focus on innovation and science, information and technology, the information and communications technology sector. I'm wondering if the ministry of intergovernmental affairs was involved in the development of those strategies and the subsequent ideas for actions.

I noted that there were specific ideas for action that related to creating an advantage by developing and adapting environmental technologies and marketing Alberta's expertise to the rest of the world, recruiting companies, creating centres of excellence, facilitating commercialization of research and new ideas. One of the issues small business entrepreneurs have spoken to me about is that it is not always the issue of acquiring support for the development of a new technology, but it would seem that there are greater barriers when it comes to marketing. Those types of issues are ones which I would assume the department of intergovernmental affairs might be involved in.

I have further questions relative to another goal in this report, but I'm wondering if the minister would be prepared to respond to that particular area at this time.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Sure. I can do that very quickly, Madam Chairman. We were a partner in the development of that paper. There were a number of key government departments, economic departments, that developed that. We were a participant.

However, the document that really deals with our department is the one that I tabled in the House early in the session called A Framework for Alberta's International Strategies. It outlines what our role is working in an international scene, and it really is in the area of: if there are identified barriers to commercialization, to export, to trade, then we are involved. The actual marketing and sales of an item are not in our purview. I would commend this to the hon. member's reading. On pages 2 and 3 it outlines what our role is: building relationships, working government to government if there are trade barriers that affect trade.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman and Madam Minister. One of the things I'm not completely clear about, and it isn't really clear within the business plans of, say, science and technology, intergovernmental affairs, Economic Development, is that if there are trips, if you will, being planned that are intended to promote, as one example, goals in this document relative to research and technology – intergovernmental affairs might be planning trips to promote international relations. Does the taxpayer have any references within our business plan and budget process that assure them that these types of initiatives are co-ordinated, are done in the most cost-effective manner? I don't have a sense in my examination of Economic Development, science and technology, and intergovernmental affairs that there is co-ordination in those departments to ensure that the taxpayer is getting the best possible use of their representatives and the most affordable trade trips.

8:50

One of the other goals referenced in this report is that Alberta is internationally recognized as a good place to invest and do business. Alberta businesses compete and succeed in a global marketplace.

Another issue that businessmen have raised to me is their increasing frustration with our aviation situation. While it has improved to some degree, Edmonton continues to be less accessible and less flexible in terms of departures, particularly to international destinations, than Calgary. I'm wondering if the hon. minister has had any involvement. The document I've referenced specifically talks about "an Alberta aviation strategy to improve air transportation for passengers and cargo." Has intergovernmental affairs been involved, and would the minister elaborate on that involvement?

Thank you.

MRS. McCLELLAN: The questions sort of pertain to a couple of ministries, but I will advise the hon. member that this ministry is responsible for the co-ordination of international travel. We do ensure, when travel is anticipated, that it is co-ordinated. Often when a minister travels to a country, they can deal with several areas, not only the one they might be specifically in. So that is a part of the responsibility we have, to ensure that there is an overall co-ordination of international travel.

I have had discussions with my colleagues from Economic Development and other economic departments, with Air Canada, our new soon to be single carrier, and raised that very issue with them, the importance of having access to good routes not just within Canada but certainly internationally. Actually, I would say that we had a very good meeting and that they are very aware of our interests. We pointed out to them that we're the third largest exporter in Canada and that having good international air access is incredibly important to us across this province. I felt quite assured from that discussion that they were very aware and were looking forward to continuing to work with us to provide good access to international routes for Alberta.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: All right. After considering the business plan and proposed estimates for the Department of International and Intergovernmental Relations, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:
Operating Expense	$24,221,000

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

head: Lottery Fund Estimates 2000-2001

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We'll now deal with the lottery estimates.

MR. SMITH: An excellent idea, Madam Chairman. Thank you so much. It gives me great pleasure to speak very briefly to the lottery fund estimates and also to be ably and capably assisted by my colleagues who use a great deal of the lottery funds for the benefit of all Albertans in communities throughout this fair land.

The creation of the current lottery fund is largely the confirmation and the result of the lotteries and gaming summit recommendation, specifically number 4, that stated "that gaming and lottery profits not be directed to the province's General Revenue Fund." The creation of the lottery fund in its current format provides Albertans with clear, transparent information on where lottery dollars go. The information is set out clearly in budget documents but, of course, is also available on the Alberta Gaming web site, and I'd encourage all members on a daily basis to visit that site at www.gaming.gov.ab.ca.

This year's lottery fund estimates clearly indicate that we have listened and listened carefully to the priorities of Albertans and have directed those funds in those appropriate directions. Of the funds' estimated budget of $837 million, 88 percent is directed to thousands of public nonprofit community and charitable projects across Alberta. The remaining 12 percent goes to debt repayment, $50 million into lottery programs, and AGLC operations, $56 million. Sixty percent of the fund, Madam Chairman, provides specifically targeted support to the priority areas of health, education, and infrastructure.

One of the goals of the lottery fund and the Department of Gaming is to be open, clear, and transparent. Albertans clearly want to know where lottery moneys come from. We update our web site on a quarterly basis to clearly indicate the sources and the amount of lottery fund revenue.

Albertans also want to know where lottery dollars go. We provide that information, Madam Chairman, through this process, through annual reports, and of course on a continually updated web site. We're also completing development of a visual identity for the lottery fund, so Albertans clearly know, clearly identified and very open, where lottery dollars are being spent.

Albertans, Madam Chairman, and indeed all Canadians have clearly indicated in a recent report from the Canada West Foundation that they are comfortable with gaming, that they in fact see gaming as an issue of personal choice and that they prefer governments using gaming revenue as opposed to governments raising taxes. Clearly, gaming is a matter of choice, but it's so important that we balance that choice and we find the balance of responsibility. That is indeed the purpose of the department, to help strike a proper balance between responsibility and choice.

That is not to say, Madam Chairman, that gaming is not harmful to some. In fact, government, service groups, and industries recognize this and provide resources and programs to treat and educate. This includes lottery fund dollars provided to AADAC, the association for drug and alcohol-related addiction, for its problem gambling programs. The industry is also involved in problem gambling initiatives. As a matter of fact, I commend the industry for the work done by the Alberta Gaming Industry Association.

We also recognize that there's a lot we don't know about gaming, and knowing more through listening to stakeholders, customers, and people all across this fair land will help us better determine future public and industry policy. That's why we've set up – and you would know because you had a very, very strong influence in this, Madam Chairman – the Alberta Gaming Research Council. That's why the lottery fund is providing $1.5 million . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. minister, this is getting difficult. I have to ask Hansard whether or not in fact they can hear this. Hansard, can you hear this? Hon. minister, they are saying no, they can't hear it.

MR. SMITH: Well, Madam Chairman, it will be my pleasure . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

MR. SMITH: . . . to be able to speak fairly clearly and loudly and enunciate the goals and the objectives of this organization as it benefits all Albertans. In fact, I would love to speak on this topic for a number of hours, not only minutes of the day.

We need to talk specifically, Madam Chairman, about the $1.5 million per year that's going to the Alberta Gaming Research Institute, which is a consortium of the universities of Calgary, Alberta, and Lethbridge. There are three. Hmm. The institute with the guidance of the council will conduct research into the social and economic aspects of gambling.

I believe we've made great progress, Madam Chairman, in the allocation of lottery fund revenues. Cabinet colleagues were diligent to identify programs and projects that are important to Albertans and Alberta communities. In fact, if you look at health, infrastructure, education, you'll find that about 60 percent of the lottery fund is in these three important project areas that Albertans have said are very, very important and very, very vital to the future of this great province.

I can look back over the years, Madam Chairman, and quote one of the early democratic politicians who once said that to give away money is an easy matter and in any man's power. But to decide to whom to give it, and how large and when, and for what purpose and how, is neither in every man's power nor an easy matter. Hence it is that such excellence is rare, praiseworthy and noble.

That was said a long time ago by Aristotle in another parliament, Madam Chairman, in Greece.

Madam Chairman, I know it's a noble undertaking. I know we have members looking to see where these funds go, how they go. I know they've been on their web sites most of the day. I know they're ready. We look forward to good debate, good answers, and I thank everybody in the House for their keen attention to this fund.

9:00

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to open up on the lotteries. Let me first of all welcome the two guests that we have up there in the galleries. It's nice to see that we do have Albertans that are interested as to what happens with their tax dollars, and like all the other Albertans out there, I'm sure they're very, very concerned with Bill 11. But we're not here to talk about Bill 11, Madam Chairman, so I won't talk about Bill 11. I will say in my opening remarks that all my remarks will pertain to lotteries, and I know you think I go off track once and a while, but I'm not going to go off track. My comments are going to be restricted to lotteries.

When we look at lotteries, we first of all have to realize that we do have the commission there, but on top of the commission and ultimately responsible is the minister. So we can't just talk about the lotteries commission and leave the government per se out of it, because the government, of course, is responsible in the end when it comes to lottery dollars, how those dollars are spent, and how the dollars are distributed.

Madam Chairman, when I think back on my 11 years here since 1989, I've watched the history of the VLTs and the lotteries expand and develop into the cash cow and the interest that some members have had, which is basically nil, although there was a great deal of interest – we all remember those Samsonite personalized briefcases being handed out to government members with the applications in there and that type of thing. That's all history, but what I've watched on the other side is that most members really have not paid that much attention to VLTs or gambling in the province. It hasn't been an area of interest in particular. There is an exception. There's one member on the government side who has paid a great deal of interest in terms of gambling activities within this province, who has what I would call a very sensible approach to gambling, from the point of view that gambling is more than a cash cow. There are problems associated with gambling, with lotteries, and that member has taken a number of occasions to point out some of those difficulties.

When the Premier in his good judgment – and it's up to the Premier to make those decisions as to who's responsible for what areas; who becomes the Minister of Gaming, for example. Member for Calgary-Varsity, don't take this as criticism. If he were in the Health and Wellness portfolio, he might make the greatest health minister in the world. He might unravel the crisis that is now occurring in Alberta in that particular area. In Environment he could turn out to be the greatest environmental protector Alberta has ever seen. But prior to his appointment as the minister responsible for gaming, I can't recall when he ever took any public interest in gaming activities within the province. That is not criticism; that is the perception I have of it.

When the Premier chose to appoint that member as the minister responsible for gaming, making it a full-fledged ministerial opportunity, rather than the other member I was referring to, who would have taken gambling in a much more sensible direction but probably not brought in the same amount of revenues, well, it signaled to me that what the Premier wanted was somebody to go in there who would milk the cow, who would see gaming as an activity that would raise as much money as possible. The Member for Calgary-Varsity was the chosen one. The Premier must have concluded that if anybody could suck blood from a rock, it's the Member for Calgary-Varsity, and he has taken an approach, I believe, where gaming is now a big, big industry in the province of Alberta. I think it's unfortunate that not enough attention has been paid to the other side of it.

So it's up to the opposition. Just like it is with Bill 11, it's up to the opposition to now become the watchdog and to try and make sure the government is on track. With the gambling I'm afraid they're not on track yet. There are still many, many concerns.

I want to talk about this annual report put out by the Gaming and Liquor Commission. I turn to page 2 – and this is very important stuff – the return to charities from charitable gaming. They talk about charitable gaming being bingos, casinos, raffles, and pull tickets. Then they say, Madam Chairman, to the minister: "none of the net proceeds from charitable gaming accrue to the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission." Now, the 70 percent that's pulled out of the slot machines that are in the charitable casinos doesn't go to the charitable organization hosting the casino; that goes to the commission or to the government, so that is not really a correct statement.

Then I look at the next column, where it talks about the video lottery operations. It talks in terms of the cap of 6,000. I can recall when that sensible member that I referred to earlier recommended a cap of 6,000 VLTs, but there was a mistake made, and the mistake made was that there was not a cap put on the slot machines in that same period of time. I realize there is a freeze on at the present time on expansion of gaming activities within the province; however, there is an increased number of slot machines that are available as compared to a few months back. I'm not sure what the current number is now of slot machines – well, let's call them casino gaming terminals. We talk in terms of how the electronic racing games bring in $13.3 million, with another $9.3 million from the Sega race game activities and such. But for the slot machines I can't find a number as to how many are operating in the province of Alberta, and I'm kind of curious.

Then I go to the next page, Madam Chairman, and it talks about the summit. We all recall the summit that was held in Medicine Hat, the gaming summit, headed up by the former Ombudsman, Mr. Johnson. That particular summit made a number of recommendations, and the recommendations are all listed here. It says: "The Summit provided eight recommendations which the Government of Alberta has accepted, or accepted in principle." What I draw to your attention is number 4, that "gaming and lottery profits not be directed to the province's General Revenue Fund." Now, if I recall correctly – somebody correct me if I'm wrong – did not a portion of the profits go into general revenue in this year's budget? Was there not a portion going into the general revenue?

MR. WHITE: All of it is general revenue.

MR. WICKMAN: And then it goes to the various departments. Exactly. Possibly you should be the Minister of Gaming, Member for Edmonton-Calder. Good understanding.

Now we look at number 5, that "all gaming and lottery profits collected by the province be directed to supporting charitable or non-profit initiatives." Charitable or nonprofit initiatives. It says that the government of Alberta accepted these recommendations. Well, the government of Alberta did not – did not – accept recommendation 5, because all gaming and lottery profits are not being directed to supporting charitable or nonprofit initiatives. The bulk of it is being sent over to the health department, to education. In fact, I listened to our esteemed Premier on CHED radio. I even taped it for anyone who wants to hear what the Premier had to say.

I listened to the angry Albertans call about Bill 11, by the way, but that wasn't surprising. I anticipated that. But somebody called and said: why not direct the lottery dollars, the gambling dollars towards health care, towards health? The Premier turned around and said that the bulk of it goes there now, goes to health. Then he said: well, not all of it; some goes to learning and such. But on CHED radio on the Dave Rutherford program he made it very clear that dollars are going into departments like health and such, and you can't call those areas nonprofit initiatives.

Now, I've been asked – will you allow me to revert for a second to introductions?

9:10

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: You wish to revert to Introduction of Guests? Is that what you're asking, hon. member?

MR. WICKMAN: Yes.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Could I ask for unanimous consent of the committee to revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

MR. WICKMAN: Madam Chairman, through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly I want to introduce two guests up in the galleries, Albert Tarrabain and Natasha Scheideman – pardon me if I have it wrong; the member's writing is a bit rough – from Duffield. That's out there by the Stony Plain area. I remember that. If you'll stand and receive the warm welcome of members of the Assembly.

head: Lottery Fund Estimates 2000-2001

(continued)

MR. WICKMAN: Now, trying to get my train of thought back here, the Premier made it very, very clear to me on CHED radio that they are not complying with that recommendation by the gaming summit. Then I go to page 17 and look at the financial statements. Again, the minister did respond in writing to a number of the questions that I asked earlier, and I appreciate that, Mr. Minister. There are some additional ones here.

When I look at the operating expenses, I see the salaries from '98 to '99 going up from $16,554,000 to $19,009,000. Now, that's an increase of $2.5 million in salaries and benefits, which seems extremely high considering there's a review on and we're not supposed to be having an expansion of gaming activities. The other one that strikes me as a bit strange, a bit high, is that I find under travel an increase from $1,023,000 to $1,387,000, which is an increase of $364,000, which I think is a sizable increase. So if the minister could explain that.

Then I go over to page 23, where it talks in terms of the ticket lottery operations, and it lists the various types of scratch tickets and the sporting tickets like Sports Select and such: Western, 6/49, Special Event, Pogo. Pogo: pay for one and you get one free. Quite a bit of money is raised even from a little operation like the pull tickets.

I was speaking to a group of Boy Scouts prior to coming here; that's the reason I didn't get here at 8 o'clock. They were interested in gambling in Alberta, and I asked the question as to whether it's a problem that they think some of their older peers are facing. They say that it's not unusual for guys they know who are under 18 to get somebody that's 18 years of age to go and buy them in particular the Sports Select type of tickets where they can gamble on things like the outcome of a hockey game or a football game or a basketball game.

Now, I'm not sure if the minister in his wisdom in addressing the addiction problems is paying real special heed to those young people that may enjoy the spirit of gambling, because from there the next step, of course, is sort of to graduate to the VLTs in the bars. So it becomes sort of like a training ground for them, and I don't think it's a great training ground because it can go on to cost them for life.

Just some other comments I want to make. There's one other area in here that strikes me as strange that talks in terms of the plebiscites: "In conjunction with civic elections, 36 municipalities representing 70 percent of the provincial population, held VLT plebiscites." Now, we all know that and we know the outcome of those plebiscites, but we also know – and I've said it before and I'll say it again, because I can see so many members paying such close attention to what I'm saying here that they're going to want to hear it again – that the difficulty with the plebiscites is that they did not give the electorate the opportunity for what I consider the other viable option, restricting the gambling to the charitable model, the nonprofit casinos; in other words, allow people to gamble in gambling centres like the charitable casinos, not in the bars, where you're mixing a great deal of booze with the gambling. That's where innocent people get hooked on gambling who don't intend to gamble or had no thought of gambling prior to going to the bar.

The VLTs have quieted down. I'm not saying that the damage has been reduced. Maybe some increased emphasis on the addiction problem has helped, but on the other hand what it could be is sort of a false sense of security. People may have sort of shrugged their shoulders and said: "Well, we've had votes. The government doesn't listen, just like they're not listening on Bill 11. They're not going to listen to us anyhow, so no matter what we think of the VLTs, why bother squawking? Who cares? Who pays attention to what we want? They're going to leave them in the bars whether we like it or not." So that could be the problem as to why we're not seeing the numbers of complaints about VLTs that we were seeing before. The same types of problems aren't being pointed out.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Although when I read in the paper, I often wonder – we had this case. Some of you may have read about a good friend of many of us – myself, the Member for Edmonton-Calder, and others here – from the Italian supermarket, Spinelli's operation, where $75,000 had been taken improperly by one of the employees, who was charged. The first thought that came to my mind was: aha, a gambling addiction. But in that case I was wrong. Teresa Spinelli, in making a victim's statement, pointed out that it was not due to an addiction. So in that case I was wrong, but so often I read about some internal theft, and the first thought that goes through my mind is: I'll bet you that person has a gambling problem.

Once in a while my wife will be reading the obituary column. She may be looking for my name; I'm not sure. She'll say: lookit; it doesn't say where to send donations; I bet that person committed suicide because of gambling. We have seen that happen. We've actually seen it publicized in the paper. Relatives have said that kinfolk have committed suicide because of their addiction to gambling. We can't of course get those people to testify, but relatives are of the opinion that that's what caused somebody to jump off a balcony in Calgary, for example. I believe that does happen, Mr. Minister. It's a very, very serious problem.

Now, there are other members here that are anxious to speak. I've spoken for almost 20 minutes, and I've had the chance to speak on a number of occasions before on lotteries and gaming. There are others that are anxious to go, so I'm going to conclude on that note, and let the next one take it. Thank you.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Through careful examination, attentive listening, and trying to analyze, we do detect one or two, perhaps even three questions that were asked in the long discussion by the member who's been involved with this subject for a longer period of time than I have. It's interesting, Mr. Chairman. Magicians always illustrate by illusion. I think we've seen here that we have politicians illustrating by delusion.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Chairman, when I was carefully listening to debate from the chair, I was rummaging through the numerous letters of support for this government on Bill 11. As a matter of fact, in that broad ream of support letters, I did find something that was quite interesting and that I think applies appropriately to this discussion. It's actually a copy of a letter to the Calgary Herald on the 22nd of March, and it's headed up Bar the Liberals. Well, of course, democracy wouldn't allow that. It says:

Allan Rock's excursion to Calgary to speak to most of Alberta's Liberals . . .

There were about 14 there.

. . . brings to mind an observation of American commentator, P.J. O'Rourke. He has written that giving money and power to politicians is like giving whiskey and car keys to teenage boys.

9:20

In fact, when I was reading through this ream of support letters for Bill 11, Mr. Chairman, this letter leapt out at me. It talks about: "Here in Canada, rather than whiskey," which this department is also responsible for, "we give our federal government 'Liberal Boondoggle Lite.'" Well, I suggest that these kissin' cousins, these very close relations – I know that because the Member for Calgary-Buffalo was actually within 10 feet of the guy who brought you the airbus, the guy who brought you gun control, and the guy who said that the file is closed on hep C: Mr. Allan Rock, the hon. Minister of Health from Ottawa. He was right there. He was within six feet of the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

The letter goes on, Mr. Chairman. It says:

Like its beer namesake, substantially more volume is required to produce the good feelings that quaffers crave.

I'm sure here he's referring to another member who came to Calgary, the Hon. Jane Stewart. Probably sat within 10 feet of the Member for Calgary-Buffalo there too. As a matter of fact, they'll all be sitting together tomorrow night when they're in Calgary. So it's boondoggle lite and boondoggle regular and boondoggle dark, and they're all going to be there together.

The final paragraph:

But, after ingesting huge quantities of Boondoggle Lite and passing it through the system, Liberals are wont to deposit what little remains on the heads of the electorate.

I would submit to you that that's a Liberal credo that runs across Canada.

Mr. Chairman, I know that the member wanted to talk about Bill 11, and I would like to talk about Bill 11, but the House wants to focus on the importance of lottery estimates tonight. When the member talked about for-profit, two-tiered health care, he actually referred to the government as a for-profit government. Well, we all know that programs and services in this organization are not for profit. They're nonprofit. The department estimates are critical.

We would like to go on and on with the trail. First the member talked about looking after big business, expanding an industry, and in fact he then went on to refer to the freeze – the freeze – the fences that are on casinos and expansion of any type of gaming facility in Alberta until there's a gaming policy framework, a licensing policy framework that stakeholders understand, that the public understands, that cities and communities – the Red Deers, the Medicine Hats, the Grande Prairies of the world – can easily fit into, very transparent, very open, as clear in disclosure as our web site.

Firstly, the member from over by the Derrick golf club, Edmonton-Rutherford, says: he's sucking the cash cow; he's milking the lottery fund through gambling and its pervasive movement into Alberta. Then the next thing he says is: what a good move he made; he put a freeze on it. Well, thank you, I think.

He goes on to talk about the lottery fund and the fact that we are going against the general recommendation because about 4 percent of the lottery fund goes to debt repayment, and 96 percent, the balance, the huge balance of this fund – oh, I'm sorry; about 1 percent, $50 million, is scheduled for debt repayment. The balance is going into programs and services that benefit every Albertan, Albertans in Fort McMurray, the fastest expanding city in Canada today. Mr. Chairman, we know that this is happening.

He then says that we're going against the recommendation. Well, while he's saying that we're going against that recommendation of the gaming summit, which he feels is exceedingly, exceedingly important to the fiscal management of this lottery fund, he also has a motion on the floor, Motion 516.

Mr. Wickman proposes the following motion:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the Government to eliminate the Lottery Fund, with all lottery revenues deposited into the General Revenue Fund.

That's the individual that is against the recommendations of the lottery fund summit from Medicine Hat. It's the Liberals again: I want to be on this side of the issue; I want to be on that side of the issue. They don't know what side to come through.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I have two questions at this time in the lottery fund debate. The first one obviously is concerning the use of lottery fund money to repair the roofs, in this case the rotting roofs, of community halls and homes throughout Alberta. Now, I've looked through the lottery fund estimates, and I can't find what measures have been taken to fund this program. Last summer, I believe, in Crossfield there was definitely money put forward to repair the roof on the community hall.

I would like to know how many dollars have been used for this purpose and, Mr. Chairman, are going to be used in the future. It seems to me quite unfair that lottery fund dollars can be used to repair some roofs while the government, on the other hand, forces homeowners, good, hardworking Albertans, to the court system to seek compensation for this scandal. I don't have to go to Ottawa to find a scandal. I can go across the floor, and I can go up and down the row. Another scandal, of course, would be Bill 11 and the boondoggle that's turned out to be.

Also, I have a question for the hon. minister, and this goes back to the gaming summit. If he could confirm this for me regarding the lottery fund, I would be very grateful. Apparently it was discussed in the corridors in Medicine Hat. It's this idea of a lottery, not so much a lottery but a means of raising revenue for minor hockey, for the Calgary Flames, and as I understand it, also for the Edmonton Oilers. As it was explained to me and as it was discussed at the gaming summit, there is to be a lottery developed in this province, and the proceeds of this lottery – and it's up to the individual. The individual has a choice of whether they want to purchase this lottery and support hockey. They have the choice, as it was explained to me. If a person goes to the 7-Eleven and they want to exercise their choice to purchase a lottery ticket, the proceeds of this lottery, as I understand it, are to be divided between minor hockey, the Calgary Flames Hockey Club, and the Edmonton Oilers hockey club.

Now, I just listened with a great deal of interest as this was described to me, and I would be very curious if the minister and his department have any plans for introducing such a lottery for hockey in this province.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. SMITH: Well, again I actually thank the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar for the good question on the Alberta sport prize bond. In fact, Mr. Chairman, I was not minister at the gaming summit, but this is something that has been bandied about, not in hallways but in good, normal business circumstances, with the Department of Gaming.

There has been about $250,000 spent over the last two years to examine the business viability of a prize bond lottery that would allow individuals, good-standing individuals, people with disposable income such as the member, who I know has been a very successful businessman – actually, he's a good entrepreneur. A good entrepreneur, Mr. Chairman. In total, total reverse ideology to what he espouses here in the House, that is a good entrepreneur. That's a man who believes in entrepreneurial success, and he's practised it, and he would have the disposable income to buy a bond from this organization.

This money would be deposited into a fund, and the interest and the investments made from that fund would be spent on prizes and to professional sports teams in a manner that they may or may not deem fit and appropriate. It's up to that private-sector organization to develop it, determine the viability of it, market it, sell it, determine the distribution of it.

9:30

It would be regulated by the Alberta government, if it would be headquartered in Alberta, but it would not be run per se by the Alberta government. I have only seen two pages of the study, hon. member. Those two pages indicate that the numbers, the critical mass in Alberta is not sufficient. Even though we've had a burgeoning economy, even though we've had $30 billion worth of new economic activity over the seven years, even though we have a 4.9 percent unemployment rate, even though we've seen tremendous amounts of people move to this fair province, have seen an increase of 300,000 people over the last seven years – I mean, it attests not only to this government but mostly to the people it represents.

What that means is that this would probably be best served economically – and I know how he appreciates the bottom line. The bottom line says that this should be expanded outside Alberta and perhaps be inclusive of all NHL teams. That is in the private-sector domain. It is up to them to take it forward. I repeat: the government is not entertaining at this point any move to an Alberta sport prize bond.

That was a good question, and I thought it was a question that deserved a clear answer. I know that the member sometimes sees bogeymen behind the doors, sees cronies getting together to conspire. As a matter of fact, I think he even said in Hansard that this government conspires by leaking scoops to the soon-to-be-departed Don Martin, from Alberta, with scoops to the Calgary Herald. So in fact we might even be in league with those evil newspapermen from the Calgary Herald. Mr. Chairman, that is only something the member reported in Hansard, but I know he wanted a clean, succinct answer to the Alberta sport prize bond.

Now, he also talked about what I've come to dearly remember him for, a topic close to the member's heart, one that he's looked out on from many roofs throughout the great vistas of this province, and it's about pine shakes. It's about pine shakes in two community centres, and it said to me that the member wants to know more. The member wants to know more. I thought: we need an expert. We need a person from this government who's able to talk about the creation of this, the person who's helped guide gambling development in this province, a person who's helped put the brakes on gambling development in this province, a person who's got a good heart, a clean conscience, occupies important chairs in the legislative offices, and is the first chair of the Community Lottery Board Secretariat. I would ask the Member for Lacombe-Stettler to clearly enunciate the roles, duties, and costs as they pertain to these estimates of the community lottery boards.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I do want to talk a little bit about the community lottery boards and answer the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar's question.

This is year two of the community lottery board program, and I believe it's been a good program. That's what Albertans are telling me. One of the things with this program is that there's a great deal of flexibility allowed. The boards themselves are able to decide who in fact should have funding within their communities. This is not decided at the provincial level. There's no interference whatsoever from the government of Alberta. Boards themselves can make a decision on what is the priority of their people and what serves the benefit of the community at large. If those are the guidelines, you would have to agree that that would be a good program.

As well, the members on the community lottery boards are decided by the municipalities. The government of Alberta does not interfere whatsoever in board appointment decisions. This is something that the municipalities advertise for and the municipalities in the regional community lottery boards make the decision on. So if a person in this Assembly or someone else doesn't like a certain project that has been funded by the community lottery board, they would actually have to take that decision up with that particular board, because they have made the decision. Many of the boards worked very, very hard over the last two years to put in place board guidelines.

Also, another requirement in the program is that all these dollars must be accounted for to the public. So once granting has taken place, they buy advertisements in the paper, and they must definitely say exactly where all their money has gone. The community at large is well aware of projects that have been funded. If an applicant is turned down, they are certainly entitled to make another pitch the following granting cycle.

To date it seems to have worked very well. In the two years I've been involved in this program, I have only heard of two complaints. Both the minister and I receive a number of letters from very, very happy recipients of lottery funds.

Over the next couple of weeks several of the chairs of the community lottery boards will be getting together to talk and network about what has worked well in their communities with the program so that one community board can learn from the other what in fact is working for some of them. So the wheel doesn't have to be reinvented. They can actually take something home with them and make it work in their own communities. That is about all.

As far as the funding of community roofs, there were two communities that were funded. This was a decision made at the local community for what they thought was a local need. I'm very proud because there wasn't any government interference in that decision, even though that particular issue was talked about a lot in question period and during debate in the House. The people on that board in conjunction with community needs made the decision.

Thank you.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased this evening to rise and offer my thoughts relative to the lottery fund estimates. I'd appreciate it, if the hon. minister is willing, if we can have a bit of a dialogue in my 20 minutes. That would be preferable to me.

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

I have to indicate that in addition to my duties in the House in the last year, Madam Chairman, I've had the experience – I won't call it the privilege – of working in both bingo halls and casinos for our children's elementary school, for hockey fund-raising and lacrosse fund-raising, and I've got a couple of observations relative to those experiences.

Firstly, the reliance this government is placing on families to work these types of functions, if you will, to work bingos and casinos to provide for primary essential funding of education is, in my opinion, misguided and shortsighted. My casino shift was from 9 at night till 3 in the morning, and the bingo shifts have run from 5 in the afternoon till midnight. You have the occasion to talk to people about their thoughts relative to this whole initiative by government. I think that when it comes to sports and recreation most people take a bit of a different view, but the reliance on lottery funds for the provision of essential supports and curriculum aids and technology in our school system I would suggest the majority of people do not support.

Now, we have also had cause to discuss while we're in particularly the bingo environments how unhealthy those environments are to the individuals working in them. I contemplated, prior to doing my last shift, what kind of response I would get if I went into the hall with an oxygen mask strapped to my face and an oxygen tank. I can tell you that after the seven-odd hours of working in that bingo hall, you absolutely cannot get home fast enough to remove the stench in your clothing and hair from cigarette smoke.

9:40

I think there is also evidence that those people who perhaps are not as economically fortunate as others do an increased number of bingos because it helps pay for their child's registration in hockey. They're being subjected to that health risk through the inhalation of smoke. When you see how your clothing absorbs it and your hair absorbs it, I shudder to think about the amount of secondhand smoke that is inhaled during those long shifts in the bingo hall.

My primary question to the minister is: will he consider making bingo halls nonsmoking? If you are going to expect families to work these as a fundamental requirement to enable their children to get a good education and participate in organized sports, I would like to see the government take the initiative to make bingo halls and casinos nonsmoking.

At that point, Madam Chairman, I will sit down and hope that the minister will respond. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MR. SMITH: Thank you very much, Madam Chairman. The member raises a number of good points, points that are fundamentally imbued in Alberta society. One of those is hockey. One of those events that we're faced with a lot is the idea of funding for professional sport franchises. Just as the Calgary Flames have a Saddledome Foundation, that puts money from their revenues back into the community, so does the Alberta lottery fund. Hockey is changing, and I think that's part of a bigger sign that Alberta society is changing as well. In fact, the fastest growing sport in Alberta today is soccer in terms of registration from men and women. I think the terrific job the Canadian team did in Los Angeles winning the Columbia Cup is going to really strike another blow for hockey.

One of the other big parts about hockey is that it's expensive. Hockey is an expensive sport to have children in, and with that comes a responsibility for community, for parents, for coaches, and in some cases for the individuals themselves. In fact, this lottery fund does support amateur hockey. There's a wonderful program in there for athletic scholarships. There are programs in there that support the Alberta Junior Hockey League. There are programs in here that support hockey and the very fibre of Alberta throughout the province.

Also, charities benefit from the structure, as a matter of fact a much complimented structure. Again, when I go through newspaper articles and I'm sifting through those that support Bill 11, I find the odd column that also supports clearly the charitable model of gaming in Alberta and how it's been relatively scandal free, how the government has been able to work in co-operation and conjunction with its partners, the charity partners and the private-sector casino owners.

That then brings us to the next step, which is the charities, the private bingo halls, and the issue of smoking and secondhand smoke. I know how offensive it can be to some and how other people can be indifferent to it. I have been very fortunate over my last 25 years and as the children grew up. I have worked those bingo halls for the Notre Dame Alumni Association. I have worked casinos for the Calgary Old Timers Hockey Association. I have worked casinos for the synchronized swim club of Alberta. I've worked casinos for Notre Dame as well. In fact, Madam Chairman, the only way I could get out of working those was in fact to become elected and therefore be in a conflict of interest and not be able to go in there. So I have declined from volunteering since assuming this portfolio, and I would recommend that maybe the member might even want to consider that option for her own personal health, to talk about having elected office.

I know it's difficult. I know it's difficult when you get home late at night and it's difficult when you throw clothes away. I know it's difficult when you get through the end of a two-day casino. Your charity has netted somewhere in the neighbourhood of $40,000 to $50,000. You're tired, you're worn out, you stink, and you think: why am I doing this?

Well, $40,000 over a two-day event, Madam Chairman, is roughly what is raised from doing 80,000 to 100,000 car washes. Now, I know the member would have wrinkled hands, cold ears from being outside, and although you would be breathing fresh air, you'd be washing cars every day for 365 days a year at the rate of 3,000 a day in order to get to that level.

With the member's professional background and her commitment to health care in Alberta, I know she is going to move from this Legislature this evening after having talked to me and put pen to paper – and actually when I think of the phrase, immediately the face of the Member for Calgary-Buffalo comes together, writing notes as Allan Rock speaks 10 feet from him, being close at the dinner tomorrow night. It just comes to mind as an aside. But I know the Member for Edmonton-Riverview will be putting pen to paper to talk to the private-sector operators, to talk to the charities, and to talk to the municipalities. I think your own experience, Madam Chairman, would indicate that you would see the smoking issue as being one of a municipal jurisdiction. There's the private-sector operator of the bingo hall, there's the charity that's involved, there are individuals, and there's the municipality, and that's where the debate is going to take place.

There are a number of bingo halls. There are a number of areas where there are no-smoking rooms. My mother only goes to the no-smoking part of the bingo halls, and she's 92. As a matter of fact, she went to the smoking part from probably age 70 to 90, and she says she's a little slower now that she's 90 to 92. But, you know, I think she's been able to move through that. I'm very proud of my mother. In fact, I learned to play bingo at my mother's knee, Madam Chairman, and it was a big part of Alberta.

AN HON. MEMBER: In a church basement?

MR. SMITH: No, it wasn't in a church basement, as you bring up. It was at the Elks hall, and then from the Elks hall I can remember going to a drive-in bingo in Stettler, Alberta. Of course, that's in your constituency, Madam Chairman. At that time you would drive to Stettler, a considerable drive from Red Deer, and you would park your car beside the drive-in speaker. They would call the numbers over the speaker. It was called a drive-in bingo, and you won cars. It was a darn big event in Alberta in those days. I just see members now wanting to spring to their feet because they're getting memories of this great land, of growing up in this province. As a matter of fact, bingo, as the Member for Calgary-Buffalo clearly gesticulates, is a part of his heritage too.

MR. DICKSON: Drumheller.

MR. SMITH: Growing up in Drumheller, home of the Drumheller Miners, a hockey team that raised money through car washes, through lotteries, through beer tubs. Probably played against the Hanna Hornets. Who is to say? There was a guy out of Drumheller by the name of Tony Kollman. Let me tell you, could he play hockey. He'd raise money through a number of events that were available to him in those days. Again they were low-key, small money events. Today charities throughout this fair land, throughout Alberta, raise $40,000 to $50,000 from one casino event. That then gives them the opportunity to work at whatever their charities are really designated to do, Madam Chairman.

I know there are others wanting to share in the debate, there's more that needs to be addressed, so I'm actually going to sit down now, Madam Chairman. And I know there are more questions from the member.

9:50

MRS. SLOAN: The only conclusion I can draw from what the minister has just said is that maybe after I work the bingos I should go to the car wash to remove the stench. I didn't hear him commit tonight that he would consider making the bingo halls nonsmoking, as B.C. has done, and I'll continue to dialogue with the minister on that basis.

I'd like to reference the Auditor General's report and recommendations that were made to this ministry in the last published report that we have. I did not see encompassed in the business plan reference to these, so I'd like to ask the minister to give us an update. The Auditor General recommended in his 1998-99 report that "management controls over the issuance of gaming licences be strengthened." He further recommended that the management of the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission provide the Board of the Commission with regular assessments of the operating effectiveness of controls over the issuance of gaming licences.

In the same context the Auditor General also spoke about the issue of the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission eligibility criteria, and he goes on to expand at some length about the "standards and procedures to mitigate risks." I would appreciate it if the minister would talk a bit about the developments and improvements that have been made within those standards and procedures in the last fiscal year.

Further, he highlighted the fact that work plans and stated business objectives for the licensing function were not supported by measurable targets and indicators. The business planning process would be improved if business objectives were linked to deliverables and outcomes for the gaming licensing division.

The results of monitoring performance against targets should form part of the accountability reporting by management to the Board.

Now, as I look at the business plan for Alberta Gaming, I see goals and I see strategies. I do see measures and targets referenced on pages 117, 118, and 119, but there isn't a great deal of elaboration on those, and I would like to have more details as to how the department plans to measure. I'll just give an example. The first measure you cite is that liquor and gaming activities are conducted in accordance with legislation, regulation and policy. Compliance will be monitored by inspection of liquor and gaming activities.

. . . compliance rates relate to the first inspections after initial licensing. Following these [investigations] the compliance rate is expected to be 100%.

But you don't indicate how many of the licensed entities are in fact meeting that requirement, if you follow me. Your measure is basically saying that after the initial inspection the compliance rate is expected to be 100 percent. So how many are in fact meeting that target?

I recall seeing in here that you actually talk about one of your key strategies being to investigate alleged violations of the Gaming and Liquor Act and Regulation . . . policies, conduct inspections and audits of gaming and liquor licencees.

But there's no information about how many investigations have been conducted in the last fiscal year, what were the results of those investigations, and what recommendations have been implemented to increase compliance.

Those are my questions in this set, Madam Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The Minister of Gaming.

MR. SMITH: Thanks, Madam Chairman. Because the member's questions are important and I do want to address them as best I can immediately, I'm going to ask for some latitude from you. These questions are relating to the business plan of the Ministry of Gaming, and those estimates did take place two weeks ago and were approved. As a matter of fact, if I remember, so were the lottery fund estimates approved, but that was actually struck from the record. We want the number of hours clearly on the record. It's a big fund, and it's important to have it put there.

I am going to move towards the exact side that the member talks about when she talks about, first, the Auditor General and his report of 1998-99, when this was not a ministry. The Auditor General started to bring up good points about a business that needs to have a clear definition of policy, rules, regulation, and enforcement. Those comments were a fundamental part, I'm sure, of the creation of the ministry. That was also the direct response that we moved to when we developed these performance measures in the 2000 business plan, the very first business plan of the Ministry of Gaming, that said: how can we measure effective performance of our employees?

In fact, what was happening before: we'd have some liquor inspectors that worked 24 hours a day, virtually. They did a lot of their work in the evening. They didn't know how many places they were going to. They didn't know what to expect when they got there. Then they would waste time by the way they followed up. So what we did put into the business plan was a specific target. We thought that the number of inspectors that were there, hon. member, would be able to go through at least 3,000 establishments a year. Now, that is a 25 percent increase from what they were visiting the year before. Then we said, when you follow up, you either get 100 percent compliance or you go to the next step of further fines, further prosecutions.

It was a difficult wording of a business plan performance measurement, and I'm glad you picked up on it. What we want from those individuals is 100 percent compliance, and from that, it then allows us to have expectations of our staff, a clear expectation and one that's out there in the marketplace with the over 8,000 class A, B, and C licences that exist today. There are also, hon. member, the class D licences, where the liquor stores are, but they have a different inspection criteria.

Certainly the end goal of the game, Madam Chairman, is in fact 100 percent compliance. If you take a look at a process we're working on now – the critic, the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, referred to it – and striking a blow for freer enterprise, although still some regulated enterprise with inducements and exclusivity, that was finding a way to be able to detect an infraction. Once you could detect an infraction, you could enforce it.

I think that the work done, the inspection by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the estimates and on the business plans themselves, has been very good. In fact, as my colleague for Vermilion-Lloydminster points out, there are no more government liquor stores either on the books or around for inspection. Their rate is zero, because there aren't any. There is now a thriving industry of over 800 liquor stores, 2,500 employees. Wages are up. You know, they're organizing and managing themselves in a marketplace, Madam Chairman. What's important is that the government has become more efficient because it spends less for every dollar of markup it obtains in the liquor business. In fact, this process of disposal of government assets has put $65 million, about 10 percent of this year's lottery fund, into the bank accounts of Albertans through the process.

10:00

I digress, Madam Chairman. Enthusiasm is unbridled when it comes to speaking about lottery estimates and its ability to benefit Albertans and its ability to go throughout the province, to be widely distributed, to be used by everybody in such a way that there will be time tomorrow to do this. I can't wait till tomorrow. I can't wait for us to deal with the business of the House with alacrity, with dispatch, and then to move the lottery estimates for Thursday. Therefore, it is a reluctant pleasure for me to ask that we adjourn debate tonight.

Thank you and thanks to all members for the opportunity to speak on a fund so important to all Albertans.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Madam Chairman. It's my pleasure to move that the Committee of Supply now rise and report the estimates of the Legislative Assembly, the estimates of International and Intergovernmental Relations, report progress on the estimates of the lottery fund, and beg leave to sit again.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

MR. SHARIFF: Madam Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

Resolved that a sum not exceeding the following be granted to Her Majesty for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, for the following department and for the offices of the Legislative Assembly.

Department of International and Intergovernmental Relations: operating expense, $24,221,000.

Support to the Legislative Assembly: operating expenses, $26,727,215.

Office of the Auditor General: operating expense and capital investments, $14,638,551.

Office of the Ombudsman: operating expense, $1,644,100.

Office of the Chief Electoral Officer: operating expense, $10,678,270.

Office of the Ethics Commissioner: operating expense, $215,030.

Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner: operating expense, $2,718,536.

Madam Speaker, the Committee of Supply has also had under consideration certain resolutions of the lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2001, reports progress thereon, and requests leave to sit again.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Does the committee concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? So ordered.

[At 10:06 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, March 23, 2000

1:30 p.m.

Date: 00/03/23

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O divine Father, as we conclude our work and prepare to return to our constituencies, help us to draw strength from the opportunities to renew our friendships and acquaintances with the people we were elected to serve. Guide us to reflect upon Thy bounty so that we may more deeply appreciate how fortunate we are to live in and to serve in Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of a famous regiment with a long association with this province, the Lord Strathcona's Horse. Raised in 1900 by private subscription from Lord Strathcona for service in the Boer War, the regiment moved by train from the district of Alberta, North-West Territories for embarkation and departure from Halifax. The Strathcona's achievements in that campaign and subsequently in world wars I and II and Korea were marked by courage, selfless sacrifice, spirit, and dogged perseverance. Collectively and individually the Strathcona's have served in every United Nations and NATO operation since 1947.

The regiment is part of the One Canadian Mechanized Brigade group headquartered in Edmonton. At present the regiment's A squadron is serving with NATO forces in Kosovo. The regiment's reconnaissance squadron, as part of the Fourth UK Armoured Brigade, served with distinction and great professionalism while demonstrating their customary panache in leading this brigade into Kosovo in June of last year. While there the reconnaissance squadron was honoured with a visit from their colonel and chief, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The officer who led the reconnaissance squadron on that tour is here.

Mr. Speaker, with us today are the colonel of the regiment, Lieutenant General Jim Fox; the commanding officer Lieutenant Colonel Craig Hilton; the regimental second in command, Major John Stuckart; B squadron leader, Major Paul Pickell; C squadron leader, Major Pascal Demers; reconnaissance squadron leader, Major Paul Fleury; headquarters squadron leader, Major Rick Brown; and the regimental sergeant major, Chief Warrant Officer Doug Gardner.

I know that all hon. members will want to join me in wishing these soldiers and all members of the regiment, past and present, well with their centenary celebrations from the 17th to the 21st of May. They are in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, and I'd ask them to rise now and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to present a petition signed by 234 individuals from Edmonton, St. Albert, Sherwood Park, Spruce Grove, and Mayerthorpe. They are asking "the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to table petitions including 219 signatures from Edmonton and Sherwood Park and on behalf of my colleague from Lethbridge-East 271 signatures from Lethbridge, Milk River, Coaldale, Magrath, Coalhurst, and Raymond. These are citizens who petition the Assembly "to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Today's total of the presentations of our petitions brings the number to 32,493 Albertans.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to table a petition signed by 237 Albertans from Edson, up the coal branch in Robb, Hinton, Onoway, Gunn, and Darwell. They are urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave today to present a petition to the Assembly signed by 240 people from Edmonton, Camrose, New Norway, Sherwood Park, and St. Albert. All of these people are urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted and very proud this afternoon to present a petition that has been signed by 267 Albertans residing in Cochrane, Airdrie, Cayley, and Calgary. These Albertans petition this Assembly to "urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition signed by 253 residents of Alberta from Edmonton, Leduc, Ardrossan, Sherwood Park, and St. Albert supporting public health care in Alberta and urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition to present this afternoon. This petition has been signed by 256 Albertans from Edmonton, Leduc, Spruce Grove, St. Albert, and Beaumont. They are requesting that the Legislative Assembly "urge the Government of Alberta to stop promoting private healthcare.”

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I would present a petition signed by 117 citizens from Edmonton, Onoway, Whitecourt, and Smoky Lake asking the government “to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition today signed by 114 individuals from Edmonton, Ardrossan, Fort Saskatchewan, Stony Plain, and St. Albert. These “citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition to present to the Assembly from 287 people in northern Alberta from the areas of Grande Prairie, Valleyview, Wembley, Manning, Fairview, Beaverlodge, Grimshaw, Peace River, Falher, Sangudo, and Slave Lake. It says:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to present to the Assembly a petition that has been signed by 204 residents of this province who know exactly what’s in Bill 11. They live in Edmonton, St. Albert, Spruce Grove, and Devon. The petition reads as follows:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I’m pleased today to rise and table with the Assembly a petition signed by 120 citizens of Alberta from Edmonton, Tofield, Redwater, Bruderheim, Cold Lake, and Calmar. These citizens know the truth and found the truth, and they want this government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition signed by 235 people from Edmonton, Redwater, Calmar, Legal, and St. Albert. They are urging “the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition signed by 215 Albertans from Edmonton and Spruce Grove who are urging “the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.”

Thank you.

1:40

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition signed by 341 Albertans from Edmonton, Hilda, St. Albert, Calgary, Boyle, Athabasca, Falher, McLennan, Donnelly, and Girouxville. They are petitioning this Assembly “to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.”

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the petition I presented to the Legislature yesterday be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the petition from 233 Edmonton and area residents that I presented to the Assembly on Wednesday be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented on March 22 against private health care be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would request that the petition I presented on March 22 be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned citizens of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request that the petition I presented yesterday, March 22, be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of the province of Alberta hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

head: Introduction of Bills

Bill 22

Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2000

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to beg leave to introduce Bill 22, the Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2000. This being a money bill Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of the bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

This bill will implement certain changes to the Alberta royalty tax credit program, changes that have been drawn up in concert with industry and others. It will also deal with provisions related to tax-deferred dispositions of property, and it will parallel federal amendments in Bill C-28 and C-72 that are technical in nature but important to be done.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a first time]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Learning.

Bill 23

Apprenticeship and Industry Training Amendment Act, 2000

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Apprenticeship and Industry Training Amendment Act, 2000.

This bill will increase the responsiveness of Alberta's apprenticeship and training system while maintaining Alberta's high industry standard. The changes contained in this bill will complete a four-year consultation with industry and enable the results of this consultation to be fully implemented.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Associate Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and table with the Assembly five copies of a news release that was issued yesterday by the Alberta Chambers of Commerce stating their "overwhelming support" of the thrust of Bill 11, the Alberta

Health Care Protection Act, 2000, and applauding the government for "taking a bold first step in exploring new initiatives" to help improve our publicly funded, publicly administered health system.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table eight copies of the amended response for Motion for a Return 11. The reason for the amendment was to be consistent with our auditing process.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table appropriate copies of a letter from Fred Debre of my riding, who is very, very, very much opposed to Bill 11 and the government's attempt to dismantle the health care system.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings this afternoon. The first is from Constance Jones. She is with the Canadian Federation of University Women. It's a copy of a letter to the Premier wherein she asks that the reports on the government's vision with regards to the privatization of health care in this province be shared with that particular group and states that there's a very real fear of a further shift to an American model of health care.

My second tabling is from a Robert Betty, who has a furniture sales company, and he undertook an initiative whereby he sent out a survey to 170 furniture retailers around Alberta . . .

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. member, the tabling, please.

MS LEIBOVICI: Yes. And the tabling indicates that 46.3 percent of respondents disagree with the government's plan. [interjections]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. members, the chair has chastised the member for speaking at length, and now we'd like to hear her. She has a number of tablings, which she indicated when she first stood up to table them.

Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you. My next tabling is the AMA position statement with regards to RHA contracting with private surgical facilities.

My last tabling is the list of 39 associations that are affiliated with the Alberta Alliance for Mental Illness and Mental Health.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. WOLOSZYN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1996 three Albertans – a Sikh, a Jew, and a Christian – decided to hold an international conference on human rights in Edmonton to mark the 50th anniversary of the United Nations universal declaration on human rights. Their ambitious purpose was to educate the world about human rights and to promote the principles and values of the declaration.

The conference, held in November 1998 and supported in part by the Alberta human rights and citizenship education fund, attracted over 700 delegates from 35 countries. At the conference dinner the 1,500 persons in attendance heard Archbishop Tutu, Chief Justice Antonio Lamer, and UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Mary Robinson show that peace, justice, and freedom can come to all parts of the globe when nations sincerely respect the rights and dignity of each human being.

Mr. Speaker, 54 of the papers presented at the conference have been compiled into a book titled Peace, Justice and Freedom: Human Rights Challenges for the New Millennium. I'd like to table five copies.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

MRS. MACBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table a copy of a letter which I sent today to the Hon. Allan Rock, Minister of Health for the government of Canada, regarding the apparent practice by the Institut de la Polychirurgie de Montreal to charge facility fees for minor surgeries. The point of the letter is to say that "there must be equal treatment of [all] the provinces by the federal government on violations of the Canada Health Act."

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise and table letters of invitation that I have sent to the members for Calgary-Bow, Calgary-Lougheed, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, and Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

MR. DICKSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have but two tablings this afternoon. The first one is a copy of a letter I sent the Speaker dated March 21, 2000, clarifying a reference I had made to the hon. David Carter in an incident he'd been involved in on April 29, 1992. I've clarified it in this correspondence.

The last tabling, sir, is simply copies of a letter I had received. The original letter, dated March 17, 2000, went to the Premier from Bob, Chris, and Kym Lichacz in the Deer Run community of south Calgary expressing their concern and taking the issue with the Premier's characterization of any opponent to Bill 11 as, quote, a left-wing nut, close quote.

1:50

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table copies of 54 cards circulated by the Raging Grannies whom I will have the honour of introducing to this House later on this afternoon. The main message of these cards is Health Care For People, Not for Profit.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table five copies of a letter to me from Klaus Harder, who's thanking me for initiating the challenge to debate Bill 11 with the MLA for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan and stating that family, neighbours, and the community will appreciate knowing why he supports the bill.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have the appropriate number of copies of a letter sent by Elke Blodgett to the Premier that I was asked to table. In it she says: you know, politicians who don't listen to concerns about Bill 11 will find themselves not elected next time. Then she says she was very upset with "the well-orchestrated and controlled truth dissemination session" held in St. Albert on Monday night by the Member for St. Albert.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of evidence package 15, put together by an injured worker. In it he outlines where an injured worker requires neuropsychological assessment. This was recommended by a doctor in 1999, and of particular interest to all members here in the Assembly is a letter from the department of psychology, Calgary regional health authority, where they "do not accept referrals for neuropsychological assessments in personal injury litigation." So after four and a half years this man can still not be assessed.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. They are both letters to the editor from the Oyen Echo dated March 14, 2000.

The first is from Keith and Eileen Leal, where they talk about the fight for public health care. They state: "Senior Albertans, it's up to you. People under 40 have absolutely no idea of what Klein, the corporate handyman, has in store for them."

The second is from William Dascavich of Vegreville, where he talks about glossing over the issue of the private health care bill. He states that in his view "the response from the Alberta government smells fishy" and "not referring to fresh fish."

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MS OLSEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a letter from the hon. Member for Athabasca-Wabasca declining my invitation to debate him on Bill 11 in his constituency. Instead, you know, what he doesn't understand is that Canadians want to debate health . . . [interjections]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: This is a tabling, hon. member, not a debate. I mean, I know it's a chamber of debate, but there are appropriate times to debate. Table your letter and a brief characterization, which I believe you've given, and then we can get on to the next tabling.

MS OLSEN: Thank you. I just want to say that I'll debate him on rural Alberta and anything else he chooses.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

MS EVANS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly a very special guest who is seated in the members' gallery accompanied by Mr. Dennis Pommen. Let me explain. Melissa Hallett is a student on exchange with the International Rotary program. She is residing with a family in Sherwood Park and attending Archbishop Jordan high school. Melissa has been a delightful addition to the local Rotary club. I would ask if both Mr. Pommen and Miss Hallett would stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Associate Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to stand up and introduce to you and through you 65 of the brightest students that we have in our school system today. They come from Blessed Kateri elementary school in my area. They are accompanied by seven adults: Mr. Neil Hutchinson, Mrs. Joanne Sorochak, Miss Lesley-Anne Petcoff, Mrs. Cathy Bereznicki, Miss Brigitte Berube, parent helper Mrs. Asselin, and student teacher Mr. James Van Rye. I would ask that they now stand and receive the very warm traditional welcome of the entire Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce you to a young gentleman. He's taking grade 6 home schooling. He's here on a great tour of the Legislature and was very sharp with the questions, and he knew lots of the answers today. This is Taylor Will, who is in our gallery today with his mom, Rosie Thornton. I would ask them both to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Leduc.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly 13 students from Leduc Estates school. They are accompanied by teacher Mrs. Christine Loose and parent helper Ms Pat Blais. I would ask the Assembly to extend to them our warm welcome.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 15 guests with us today in the public gallery. Mrs. Colleen Simpson and 14 residents from McQueen Place and Northway lodge are visiting today to keep an eye on their representatives in this Chamber. I would ask them now to please rise and receive the warm welcome from all members.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two separate introductions today. First, I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 14 distinguished, well respected, and much appreciated residents from Ironwood Estates in St. Albert. They are accompanied by the bus driver, Mr. Bill Fedeyko, and his wife, Darlene. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Also seated in the members' gallery, Mr. Speaker, are a former colleague of mine in the real estate business in St. Albert, Mr. Martin Sideen and his daughter Amy Sideen. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly as well.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always nice to introduce Albertans that are interested in what's happening in the Legislative Assembly. It's my privilege to introduce two fine gentlemen this afternoon, one from my riding of Edmonton-Rutherford and one from the neighbouring riding of Edmonton-Whitemud. Kuldip Riar and Ranjit Bhangu are in the public gallery. If they could please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly seven members of the Raging Grannies of Edmonton. They are highly respected for their work on all kinds of public policy issues, including opposition to Bill 11. They are Elvira Leibovitz, Betty Mardiros, Louise Swift, Marg Stephens, Brenda Manasse, Evelyn Tomlinson, Wendy MacDonald. They are seated in the public gallery. I would now request them all to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

2:00

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Learning.

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you three people. The first is Mr. Brian Bickley, who has more than 30 years experience in industry and is an industrial relations manager with Syncrude Canada Ltd. and a member of the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board. The second person is Mr. Don Lezetc, who is a member of the Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board as well as the Alberta Building Trades Council and the Western Apprenticeship Coordinators Association. They're accompanied by Ms Shirley Dul, who is the executive director of the apprenticeship and industry training division within Alberta Learning. I'd ask two things: first of all, that they accept my thanks for all the help and work that they have done on Bill 23 and, second of all, that they rise and receive the warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: First main question. The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government of Alberta has overseen a massive spin campaign costing millions of dollars in public money, but apparently they forgot to tell government MLAs what's in the bill. As proof, yesterday two government members indicated that Bill 11 does not allow for overnight stays in hospitals when of course clearly that's indicated on the very first page as to why this legislation is needed. My questions are to the Acting Premier before he leaves. Did the minister of health or the Premier deliberately misinform their own caucus, or did they just not tell them the truth about what was really in Bill 11?

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, I'll tell you what government MLAs know about this bill. They know that the bill has been mailed to all Albertans. That's unprecedented, that every citizen will have a copy of it. We all know that this will protect the Canada Health Act. This particular bill will protect it. We all know that this bill will prevent a two-tier system from ever evolving in this province. We all know that this bill will lead to reduced waiting lines, and it will lead to enhanced care. That's what we know about this bill.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, maybe we can try the acting minister of health, Mr. Speaker. Isn't the real reason that the Premier and the minister of health have kept government members in the dark about this bill is so that their own PR campaign could control the message?

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. members, questions shouldn't be argumentative; however, the hon. minister may wish to respond.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you. I'd be happy to respond, although I do take some exception to the phrasing of the question because, Mr. Speaker, nobody is being kept in the dark.

This policy, at the request of federal cousins in Ottawa, has been out in the hands of Albertans and other municipalities and jurisdictions across the country since November of last year. Just recently, to further the full disclosure of what the intentions are, to improve the health system in this province, we did a mass mail-out to almost every household in the province. Surely that's not keeping anyone in the dark.

In fact, we're doing quite the opposite. We're encouraging discussion; we're encouraging debate. We're looking for constructive assistance with respect to how to better protect an excellently funded, excellently administered, publicly funded health system in this province, and we hope to continue doing that with full disclosure.

MRS. MacBETH: So, Mr. Speaker, can this minister tell us why even his own government caucus members have been kept in the dark about this bill?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, no one is being kept in the dark, as I just said. However, I would like to state that in particular the bill does state that major surgeries will remain and only be done in fully accredited public hospitals, so the bill specifically precludes overnight stays for major surgeries. However, at the same time, as an option regional health authorities are well within their right to consider proposals for minor surgery to be looked at in their area.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The chair was unable to hear the last part of the hon. minister's response and wondered if it would be possible for all members to curtail their enthusiasm for his response so that we all may hear it.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you. As I was saying, major surgeries will remain in fully accredited public hospitals, but regional health authorities would be allowed to consider as an option overnight stays for minor surgeries that are low-risk, that are provided in a fully accredited safe environment at no cost for insured medically necessary services, no cost to the patients.

MRS. MacBETH: You know what? I think we should give them a course on what's in this legislation, Mr. Speaker.

My second question is to the acting minister, and it concerns the issues of honesty and clarity in the bill that bears his minister's name. My question is: if Bill 11 protects public health care, as the government has alleged, then why is it that they chose to call the bill the Health Care Protection Act instead of the public health care protection act?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's probably the nicest puffball question I'll ever receive on this, and I'd be happy to answer that. It is deemed and titled the Alberta Health Care Protection Act because that's what it does: it protects public health care.

Let me read to you how it does that. It states, for example, in the preamble:

Whereas the Government of Alberta is committed to the preservation of the principles of universality, comprehensiveness, accessibility, portability and public administration, as described in the Canada Health Act . . . as the foundation of the health system in Alberta . . .

Furthermore, it also states that "no person shall operate a private hospital in Alberta." It further states that no one will have to pay for an insured medical service regardless of where it might be provided.

There are a number of other things that protect consumers and level the playing field and standardize and make more uniform things with respect to charges. These are things that consumers and patients of this province want, and that's why it's called the protection act.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. minister, you might want to save some for the supplemental.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, given that the Manitoba Private Hospitals Act clearly and honestly defines a private hospital to be "a house or building in which four or more patients are received and lodged at the same time for medical or surgical treatment," why did this government try to fool Albertans into somehow thinking that approved surgical facilities aren't private hospitals?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No one is trying to fool anyone with anything here. The bill is out there. It's in the hands of people. People are taking a reasonable amount of time to read it through, to understand it, seek clarification from all of their MLAs. I would hope that the opposition MLAs would be fair and consistent in their own practice that way.

Specifically, however, with reference to what's going on in terms of similar legislation in at least four or five other provinces, I want to just remind the Official Opposition Leader that there will be a meeting of provincial health ministers starting tonight and going on tomorrow, which I will attend, and I want to find out about a few of these inconsistencies that perhaps may exist in other provinces and ask the federal government why they haven't addressed them.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, will this minister come clean and recommend to his minister, who he'll be seeing later today, that they be as forthright and frank and honest in Alberta's legislation as the government of Manitoba has been and admit that Bill 11 simply paves the way for private hospitals?

2:10

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, this bill specifically bans and prohibits private hospitals from starting up in this province. Not only that, but there are definitions . . .

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: One can readily see the excitement that occurs at these public meetings that are held from time to time across the land.

Hon. minister, in conclusion.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you. The question comes down to: what is a public hospital and what is a clinic? There are numerous examples across this province. Some of them are right here in the city of Edmonton, and I would presume that the opposition leader may have visited some of those when she was the health minister, and she should well know the difference between a hospital and a clinic. If she or any other members don't, I'd be happy to take them on tour with me and show them the difference.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Third main question. The Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

MRS. MacBETH: Second supplementary; right? [interjections]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The records of the Speaker, who is a novice at this, and the table are in alignment with one another. This is your third main question.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, in 1994 the ministers of health across Canada agreed to take whatever steps were required to maintain quality public health care, all the provinces except one, however. Can the Acting Minister of Health and Wellness tell us which province did not agree with that protection of public health care?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, the ministers of health right across this country have a strong commitment, I'm sure, to the Canada Health Act. However, I want to spell something out very clearly in this regard, and that exists on page 4. [interjections]

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. members of the opposition, it is difficult to understand why one would ask a question of someone and then hoot and holler while they give the answer that you presumably needed. Remember that part of the admonition of Beauchesne is that this is an important question and you should know the information: bringing government to account and all that kind of thing. So let us hear the hon. minister.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you very much. What I wanted to say was that on page 4 there is specific reference to how in this province under Bill 11

- where a person receives an insured surgical service at a designated surgical facility,
- (a) the operator of the surgical facility shall provide facility services to the person, and
- (b) no person shall charge or collect any amount in respect of the provision of facility services.

And it goes on. That's why it's important for the ministers across this country to get together, like they're doing tonight and tomorrow, to address issues like the hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned with respect to some possible contraventions that are occurring in Montreal, I think she said.

Finally, let me just give you a little quick quote here from some of the other Premiers across this country. Here's a quote from national television by Premier Brian Tobin of Manitoba. He said: in Newfoundland and Labrador today we're sending people into . . . [interjections] I'm sorry. Newfoundland and Labrador.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. members, if the chair recalls the question, the question was: which province? Presumably we're still answering which province it is that was referred to.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Well, I'm attempting to. I'll just correct that comment, Mr. Speaker.

Premier Tobin of Newfoundland and Labrador said on March 2: in Newfoundland and Labrador today we're sending people into the United States for both cardiac surgery and for cancer treatments; that's happening all across this country; we are already supporting private health care in another country; it's time to deliver the service here in Canada. End quote.

Now, the point is that there are some inconsistencies across the country with respect to how certain principles of the Canada Health Act are being administered, and we need to clear those up. That's why the Premier of this province is meeting with the Prime Minister this afternoon, and that's why I and the minister of health are meeting with other ministers later today and tomorrow.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, for the information of the acting minister of health it was Alberta that didn't sign on to the protection and the quality of public health care in that 1994 accord amongst ministers. So can this minister tell us: is the reason that Alberta did not buy in because they knew all along they were planning to set forth private hospitals?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, there is no private hospital being contemplated or allowed for establishment in this province under Bill 11. That's very clear. However, I would ask the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations to supplement the earlier part of that question, please.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, as this . . .

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hopefully that is in the hon. minister's present capacity.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Yes, it is.

Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition is referring to an intergovernmental agreement that applies across Canada, I would like to take this opportunity to fully explain what occurred at the time of that signing, and I will do it with brevity.

The Minister of Health for Canada changed the interpretation of the Canada Health Act as we understood it. The hon. Leader of the Opposition would know that because under her leadership as then minister of health there were some 38, maybe plus, private clinics operating in our province.

MR. SAPERS: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. McCLELLAN: When the interpretation of that act was changed, it required agreement from all parties in Canada to legislation around the protection of private clinics. As I recall, Alberta at that time asked for time to work with the private clinics who were operating in this province, that would be negatively impacted, to come to an agreement. There was an agreement reached, Mr. Speaker, and there are 12 principles regarding the involvement of private clinics. That agreement was reached with the government of Canada and Alberta Health.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, back to the acting minister of health. If an approved surgical facility is not a private hospital, then can he explain why the definition of an approved surgical facility in Bill 11 is virtually identical to the definition of a hospital in the Canada Health Act?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, the bill and the definitions that it contains are there for very specific reasons. First of all, it's important to clarify what a lot of the lingo surrounding medical services and medical delivery is all about. That is done.

Secondly, it's also important to clarify what it is that we're not allowing, and the definition is very clear. We are not allowing any person to "operate a private hospital in Alberta." That's why it's there, and that's why it's defined, and it's clearly stated.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are curious as to why, almost three weeks after the release of Bill 11, government MLAs remain dangerously misinformed and totally in the dark about the contents of Bill 11. I have a constructive suggestion to address a seemingly intractable problem for the government caucus: invite noted researcher and author Kevin Taft to make a half-hour presentation to the full government caucus. I, like thousands of ordinary Albertans, have had the privilege of hearing Kevin's presentation, and he's incredibly powerful and convincing. My question is to the Acting Minister of Health and Wellness. Will the associate minister recommend to his government that the respected author and researcher Kevin Taft make a presentation to government members to clear up confusion on Bill 11, and if not, why not?

2:20

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, I won't commit the entire caucus to a meeting like that, but if the hon. author that is being referred to wishes to have a meeting with me, I'd be happy to meet with him.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the minister for the generosity of giving me the invitation, but will he invite Mr. Taft? Let me ask the question again. Why would the government pass up an opportunity to hear accurate, timely, and powerful evidence from a respected Alberta scholar as to why contracting out overnight surgeries to for-profit hospitals would be a costly and irreversible mistake?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said in reply to the first question – and I think the second question is basically a regurgitation of the first – we have a consultation process that is ongoing and under way right now, hon. member. As part of that, we're allowing all Albertans to bring their ideas forward. Some of them are making their way into various offices right now, and at the same time so too are a number of groups and organizations requesting more information and clarification. I'd be happy to receive an invitation from Mr. Taft, and I would personally meet with him and listen to what he has to say.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Final supplemental, hon. leader.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question will go to the Acting Premier, who probably is enjoying his last day in the House. Why does the . . . [interjections]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: I imagine the group is reacting to the pun as well as to the comment. Could we just address a question to a minister and not editorialize what the minister may or may not be doing?

Third party, let's have the question.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, my last question is to the Acting Premier. Why does the government refuse to let its own members hear both sides of the story when it comes to contracting out complex surgeries to private, for-profit hospitals?

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, a lot of people are presuming on my future here today. I don't know if they're happy about the prospect that I may or may not be here, but I'm here today and may be here tomorrow. [interjections] They're begging me to stay, Mr. Speaker, begging me to stay.

Mr. Speaker, members of the government caucus decide who they wish to hear and speak to, and they listen to Albertans. They do that in an increasing way across this province. If I were to suggest to them that they listen to Mr. Taft, that would be a decision they would have to make, but I think they would question why I would want that to happen.

Here's the reason I say this. Back in 1993, when the government policy was to reduce debt and deficit, Mr. Taft followed with a book that seemed to insinuate that we were making up the story about even having a debt or a deficit. I wish Mr. Taft could have been in my office to phone the credit rating agencies for me and say, "Actually there is no debt," and to phone the bankers and say, "Actually we don't owe you any money; it's all a big trick." So I would not be surprised if members here were to say to me: well, we can listen to this guy, but he's running around saying that we made up the story about debt and deficit when international agencies, provincial agencies, banks, and institutions around the world said that we indeed did have a debt.

So I would be somewhat reluctant to say: you've got to listen to this guy. But his book is available. It is out there. It's gathering dust on a number of shelves, and they can take a read of that book, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Tourism Marketing

MR. DUCHARME: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Some of my constituents have raised questions regarding the government's recently announced $4 million Travel Alberta marketing campaign to attract visitors to Alberta from key areas in the United States and Canada, and specifically they raise a question regarding a television commercial only offering images from the province's more southern communities, especially those neighbouring the Rocky Mountains. I ask the Minister of Economic Development the following: who's responsible for tourism, and what is he doing to address these concerns?

MR. HAVELOCK: Hon. member, that is a very good question. I would first like to remind the hon. member and all members of this House that a consortium from Edmonton and Calgary, Travel Alberta International, was awarded a contract last year by this government and was delegated the responsibility to manage the province's international marketing campaign.

As concerns the specific television commercial referred to, Travel Alberta International produced the 30-second commercial which the member refers to as part of the new Americas campaign. Mr. Speaker, this TV ad was produced in close consultation with private-sector tourism representatives from across the province, and I can tell you that all of those representatives agreed unanimously that in light of the fact that they only had a 30-second time slot to work with, they wanted to concentrate and focus on those icons which were the most recognizable icons from this province.

However, I want to assure this House that this government is in charge with respect to this issue. I have discussed the concerns raised by the hon. member with Travel Alberta, and Travel Alberta recognizes that there is some sensitivity to this issue. As a result, a new wider-reaching commercial has been cut and will be used in the near future. [interjections] Mr. Speaker, please, this is important. I will tell you that the new commercial will show activities and icons from a wider variety of locations around Alberta including the Legislature Building, West Edmonton Mall, and some cultural events.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member will have a first and a second supplemental.

MR. DUCHARME: Mr. Speaker, the communities within the constituency of Bonnyville-Cold Lake want to be assured that they will receive fair and equitable representation in the province's tourism marketing efforts. Can the hon. Minister of Economic Development tell them what else is being done to assist these communities to market themselves as tourism destinations?

MR. HAVELOCK: Mr. Speaker, I'll speak much more quickly, because there's a lot of information that I want to get out. There are other numerous elements and publications. In fact, I have with me a publication that will be distributed to anyone who calls our 1-800 number, and that 1-800 number is being advertised through the international marketing campaign. In this package – and I have five copies which I will table – we have an all new 60-page Travel Alberta vacation planner. We also have accommodation guides and campground guides.

Also, Mr. Speaker, just today we announced a new in-resident marketing program of $1.1 million, and we are going to be advertising to Albertans the activities and events that are available for them to take advantage of. So we're effectively increasing destination awareness. We want to promote a wide variety of special regional events and attractions. I will also say that as part of this package there will be a private-sector company participating with respect to an exciting promotion which will be focused on north-central and northern Alberta.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Final supplemental. Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

MR. DUCHARME: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the strategic tourism marketing plan has been in effect for over a year now, how are we assisting communities to better market themselves?

MR. HAVELOCK: Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to say that in the first year of its operation this industry/government partnership attracted more than $2.5 million from Alberta companies with respect to participating with government dollars. In fact, that is a leveraging ratio of in excess of 2 to 1, and that exceeded our target of 1 to 1. As a result of this past year's experience we have revised our partnership policy for investments into marketing so that the private sector, particularly the Alberta private sector, will be even more stimulated to invest. We're increasing the ability of privately funded destination marketing organizations to participate.

We also realize the important role that in-kind contributions play, especially in smaller communities, so we're raising that level from 5 to 10 percent. We've also cleared away an impediment that made it difficult for us to partner with other organizations such as the Canadian Tourism Commission.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, during my tour of tourism regions last summer I discussed with a number of the tourist destination regions some of the difficulties they were having with respect to their boundaries, and we have undertaken a boundary review. In fact, I believe that's impacting the hon. member's riding.

2:30

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Daily we've been hearing in this Assembly that the reason for Bill 11 – and I'm going to quote the Premier – is to put “in place some very stringent regulations relative to contracting to private surgical clinics.”

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

MS LEIBOVICI: Well, I'm glad we're all agreed, because right now, section 62(a) of the Hospitals Act – and you can all look it up – gives this minister, the Minister of Health and Wellness, the power to make regulations – I'm quoting again out of the act – “prescribing the basis on which the Minister may make contracts with . . . private hospitals, or other institutions, facilities or persons.” So I'm going to ask the Acting Minister of Health and Wellness: will he confirm that section 62(a) of the Hospitals Act gives him the power to regulate the contracts with private hospitals and approved surgical facilities?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 is quite clear with respect to the process for any potential proposal that may come in that would require a review of the terms and conditions, also the full disclosure of it. In fact, if the hon. member would refer to the act where it talks about these agreements, what the conditions are, what the issues are with respect to freedom of information and protection of privacy, what the issues are with respect to the conditions that must be met, what the approval processes are, I think she would be quite convinced that it's extremely thorough, extremely detailed, and that patients' concerns are well addressed in that respect.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: First supplemental. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you. Well, given that the acting minister has the authority right now in current legislation, the Hospitals Act, to make regulations governing the contracts with either private hospitals or approved surgical facilities, why do you need Bill 11?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 is needed for several reasons. First of all, we do not currently have legislation to ban or prohibit the establishment of private hospitals in this province. Bill 11 will specifically ban those. Secondly, we do not have enshrined in local provincial legislation a commitment to the Canada Health Act. This bill will specifically do that. We do not have in legislation tight enough controls and protection issues with respect to some of the potential for contracting out of all and various clinics. Those are some of the highlights.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. minister, I'll let you continue. There are some hon. members who are insisting on speaking from their place, and as you know, the rules of the House are that one member stands and speaks at a time. When the chair recognizes the hon. minister, hopefully, since the opposition asked the question, they would give him the courtesy of hearing the answer.

Would you conclude, hon. minister, or have you?

Private Health Services (continued)

MR. ZWOZDESKY: There are many more reasons why people are looking for issues that are covered here under Bill 11, but let me just conclude in the interest of brevity to allow more questions to come up. One of things that we were asked to do by the federal government is to look at creative, innovative, cost-effective new ways of delivering health care in the future, because we all want to preserve an excellent system. We just want to make it better. One of the key things here is to remember that the federal Minister of Health has commanded us to look at innovative and creative ways because in his words: the status quo is not an option. This bill provides some options that are being discussed now.

MS LEIBOVICI: I'll keep my questions short, though I wonder why we bothered passing a motion in this Legislative Assembly saying that we agree to the principles of the Canada Health Act.

My question is: is the only reason, then, for Bill 11 so that the new private hospitals in this province and the new approved surgical facilities in this province can bypass the standards in the Hospitals Act? Is that why we have Bill 11?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, that question really hinges on something between the irrelevant and the absurd. There are no private hospitals going to be allowed in this province under Bill 11. Now, let's get that message out there very clearly.

What Bill 11 does is provide an option for regional health authorities to consider under very strict and firm type guidelines the possibility of an insured minor surgery to be done in a safe, fully-accredited setting where the patient doesn't have to pay one cent for it. If they are insured under the Alberta Health Care plan, it doesn't matter if they receive the major or minor surgery in a public hospital or if they receive one of a very narrow range of safe minor surgeries in a private clinic. They won't have to pay a cent for it. What could be more clear than that? [interjections]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. member, I thought you were going to practice for Tuesday, when we had the television on.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Sale of Provincial Buildings

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A recent news release by the Minister of Infrastructure indicated that a number of surplus government-owned buildings have been put up for sale. Since that announcement, I have heard some comments and questions from constituents and Edmontonians regarding the sale of especially the old federal building and the Charles Camsell hospital.

My questions are all to the Minister of Infrastructure. Could the minister inform this Assembly as to why he is selling a building such as the federal building instead of renovating it to house government departments, many now housed in expensive leased space?

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're not selling the federal building. What we are doing is consulting with five expert authorities on how we can redevelop the federal building for a different use. We've sent letters to people like the architects, the Museums Association, the Alberta Construction Association, and others to form a blue-ribbon panel. We'll get them to review the building, have a look at it, and see what uses we could accommodate in that building in the future.

As to the present leases, there are some that are long term. We'll have to wait for those leases to expire in terms of government accommodation.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: First supplemental. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the city of Edmonton is projected to be Canada's fastest growing city this year, could the same minister inform this Assembly why he is selling the Charles Camsell hospital when it may indeed be needed due to Edmonton's growth?

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Charles Camsell hospital, which the hon. member is referring to, is now sitting empty. Many of the programs have been redeployed to other newer facilities. We've had the hospital assessed by a consultant, and we are looking at finding some other uses for that building. It's presently in a residential area. To redevelop the present building – we're told it's not quite suitable for long-term care, but certainly there may be other areas where we'll be looking at renovating that facility by the private sector for other uses, fitting within the context of what is allowed within the general municipal plan of the area.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Third question. Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister inform this Assembly if there will be full public disclosure before any deal is signed as to who the prospective buyers are, what plans they have for each respective building, and the sale price?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, there are appraised values that are attached to all of the surplus properties that we have listed. These will go out in terms of either requests for proposals or tenders, and the successful bidders will know quite well that whatever use they intend the building to put to has to conform to the current existing municipal general plan. After the sale is done, of course, all of the sale prices are totally public. That's part of government's policy: transparency.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

2:40

Private Health Services (continued)

MR. SAPERS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Acting Premier please explain why spending a million dollars or more on the Bill 11 propaganda campaign, which contains errors which the government's own members seem to have ignored, which didn't anticipate the many amendments that the Premier is now speculating about – would the Acting Premier explain why that kind of a campaign is not a waste of taxpayers' money?

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, when you take the unprecedented step of sending to every Albertan, every household in the province, a copy of the bill so that Albertans themselves can be the judge and give us the feedback, that is never a waste of money when you go directly to the people to see what the people think. That's an investment. It's not a waste of money.

MR. SAPERS: Well, then given the failure of that campaign, given the fact that Albertans in droves are saying, "Return to sender," how much more money is the government going to spend trying to sell Bill 11 to Alberta taxpayers? How much more?

MR. DAY: I've already indicated clearly, Mr. Speaker, that this has been sent to every Albertan in the province, and it's interesting how things are beginning to turn right now. We are in a time of listening, listening very carefully to what Albertans say.

But it is fascinating to listen and to read the letters from a growing number of doctors who say that they agree now with Bill 11. It's very interesting to see representatives of communities right across this province – and we don't take the time to put in one letter per day on the issue – chambers of commerce, the people who are the driving force to a prosperous economy in this province, the families and the small businesspeople of this province who have gathered together, analyzed the bill, and indicated clearly that they are in support of this bill. The tide is turning on this, Mr. Speaker, as people have the opportunity to read it themselves, uncluttered by any opposition filtering, and then give us the feedback.

Again, Mr. Speaker, that's an investment, and it's one that is bringing dividends in good insights to us as a government.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, final supplemental.

MR. SAPERS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Will the Acting Minister of Health and Wellness please tell the Assembly how many hip surgeries or knee surgeries could have been performed with the money that's been spent on the Bill 11 sales campaign?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of people on waiting lists for the very surgeries that are being referred to. One of the things that Bill 11 is intended to do is to help reduce some of the waiting lists, and I'm going to explain now so that all the members understand how that might happen. At the moment in the public hospital system all minor surgeries and all major surgeries that require an overnight stay can only be done in a public hospital. What Bill 11 would allow regional health authorities to do is to extract some of the people who are on those waiting lists for minor surgeries, consider having them done in a safe, fully accredited private clinic over here, and that would reduce some of the waiting lists over there. So that is one of the considerations, and it is only an option. It may not apply across the whole province, but in those regional health authorities that are facing those long lineups, such as the hon. member has referred to, they should be looked at, and we've added more money to have that done, by the way.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

MR. FRIEDEL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I noticed with a great deal of interest the recent Fraser Institute study that compared the federal and provincial budgets for the past year, and it ranked the governments in terms of fiscal performance. I was quite pleased with Alberta's overall performance, but I was concerned by our province's relatively poor ranking in the spending category. My questions are for the Provincial Treasurer. Can he tell us, for the benefit of those in the Assembly that may not have read it, where Alberta ranked in the spending category and explain why the subpar performance?

MR. DAY: Mr. Speaker, this study certainly shows that Alberta scored top marks across the country, the top performer in terms of the overall fiscal management of its resources and revenues. On the spending side we achieved a fourth-place rating, and that is because, in fact, we increased spending per capita. We have done that very openly and very clearly especially in the areas of health and education: a 9.3 percent increase in health in terms of our spending this year and a 9 percent increase in terms of spending in the area of learning and education. On those two items we have made a commitment to Albertans that we will not only match growth and inflation but in fact look at ways of increasing because of the increased needs that are being felt there. That's why we scored overall fourth in that particular category.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: First supplemental, the hon. Member for Peace River.

MR. FRIEDEL: Thanks again, Mr. Speaker. Given these results and the Fraser Institute's analysis of Alberta's spending, can the Treasurer tell us what Alberta is doing to maintain its fiscal leadership role and to ensure that we stay there?

MR. DAY: Well, that is very important, Mr. Speaker, because Albertans continue to tell us to stay the course, so we're making the commitment very clear. We've made the commitment clear in Budget 2000. We will continue to have balanced budgets. We will continue to have no deficit. We will continue to pay down debt. We will continue to lower taxes. We will continue to manage effectively. We will do all of those things to maintain the number one position – the number one position – in this country right here.

MR. FRIEDEL: My final question, Mr. Speaker, is also to the Provincial Treasurer. Given the ratings, can he tell us what impact these studies like the ones from the Fraser Institute actually have on our economy?

MR. DAY: The impact of the positive news going out across the country about the sound fiscal management that occurs in this province as a result of the input of all MLAs listening to the citizens of Alberta who are saying to stay the course is that it continues to cause people to want to move here to this province. They know that this is a jurisdiction where prosperity and opportunity will continue to abound because we continue to manage things in a good way and create the fiscal capacity to lower taxes and pay down debt and do those other sorts of things. So whereas we can't measure precisely this particular report and its impact, it does continue to enhance the news that this is the place to be because of the policies that we have in place.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last fall this government rammed Bill 40, the Health Information Act, through the Legislature before Albertans could find out that it stripped them of their health information privacy and paved the way for connecting private hospitals to our public health care system. Now the government has brought in Bill 11, which finishes the plan to sell Albertans' public health care system out from underneath them. My questions are to the Acting Minister of Health and Wellness. Will private hospitals, approved surgical facilities, be custodians, affiliates, or both under the Health Information Act?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, if a contract or if a proposal for a private clinic to be established for doing minor surgeries is approved, then that is exactly what it will become and that's what it will stay. By definition it will be a private surgical facility within which a limited range of services are fully paid for provided they are medically necessary and insured services. So the answer to the question is that they will remain as defined in the act under Bill 11.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, we expect the minister to be able to answer the questions having read the legislation which isn't there. I'll ask it again.

Speaker's Ruling Insisting on Answers

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: All hon. members who've read Beauchesne about question period know perfectly well that the Speaker has no ability to require anyone to answer the question, so reflecting on whether they do or not is not valid. So would the hon. member ask the question, and if you feel it hasn't been answered, then you can repeat the question. Edmonton-Ellerslie, first supplemental.

2:50

Private Health Services

(continued)

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will in fact ask the question again very slowly. Will private hospitals, approved surgical facilities, be custodians, affiliates, or both under the Health Information Act?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, let me say this again and for the viewers who are watching this. I don't know how many times this has to be said so that people across the way here understand: there are no private hospitals that are going to be allowed to start up under Bill 11.

However, in fairness to that particular member asking the question about the custodians of health information, there are a number of people who are custodians of health information. They include doctors, they include nurses, and they include staff who work in some of the facilities: lab assistants, lab technicians, people who do diagnostic services. I mean, there is a wide range of people who Albertans trust with their information, and that is very clearly spelled out.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, one more time. Will the minister please answer the question with reference to Bill 40: will approved surgical facilities be custodians, affiliates, or both under the Health Information Act, as is written in his own legislation? Just answer the question.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, I believe I have answered that question. If the member wants a specific definition of what a custodian is or what an affiliate is, I'll be happy to provide her an extended answer in writing with respect to those particular issues.

head: Members' Statements

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: We have a number of members' statements. We'll take a 30-second break, and then we'll call on the hon. members.

Hon. members, we have this afternoon three members' statements. The first is Calgary-Fort, followed by Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Health Care System

MR. CAO: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to speak about a real story of health care service. Earlier this year my elder brother Vuc was not feeling well. After being examined by his family doctor, he was referred to a specialist for further diagnosis. The specialist ran several tests and diagnosed that he had cancer in the bladder and one failed kidney. It was terrifying news for our family even though he was a military officer, wounded several times and survived the Vietnam war. Due to the seriousness of his health situation, he was scheduled for hospitalized surgery a few weeks after that. With the amazing advanced technology in medical science he had an eight-hour long surgery. His bladder was removed and replaced by parts cut from his small intestine. His nonfunctioning kidney was also removed. He is now recuperating at home with continuous and regular reporting of his progress to the hospital.

Mr. Speaker, with the current health care debate going on in Alberta and across Canada, I asked my brother a few questions and received answers. My brother is an average American, very similar to an average Albertan. I want to share with the Assembly some points about health care service. The health care service he receives is excellent. He is under a health care insurance program through his work organization. He does not care about how and by whom his health care service is delivered as long as his life is preserved and as long as he doesn't have to pay outside of his insurance premiums. With his personal experience he believes that the American health care system is the top in the world. It attracts both the top professionals and the most critical patients from all over the world. Of course, American people always feel that way about their ways in their country. My brother's advice to me is to keep the health care insurance program public and for everyone, and I believe in his advice.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Kananaskis Development

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In recent weeks I have received many letters from Albertans who are worried about proposed developments in the Spray Lakes area of Kananaskis. If plans go ahead, there could be a large four-season resort at the southern end of the Spray Lakes as well as heli-skiing and boat tours on the lake. A large resort in this location with the volumes of traffic that it would create would cause serious fragmentation of important wildlife habitat. Studies have shown that grizzly bears are particularly vulnerable to human intrusion, and the Spray Lakes area is one of the last relatively undisturbed north/south corridors.

In survey after survey Albertans have made it clear that they do not want further commercial development in Kananaskis Country.

The provincial government has ignored Albertans' wishes by permitting developers to proceed with their application despite the fact that there is so much opposition to it.

We know that the government intends to proceed in due process, which in this case includes an environmental impact assessment and a hearing by the Natural Resources Conservation Board. However, the repercussions of this development are so far reaching that many people believe it should be stopped now before further costs are incurred. This would mean negotiating with the developer and offering an alternative location outside Kananaskis in a less environmentally sensitive area. It could also mean providing compensation. I believe this is a cost that many Albertans would be willing to pay to rectify the current government's mistake.

Development of the Spray Lakes area would have irreversible and far-reaching effects not only for animals in the immediate vicinity but for their movement along the eastern Rockies. We need to protect this very valuable area now, and I urge the government to act immediately.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Agriculture Minisummit

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to thank the participants of the Wetaskiwin-Camrose constituency agriculture minisummit that was held in Camrose last night. The minisummit was attended by over 70 people from the agricultural community of my constituency and nearby farms. Main themes included the rural way of life, land use, youth and agriculture, marketing, transportation, globalization, agriculture research, subsidization, and the role of government and the private sector in agriculture.

Recently in this House through the debate on Bill 204, introduced by the Member for Little Bow, concern was expressed about the future of the family farm and our rural way of life in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, that is also a deep concern of my constituents, as expressed last night. Equally important is the strong resolve on the part of my farming community for meaningful and constructive input and dialogue in helping to solve the problems faced by our primary producers in agriculture.

I was pleased that the minisummit was attended by the hon. Minister of Innovation and Science and by co-chair of the Ag Summit 2000, Brian Heidecker. I'd like to express my thanks to the steering committee members: David Samm, Curtis Vesely, and Susan Malone. I would also like to thank the speakers whose introductory comments and questions helped us to focus on the issues, the group leaders who directed the small group discussions, and the recorders who made sure all ideas and suggestions discussed were recorded. The results of this meeting will be shared at the regional Ag Summit 2000 meeting in Wetaskiwin on April 12 and the provincial Ag Summit 2000 meeting in June.

Thank you.

head: Projected Government Business

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Acting Opposition House Leader.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask under Standing Orders what the projected government business will be for the week following next week.

Thanks.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to advise the House that beginning on Monday, April 3, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders for second reading we will consider Bill 16, Condominium Property Amendment Act; Bill 18, Alberta Personal Income Tax Act; Bill 19, Alberta Income Tax Amendment Act; Bill 20, Justice Statutes Amendment Act; Bill 17, Fair Trading Amendment Act; and as per the Order Paper.

At 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of the Whole: Bill 2, First Nations Sacred Ceremonial Objects Repatriation Act; Bill 4, Surveys Amendment Act; Bill 5, Land Titles Amendment Act; and Bill 10, Securities Amendment Act; and as per the Order Paper.

3:00

Tuesday afternoon, April 4, at 4:30 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders private bills for second reading: bills Pr. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5. Under Government Bills and Orders for second reading, if time permits: Bill 3, Statute Revision Act, and as per the Order Paper.

Tuesday, April 4, at 8 p.m., as the House has been previously advised, we will schedule for second reading Bill 11, Health Care Protection Act, which, as the House knows, will be televised for the period 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Access television; and as per the Order Paper.

Wednesday, April 5, at 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders for second reading: Bill 11, Health Care Protection Act; and as per the Order Paper.

Thursday, April 6, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders for second reading: Bill 21, Appropriation Act; Bill 11, Health Care Protection Act; and as per the Order Paper.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: We have a point of order. The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

Point of Order

Questions outside Ministerial Responsibility

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Beauchesne 409 and 412. Under 412:

A question may not be asked of a Minister in another capacity, such as being responsible for a province, or part of a province, or as spokesman for a racial or religious group.

And under 409(6):

A question must be within the administrative competence of the Government. The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his or her present Ministry and not for any decisions taken in a previous portfolio.

The question was handed off to the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, and in her present capacity in that role she had no jurisdiction to answer a health care question, that obviously was not within her mandate right now. I would appreciate it if that kind of thing was not accepted in this Legislature.

Thanks.

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, it's with a great deal of pleasure that I would like to inform the member opposite, as I know I don't need to inform you, that any intergovernmental agreement that is entered into by the province of Alberta must be approved. I can tell you not only in my capacity as Government House Leader but also because I was formerly the minister of intergovernmental and aboriginal affairs, which is the department now represented under the name International and Intergovernmental Relations, that any intergovernmental agreement executed by the government of Alberta must first be approved by the Department of International and Intergovernmental Relations for execution. Any intergovernmental agreement is entirely within the purview of International and Intergovernmental Relations. Therefore it is entirely within that minister's purview and her administrative competence to speak to an intergovernmental agreement that was executed.

The fact that she happened to have additional knowledge of this particular agreement that was being referred to because she also had in a previous capacity been minister of health does not preclude her from answering a question that is entirely within her administrative competence as Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert has raised a point of order with regard to the capacity of the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations to answer the question. Hon. members may recall that the Speaker rose on that very same issue and said, hopefully, that it is in the hon. minister's present capacity, thinking, as presumably others may, that the hon. minister might be thinking of her previous capacity some years ago. But in the answer that was given, it seemed fairly clear that she was responding, as the hon. Government House Leader has suggested, in the capacity that she presently serves, so therefore there wouldn't be a point of order.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Committee of Supply

[Mrs. Gordon in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I'll call the committee to order.

head: Lottery Fund Estimates 2000-2001

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: This is day 2 of the lottery funds. I will ask the minister if he wants to lead off, followed by the opposition critic.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I just want to make some additional comments and some responses to some of the minister's interesting comments yesterday. The minister implied that I was sort of contradictory in the sense that on the one hand I was saying that gaming was becoming a big industry but then on the other hand recognizing that there's a review in place, a freeze, and how could I be talking about expansion and such. [interjection] I'm missing out on something over here.

In any case, the freeze is good, first of all. I'll say that publicly. The freeze is good. The concept of a review is good, but it's never been fully explained what the terms of reference of that review are to be or if they've been established. If the review is being done on the basis of trying to determine whether the VLTs should remain in the hotels or be relocated to the nonprofit casinos, then that type of review is good. If it's going to try and minimize the impact of gambling in the province of Alberta, that type of review is good.

However, if the review is being done and the freeze is in place to allow the Gaming ministry to look at ways of expanding this empire that is now bringing close to, counting the liquor, a billion plus dollars into general revenues, if it's looking to expand that by allowing for the minicasinos in the hotels, allowing for full-fledged Windsor-type casinos, for example in the Banff area – and that was speculated some time ago, trying to draw the American people to gamble in Canada, where it's tax free, and of course they wouldn't have to worry about taxes on any winnings they had. It would be nestled in Banff, where tourists like to go, even tourists from the Far East.

Now, if you were only concerned about how much cash you could raise, that's a good concept. However, if you're concerned about the impact of increased gambling, then you start to question if it is such a wise idea. Would being located in those types of areas be harmful to the natural environment? Would it paint the perception that Alberta is simply Nevada North? Those are the kinds of concerns I would have, and that's why I don't really regard my position as being a contradiction.

In fact, if I were made the minister for one day, I think a couple of simple solutions – bang, bang, bang – and it would be done. We'd take the machines out of the hotels. I know the hotels would not be happy about that.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, just one moment, please. Could I please ask people to sit down. We're not having a convention. This is the Assembly. Thank you.

Go ahead, hon. member.

MR. WICKMAN: We've got to remember that the hotels were not built to be gambling centres. Businessmen that built hotels or bought hotels bought them on the basis that their revenue would come from certain sources. Yeah, certainly things have changed, but things have also changed for a lot of other industries, like the small bookstores, for example. When you see the giants coming, of course it impacts on the small bookstores.

3:10

Look at the stationery stores. I used to see Willson Stationers in Southgate and Heritage malls, and they're gone. They're gone because you now have Staples and Office Depot and that. Government doesn't go to those little outlets and say: because you've fallen upon hard times because of a change in marketing approach and a change in people's taste, we're going to allow you to put some VLTs in your bookstore so that when people are looking through the books, they can be popping a few dollars into the machines at the same time. I can sympathize with the Hotel Association to a degree, but there has to be other ways. They have to use their resources and their ingenuity to increase their revenues.

I remember that when I was in the hospital, one of the other patients there came over and talked to me. He was a bit upset with our position on the VLTs. He said that he had bought into an Edmonton hotel on the basis of the VLTs being in there and that the VLTs would continue to be in there and, in fact, that the numbers would expand. Well, I sort of felt sorry for him, but on the other hand you don't buy a hotel on the speculation that increased numbers of VLTs are going to be popped into that hotel. Then he tried to explain to me that there were really no social implications as a result of that hotel. Well, sometime later, when I got out of the hospital, I stopped by that hotel on a Saturday afternoon just to look. I could not believe what I saw. It was not what you would call a four-star hotel by any means. There were people that had overindulged in alcohol, no question about it, some of them trying to play the machines and a guy touching me up for 10 bucks. He had gone through $120 and wanted a $10 loan. I felt sorry for him, but no, I wasn't going to give it to him for that purpose.

I guess that's the first thing I would do, is say that, well, we've got to get the VLTs out, but even before we do that, if we talk about true democracy, we could leave it up to Albertans to decide, because I'm confident that if you gave Albertans the option of relocating gambling, as I've said before, they would do it. So allow Albertans to do it in a provincewide plebiscite, once and for all resolve the issue. Then what you do is you get these minicasinos in place that are going to raise a certain amount of dollars, in fact pretty good dollars. Even before the VLTs, lotteries raised pretty good money. We gave money to the Calgary Stampede board, the Edmonton stampede board, the community facilities enhancement program, the various arts foundations, recreation, and so on and so forth. Even after all that I remember that one year there was $25,000 shuffled into general revenues because there was extra money, and that was before the days of the VLTs. So you don't need the VLTs to support those programs.

The second part of the Liberal philosophy would be to take the proceeds and abide by what the gaming summit has said. Now, I know that we have a motion on the Order Paper further down the road, that I'll deal with at that particular time. But take the proceeds and run them through general revenue as a technicality, and then put them where they should be properly – and that's in concurrence with the recommendation of the gaming summit – to true nonprofit groups.

Now, I'll look at some of the nonprofit groups, but before I do that, I want to first take a look at this article, because this misperception has to be corrected. This is in the Calgary Herald, where they said: "VLT dollars buy hospital beds." "Patient independence and freedom continues to improve at Calgary's Rockyview General Hospital, thanks to video lottery terminal dollars." Then it goes on to say that a cheque for $157,000 came from the Calgary Community Lottery Board. Okay, that's fine.

Now, the dollars that the municipalities get to distribute to these nonprofit groups and hospitals and libraries and health authorities and such don't just come from the VLTs. They come from all forms of gambling. We can't identify it and say that VLTs bought these hospital beds. Maybe scratch-and-win tickets bought those hospital beds. Maybe Sports Select bought them. Maybe 6/49 bought them. That's an error that pops up repeatedly, and it's not only a mistake made by government members. I recall one press release – I believe it was the Premier that sent it out, or it could have been the former minister – that implied the same thing. Well, we had a correction on that one because it was obvious that that was incorrect.

Now, when we look at the dollars that are spent on community groups, when you look at the annual report, there are hundreds and hundreds of groups. Many of them are great, great groups. Even the introduction earlier of our special guests involved the Lord Strathcona's Horse, celebration 2000. I looked at the brochure that was left behind, and you all have a copy of this brochure. You look at the back of it. It says: our sponsors are very valuable to us; Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians) Regimental Society is a charitable organization and accepts donations of any kind. Then it thanks four different organizations, one being the Wild Rose Foundation. Now we know that the dollars that the Wild Rose Foundation gets and that they turn around and distribute to nonprofit groups such as the Lord Strathcona's Horse, celebration 2000 come from lottery dollars. That's a good cause. That's the type of purpose, I think, that the gaming commission was talking about when they said: to nonprofit activities throughout the province.

I look through the list. If you look at the annual report, there are pages upon pages of hundreds upon hundreds of organizations throughout the province that received lottery dollars in some form. I can look at some of them. I'm not playing favourites here, and I'm not being critical of any. I just have to use some as examples.

I look at the Banff Senior Citizens Society. I don't know that much about that organization, but it sounds to me like it's great. It's a group of seniors, and possibly it's social activities that they get together for in probably a centre where maybe they do various activities together. Now, that sounds great, and our seniors deserve that type of attention.

I look at the Baturyn Community League. Again, from the community facility enhancement branch. That's great. Community leagues should get those dollars to enhance their facilities. That to me is the main purpose of the community facility enhancement program.

I look at the Beiseker Arena Management Society. [interjections] Beiseker. I'm thinking of Frank Bruseker. Remember Bruseker?

AN HON. MEMBER: Yeah, the guy that lost.

MR. WICKMAN: Yes, he did. Yes.

MRS. SOETAERT: A good guy.

MR. WICKMAN: A good guy, yeah. He's coming back. Anyhow, that again sounds like a good organization.

MR. SMITH: He'll come back when Lance becomes mayor.

MR. WICKMAN: Lance may make a second run at it. Who knows?

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Edmonton-Rutherford, it's you, sir, that has the floor.

MR. WICKMAN: This is interesting.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Please.

MR. WICKMAN: I look at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Now, can you ask for a better organization than the CNIB? Again, a very, very worthwhile recipient of dollars.

The Big Brothers and Sisters of Red Deer and District. I don't see either member from Red Deer – that's another great organization.

Then I look at some here, and I have to question these. There's a whole bunch of golf courses. I look at Barrhead Golf and Recreation Area Society. I look at Collicutt Siding Golf Club, Connaught Golf Club, Foremost Golf Association. It's in the annual report, and a copy can be obtained from the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. Now, I'm not sure if these golf courses are nonprofit societies or exactly what. Are they operated by municipalities? How do they qualify? I'm not being critical. I'm simply asking. I'd like the minister to kind of explain further down the road what these organizations are about and what justifies their getting this type of money.

Here's one called the Bob Clark Library. Now, maybe this has something to do with the former member of the House Bob Clark. I don't know. The Bob Clark Library is a new one to me. I've heard of presidential libraries in the United States, but I'm not sure what the Bob Clark Library is, and I would be quite curious about that one.

I see a whole bunch here: city of Airdrie, city of Calgary, city of Camrose, city of Edmonton, city of Grande Prairie, city of Lethbridge, city of Medicine Hat, city of Spruce Grove, city of St. Albert. These are cities, municipalities. I guess you could argue in a way that municipalities are nonprofit, but they're not really a nonprofit society, or they're not really a charitable cause. So are these dollars given to the city? This is under the community facility enhancement program now. This isn't the lotteries board. Are these dollars given so that the city then turns around and uses it for parks and recreation? I'm not really sure.

3:20

I see the Coronation Curling Association. Now, that could possibly be for a new curling facility. The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar pointed out a couple of instances where we saw dollars being used for a capital purpose, putting new roofs on some facilities because of the pine shakes. It's possible it's that type of thing. I don't know. I'm simply asking.

The Lakeland Snowdusters Snowmobile Club. Now, that sounds like an interesting one. Does that buy snowmobiles for the members to ride around with? That's a curious one. I don't know what type of snowmobile facility you would build. Maybe it's some type of place where you park these things. I'm not sure.

The High River Tennis Club. I would have to assume that those are tennis courts. The Hinton Flying Club is probably where they would store airplanes. Again, I don't . . . [interjection] Yeah, the member over there is occupied.

So those are the types of questions that I have on those types of causes. I guess the point that I'm trying to make is that all lottery dollars are not wasted, Madam Chairman. Many of them go to causes right in my own riding of Edmonton-Rutherford. Many of the community leagues have enhanced their facilities thanks to the community facility enhancement program. I go into even my own community hall, the Royal Gardens community hall. What's the first thing I notice? A big fireplace in an addition, a very nice room where I even periodically hold my board meetings. I pay rent, of course, and hold my board meetings there. But right over that fireplace, guess what's there? A great big picture of who? Not the Queen. Not me.

AN HON. MEMBER: Who?

MR. WICKMAN: Guess.

MRS. SOETAERT: Kowalski.

MR. WICKMAN: Exactly. The former minister, now the Speaker. A big picture of him handing over a cheque.

MS LEIBOVICI: This is where?

MR. WICKMAN: In my community hall just by my house.

When I went there to see the presentation of the cheque being made, the minister wasn't there himself, but a staff member from his department was there. I guess this picture had been taken sometime prior, and it was framed and a plaque was given. I sat right there as the member, and I wasn't even recognized. Nobody said: MLA Wickman, you come up and be in this picture as well. My board members could have reacted a little more kindly to that had I been in there. They have to sit there and look at this picture while we conduct business.

MS BLAKEMAN: Do you think it's a slush fund?

MR. WICKMAN: Well, it could be a slush fund.

AN HON. MEMBER: We wanted a picture of Murray and we didn't get it.

MR. WICKMAN: A picture of whom?

AN HON. MEMBER: Murray.

MR. WICKMAN: You mean it's going to be replaced by a picture of Murray?

AN HON. MEMBER: Yeah.

MR. WICKMAN: A big picture. That means another grant is forthcoming then; eh?

Madam Chairman, before I get carried away, I'm going to conclude because we have a number of members that want to speak. Edmonton-Centre here is anxious.

Thank you.

MR. SMITH: Madam Chairman, as much as I am extremely, extremely anticipatory and excited about the Member for Edmonton-Centre rising with her questions, I was so electrified by such an accurate illustration and improvisation of the past that I feel absolutely compelled to talk about the present and in fact even return to the subject of the day, which is lottery estimates, which is talk about the future.

Again, Madam Chairman, as I was going through some of my letters of support for Bill 11 and some of the detailed descriptions of accurate information pertaining to the bill, I was able to find some notes that reinforced the continuance of the contradictions from the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, who last night talked about: I am entirely in opposition to minicasinos; I think the Hotel Association proposal is absolutely the wrong proposal. Today it was: there are minicasinos; I think there's revenue in there, and VLTs apply to that; I think the hotels should come up with more creative ways of finding revenue, and there should be more regulations surrounding how they make a living.

Well, I know the Liberal way is a regulatory way. We've seen it federally. I think we can work closely with the Alberta Hotel Association on this matter, as we have on other matters pertaining to this department, and come up with some strong recommendations that work for them.

I do want to talk about the member's keen comments and recognize his vigil watch over VLTs and how VLTs have been a part of this province for I guess well over – what? – 16 years now, 11 years, a long time, and the member's been there to watch them grow to this year, where they have revenue of approximately $600 million.

He in fact started to address some of the areas that we actually need to take a look at from a policy perspective, Madam Chairman. In fact, if you have multiple licences and they are recognized as the VLTs in the network that have increased revenue, compared to the singles and the doubles in other areas, that could be interpreted as a signal of a destination gaming place because the revenues are higher. So through network management it may be in the interests, to prevent the ubiquity of gaming and to reinforce the revenue opportunity that the member alludes to, to in fact look, examine, listen, and revise that policy.

So I take those comments for change in the future as good solid comments. I know the member will want to participate not only in photo opportunities – if I'm ever close to one and he's around, he's going to be the first guy I'm going to call: come on up to the front, Percy, because you look good in pictures.

Madam Chairman, I'm not going to focus on the contradictions that continue to come about: supporting VLTs, supporting casino gaming groups, not supporting them, destination casinos, Banff park, national jurisdiction casinos. There are just too many contradictions across the broad spectrum to address them one at a time. Again, I'd remind the member that his motion is on the record, which I'll repeat today:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the Government to eliminate the Lottery Fund, with all lottery revenues deposited into the General Revenue Fund.

Mr. Wickman did propose that motion, that is absolutely one hundred percent against and contra to gaming summit recommendations, which of course is one of the main cornerstones of gaming policy as it exists in the province today.

I do want to speak a bit about some more of the confusion of community lottery boards and the just superlative job, Madam Chairman, that you did last night in illustrating and explaining and making clear how the community lottery boards work. I would have thought the member would have been poring over the Blues and getting all that information, but let me just supplement in my poor way the very, very good explanation you made last night.

The community lottery boards expect to fund about 4,500 projects this year. The program supports community initiatives which "enrich and enhance" local services, "recreation, culture, libraries, parks, health, education, social services and the environment." Funding has been recognized through your good work, Madam Chairman, and has increased from $50 million originally to $53.3 million from the '99-2000 forecast of $50.8 million, an increase of $2.5 million, or 5 percent.

Let's talk about meeting population growth and cost increases with program growth. Per capita funding is nearly $18.09 for the ensuing years. An important note to underscore, that you made so clearly last night, Madam Chairman: the spending decisions were made, are made, and will continue to be made by locally based community lottery boards. These 4,500 projects that went through are those that the community expressed a keen interest in funding. It is devoid of government influence, gerrymandering, or any other such invective the member wishes to hurl this way.

Now, let's focus for a minute on the community facility enhancement program, affectionately known as CFEP. This program has averaged about 700 recipients per year over the past three years. It provides financial assistance for the expansion and upgrading of community-use facilities, and it provides matching grants to municipalities, Indian bands, Metis settlements, and registered community nonprofit groups to build, renovate, or otherwise improve related family and community wellness facilities. This budget, Madam Chairman, provides $25 million per annum, the same level of spending as in 1999-2000, and received a commitment for $75 million in April '99 for a three-year period, to April 2002, to continue to review the program on an ongoing basis.

3:30

Now, the member talks about the various things, including the community hall in Edmonton-Rutherford, including our community-owned golf courses, including community-owned libraries. Why he would be opposed to increasing learning, furthering books – if it weren't for books at the Red Deer library in a far and long past time, Madam Chairman, I doubt that I would ever have been fortunate enough to be able to come to this great Assembly today. So I'm certainly in support of libraries, and I'm certainly in support of libraries in rural Alberta. I think I hear the sounds of a rural Albertan there in that fabulous desk thumping that just occurred from this side.

One of the reasons that the member is able to key on all the individual expenditures of the CFEP program and all the individual libraries, parks, community-owned facilities is because the information is all there, Madam Chairman. It's all there in an accountable, disclosing, transparent format. It's published in a report. It's published in the lottery fund. It's published at www.aglc.gov.ab.ca. This member for the first time in his career has absolutely one hundred percent search capability, and anything that he can't find in that search capability our department stands at the ready to be able to assist him where he needs to go.

I'm so glad that he brought up the question of community lottery boards purchasing hospital beds in Calgary, electronic hospital beds and enhanced service health beds. It's a critical part of the lottery fund, because as we said last night – and I saw the member taking notes last night – 60 percent of the lottery fund is directed towards health, infrastructure, and educational expenses.

Now, I hear members behind me saying: well, what exactly are you spending the lotto fund on in medical expenses? With that questioning roar behind me of members on the government side, I will go into that. As a matter of fact, the day that Bill 11 broke, I was over at the Royal Alexandra hospital in Edmonton, the number one health authority, as it's rated in Canada today by an outside of Alberta party, a health authority which combined with the Calgary authority were two metropolitan health authorities that handled the Christmas bed and flu crisis better than any other major urban centre in Canada. I was fortunate enough to be invited over there to see the installation of a new process for angiograms. The process is less invasive than the former process. It's more efficient, and if a problem is discovered, it can lead to immediate angioplasty. The machine was funded by the lottery fund, which the member correctly points out is an amalgam of moneys from video lottery terminals, from casino gaming terminals, better known as slot machines, and from tickets, from pull tickets, Sports Select, and the like.

That lottery fund, which is, again, fully transparent at the web site as well as through this process, was able to fund in this case an advanced device for the benefit of Edmontonians and for the benefit of rural Albertans outside of Edmonton working in the northern section.

This year alone, Madam Chairman, Health and Wellness will receive $10 million for advanced medical equipment. They'll receive $38,207,000 for health authority supplemental capital equipment funding. They'll have $15 million directed towards Alberta Wellnet, and you will see that they will be able to use these funds in an efficient and efficacious manner.

Madam Chairman, I want to go on and talk about education, and I want to go on and talk about infrastructure funding, but that might be anticipating some of the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

I do want to close with a clear statement to the member that he's doing a lot of his homework. He's on the web site, I know, now. He's working through the documents. He's seeing the benefits of 100 percent transparency, of 100 percent disclosure, and of 100 percent accountability.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks very much, Madam Chairman. Oh, the lottery fund. I think the issue for me around the lottery fund is one of responsibility and accountability. I've read the minister's comments from last night in Hansard. I don't know whether it's a matter of my having a different interpretation or belief in a certain use of language or whether there's just a very sly, slick way this government has of presenting and getting their own way when it comes to using lottery dollars for things.

I am one of the three MLAs that was actually at the gaming summit and was able to hear what people were saying and how definitive they were that gaming funds, lottery funds, should not be used to fund core services. In my definition core services would include health, education, and infrastructure.

I see an inconsistency here. If those are no longer core services, then why do we have ministries of Health, Infrastructure, and now-called Learning? If they're not a core service, why do we have a ministry for them? If they're not a core service, why do we have an entire budget for them? If the government is going to define these three very large areas as not being a core service, why are they raising taxes under the name of education under property taxes if education is no longer a core service of government?

There's an inconsistency here. When it suits the government to call something a core service, they do, but when they want to use lottery moneys to fund things that should be funded under general revenue, should be budgeted for and should be acknowledged that this is an important expenditure and needs to be done, then the money should be coming through revenue. This government has used the lottery funds to subsidize themselves all the way along. The lottery funds are not reliable funds. They can be transient, and that bothers me as well.

Let's look at the flip side of that coin. Well, if these are not core services and sort of onetime only funding and it doesn't matter if this is funded through lottery dollars, which, as we know, are not reliable – you can't count that people are going to gamble X amount of money every year. There's no way to determine that. You can forecast it in the budget, but unless the minister is going to personally supervise people plugging those loonies and toonies into the VLT machines, this is not a reliable source of funding. What are they saying, then, about health and education and infrastructure if they're willing to fund it out of an unreliable source of funding? So I have a real problem with the sleight of hand that goes on here.

Now, I notice that the minister in his opening remarks states that "gaming and lottery profits [are] not [to] be directed to the province's General Revenue Fund." That's referring specifically to the gaming summit recommendation 4: "Gaming and lottery profits should not be directed to the province's General Revenue Fund." His response to this is: well, we created the lottery fund for it. Once again, those two sides don't quite match up.

3:40

When I look in the Auditor General's report, the Auditor General is pretty clear in his description of how money is moved around. I'll refer the minister to page 121 of the Auditor General's report 1998-99.

Quarterly payments are made from the Lottery Fund to the Ministries requesting Lottery Fund grants and are deposited in the General Revenue Fund and included as revenue of the departments of those Ministries. The departments then draw cheques in favour of the Lottery Fund grant beneficiaries as needed.

The Auditor General is essentially talking about the need for accountability in this money and who is ultimately responsible for the money. Is it the individual ministers that are receiving lottery money? Is it now the Minister of Gaming? Is it the Legislative Assembly? Who's taking the ultimate responsibility for this? I'm questioning the minister's statement there. I see he's just sent a note off, so I'm sure he'll get an answer back right away.

I also notice the statement he made that of the fund's estimated budget of $837 million, 88 percent "is directed to thousands of public nonprofit community and charitable projects across Alberta." Excuse me? And 88 percent, the minister is claiming, is going to nonprofit community and charitable projects. Well, how does the minister then describe something like the agricultural initiatives funding of $11,620,000 from the lottery funds in this year? What nonprofit is that, may I ask? Or perhaps we could talk about the fetal alcohol initiative, which I've heard described by other ministers, an excellent project and I certainly do support it. Which nonprofit is this? Or is the government just referring to itself as one huge nonprofit and therefore they can disburse lottery money as they choose?

How about the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission? I wasn't aware that that was a community-based nonprofit. I think that's an arm of the government; isn't it? Well, the minister is saying: "Eighty-eight percent of the fund's estimated budget of $837 million is directed to thousands of public nonprofit community and charitable projects." I've just described millions of dollars that are very clearly on government initiatives. All right. The minister is smiling at me.

Let's talk about funds that are coming out for federal nursing stations. What community-based, nonprofit organization is that? Or how about alternate compensation strategies? Those last two are both under Health and Wellness initiatives. Let's talk about the north/south trade – oh, I'm sorry; that's not funded this year.

The water management infrastructure. Now, that project is receiving $20 million. Which community-based, nonprofit charity is that? Or perhaps we could look at the transportation subsidy school support. Is that a community-based, nonprofit charitable group?

So I'm really wondering about the interesting choice of language. The minister is a clever fellow; I'll admit that. I think he's using very clever language to have Albertans think that one thing is going on when in fact it's quite another thing that's going on.

Another statement that the minister makes. He's talking about: one of the goals of the lottery fund and the Department of Gaming is to be open, clear, and transparent. I appreciate the fact that there's a list of projects that are receiving funding that are listed on pages 174 and 175 of the 2000-2001 government and lottery fund estimates, but this does not give me a lot of description of the projects that are going on. I can't look through this and find any kind of a subvoter that describes to me what these projects are, whether there's any additional revenue going into them. Where is the revenue coming from, and how is that money being spent?

This government likes to claim that they're open and transparent, but I have to tell you that there is not a lot of information given in these budget books, so I don't know what the minister's definition of open and transparent is. If it's giving a one-line description of a project, the name of a project, and the amount of money, okay. If that's the way it is, fine. Let's accept that as the definition.

But if I want to understand how this money is spent, even where, what part of the province it is spent in, how am I supposed to get that information? More to the point, how are Albertans supposed to get the information about what these projects are, even given www.aglc.gov.ab.ca, or whatever the web site is, which I suspect is not giving a full breakdown of exactly how these projects are funded and where the money is being spent on them.

I appreciate the comments from the Member for Lacombe-Stettler on the community lottery boards. I don't want to be misunderstood on what I'm about to say. That money that is going through those community lottery boards is much needed by the community, and my understanding, when this program was set up, was that it was in response to all of those nonprofit charitable groups in the community saying: "We don't have enough money. We need help here. You have not put additional funds into the Alberta Foundation for the Arts, Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife, the Wild Rose Foundation, and those other lottery-based grants that are providing operating money to us, and there is no ability to get funds for other smaller groups that exist in a smaller, perhaps ad hoc way in the community."

[Mr. Herard in the chair]

The program was set up to do that, but it was meant to augment things. I'm now hearing that other programs are under pressure to cut off people who qualify, not necessarily get but who qualify, to apply for community lottery board money. They're now being told that they're cut off from applying for other lottery foundation moneys, and that was not the point of that. It was meant to augment, not to replace.

I know a number of citizens of Alberta who have volunteered their time, a considerable amount of time, to sit on the local community lottery boards. I admire them deeply. It's a great commitment, and they take their job seriously and work very hard. But my initial concern expressed with this program was that there be overriding criteria from the government to make sure that all of the community lottery boards would be able to operate within sight of the same framework.

At the time I said: is there any guidance whatsoever? Should the lottery boards be looking for a certain percentage to be granting to arts groups, for instance? The concern I expressed at the time was that individual artists in Alberta may not be known or recognized in their own community, or people on the community lottery boards may not feel they have the personal background or expertise to know whether what this person was doing was valuable and therefore wouldn't fund them. So what was supposed to be an augment to a program – you could have artists especially in rural Alberta at a tremendous disadvantage because there wouldn't be any kind of criteria guiding the local board that they should be looking for arts endeavours in their community to support. I think that is still a concern.

The second concern. I notice that there are additional funds in the community lottery board pot of money this year. It's $53 million. I've looked and I didn't see the answer to the question, so perhaps the minister can enlighten me. Is the additional money money that is being distributed through the grant program, or is it to cover administrative expenses? I know from talking to some of the boards that I have spoken to – and I think I can refer specifically to Edmonton – they need support money to administer their grants. Again, it's a group of volunteers. I know a couple of years ago they were trying to work through grant applications that would be funded to the tune of $11 million. That is a lot of administrative work. They need some help to do this. It's an onerous task to expect that they're going to do on their own. So I'm questioning whether that additional money is going to be going into administrative assistance for these lottery boards or whether it's some sort of cost of living increase or something that's going into the actual amount being granted out.

3:50

I'm wondering if the minister was able to respond to the Auditor General's request that accountability for grant expenditures made from the lottery fund be improved. Given the long list of different projects, most of them government projects and many of them core service projects, how is this accountability being dealt with as per the Auditor General's recommendation?

Now, I'm also wondering why – and I'm referring specifically to page 174 of the estimates book – the lottery programs administration has increased fairly significantly. In looking through the Hansard from last night, I noticed some people asking about increase in wages and increase in travel costs. Is that what's accounting for the increase that I see on that particular line item? There's also a fairly substantial increase in the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission lottery operations, just about $2 million. That's a fairly substantial increase as well, if the minister could elucidate on that.

I'm wondering if there are any initiatives planned or under way for efforts to assist organizations in developing performance measurements as part of their accountability back to the lottery fund. Having worked with the Auditor General's staff for some time on this, I'm aware that this is a difficult process to get started and to test and evaluate and review and revise and move forward. What assistance, if any, is coming through the lottery fund to assist the organizations that are recipients of grants to be able to both develop their goals but also develop the performance measurements that would help them evaluate that?

I've asked the Minister of Community Development and I will ask the minister responsible for this lottery money, as well, whether there have been any plans or anticipation of assistance to nonprofit organizations in Alberta for capacity building, further to the federal government voluntary sector report. If the minister hasn't had an opportunity to read that report, I highly recommend it. Seeing as we have a recess next week, perhaps he can work his way through the book then. There are some very good points that are being raised there.

Under the major strategies, on page 179, there's a strategy to "develop and implement benchmarks and best practice initiatives." For whom, or for what section? Or is this for anyone receiving lottery money? As I pointed out, mostly the government is the recipient of that. Could the minister detail who that benchmark and best practices initiative is directed towards.

I'm also interested in why the minister sees fit to have a highlight of "implement a strategy to further inform Albertans about Alberta Lottery Fund support for community initiatives." Is the minister feeling heat to have to explain to Albertans where their lottery money is going? What has given rise to that as a highlight?

I note again the actual amount of money that is going to charities, the $160 million that is quoted under financial highlights on page 180. It states that "for 2000-01, charities in Alberta are expected to receive over $160 million as a result of gaming revenue generated on their behalf." Now, I can do my math; $160 million out of the $837 million is not 88 percent. I do note that that $160 million is for the most part essentially the same amount of money that is brought in through the ticket revenue.

I urge the minister and the Minister of Community Development to go back and have another look at the money that is actually going out to those charitable groups. It has pretty much stayed stagnant, with the amount of money coming into the lottery fund generated by ticket revenues, and I don't know if that's an official or an unofficial tie together or benchmark or association. But it's high time that more money was going to those charitable groups, and that's what they were expecting from the gambling summit. Having been there, I know that's what they meant. They expected that that $160 million the minister admits to would be upped and that more money would be going into those charities.

I regret I've run out of time, but thank you very much for the opportunity to raise the questions.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning. Oh, I'm sorry, Edmonton-Manning. I didn't look to the right.

MR. SMITH: Mr. Chairman, thank you so much, and I'll certainly take that advice and always look to the right in this Assembly.

So many opportunities to clear up misconceptions compel me to rise to my feet. Firstly, there is no Hansard from last night, Mr. Chairman. There are the Blues, and we hope the member has directed her attention to those. Let's go back to those Blues where it says:

Eighty-eight percent of the fund's estimated budget of $837.5 million is directed to thousands of public, nonprofit, community, and charitable projects across Alberta.

I want to read that into the record again.

Eighty-eight percent of the fund's estimated budget of $837.5 million is directed to thousands of public, nonprofit, community, and charitable projects across Alberta.

So, in fact, there is a great amount of money directed to very, very good organizations driven by very, very good Albertans who come to the lottery fund, who look at it not as a source of government controlling largesse but as a legitimate access source to funds.

One of the greatest funds, which I've looked on with fondness since my first being elected, is the Wild Rose Foundation. Gosh, I've always thought, there are so many special parts of the Wild Rose Foundation when you see dollars from that foundation helping individuals in places like Calcutta, in places where there's extreme poverty. We can see that Albertans do take that extra moment, spend that extra time in realizing how much misery there is in the world and what little bit we can do to take a part to try and alleviate some of the poverty, the overwhelming question of poverty, to give opportunities. For example, it's one of the reasons why there are athletic scholarships in the lottery funds, so that individuals can rise up through education and break through the walls of poverty and be able to move ahead.

Of course, the 88 percent of the public, nonprofit, community, and charitable projects across Alberta was clearly stated in a response from the government way back when, in 1998, when the government said in a press release in response to the gambling summit – it was a commitment to communities and charities reaffirmed. I encapsulate, Mr. Chairman: the government agrees that gaming and lottery profits should not be used to fund ongoing essential core government programs. However – quand meme, en Francais – the government does support the use of these profits for broad-based community projects that benefit Albertans.

Then the member started to talk about agriculture, and if that isn't my favourite topic, Mr. Chairman. They often say that farming is not our past; it's our future. Indeed, they've said that farming is not our past but our passion. She asked for a detailed explanation of the lottery fund commitment to agriculture Alberta, that paragon of hard work, that very thing that emphasizes, that defines Albertans' core values, the embodiment of which is two words, Mr. Chairman, the family farm.

4:00

If you look into the Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development community estimates, as the member has clearly pointed out – and I thank her for that by repeating our web site, www.gaming.gov.ab.ca – she found that there was $11,620,000, and she said: now, what's nonprofit about agriculture?

Of course, if she would have been able to be with our minister, who's down in Ottawa this week taking on the case of beleaguered farmers not only in this province but looking at agricultural disastrous conditions throughout the prairies, throughout the second largest breadbasket of the world, she would know that it's a difficult business. There are lots of community organizations, lots of nonprofit organizations – in fact, that's the very spirit of volunteerism in Alberta, and that's where it came from, Mr. Chairman. It came from places like Carmangay. It came from places like Stavely. I mean, I'd like to talk about the Granum White Sox. That was a baseball team that existed in the early '30s that brought people together, that put community together, that embodied the very community volunteer spirit that the lottery fund and the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta represents and brings forward today in today's politics.

Mr. Chairman, I may digress, so let me just return to the $11,620,000 in agriculture initiatives. The agriculture initiative provides grant support to nonprofit agricultural organizations throughout Alberta. It includes annual support to over 281 agriculture societies located in Alberta's rural community. It includes grant support to nonprofit organizations with objectives related to improvement in agriculture.

Because I'm a city guy, I guess I always refer to it as the square tomato group, where you could make tomatoes square and they'd ship easier and bruise less, but in fact if you look at what is happening in today's agriculture world, there's a worldwide debate on genetically modified food. There are farmers storming the bastille of McDonald's in France, pelting them with tomatoes because of the use of genetically modified organisms. I can remember a pelting taking place in Vegreville not too far back, and I don't think it was tomatoes.

Mr. Chairman, I know the member comes from Edmonton-Centre, but if she could just go out to Alberta west or Grande Prairie-Smoky or Grande Prairie-Wapiti, even as close as Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, there's just a wonderful richness of vitality, character, integrity, and the great volunteer spirit in the great Albertans that sit outside of our urban environments.

So we take a look at developing the people in these agricultural venues, Mr. Chairman. We look at the development of people – and I wish Hansard could record the raising of hands as I ask the question: how many people know what 4-H stands for? What are the four Hs? How many people know here? [interjections] See; there we go. We've got "I was in 4-H." There's a hand from Camrose-Wetaskiwin, Edmonton-Manning, Vegreville-Viking, Edmonton-Whitemud, Drumheller-Chinook, from Edmonton-Gold Bar, from Peace River.

Now, I'm not going to say what the four Hs are, because as someone comes up with the next question, the next set of comments, they may want to inform us what it is, and I don't want to take that away from them. But I can tell you that "head" is one of them, and that means training and leadership skills for adults and youth in local communities, board effectiveness training for agricultural/industrial organizations, increasing the awareness of agricultural issues, expanding the capacity of local leadership to make decisions and improve their communities. Estimated expenditures, $711,000. Enablement of organizations, successful delivery of agriculture shows, trade shows.

You know, that was one of the things I remember going to in Red Deer, when it was 8,000 people, with my father. We would go and look at all the new machinery that was coming in and being used, and that was way before there were enclosed cabs on tractors and multiple-use equipment and four-wheel drive tractors. They did have rubber tires. They were just moving into rubber tires, it seems.

That is $2.4 million. Development of vital infrastructure contributes to the operation of fairgrounds, rodeo grounds, and multiple-use community facilities that add to and enrich the quality of life of over 250 rural communities. Capital development and renovation of community multi-use facilities in rural communities: $3.6 million. Annual operating, program, and capital funding to ag societies: $4.87 million.

You know, I'm so pleased that the Member for Edmonton-Centre asked about this, because it gives us an opportunity to exchange and share some of those views that differ between rural and urban. Often it's said that if you walk a mile in another man's shoes, in another woman's shoes – although my feet would probably get tired from the heels – or, as they said in To Kill a Mockingbird, place yourself in another person's skin, that gives you that opportunity to see the difficulties, the problems, the opportunities. I bet you the Member for Edmonton-Centre will probably want to go out right now and check the Hs in 4-H and say: does it mean head, health, heart, and hands?

So having said that, Mr. Chairman, and having been able to exchange those views and provide that important amount of information, I look forward to the comments from probably Edmonton-Manning.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I can never match that. That is – I won't even say what it is.

You know, I'm going to talk about municipal and infrastructure, and I'm going to talk about the lottery going a few different ways. I, too, did go to the gaming summit, and I did also work from room to room and watched how it was manipulated, facilitated to the answers that . . .

MS LEIBOVICI: Was it something like the Bill 11 forum?

MR. GIBBONS: Yeah. Same way that the Bill 11 forums are being handled right now.

You know, under lottery funds one of the items is Municipal 2000 sponsorship. I've got a question under that on where the money is going, because a lot of it should be coming out of the community enhancement program, the viable community initiative programs, the Infrastructure department, the Health department, the Learning department. Everybody is all part of trying to put money out to Alberta, which is good, because we read from the AUMA last edition. One they're talking about is:

Delegates adopted a "Viable Communities Definition" at the 1999 AUMA convention, the first step in creating a framework designed to help municipalities move towards greater self-reliance. Municipalities currently operate without a clear definition by the Province of the basic "Viable Community" that the Alberta government will support. This creates difficulties for many municipalities, particularly in the wake of reduced provincial grants and support.

They go on and they talk about what do you call viable community initiatives. Then they go on to talk about a "community which has the will and resources to sustain itself economically and socially." That's what they're really pushing under this. Then they go on to say that "Alberta Economic Development has an initiative entitled 'Self-Reliant Communities' that is coordinated with the Alberta Economic Development Authority."

Now, we do see and we do know that today's communities face a number of serious challenges, and we need leadership which will move us towards solutions in partnership with local governments. Talking about infrastructure deficit, the Capital Investment Planning Committee estimated that the $1.2 billion infrastructure deficit is a major, major problem in this province. An AUMA infrastructure task force estimated a $1.77 billion infrastructure deficit, including an $888 million deficit for non transportation related infrastructure, storm drainage, wastewater systems, water supply and treatment systems, parks and recreation facilities, protective and emergency services, solid waste management, and mobile equipment.

4:10

Now, as I started asking questions around the program under the Municipal 2000 sponsorship, this really falls into place. It says that there's a $1.77 billion infrastructure deficit. Mr. Chairman, why won't the government release the corporate capital plan overview development by ministry, instead of just throwing it all into lotteries?

We look at who the backbone of the province of Alberta is. We have the Minister of Gaming talking about agriculture, farming, rural. It's very true. If you take my constituency, probably 65 percent of the people are from northeast Alberta and have moved to the closest route out of the city right back to the farm. So our communities are the backbone of Alberta society. We live and work and raise our families in our community. The quality of life within our communities is dependent on the availability of local infrastructure. Maintaining our infrastructure is critical to Alberta's future competitiveness, providing the means of adding value to products and services we produce and sell both here in Canada and abroad. Infrastructure planning should and must be the core business function of the province in close collaboration with our municipalities.

The province likes to take credit for the $4 billion surplus at the provincial level, but why do they refuse to take responsibility for the infrastructure deficit they've created over the past seven years at the local level? Between 1992 and 1998 general and specific-purpose grants from the Alberta government to municipalities declined by $402 million, which is 48 percent, the second highest level of decline of provinces in Canada. Our municipalities have been subject to a financial squeeze by the government. Not only were provincial grants to municipalities reduced; the province has taken over a portion of the local property tax base.

My questions today on the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program. The 2000-2001 operating expenses of $12 million were funded through the lottery funds. This represents a $2 million, or 20 percent, increase over last year's estimates for comparable and forecast of $10 million. My question, though, to the minister, probably through the Minister of Gaming, is: what are the criteria under municipal co-operation that the ministry of Municipal Affairs will use to determine whether the project is eligible for the 25 percent bonus pool under the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: They're municipal programs.

MR. GIBBONS: It is? But is it going to be forever? Is it going to be for one year? Is it going to be for two years? It's a carrot as far as I'm concerned. Last year I asked the same question here, and I didn't get an answer whether it was going to be for next year, two years.

My next question to you, Mr. Minister. What are the selection criteria and the composition of the review panel that will evaluate the applications for enhanced grants? Who's on these boards? How did they get picked? If you could submit that to me, I'd really like that.

Next question is to the same minister. He should be taking note of this so he can give an answer back as soon as we come back on April 3. Has the ministry conducted a cost-benefit evaluation of the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program for its first two years of operation? What specific performance criteria or benchmarks have been established by the department to evaluate the effectiveness of the program? Is it the intention of the minister to make the Municipal 2000 program a permanent program? Is it not more appropriate that the programs are under the general revenue fund rather than the lotteries? That's what I referred to in my first sentence. Maybe it should be under Municipal Affairs, Community Development, Infrastructure, Health, Learning.

Can the minister indicate how projects such as upgrading a number of skating facilities, road sign installations, the purchase of roadside spray units, upgrading access roads, construction of potable water fill stations, roof repair, and building renovations could qualify as an enhancement to innovation and excellence under the program? Shouldn't these projects be funded under the community facility enhancement program or the street improvement program or the highway infrastructure program? Is there an established percentage of projects that are funded on the basis of excellence and innovation versus regional co-operation under the Municipal 2000 sponsorship program? Is the funding split 50-50, 60-40, 70-30, et cetera?

You know, I read through your release on this program the other day, and again I would like to know the criteria there. If this government hadn't played their one-string guitar for the last few years on downloading, did we need to put this out? Could we not have built this into all the different programs of Infrastructure and Health and so on? You know, I can see under different items here the deadline for the grant, June 30, 2000. I hope there are people out there that are actually helping with the actual thoughts of intermunicipal co-operation, because as I read through it, I see communities tying together on this one. This one, for example, for the county of Smoky Lake, the villages of Vilna, Warspite, and Waskatenau. Funding was provided for a five-part regional recreation facility upgrade. The five components of this project include Vilna's arena upgrade, the Warspite community park expansion, the Waskatenau curling upgrade, the Smoky Lake recreation complex.

MR. PASZKOWSKI: And all the people use it in that area.

MR. GIBBONS: True. But maybe it should have been funded out of some other program. Maybe it should be established as a community facility enhancement program.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, I understand that the minister is trying to be helpful, but through the chair if you don't mind.

MR. GIBBONS: He's just finding out what kind of personality I have. When I get going, I get going.

Now we look at Starland county, village of Delia. Funding has provided for the joint purchase of four sets of self-contained breathing apparatus to be shared by six area fire departments. Great. There's no problem with that. But why isn't it out of the regional health budget? Why isn't it just out of the Health and Wellness budget instead of this particular one?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: Because the municipalities wanted it this way.

MR. GIBBONS: Okay. That's the answer I needed on paper.

Now, the town of Brooks. This is the one around the raw water irrigation system. I've sat with the municipality down there, talked about it. I totally understand what it is. But here again I'm wondering: why isn't it under an Infrastructure program?

As we go through the whole list of different communities that got money during 1999 under this particular program – and I don't want to let anybody believe that I think it's a bad program, because it is a good program. But, you know, there are a few things I want to highlight as we talk. Why the program was actually set up: that was around information, computers, and so on. We can see geographic information systems; no problem. Registration information; no problems. We've got computer systems; that's what it's for. We've got software to convert scanned maps and images into electronic format; no problem with that. Now, I see a number of items like this, but here we're going back to arenas. As long as there seems to be partnership in these types of things, we see it go through.

Beaver county: signs for range roads. Yesterday at a meeting with the Alberta Chamber of Commerce a representative from Oyen talked about signs and getting flak from the government. They're off the beaten track. They've got old signs? Big deal.

MRS. McCLELLAN: They don't have old signs. They're new signs.

MR. GIBBONS: Well, through the chair, they're complaining that the government is giving them a rough time, and they have to get new signs. Okay?

Then we get into the MD of Bonnyville No. 87. The MD of Bonnyville and the town of Bonnyville partnered to hire and share services of two special constables. Well, why aren't we just bumping up our police budget in this province through the justice system instead of coming through this particular item?

We have Cardston county: purchase of a roadside spray unit system. This is Agriculture; this is Environment. Maybe we could be passing that all over the province to start doing our weed control for the thistle epidemic last year and giving it to the CN and CP railroads so they can actually be spraying their problems with the thistles. We have Flagstaff county: a rescue vehicle. This should be Health or Justice again.

4:20

Now, I could keep going all the way through. We set up a Department of Infrastructure, which is massive, but we're using Gaming dollars to do it this way, piecemeal, $12 million, $170 million, whatever. Potable water truck fill station for the county of Lethbridge: we all know what that's about. Well spent. Nothing wrong with the county of Lethbridge partnered with the town of Coaldale to establish a regional potable water commission. But why out of this particular program? Mountain View: expand and renovate the county office. Nothing wrong with that. But we've got items in here like purchasing a one-way snow plow for a grader; this is for the county of Two Hills. You know, I think it would be really appropriate if that one came out of Infrastructure just because of the Minister of Infrastructure.

The town of Bon Accord: upgrade town sidewalks by replacing old and unsafe sidewalks in residential areas. Had another complaint yesterday from Beiseker, wondering why they have to be pushed into the lowest bid. Well, I didn't get into that one in front of a lot of people. I'll call them back and talk to them about that one. I was looking for the actual dollars and cents that Beiseker got through this program, but I didn't see it in here.

Town of Claresholm: build an addition to an existing fire hall. Town of Claysmore: replace the existing fire truck cab and chassis. Well, if it's a 1947 International, I guess they had to make a plastic one to make it fit. Crowsnest Pass and Crowsnest: this is all upgrading local sidewalks, snowmobile trails, installation of irrigation system, to improve the ball and soccer fields. The town of Fort Macleod: upgrading recreation centre, replacing the curling piping system. Mr. Chairman, I can go on and on and on. These are all good projects; I'm just wondering why they come out of here. Town of Picture Butte: install an underground sprinkler system. An underground sprinkler system. I know it's dry down there.

The main thing with this is that we're looking at a lottery-funded item that should be directly funded out of general revenue under different programs, whether it's Infrastructure or whatever, but not just: pick the program; let's do it. It should be budgeted and applied for and dealt with through each one of the departments I talked about.

Mr. Chairman, with that I will sit down. I know I didn't take my 20 minutes, but I never do.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Thank you very much.

Hon. minister.

MR. SMITH: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Edmonton-Manning, for those good comments, well-researched and well-thought-out comments.

I do want to just respond very quickly to his last comment. The budgeting process is truly from the bottom up, and the lottery fund is not one that picks projects and then hands out the money. The lottery fund is one that responds to operating departments such as Municipal Affairs, such as Infrastructure, such as Agriculture, and when those operating departments define onetime areas, specific areas of spending, it's that grassroots process, from the MD, from the farm, that comes up, that is identified, that then the lottery fund can respond to.

The lottery fund is able to effectively respond to those because of the good work that those departments do in continually liaising and co-operating with those individuals who form those municipal jurisdictions. I don't know if the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the Minister of Infrastructure wish to comment on the specific comments from the member at this stage or simply table their responses at a later time, but should they wish to do that, I'm certainly able to give them the floor.

I do want to make one further comment that harks back not only to the Member for Edmonton-Manning but more specifically to the Member for Edmonton-Centre. The $160 million that goes to volunteers, Mr. Chairman, is outside of the lottery fund. That's money that these individual groups and charities earn from participating in bingos and charities throughout this 660,000 square kilometres that make up the province of Alberta. Those funds are theirs, for their use in accordance with specifically drafted guidelines, and are not included in the overall promulgation of the lottery fund, that now is budgeted at $837,500,000.

If the ministers want to supplement my answers by adding, specifically on Municipal 2000 and those types of programs, they can, or I'm sure, hon. member, they will do it perhaps more completely and definitively through a written tabling.

Thank you.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEBOVICI: Thank you. I, too, rise this afternoon to ask some questions with regards to the lottery fund estimates and will probably focus the majority of my questions around the Health and Wellness part of the estimates. But before I do, I'd like to just ask some general questions that have come up through my constituency as well as through looking at the estimates in some of the other areas.

One of the first questions I have. It appears, at least in the Edmonton area – and I'm not sure if it's transferred to other municipalities across the province – that there is now some question as to what the CFEP grant covers vis-a-vis what the municipalities are covering. To be a little bit more specific, I know that with regards to a grant to one of my community leagues, they were told that a particular portion of that grant would no longer be funded because in fact it was deemed to be now the responsibility of the municipalities.

In the past what the province has done was picked up some of the costs that were formerly provided through the municipality structure. As they have cut back, CFEP would pick up those costs. Now CFEP has changed their policy and are not doing it anymore. As a result, this one community league is out $40,000, even though they have been planning for a park enhancement now for a period of two to three years. So it significantly impacts what they can and can't do. My question is: is that specifically a conflict, in a sense, between the city of Edmonton and the CFEP program, or is that more general across the province? Will it be applied equally across the province if that is now the new policy with regards to CFEP funding?

Another question that I've had asked of me and that in fact the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford had brought up as well is the grants that are provided to golf and country clubs. I will look forward to the information that the minister provides with regards to that particular area.

In noting the facilities that have been granted funding, I'm just wondering what the SGS parents' group is, if we could get a little bit of explanation around that. I'm sure it is a worthwhile project. I'm just wondering what it is.

With regards to the funds that are provided, what type of monitoring is carried on by the department to ensure that the dollars are being used as requested and that the dollars are being utilized in a proper fashion? We've seen what happens at the federal level when there is not a proper oversight function with regards to the provision of dollars, and I would like to know what monitoring mechanisms are in place within the department right now to ensure that that doesn't happen here.

I have a question around lottery fund estimates, page 174, with regards to the Community Development portion of the Trans Canada Trail project. I have received a number of letters with regards to individuals who are not supportive of the project in that the trail will infringe on their property. Especially if we're providing public dollars, I would like to know what the minister is doing with regards to working with I guess it would be Infrastructure and I'm not sure actually which other department in order to ensure that the concerns those individuals have with regards to the Trans Canada Trail project, which I personally do support, are being met. It's a group of individuals at this point, an organized group, it's my understanding.

4:30

Before I move to Health, I just want to make sure that I've looked at the other areas that I wanted to touch on. I think I have. If I move to the health care facilities portion on page 175 under Infrastructure, there is a substantial amount of money, $120 million, that is being provided out of lottery funds into the health care facilities. My question is: what is the breakdown between private, private for-profit, and public? Which health care facilities are receiving funding, and how are the priorities established with regards to the funding? For instance, is the Red Deer hospital one of those facilities that will be accessing funds out of this program?

My colleague from Edmonton-Centre had, I believe, made a very good point when she indicated that lottery funds were not to be used for core funding programs. When I look at the Health and Wellness budget and their business plan summary in the government and lottery fund estimates, in fact some of their major items that the funds are being provided for from the lottery fund either through Infrastructure or through Health and Wellness are major strategies that have been outlined by the Health and Wellness department.

If lottery funds are not to be core funding for programs, one wonders why in fact we are looking at funding areas that are major strategies under Health and Wellness. The fact that these facilities or these programs that are funded by lotteries require dollars I'm not disputing. What I'm asking is: why are we funneling dollars that are not sustainable dollars to Health and Wellness when in fact what is required in that department is sustainable funding for ongoing projects and for facility planning? That is the crux, I believe, of some of the problems within the Department of Health and Wellness right now, that it is hard for the regional health authorities to plan when in fact they don't have a sustainable funding base.

To move directly into the Health and Wellness portion of the lottery fund – and that's on both page 174 and page 175 – I have a question around the federal nursing stations. Actually I could have asked it as well in Health and Wellness. I'm surprised that there are provincial dollars being provided to the federal nursing stations. I would have assumed that that would have all been part of federal expenses. So I'd like to know what the breakdown is. Perhaps the minister can inform me as to what the program is and the contracts to have what looks like cost sharing between the province and the federal government.

The Calgary regional health laboratory facility. It's interesting that there was some funding that came from '98-99 to that facility. I believe that was part of the start-up funds for that particular facility. We know that that facility is inadequate and that there are no further dollars being provided through the lottery fund, which in fact supports my earlier argument that here we have a facility that's been set up and has received significant dollars from the lottery fund, $9 million, and is receiving no money now, so there isn't that sustainable funding base. In fact, we have a facility in Calgary that we know is stretched to the limit. There may be inadequate dollars that are being provided to it out of the Health and Wellness budget. That budget can only stretch so far because of having planned for moneys from the lottery fund. So we've got disjointed planning perhaps occurring.

I have another question with regards to the health authorities' supplemental capital assistance funding, which is interesting. There's a little over $38 million that's being provided for that particular part of it. I'm not sure if the minister is aware, but according to the Auditor General's report there are only 2.8 years of useful life left in the regional health authorities' capital equipment base across the province. My guess is that those dollars will not even make a dent in the capital equipment replacement that is going to have to occur within the next 2.8 years. The question I have is: what, again, can we in fact expect from this ministry with regards to working together with the minister of health to ensure that we do have adequate turnaround of capital equipment?

I have some very specific questions with regards to the health innovation fund. It was just announced yesterday as to which projects have been approved through Health and Wellness. Now, my first question is with regards to the dollars. When I look at the lottery fund and then I take the Health and Wellness budget, the dollars don't match up, so I'd like an explanation as to why that is. When I look at the news release from the minister yesterday, the news release indicated that $7.2 million will be allocated in the 1999-2000 year – that was last year actually – for the 33 projects that are coming out of the health innovation fund. Your document indicates that the health innovation fund for 1999-2000 will receive $4 million out of lottery funds. When I look at the Health and Wellness part of the program, it indicates that the 1999-2000 operating expense for Health and Wellness is $5,900,000. If we have a total expenditure for '99-2000 of $9,900,000, which again is last year even though we're talking about this year's budget – it's a little confusing – it means there's a shortfall of $2,700,000 sitting in a fund somewhere. So I'd like to know where that $2.7 million is.

Then I notice that in 2000-2001 the total expenditure for the program will be $14,900,000. That's almost double what the expenditure was for this year. Actually it was this past fiscal year. What I'm wondering is: how many more programs are going to be announced? As of yesterday, we're looking at double the amount, and it would be interesting to know what other projects are going to be announced and what in fact the sunset dates are for these projects.

As the lottery fund is providing significant dollars to the health innovation fund, I've got some specific questions that I'd like to ask the minister. It appeared on overview of these projects that a fair amount were core projects again, that in fact some of them were not as much innovative as required for providing health services to different regions throughout this province. In fact, without continued funding, if these programs were found to be useful, they are not sustainable given the current budgets within regional health authorities.

My questions. If in fact a program is evaluated – and I'd like to know what the evaluation process is for a particular program and, again, what the sunset dates are on particular programs – what happens if it's deemed to be a useful project? Will the health authorities then receive ongoing funding? Has there been the commitment made from the minister of health to ensure that those programs can continue? There is nothing worse than starting a program, having a two-year program, perhaps, be successful and then all of a sudden it's taken out of the community and is gone.

4:40

What were the criteria for selection, and how in fact will other organizations know for next year, because the funding is doubled, that this program is available and that they in fact can apply for this particular program? Now, the reason I ask that is that in the summer of this year when the program was announced, the people who were informed of the program were selected. They were brought into a room in the Calgary region, and they were informed that this was a fund they could apply for. It wasn't a broad-based call throughout Alberta so that organizations throughout Alberta could apply for this health innovation fund. Given that there is more notice now and more dollars, I'd like to know what the process will be for ensuring that not only the RHAs but other community-based agencies can actually apply for this program.

The outcome. I know that the government is very interested in performance measures and outcome measures, and I'd like to know what in fact those are and if in fact those will be made public.

Now, in terms of some of the specific programs, I'd like an explanation of how this differs from what's currently being provided in the areas or how it differs from the major strategies that are outlined in the minister of health's business plan. For the Chinook health region breast health centre one of the major strategies is to "implement provincial population-based breast cancer screening and province-wide metabolic screening programs," yet here we have a major strategy that's not funded through the minister of health but has to depend on lottery funding to access and to provide that particular program. I'm not arguing whether the program is needed. I'm questioning as to the basis of funding and perhaps the way that this program is providing the dollars.

Another program that I've asked for some information about already is the primary care partnership, and this is the program through the Crowfoot Village Family Practice. Now, it's interesting that we're providing more money to that particular program and I've yet to see an evaluation of that program. My question is: before we provide more dollars to a particular program, why in fact do we not have an evaluation first? If it is such a successful program, maybe we should be, as well, spreading out the advantages of that program to other family practice groups in Calgary.

The CUPS program, the community health centre, and the Alberta Mental Health Board. Now, I have a lot of problems with the way the Alberta Mental Health Board has been dealing with its community groups. Here we have the CUPS community health centre, which I understand provides a very good program, but on the other hand they have to get a grant. Again my question is: is it sustainable, and for how long will those dollars be available that will provide mental health support services to persons who are homeless and suffering from mental illness on the east side of downtown by adding a psychiatrist and social worker to the existing team? How is that innovative? That's a necessity. That's not an innovation.

Ditto for the nurse practitioner and physician collaborative partnership in the David Thompson region. Nurse practitioners and the idea of nurse practitioners has been one that has been floating around for years, and the minister of health just recently said that he was going to be talking to the AARN to encourage the use of nurse practitioners. Again, is it innovative? It may be new for that particular area, but the idea is not an idea that has not been thought of before. Again, should this not be an ongoing program provided through Health and Wellness?

Medication management. I have a question as to how that particular program will work. Is there going to be information sharing between the physicians and the pharmacists in order to identify and reduce drug-related problems? That would be one way of doing that. What are the health information implications of that particular sharing of information?

The collaborative maternity care team's shared maternity care project. [Ms Leibovici's speaking time expired]

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MR. SMITH: Thanks very much. I originally thought that the party opposite would be saving the best for last, but I understand that with some of the changes now in speaker order, they really save the antepenultimate for last. [interjection] That is the next to second to last; in other words, you.

I'd like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark for good questions. I really wish the member would have been able to rise to her feet last night when the minister of health was ready with his responses to the lottery fund. But they're very, very good questions, and those good questions deserve very, very good answers. We'll undertake to answer every one of those comments, hon. member. As well, if you do have further and you'd like to table them, that's certainly in accordance with what the other speakers over there would like to do. I'd certainly like to hear more. I always sit on the edge of my seat when the member speaks.

I do just want to make one very quick comment that I think may help in further questions, and that is on the volatility of oil and gas prices over the last 18 months, from $12 a barrel to a high of $32 and change and back down to $27, and the volatility of corporate income tax over the last seven years. I think it has moved from $350 million to over $1.56 billion. There's more volatility in other revenue streams to this government than there is in the lottery fund. I mean, if you examine the lottery fund revenues and the normative growth that's occurred in the last five years, this is not funding that's put in jeopardy. What it is is recognition of opportunities in funding streams that operating ministries take from this fund and in a clear, transparent manner apply to their specific ministries.

So I did want to clear that up as well as giving answers to the technical questions and commenting that the Auditor General actually thinks we're better than we were before. He makes comments like: I am pleased to report that the department is making progress. So it's not all bad news from the Auditor General, and it's good news from the funding stream.

I look forward to hearing more from the opposition members.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Go ahead, hon. member.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you. I want to just finish off the list that I have here as to the questions, and then they'll be provided all in one shot. I recognize that the Minister of Health and Wellness will have to be consulted in terms of the questions and will respond in writing, and that's just fine.

I was at the collaborative maternity care team's shared maternity care project. The question I have there is that that seems to be more of a public health function and should be provided and could be provided through the public health delivery system. In the Capital region there are a couple of programs that I have some questions on. One is the adult brain injury caregiver college program, which actually does sound like it is a good, innovative program. I'd just like to know where the caregiver college will be, in case I have constituents who would like to be able to access that, and how far outside the Capital region people will be able to access this particular college.

If I might just add onto that, the idea of a caregiver college is a good one, not only for individuals who have family members who are suffering from adult brain injury but also for individuals who have family members who are suffering from a variety of physical and/or mental disabilities that could use help and support with regards to providing care to their family members.

4:50

The Grey Nuns rehab outreach service I understand has been an ongoing program – and I could be wrong – for the last couple of years, so this is not a new program. What I would be interested in knowing is whether the women's centre at the Grey Nuns hospital did in fact apply for any of the project dollars. If they did and were refused, what was the basis of the refusal? I understand that there is a project that is floating around the Capital region area, as well, for individuals who have weight problems, and I'd like to know if in fact that was a program that was requested in terms of funding.

The Aspen health region. I notice that there is a project called the Aspen Alzheimer's cottage. I'm wondering if that's connected with Aspen house at all or if this is a separate and stand-alone facility and if this cottage is a private, for-profit or public or private operator in the Aspen area.

The Aspen regional diabetic program. I've noticed this with other services that have been talked about by the minister of health with regards to diabetics and their needs. It seems we are doing wellness services and we are doing education regarding diabetes, but the reality is that what people need is to be able to access the supplies, and the dollars that are provided for individuals to access supplies like needles or insulin or what have you are inadequate. As one individual said to me: needles are provided for free to drug addicts but are not provided free to those with diabetes. So this is a huge concern.

The other area around that whole issue is dialysis services. I notice that there was the shared remote diagnostic imaging, which sounds like actually a very neat idea. I would like to know if there were any projects that were submitted with regards to dialysis services and traveling around from region to region or from centre to centre.

The Metis health project. I just have two other questions after this. If I could get an overview. It sounds the way it's written here as if one on-settlement nurse will do both public health and home care nursing to several Metis communities in the Lakeland region. That seems like an impossible task, and I would like to know if I'm reading that properly or if it will be a number of on-settlement nurses that will be providing those services.

The adult day program in the Mistahia region is also a program that is a good program by the look of it, but again the question is around the innovativeness and the sustainability of that particular program. How long is the funding being provided for? Is it two years, three years, five years, or an eternity?

My last question is around the Alberta Cancer Board. I was surprised at this one, where it indicated that there would be a palliative care discharge co-ordinator at the Tom Baker cancer centre who would provide referral services for regional palliative care programs to terminally ill cancer patients being discharged. My immediate reaction was: is that not being done now? That is an essential service to patients who are being discharged from the Tom Baker who are terminally ill, and I can't quite understand how that would be a program without guaranteed sustainable dollars in the long run.

Those are some of the specific questions that I have with regards to the lottery fund estimates. I thank the minister for listening attentively, as he always does.

Thank you.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have just a few comments today that I'd like to make on the lottery fund estimates. I must thank the minister for remaining behind today in the House to field this vast array of questions. I do know that he's a very proud and concerned Canadian and that he would certainly rather be down in Calgary getting ready to attend the Prime Minister's dinner this evening.

MR. SMITH: I was invited. I would have gone.

MR. BONNER: Well, that's what I said. I knew that you would rather be there, and I do congratulate you for staying behind in the House today to answer our questions.

MR. SMITH: I didn't know if I could get in or not.

MR. BONNER: We will leave Bill 11 and all those other things out of this.

I do appreciate the comment that gambling is a matter of choice. I would be the first person to say that I've been involved as a volunteer with many organizations that have reaped the benefits of moneys that we receive in the way of grants from the lottery fund. I think it is essential, particularly when we look at our smaller communities and we look at our volunteers, that we do give them a hand, and particularly volunteers. These are the people that are having an increasing number of demands put on their time. We expect these people to be experts as volunteers. They attend programs. They attend coaching clinics. Accreditation has been a major part of their getting involved with their communities or with the children in communities. They have demands placed on them not only by the organizations they represent but also by parents, for example.

I was glad to see that the Calgary Minor Hockey Association came out with a plan which would provide a safe atmosphere for their participants and that in this plan they also had as part of their plan an environment where parents would be responsible.

As well, in speaking about volunteers, another component of being a volunteer, of being a parent is to raise funds to provide those opportunities for the youth of today, for people in our communities, whatever it may be, so that they will have opportunities that many of us just dreamed of when we were coming through the program. So we have to look at those things.

Certainly in looking at gambling, we do have a balance between choice and responsibility and accountability. I heard an interesting comparison to gambling the other day. It was a comparison where it was compared to death. In some instances gambling can be described in terms of death: as a friend or, in other terms, as a thief. Certainly when we look at death being a friend, we have to look at our communities that so many of these funds go to. I was quite impressed when I saw the extensive list and the extensive programs that these funds go towards.

I agreed with the Member for Edmonton-Manning, who certainly indicated that communities are the backbone of this province. We have to look, for example, at what is happening to community life here in the province. I look at the municipal district of St. Paul, for example, which has experienced a 30 percent decline in population over the last decade. I know that these types of funds that go for projects in the municipal district of St. Paul are very, very needed dollars.

5:00

The question I get as I tour around this province is that so many of the VLTs, the bingos, the lotteries, whatever it may be, take so many dollars out of a community, yet so few of those are returned. I look at an example when I was in Cold Lake last summer, how the people of Cold Lake built a marina a number of years ago that was referred to as a white elephant. Well, when I was in Cold Lake last summer, it was very interesting to see that the marina that was once a white elephant now is too small. So many things have happened. The number of boats has increased greatly, the size of those boats has also increased, and so the town of Cold Lake, which is doing a fabulous job of developing and promoting tourism in their area, is faced with a problem where they not only have to expand the marina but bring it up to par for the size of boats they have to deal with today.

Now, as a community they certainly cannot raise those kind of funds for the marina. I certainly would rather see funds being provided for those types of projects out of lotteries rather than seeing that money going to core services. I know core service needs all the help it can get, but I would also like to see where communities that are out there, communities that see themselves in a state of transition, where industries that are in those towns, whether it be the number of farmers in the area is declining or whether, for example, the town's resources have declined, where they can see that at some time in the future those resources are not going to be there to sustain the viability of the town and they wish to move into tourism, then they certainly need some help. I would wonder, in all of these deliberations, if in fact the minister or the lottery fund would ever look at the possibility of providing funds for those types of facilities for towns that are in transition, that require something to keep them viable, to keep them going when there is such an attack on towns in rural Alberta.

As well, in looking at all of this I want to look at the percentage of funds from slot machines from our casinos. Especially the volunteers who go out there, they work hard. Many of them don't get home, if they're on an evening shift, until 2, 3, 4 in the morning, depending how long they're tied up in the count room or whatever, and to see that only 30 percent of those funds goes to that volunteer organization – I would like to know if there is in fact any possibility that more of these funds could be returned to the volunteer groups.

Also, when I look at those funds, it again brings me to the question that when we look at casinos, every casino that I see being built or modified or renovated now is absolutely increasing in size. The number of casinos: I don't know how their limit is regulated. Also, I notice that in all the new casinos there is just a tremendous number of slots. At what point is there a limit? The VLTs were limited at 6,000, and I have to wonder if there is a cap on the number of slots.

As well, in my opening remarks I certainly said that gambling is a matter of choice. It's a matter of choice, but also there is a balance between that choice and responsibility and accountability. The accountability is something that I would like to look at here for a few minutes. This is one of the areas where gambling is a theme.

Now, in all of these types of gaming that we do have in the province, we have the demographics that I believe indicate that the majority of gamblers and the percentage of gamblers in the lower income group is quite high. It has been said that in many cases this simply is a tax on the lower income groups, tax in a different form.

More importantly, when I look at what is happening in many of our communities here in Edmonton, I'm looking at this whole monitoring aspect. For example, in northeast and northwest Edmonton we have some things that are happening where volunteers have gone out and earned a tremendous amount of money. For example, the community of Lauderdale had raised $30,000 for community projects through lotteries, through bingos, whatever, and this money disappeared. Their biggest complaint right now is that even after two years they have not been able to get this person into court to try and recover that money. We have a hockey organization in northeast Edmonton that was just defrauded out of $60,000. We had another hockey organization in northwest Edmonton that was defrauded out of $120,000, and we hear that there are going to be at least two or three more.

So my question to the minister is: how is Gaming looking into this whole aspect of monitoring what happens to these moneys? There are too many of these hard-earned dollars by volunteers that are going missing out of volunteer organizations, and I would certainly like them to explore different methods by which these organizations could be protected.

Now, I hear the minister's getting a little impatient, certainly not the minister responsible for Gaming, but I look and there have been numerous references here, Mr. Minister, to moneys being spent on golf and country clubs. Certainly, if this is the case – I enjoy golf every bit as much as the minister does, but to get back to my original point, I think if we are spending money on golf and country clubs, then certainly there are other facilities in these municipalities that could be used. For example, I used the case of the Cold Lake marina. I would certainly like to explore that possibility as well.

With those comments, Mr. Chairman, I will take my seat. Thank you very much.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MR. SMITH: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. As I see members start to tidy up, pack up, and ship out for what's going to be a much, much welcome break – that time, of course, will be spent by this ministry and individuals in my department and myself assiduously reviewing the comments of the Member for Edmonton-Glengarry and ensuring that he has good, solid answers to good, solid questions. We will undertake to do that. We know it's important to him, we know it's important to his constituents, and we'll certainly be complying in doing that.

So short of wishing members bonne semaine, bonne vacance, M. le President, I think we can look for the vote on these estimates, and I'd like to thank all members of the opposition who were charitable in their acceptance of my comments and also keenly interested in their type of questions. For that I thank them.

Thank you.

Agreed to:
Agriculture, Food and Rural Development	11,620,000
Children's Services	1,200,000
Community Development	60,664,000
Gaming	164,033,000
Health and Wellness	127,528,000

Infrastructure	$280,000,000
Innovation and Science	$40,832,000
Learning	$89,300,000
Municipal Affairs	$12,000,000
Treasury	$50,323,000

5:10

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Opposed.

THE ACTING CHAIRMAN: Carried.
The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the Committee of Supply now rise and report the estimates of the lottery fund.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

MR. HERARD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

All resolutions relating to the 2000-2001 lottery fund estimates have been approved. Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a list of those resolutions voted upon by the Committee of Supply pursuant to Standing Orders.

Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, $11,620,000; Children's Services, $1,200,000; Community Development, $60,664,000; Gaming, $164,033,000; Health and Wellness, $127,528,000; Infrastructure, $280,000,000; Innovation and Science, $40,832,000; Learning, $89,300,000; Municipal Affairs, $12,000,000; Treasury, $50,323,000.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request unanimous consent of the House to revert to two items: Introduction of Bills and then Projected Government Business.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Bills
(reversion)

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the House for allowing unanimous consent.

Bill 21
Appropriation Act, 2000

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce Bill 21, the Appropriation Act, 2000. This being a money bill, Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a first time]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

head: Projected Government Business
(reversion)

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon under

Projected Government Business I erred in indicating to the House that on Tuesday, April 4 at 4:30 p.m. under second reading of private bills we would deal with private bills 1 to 5. I'm now advised that those bills will not be ready to be presented at that time, so I would amend projected government business at that time to provide for Government Bills and Orders for second reading: Bill 3, Bill 7, and Bill 14.

That having been said, Mr. Speaker, it would be my pleasure to move that pursuant to Government Motion 6, agreed to by the Assembly on March 7, 2000, the Assembly stand adjourned until Monday, April 3, 2000, at 1:30 p.m.

[Pursuant to Government Motion 6 the Assembly adjourned at 5:17 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, April 3, 2000

1:30 p.m.

Date: 00/04/03

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Please join me in the prayer. Father, on this day of a new beginning we ask for Your guidance in the responsibility we have undertaken and Your help in fulfilling our duties. As Members of this Legislative Assembly may we faithfully serve all Albertans and, in serving them, serve You. Amen.

Hon. members, would you please remain standing so that we might now participate in the singing of our national anthem, and we'll ask Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us.

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition here signed by Edmontonians and surrounding area residents that is urging the government "to stop promoting private health care and undermining [the] public health care [system]."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MRS. SOETAERT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition signed by 281 people in the Glendon, Ashmont, Bonnyville, Mallaig area. They are petitioning "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

MR. GIBBONS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition supporting public health care in Alberta urging "the government of Alberta to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care." This is on behalf of 221 Albertans from Edmonton, Sherwood Park, Gibbons, Bon Accord, Gunn, and St. Albert.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to present a petition signed by 327 Edmontonians, and this petition urges the Legislative Assembly and the government "to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition signed by 244 residents of Edmonton and St. Albert, mostly from my constituency of Edmonton-Calder, and they "urge the government to stop promoting private health care and undermining public health care."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure for me today to stand and present a petition to the Legislature. This is a petition organized by Debbie Dore on behalf of her daughter Tara McDonald, and this petition asks that the Legislative Assembly require "a minimum of two people" for nighttime shifts in businesses in Alberta.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to present a petition signed by another 359 Albertans from Westlock, Leduc, Stony Plain, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Sherwood Park, and Fort Saskatchewan. This brings the total number of signatures on this petition to 8,409. The petition calls on the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to pass a Bill banning private for-profit hospitals in Alberta so that the integrity of the public, universal health care system may be maintained.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. WOLOSHYN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table today in the House five copies of an information bulletin regarding Information Rights Week, which runs April 3 through 10. This week is initiated by the Canadian Library Association to create awareness of any citizen's rights to information as well as protection of their privacy.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish today to table appropriate copies of letters to Mr. Les Pearson, principal of the William Aberhart high school and also to Mr. David Oakleaf, the school council chair for William Aberhart high school. It's a letter expressing my personal condolences and sense of loss on the tragedy at William Aberhart high school and an offer of any assistance, should it be necessary.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of tablings. The first one is an analysis of Shouldice Hospital Limited in Ontario. This is an analysis which points out that Shouldice is an anomaly, a throwback, grandparented before public medicare was brought in, and there are no private hospitals permitted in this province by the Private Hospitals Act. That's the first one.

The second is several letters, Mr. Speaker, all opposed to Bill 11, one of them coming from the Premier's own constituents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. WICKMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three sets of tablings today. The first one is a number of letters and e-mails from residents that are very, very unhappy with the government's direction in terms of health care, and I'll just read their names: Elizabeth Eddy, Mark Henderson, Wesley Eddy, Mike Hanna, Joan Leslie, Tanya Seh, Peter Stevenson, Fred Debre.

Secondly, I have sufficient copies of a letter from residents of Sherwood Park who would be very delighted to have a public debate on Bill 11.

Thirdly, I have a letter from Abe Fehr, who is part of a new organization to hold representatives accountable, including their voting pattern on Bill 11.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MS LEIBOVICI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling this afternoon. It's a letter to Elinor Caplan, the minister of immigration in support of Leticia Cables, the Filipino nanny that was recently deported.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two sets of tablings. The first is from Frances Jablonca of Calgary, and the second is from July Lenek, also of Calgary. Both of them are opposed to the proposed development in Kananaskis Country and would like to bring this matter to the attention of the Premier.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MRS. SLOAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise and table five copies of the 1999-2000 annual report for Edmonton-Riverview. This report was mailed to all of the 20,000 constituents that reside in Edmonton-Riverview over the last week, and it provides an accounting of the services and expenditures incurred by the constituency in the last fiscal year.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

1:40

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. Both of them are from constituents of Edmonton-Gold Bar. The first one is from Mr. Ivan Whitson, and it is a letter addressed to the Premier. Bill 11 does not fool Mr. Whitson.

The second tabling is from Phyllis La Fleur on 52nd Street, and this is also a letter to the Premier. She is very disappointed in Bill 11.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. WHITE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today, sir. Both reflect the concerns of themselves over the developments in Spray Valley and Kananaskis Country. The one from Ms Louise Ewanger is in fact opposed mainly because of the grizzly bear population in the transit zone there.

The second is also concerning that same development, the Spray Lakes development. It is a letter to Mr. Gobi Singh from two Calgary residents Kathryn Fisher and Gerry Stewart, both expressing the desire that the development be stopped.

Thank you, sir.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies of a document prepared by the condominium advocate association. This is a very thorough collection of recommendations for amendments to Bill 16 around the Condominium Property Amendment Act.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a legal package which examines the WCB act, the duties and responsibilities of the board of directors. As well, this legal package also offers a number of recommendations.

Thank you very much.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

MS GRAHAM: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon I'm pleased to introduce a group of 43 from Calgary. They are parents and children from the CCHEA home school. One of the families is from my constituency of Calgary-Lougheed. This is in fact the first school group that I've had the privilege of introducing in the Legislature. The parents and children are seated in the members' gallery. I'd like to introduce them and would request that they stand after they've been introduced and that we provide them with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly upon doing so. They are Mrs. Sharon Cassley and family, Mrs. Tracy Good and family, Mrs. Cheryl Eadon and family, Mrs. Sandy Widmer and family, Mrs. Patti Boser and family, Mr. and Mrs. Brad Osborne and family, Mrs. Harriet Paul and family, Mrs. Shirley Ann Wensley and family, Mrs. Dianne Conway and family, and finally Mrs. Carrol Zacher and family.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

MR. RENNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly some guests who are with us today from the town of Foremost in southeastern Alberta. They're constituents of the Minister of Innovation and Science, so I'll be introducing them on his behalf. I'd like to introduce to you Kelly Calhoun, who is the mother of Donnie and JamieMay Calhoun. The Calhouns have been in Edmonton for the weekend and extended their stay so that they would have an opportunity to tour the Legislative Assembly. This morning I met briefly with them at lunch in the cafeteria, so they had the grand tour and even had a chance to sample our cuisine. They're seated in the members' gallery. I ask all members to give them a warm welcome.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly 51 very special guests from Tofield high school accompanied by very dedicated teachers, Ms Trish Loner and of course Mr. Fred Yachimec, who has visited the Assembly before. They're seated in both galleries. I would ask all of them to rise now and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Two introductions today. The first one: 28 grade 10 high school students from Concordia high school located in Edmonton-Highlands, and they're accompanied by two adults, Mr. Lloyd Grosfield and Mrs. Barb Patricio. I think they are sitting on both sides of the House. I'll ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The second set of introductions, Mr. Speaker, are two young Albertans, Melissa Johnson and Kevin Flesher. Both of them are my constituents. During the noon hour today Melissa MC'd the citizens vigil rally on the steps of the Legislature, and Kevin Flesher composed a song and sang it to the same rally. I would ask both of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Private Health Services

MRS. MacBETH: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The evidence is clear. Petitions, town hall meetings, and poll after poll: Albertans do not want Bill 11 by odds of 3 to 1. The Angus Reid poll just released over the weekend indicates that the more people know about Bill 11, the more they oppose it. My questions today are to the minister of health. Can the minister tell us whether he and the Premier are withholding any government-funded reports or studies that would strengthen public opposition to Bill 11?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think the preamble should not go uncommented upon. There are other polls and other reports; for instance, "Exclusive poll indicates opposition to Klein plan eroding." So there are different perspectives in terms of the polling.

Mr. Speaker, with respect to the overall budgetary commitment to publicizing the bill and providing supporting material, there has been an overall commitment to report on the costs of our overall communication program, and that has been stated previously in this Assembly.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, the minister didn't answer the question, which was whether there were any government-funded reports or studies, one of which I'm pleased to table today. The study was, in fact, sponsored by the government and obviously suppressed for reasons which will become apparent, because the March 2000 study says, "There is no published study of the efficiency (i.e. cost and quality) of the purchase of surgical services from private facilities by public funders." Have the minister and the Premier suppressed this report to Albertans because it leads to further opposition to Bill 11?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, we've had questions in the Assembly previously with respect to what has happened in the province with respect to contracting out. The examples we have right now are the surgical eye clinics in Calgary. We have indicated that the Calgary regional health authority reports that they are having more procedures done under the current contract arrangement for the same financial commitment from their budget as was previously the case.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, is this minister saying that he is unaware of a government-funded study by Dr. Cam Donaldson and Gillian Currie commissioned by his department to look into the issue of private surgical facilities?

1:50

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, the overall information that we have is that it's very hard to quote any particular cases and evidence here in Alberta because at this point in time we do not, except for the exceptional case of the cataract clinics in Calgary, have these clinics that she's referring to.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, the report says that the work presented in this report was funded by the Institute of Health Economics through a grant by Alberta Health and Wellness. Is the minister aware or is he not aware of a report commissioned by his department?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Institute of Health Economics is a section of the University of Alberta. With respect to studies that are done in this particular area, I have portrayed the situation correctly, and that is that in terms of examples here in this province, we do not have private surgical clinics under contract except for the exceptions that I've mentioned.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier of this province told this Legislature on March 8, "If we had something to hide, if we had something to be afraid of, we would have kept this from the public." Was he referring to the government's suppression of this report paid for by their own department?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the member across the way indicated in her preamble, she is saying that this is a government report. It's done through the office of health economics over at the University of Alberta, as I recall. That is part of the research that they do. Yes, we do provide funding to the University of Alberta. I think everybody is well aware of that.

MRS. MacBETH: So, Mr. Speaker, with 72 percent of Albertans saying that health is their top concern in Alberta and with the Bill 11 initiative under way, how could this minister not know about the report commissioned with taxpayers' money? Who is running the show?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I do have to admit that I agree with the hon. leader, and health care is a top concern of Albertans at 72 percent. That seems to be a commonly quoted statistic. I would also like to indicate to the hon. member in the Assembly that in polling responses as reported in our Alberta Health and Wellness documents, 80 percent feel that they're getting a very good health care system provided to them in this province.

MRS. MacBETH: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is quite an incredible revelation that the minister doesn't know about his own report. But let's go into the report, the one that was funded by his department. Given that the Premier told Albertans in his November 1999 TV address that there would not be two-tiered, American style health care in our province, why does his own government-funded research paper say that "forms of two-tierism" are likely to arise?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, as I heard the hon. member's statement, she is admitting that the report has not found any particular examples of two-tier services to Albertans and is making a statement, an opinion, which is not usually considered part of research; that is that in the opinion, I guess, of the author, it could arise, is likely to arise, if that's a correct quote. But I think the actual implication of her having to go to that question is that the report does not indicate there is two-tiered service here.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, how can Albertans believe a minister of health or a Premier that claims that Bill 11 isn't about padding profit margins when his own paper funded by his department says that sources of revenue other than from RHAs may be needed for private hospitals to survive financially? What is the minister's response to those kinds of issues in his own funded report?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the hon. member that in her own reading of the report, she has indicated that the author chooses to speculate and to say: may this, may that. Bill 11 has a very specific clause saying that there shall be no private hospitals in Alberta, and I think that is quite significant. Of course, that does not fit in with the tactics or the approach of the opposition, but the bill that we are going to be debating shortly in this Legislature is a very protective piece of legislation. No private hospitals, a whole set of other provisions in the bill designed, for instance, to deal with any possibility of excess charges and improper procedures for enhanced services and supplies: that is very much the theme of that legislation.

MRS. MacBETH: Mr. Speaker, Albertans know what this government is saying. What they don't trust is what this government is doing in Bill 11.

Mr. Speaker, I quote again from this government-funded review: our review has shown that "private facilities, generally, provide faster access to those who can pay and . . . do offer enhanced services." How can this minister stand here and tell Albertans that his bill isn't going to do enhanced services, two-tiered health care, and on and on?

MR. HAVELOCK: Point of order.

MR. JONSON: Because Bill 11 has specific provisions in it to deal with the whole matter of preventing queue-jumping, preventing being able to get faster service by virtue of any ability to pay. That is a very important part of this legislation.

As I've said before, it bans full-service private hospitals, Mr. Speaker. It has a number of other controls and recording procedures designed to provide for more openness with respect to any contracts that might be arrived at. It has a set of criteria designed to protect the public interest with respect to what factors a regional health authority must consider in terms of approving any contract. It is, as it's aptly named, the health protection act.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite asking a leading question that didn't even mention overnight patient stays, a solid majority of Albertans are found by a recent Calgary Herald Angus Reid poll to oppose Bill 11. The poll also shows that what little support the government has is soft while the opposition to Bill 11 is rock solid. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why hasn't the minister sent an angry letter criticizing the Calgary Herald like he did last week with A-Channel when the spin-doctored question asked by the Herald was clearly designed to underestimate public opposition to Bill 11?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, in terms of responding to surveys, I reserve the opportunity to comment on polls and their methodology if it is felt they are not appropriate, not accurate, not sound. If the Calgary Herald were to do a poll or use methodology which we questioned, I would certainly communicate with them.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me ask the minister another question. Why won't the minister admit that the more Albertans find out about Bill 11, the less they like it, as evidenced by this weekend's poll which shows that Albertans who have read Bill 11 strongly oppose it by a margin of 3 to 1?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, we could certainly at some other time have a debate about the interpretation of various polls that are taken. My interpretation of recent polls over the weekend is something that, of course, is very good and in keeping with our intent as far as government is concerned, and that is that more people are indicating they feel fully informed with respect to the legislation. In terms of debating what the different trends may mean, that is illustrated by the article that I quoted from previously. There are different interpretations of the data that's coming in, but certainly one that I don't think is being argued with is that more Albertans are availing themselves of the information that's available, and that is what the government's intention is.

2:00

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Why is the government refusing to listen to the overwhelming majority of Albertans, including the president of the Capital Region Medical Staff Association, who last week described the government's proposal to contract out overnight surgeries as dumb, disastrous, and a threat to patient safety?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of that particular comment by – was it the chair of the Edmonton medical staff association? But I am aware – and it has been recorded in this House – that there are a number of prominent physicians who feel that the legislation is appropriate and will be of advantage to the overall health care system in this province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Violent Crime

MS PAUL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents in Edmonton-Castle Downs are bolting down the hatches and ducking for cover. It seems like the only thing to do as a result of the recent rash of shootings. This is not the only area in the city of Edmonton to have seen the escalation of violent acts either by gang-related or nongang-related individuals. People are afraid to move freely about the streets of our city as they don't want to be an innocent bystander involved in one of these random drive-by shootings. Newspapers are filling pages detailing shootings, stabbings, robberies, and gang activities that are occurring in our city and across the province. My questions are to the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Are you working to find solutions to resolve the gang or nongang violence that is occurring almost daily? If you are, Albertans want to know what steps you have taken. When are we going to see an end to this violence?

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That may be all three questions in one; I don't know. Let me, first of all, deal with the preamble to the question, because I wouldn't want the public of Alberta or the citizens of Edmonton to believe what I believe to be a gross overexaggeration of the situation that has just been put forward. The streets in Edmonton are safe. Our communities are safe. There have been a few violent incidents. That happens in larger municipal centres, but let's not overexaggerate it. The citizens of Edmonton are not bolting for cover, are not battering down the hatches, and are not hiding from people in this city. This is a safe city. We have had a few incidents.

Now, to get to the details of the question. In November of 1998 an organized crime strategy was announced, and the provincial government put, I believe, $8 million into that strategy. That strategy is working, Mr. Speaker. For example, there's a trial to begin this fall in September with respect to one of the major actions that has been taken against gangs in this province. The city of Edmonton police are working closely with the RCMP and other police jurisdictions around the province to deal with incidences of organized crime and gangs. There's good co-operation happening, good information-sharing happening, but I want to end where I started by saying: let's not exaggerate the situation and scare the citizens of Alberta. There are a few incidents that are happening, but our streets are still safe.

MS PAUL: Thank you, Mr. Minister, but in fact I've had more calls on this incident than on health care.

My first supplementary to the same minister: have you been communicating with the federal Justice minister to stop the availability of illegal firearms coming into the hands of our criminal element?

MR. HANCOCK: No, Mr. Speaker, I haven't spoken directly with the federal Minister of Justice on that issue. I know that our departments talk all the time on issues, but with respect to the question of importation of firearms, that's clearly a federal jurisdiction.

MS PAUL: My second supplementary to the same minister. The Premier offered financial assistance to the former Edmonton chief of police in dealing with gang-related incidents, which you know was refused. Is this offer still on the table?

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member is speculating from a news story that was printed early in January. I'm not sure that there was an incident of a specific offer of cash made. I think it was probably a response to questions relating to: if more resources were needed to combat organized crime in this province, would more resources be available? Of course, this government is very committed to combating organized crime. It's one of my department's clear objectives. It's a high priority area, and we will put forward the resources necessary to appropriately combat organized crime in this province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Seniors' Benefit Program

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is most definitely benefiting from a very strong economy under the leadership of this government, I might note, and the majority of our seniors lead active, independent lives. However, there are low-income seniors who are receiving help from our income support program who are having a difficult time covering rising costs, especially with rent, gas, and other services basic to shelter costs. My question is to the Minister of Community Development. What are you planning to do about this concern?

MR. WOLOSHYN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's worthy to note that Alberta has the highest threshold of qualification dollarwise of any jurisdiction in Canada, meaning that we bring in and start to assist seniors at the highest income level anywhere in Canada.

That's within the context of the advantages that you have in Alberta. In addition, this year we will have a minimum increase of 10 percent to every individual who is receiving Alberta seniors' benefit payments at this point in time. That will be coming forward with the approvals very, very shortly.

The other aspect, Mr. Speaker, that I think it's worthy to note is that Alberta is the only province with a special-needs program that addresses the very issues that have been brought forward by the hon. member. I would like to point out that we have increased the staff there, increased the budget to this program with the intention of having a much shorter wait time to have approvals for the program. I'd like to also note that the program this year has served some 6,000 people with an average payout of about $2,700, which is considerably less than the $5,000 maximum that would be available if they can show need.

MS KRYCZKA: Mr. Speaker, my first supplemental is to the same minister. Given that it is generally agreed that shelter costs are higher in some areas of the province than others – for example, in Calgary and Fort McMurray – are you considering a review of the Alberta seniors' benefit program to accommodate higher shelter costs in some areas of the province?

Thank you.

MR. WOLOSHYN: Mr. Speaker, we are certainly aware that in places like Canmore, Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, and to some degree Calgary – anywhere you have a high degree of economic activity, shelter costs go up across the board. We've been looking at this program to see what we can do, but I think it's worthy to note that currently the province provides some 23,000 government-funded housing units in the province. These range from lodges and cottages to self-contained apartments. Quite frankly, eligibility is based on need, but I might reiterate that if people are finding themselves in dire straits, they can apply to the special-needs program.

MS KRYCZKA: Mr. Speaker, my second supplemental is again to the same minister. Given that some middle-income seniors are just above the threshold cutoff between low- and middle-income levels and feel somewhat disadvantaged, are their concerns justified considering Alberta's total benefit plan for seniors in relation to the plans of other provinces?

MR. WOLOSHYN: Mr. Speaker, it's quite known that Alberta has the best programs for seniors of any jurisdiction. That can be shown statistically, comparatively, any way you want to look at it. I'd also like to point out that there were some 306,000 seniors in Alberta as of September of 1999. If you take one aspect, simply the health care premium, of those, 130,000 have the premium totally paid for; another 50,000 have a partial payment towards it. Quite frankly, we will be looking further at what we can do to aid seniors. We're constantly in a review process, making sure we stay ahead of the needs of the seniors to see that they live comfortably and securely in this province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

2:10

Private Health Services

(continued)

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There is no evidence to show any benefit from the contracting out of surgical operations to private hospitals. The government claims that under Bill 11 regional health authorities will have to show through a cost-benefit analysis that contracting out surgical procedures to approved surgical facilities will be more cost-effective. My questions are to the minister of health. Why should Albertans trust anything this government says about the cost-effectiveness of private providers under Bill 11 when the report from the Institute of Health Economics done for his own department says that "it seems that in no country is there a system in place to monitor costs, quality of care or outcomes in private providers"?

MR. JONSON: The answer, Mr. Speaker, is and should be, I think, quite clear to the hon. member, and that is that we are bringing under the auspices of provincial legislation and through a contracting process the provision of surgical facilities under contract. In the legislation, as the hon. member has acknowledged through referring to one clause among many that deal with setting the rules and parameters and controls around contracts, we will have the ability to control through a contract and through the criteria through which that contract has to be arrived at the overall funds to be dedicated to that particular contract.

It also, therefore, sets the situation whereby that contract will be able to be monitored. It will be able to be costed. It will be able to be evaluated, Mr. Speaker, as the overall health care system is subject to accountability measures. So the reference to countries or other places in the world where they have a freestanding, so to speak, private health care system is really not relevant to what is contemplated in Bill 11.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the study points out on page 4 that people in rural areas tend to have lower access to health care than urban residents, the report then goes on to ask "whether the Alberta proposal would exacerbate this situation so that conditions and access would not be reasonable or uniform around major urban centres," why is the government proceeding with this privatization plan?

MR. JONSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am fairly familiar with the rural areas of this province, and it is certainly the case, as has been acknowledged, that the full range of services cannot practically be delivered in every rural part of this province. We take the overall strategy that in our regional hospitals and in the specialized hospitals in Edmonton and Calgary we planned and we fund a wide range of very difficult, needed services which just cannot be practically provided in every centre in the province.

Bill 11 is designed to provide an option whereby in a site or in an area where there is sufficient volume and need for a specialized surgical service, it can be done under contract if, in the terms of the overall assessment that's done of a proposal, it is deemed to be an advantage for all Albertans in terms of reducing waiting lists or providing a service.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The same study on page 17 states that there are serious issues and questions raised regarding the Alberta experience with private provision of a publicly funded service, which should be investigated seriously by a government considering further extensions of private provision.

Will the government withdraw Bill 11 until such investigations are complete?

MR. JONSON: As I've indicated in this Assembly before and I think all members of the Assembly are well aware, in terms of the delivery of services in the overall health sector it has been for decades and is today, Mr. Speaker, a mixture of totally publicly run facilities and services, the voluntary sector – our voluntary hospitals, for instance, operate across this province – and the private sector has been involved. There is high-quality service being provided by all of those sectors.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

National Infrastructure Program

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal government has announced its intent to establish a new infrastructure program requiring funding participation from the federal, provincial, and municipal levels of government. Since the federal budget announcement many questions have been raised about this program by municipalities in my constituency and others throughout the province. My first question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Should municipalities be budgeting now for this program, and if so, what information is available to both the province and municipalities to enable both levels to do so in a responsible manner?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: In the past the federal, provincial, and municipal infrastructure program has been a very, very successful program. Mr. Speaker, it might be wise for municipalities to consider their mid to longer range planning and prioritize what their needs may be. Unfortunately, at the present time we have very little information regarding this particular program and absolutely less detail, so we're not in a position to provide any advisement as to the nature of this program at the present time. It remains a question as to just when this information will come forward and whether indeed that information will be here in time for this coming year's budget.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you. My second question is to the same minister. While you have said that there is very little information, I'm wondering if you might enlarge upon what the individual municipalities might be eligible to receive?

MR. PASZKOWSKI: As I pointed out, Mr. Speaker, there are very few details and very little information regarding this program. What we do know is that the federal government has said that it will provide $100 million for the year 2000-2001 budget, $350 million for the year 2001-2002 budget and $550 million for the four years following that. These moneys would need to be matched by the province as well as the municipalities. However, I should point out that the details are certainly not there and are very, very sketchy at the present time.

Mr. Speaker, it's completely unknown as to what portion Alberta will receive as well. We would be assuming that we would be receiving approximately 10 percent, which would be on a per capita basis, but there is no guarantee that this is going to be the case. If that were the case, if we received 10 percent of the overall on a per capita basis, that means that Alberta would qualify for something like $205 million over the six-year period of this program. Therefore, municipalities would be asked to contribute on an equal basis. When you put it into the perspective that indeed the federal government collects well over $600 million a year in fuel tax alone, $205 million over six years certainly is not what we consider a fair share to be returned to this province: to the municipalities or to the province.

Obviously there are some major anomalies in the overall program. Nevertheless, we're still awaiting the details as they may come forward.

