Why is it, Mr. Speaker, that we would want to continue to have at least 20 minutes of speaking time for private members in this Legislature when in fact in this session we have seen some legislation flow through this Legislature at all stages in record time? There have been few bills that we have spoken our full 20 minutes to as an entire caucus, in fact not one single one this session. Why? Because for the most part those pieces of legislation were not hugely controversial. Most of them were minor housekeeping pieces of legislation and didn't warrant long, extended debate, but there are times in this Assembly when we see legislation that does warrant serious debate. Why would we want to prolong debate on a piece of legislation? It isn't because we want to be obstructive to the government, while members may think that's true. The fact of the matter is that as an opposition we have a responsibility to ensure that people in this province hear what it is the government is proposing to pass as legislation.

So we must give those stakeholders an opportunity to review the legislation, to digest the content of the legislation, to talk to other directly affected people about the legislation, and the time then to get back to us with any concerns or issues that they have. In fact, it has been the case since I was elected to this Legislature in 1993 that there are many times when we have protracted debate on a piece of legislation where the government will do one of two things. They will amend the legislation with some of our ideas or some of the ideas that they ultimately hear from stakeholder groups and strengthen the legislation or will postpone the legislation, send it out to the communities for further review and revision, and bring it back at a later time, or we will see the legislation disappear. All of those can be really good practices. This government always states when they bring in a new bill that they have consulted the stakeholders and that they're very happy with the legislation. Often that is exactly how the piece of legislation rolls out, but sometimes that isn't the case, Mr. Speaker, and we see pieces of legislation that people have missed on the first, cursory glance or they haven't completely understood long-term implications, and further revisions are needed.

It is a responsibility for opposition parties in any province on contentious or potentially contentious bills to expand the amount of time that they are debated in order to give stakeholders time to consult. Now, if this government had a different process of bringing in pieces of legislation where they would share them with us and stakeholder groups in their drafted form before being tabled or would table them and then would extend the time period before they were debated by two or three weeks or we were in the Legislature for a greater number of days, which would give stakeholders more opportunity to review what's under debate, then we might not need that kind of a process where we use the committee stage and we use amendments to extend debate time on legislation. But that hasn't been the practice of this particular government, Mr. Speaker. So for that reason there are times when it is very important for us to be able to extend the talking time on bills. With our time reduced to 15 minutes and the question-and-answer periods, we have a reduced capacity to do that, so it reduces our capacity to meet the needs of Albertans. This government finds that entirely convenient for them, but in the long run it is not entirely convenient for Albertans, so we are not very happy with that particular motion.

Some of the other motions, Mr. Speaker, we are happy to agree to, reluctantly in some cases, and those are most of the housekeeping matters that we see in the Legislature. For instance, while putting all of the private members' business on one day is a good idea, we actually lose at least a half hour of speaking time to private members' business. So that's of concern to us. We heard the Government House Leader state that his members wish to debate more private members' business, but now we have less time to do that with this motion.

Also, they place the day on Mondays, Mr. Speaker. While the Government House Leader was quite happy to point out that this Legislature has not traditionally sat during time periods when there have been statutory holidays on Monday, in fact statutory holidays most often fall on Mondays, which means that we could lose additional time for private members' business. So that's an issue that needs to be also discussed in this particular matter. Those are certainly concerns for us.

There are many other issues that I wish to speak about, Mr. Speaker, but I also wish to introduce an amendment. So before my speaking time has expired, I will introduce our first amendment on this motion, and that amends section 7. I will send that to Parliamentary Counsel now to be distributed to the House.

THE SPEAKER: An amendment has been forwarded here, and it will be circulated to everyone. Hon. Opposition House Leader, it says, "Ms Blakeman to move that Government Motion 21 be amended by striking out section 7."

MS CARLSON: I'm moving it on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

THE SPEAKER: You're moving it. It basically says: "be amended by striking out section 7." That's what it is as it is being circulated. So the Government House Leader is aware of that, and other members will be as well. That's basically what it says. It'll come to you in a matter of seconds.

If you wish to proceed, then, with the discussion on your amendment. So on the amendment, very focused: by striking out section 7. There'll be no discussion in this debate on the amendment about anything else but section 7.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Section 7 amends Standing Order 21, which is the closure Standing Order. The original intent, what the government wants to do here, is to replace the existing closure with a new form of closure called time allocation. This was not a change in the Standing Orders that the Official Opposition was in support of. We have serious concerns about this. If the government is going to bring in closure, then let them name it as what it is, which is closure on a bill. The government has indicated that no bill would have more than one motion on the Order Paper at the same time. That part about it is good, but the essence of having this in there is a very bad change to the Standing Orders as we see it.

The new closure would require that the bill or motion that will have closure must have some consideration at some point, so they'll give us some time to speak to it, but for the government to decide how much time the Official Opposition should spend debating the closure is truly an abuse of executive power and certainly nothing that we could agree to. This form of closure is basically, Mr. Speaker, a one-sided formalization of informal agreements usually reached between House leaders. We did not like it. We asked them to withdraw it, and they didn't want to do that. They wanted to go forward with it. It's certainly an issue for us.

Time allocation is not traditionally named as closure. Certainly we will be using that as a basis whenever we can when the government does bring this in. On an informal basis in this Legislature I think we have done a very good job over the past years, certainly while I have been the House leader, in terms of coming to informal agreements on how much speaking time we will have to a variety of bills. I would suggest that the Government House Leader could not disagree with me in terms of how that process has also worked this fall. If we have made an agreement about how many speakers we will have to a bill and the time that we will spend on it, we have kept that agreement, Mr. Speaker, and we don't see that this new formalized time allocation should be brought in at this particular point in time. We are also very concerned that this is the beginning of a very slippery slope where we will see all bills being presented with time allocation motions at the committee stage, which is the time when we have the opportunity to speak to it at length.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will close my debate at this time.

THE SPEAKER: On the amendment, the hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to deal with section 7, because I didn't actually get to it in my remarks.

I would first of all just like to confirm what the Opposition House Leader has said in one portion of her remarks, and that is that the business of the House normally works very, very well when all House leaders get together and determine how we're going to make progress, determine what bills are going to come up and how much time we need to spend on them. I'm sure the Opposition House Leader would also agree that the process works very well and that we're very accommodating to make sure that bills come up when they are going to be able to speak to them directly after having consulted with stakeholders, et cetera. One would not expect that that process would be changed in any way by removing closure from our Standing Orders.

In fact, it's really ironic that the opposition would move an amendment to this motion to delete section 7 when the whole proposal under section 7 is to remove closure, which the opposition has in the past found so offensive, from the Standing Orders and replace it with a much better, much friendlier, much more process-oriented way of dealing with those few bills that come forward which are the subject of a lot of debate and for which there does need to be a method to move them along after appropriate amounts of debate have taken place. It's only really in committee stage where it's most effectively needed. With time allocation instead of closure, rather than the Government House Leader or a member of Executive Council bringing in a closure motion which arbitrarily cuts off debate at midnight on the day that the motion is brought forward, we now with this provision would have a much, much better system, a much friendlier system, a much more opposition-oriented system which would allow us to discuss with the opposition first how much time should appropriately be given to the debate of the bill so that all parties in the House and all members in the House could have an appropriate time to get their arguments on the floor but also a finite time for debate so that at some point in time you move on. As I say, we don't see that happening tremendously often, but it does happen.

Now, it is very ironic that the opposition would want to retain closure under the Standing Orders that we have now rather than what is proposed, which is a much better way of dealing with House business in those certain times when there is disagreement, when there does need to be a way of ascertaining how much more time will be spent on a bill. It doesn't happen on a daily basis.

In fact, I would close my remarks on my opposition to the amendment being proposed by the Opposition House Leader by saying that at least in my experience in this House we enjoy a great deal of co-operation among House leaders on almost all the bills that come before the House in terms of how we deal with them. There are a few controversial bills where you never will be able to come to those sorts of agreements, and it's quite appropriate for both sides of the House and for all members of the House to utilize the rules of the House and the procedures of the House to get their points across.

Right now we have to deal with those utilizing closure, which is a sledgehammer approach, when under the proposed Standing Orders without this amendment we'll be able to use a much gentler process, a much friendlier process, a much more process-oriented process of coming to termination on a debate after an appropriate period of time. Even this provision as it currently stands in the motion would allow for a short discussion of the reason for putting time allocation on a bill, which is again better than the existing provision in the Standing Orders.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would urge members of the House to vote against this amendment and by doing so remove closure from our Standing Orders and replace it with a much better process.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This is a particular amendment which was expected by us in the third party, and certainly we had a very good series of discussions between the House leaders on these matters. I'm inclined to agree with the Government House Leader that in this particular case it is a gentler form of closure. But it is closure, and one of the concessions obtained in the discussion was the elimination of the other, traditional form of closure, which is encompassed by the government's proposals. So we see this type of provision of time allocation replacing closure. The old form of closure is removed, and this is put in its place. That was not the original proposal from the Deputy Government House Leader. They wanted to have both weapons in their arsenal.

The problem, Mr. Speaker, is that it is closure with a smile rather than closure. There is a real fear on the part of the opposition, including here in the New Democrat opposition, that this will be used more frequently, more routinely than closure has been traditionally. Governments are reluctant to use closure because it is seen as a very undemocratic form of shutting down debate. While we appreciate the elimination of closure altogether, the difficulty we have with the proposal the government has made is that the government may be disposed to make use of time allocation much more frequently and make the argument that in fact they're allowing us one or two or three speeches before closure and that therefore the democratic requirements of the House are satisfied.

Mr. Speaker, I'm not convinced that we should go in this direction. I frankly would like to see closure eliminated altogether. I haven't had enough time in this place to make a really good assessment of what use the government will make of this new time allocation, and I am fearful about the state of democracy should it be approved. So, in that case, I think I shall be supporting the Official Opposition motion.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to the amendment this evening that was proposed by the hon. member from Calgary-Centre and presented to the Assembly this evening.

MS CARLSON: Edmonton-Centre.

MR. MacDONALD: Edmonton-Centre. Pardon me. I've got my centres confused. Perhaps I'm looking forward to another four years of better times.

This amendment that was presented by the Opposition House Leader: I think when we consider exactly what has happened in this Assembly in the last number of years and the frequent use of closure, one would have to say to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands that sometimes it's better to dance with the devil you know than the one you do not. This motion is closure in another form. The Government House Leader assured all members of this Assembly that we're going to remove closure, which in my view is a guillotine on democracy. It is a severing of debate, and each and every member of this Assembly has the right to debate. There will be many times in the future when we will be thankful that we supported this amendment, because we will know exactly, precisely what is going on.

Now to describe section 7 of Motion 21 – and I believe this was a quote – it's much "friendlier." Closure is not friendly. It never was friendly, and it never will be. We think of Bill 11 and closure. [interjections] I hear groans, but Bill 11 is a perfect example of individual members of this Assembly exercising their democratic right, and finally there was the introduction of closure. Hon. members of the Assembly and members of the general public who were on the steps of the Assembly and out front in the plaza knew what closure was about. This is the reason why we have this current section 7. The government is now sensitive to the outcry. I believe the hon. Government House Leader actually felt guilty whenever closure was used. Now, Mr. Speaker, closure is going to be much friendlier. Closure is not going to be the sledgehammer that it was described as before. The former Member for Calgary-Buffalo was fond of saying that democracy is dying a thousand deaths. Death by a thousand cuts, he would say. It's a thousand clips.

I heard another member of Executive Council speak, Mr. Speaker, and in relation to this amendment “a member of the Executive Council” is mentioned twice. This Executive Council in my view – and it is reflected in this amendment – poses a threat . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: To democracy.

MR. MacDONALD: Exactly. They pose a threat to democracy.

Now, we all know that the executive enjoys tremendous power in this province, in this scheme of the government. We’ve seen tremendous growth in the role and the duties of the Executive Council. This is why the amendment presented here this evening is prudent, and this is why the hon. Member for Calgary-East should vote for the amendment. It’s because the executive’s effective control of this Assembly is perhaps going to be going too far.

We look, for instance, at the mysterious ruling in regard to the risk management fund. There are some people in this province who view that ruling on the risk management fund as an overstepping of the executive’s power and not taking into consideration the Legislative Assembly Act. This is important, Mr. Speaker.

AN HON. MEMBER: It’s not relevant.

MR. MacDONALD: It is relevant, and it is noteworthy because this practice will continue. Who knows but that perhaps a group of citizens will band together and take their government to court? Who knows? Perhaps that will happen if we allow section 7 to pass as it is. The Legislative Assembly Act has the utmost authority, not members of the Executive Council, in my view.

Now, we always seem to get caught up in this Assembly and forget that each branch of the government has a role to play. The role of the Executive Council or a member of the Executive Council is not to evoke some sort of silent closure or closure by another name. As one hon. member said earlier: the voters voted; there are now seven members of the opposition, and there are two members of the third party. There’s this vast majority. I cannot understand why with this vast majority you need a silent form of closure so that the people, if they do come to protest a bill or a motion and they’re on the steps of the Assembly or they’re in the plaza, perhaps standing there beside one another with candles, a peaceful form of protest . . .

MR. MASON: Candles in the wind.

MR. MacDONALD: Candles in the wind.

Perhaps they’ll be standing there in silence, and there will be no warning of closure. I’m sure there will be, because the Opposition House Leader is very diligent. But this is not in the interest of Albertans; it’s not in the interest of any branch of this Assembly.

I would urge, in closing, that everyone vote in favour of this amendment. Mr. Speaker, it is important for me to remind all hon. members of this Assembly again, in particular members of the Executive Council, that they cannot overstep their boundaries, which are outlined in the Legislative Assembly Act. With this section 7 I’m afraid that they may.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to also speak to the proposed change in the Standing Orders and the amendment proposed to section 7 of Motion 21. My colleague the Member for Edmonton-Highlands has quite eloquently presented the position that we as a caucus take on that particular section of this motion to amend the Standing Orders. To us this particular section reflects the general spirit of the overall amendments to the Standing Orders, which in our view would seriously weaken the democratic parliamentary process, which is so essential to protect in terms of health, in terms of vibrancy, in terms of vigor if Albertans are to benefit from the debates and benefit from the laws and the statutes that arise from that intense and prolonged debate. That’s what this Chamber is about.

All of us on all sides of the House are here to serve Albertans, to serve their best interests, to serve in the best way that we know how. In my view, the best way that I know to serve those interests is by allowing a free and open debate on some of the bills that speak to the very essence of who we are: a democratic society, an open society, a society that will not tolerate imposition either through the conscription of the democratic parliamentary process or through other means. This particular section to which the amendment is being proposed in my view threatens to close debate without calling closure.

We were hoping that through negotiation among the three House leaders, which, as you so rightly pointed out, has happened so often in the past in this House, we would be able to come to this House with an agreement on the changes that we all thought would ultimately serve the best interests of Albertans and of this House. Unfortunately, we weren’t able to come to that agreement. In fact, we weren’t given the opportunity to take the right steps, to take the first steps that would lead us in the right direction. We were presented with a unilateral decision, presented with a decision of the caucus, not a decision that arose out of frustrations which were the result of a stalemate in negotiations among the three House leaders. There were no such negotiations. It was a unilateral action. A sort of ultimatum was served on us: take it or leave it.

Then, of course, there was some indication given: we are somewhat flexible on this and that, and we’ll make some accommodation. It was in that sense that my colleague from Edmonton-Highlands said that we thought at one time we were making some headway, that if we could get rid of that closure with a fist and replace it with some new rules that were reasonable but would not amount to closure with a smile, we would have made some progress in this House towards opening up the parliamentary process to more debate, to more overall scrutiny by our electors and citizens.

This proposed change in the Standing Orders doesn’t do anything like that. When I look at the amount of debate we will have before a member of the Executive Council would stand up in this House and propose a motion to limit the debate to a specified number of hours, we will have only five minutes each. We will not be able to speak for more than five minutes to say why we don’t like the decision of the minister or member of the executive to limit debate to a certain number of specified hours. What those specified hours will be will also not be negotiable. They’re entirely unilateral, at the pleasure of the minister, at the pleasure of the member of the executive, except that we’ll have five minutes of opportunity to complain about it.

To me this is a terribly restrictive way of dealing with the opportunity to debate matters in this House. There is really not much opportunity here to debate such a motion. It is so important. It has such an important impact on how much debating time we’ll have in this House. So it’s a unilateralism. It’s an exercise of majoritarian power. I would have thought that in the interest of protecting the noblest traditions of parliamentary democracy, a government that enjoys such a huge majority would in fact show generosity, would in fact show a greater tolerance towards the opposition. The opposition’s job is to be in opposition, to present adversarial argument, to challenge the government and, by challenging the government, help it refine the legislation that it brings before the Legislature. What this particular proposed change does is remove that possibility from the Legislature, from the opposition to play its role that properly only it can play.

This change as proposed in the amendment that I'm speaking to relates to this notion of inappropriateness that the Government House Leader allowed to slip out, that somehow when opposition parties and opposition caucuses stand up and speak, they use the time inappropriately. I would say that he did amend himself a little later to say "ineffectively." Well, Mr. Speaker, whether what we say is effective or ineffective, I think it's like looking at what's beautiful and what's not. It's in the eye of the beholder. What to the Government House Leader might be ineffective and might be a waste of time would be seen perhaps entirely in a different light by many Albertans and not only by the speakers in this House.

I guess there has to be some general recognition, a genuine recognition that there is a role for the opposition in a democracy, and that role must be respected and enhanced. There is an enhanced obligation on a government that has a massive majority to make sure that opportunity for the opposition is nurtured. It is through this kind of oppositional discourse that we enter into a process of negotiation. It is through negotiation behind the door sometimes that we accomplish things that we wouldn't be able to do simply through confrontation day in and day out. That's what seems to be missing in this proposed change in the Standing Orders, and that's why I'm opposed to the Standing Order and I will support the amendment before us, which is to strike out that number 7.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to add a few comments on this amendment. What I see with this proposed change in the Standing Orders certainly is a new form of closure. It reminds me of a statement we used to have on the railroad when I worked there: don't force it; get a bigger hammer. That's exactly what this is.

I think back to the days when we had Premier Lougheed here. In all the time that he was here, closure was used somewhere in the neighbourhood of seven times, but under the current Premier closure has been used somewhere in the neighbourhood of 25 times. I think what has happened here is that over time this current government just doesn't like the heat they're getting when it comes to using closure, so they want to use a much softer brand here.

I'd just like to point out to members as well what would have happened if this particular piece of legislation had been put into effect when we were debating Bill 16 last spring, a contentious bill that the minister at that time would have invoked, what powers this amendment would give him as a member of Executive Council. With Bill 16 we know that he had to chart his ship through some very rough seas, through some very rough waters. He took time out over the summer to continue consultation, to continue change, whatever. Probably the best comment that can be made about Bill 16 is that I hear that the Catholic boards feel they have won the battle of this bill and the public boards feel they have got the better part of this bill. Because legislation was given time, because we had input from the opposition, from the third party, because we had stakeholder consultation and closure was not used, we've come up with a piece of legislation that I think and I'm sure all members in here think and I know the minister thinks is a very good piece of legislation and one that will fit the needs of Albertans.

Now, then, what will happen if we leave section 7 in is certainly that it will allow the abuse of the executive power, and what it will also do is it will limit the role of the opposition or the role of the third party. It will prevent us from questioning. It will prevent us time from seeking further stakeholder consultations. It will prevent us from having alternatives to suggestions which could be coming forward in legislation. So I would certainly urge all members present here in the Assembly this evening to support this amendment.

I don't think democracy is served, Mr. Speaker, when we can limit debate. We all know that democracy only works when the questions asked of government are answered by government, and by limiting, by shortening, by using these types of rules, we certainly do not enhance democracy in this province. We limit it.

I know that if the former hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo were here, he certainly, as the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar had stated, would be musing that this is the death of democracy, that it is death by a thousand cuts.

I also have to bring up the point that the hon. Government House Leader said, that the process of consultation generally works very well in this Assembly. This is one case where there was a consultation. As the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie brought up, it's certainly a great diversion from what has happened here in the past. It reminds me of, you know, the two most famous lies: trust me and the cheque is in the mail.

You are asking the opposition, you are asking the third party to say, "Well, we won't use this very often," but we will use it, and if there is contentious legislation, certainly we will. We won't hesitate to use it. So if this is a friendlier process, then the friendliness is only to serve the government needs and certainly not the needs of the opposition and certainly not democracy.

So I would urge all members to vote for this amendment by striking out section 7.

Thank you, very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Assembly has before it an amendment to Motion 21. The motion moved by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre is that "Government Motion 21 be amended by striking out section 7."

[Motion on amendment 1 lost]

THE SPEAKER: For our administrative records we will refer to this as amendment 1.

At this point in the discussion, on this particular motion, we have heard from the hon. Government House Leader, and we've heard from the hon. Opposition House Leader, so now we are back to the debate on Motion 21.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to begin by registering on behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and myself the strongest possible protest to the way that this matter has been handled by the government. First of all, the norms that have developed for the dealing of the rules of this Assembly, which are not the rules of the government but the rules of the Assembly, have been violated in a way that I've not experienced.

Now, I'm not a long-serving member yet of this Assembly, Mr. Speaker, but I have read somewhat on the history of our system and familiarized myself to a small degree with some of the precedents of this place. The abandonment of a process of negotiation between House leaders and the introduction of essentially a fiat in its place is something that I don't think this place has yet seen, and I think that it's a very, very sad day.

First of all, our caucus, which is a small caucus in this Assembly, was asked to submit, essentially, proposals for changes to the rules to the government caucus, to the Progressive Conservative Party's caucus. We may not be equal in size, Mr. Speaker, but we are equal in status. Our caucus will not and will never submit proposals to the Conservative caucus with respect to the rules or any other matter, and I'm sure that that goes equally for the Official Opposition caucus. We are prepared to sit down and negotiate with anybody, and we will make proposals to the Government House Leader. We'll exchange proposals. We'll take them back to our caucus, and the government should take our proposals back to their caucus. I think that that is a fair way, which shows respect for all parties in this House. We will not now or in the future be making submissions for the disposal of any other caucus in this place. We will sit and discuss them as equals or not at all.

I want to say as well that the manner in which this was presented to us was offensive. It was presented in a way that there won't be negotiations around a House leaders' agreement, as we had expected, but that these decisions have already been made, more or less, by the government caucus, and that they will be imposed on you through the use of the majority which exists in this Assembly. We took very strong exception. You saw then the perhaps unique experience of a joint media conference between House leaders of the Liberal caucus and the New Democrat caucus, not because we necessarily have anything more that we agree about except that the role of the opposition needs to be protected, and it is really being under attack by the government in this respect. We need to stand up and be counted when it gets tough.

I think the process has been wrong from the start. It really put us on very bad footing. We did come back to the hon. House leader, and we did get some small concessions that he was prepared to negotiate a little bit around some of the points. We think that we did make some progress. In fairness, Mr. Speaker, I think I can say that, that after our initial protest we did make a bit of progress, but the fact remains that these rule changes have the cumulative effect of reducing the ability of the opposition to do its job, and they are going to be imposed by the majority in this Assembly. That is not really serving the interests of our parliamentary tradition or of the citizens of this province, and I think that is something that I would wish at least that members on the opposite side would think about or maybe ask a few questions about, because it's not a good precedent at all.

Now, I want to deal with some of the sections. Section 3 changes the order of business of the Assembly and essentially moves the tabling of documents in this Assembly behind the question period. I understand well why the government may wish to do that, because of course you can table things before question period. The public is watching, and it can delay question period. It can throw people's schedules off, and of course then the public is more likely to see what is being tabled. But there is a courtesy that exists around tabling, which we've tried to respect at least until this has been put forward, and that is, when you ask a question of a minister as it relates to some document, you table the document at a time before the question period. Usually the efficiency of the table officers and of government staff is such that the minister or at least the Premier gets the tabled document before he hears the question from the opposition, so he knows what the opposition is talking about when it asked its question. So how is that going to happen now in question period?

MR. SMITH: Just send a copy over.

MR. MASON: Well, we could as a courtesy, but courtesy is a two-way street, and that remains to be seen.

The proper way of dealing with it, Mr. Speaker, is to have the tablings first. That's why the tablings are first. The government may not always like the way the opposition has made use of the tablings, and I can certainly understand it from their point of view. Nevertheless, the tablings go before the question period for a reason, and I don't think that the government has thought through all of the potential consequences of making this change.

Section 4, Mr. Speaker, deals with the private members' business. I appreciate the sentiment that the Government House Leader expressed about allowing more people to talk to private members' business, and by making the change so that the speaking time is shorter, that may be the case, but if I were a member of the government caucus who's not a member of Executive Council, I would be concerned about a diminution in the ability of private members to bring forward their bills and get them dealt with and get them passed into law.

I will give credit where credit is due. In this Assembly private members have a greater opportunity to actually get their bills dealt with and passed into law than in many other Assemblies. I think it goes to some of the work that's been done in the past, including by the Speaker of this Assembly, that has allowed private members to have an opportunity to do that. But the changes here will reduce the amount of time by between half an hour to an hour per week on private members' business. As it stands now, the Assembly rarely gets through more than one-fifth of the private members' bills and even a lower percentage of motions, and we think that this rule change will make the situation worse.

With no government business on Mondays we're concerned that cabinet ministers might be less inclined to be present in the Assembly. That, of course, hurts our opportunities to ask the questions. Generally, we're concerned that the opportunities for private members may be reduced by consolidating it on Monday, reducing the total amount of time available, and allowing more people to speak, which is good on the surface, but we don't know the effect that that's going to have on the actual number of bills that actually come forward to a vote.

Now, we've come to the question of time allocation. We're not finished with that, although the Official Opposition's motion was defeated. The time allocation is a concern, and I spoke briefly about it in my remarks. The question here is: when does the government use closure, and when will the government use time allocation?

Now, the Government House Leader gave us a good definition of when the government would use closure. He said in one of our meetings that when it's clear that the opposition is in a filibuster mode, the government imposes closure. Well, we don't like it, we think it's undemocratic, but fair enough. The question is: when will the government use time allocation? I believe, based on discussions we had with the Deputy Government House Leader, that they will use it in anticipation of delaying tactics by the opposition and not just when those tactics are readily apparent. So we may have a very well-managed and efficient House, but if the opposition can't do its job, if it can't delay, then it has very, very little power indeed.

I want to talk about the opposition's role in delaying government business because I know that it's considered by many members opposite to be a nuisance, a waste of time, and something which really gets in the way of progress. But I want to indicate, Mr. Speaker, that an opposition, especially an opposition of this small size, has very little power in an Assembly like this. But the power to delay a controversial or badly-thought-out piece of legislation is a good thing, and it's good not just for us; it's good for the government as well. There were many times in this Assembly when the government for internal political reasons brought forward a bill that they had not thought through the consequences of. I think we saw an example of that with the education bill that did not receive its readings in the spring session. It went back, there was more discussion, and I think it came back a better piece of legislation.

Now, if it weren't for the opposition, there's no way the political dynamics on the government side would have allowed that bill to be held up, but the opposition played a role. Even in Bill 11 – and I know that the opposition tactics in Bill 11 still grate on many, many government members. But that was a bill of foremost concern to the people of Alberta, and it should have been held up and every opportunity given for the opposition and for the public to discuss and debate the bill. The government brought forward amendments. The government proceeded in its wisdom to pass the bill eventually, and you know, they won the election anyway. The fact of the matter is that it was a great change; it was a fundamental policy that the people of Alberta wanted to talk about. If we had just left it up to the government, if the people in the opposition here had just left it up to the government, much of that debate would not have occurred because they would have put it through expeditiously. So I argue that the ability of the opposition to delay is a necessary evil in terms of government business, and it's a very positive benefit, on balance, with the entire democratic system.

Section 8 deals with the changes to the sub judice rule, and I want to talk a little bit about that because we have a serious concern that many matters of considerable public import are tied up before the courts for extended periods of time, effectively preventing people from raising this in the Legislature. Particularly when a matter is not before the courts – that is to say in the interval period between the rendering of a decision and the filing of an appeal – it should not be beyond the ability of members to raise those issues in this House.

Section 9 I wanted to deal with a little bit, about speaking times. We had made proposals that the government minister and the critic should be subject to the five-minute question period after the full 20 minutes, and we regret the fact that that was not agreed to by the government. We have no problem with this five-minute rule at the end of people's speaking time. We thought that it should come at the end of the 20-minute speaking time on all the motions, but we were prepared to accept it on a 20-minute speaking time period for the minister moving the legislation and the critic, then the five minutes after the 20 minutes of speaking time, and go to the 15 and five for everybody else except for the closer of the motion. That would have been acceptable. We don't think that the mover of the motion and the person responding on the other side should be exempt from the five-minute rule, but we do believe that they should retain their full 20-minute speaking time.

Now, I want to deal last with a section that we did not discuss, as I recall, in any of the meetings with the Deputy Government House Leader or the Government House Leader, and I think this is perhaps the most dangerous, the most insidious bit in this regulation of all. That is in section 17, that when a bill dies on the Order Paper – suppose it's at committee stage or at third reading stage – then when the House again sits, on a day's notice it can be raised and put back on the Order Paper at exactly the stage of debate it was in the first place.

So you can imagine how that might affect things, Mr. Speaker. We could have a situation where a very, very contentious bill was debated, held up by the opposition, there was lots of public concern, and the government leaves it to die on the Order Paper. It takes time for the public to become aware of legislation before this House. It takes time for them to become clear on the implications of what that legislation might be. It takes time for the opposition to reach out to community organizations, all sorts of organizations in the province and indicate that people should be concerned about a particular piece of legislation. That just doesn't happen overnight. So then the government lets the bill die on the Order Paper, takes a few months off, and recalls the Assembly. It's at third reading, and they can whip it through in a couple of days. Nobody really is going to be aware of that bill because the debate has died away. I think this is a very, very dangerous thing. It could permit the government to put contentious pieces of legislation through in two or three different sessions with no opportunity whatsoever for the public to become involved in the debate and no opportunity for members to actually canvass the public.

I really urge members opposite that if there's one piece that you're going to agree to take out of these rules, this should be it. This was not one we had an opportunity to discuss with the government or to propose changes or amendments to, yet I think it's one of the things that is the most onerous of all, the greatest threat to public debate and public discussion, and the greatest threat to our democratic process in this Assembly.

So, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, we in the New Democrat opposition do not oppose everything in here, and we are certainly not opposed to sitting down and having a discussion with government House leaders, with our compatriots here in the Official Opposition and working out ways to make this place function more democratically and more efficiently.

[The Speaker in the chair]

We do not accept the process that's been imposed on us for dealing with these Standing Order changes. We express our strongest reservations about some of the content of them, and we certainly think that it's difficult to accept a process where these kinds of things are imposed. We think that the opposition role is being gradually but steadily eroded, and it's being eroded by a government with an overwhelming majority. The question, Mr. Speaker, is why. Why do they feel the need to erode the opposition's ability to engage the public in democratic debate? I don't know. They certainly don't need it.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have been anxious to participate in this debate on the main motion, Motion 21, this evening. I never cease to be amazed in this Assembly.

Now, the hon. Government House Leader, perhaps a little over an hour and a half ago, maybe a little bit more time than that, was confidently assuring all members of this Assembly that if we were to limit time, it would allow more members time to speak. I have been listening, but it's only opposition members who have spoken on this motion this evening. I just don't understand how the hon. Government House Leader can make that statement, yet it's certainly not backed up – it doesn't have, I guess, the solidarity of this caucus, because none of them seems to be too anxious to participate in the debate, Mr. Speaker.

Now, the first item I would like to bring to this Assembly regarding this motion – and it was touched upon by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands – is the change in the rotation or the ordinary daily Routine in the Assembly. We're going to have a new list here. He talked about Tabling Returns and Reports. It was just yesterday that if tablings are done before question period, it gives the members of the opposition time to quietly read them at their desks.

If there is a deficiency or if there needs to be something that's brought to the attention of the government in one of those reports, well, they have the opportunity in question period, which is going to follow the minister's tabling of the report. For instance, yesterday there was a tabling of a report on AADAC, and it was the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview that pointed out that there was a 37 percent increase in the salary of the CEO from one year to the next. Teachers, let alone school principals, could only dream of that sort of pay raise perhaps every generation, but this fellow received it in one year. AADAC also had a spin doctor listed there for the first time in that annual report. That could be the basis of a question from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Now, more importantly, and this is specifically for the Member for West Yellowhead who was in the Assembly whenever the bill was introduced – and I believe it was called the victims of sexual sterilization act. Any hon. member can correct me if I'm wrong. That was introduced before question period. With this new law bills will be introduced after question period, and members of the opposition will not get the opportunity to scrutinize the bills during question period. You are severing, you are restricting, you are limiting our effectiveness as an opposition.

The former Member for Edmonton-Highlands was the first member of any opposition party, to her credit, to bring this hideous piece of legislation to the public's attention. It was followed by questions from the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, the former Member for Edmonton-Glenora, and three other members of the opposition. There was a firestorm around this bill. The public was up in arms. It was the wrong thing to do, and the government, wisely, withdrew that legislation. But now what's going to happen with this new daily Routine? We as members of the opposition will no longer have the opportunity to bring that to the public's attention. This is done on purpose, Mr. Speaker.

With those remarks – I had certainly more to say on this motion, if you could call it that. At this time in light of the hour I would, please, Mr. Speaker, like to adjourn debate on Motion 21.

Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 9:59 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, November 22, 2001 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 01/11/22
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Our divine Father, as we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our thanks and ask that we may continue our work under Your guidance. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to provide health care coverage for medical supplies for diabetic children under the Alberta Health Care Plan and provide financial assistance to parents to enable them to meet their children's necessary dietary requirements and cover costs incurred in travelling to Diabetes Education and Treatment Centres outside their own communities in Alberta.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Revenue.

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have five copies of each of the 2000 and 2001 annual reports of the Alberta Securities Commission to table. The Alberta Securities Commission is the industry-funded regulatory agency responsible for administering the Alberta Securities Act. Its mission is to foster a fair and efficient capital market in Alberta and, together with other members of the Canadian Securities Administrators, develop and operate the Canadian securities regulatory system.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. In accordance with section 30 of the Gaming and Liquor Act it's my pleasure to table five copies of the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission's 2000-2001 annual report.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to table the requisite number of copies of the Petroleum Tank Management Association of Alberta annual report for the year 2000.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Learning.

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today with close to a hundred tablings. They have been delivered to your office, and they are the individual financial statements for all school jurisdictions, including charter schools, universities, college foundations, and subsidiaries of the University of Calgary and the University of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, the next tabling that I have is the requisite number of copies of the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board's 2000-2001 annual report.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have five different tablings. They are all tablings opposed to the Inland conversion to coal-burning cement production. One is from Mike Nelson, one from Verona Goodwyn, two from Elke Blodgett, and one from the Edmonton friends of the north society.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I'd like to table the required number of copies of 41 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the class-size targets bill, "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today, both very thoughtful letters from constituents concerned over education. The first is from Christopher Rymes, who is most concerned about the contract negotiations between Alberta Learning and the ATA and is upholding the responsibilities of teachers and their value.

The second one is from Al Johnson of Carstairs. He is most concerned that "the government spends significantly less per student for public education than the Canadian average."

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the required number of copies of 31 requests from Albertans who want the government to support Bill 218 to provide proper funding for education.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the required number of copies of requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill so that "classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to table the required number of copies of 19 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics,” and “ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children.”

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table five copies of a document which shows that the Crossroads centre in downtown Edmonton over the first 10 months of this year provided services, 72 percent of which went to children 17 years and under and 93 percent of the services to youth 19 years of age or under, information that contradicts the information provided by the Minister of Children’s Services yesterday to the House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today with two tablings. One is an article by John Burry, chairman and CEO of Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Ohio, in which he argues that the medical savings accounts “are the ultimate ‘cherry-picking’ scheme invented by some insurers to guarantee . . . large profits.”

The other is the required number of copies of 21 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition’s class size targets bill “so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded” and that we may maintain the top-quality teachers.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, the chair would like to table the sufficient copies of three memoranda from three hon. members: first of all, from the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, requesting that Bill 208, the Alberta Official Song Act, be given early consideration for third reading; the second memorandum, from the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross, requesting that Bill 209, the Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001, be given early consideration for third reading; and the third memorandum, from the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, requesting that Bill 207, the Alberta Personal Income Tax (Tools Credit) Amendment Act, 2001, be given early consideration for third reading.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Peace River.

MR. FRIEDEL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s certainly my pleasure to introduce to you and to the members of this Assembly the members of the Northern Alberta Development Council who are in Edmonton today and tomorrow, partly for their annual meeting with the northern MLAs. Among them is Art Avery from Fort McMurray, Sandra Cardinal from Kikino, Berkley Ferguson from Athabasca, Gerald McIvor from Whitecourt, Pete Merlo from Grande Prairie, Michael Procter from Peace River, and Al Toews from Fort Vermilion. There are several staff members with them: Audrey DeWit, Pat Nelson – there is another one of those; she doesn’t control as much money as the one we know a little bit better – Rita Phillips, Kathy Miller, and my administrative assistant, Gladys Gammon. They’re in the public gallery, and I’d like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

MR. SHARIFF: Mr. Speaker, I’d like to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly 15 students from the Faculty of Law at the University of Alberta who are enrolled in the course Legislative Process and Legislative Drafting, taught by Rob Reynolds, Senior Parliamentary Counsel, and Peter Pagano, Chief Legislative Counsel. They are seated in the members’ gallery, and I request that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you today 36 grades 5 and 6 students from the Dr. Elliott school in Linden, Alberta. Linden is the industrial heart of my constituency. I’m very pleased to have them here today. I’d also like to introduce the teachers that are accompanying them, Mrs. Mary Hughes and Mrs. Sherry Hempel, as well as parents that have come along to enjoy the trip as well: Mr. Mike Klassen, Mr. Ken Leinweber, Mr. Mike Ratzlaff, Mrs. Nancy Heyblom, Mrs. Pat Christiansen, Mrs. Brenda Schroeder, Mr. James Klassen, Mr. Darren Esau, Mrs. Chris Thurn, Mrs. Heidi Thiessen, and Mr. Kerry Eitzen. I would ask them to rise and please receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Redwater.

MR. BRODA: Thank you. I have two introductions today. On your behalf I’d like to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly visitors in the members’ gallery, 21 students and two adults from Dunstable school, located in Busby and the constituency of Barrhead-Westlock, your constituency, Mr. Speaker. I’d ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly 13 students accompanied by their teacher Debra and parents Rita Vandenbrink, Annie Visser, and Inga Herbold. They are from the Christian Homeschool Fellowship school located in my constituency. They’re sitting, I believe, in the public gallery. I’d ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Solicitor General.

MRS. FORSYTH: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s a great pleasure and an honour for me to welcome representatives of Mothers Against Drinking Drivers. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Eloise Leckie, president of the Mothers Against Drinking Drivers, Edmonton chapter, and LeRay Witbeck, the assistant victims services manager of MADD, Canada western region. I ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Energy.

MR. SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s a privilege for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly a dedicated public servant, one who is adding immeasurably to the effectiveness of the Department of Energy and one who is here today in a job shadowing assignment with his son Evan. I would ask John and Evan Buie to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

MR. OUELLETTE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s my pleasure to rise in the House today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 27 students from the John Wilson elementary school in Innisfail, Alberta, where my constituency office is located. Along with them is their teacher, Mrs. Linda Pederson, and parent helpers Mr. Dennis Fehr, Mr. Greg Morris, Mr. Trent Porter, Mrs. Coreen Evans, Mr. Perry Randell, and Mrs. Leslie Quinton. I'd like them to rise if they're here – they are I think seated in the members' gallery – and I'd like the House to give them their warm welcome.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development on behalf of the hon. Minister of Seniors.

MS CALAHASEN: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. It is rare that I get up to introduce my own group, so it's a pleasure to be able to do this on behalf of my colleague from Stony Plain. With us today from Forest Green school are 47 visitors, of which 42 students are joined by Mrs. Esposito, Mrs. Vanstratten, and Mrs. Lukey, with parent helpers Mrs. Burchaski and Mrs. Ashworth. They're seated in the public gallery. I'd ask that they all rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a well-known Calgary personality who is visiting us today. Among other things our guest was a candidate for mayor in the last election, and I understand that his campaign lapel buttons have become quite a collector's item. He is seated in the members' gallery. I would ask that Oscar Fech rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has over $2 billion sitting in a bank account for future debt payment while cuts are being made to departments every day. That's like having $10,000 in the bank waiting to make a mortgage payment two years from now while your children go without enough food today. My questions are to the Premier. Why is this government cutting preventative services for children when they have over $2 billion sitting in the bank?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. Minister of Finance supplement my answer, but it's quite clear. It has been no secret that the philosophy and the policy of this government is to dedicate what we can to debt repayment so that we can free up literally hundreds of millions of dollars to go to essential services in this province.

MRS. NELSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess we're going to have to replay the tape from yesterday, because I went through this with the hon. member opposite yesterday. So I'll do it again.

Mr. Speaker, at the end of last year, which was a banner year in this province, we were able to dedicate a huge amount of dollars to pay down the debt in this province, which did a number of things. First of all, we are now paying over a billion dollars less in interest expense on an annual basis for that debt. Those dollars are gone forever. Because of the banner year we had last year, we were able to commit that $2 billion to pay off our debt to bring us over eight years ahead of the scheduled debt retirement plan that is legislated for this province.

What this hon. member wants us to do is to go back to last year and say: we're going to pull back the $2 billion that we have put to debt retirement in an account to pay off when those dollars come due. By the way, the interest on it is being used in general revenue to meet priority programs. He wants us to pull that out, increase the debt of this province, and increase spending at a time when everyone else is taking corrective actions to live within their means. So he wants us to increase our debt, run a deficit, and go after it and forget about the requirement and increase our debt service costs.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: is the government waiting until after the teachers settle before dipping into this $2 billion?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, the $2 billion that has been set aside for debt repayment has nothing at all whatsoever to do with the negotiations between the teachers and the various locals of the ATA and the various school districts, not the ATA and the government. I just thought I'd make that little correction.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

MRS. NELSON: And, Mr. Speaker . . .

THE SPEAKER: To supplement?

MRS. NELSON: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Please, a short one.

MRS. NELSON: Let's be very clear. I thought I made it abundantly clear in the first answer. That money has gone already to debt retirement. It is not available to come back. He has to understand that.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Mr. Speaker, money in a bank account is money in a bank account. It hasn't been spent yet.

My third question is to the Premier as well. Why did the government cut 1 percent from every single department but not from the $2 billion that you're holding in the bank account?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I don't – no; I do know where the hon. leader of the Liberal party has been. He's been in this Legislature for some time. It is the law of this province – the law of this province – that we dedicate 75 percent of all surplus funds to debt pay-down. It is the law.

THE SPEAKER: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier said: "It's simple to borrow, and it's simple to raise taxes. All of those things are simple." Well, it must be simple to cut and download the deficit on RHAs, school boards, and children's authorities. My questions are to the Premier. How can the government claim to have a balanced budget when the Capital health authority and the Calgary regional health authority are running a combined deficit of $50 million? They're your agencies.

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition knows, the Calgary regional health authority has cut $30 million from their budget. I understand the Capital regional health authority will be coming up with a proposal or an announcement soon indicating that they have made significant cuts. I would remind the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition that these cuts are to administration. They have achieved finding efficiencies and more effective ways of doing things relative to systems management. The cuts have been made to corporate services. I want to make it quite clear, especially as it relates to the Calgary regional health authority, that they did not touch frontline services.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. But they still have a $50 million deficit.

My second question is to the Premier. If the Premier is so confident that the way to contain costs is through efficiencies, then why are RHAs and children's authorities running deficits? Are they inefficient?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I wouldn't say that they are inefficient. That's why we have agreed to work together co-operatively with all regional health authorities to achieve efficiencies and to find better and more effective methods of doing things.

Relative to the specifics, I'll have the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness respond.

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I should note that there was a significant increase and there will be an increase to the base funding for health in the current year. Even after our adjustment, even before the adjustment that was made to regional health authority funding, the 2001-2002 increase remained at at least 10.8 percent.* So we have invested significant dollars into health care authorities.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in reference to the hon. leader's question about the deficits, we are working with the regional health authorities both in Calgary and Edmonton and in other parts of the province. I should note that of the 17 regional health authorities, most have posted healthy surpluses. Our assurance from the regional health authorities in both Calgary and Edmonton is that they will work toward making sure that those deficits do not recur in future years and that they will have a way of rationally being able to eliminate the deficits that they are currently running in a way that minimizes the impact on services and makes their systems as effective and as efficient as possible.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you. They still are running a deficit based on the revenues they got this year.

My final question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier admit that the one way the government has balanced its budget was on the backs of Edmonton and Calgary by withholding almost $23 million from the fuel tax program?

MR. KLEIN: That is not true. We've asked all municipalities, all regional health authorities, all school districts, all departments of government to co-operate with the government in this period of restraint when the prices of oil and gas are down, Mr. Speaker, to see us through this particular situation. If things improve, of course their situation will improve also.

The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition alluded earlier to a statement I did make yesterday. It's absolutely true. The simplest and the most mindless way – and that's why it appeals to the Liberals – of getting additional revenues is to raise taxes. I mean, that is a no-brainer, an absolute no-brainer. All you've got to do is pass the appropriate legislation during the budgetary debates and say: I'm going to raise taxes; I'm going to pick your pockets. Right? That's the easiest thing to do. It's mindless, it's dumb, and it appeals to the Liberals. Or you can borrow. You can borrow and go into a deficit situation. That also appeals to the Liberals because, again, it doesn't take any thought. It's a mindless solution. To find effective ways of delivering services and to achieve efficiencies, that's the right way to do it.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Contingency Plan for Schools

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Saturday evening and summer school instruction for students are included in the government's contingency plan should teacher contract negotiations fail. My questions are to the Minister of Learning. Under what authority would the minister force teachers to conduct these classes?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that is quite simple, and it's called the School Act. Under the School Act the school boards are required to provide 1,000 hours of instruction time. The last time I looked, if the teachers go out on strike, that is not instruction time.

DR. MASSEY: My second question is to the same minister, Mr. Speaker. Will this contingency plan, which would have to be approved by the teachers, not make reaching a settlement even more difficult?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, the School Act does not have to be approved by the teachers.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. My third question is to the same minister, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister has again inserted the government in negotiations, will the minister be constructive and call a meeting of the teachers and trustees to prevent the situation from worsening?

DR. OBERG: First of all, Mr. Speaker, the School Act has been in Alberta for some 85 or 90 years. The hours of instruction at 1,000 hours have been in for a long time, so I do not believe that that is putting myself in the middle of the negotiation. It's simply enforcing the law. There tends to be a lack of regard for the law on the other side with the questions today. It is the law; 1,000 hours is the law.

I hope and I'm sure that everyone on this side of the Legislature hopes that there is no teachers' strike. Teachers should be in front of the classrooms teaching students. I hope that the school boards and the local ATAs will be able to negotiate a settlement, as they have done in Medicine Hat, where 92 percent of the teachers voted to accept the contract that was offered them. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the central ATA has not ratified that contract at the moment. Hopefully, that will occur. As I said in the Legislative Assembly before, that is a true slap in the face to the local ATA when the central ATA will not ratify that agreement.

Mr. Speaker, we are in no way in the middle of these negotiations. [interjection] These people laugh. What we did in the budget, as you've heard many times in this Assembly, was guarantee a minimum of 6 percent. There's another 3 and a half percent that has always been there to negotiate. It is up to the local school boards. It's up to the ATA to find out where that happy medium is, just as they did in Medicine Hat, where they put forward an offer with what they could afford, what both the Teachers' Association and the school boards wanted to do.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Highwood.

Children's Services Funding

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the 1st of November a number of Calgary agencies received letters stating that their contracts with the Calgary Rocky View children's authority would be terminated effective December 31. These well-established and well-respected agencies were told that the unilateral termination of their contracts was needed to make up an $8 million to $10 million shortfall in the authority's budget. To the Premier: how can the Premier justify giving deputy ministers and other highly paid senior officials 9 percent raises just before Christmas while giving lumps of coal to thousands of vulnerable children in Calgary that will suffer as a result of these brutal cuts?

MR. KLEIN: First of all, Mr. Speaker, the cuts are not brutal. Certainly the Minister of Children's Services, who has spoken in this Assembly before on this particular matter, has indicated that children in need of protection continue to be Children's Services' first priority. Like every other minister she has been asked to set her priorities, and her priorities, clearly, are children in need of protection.

Those agencies still exist. Not only do they exist, but there are other departments offering other services: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development, for instance, the Department of Health and Wellness, the Solicitor General's department, programs that involve early intervention, departments that also fund early intervention programs like early literacy initiatives and programs for pregnant women, which help before a child is even born. There are a number of services that are essential and are being fully funded by this government. Although the Minister of Children's Services is not with us today, perhaps we can have the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development supplement.

THE SPEAKER: We're just going to move on. We've got quite a list of questioners today.

The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary to the Premier: why is the government ignoring respected business-people like Bob Stollery, who even before these latest cuts accused this government of abandoning vulnerable Alberta children?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, we're hardly abandoning Children's Services and services for children. I would venture to say that the Stollery children's health centre at the University hospital is a marvelous example of how this government is working with the private sector to provide essential services for children. Indeed, the children who go to that centre are sick children. They need help, and they're getting first-class help and care, probably the best in this country. I would say that that is a very poor example.

Relative to another statement, I think that there needs to be some clarification here. The salaries of exempt employees – that is, non-unionized employees in this government – were adjusted to give them the same rate of pay from a percentage point of view as the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. Is this hon. member saying that because you're in mid management or because you're in senior management, you ought not to be treated the same as unionized employees? In other words, unionized employees can get raise after raise after raise and everyone else stays the same? That's hardly fair. That's not the way it works at his university. I know that for sure.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplementary to the Premier: why is the Premier still determined to push through the planned $275 million in corporate tax cuts? Why is he refusing to do his part even if it means that thousands of vulnerable children in Calgary and elsewhere will suffer?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, children in this province will not suffer. It has been made abundantly clear that children are going to be looked after. In two departments – and I'll have both ministers, the Solicitor General and the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development, supplement if they will – we are looking after children in need. That is a priority, and I'll have both these ministers supplement to give the hon. member an outline as to exactly what we are doing in this province to protect children.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MS CALAHASEN: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. First of all, I'd like to indicate that we have a $647 million budget in Children's Services. If we're talking about vulnerable children, we've got a number of areas that we've been working on: child care subsidies to help low-income families with child care costs; family violence prevention, including funding for women's shelters; child welfare and child protective services; programs to combat fetal alcohol syndrome; services for children with disabilities; early intervention, which is what we're talking about – and these are still ongoing because it's just a scale-back – early childhood development programs; mental health and student health programs for children; and of course the child financial support program that provides monetary assistance to caregivers looking after children whose parents are unable or unwilling to properly care for that child. These are just a few, and all 18 regional authorities are charged with setting priorities and living within the budget.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you very much, hon. minister.

I have a long list of hon. members who wish to participate today. We've now spent over six minutes on this exchange, and of course the principle is not that one member should dominate question period, so we're moving on.

The hon. Member for Highwood, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Endangered Species

MR. TANNAS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal Species at Risk legislation was in the news again today. The federal government has defeated a motion that would have given fair compensation to ranchers and farmers whose property is occupied by an endangered species. My question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. In what ways have you, Mr. Minister, and/or your department sought the co-operation of the federal Department of the Environment in achieving a fair and just way to protect endangered species in Alberta without serious harm befalling our farmers, ranchers, and acreage owners on whose property the organisms might be found?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. CARDINAL: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That's a good, timely question. As you're no doubt aware, Alberta has been a driving force behind the national accord for the protection of species at risk. This agreement has brought together all provincial, territorial, and federal jurisdictions across Canada to build an effective approach in protecting these species. Of course, the proposed federal act includes penalties for those who contravene it, but Alberta's approach is to protect these species' habitat in a more co-operative manner. In fact, Alberta's active participation in the national recovery plans for species has worked very well because we do involve landowners, we involve land managers, we involve agriculture, and we involve industry in the process. This is the Alberta way.

MR. TANNAS: Mr. Speaker, my first supplemental question is also to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Some environmental groups have criticized Alberta for not having specific species at risk legislation and recently awarded the province a D minus for its protection of species at risk. To the minister then: what is your department doing to better protect endangered species in the province of Alberta?

THE SPEAKER: Sorry. I caution the hon. Deputy Speaker. The hon. Deputy Speaker knows the rules as well as anybody. There are no preambles on the second question.

The hon. minister.

MR. CARDINAL: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This is a very, very important question. Alberta of course has been very active for over 25 years already to identify the species at risk through legislation, regulations, and a policy of protection under my department through the Wildlife Act. We conduct many initiatives to identify and restore species at risk. This may include a wide range of conservation strategies based on good science. We've had very good success, and this is very important. The white pelican is one example, and the trumpeter swan, the swift fox, the Peregrine falcon. I think Alberta has done very well.

In addition to that, of course, we have the Alberta Endangered Species Conservation Committee here in Alberta, which was set up back in 1998 I believe. This committee involves industry, involves scientists, involves environmentalists, involves land managers in laying out a plan as to which animals may be endangered and recommends to me how we may restore those particular animals.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. TANNAS: Thank you. Without preamble, Mr. Speaker, does this proposed federal Species at Risk act complement or duplicate Alberta's protection of endangered species, Mr. Minister?

MR. CARDINAL: This is very, very sensitive to our overall economy in Alberta. We are concerned that the federal legislation might intrude and probably will, once it's passed, into provincial jurisdiction. We feel we are already very, very successful in that area. Therefore, we do not support the proposed federal legislation. Again, Mr. Speaker, we do not support the legislation.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Electricity Deregulation

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier is planning on picking the pockets of electricity consumers in this province to get back the $700 million that is owed. It's the largest power bill in the history of this country. Now, on Tuesday the Minister of Energy mentioned all of the various issues in the electricity industry he is looking into: "deferral accounts, prescribed rate, pool price deficiency regulation, export principles, [power purchase] arrangements, Clover Bar bidding arrangements," among other problems. My first question is to the Premier this afternoon. Why does the Premier continue to delay decisions or miss deadlines for such things as the regulated rate option, surely realizing that it denies consumers and industry much-needed information?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. Minister of Energy answer the question, but in reply to the statement that was made, we are in not in any way, shape, or form picking the pockets of Alberta consumers. As a matter of fact, this government came to the rescue in a very, very big way of Alberta consumers, both corporate and individual consumers, so that they wouldn't have to pay exorbitant electricity and natural gas rates.

MR. SMITH: Mr. Speaker, just in the way that the Leader of the Opposition started out earlier today and said to dip into the $2 billion, what the member who asked the question has said is: why didn't you just leave everybody out there to pay the highest bills ever encountered? Instead, what happened was that a load leveling occurred where these bills are spread over a period of time. It was the right thing to do, it was a prudent thing to do, and reflections from the last provincial election told us that is was the correct thing to do.

The member needs to know clearly that the Energy and Utilities Board for the jurisdictions they are responsible for will reflect the regulated rate option. In the areas of Calgary and Edmonton, where these are city-owned utilities, the recommendation for the regulated rate option is made to the cities. City council then approves these.

Mr. Speaker, the only piece of information that the member wants to know is if we will set a prescribed regulated rate option for the following year. That decision is going through the thorough and introspective examination of this government and caucus and will be reported in the fullness of time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Energy then: is it not true that the minister has as of last weekend missed three deadlines dating back to the end of summer for releasing the electricity restructuring review?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMITH: No.

MR. MacDONALD: Again to the Minister of Energy: how is failing to get information out in a timely manner going to address what the Centre for the Advancement of Energy Markets points out as a weak link in deregulation in Alberta? Consumer information: weak link.

MR. SMITH: Mr. Speaker, as invited and enticed as I am to make a comment about weak link or missing link, I will refrain from that and only suggest that if the member goes back to his reference material on the Centre for the Advancement of Energy Markets, he will find that that centre, the very centre he is talking about, rates Alberta as number one in North America in proceeding towards a competitive market.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Union Organizing Practices

MR. LUKASZUK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My office is receiving a number of calls from members of the construction industry about the practices of salting in Alberta. Although they are not of the culinary variety, it appears that they are giving the members of the construction industry some high blood pressure. Can the Minister of Human Resources and Employment explain to us: what do the practices of salting and MERFing involve, and how do they affect the industry in Alberta?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, the term salting is a description that has come into labour relations in recent years. It indicates a situation where members of a union go into the job market, and they seek to be hired by usually a small contractor. They get hired because, of course, of the demand we have in this great province for skilled labour.

MRS. FORSYTH: And then they want a union.

MR. DUNFORD: All donations gratefully accepted to my answer. Then, of course, they begin to attempt to organize that group of employees working for that contractor. Upon the vote, whether it's successful or not successful, then they move on to other employment matters.

In trying to deal with this situation as a government, because we are, of course, here to try to provide a level playing field between the parties involved in labour relations, the difficulty for us is complicated. First of all, it should be a right of any person to go and seek employment. Of course, it's been established as a human right that once employed, if a person wishes to have a collective bargaining agent bargain on their behalf, that again is a right as well. Where the difficulty comes in and it seems like the playing field might not be exactly level is that if the company is certified and these salts, as they're referred to, then move on to other employment leaving behind them the certification, the employer is somewhat restricted in timing as to doing anything with that.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LUKASZUK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same hon. minister: are these practices currently legal in Alberta?

MR. DUNFORD: There have been a number of test cases with the Alberta Labour Relations Board, and of course I might add that there have been cases in other jurisdictions as well. The practice of salting has thus far been deemed as a legal activity within labour relations.

MR. LUKASZUK: My last supplemental, Mr. Speaker: since this practice appears to be causing, as the minister has stated, a somewhat unlevel playing field, are you planning on introducing any amendments to the legislation to deal with this practice?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, we currently have been meeting with various stakeholder groups, and of course salting is one of the areas that has come to my attention, and there is controversy surrounding it. What I've been saying publicly – and I'll say it again – is that we want to enter into a series of consultations with stakeholders in labour relations through the year 2002. We are not going to open the Labour Relations Code from section 1 right through the whole code, but I would be interested in hearing from all parties, both representing employers and representing employees, as to whether or not there are specific sections of that code that we might have a look at with the idea, then, of bringing forth amendments in spring '03.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Adolescent Gambling

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. In Alberta gambling is endorsed and promoted as an industry of choice by this government. Today's children are the first generation to be exposed to widespread access to gambling, ubiquitous gambling advertising, and general social approval of gambling. My questions are to the Minister of Gaming. What percentage of the over $1 billion in gaming revenue is directed to programs specifically designed to combat adolescent gambling addictions?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased that the Alberta lottery fund, which is the fund into which all of the gaming revenue in Alberta goes, is the source of funding for AADAC, through which all addiction programming in the province is done. Some $4.1 million of the AADAC budget goes to gambling, and in my discussions with AADAC they tell me that $4.1 million is the amount that is currently required to address the gambling problems in our province at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Given that a recent study indicates that 13 percent of Canadian youths have some kind of gambling problem, what steps has the minister taken to ensure that expansion of the gaming industry will not result in increased youth gaming?

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Speaker, there are two aspects to this that I think are appropriate to address at this time. The first is that AADAC has a program of education that goes into our schools to address problem gambling that might be there. I think that problem gambling in large measure is best addressed through education, and they have an active program there.

I can also tell you that the AGLC has a very strict enforcement policy and that we are very concerned that no minors do participate in gambling in our casinos or in our lounges in this province, and I can tell you that there is not one charge this year associated with underage gambling in this province.

MS BLAKEMAN: Given that several studies show that lottery tickets are the pied piper of problem gambling amongst youth, how can the minister justify the new hockey lottery directed at young sports fans in Alberta?

MR. STEVENS: We have very clear rules with respect to gambling and in particular with respect to participating in the purchase of lottery tickets in this province, Mr. Speaker. The rule simply is that minors are not allowed to purchase those tickets. We have in excess of 2,000 retailers. They're very well aware of that. We also, through the AGLC, ensure that that is monitored, and that is working very well.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Kyoto Climate Change Agreement

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the biggest environmental issues facing Alberta and, in fact, the world today is the issue of climate change. This past summer and then again in recent weeks there's been a lot of attention given to the international talks relating to the Kyoto protocol and the global agreement to address this issue. My question is for the Minister of Environment, who I believe participated in some of the international discussions in July. What is the status of these negotiations, especially in terms of their impact on Canada and Alberta?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Ten years ago at Rio the Kyoto climate change agreement was signed by about 170 countries. It's the biggest treaty the world has ever known. Since that time, there has been ongoing negotiation in terms of what rules will be set around the Kyoto agreement and how it will be implemented, and at Bonn in July those rules were agreed on. In Marrakech last month the technical details of those rules were agreed on. So essentially the agreement is in place, and the federal Minister of the Environment has announced that these two agreements, the Bonn and the Marrakech agreements, pave the way to ratification. It is his expectation that the agreement will be ratified either before the G-8 or at the G-8 next June in Kananaskis.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you. To the same minister: if Canada does proceed with ratification, what will that mean to Alberta?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes. It's a very interesting question, Mr. Speaker. This agreement as it stands would have significant cost to Alberta, and the issue is that the federal government has no idea of what these costs would be at the present time. So that's the scary issue. Our estimate is that this could cost the industry in Alberta up to $3 per barrel of oil to a total some place in the neighbourhood of $6 billion per year out of our economy, and obviously that is a significant cost. The first one to be hit on that would be industry, and at the same time as industry is hit, the Alberta Treasury would be hit. So this is an extremely significant issue for Alberta, and we have to deal with it as a province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Energy to supplement.

MR. SMITH: Thank you. I just want to supplement this. The dominion of Canada exports more oil and gas to the United States than the kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Mr. Speaker, the United States will not be a signatory to this agreement. Those are our biggest customers in that country. Mexico and Venezuela are our largest competitors in that marketplace, and they will not be signatories to Kyoto. We are being taxed by putting one hand behind our back and trying to compete in a free market where export is the lifeblood of this province, and it's punitive to this province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you. My final question is to the Minister of Environment. Within that context, as stated by both ministers, what is the Alberta government's position on climate change? Do we have a strategy?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we have a very clear position on Kyoto; that is, the federal government should not ratify Kyoto in its present situation. As the Minister of Energy has correctly pointed out, the U.S. is not a signatory. While Venezuela and Mexico are signatories, they do not have any compliance requirements, and that's the issue. We will have compliance requirements. Our biggest competitors, Venezuela and Mexico, will not have any compliance requirements.

As well, Canada only produces 2 percent, Mr. Speaker, of the greenhouse gas in the world. The U.S., China, and India produce approximately 50 percent. So my question to the federal government is: why do you take steps that could be disastrous to the Canadian and the Alberta economy for 2 percent of the greenhouse gas in the world? If we eliminated that 2 percent and went back to living in caves, which some people seem to want us to do, it would not have any, you know, main effect on the greenhouse gas. Until the U.S., India, and China are involved, it makes no sense to sign this agreement.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Underground Petroleum Storage Tanks

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: why is your department jeopardizing the safety of groundwater in Alberta by cutting $30 million from the underground petroleum storage tank program?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. BOUTILIER: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is absolutely correct in the fact that we are deferring $31 million of our program. But I think it's important to note this: it is the only program of its kind in Canada. Albertans have committed over $80 million. Fifty million dollars of that work has been done, which has reached over 600 sites.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: if protecting groundwater is a priority, why did this program take a major cut? Thirty million dollars is more than 1 percent.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again, the hon. member raises a very good point. In fact, today at the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, which many members here were at, I spoke to a member of the committee that is examining the issue of groundwater, the president of the Alberta association. I think it's also important to understand that the assessment that was done of the highest risk sites in this province is part of the 55 orphan sites and the 600 sites that have been remediated at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc.

Homelessness

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is national homelessness action day. As I speak, hundreds of concerned Edmontonians are gathering in Edmonton's inner city on a provincial government parking lot that was previously zoned for affordable housing. Turning land zoned for housing into a parking lot is an apt metaphor for this government's housing policy, it seems. My questions are to the hon. Premier. Why is the government prepared to spend in excess of a million dollars to assemble land in Edmonton's inner city and build a paved parking lot there while it ignores the needs of thousands of low-income Albertans for affordable housing?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, I really don't know what we are assembling in terms of land. Perhaps I'll have the hon. Minister of Infrastructure or Municipal Affairs respond relative to that particular situation.

As it affects the homeless in this province, I think that the government has worked well with a number of agencies to accommodate the homeless and to deal with the homeless situation in this province. The agency that comes to mind – it's not here in the city of Edmonton, although they're doing a wonderful job here – is certainly in the city of Calgary, where they have taken significant steps to provide low-income housing. I was just reading the paper the other day, relative to the Canadian forces base land that was left vacant when the military moved to Edmonton, that there are rental units in some cases going for absolutely nothing based on the person's or the family's ability to pay. The rent in some cases is nothing.

MR. LUND: Mr. Speaker, in most recent times we haven't purchased any land in the city of Edmonton except for very specific needs, like where Transportation is going to be building some roadways.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How is the government planning to replace the affordable housing that was sacrificed to build this parking lot?

MR. KLEIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know where this parking lot is. I don't have the information. I don't know if the hon. Minister of Infrastructure or Municipal Affairs or anyone else has the information, but if we own a parking lot somewhere, it is obviously for a purpose of government or for a future right-of-way or for something. We just don't buy land for the sake of buying land.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will get the information on this parking lot to the Premier.

My last question to him: will the Premier advise the House if his government will match the dollars that the federal government has agreed to provide for affordable housing over the next four years, and if not, why not?

MR. KLEIN: Mr. Speaker, we are working with agencies in Calgary and Edmonton and indeed throughout the province to address the homeless situation. I already alluded to the situation in Calgary, where I know they're doing an absolutely marvelous job to deal with the homeless situation there. I understand they are doing a similar kind of job here in the capital region.

It's not just government. It's governments. It's the federal government, it's the Alberta government, it's municipal governments, it's the business community and volunteers, everyone working together.

MR. NORRIS: Just as a supplement, Mr. Speaker. An organization in Edmonton, the Rotary Club, which I'm sure everybody's familiar with, has partnered in downtown Edmonton with the provincial government and the federal government, each putting in $800,000, to build a 26-suite low-income home for singles. It's in downtown Edmonton, and it ain't a parking lot. It's an action this government has matched with the federal government, and it's going to be opened in the spring of 2002.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Leduc, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Rural Electrification Associations

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is for the Minister of Energy. My constituents are receiving bills, and quite frankly they don't seem to make any sense. There seems to be an ongoing problem associated with load settlement estimates used to prepare wholesale bills for rural electrification associations. These estimates appear to be unreasonable and do not reflect actual consumption. Is that the case?

MR. SMITH: Well, Mr. Speaker that is absolutely correct. It's a good question. It indicates that you have bills that come in that are not balancing with the charges that are going out. Action has to be undertaken to correct this so that people are in fact paying for what they used. In that line, we are undertaking a review of the rural electrification associations data collection process to ensure that we can use the load settlement data accordingly, and we are working with the Power Pool.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: So when can consumers expect to get a complete and accurate picture of their consumption on their bill?

MR. SMITH: Mr. Speaker, in fact, a committee has been put together called the Alberta settlement committee. It's a group consisting of representation from retailers, distribution utilities, the Power Pool, transmission administrator, the rural electrification associations, and the Department of Energy. We are completing our work after having set out the description of the tasks at hand. We expect to have a complete and accurate picture of the consumption in the first quarter of 2002 and at the onset will then take corrective action. Secondly, we will continue to monitor existing issues inside that marketplace.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, in response to an earlier question by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, I cited an incorrect number. I earlier stated that RHA base funding for the current year would be increased by 10.8 percent. That was actually before the adjustment. The actual figure is in fact 8.9 percent, and I wish to make that correction.*

Thank you.

head: Members' Statements

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving

MR. HUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Impaired driving is the number one Criminal Code cause of death in Canada. Each holiday season Mothers Against Drunk Driving, better known as MADD, puts on the red ribbon campaign to raise awareness of the dangers of drinking and driving. The campaign was launched on November 15 with an open house at the MADD Edmonton chapter, which is in my constituency. Police officers, paramedics, taxi drivers, all levels of government, and many other corporate sponsors showed their support at the launch by wearing a ribbon or tying it on their vehicles. On average 4.5 Canadians are killed and over 125 more Canadians are injured daily in alcohol-related crashes. Direct and indirect costs of alcohol-related crashes are estimated at $9 billion annually. Simply, more needs to be done about this serious crime.

At the campaign launch an announcement was made of Calgary opening its own MADD chapter in the coming year. It is great news to hear of more support but sad news in knowing it is needed. Impaired driving has killed far too many people in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, today MADD has provided red ribbons for all the Members of the Legislative Assembly to pin on their lapels in support of this invaluable campaign. My hope is that all members will tie them onto their vehicles. By tying on a red ribbon, we will make our own personal commitment to drive sober and promote the message that impaired-driving deaths and injuries are needless and preventable. We need to take a stand and make it clear that the members of the Assembly will not tolerate drinking and driving.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The Public Accounts Committee is created by Standing Order 50, which refers the previous year's financial accounts and the Auditor General's report to the committee to review. By tradition, not rule, the committee meets only when the Legislature is in session. Each week a different department is under review, and the minister appears before the committee to answer questions. This committee is a committee of the Legislative Assembly. It has representation from all parties. At this time it has 13 MLAs appointed by government, two from the Official Opposition, and one from the third party.

I have sat on this committee for five years, and each year I become more alarmed at how the usefulness and integrity of the committee is being eroded. Even ministers' respect for this committee ranges from respectful to dismissive and unco-operative.

A case in point. As the government has the Legislature sit for fewer weeks each year, the committee has fewer opportunities to scrutinize the accounts of ministries. Last year we were only able to get through nine departments of a total of 24. That's two-thirds that did not receive any scrutiny on behalf of Albertans. This year – who knows? – maybe we'll get through half of the ministries.

Every attempt to have the committee operate in a manner which would give greater latitude to question ministers in depth and examine their departments has been voted down by the Conservative majority on the committee. What are they afraid of?

Just this week I put forward a motion that the $6,000 budgeted for the Public Accounts Committee travel budget, which was unexpended due to cancellation of a conference, be used instead to have the committee meet outside of session. This would have allowed us to at least examine a few additional ministries. I've seen this committee approve other changes in its budgets, so why not this?

Government members who spoke against the motion said that we should not expend the money to do what we are constituted to do but that, instead, the money should be returned to government coffers. Does paying off the government's debt come before everything, including our legislated mandate? Do they really think it's okay to leave our job half done?

Transparent and open government? I don't think so, not if the attempt to control, limit, and hobble the Public Accounts Committee is any indication of this government's willingness to be questioned on its management of money.

Dr. Noor Jaffer

MR. SHARIFF: Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, November 21, 2001, YMCA Calgary presented the Canada Peace medal to Dr. Noor Jaffer. This medal is presented annually to an individual or a group that demonstrates commitment to work towards peace either locally or globally.

Born in London, England, Dr. Jaffer spent most of his childhood in Uganda and graduated from the University of London with a doctorate in dentistry. He practised in St. John's, Newfoundland, before taking up a teaching position at the University of Alberta, faculty of dentistry.

Dr. Jaffer's involvement with international service and community development started when he joined Rotary International at the age of 24. He has served as director of international service and president of the Rotary Club of Calgary Olympic. He has initiated and spearheaded many projects for Rotary, including the provision of equipment and beds to a hospice for terminally ill patients in south India; the provision of over 80 ambulances to the same region, for which he was awarded the prestigious Paul Harris fellowship of Rotary International; and the building of sanitation and clean water systems in Honduras and Guatemala, to mention just a few.

From 1991 to 1994 Dr. Jaffer served as the Calgary convener for Aga Khan Foundation Canada, organizing successful annual partnership walks that raise funds and awareness of international development. More recently he has served as the communications director for Focus Humanitarian Assistance Canada, that provides emergency relief, primarily in developing countries. In May 2000 Dr. Jaffer volunteered on a CIDA mission to Afghanistan and Tajikistan to evaluate and facilitate the delivery of humanitarian food aid to those in need. Currently he is a director on the board of the Alberta Children's Hospital Foundation.

Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to extend congratulations and best wishes to Dr. Noor Jaffer upon receiving the YMCA Canada Peace medal.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Children's Services

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Two events have occurred recently with respect to children. First, philanthropist Robert Stollery proposed to an awards luncheon for innovative charities and volunteer organizations that this province dramatically change priorities. Stollery challenged Albertans to reduce poverty in the province so conditions of poorer citizens could be at least as good as those of citizens in European nations, Australia, Japan, and even Poland. He went on to say, and I quote: we could show the world a stunning Alberta advantage by shifting our priorities, by making a real frontal attack on poverty of that 20 percent of Albertans, mainly children, who now live here below the poverty line.

Second, this week we celebrated National Child Day on November 20. On November 20, 1989, the convention on the rights of the child was adopted in the United Nations General Assembly. In a move to promote an awareness of this convention, the Canadian Parliament passed the Child Day Act in 1993, designating November 20 as Child Day.

These two events seem to have had little impact on government policy. The race to be debt free is more attractive than the race to end poverty. The fervour to balance budgets is more intense than the fervour to help children. Accelerating the debt repayment is more important than accelerating programs for children.

MR. MAR: That's horseshit.

DR. MASSEY: And it isn't bullshit, Mr. Member.

The Premier seems attracted to the . . .

THE SPEAKER: Sorry. Continue.

DR. MASSEY: The Premier seems attracted to the idea of being remembered as the Premier who returned Alberta to a debt-free status. Why not a different legacy? Why not the legacy of an Alberta family poverty free? Why not a province known as much for excellent people programs as for fiscal programs? Why not a province where Child Day is truly cause for celebration?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Speaker's Ruling Parliamentary Language

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, one of the innovative provisions we have in this Assembly is an opportunity for hon. members to provide a statement during the week. It's called Members' Statements. Tradition has always been that members' statements are provided uninterrupted, and the Speaker would never accept a point of order or, in fact, even deal with an interjection. Unfortunately, during this last member's statement there was a statement made by an hon. member in the Assembly which was totally inappropriate. The hon. member giving the member's statement obviously heard it and responded to it. What I'm going to do now is ask the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment to withdraw his statement.

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, it was not the hon. minister for human resources.

THE SPEAKER: Sorry. I apologize to the hon. minister.

The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. MAR: I so withdraw it, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Would that be appropriate, hon. member?

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Projected Government Business

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Official Opposition House Leader.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask the Government House Leader to share next week's projected business with us at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Commencing Monday, November 26, in the afternoon we would anticipate second reading of Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2), proceeding with Government Motion 21 and Committee of the Whole on Bill 28. At 8 p.m. under Government Motions, Motion 21; committee on Bill 28; third reading as per the Order Paper; and second reading of Bill 30, the Appropriation Act (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2), if necessary.

Tuesday, November 27, we would contemplate introduction of the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No.2), Bill 31, at 1:30 p.m. for first reading and then under Government Bills and Orders at 4:30 p.m. third readings on bills 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, and 29 and otherwise as per the Order Paper. Tuesday evening at 8 under Government Bills and Orders for third reading bills 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, and 29 and committee on Bill 30 and as per the Order Paper.

Wednesday, November 28, at 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders for second reading and Committee of the Whole Bill 31, miscellaneous statutes, and third reading of Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2).

Thursday, November 29, under Government Bills and Orders for third reading, miscellaneous statutes. I should mention at this point in time, Mr. Speaker, that while miscellaneous statutes are not normally debated in the House, having been agreed to by all parties before introduction, there is an agreement between all three parties that we would spend Thursday afternoon, before inviting the Lieutenant Governor into the House at 5:15, debating the portion of the miscellaneous statutes which refers to the change to the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'll call the Committee of Supply to order.

head: Supplementary Estimates 2001-02
General Revenue Fund

Agriculture, Food and Rural Development

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. minister.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will just make some very brief comments to the hon. members to explain the supply estimate. This supply estimate is really separated into three components. First, the request for $73 million: this funding is required for the farm income assistance program 2001, native forage and honey components. This program, as members would recall from the spring, provided much-needed drought relief for Alberta's livestock and honey producers who faced very severe difficulties due to the very poor pasture conditions across the province.

Secondly, $20 million was allocated for the Alberta farm water program, which will assist producers to secure long-term supplies to help them deal with future drought conditions. Mr. Chairman, as I have indicated to members on other occasions and in conversation, we are very impressed with the innovative use of that program and the very valuable long-term water projects that we are seeing, which include co-operative projects, which include using solar pumping, cleaning out springs, underground pipelines, and just all types of innovative things that actually really provide some drought mitigation for the future.

Finally, on the third component, since the original estimates were approved for the Canada/Alberta farm income assistance program, an additional $51.1 million of federal contributions have been negotiated. Approval of this portion of this supplementary estimate is required to allow us to spend this allocation. With this approval, the Canada/Alberta farm income assistance program expenditures will total $318 million, which are offset by federal contributions of $177.9 million. We have of course received approval for these programs earlier in the year from Treasury Board.

The supplementary estimates total $144.1 million and are offset by spending lapses of $14.581 million, and I'll identify where those were for members: $12.5 million in energy rebate funding that was not used or required and $2.081 million, or 1 percent of the department's budget, pursuant to the October 18 announcement of the Finance ministers's request. Therefore, hon. members, our total supplementary estimate request is $129,519,000.

It has been an extraordinary challenge for the agricultural producers in this province this year. Challenge is not unusual or uncommon in that industry. We have peaks and valleys; we have things that happen. But in talking to a number of producers who have been in the province for a long number of years in this industry, this has been the year probably of the greatest challenge. I must say, Mr. Chairman, that the producers in this province have I know indicated to many of you as members and certainly to me as minister their thanks and appreciation for what they feel was a very serious consideration of the challenges they faced that were far beyond their control. On their behalf I thank the members of the Assembly for considering these supplementary estimates.

THE CHAIRMAN: Before calling on the hon. leader, I wonder if the committee would agree to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to again rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some very special guests that we have visiting us today. We have, I believe, 21 young ladies and gentlemen and future voters in my constituency, I might add, from the Calgary Waldorf school in Calgary-Currie along with six parent helpers, Denise Hare, Jan LeRoy, Geli Hamilton, Colette Mactaggart, Stuart Watson, and Kevin Marjoram, and their teacher, Stacey Kaban. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask that they all rise, and I hope they receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

head: Supplementary Estimates 2001-02
General Revenue Fund

Agriculture, Food and Rural Development (continued)

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a real privilege to stand this afternoon and work with the minister of agriculture on trying to deal with the issues of the crisis that our sector has faced this year. It's been really important to the province and to a lot of the people in rural Alberta that we have programs in place that will provide them with some kind of certainty or some kind of stability in a time of crisis. Not only have we been faced with low prices on the world markets, but we've had drought and a whole series of other setbacks in terms of the environmental issues in our own geographic area, not just within our province but the whole western agricultural area.

I guess if I comment on the budget allocations here and some of the numbers that the minister gave us as she was making her presentation, the one question that I would have, just to make sure I got the number written down right: was it $177.9 million from the federal government on the farm income disaster assistance program? This is part of one of the programs that we have that runs with the federal government so that we end up with a balance in terms of the responsibilities. The normal process has been that these are kind of 50-50 funded or 60-40 funded. This gives us the sense of where that balance came out, if it runs into that 60-40 range that is there in terms of the federal/provincial cost share.

I put this on the record for the minister to respond to at probably a later date, because I'm sure the data will have to be looked at, but a lot of the farmers keep asking in terms of the dollars that are allocated to the programs: how are they in the end distributed? Who are the recipients? How does it divide up in terms of the farm sector? This is a farm income based program, but farmers still want to have some kind of a demographic or characteristic breakdown of it. So that kind of information just for the public's perspective might be useful when Ag Financial Services does their annual report or something like that. I'm not asking the minister to give us that information right now, because that's too much detail to expect to be readily available, but say in an annual report or something like that so that farmers get a sense of where the dollars are going.

I guess the other question that comes up is that historically we've had a number of times when the dollars have been allocated in the budget, and they're calculated based on an expectation of need, yet by the end of the year farmers don't qualify. We end up not paying out under these programs, and there will end up being dollars left that haven't been allocated. So with the long downturn that we've had in prices, the margin that works in the FIDP program now is gradually ratcheting itself down as we get further and further away from that five-year-ago period when prices were more reasonable. I guess that's a question that comes up in terms of: how has that affected the effectiveness and the distribution of these payouts? You know, a lot of farmers now are finding themselves in the situation – and this is really characteristic of the farmers in the area a little bit east of here and out to the Saskatchewan border – where they've had four or five years now of what would be considered below-average yield because of the weather and then compounded by the down cycle in the prices. They've really, in effect, ratcheted their margins down to the point where they're not getting much support from a program like the farm income assistance program.

This is where I will recognize the minister and the efforts that they put into the acreage payments that came out last spring at planting time so that those farmers would have the money to be the optimistic farmer: you know, this is the year. It's always going to be this year that the big crop comes. That acreage payment in the spring really gave them a chance to get that crop in the ground, to get their expenses under control to start the season.

We can see that there are some reasonably good signs now in the ag sector. Some of the commodity prices are starting to show a little bit of strength. If the trade negotiations that were started in Qatar a couple of weeks ago now will actually do something for agriculture – the Europeans have promised to open up the agriculture subsidy programs, maybe two or three or four. I hope it's not the 11 years that the Uruguay round took. That could give us some insight and some optimism three or four or five years down the road. If we can get some of those subsidy programs changed, then maybe the need for something like the farm income assistance program might not be so critical.

I guess the other thing is that, you know, a lot of farmers are asking how this program could be adjusted or if it needs to be adjusted to reflect more a cost of production base rather than just dealing with the issues of how they go about getting some kind of an insurance on a margin that they don't have any longer. They'd like to have some reflection of it in terms of the cost of production. I know that the minister has been dealing with this but more in terms of the crop insurance program rather than the direct farm income assistance program. I guess I would say that you're doing the right thing, Madam Minister, because we've got to make sure that when we make options available for the farmers, they should be made available in a way that they have to undertake an active decision for their risk management. So should they buy crop insurance, or should they not buy crop insurance? That's the kind of active participation in risk management that we should be asking the farmers to undertake.

The farm income disaster program is kind of an after-the-fact program where if they didn't get the income they were hoping for, then we as a public step in and give them some support. That, in effect, doesn't encourage them to be active participants in maybe diversification or some other kind of activity that will actually deal with the risk management that's so important. You know, these are the kinds of signals that we need to be sending as we modify these programs. We have to make sure that as the public discussion comes up about the benefit of these programs and whether or not they work well and really suit the needs of our community out there, can they work and can they be improved?

I guess one of the other questions that's come up a number of times – and I always can come up with a response for these things, Mr. Chairman. You know, it's been like some of the ag sector is basically price negotiated or price controlled under our supply management. Well, why do we, in effect, have them eligible for this as well? You know, it's the cropping sector that they have in along with their supply-managed part of their operations. The supply-managed price adjustments reflect the input costs, so why are we actually paying them for their input costs when it's being reflected in their prices? You know, this is the option that you end up with. You talk about, well, if you are only going to subsidize part of the enterprise, what they end up doing is categorizing the enterprise and spinning off a corporation over here that does the cropping and another corporation over here that does the supply management. There are ways around it, and we need to look at these kinds of manipulations and whether or not that should be taken into account. The thing that we need to look at is also how the program comes out.

The other comments on the $75 million – or $73 million. These glasses kind of blur things once in awhile, and I've got to get used to them yet. So it's $73 million in connection with the livestock and the honey producers. The money that went out on the $4 per acre for native pasture, Mr. Chairman, is an interesting comparison between the way the two programs were put together in the sense that the $4 per acre on native pasture was paid on an input to an agriculture commodity production. Pasture is an input to the cow/calf operator or to the other grazing operators in the province, where the $4 per operational hive is based on a capital facility or a capacity measure. What you see is that if you pay it on the operational hive, most of the hives around the province are based on a standard size of capacity, the number of bees in it. So what we're basically doing is making sure that everybody around the province is getting about the same amount of money per unit upon which their income is based to deal with their support.

But when we look at the native pasture payment, we look at that in the context of the variation that that created in terms of opportunity across the province. In this area, say, north of Red Deer on up, it's not quite as noticeable as it is when you get into the southern part of the province. If you compare the western part of Alberta to the east, where the carrying capacity for a cow is so much different, effectively what we're doing when we get out into the eastern part of Alberta – and the carrying capacity out there might be as high as sometimes 30 or 40 or 45 acres per cow. They're getting essentially $4. Let's just make it easy and say 30 acres per cow. They're basically getting $120 per cow. If you go to the eastern slopes of the foothills, there the carrying capacity is down maybe 10 or 12 or 15 acres per cow. They're only getting half of the money, so they'll be getting $50 or $60 per cow. Now, what you've got is the eastern cow/calf operator with $120 per cow to bid for the forage. The cow/calf operator in the foothills area has only $50 to bid for the forage.

In essence, by our program we've created a disequilibrium in the ability of each of these individual operators to sustain their animals over the drought period. What I would contend, Mr. Chairman, is that when this program was put together, we should have used the same concept that we did for the bees. We should have made the payment on the basis of the income unit, which is the cow or the cow/calf unit. By doing that, what we could have done was given operators a matter of, say, a couple of weeks or three weeks or a month to in essence file their record with Ag Financial Services or an ag office in the province somewhere, to bring in some data that showed that these are our historic levels of the number of animal units that were owned. Then the payments could have been made on that. It may have delayed the payment two or three weeks, but it would have made it accurate. It would have made it so that we're truly dealing with market conditions, where the market is the factor that determines the decision-making rather than an inequity created by a government program.

It's really important that as we put our programs together, we don't disrupt market forces. Mr. Chairman, I think most of us in this House believe that in terms of allocating commodities and making economic decisions, the market has to be the place where we let that happen. When we develop programs that create disequilibrium disadvantages in that market system, we should be looking again at whether or not those programs are right.

I know a number of these producers had their herd sizes already registered when they were dealing with the farm income disaster program or some of the other programs that were associated, because they had to report as they filed each year, you know, the size of their operations. It wouldn't have been really difficult to have made that based on an income unit rather than an input unit. I think that would have made the program much better, and we could have made much better use of the money that we allocated when we look at it from the provincial point of view.

The final comments that I have on this, Mr. Chairman, deal with the Alberta farm water program, the new program that was announced this year in response to the drought. I will commend the department on this, because it was so much better than the old program that we had. It provided farmers with the option to take these dollars and really deal with the crisis situation that they were facing in more than just the let's fix it up right now, the band-aid solution kind of approach. What we were doing – and the minister spoke about this for a little while when she was talking about some of the innovative ways that farmers took to implement and to put in place new water acquisition programs that basically were going to guarantee on a year-to-year basis their access to water rather than just kind of fixing it up and hoping for next year. There are a lot of places in Alberta now that have found that hoping for next year just compounds the problem. So this was a great program. The Alberta ag staff that came up with this, the people in all of the government agencies that put this program together should be recognized for it.

It'll be interesting, you know, as we get some feedback from the producers out there, to see whether or not it continues and does give them the support over a number of years that this kind of thing would provide. I guess the question that comes up yet is how they can be using that to improve the quality of the water as much as the access to the water. In a lot of places now especially groundwater sources are becoming more and more saline. So basically they're not high-quality waters any longer for livestock production. We have to start looking at some of the mechanisms that are there to kind of purify that water and make sure that that water is in a level or is in a quality that is effective and contributes to good animal husbandry.

Mr. Chairman, you know, in the context of these programs I think it's important we recognize that these $129 million are dollars that were allocated because of the crisis the sector was in. I think it's imperative now that we ask the minister to make sure that we're looking at programs that create sustainability in the sector so that we're not ending up with these kinds of up-and-down swings in terms of public funding. We can basically put in place programs that will give us some long-term stability in the sector. I know from the comments I've had around rural Alberta that Albertans really appreciated the role that the public played in this. There are always questions about how the dollars were allocated and whether or not they were allocated fairly. I've raised a few of those questions now on behalf of those farmers and those citizens who have contacted me, but in the end I think this $129 million is needed for the sector, and I hope we deal with it appropriately.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the comments made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition. I'm going to be very brief in just answering a couple of questions. One was on the figures, and yes, it was $177.9 million. However, it was a $126.8 million contribution, if you would recall, that the federal government allotted to Alberta for its share of a program for crops. The $51.1 million are some dollars that we were able to negotiate with the federal government that really were owed to us from past times. Members would recall that this government provided $10.29 per acre to producers last year with no assistance. So the 60-40 probably carries but a different way than it might be thought here. I wasn't sure if I'd been clear on how that came about.

Comments on the program of the $10.29 and the $4 an acre and whether it's done the right way. I think everybody would agree that if you can go to a productivity or that type of a program, it probably is fairer. It's probably fair to say, too, that nobody would have cheques yet. We would still be trying to implement it or they would just be going out, instead of concluding it. The second thing would be that our administration costs for the program would not be less than 1 and a half percent, which they are for that one. The other one, which the member recognized, is that this was an emergency. It was a disaster, and we needed to respond quickly. The best answer is the one that he went on to talk about and that we have been working on, and that is an improved safety net program. Certainly I have appreciated the assistance and support that we've got since we did the drought tour with Minister Vanclief. I think his eyes were quite opened on really how serious it was in Alberta, particularly southern Alberta.

I'm going to ask for further assistance in impressing upon the federal minister that it's absolutely integral that they contribute on the safety net side to improve that program to more properly reflect the costs of production without distorting markets or without, as much as we can, encouraging bad management practices because of the safety net program. So we've been working on that makeup, trying to strike that balance and provide producers with a safety net that they can buy. They can insure themselves. They can buy it. They will have the certainty, their lender will have the certainty, and they will make the decisions themselves. Producers do not like to work with ad hoc programs. As appreciative as they were of this money, they do not like to work with that, and we're really hopeful that we can strike that balance.

The water program. We would never have been able to implement that in such a short time if it hadn't been for all the work that had been done by the PFRA; Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development; and Alberta Environment. As I have indicated in the House before, we have been working on a drought mitigation plan for this province for some time. Thanks to that work we were able to pool some elements of that program and bring it into effect very, very quickly and respond to a very, very serious need.

There is no question that we have to continue the drought mitigation, and it would be my hope that we will bring forward to the members a plan that will work on an ongoing basis. We regret that the PFRA has not been able to be a participant in dollars in a meaningful way in recent years, but we certainly are appreciative of the expertise, the engineering technicians and so on that the PFRA brings to our province and certainly their work with all of our municipal leaders or fieldmen, with us in all of our district offices, and with us here when we're trying to put forward something that will respond to good water management and mitigation of drought.

So, Mr. Chairman, I thank you for allowing me to just respond very briefly to a few of the main areas that the hon. member commented on. Again, thank you for consideration of these estimates.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am happy to have an opportunity this afternoon to respond to the 2001-2002 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund, initially talking about Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. I'll make a few comments about the Ag estimates, and then I'll make some more general remarks about supplementary supply estimates in general, specifically to do with the process and concerns that we in the Official Opposition have with some of those.

Mr. Chairman, in terms of the dollars that the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development is coming back to the House for, I also support the request in terms of the actual dollar amounts and support the dollars in the specific programs that she has asked for here. We have a couple of points, primarily on process, on this.

One is in terms of the $20 million for the Alberta farm water program. It's very good that the government is undertaking to help farmers develop long-term, on-farm water supplies to better prepare for a drought in the future. What isn't quite as good about that is the process. They're coming now, asking for $20 million in supplementary supply, when drought is not a new issue for this province. It has been I think the biggest issue that certainly I have ever heard farmers talk about in all the years that I've been around, and I come from a farming community, a dryland farming community, in fact the very same one the minister comes from. So she will believe that certainly the first things I ever heard out of a farmer's mouth were: when's it going to rain, and how are they going to get the crops in, how are they going to get them off, and what are they going to do when they dry up and blow away? So this has been a problem forever in this province, no two ways about it.

So why is it now, in supplementary estimates, that the government, if they're planning on putting together some support or long-term solutions, have to come for the money? This is a very natural kind of item to have been integrated into the general budgeting plan and focus of this government if they were taking the long-term strategy, and we would have seen it in the budget in the spring. If they weren't ready to spend the money or didn't know if they were going to be ready to spend the money, they could have put that in as a note to the financial statements without there being any problems, and we would have congratulated them on their ability to plan for the future and to anticipate the kinds of needs that are out there. So this is really a planning issue, and we see it as a problem.

It comes in here as a onetime amount. We don't see any explanation in terms of whether or not it will be one time. Will they come back again next year? Is there going to be some ongoing funding? How come there's no debate about the need for ongoing funding? It would seem to me that this is the kind of plan that may require those kinds of dollars, so let's talk about it at the first opportunity, Mr. Chairman, rather than the last opportunity, which is what we see here.

In the minister's opening comments she provided some great detail and a great number of dollar figures that explained why the dollar amount that we see in supplementary appropriations was what it was. Some funds came from the feds, some they pulled from other programs, and this is the net outcome of all of those. A problem with supplementary supply estimates is that we only see a total gross figure in these books at this particular time with no detail on what the breakdown is of those dollars, and that's the real downfall of the system. The government might like that because they may think it's less easy to criticize or comment on, but it's also very much less helpful for anybody who's associated with this process, including the end users who are the recipients of the funds.

So we would like to suggest that the government take a little more proactive action. Here we have a minister who does the right thing when she comes in here and explains the dollars. She gives us the detail, but it would be even better, Mr. Chairman, if we could see that kind of detail come in these supplementary estimates, if we could see it on the actual page that explains the program funding or could see it on the page opposite that, where they give the reasons that the supplementary estimates are requested. We have a very condensed form of information here, and certainly that detail could have been put in place.

If the information isn't available prior to the printing of these supplementary estimates, then certainly the minister could table the information in the legislation or at the very least have the courtesy to supply it to the appropriate critic in the opposition at a time when we're taking a look at reviewing these. The information is helpful. I think there isn't a member of cabinet who would disagree that for the most part, when the dollars they come and ask for in supplementary supply are unusual items or new additional items based on new additional information, we support the request for the dollars. It's only when there's a blatant case of mismanagement or an improper kind of planning that we have a problem with supplementary supply dollars. The process often we have huge problems with but not the actual request for the money. If we could ask, then, this minister to lead the rest of cabinet in terms of supplying that detail in a written form prior to these estimates being debated, that would be very helpful.

I would like to know at this time if there are any other long-term water projects that are in the works for this government. If so, will we see those budgeted amounts coming forward any time soon? Even just in terms of strategic planning as opposed to actual on-the-ground dollars that are going to be expended in the near future, that kind of information is very helpful to us.

Also in terms of the water supply situation for the droughts, what is this minister doing to work with or to apply for or to develop R and D projects that will help to address this problem and other water issues that we see throughout this province? It has just recently come to our attention that there was another as yet unconfirmed but potential problem with the water supply in southern Alberta this week in the Picture Butte area, where there seems to be some correlation between young children developing rashes and blister outbreaks on their skin, with the potential for water contamination. In fact, the information provided to us would indicate that it was quite serious in nature and that they were testing for E. coli bacteria in the water supply.

Those are the kinds of issues that we're seeing increasingly happen throughout this province, and they need some attention. This is not to cast any blame on the government in this particular instance. This is to raise the issue that it is a time for us to seriously look at finding solutions to water quality problems in this province. For the most part, we have excellent water quality, but there are spots in the province, not just in southern Alberta but along the Alberta/Saskatchewan border and in the Peace block, where we have had recurring serious water problems. It isn't enough to try and solve those after they happen, Mr. Chairman. We need to be way more proactive in that. We need to start to see some serious R and D money go into finding solutions for these kinds of projects.

Recently in my office and in my colleagues' offices we have seen people come forward with what would seem to be very bright ideas about water quality solutions, Mr. Chairman. Not the least of those are discoveries or inventions that are finished, in the process of being finished, or being tested, and the people have a hard time getting funding for them and a hard time carrying on in terms of the testing and development. One of those is one that many farmers would be interested in, I'm sure. That is a system that's relatively cheap to install and operate that takes the ozone out of the air. You pump it into your lagoon or the dugout that you've got your water in, and it cleans it up. That would be a replacement for using chemicals like chlorine or any of the other kinds of chemicals that people are now using for water treatment in small facilities or, in fact, in small towns. It solves two problems for us. It solves an air pollution problem in terms of excessive ozone in our air, and it cleans up the water to a point where the testing that they've done so far would indicate that the water samples, regardless of where they come from, are quite potable after the injection of the ozone.

So those are the kinds of developments that are very interesting, but the problem is that even if people are prepared to pursue these inventions on a part-time basis after work hours and on weekends and put in their own dollars to develop them, at the stage when they feel that they're marketable and need to be tested, they have to find some entry into the market, Mr. Chairman. Most of these kinds of inventions require approval by health departments and sometimes agriculture departments, and there aren't the right kinds of windows for these people to get in at this time.

So I would urge this minister, who very much understands the process of how to get R and D doors opened, to think beyond the box a little bit on this one and think about how we can solve some of these water issues by supporting research and development, not just at the up-front stage, when they need dollars, but all the way through to the outcome stages, where they need to go to various departments to get licences and approvals to make them market testable or even at least to the point where they can start to get approval to consumer test products prior to their actually hitting the market. It's a niche in development that this government is missing, and perhaps the Economic Development minister would be quite interested in getting involved in this too, because of course once these inventions are marketable, there's revenue to be had and spin-off to be had for all Albertans, and he seems to be quite keen to pursue those kinds of interests. So this is one of those integrated issues that many ministries could get involved in.

Now, I'd like to broaden my comments a little bit in terms of our concerns about supplementary supply estimates in general. We've had as the Official Opposition, Mr. Chairman . . . [interjections] You guys can get up and speak any time you want. It'd be nice to get one of you on the record just once before the session is over. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm sorry, but the frat boys continue to annoy us on a regular basis.

My comments are about supplementary supply in general, and they're about the serious issues, about the lack of explanation we get of how new spending will contribute to meeting defined outcomes and performance criteria. We know that the Auditor General has repeatedly brought concerns forward about that very issue, that dollar spending particularly in supplementary supply estimates doesn't meet defined outcomes and performance criteria. In fact, the Auditor General is on record as saying that this one-off kind of spending that we often see in supplementary supply estimates is a real problem for this government in the long term. It does a few things. It raises expectations for ministries that they can access onetime funding, which expectation, then, is raised that that funding is going to be ongoing on a regular basis when, in fact, often the dollars they dedicate are not sustainable and not available in any kind of a long-term fashion. It raises expectations of the recipients of those dollars that if government gives them money once, then it's not going to be as hard to get it again the second time. But, in fact, as we've seen happen in this year, that doesn't happen; it's not the case. So those are the kinds of issues that we would like the government to address.

Planning within the government's budgeting process is a problem. I spoke a little bit about that specifically to the agriculture estimates. There is no way that a government should have to come back more than once a year, which is what this government does, Mr. Chairman. As you well know, they come back once in the spring for sure, sometimes twice in the spring, for supplementary supply dollars and once in the fall. There is no way, if they were planning properly, that we would see this happening.

They come back at this particular time for a huge amount of dollars. Why couldn't they budget for these amounts? Most of these expenses are recurring expenses every single year. Now, I know we're going to hear from the ministers that for the drought program nobody can anticipate how many dollars. That's true. The exact amount of dollars you can't anticipate. Can you anticipate in this province that there is a high likelihood that there will be some drought relief required? Yes. If you took a five-year average, you would see that in three out of five years there is some sort of drought assistance required at some point in this province. So what they need to do is start taking those long-term views. Take a look at what has happened historically, project what's going to be needed, and put funds in place to adequately fund these kinds of problems when they occur.

Exactly the same issue with fire – and I'll talk about that when we get to Sustainable Resource Development. Has there been a time in this province when we haven't had a fire? No. So figure out on average how much that is going to cost you, build it into the budget and build those kind of funds like we talked about in terms of the stability fund so that they can be addressed.

It isn't rocket science, Mr. Chairman, no matter what this government thinks. Industry has been doing this for absolutely decades. If we had a board of directors or CEOs of companies coming back to their companies two or three times a year with requests that totaled more than 1 percent or 5 percent or 10 percent of their annual budget, those people would get turfed out of their jobs, because that is not performance in any kind of a fashion. It's unacceptable. Why people accept it from their government is completely beyond me. Governments probably operate in that fashion because they can get away with it, but it isn't responsible, it isn't accountable, and it isn't the manner in which this Premier leads us to believe that he would like to operate this particular government. Yet we see this happening two, three times a year.

I think that one year we had a record. They came back three times in the spring, if I remember correctly. So that's a real issue. When the government should be doing what they say they do and what the Government Accountability Act says it does, which are the three-year plans, we see a government who actually plans on a three-month plan. Every three months they need more money.

It's a huge problem with the way the government operates, and it is not just us who are concerned about this, Mr. Chairman. We have it outlined, actually, in the Auditor General's annual report in the year 2000-2001 when he talks about the ministry business plans and the problems this government has in meeting them. We see that happening right here. He states that there are problems with costing core businesses and that "approximately one third of ministries did not adequately link costs to ministry core businesses." This is exactly what we have here when we take a look at the agriculture estimates that are more specifically up for debate right now.

The Auditor General goes on to list, Mr. Chairman, what those deficiencies are, and what he talks about there is "not identifying costs for some core businesses." [interjections] I hear a little chirping in the Assembly, Mr. Chairman. I know that we have got some accountants in this crowd, and I'm sure that they'll be happy to leap to their feet and join me in stating that this is not the proper way for businesses to run.

So he says, "Not identifying costs for some core businesses," which we saw in the ag estimates. He states that a problem is "presenting cost information for businesses other than the stated core businesses." I don't remember that Agriculture said that one of their core businesses is water/drought control. That isn't one of their core businesses. They are facilitating that process, and that is quite different.

I'll return, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the supplementary estimates of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll just make a handful of comments again reflecting my travels around the province and talking to people in various rural areas. It's pretty obvious that the drought conditions that have been the primary stimulus for these increases in expenditure are unevenly shared across the province and are concentrated in a handful of areas. These are areas that certainly in the last few years and in some cases for many decades have been prone to drought. It raises the question for me: how are we managing our predictions of this when we get caught having to bring in another $130 million or so in funding a mere six months into the fiscal year? Clearly, it's difficult to predict weather, but in some ways we should be able to predict climate.

I know that in speaking to farmers around the province, farmers who are in areas that are generally successful most years, say, farmers in areas of central Alberta or through the Edmonton/Calgary corridor and so on, after a while raise concerns about the ongoing subsidies going to dryland farmers or farmers in drought areas, not that they're feeling resentful, but there is a concern that at some point we're sustaining production on land that should not any longer be in production. Is there any consideration going on in the longer term to taking some of this land out of production so that we are not faced with, say, six or seven years out of 10 having to provide drought support?

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

So the main thrust of my comments on the agricultural side are having to do with how we get out of this ongoing requirement to support farmers in a drought area. Are we looking at getting the land out of production? Are we looking at changes in production? Should we be looking at, as some farmers have suggested to me, simply letting the unviable farmers go under. I think that's a pretty harsh and unthoughtful approach to take, but I know that there are people in this province and, in fact, people whose opinions on agriculture I respect who would say simply: after a certain point let these farms go under. I'm not prepared to take that position right now, but if we are in a period of tightening fiscal constraints and if we find that year after year the same areas of the province are requiring subsidies, I think at some point we're going to have to say: do we want to continue, or do we want to get ourselves out of this?

MS BLAKEMAN: Wouldn't that be priority setting?

DR. TAFT: It is a matter of setting priorities. Certainly farmers are priorities for us, and farm communities are a priority, and they have suffered badly in some cases under policies that have closed down health care facilities, consolidated schools, and generally weakened those communities. So there are many sides to this issue.

For the moment in this debate I'll stand with probably the majority of the rest of us and support this supplement, but in the longer term I would really encourage the government to look closely at ways to break this pattern, either by bringing the farms up to a sustainable level or taking the land out of production.

I'll save the rest of my comments on the entire process for later in the debate, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: After considering the supplementary estimates for the Department of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

Agreed to:

Operating Expense and Capital Investment	$129,519,000
--	---------------

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

Health and Wellness

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. MAR: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I'll make my comments brief. In aggregate the supplementary estimate being requested is $118.7 million. This is made up as follows. After the April budget announcement the 9.6 percent increase in health authorities' base funding did not appear to meet population growth and aging and the higher cost of staff and equipment, and $200 million in onetime funding was set aside for such authorities. New business plans are being developed on how health authorities will be able to meet their responsibilities without this additional funding in the coming fiscal year. Also, $10.9 million is being requested for the immunization program that was applied for meningitis. Following that, there was a $92.2 million fiscal adjustment, where on October 18 Health and Wellness adjusted expenditures by this amount as part of a governmentwide fiscal adjustment. That $92.2 million is made up as follows: $40 million from the health authority base budgets, $12.2 million from the department base budget, and $40 million from onetime energy rebates, for a total of $92.2 million. Accordingly, if you add $200 million plus $10.9 million for immunization and take a $92.2 million adjustment out, the net amount is the $118.7 million being requested, and that is what is before us for consideration.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a privilege to rise to discuss these supplementary estimates for 2001-2002. I will make a range of comments on these, starting with the general concern of how quickly we have seen the fiscal ground shift in terms of the provincial government's management of its money. There is almost a sense of crisis – not crisis; I don't want to overstate it – a sense of very serious, serious concern about how resources are being managed by the Department of Health and Wellness and by the regional health authorities and a sense that there is nothing reliable anymore in terms of predicting expenditures or managing expenditures or predicting or managing revenues.

On the revenue side, after so many years of surpluses – I can't remember what it is now, seven or eight consecutive years of surpluses – within a very few months of tight times arriving in the province, we are into constraints and, indeed, cuts in health care, and it's exasperating. I think the citizens of Alberta are tired of government living from paycheque to paycheque and having a sense that so quickly people's requirements for health care are affected by events that unfold, say, in the Middle East or in other parts of the world, how the length of time somebody is left on a waiting list goes up and down with the price of crude oil and natural gas.

So there's that context for this document and the estimates that we're debating today, and so much of it has been predictable. I know that I was at a one-day conference at the University of Alberta on September 7 at the business school there. It was organized by the economics department at the U of A. The theme of the conference was: Alberta managing in an era of postdebt budgets. The idea initially seemed to be that there was going to be so much money for all kinds of projects that we wouldn't know what to do with it, but it was apparent from the very first paper presented that times were tightening, that there was an unsustainable combination of policies in place from this government, a combination of hurried debt pay-down and accelerated debt payoff, falling energy royalties, corporate tax cuts, flat taxes, and spending increases, and that these combinations of things were not sustainable. So these kinds of problems were being foreseen even in the academic community – which, I'll admit, is often a bit slow to respond to things – some months ago.

There is a difficult context out there generally, and more specifically I am concerned with the trends relating to this department and the management of this department. As legislators we voted on the budget here on I believe it was the 31st of May. We gave final approval to the budget. Then six weeks later or thereabouts there was a $200 million increase to that budget, and then in late August there was an announcement by the major regional health authorities that they were going to be running deficits. Then in early October, as the minister explained, there was a cut, and now today we are debating supplements. So in a period of five months or so there have been four substantial changes to the budget, and it really does raise for me serious questions about budget control in the department.

I've worked in the health care field off and on for, I hate to say it, close to 30 years, 29 years, something like that. One of my first professional jobs was working on planning for new health care facilities and doing the population projections. We weren't quite using slide rules then; we actually had calculators. We would spend hours – this was as a consultant – with calculators doing the population projections: breaking the population down by age groups and projecting various migration levels, high, medium, and low migration levels; working in the inflation rates; and then projecting health care demands and health care costs on that basis. I'm not sure who's doing that function anymore, whether it's the regional health authorities themselves or the department, but when a mere six weeks or so after this Assembly approves a budget there is a requirement for a $200 million increase because of failing to take population growth or aging or migration into account or failing to take inflation into account, it tells me that something in the budget control process either at the department level or in the regional health authorities is not working the way it should.

There was a time when hospitals, hospital boards, or hospital facilities that looked like they were going to be running into a deficit were monitored closely enough by the department that the management actually was called into the budget bureau at the department of hospitals in those days and was put on the spot well in advance of deficits actually appearing and told: if you do not take corrective action, you're going to be running a deficit. Now there's a concern that in some ways the regional health authorities, especially the two major ones – and don't take this as an outright attack on the regions; I think they're in many ways very good organizations – have become so big and so powerful that there's a sense that the Edmonton and Calgary regional health authorities are driving the system and that the department itself is struggling to keep the regional health authorities accountable.

This is, I think, compounded by things that have occurred within the department over the last several years. For example, in the last eight years there have been seven deputy ministers of health, and there's a loss of continuity there that really creates problems. There's a failure for a reliable and trustworthy or predictable management structure to settle down. There's a failure for leadership to be able to take hold in that department. As a result, we end up with the kinds of fiscal questions that are here today. There have been at times changes in the management of the department that go much beyond the deputy minister. They go down through the assistant deputy ministers and even to the director level so that after the debates on Bill 11 we saw a large number of managers in that department simply replaced. As a result, the department lost its corporate memory. Certainly some very strong people left the department, and those who were brought in didn't have the experience, the history with the issues to be able to stay on top of them.

So when I listened today and in the last few days to a policy being developed that will allow the regional health authorities to accumulate deficits from one year to the next and put forward plans to pay those down, I think that people with a longer term memory of the system will look back and say: that's exactly what was allowed to be done in the 1970s and early 1980s. The result is that the regional health authorities just allow their deficits to build and build and build, and sooner or later the provincial government is on the hook for those deficits. That's a policy that's developing today that I think history will teach us and indeed can teach us is a mistake in policy. Sooner or later taxpayers pay for it. It's a cost that arises, I feel, to some substantial degree from a weakness in the management of the department.

As we begin to zero in more specifically on the $118 million appropriation, I think everybody here is going to say: "Well, good. Good for the department for taking the initiative and supporting the inoculations for meningitis." Any of us who know people who have had meningitis or have followed the course of that disease with any care at all realize it's a terrifying disease with very high mortality rates. Tragically, people who survive are often seriously, seriously disabled. I know of cases where children with meningitis have survived but have had to have all their limbs amputated. Well, that's a terrible, terrible situation, and there are all kinds of other complications from meningitis. So I would fully endorse and I'm sure everybody here will fully endorse that sort of initiative. Indeed, it may well be that investing that $10.9 million in immunization is in fact saving us all kinds of money in the long term, so I think that's a terrific expenditure.

When we look at the remaining, as the minister explains it, increases and decreases and ultimately the remaining $107.8 million, my concern is not that that's too much money or that we're going above budget. My concern is more that I don't feel confident that we really know whether that's too much or too little, because we don't have and we haven't established a solid baseline. There have been so many changes in funding for health care over the last eight years that we don't have historical norms by which we can judge today's level of spending. In fact, I would take that back. We do have historical norms, but they are from the years before the current government took hold. Say, if we look at the 10-year interval from 1983 to 1992, we will see that health care spending, adjusting for population and inflation, was moving up and down in a pretty narrow range. Indeed, I would put forward to the minister that that's about the level at which a well-managed health care system for Alberta should be sustained and can be sustained.

I'm not going to say that this money shouldn't be spent. It may well be spent, and it is in the overall scheme of things a fairly small percentage on a $6 billion budget. So whether we use per capita spending as adjusted for inflation and go back to, say, the 10 years before the current government was in place or whether we use health care spending as a percentage of GDP, which is a standard level – by either of those measures we are in this year's budget more or less within normal ranges. I'm not going to be saying that we shouldn't spend this money or that we should. I'm going to say that it's within normal ranges, so I would support it. I guess I will be saying that we should be spending it.

I won't go into discussing in any depth my concerns for the future levels of spending. I'm sure the minister is motivated to manage within levels of funding that are currently available. Assuming those are adjusted for a growing population and for inflation and with a very small adjustment for aging, maybe 1 percent a year or 1.4 percent a year, we should, if we are disciplined and strong in our management, be able to keep a viable and vibrant and effective health care system going in this province indefinitely.

That exhausts my comments on these estimates. I will say that I'll be supporting this bill and encourage the minister to keep the system on track so that we're not back here with another round of supplements six months from now.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased this afternoon to have an opportunity to make a few comments about the estimates for Health and Wellness that are before us and before the House. One of the items that I have a great deal of sympathy for, of course, is the almost $11 million that has been put into the budget to extend the immunization program for children under 24 months in terms of meningitis. I think it's just a great move, and I say that with a great deal of self-interest, having a grandson who was able to take advantage of that program and is now protected against meningitis. I think that you'll find broad support across the province for supplementary estimates being used for that kind of expense.

It was obvious for some time that there was concern about getting a vaccine that was safe, and it took some time to develop. I'm not sure, but I think it's the case that at budget time there was no way that the government or the department could have known that this opportunity would present itself and that a vaccine would be made available and that it would be in place as early as it is. So I really support the $11 million.

The Auditor General made some comments about the Health and Wellness budget. One of the criticisms he made is that the department continually spends more money on our health system without knowing the value of the extra spending. I think this is an exception to that criticism. This is an expenditure that we certainly do know the value of, not only in prevention but in terms of ease of minds of parents and family members who are concerned about meningitis and the kinds of outbreaks that we've had in the community and now having protection for young children that was not previously available.

One of the concerns, of course – and it's a concern that's raised every time the supplementary estimates are before us – is the concern about business plans and the value of business plans. We spend at budget time a great deal of time poring over budget plans and trying to understand them, trying to take in the kinds of objectives that the departments have and match those objectives with the dollars that they are projecting. It's work that, I think, most members of the House take very seriously. We expend a considerable amount of resources on our research staff poring over those plans, trying to assure ourselves that the money is being well spent and that, in fact, we are raising the kinds of issues that should be raised in budget consideration, only to find that supplementary estimates come along and those plans in some part are cast aside. It does call into question the business plans.

I think it's, again, something that the Auditor General has commented on. One of the comments he made was that he doesn't think it's management that's thwarting the business plans from being useful. He doesn't go on to say whom he does think it is, but I think the implications are rather clear. The number of supplementary requests for money has been considerable over the time that I've been in the Assembly, and as I said, every time one of those comes forward, it really calls into question all the hard work that's been done in budget preparation and trying to understand the budget.

The onetime transitional funding to health authorities: I was listening, but I'm not sure I'm clear as to exactly what that money is going to be used for. Again, it's going to be interesting to see how the new health authorities with elected boards approach fiscal management, whether the election of people at large makes a difference in terms of how those boards are managed and the impact eventually on supplementary estimates. Will it result in better planning at the local level and hence at the central budget? Certainly one hopes that that might be the case, that the introduction of public members to those authorities will be a healthy thing in terms of the operation of those authorities and their ability to match costs and revenues.

One of the other comments, Mr. Chairman, is some concern or some question about the criteria that the government uses in determining whether or not unbudgeted spending is necessary. I think, as I said, that the case here for the immunization program is clear, but the rest of it in this budget and in other estimates that are before us this afternoon are not nearly as clear. So it would be interesting to have the criteria that is used by the government made explicit. I'm sure there has to be within departments something rather than ad hoc arrangements for making requests, that it is based on criteria that are defensible. [A beeper sounded]

DR. TAYLOR: Ask for unanimous consent to continue.

DR. MASSEY: I don't need it. I still have 10 minutes. But thank you. Sorry; I was interrupted, Mr. Chairman.

So making that criteria explicit I think would be useful to the Assembly, particularly when we have before us budgets such as this. I think I'll conclude with those comments.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. [interjections]

MS BLAKEMAN: Oh, thank you. Thank you for the support. I'm pleased to get an opportunity to comment on the supplementary estimate for the Department of Health and Wellness. This is an issue that touches every elected official, I think, particularly those in the provincial and the federal spheres. It's been interesting in my five years watching the progression of what's being offered through health care in Alberta and people's attitude towards it and even the government's attitude towards it.

When I first started, it was possible for people to be recognized as being really in need of assistance and through some misunderstanding they hadn't gotten to the place they should be on the list. As MLAs you could try and help them there, and my office was very successful. I'd say that about two years ago the ability to do that stopped. As it was very succinctly put to me: "Look; you know, all 15 people on this waiting list are as sick as they can possibly be. They're all an emergency; they're all urgent. Your person is no sicker than the other 14, so there's no moving them around on a list. They're all really sick." What we've ended up with is a system where by the time people get into it, they are so ill that they're all in there together. So our attitude towards the health care system has changed, and what we think it's for and at what point health care comes into people's lives has changed.

When I'm looking at this supplementary budget, there are two areas that are being covered here. One is the almost $11 million for the meningitis immunization program. Then there is sort of money in, money out, money around, and we end up with a shakedown figure of $118.7 million, which is going into general health, I would say. But it's arrived at by extra money that was put in, then some was taken out, and then the energy rebates that were promised didn't happen, so that money was withdrawn. That's money going into the general health care system, and I think this is where there are a lot of lessons to be learned. Certainly the Auditor General has repeatedly used the Department of Health and Wellness as an example of what not to do and is expressing real concern about this because we have this repeated onetime funding, this repeated: well, we'll just put money in to cover this. The Auditor General's point is that you keep doing that and it becomes expected.

On the other side of this I look at – and we had a question today in question period about it – the downloading of the provincial deficit onto the RHAs and the school boards and the children's authorities, and that in fact is what is happening.

Let me take a step back here. When this particular government came into power in the early '90s, they were going to restructure health care, and I was looking forward to that because I think we did need a restructured health care program. What we got from it was another layer of bureaucracy, called the regional health authorities, that also allowed the government to take a step back and to shunt off responsibility. So for quite a long time when we asked questions in the House here, the response was: that's not us; that's the RHAs; ask the RHAs. Well, we did ask the RHAs, who went: well, sorry; that's the best we can do because that's the only money that we're getting. So back to the government and ask the government why they're not giving them so much money. Okay? So we would duly follow that through, and despite the number of times that the government tried to sort of say, "It has nothing to do with us; that's the RHA decision-making process," it isn't, in fact. If you're not given enough money to budget properly from the beginning and to do three-year plans and long-range plans and performance measurements and targets and outcomes, if you don't have enough money to provide the service that you are authorized to do or expected to do, yeah, you're going to have trouble and you're going to be running a deficit.

I think it's odd that the government had to pass a law to keep itself from racking up a deficit. I would have thought that was obvious, but this government needs to have a law to restrain itself. So, okay, they passed a law, and in doing so, they have to get rid of that deficit somewhere, so they end up squeezing these second-layer organizations, in some cases delegated administrative organizations, but second layers of responsibility: the regional health authorities, the children's authorities, school boards. Municipalities are the other place it's happening.

So we didn't get a restructured system except for this extra layer of responsibility-taking, which they really couldn't do because they weren't getting enough money. They have consistently since '93 been unable to budget appropriately and have needed I think every year – I'm sure the minister would know and can correct me on that – additional funding to be injected into the budget to take care of it. You know, we've had a lot of figures thrown around here about whether health care spending is in a crisis and is spiraling out of control, and this is all sounding really early '90s to me. In fact, then we found out that health care costs weren't spiraling out of control. They had been reduced in the budget every year since 1986, so where was the spiraling out of control? Nonetheless, we had massive cuts.

Now we're being told again that we're approaching the 50 percent mark of the total government budget that could be spent on health care. Or what's the other figure we hear? Thirty five?

DR. TAFT: No. Even 100.

MS BLAKEMAN: Oh, 100 percent. Okay.

In fact, we've also got other figures that show that we're not out of control here. We're just not using the resources in a very efficient manner, and that does have to do with having some sort of consistency and stability to allow you to plan so that we don't have to keep injecting this, you know, $118.7 million. Now, that figure, again, is arrived at by some sort of interesting financial alchemy. Nonetheless, it turns up in the budget as $118.7 million. So we don't have a health care department or a health care system that is capable at this point of planning for the future, of dealing with its responsibilities now. It's not structured in a way that lends itself to that, and we have a public who's very unhappy with the way health care services are being delivered.

Now, let me stop there and talk a little bit about performance measurements. One of the things this government started out to do – and I think it's a good thing to do – is to set itself performance measurements to measure its progress. So you're going to have a benchmark of where you start and then measure your progress in accomplishing your goals, and you've got to have some targets about how you're going to do that. Over and over and over again this government sets its performance measurements by opinion poll, which I find really odd. So you get these surveys about, you know, how satisfied were people. Well, of course, ask somebody coming out of the hospital: how satisfied are you with health care? "Oh, you know, it's good. I didn't die." "Okay. Great. I'm glad you're so satisfied with it."

But that's not giving us a realistic picture of how long it took the person to get into the hospital, how long they waited in the corridor to get a bed. Were they able to get the appropriate tests? Were they seen by the correct specialist within a given period of time? Were too many tests ordered? There are all kinds of other performance measurements that can be used to describe whether someone is receiving appropriate care and whether there's good value for money in the health care system beyond an opinion poll of whether they were satisfied. Of course anyone that makes it out of the hospital is satisfied. Well, yeah. They got out of the hospital. So, yeah, you're going to score high.

The Minister of Justice is speaking to me, and I'm sure he'll leap to his feet and help to debate on this budget as soon as I'm finished.

So I'm talking about a business plan that needs to be followed and adhered to. We need stability in funding and consistency in funding for a good plan to be developed, and you need those measurements and targets to be able to test how you're doing and look at how you're doing in delivering that particular service. We don't even have those performance measurements. We've got opinion polls, which isn't helping us with anything.

One of the other things that's occurred to me recently is that when the cuts first happened sort of in '93-94, a lot of people that were involved in the system – and I'm talking the health care system and other departments that were cut fairly dramatically at that time – really worked hard to pick up the pieces, to go the extra mile, to put in 150 percent. Eventually they stopped doing that, and I'm going to be really interested to see whether this time when there is another so-called crisis – and I've yet to be convinced that there is another crisis here – those people will step in again, and I think they won't. I think they've figured out that they are just disguising the problems the government is in. When you've got people that will work undocumented overtime hours, when they go that extra mile and the system is not aware that that time is being put in, that that money is being spent by a person and donated back into the system, you don't have a true picture of the cost of what's going on.

I know from speaking to some doctors that at that time they'd stay late every night. They'd phone around to all the hospitals and clinics and they'd try and get their patient in, the one that was sitting in the corridor or whatever. One guy said: "You know, I just realized that I could do this forever, and I stopped doing it. I just go home to my family now. I work my full day. I even work more than that, and then I go home, because I am never going to be able to get all of my patients in anymore. That time is gone. It's past. All I'm going to do is make myself sick and be less of a good doctor because of all this time I'm spending chasing after beds for my patients." So he just decided that that's it. He's not going to do that extra work, that hidden work, that hidden time and money that's supporting the system but is never accounted for.

I'm interested to see what's going to happen this time, and I think the people that are in the system are not going to support it again. They're not going to cover up. They're not going to put in that overtime anymore. Maybe, as a result of that, we will actually see what the system costs and we can actually get down to some realistic planning and understand exactly how much time and money this system costs us.

Now, I look at this additional money that's going into health care. We've really had quite a spiking of money going into health care over the last 10 years.

DR. TAFT: Yo-yo.

MS BLAKEMAN: A yo-yo effect. Thank you. That's probably more accurate.

We have been putting more money into the system in the last couple of years, but are we able to measure whether this is giving us a better system? I would contend that it doesn't. It's all the more puzzling when we now hear that despite all that money going in, we have the two largest regional health authorities with a combined deficit, after all of the accounting has been done and all of the ins and outs and the financial alchemy have been done, of $50 million. That's astonishing, absolutely astonishing. It is a downloading from the provincial budget onto these RHAs and the children's health authorities.

That's one of the things that I'm most interested to not see – and I'll underline not – in this 2001-2002 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund, that there's no money in here for Children's Services. We're putting extra money into Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, Health and Wellness, Justice, Learning, Sustainable Resource Development, and then a number of areas under the Legislative Assembly. Support to the Legislative Assembly: I suspect that must be the additional pension money. Office of the Chief Electoral Officer: well, that makes sense; we had an election. Office of the Ethics Commissioner: I think that's because the Ethics Commissioner and the FOIP Commissioner were split, and there would have been expenses in separating the administration of those two offices. There's no Children's Services on that list, so how important are children in this province? I guess they're not. We've got children's authorities that are running deficits as well, but for some reason the government is not going to put money in there. Interesting comment.

So I'm going to support this money going in because I think – you know, I really don't want to do this. I don't think it's right to support time after time after time this kind of shabby management, and every time we approve one of these supplementary estimates, we allow that poor management. We allow this: "Whoops; got it wrong; just a sec; let me shovel some more money in there to make it all come out so that we've got a balanced budget." Well, that's not balanced budgeting. It isn't, not if you can go and dig money out of some pocket and stick it back in to give yourself a zero-base budget. It's poor management. This is our health care system, and I expected better.

This government has been in power 30 years. You guys are supposed to know how to do this. It seems to me you get worse every year. Let's look at what's happened over the years with however many supplementary supplies we've had. You know, between '86 and '93 the Treasurer of the day had seven special warrants, for a total of $2.1 billion. When we look between the 1992-93 fiscal year and '96-97, six different special warrants authorizing – oh, that's a bargain. That was only needing to authorize a total of $611 million. Then between 1996 and the '99-2000 year we, again, had seven extra moneys. Look at this: there are two that were called for in '97-98, two that were called for in '98-99, and two that were called for in '99-2000, for a humdinger total of $2.9 billion. They're not getting better; they're getting worse. Wait for this. In the last fiscal year, for the 2000-01 year – and we'd had two different Treasurers – we're at $1.4 billion. That's amazing. We're at almost half from two appropriations compared to six or seven appropriations from other Treasurers. Astounding. We're not getting better at this; we're getting worse. We need more and more money to dig ourselves out of the lack of planning and management that's happened.

So you know what? I don't think I am going to vote for this. I know that this is money in health care and we all want to support that, but frankly I can't support this kind of shabby management and shabby budgeting.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Shame.

MS BLAKEMAN: Shameful. Absolutely. I agree with my colleagues from the government side. It is shameful. I can't support that year after year after year, and I'm not going to support it.

DR. TAYLOR: Well, obviously you don't support it because there are only seven of you and 74 of us.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, it's interesting that the Minister of Environment is wondering why the government side gained more members and the opposition side lost members. I would have been very, very interested to see what would have happened in that election had the government members actually fessed up to what their mandate was. If the government had actually been out there on the campaign trail talking about how they were going to vote themselves a pension package or talking about how they were going to cut money from social services and preventative . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. member, the allocated time has run out.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd also like to make a few comments today on supplementary estimates. As the Member for Edmonton-Centre was doing such a fine job when her time ran out, I'd also like to point out the same observations when we talk about special warrants between the years of '86 to '93. We talk about appropriations from 1992 to '97. We talk about the Treasurer of the day from 1996 to 2000, who had supplementary estimates of close to $3 billion. Here we are in the year 2000-2001 asking for supplementary estimates in the neighbourhood of $1.4 billion. As the Member for Edmonton-Riverview said earlier, this is a matter of serious concern.

Now, when we look specifically at the Department of Health and Wellness and see that there is a $6 billion budget there and they are requesting an additional $118.7 million, I certainly would never not support this money going to these programs, where they are so desperately needed. It is a situation, Mr. Chairman, where we certainly can look at the needs of our health authorities and their money requests. At the same time I think we also have to look at what has been said over the years as far as the way we do business in the Department of Health and Wellness.

I look first of all at the Auditor General's report, and I'm quoting here from page 6, Mr. Chairman. This is from the 2000-2001 annual report. In this particular paragraph the Auditor General goes on to say:

In this year's report, you will read that the Department continually spends more money on our health system without knowing the value of that extra spending. The primary risk for the Department, regional health authorities, and physicians is that costs will escalate but results won't improve. Although the health budget continually and rapidly increases, supplementary funding is commonly used and one-time funding is now chronic. The principle that we follow as individuals, of managing within the resources we have, does not seem to apply.

Those words were from the most recent Auditor General's report about this particular department.

Now, then, earlier today a number of us were at the AAMDC convention, where we heard the Premier talking. The Premier was talking about the Mazankowski report and how they had a number. In this particular case, Mr. Chairman, he did indicate that the Mazankowski report was compiled by authorities from all over the world. Yet this report, that was supposed to be so great – and perhaps it is; I don't know. I haven't been able to see a copy of it yet. Certainly a copy was leaked to the Calgary Herald, it's my understanding, and it isn't there. I guess the thing that concerned me most about the Premier's comments today was how he's indicating that there is going to be a quick implementation of the recommendations of that report.

Now, then, if we had anything, Mr. Chairman, absolutely anything – any cost analysis, anything that shows we're going to have an improvement in services to Albertans, anything that indicates that the health of Albertans is going to improve, and anything that indicates that the demand on our health care system would be reduced by following these recommendations – if we had anything in regards to this, then certainly Albertans would support this. But to certainly go ahead and indicate that we are going to have massive changes without the analysis, without the studies being done, is totally wrong.

It seems that I am not the only one that has these concerns. Again I want to go back to the Auditor General's report. He took a summary, and I'll just refer to this summary: "For example, the following summary is taken word for word from my 1997-1998 annual report. What I said three years ago still applies." Now, doesn't this give you great concern when this department has had three years to react to the Auditor General's report? After he quotes what he had said three years ago, he goes on to say: "I do not believe that management ignores my audits and recommendations. Management agrees with recommendations and tries to implement them. However, progress is unsatisfactory."

So we have here recommendations, in fact 25 pages of recommendations in his report on this particular department, and we find ourselves back here again asking for more money. Certainly this is a tough situation from our point of view, that we are continually being asked to approve supplementary estimates for departments that haven't budgeted properly, particularly when we see the yo-yo effect that has happened since our budget was released in March and since it was approved at the end of May. We do have a serious problem here. We do have a serious problem when the two largest health authorities in this province are running deficits. Of course, as we continue to cut back departments and if the price of oil and natural gas continues to fall and we get back to the days when Dick Johnston was our Treasurer and trying to deal with oil at $10 a barrel and meet the costs that seem to be escalating, then what is going to happen at this particular juncture? How is this government going to deal with that? Are we going to see more and more cuts to our health care system?

I also was quite interested in another issue, The Future: Meeting Priorities, Sharing Benefits, Budget 2001. This is the second-quarter activity report. I notice on page 6, Promoting Health and Wellness:

Health care is important to all Albertans. That's why the Alberta Government continues to search for innovative ways to improve the health system and address the needs and priorities of Albertans.

In the Second Quarter, the government continued to focus on the health of Albertans.

And if we look at the third bullet in this particular issue, this is one thing that disturbs me. It "provided emergency response support for the BP Canada Fort Saskatchewan ethane cavern storage fires and the Barrington blowout west of Zama." Now, why is this department absorbing those costs?

MS BLAKEMAN: A blowout in Zama here under health care?

MR. BONNER: A blowout, yes, in this particular report. Now, why are we covering the costs that should have been covered by the private provider? So, yes, there are, Mr. Chairman, serious problems here with this whole idea of supplementary estimates.

It's also quite interesting to note that some of the members on the opposite side have increased their vocabulary.

MS BLAKEMAN: Oh, have they?

MR. BONNER: Yes. They're up to one signal now.

Now, then, I also noted that when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre was talking, she referred to the fact that here in Alberta we cannot run a deficit. The Liberals fully agree with that, and we never would, but what we seem to forget, Mr. Chairman, is that it wasn't the Liberals that created this enormous debt.

MS BLAKEMAN: Who did?

MR. BONNER: Who did? Well, you know what? It wasn't this present government, but it must have been the government before this government, because we just don't seem to be able to say that this enormous debt that we are still working hard to pay off – and as the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East and Leader of the Official Opposition pointed out today, we are sitting on over $2 billion to pay off the debt, to pay off issues that are coming due next October. We are sitting on that kind of money when in fact we have programs that are being cut, when in fact we have supplementary estimates that are asking for $1.4 billion.

Mr. Chairman, in closing, I have to say that we haven't done a very good job this year, not when we are coming back to this House and asking for $1.4 billion, which is half of what other governments in this province that have used supplementary estimates have asked for. So it is time for this government to seriously look at these recommendations of the Auditor General and certainly to follow the talk that they give us about good management and to certainly be better caretakers of those hard-earned dollars that Albertans supply to this government.

Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. With all that clapping, I wish I had more to say, but what I wanted to put on the record was that I think my colleagues have done a very commendable job and a very thorough job of discussing the health care estimates. I won't add anything to that, but I would like to point out that it is Natalie the page's birthday, and we would like to wish her a very happy birthday.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. MAR: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I listened very carefully to the comments made by the hon. members for Edmonton-Riverview and Edmonton-Mill Woods and noted also the birthday greetings from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

I heard a number of words that caught my attention, particularly from Edmonton-Riverview, when he talked about the combination of factors that are challenging the sustainability of government programs, including health care spending. I'm glad that he recognizes that sustainability is an important factor that we must consider in drafting our policy. I should say that sustainability is often used in talking about health care but not often defined, and I would suggest that the definition of sustainability is that it is to employ our finances and our human resources in health care in such a way that we meet the needs of current generations of Albertans, in such a way that we do not impair the ability of future generations to do the same thing.

I noted also that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods talked about the Auditor General's comments on ensuring that we get value out of our health care dollars spent, and he noted, as did the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, that the immunization program for vaccination against meningitis was indeed a very cost-effective measure. I trust that we can expect from both these members future reforms that may come forward that will focus on outcomes as opposed to merely activity in our health care system.

I should note also that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre commented on the need to look at outcomes and not simply patient surveys of satisfaction rates. While those types of surveys are important, Mr. Chairman, I should note that they cannot form the only basis for the development of policy, and to that extent I agree with her. I listened also to the constructive comments put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Chairman, having taken note of those comments, I would now like to call the vote on the supplementary estimates for the Department of Health and Wellness.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: After considering the supplementary estimates for the Department of Health and Wellness, are you ready for the vote?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Operating expense and capital investments, $118,743,000. Are you agreed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: No.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Carried.

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:48 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

Justice

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Justice.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The supplementary estimates that were tabled in the House really say almost all that needs to be said about the Justice supplementary estimate. We're looking for an extra $9 million, and as members will know, those are divided into two areas, the first being extra supply for justice of the peace compensation.

Members will know that there was a justice of the peace compensation commission, as we're required to do. That compensation commission came in with a compensation level which was higher than we had quite frankly anticipated or believed was necessary. As we're entitled to do, we brought forward compensation levels which were less than recommended by the commission with appropriate reasons therefor. In any event, the compensation levels that we brought in were higher than we anticipated, and therefore we needed the extra dollars. The $2.518 million are essentially to provide for those necessary funds. We were not expecting to have to pay at that level, and that's why the supplementary estimate is necessary and was unbudgeted.

The other $6.5 million, as members will well know, are for the compensation for legal officers, increased legal officers' compensation for hiring additional Crown prosecutors. While some might say that could've been anticipated and should've been budgeted, I would point out to members that it really only came to a head at this point in time because of the improved economy which resulted in both the federal government getting into additional hiring and paying at a level that was higher than we were paying and, as well, an arbitration award in Ontario that increased prosecutors' salaries by about $30,000.

So while it might've been argued that we should've budgeted for these supplementary dollars, I think it's reasonable to suggest that we didn't budget for them for those reasons and that it's quite appropriate to come back now and ask the Assembly for supplementary supply in those areas to accommodate the necessary increases to legal officers' compensation and hiring additional legal officers.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. That's an interesting argument that's been put forward by the Minister of Justice about why he needs to be coming back and seeking out an additional $9 million for his department.

You know, overall I'm sympathetic with the position that the minister finds himself in, because I think that justice is one of the most important things that a government provides to its people. I think that the government needs to be carefully prioritizing how it approaches the different services and programs that it offers, because this department I think has come far too close to the line of failing to meet its constitutional duties. We are obligated to make available access to justice. If access to justice is delayed too long in this country, the cases get thrown out of court. You're supposed to be seen in a timely manner; your case is to be heard in a timely manner.

One of the things that the Department of Justice is to be providing is public safety. It's not public safety if we have people that are charged with a crime – perhaps they're guilty; perhaps they're not. We don't know, because they're never going to get their court case. It gets punted because it's taken too long to get there. Why would it be taking too long to get there?

Well, let's have a look at the situation that this department has found itself in in the last year, and I'll come back later to talking about why this should have been anticipated. In the last year we've had dozens of Crown prosecutors leave, and I've heard from them. Many of them are my constituents. They've phoned me, written to me, stopped me on the street and talked to me, just stopped me in a bank lineup and talked to me once, saying: "Look. I really, really, really love my job. I love doing this. I don't mind as a lawyer being paid substantially less than my colleagues or the students I graduated from university with. I don't mind that. I love the work. I love doing the right thing for people, but I've got to be realistic. You know, I'm carrying a caseload of 500 cases when the average across Canada is 342, when I'm paid substantially less than anybody else, and if I'm going to work that hard, I need some help here. I've got to hire someone to clean my house and walk my dogs and pick up my kids after school. I can't be there to do it because I'm working 500 cases. I'm working 40 percent more cases than is average in Canada." So these Crown prosecutors were getting coaxed away. Well, it hardly took any coaxing. They were walking across the street to the next federal job that came open. They were going back into private practice. We were losing our Crown prosecutors.

Now, part of our system of giving access to justice is you get a lawyer. One is appointed for you if you don't have one, and there's a lawyer on the government side that brings forward the case. If we don't have a lawyer on the government side that's bringing forward the case, it's not coming forward, so we need those Crown prosecutors.

The second thing that's happened is that there are now 10 vacancies in the Provincial Court, and we're responsible for that. Ten vacancies. There are courtrooms where there are no judges sitting, so they can't very well hear cases; can they? Even if we had the Crown prosecutors to bring the cases forward, we don't have the judges that are sitting in the courtrooms.

Courtrooms are the next thing. We don't have enough courtrooms. This, in particular, has been a long-standing problem that should have been anticipated. That's showing up on all levels of our court system and could certainly have been anticipated two or three years back.

I think we should have been able to anticipate fairly easily what was happening to our Crown prosecutors. They started leaving here a year ago. Well, we are well into our budget planning process for the budget that's going to come out in the spring of 2002. So a year ago the minister should have been able to figure out that we were going to have a problem with Crown Prosecutors. They were already starting to leave a year ago when the minister was well into the planning process. He should have been able to anticipate that, even looking across Canada and going, "Hmm; gosh, look at the workload that these guys have got; I think I might have trouble with them soon," or even looking and comparing the salary levels. Of course, it was obvious this was going to happen.

So three things were all conspiring against us there: the Crown prosecutors leaving because of their pay scales and their workload; the lack of judges and the vacancies on the bench; and, literally, the lack of courtroom space to hold trials in and to have your cases heard in. That was truly jeopardizing Albertans' access to justice, and if that is one of the things that the government must provide to its people, I think this is an appalling example of not being able to run a good business plan and anticipate this.

When I look at what the Auditor General has to say – something can dig this ministry out, for heaven's sake. No. We have huge points being brought forward about accountability for legal services and the fines. This department cannot figure out how much money it's collecting. This recommendation has come forward from the Auditor General in the '99-2000 report and in the '94-95 report, a recommendation to "determine the results and costs of its fines collection activities." The department still hasn't done it. We don't really know how much money.

The Auditor General here is saying that "the Department collects about $100 million from approximately one million fines," but we don't really know that. "The Department needs to understand the success of its collection activities. The Department should determine the number of fines levied, collected, outstanding and written off." We don't know that.

On the one hand, we've got a government going: "Oh, we're in trouble. We've got to cut back. We're going to shovel our deficits down the line onto the municipalities and regional health authorities and children's authorities." On the other hand, they don't know how much money they're supposed to be collecting. This is a revenue source. We're not sure how much it is.

So the minister of this department has my sympathy, because I don't think he gets the support and the prioritization from his colleagues that he should. If the government is not providing public safety to its citizens, then many of the other things that government provides don't even come into the mix. The minister has my sympathy in that.

At the same time, I'm going to take him to task. I think he's probably a good administrator. I don't know how it works, but he needs to spend more time looking at how his department is administered if he's got these kinds of problems coming. These are huge problems. I hope he's not telling me that he missed these and didn't see it coming, because that doesn't speak very well to management and planning. You know, when I go and I look at the past and go, "Okay; how have we done in the past with management and planning?" whoops, we've got repeated recommendations from the Auditor General going: hey, folks, we don't know how much money we're supposed to be collecting from fines. We don't know how much we did collect, and we don't know how much we missed or lost or it was canceled or whatever.

So am I willing to support this additional money that's going into this supplementary supply for 2001-2002? In this department I am willing to support it. I'm not willing to support it in health care anymore. That department has got to do this better. I have some sympathy for the Minister of Justice, for what he's trying to do here, and I will support that. The money is going to the things that are most needed. It is going to the Crown prosecutors. It is going to justices of the peace compensation and professional allowances for provincial judges. I don't know – it's certainly not in here – if it's going to fill some of those vacancies that are on the bench, but I would hope that . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, but pursuant to Standing Order 59(3) and Government Motion 19, agreed to on November 21, 2001, I must now put the following question. Those members in favour of each of the resolutions not yet voted upon relating to the 2001-2002 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund, please say aye.

HON. MEMBERS: Aye.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed, please say no. Carried.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

MR. LOUGHEED: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions and reports as follows. All resolutions relating to the 2001-2002 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund have been approved.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a list of those resolutions voted upon by the Committee of Supply pursuant to Standing Orders.

Supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ended March 31, 2001: Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, operating expense and capital investment, $129,519,000; Health and Wellness, operating expense and capital investment, $118,743,000; Justice, operating expense and capital investment $9,018,000; Learning, nonbudgetary disbursements, $80,000,000; Sustainable Resource Development, operating expense and capital investment, $97,691,000; office of the Ethics Commissioner, operating expense, $142,000; amount to be transferred from the office of the Chief Electoral Officer to support to the Legislative Assembly, $2,797,000.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that we have unanimous consent to revert to Introduction of Bills.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Bills

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Bill 30
Appropriation (Supplementary Supply)
Act, 2001 (No. 2)

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2). This being a money bill, her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 30 read a first time]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. Monday, November 26.

[Motion carried; at 5:19 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, November 26, 2001 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 01/11/26
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon and welcome back. At the conclusion of the prayer would you please remain standing for the singing of our national anthem.

Let us pray. Our Father, we confidently ask for Your strength and encouragement in our service of You through our service of others. We ask for Your gift of wisdom to guide us in making good laws and good decisions for the present and the future of Alberta. Amen.

Now will you please join Mr. Paul Lorieau in the singing of our national anthem.

HON. MEMBERS:

O Canada, our home and native land!
 True patriot love in all thy sons command.
 With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
 The True North strong and free!
 From far and wide, O Canada,
 We stand on guard for thee.
 God keep our land glorious and free!
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you. Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to present a petition signed by 1,273 Albertans urging the government of Alberta to support the establishment of the Chinchaga Wilderness as a legislated protected area where . . . the natural landscapes are preserved in a wilderness park for northwestern Alberta for the enjoyment of present and future generations.
 Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege and my pleasure today to present 1,243 signatures on a petition, bringing the total to 2,516 people throughout the province who support the Chinchaga wilderness, urging the government to support it as a legislated protected area.
 Thank you.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to file with the Assembly the appropriate number of copies of a letter sent earlier today from the Premier to Wally Buono, coach of the 2001 Grey Cup champions, the Calgary Stampeders. With your permission I would just read two short excerpts from the letter.

Congratulations, Stampeders, on your Grey Cup victory! It was a championship hard fought and well-deserved . . .

Again, I join with all Albertans in congratulating the Stampeders on their thrilling win, and for representing the city [of Calgary] and the province with such dignity and class.

I'm sure all members of the Assembly would want to join the Premier and I in congratulating the Stampeders for their victory and for representing the province with such class at the Grey Cup.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I rise today pursuant to section 22(4) of the Persons with Developmental Disabilities Community Governance Act to table the appropriate number of copies of the Persons with Developmental Disabilities 2000-2001 annual report. The PDD community governance and delivery system in our province provides very highly valued supports and services to almost 8,000 Albertans with developmental disabilities. This annual report is actually an accountability document of that work, and it provides a provincial perspective along with summary information from the six PDD regional boards and from the facility board for Michener Centre.

Thank you.

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, I wish to today table five copies of a letter from the Premier to the Prime Minister outlining our desire for free trade and a long-term solution to the softwood lumber dispute.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to table the requisite number of copies of the 2000 annual report of the Alberta Propane Vehicle Administration Organization.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Environment.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Once again in the spirit of openness and co-operation I'm really pleased to table five copies of the questions that arose at a previous committee meeting.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to table booklets. They're called X-treme Safety, and they're safety tips for rookies in the workplace.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to table the required number of copies of 19 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table 108 requests from Albertans who want the Legislature to support Bill 218, which provides a mechanism to properly fund education.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I have four tablings from constituents today. The first is the appropriate number of copies from Jeanette O'Brien, who is bringing forward her concerns regarding the status of education in Alberta.

The second is an e-mail from Carol Marcellus. Again, she's deeply disturbed by the government of Alberta's policies in education and health that seem counterproductive to the health and well-being of citizens.

There's also an e-mail from Arlene Sittler, who raises some very good points about education and teachers and respect for teachers in Alberta.

The last one is an e-mail from Steve Baba, who's wondering why it is taking so long to process applications for the special-needs benefits program. As a senior not being able to chew for an extended period of time because he can't get dentures, it is a real hardship.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is from teacher Marcel Tremblay, who writes a very detailed letter about his concerns and states to the Premier that he can complete his teaching career "without you or your government's approval. However, I cannot stomach or tolerate your government's and the public's disdain of my profession any longer."

The second letter is from a parent of five children who is very concerned about the situation developing in Alberta with the teachers and hopes the government will support teachers.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I have two tablings. The first is the required number of copies of a parent fund-raising survey, a study conducted by the Liberal Official Opposition in Alberta.

Second, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table the required number of copies of 40 requests from Albertans who want the government to "vote in support of Bill 218," to "end the need for parents to fund-raise," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table, please, the required number of copies of 26 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table five copies of a letter from Heather Fraser dated November 19, 2001, addressed to all MLAs and outlining severe cuts in children's services in Calgary.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. I am tabling five copies of a backgrounder on teacher compensation prepared by the British Columbia Public School Employers' Association showing that Alberta teachers have significantly lower salaries than teachers in many other provinces.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 25 grade 6 students and their teacher, Mr. Terry Gietz, from Westbrook elementary school in my constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. Accompanying them today are parent helpers Mrs. Carol Ceroici, Mrs. Karen Chiu, Mrs. Velvet McSheffery, and Ms Deanna Crozier. They're here today to observe and learn with keen interest about our government, and they're also participating in the School at the Legislature program this week.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if I may, there are three significant things about this school that I want to bring to your attention. First and most important, I attend this school on a regular basis and answer questions, and the grade 6 students of Westbrook school typically ask the best questions of anybody that I've run into, and I commend them for that. Secondly, the daughter of Calgary-Nose Creek attends this school and is in attendance with the class. That would be Lauren. Thirdly, this is the first school picture that I've had taken with my new glasses.

I'd ask the class to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Oh, how the chair would like to say something, but go ahead, hon. member.

MR. LUKASZUK: Well, Mr. Speaker, one is always tempted to say something good about Edmonton-Castle Downs.

I will take this opportunity to introduce to you and through you, Mr. Speaker, to this Assembly 67 bright faces from Edmonton-Castle Downs. Those are students from Lorelei elementary school. They are today accompanied by teachers Mr. Mark George and Miss Lori Howden and principal, Mr. Mike Cooper, as well by parent helpers Arlene Mickelsen, Allison Davies, and Gary Rudyk. I believe they're sitting in the public gallery. I would like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. McCLELLAND: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To you and through you to all members of the Assembly it is my great pleasure to welcome from the constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford a group of 33 students from Richard Second elementary school led by their teacher, Bryan Rosychuk, and parent helpers Theresa Rupp and Chris Beebe. I'd ask them to stand and accept the warm welcome of the House.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Dr. Fawzi Morcos on the occasion of his retirement from active practice in obstetrics and gynecology, having served some 32 years right here in Edmonton's Misericordia hospital. Dr. Morcos and Mrs. Morcos, along with their daughters Theresa, Camila, and Rebecca and son-in-law Harold Visser, along with my wife, Katherine, are seated in the members' gallery. I would like to ask them to please stand and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased today to introduce to you and through you four members of the 14-member Seniors' Advisory Council for Alberta. They are meeting to work on an ad hoc project for the Minister of Seniors, the hon. Member for Stony Plain. From my left to right, I must start with Carol Ching, who is our very important co-ordinator from the Seniors Department; Carol Blyth from Calgary, who represents the Calgary and area region; Margaret Health from Grande Prairie, who represents the northwest region of Alberta; Peter Portlock from Edmonton, the Edmonton and area region; and Dennis King from Lethbridge, who is representing the southern Alberta region. I would ask these advocates for Alberta seniors to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this afternoon and introduce to you and through you to all hon. members of this Assembly a group of Strathern elementary students. They're currently touring the Legislative Assembly and are going to join us in the public gallery at 2 o'clock. There are 20 students and two adults. The students this afternoon are accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Vivian Bell, and parent helper Mr. David Cole. I would now ask all hon. members to please grant them the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got two introductions today. I'm very pleased to introduce two sets of visitors. The first are three visitors from the Old Strathcona Youth Co-op, that operates in my constituency of Edmonton-Strathcona less than 50 metres from my own office. The Old Strathcona Youth Co-op is a street-level, multi-agency team established to provide services and support to the youth around the Whyte Avenue area. With us today are Karen Ramsey, the director of the co-op, and two co-op supporters, Gen Sloan and Fenx Spaed. They're seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, my second set of guests, whom I'm also very delighted to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly, are seated in the public gallery. They're members of the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society, known as CPAWS. CPAWS was founded in 1963 and has helped protect over 40 million hectares of Canada's most treasured forests and other wilderness places. CPAWS currently has 11 chapters with hundreds of dedicated volunteers and 20,000 active members across Canada. We're pleased to have six of their members with us today seated in the public gallery. I'm going to name them now and would request them to then stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly. They are Jill Sturdy, Tracey Smith, Gordon Eadie, Kim Smith, Leila Darwish, and Jay Moore. Would they please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to acknowledge the presence of 30 members of the St. Albert Catholic high school who are present in the Legislature Building now and will be coming into the gallery at 2 p.m. They are accompanied by their teacher, Tamie Bentz. I would ask the Assembly to extend a warm welcome to them.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

School Fund-raising

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first question is to the Minister of Learning. Why do parents have to fund-raise through bingos, casinos, and other fund-raisers to provide basic educational requirements for their schools?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, the very short answer to that is that they don't, but what I will do is go a little bit into what money is fund-raised and what exactly that money is used for. The last reconciliation of dollars that we have on the school-generated funds occurred in the 1999-2000 year. I apologize for not having 2000-2001, but we have not yet fully tabulated that.

Around 9 percent went to donation-specific programs. This would be where a group of parents and a group of students raised money and, say, donated money to the Kidney Foundation or something like that. Another 7.2 percent went into cafeteria and lunch programs. Another 14 and a half percent went into athletics or field trips. The largest portion of the money that was fund-raised, 42.9 percent, went into general school activities, and I'll break that down, if I may. They are things such as yearbooks, graduation, student's union, bookstores, PACs fund-raising.

MS CARLSON: Textbooks.

DR. OBERG: No. Yearbooks, Mr. Speaker.

About another 11 percent went into some non core resources such as band, such as choral, such as supplies and printing, fine arts. The last, about 15.3 percent, went into capital equipment such as playgrounds, computers, vans, and field trips.

There's one other point that I would like to raise, and that is that this is an issue that was looked at by the Alberta School Boards Association about a year ago. I certainly have no trouble in tabling this whole document, but if I may just read the first two points, because I truly believe that they summarize the intent of the document. The first one says that "funds raised should complement – not replace – public funding for education." The second one says that "fundraised dollars should not be used for instructional purposes or basic education items, those being items required to complete a core course." Mr. Speaker, that's the Alberta School Boards Association, and it goes on to roughly seven or eight other points.

If there are schools out there that are fund-raising for textbooks, I would urge the hon. member to tell me which ones they are, and I personally will investigate it, because they are going against the Alberta School Boards Association policy and going against what our documents are telling us.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What do you say to the parents, then, who constantly tell us that they are fund-raising for textbooks, for library materials, for educational aids? How do we deal with them when you tell us they aren't doing it?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, that's a little bit of an enigma that I've been dealing with myself, because when I sit and talk to them, I say: "Tell me exactly what you are fund-raising for," and they go through a litany of things. I say, "Are you fund-raising for textbooks," and they say yes. I then go to the school boards and ask the school boards, and they tell me no. That's why I need specific examples from the hon. opposition, and I personally will take a look into these, because they are not to be. There are plenty of dollars in the school budgets to pay for textbooks, and I will not accept any school board that says they do not have the funds to pay for textbooks.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is again to the Minister of Learning. Did you ever think that these parents may be afraid that if they tell you that they're raising money for basics such as textbooks, they will lose that and their children won't get a proper education because they don't have the textbooks?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, what the hon. Leader of the Opposition has just said is a huge indictment of our education system. If they feel that there will be repercussions because they actually tell the Minister of Learning what might be going on, I think that's a huge indictment of the school system. The parents that I know and the letters that I get are quite free in telling me all sorts of things, and I would encourage them to continue.

If this is occurring, Mr. Speaker, I certainly will personally look into it, but again I go back to the Alberta School Boards Association directive which states that there should be no fund-raising for basic educational items.

THE SPEAKER: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister commit to studying the issue of fund-raising, looking into why the public is saying that they're fund-raising for basics yet your data says that they are not?

DR. OBERG: Sure, Mr. Speaker. In all fairness, I did look into this about a year and a half to two years ago, at which point the Alberta School Boards Association came out with this document. I said at that particular time to them: "We have two options, ladies and gentlemen. We can sit down and you can bring out directives for your school boards, or I can bring down regulations when it comes to fund-raising." The Alberta School Boards Association categorically stated that they would put recommendations forward on guidelines for their own member school boards, and that's exactly what they did.

Again, Mr. Speaker, if there are any school boards out there that are not following these guidelines, I'm sure the Alberta School Boards Association will want to hear about it, and I want to hear about it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will you tell the schools not to fund-raise? It's clear they have to fund-raise because the model that you use for funding doesn't provide the basics.

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, I take offence with that question, because there is no way that every taxpayer should pay for uniforms for my child who takes athletics, and they shouldn't necessarily pay for field trips. They shouldn't necessarily pay for a lot of things that occur. So I'm not going to tell parents that they should not fund-raise if they want to build the extras within their school. If they want to fund-raise for uniforms, if they want to fund-raise for various things, I'm not going to tell them not to fund-raise, but I will tell them that I do not want them fund-raising for textbooks, because that is not acceptable.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Minister, you tell them not to fund-raise for textbooks, yet they don't have enough textbooks to go around for every student in the classroom or for every classroom teaching the same subject. Why not?

DR. OBERG: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, this is an issue that was raised a couple of years ago. At that time I did look at school boards and I asked them: "What's going on here? You have enough money for textbooks." They all gave me various answers as to why an individual student would not have one textbook. Many of them said: well, they don't need one; they can share it between classes.

Mr. Speaker, what I will say, though, is that this department and this government plans for the future. One of the things that we are very close to announcing is that our textbooks will be on-line, so rather than even worrying about this textbook issue, they will be able to go and print these textbooks from the Internet. I will be making the first signature on this later on this week. I think that that's a truly exciting development. That's truly the way that the Internet can be utilized to help our school system. Hopefully, these questions about fund-raising for textbooks and all the other questions that have been raised will become moot points over the next couple of years.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Learning has insisted that parents in the province are not fund-raising for basic classroom materials. Parents tell us quite a different story. How can the minister maintain that fund-raising for basics is a myth when parent groups on behalf of 110 schools across the province report that they are?

DR. OBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, no offence intended, but what the hon. member did was write them a question and said basically: do you fund-raise for basic necessities at school? He did not define it; he did not say what exactly it was. So a lot of parents, for example, when they answered this, would say, "Yes, we do" or "No, we don't." When you actually take a look at his document, with all respect to the hon. member, there are some comments in the back such as: what exactly is basic?

Mr. Speaker, my same response is there. If there are people out there who are fund-raising for textbooks, I personally will take a look in to it and find out what's going on, because there is money there and they should not be fund-raising for textbooks.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: have the government claims to funding equity not been destroyed when, depending on where you live in this province, thousands of extra dollars are funneled into your school?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member just hit on the whole rationale why you cannot have school fund-raising going into basic curriculum, going into the basic core mechanisms of education. This goes back to the same issue that we had when we had taxation that would be delivered out to the various communities. He's absolutely correct: if you live in an affluent area and can raise a million dollars or $100,000 or $5,000 and nonaffluent areas cannot, then what you run in to is this inequity. That is why the Alberta School Boards Association came out with a report that said: don't do it. That's why I unanimously have said: don't do it. And that's why they don't do it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. My final question to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: how can the minister expect parents to report to school boards or to the government when the Learning ministry's web site threatens to investigate them?

2:00

DR. OBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the prerequisites, according to the Auditor General, is that the schools list all school-generated funds, and that includes fund-raising. This has been something that has been there for the last two or three years, and yes, it's absolutely an imperative that any money that is generated in the school is reported. We have to do accounts. The hon. opposition has been talking about deficits. If we don't have accurate accounting of how many dollars are raised in these schools, I think we'd have huge problems.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Children's Services

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Children's Services is presiding over a bloodbath of cuts to frontline children's services. These cuts, contrary to the government's rhetoric, will hurt thousands of the province's most vulnerable children. Earlier I tabled a document outlining draconian cuts in the Calgary-Rocky View region designed to make up an $8 million to $10 million budget shortfall. To the Minister of Children's Services: how can the minister justify the unilateral termination of contracts of respected Calgary agencies effective December 31, thereby abandoning thousands of vulnerable children right during the middle of the upcoming holiday season?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, for the last few days in the House we have been talking about the need to place priority and emphasis on those children who have need for protective services. Many of the other services, it's true, we would like to be able to support, but presently we are looking at that inordinately high caseload growth, which is similar to caseload growths throughout almost every province in Canada. We're asking why at this time we have the need to service more children for child protection. The agency supports that are being provided to certain programs in most cases have simply been reduced, have not been totally eliminated. Where they have been eliminated, we have through the authorities taken very careful accounting of whether or not these are duplications of other services that are being rendered through other agencies. The most important principle of all is that it is the programs for those children who are least likely to become statistics in the child welfare registry that are being affected.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question to the same minister: by closing the Connect program at the Salvation Army Children's Village, which has served as a home to these children in Calgary, how can the minister justify putting eight children 12 years and younger out of their home and back into an already overburdened foster care system?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, once again, my invitation to all members of the House is that if there is evidence that any child is in jeopardy with any of these agency realignments, then please let me know, and by the end of December I'm very confident that Calgary Rocky View will have alternatives in place to deal with those children.

Mr. Speaker, last week in this House we heard about an agency that was going to reduce five beds. We had at that time 62 other bed options through 19 other placements or group homes that could be available. An open invitation to any member of the House that has circumstances that we should investigate: this is a case where, if they will turn it over to me, we'll look into it and assure the hon. member and indeed the people of Alberta that we will take care of those children, that alternatives will be found.

DR. PANNU: My final supplementary to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: will the minister either protect these children by reversing these draconian cuts or perhaps resign?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I would assume that the hon. member is seeking accountability for the children of this province, and I am prepared to be accountable, as Minister of Children's Services, for the care and protection of those children that we serve under the Child Welfare Act.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Medicine Hat Teachers' Negotiations

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've been hearing a great deal about negotiations between teachers and their school boards recently. While teachers in Edmonton public schools are taking a strike vote later this week, I understand that last week teachers in the Medicine Hat local of the ATA voted on a memorandum of agreement presented to them by their school district. My question is to the Minister of Learning. Can the minister please confirm this, and would he tell the House what the outcome of that vote in Medicine Hat was?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last Monday night the local of the Medicine Hat ATA voted more than 91 percent in favour of accepting the contract that they had been negotiating with the Medicine Hat school board. This contract basically had an 11 percent increase in it, albeit 4.3 percent was effective September 1 of this year and another 6.4 percent was effective April 1, making an overall effect of 7.5 percent. I just want to say that although this was over the 4 percent and 2 percent that we had allocated, this is what we've been talking about the whole time: local people sitting down and finding local solutions to their issues. There's no better example of this than what just happened in Medicine Hat.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is also to the Minister of Learning. You indicate that the agreement was tentative, and if the Medicine Hat school district and the teachers in the Medicine Hat local ATA have agreed to these terms, why don't we have a done deal?

DR. OBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess that's where the fly in the ointment comes in, in that the provincial Alberta Teachers' Association has to ratify this agreement. It is my understanding from media reports and my understanding about what has been said that the provincial ATA has chosen to go against their local ATA and go against the local school board on this. I don't know how they can do it when you have the local school board and the local ATA sitting together and arriving at a contract. Two signatories to the contract and they've decided not to ratify it.

So, Mr. Speaker, that's where it's at today. I hope that calmer heads will prevail. I hope that the Alberta Teachers' Association local in Medicine Hat has arrived at a deal they can live with, and I hope that it becomes ratified soon, but my understanding is that it will not.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given what the Minister of Learning has just told us, my final question would be to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Are there any other options or processes that are available under provincial labour legislation that the Medicine Hat school board and the teachers could pursue to enable them to successfully conclude these negotiations?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, the board and the teachers would actually have two options. Now, both these options involve the Labour Relations Board. I want to affirm to the hon. member that the Labour Relations Board is independent from government, so it's not the government that can avail itself of any of these options. It's going to have to be one or both of the parties as it might apply. So the first option is that the parties could apply to determine whether or not there was a collective agreement actually in force, and the Labour Relations Board would then be asked to first of all review the ratification process in the context of the ATA rules – the minister commented on that in his previous answer – determine whether or not the rules had been followed, and then of course rule whether or not a valid collective agreement was in effect.

The second option would be an application to the Labour Relations Board for a proposal vote. If the Medicine Hat school board applied, the Labour Relations Board would conduct a vote of the employees. Now, if that application were granted, this vote could determine the will of the Medicine Hat local. It would not be subjected actually to the same ratification process as the recent vote that has been conducted by the teachers. The results of the vote, if held, would be binding on the parties.

Now, when we get into these kinds of situations, again I want to affirm that we always encourage all the parties to an agreement to come to a negotiated agreement, but if they cannot, then of course there are options that are available under the Labour Relations Code.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Palliative Care

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Palliative care programs allow people to die with dignity under the care of compassionate staff who assist with everything from pain control to pastoral issues. These programs can be as important to the family as to the patient. I think all MLAs recognize they are a sign of a society that cares. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: given that these programs are by definition not long-term care, can the minister explain why some regions are charging long-term care rates?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I wish to say at the outset that I agree with the preamble as set out by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, and I do believe that all members of this Assembly would agree that palliative care is indeed the expression of a great deal of compassion for people who are nearing the end of their life. The palliative care programs throughout this province, while good, do differ from regional health authority to regional health authority, and that is recognition of the fact that there are different needs that reside in different communities. We provide dollars to regional health authorities to deal with their health care needs, but of course there may be different demographics in different parts of the province. Accordingly, that matter is something which is left to the decision-making of regional health authorities.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister explain why the charges for hospice care in Calgary are 50 percent higher than in Edmonton and why the same service is provided without any charge in Lethbridge? Why does it cost so much to die in Calgary?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, there are different methods of delivery of palliative care throughout the province. There is a mix of both public service as well as not-for-profits, and I cannot answer the particular question with respect to what the hon. member was asking. In Calgary I do not know the specific nature of the contract that may be held by a not-for-profit group with the regional health authority to provide services. But I can say that those services are provided, as I said in my earlier answer, by regional health authorities, and they may differ from place to place throughout the province, depending on policies as established by local regional health authorities.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister ask all regional health authorities to eliminate this user fee on dying?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I will not do any such thing except that I will undertake to review the particular contract arrangements that have been established in Calgary and ask good questions about why there is a large differential. There is probably a good reason for it, and I will endeavour to find out.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Human DNA Patenting

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are on a subject which I believe has profound public policy on health issues. The subject is human DNA patenting. Right now there is a company which is reportedly demanding a $2,500 U.S. per person access fee before they will allow women to be tested to see if they have the gene linked to breast cancer. People are being discouraged from doing even basic medical gene research on a number of human diseases because those diseases have now been patented. There are now over 100 companies involved in the human DNA patenting gold rush, and the U.S. department of health has even reportedly applied to patent the entire cell line of a human being, a tribesman from New Guinea. It appears that the U.S. Supreme Court and the patent laws are on the side of these companies. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister tell us whether or not the health department is monitoring, and actively monitoring, the discussions surrounding the patenting of human genetic material?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, the short answer to the hon. member's question is yes. It is worth pointing out that the whole issue of patents is constitutionally within the responsibility of the federal government. Companies do apply to the federal government for patents, and the federal government then decides whether such patent is issued. But I can assure the hon. member that Albertans and my department are both very concerned about the patenting of human genetic material in Canada. This type of patenting does pose a serious concern for all Canadians as well as specifically on the issue of future sustainability of our health care system, and that is the reason why we follow this closely and do work with our provincial counterparts across the country and the federal government to examine the validity of such claims in one particular case as it relates to a particular company that was referred to by the hon. member.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is again to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister tell us whether or not the department is currently paying any royalty or access fees to any companies as a result of patents on human genetic materials?

MR. MAR: The short answer, Mr. Speaker, is no, we are not. It is worth noting that we have been contacted by one American company, Myriad Genetics Inc., who claim that some of the testing being done by Alberta's Cancer Board violates their Canadian patents. The same company has contacted provincial health authorities in both the provinces of Ontario and British Columbia with a similar claim. Because this is a legal issue and involves a very complex patent, my department has enlisted the services of a professional patent agent who is currently reviewing the claim being made by Myriad. The results of this review by the patent agent will determine what our next steps in this matter will be, but in the meantime we will continue to fund the Alberta cancer genetics program to provide Albertans with affordable access to genetic testing.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess my last question is just whether or not the minister could confirm that access fees and royalties emanating from these patents would become a major health care cost driver in the future if this stands.

MR. MAR: Yes, I can confirm that. We believe that the patenting of human genetic material poses a serious concern for all Canadians and, as I said, the sustainability of our health care system. Regardless of jurisdiction, Mr. Speaker, I can assure Albertans that we will continue to monitor the issue closely, working in collaboration with our provincial and federal counterparts as we are committed to protecting the health care interests of Albertans.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Low-income Review

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions this afternoon are to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Acknowledging that all reports are complicated and take time to go through, when can Albertans, who have not seen an increase since 1993 in AISH or SFI rates, expect a response on the low-income review report? What is taking so long? What is so complicated?

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, we have received two reports from the low-income review committee, and once again I would like to thank the chair and members of that committee for the fine work they have done. It is an extremely thorough report. The information that's been provided appears very comprehensive. This is not an idle issue. There are many Albertans that are extremely concerned about what the future is to hold in terms of assistance to Albertans, so we're looking at the report and working our way through it as best we can. While some people call for an expeditious review, I for one minister will not be held to other people's timetables. I will develop a timetable that I feel is prudent and responsible, and that is the timetable that we will deal with.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the minister: will the recommendations from the report, which is expected to call for the first increase in assistance rates since 1993 to at least compensate for inflation, be exempt from the current round of budget constraints?

Thank you.

MR. DUNFORD: I'm not sure if I said it previously here in this House, Mr. Speaker. If not, I will do so now. In meeting the current objectives in terms of the adjustments we're making to our budgets, we've made the commitment that there would be no decrease in any of the programs to low-income Albertans.

2:20

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you. Again to the same minister: this minister has spoken about flexible federalism, but why is the government clawing back assistance from families who receive funding from the national child benefit, money directed at young people, the poorest of the poor, those in dire need who are not old enough or able to be out working for themselves or their families? Why are you persistent in clawing back this money from another level of government?

Thank you.

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, I believe that most members of this House would agree that children within our families are of the utmost importance and in some cases of the utmost urgency. The Department of Children's Services has excellent programs in which they provide assistance as they need it. In our mandate, of course, we are concerned about social assistance for adult Albertans, but those adult Albertans in many cases are single moms or in other cases are families. We know that a way to deal with poverty wherever it might exist, a way to deal with difficulties or challenges that low-income families might encounter is really in helping them make a transition from wherever they are, wherever we find them, and moving them into the workplace.

I think the hon. member, based on what I understand to be his previous experience, would recognize the value of work. That is why under the flexible federalism that we have, that's called the national child benefit program, we have used dollars that became available to us to provide for what we believe to be excellent opportunities and benefits for low-income Albertans to move into the workplace and to remain there.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

G-8 Summit in Kananaskis

MRS. TARCHUK: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many Albertans, particularly those that live and work in Calgary and some of the communities in Banff-Cochrane, are concerned about next year's G-8 summit in Kananaskis. Constituents have passed on concerns about the safety and security of citizens and property, concerns about the protection of the environment as well as the costs associated with such an event. My questions are to the Solicitor General. What security precautions has the Alberta government taken to ensure the safety of Albertans and visitors during the summit?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the question from the hon. member. I'd like to let the Assembly know, first of all, that this is a federal initiative and it's a federal responsibility. The federal government is responsible for all aspects of the G-8. Officials from my department, the minister of intergovernmental affairs, and myself have been meeting on a continuing basis with the federal government, the RCMP, the Calgary police, and other departments in government to ensure that the necessary measures are in place. Obviously, for security reasons I can't go into a lot of details, but I can assure this House that the needs of the community will be provided for and Albertans will be safe.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MRS. TARCHUK: Thank you. Again to the Solicitor General: what agreements are in place to ensure that the province of Alberta and Alberta towns and cities will not be stuck with the cost of the G-8 summit security?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MRS. FORSYTH: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal government is responsible for covering a hundred percent of the costs of the security at the G-8 summit. Our position is that these costs must be negotiated and agreed on before the summit takes place. On November 6 the federal government announced that it agreed in principle with our position. The city of Calgary has recently announced that the agreement with the federal government for security costs has been ratified and agreed on at a cost of $34.3 million. We don't have all the details yet on our agreement on security costs, but officials from my department will be meeting with the RCMP this week to discuss our costs so we can build them into the details of our agreements.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MRS. TARCHUK: Well, thank you. My final question is to the same minister. What guarantees can the Solicitor General give that security measures will use appropriate force with demonstrators and protesters so as to not turn our communities into war zones?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MRS. FORSYTH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal government, as I indicated earlier, is responsible for all aspects of summit security, including a police response outside Calgary. Within the city of Calgary we have the Calgary Police Service, who has the lead responsibility of working very closely with the RCMP and G-8 organizers. My role is to ensure that the agreements for security costs are in place and that the provincial police have the resources they need to do their job right.

Planning for an event of this nature is not easy. Security must plan for the worst possible scenarios and be flexible enough to moderate its response appropriately. Peaceful protest is part of a democratic society, and we must have room for that in the G-8, but I will say that we will not put up with any threat to life and that destruction of property is unacceptable. We don't know what protesters to expect, and we don't know if they'll be peaceful or destructive, but, Mr. Speaker, I want to assure this Assembly that the RCMP is trained and highly disciplined and will respond appropriately to them.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Genetically Modified Food

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are on genetically modified organisms. Our environment is more than a collection of genetic resources to be seized, owned, and improved. My questions today are to the minister of agriculture. What studies has the government done on the environmental consequences of the wind-spread production of genetically engineered crops?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, there's a fair amount of debate around the issue of genetically modified crops. I think it's safe to say, though, that very few varieties of crops that we have today have not been modified in some way over the years to bring them to their productive value and, of course, strains that have improved many aspects of the crop. However, more recently there is a rising concern in the public with genetically modified crops.

This government, through the leadership of our Premier along with the western Premiers, has asked that we work with scientists to have some information based on science as to the concerns that could arise around this whole area. There is some work being done at the federal station in Lethbridge in this area, and of course there is a report that was released in Europe, and the conclusion was that, in fact, genetically modified foods could be as safe or even more safe than nongenetically modified foods.

MS CARLSON: But, in fact, Mr. Speaker, given that modified foods may have adverse health effects, does this government support labeling foods so that consumers can make informed choices as the European commission is now proposing?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's a very interesting subject, and of course I am sure the hon. member knows that there's a private member's bill before the House of Parliament in Ottawa on this whole issue of labeling. She probably also is very aware that this is very complex because the degree of information that you might want to put on that could be fairly substantial.

I think what's more important to the public and certainly to me as minister is that the information that we have that the public has available to them is based on sound science rather than hearsay or emotion or hysteria or, in fact, is being used as what can be a nontariff barrier to trade. Those are the issues that are out there today, and those are the issues that we need to deal with, and those are the issues that we're going to deal with on sound science.

MS CARLSON: Well, then, Mr. Speaker, at the very least has the government studied the effects of transgenic pollination on Alberta's plant diversity?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that the hon. member knows very well that the government of Canada has the responsibility first of all in those areas, as the government of Canada has the responsibility for labeling food products. What we do is work with the government of Canada, whether it's Ag Canada or Health Canada, to ensure that the interests of Alberta producers and consumers are addressed in that. We have been in fact interacting with them, but it is the government of Canada through the Canadian Food Inspection Agency or through Agriculture Canada who deals with companies who have those trials or plots and deal with such things as pollen transference.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. During the 1990s tuition fees in Alberta rose over two and a half times, a greater increase than in any other province. These enormous fees contribute to record levels of debt for Alberta students. Clearly, this affects the opportunity for many potential students to pursue a postsecondary education. My question is to the Minister of Learning, who today is certainly earning his pay. Will he tell the House how many Albertans abandon their dream of a postsecondary education because of high tuition and astronomical levels of debt?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, in all fairness, the hon. member has a very good question there. One of the issues that we have been trying to deal with is to get out the actual facts about what our tuition is, what the levels of debt are. In conjunction with ACTISEC and CAUS, the university association and the college and technical schools association, we did a questionnaire to find out exactly what some of the beliefs were out there about tuition, about levels of debt. The average cost of tuition on this questionnaire was something like between $5,000 and $6,000, I believe, and the average level of debt was quite astronomical. In Alberta, realistically, when it comes to colleges and technical schools, the average tuition is in the $2,400 to $2,500 range. When it comes to the universities, we're in the $4,000 to $4,300 range, which is very consistent across Canada. When you take a look at all the universities across Canada, of the some 45 universities, somewhere in there, the University of Alberta, the University of Calgary, and the University of Lethbridge sit right in around the 22nd to 25th or 26th level of tuition amounts.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, how can the minister continue to allow a policy which supports tuition increases when a study his own department has done, the Ipsos-Reid Post-Secondary Accessibility Study, done in April of this year for Alberta Learning, shows that 70 percent of the respondents said that the high cost of education "can act as a barrier" to getting a postsecondary education?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, the study was actually the same study that I was just alluding to. That's one of the disconnects in those studies: 70 percent of students say that the high cost of tuition or the high cost of university is the element that keeps them from going to university, but they also predicted the wrong amounts for those. We have sat down with the students' association, again, with CAUS and ACTISEC to publicize exactly what the costs are for postsecondary education.

I will remind the Assembly that in the past two years we have increased by 44 percent the aid to students who need the aid. We have brought in automatic remissions. So the remissions are automatically taken off. The most that you will owe after four years of university in Alberta is $5,000 per year. The rest is given back. You can get a student loan up to $10,400 and owe only $5,000 at the end of it. So the taxpayers of Alberta are footing the bill for some $5,400 plus interest over that time frame.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, to the hon. minister: does he actually believe that the maximum debt that students can obtain under the programs his government supports is only $5,000 a year? Why is government debt bad but student debt is okay?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, when a student gets a student loan, the most that they will have to pay back is roughly $5,000 per year. So I will reiterate: a student that receives $10,400 per year will pay back $5,000. Are there students who have higher debt? Yes, there are. These are students who have not accessed our student loan program. The average amount of debt after a four-year program in Alberta is around $17,000. I would like that to someone who starts a new business. If they could start a new business for only $17,000, the world would be an ideal place.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Softwood Lumber Trade Dispute

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The softwood lumber dispute with the U.S. has been going on for some time, and I have concerns about the fate of this valuable part of Alberta's economy and those who work in this sector. The potential payment of the U.S. duties has already had a negative effect in my riding of Whitecourt-Ste. Anne on the softwood lumber producers, the workers in the mills, and the communities that are dependent on this industry. My first question is for the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. Can the minister tell this Assembly how the province is working to resolve this harmful trade action and how the Alberta softwood industry is being impacted?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development and I have been working with our departments to defend the industry in this particularly important sector of our economy. As members of the Assembly know, I think, this very important industry makes up export values of about $500 million to $600 million from this province to the United States, or about 21 percent of all the wood exports that we have in this province. My colleague and I are aware of the economic impact of a possible additional duty. This is something, of course, that the industry has experienced before and, combined with the overall economic slowdown, is certainly creating very significant problems for the region of the province that's affected here.

We are, though, working very hard with our departments to defend against the allegations that have been brought forward by the American industry. As well, of course, we're considering and looking at the possibilities of negotiating some kind of agreement with respect to this overall dispute. We're certainly giving it a very, very high priority in our work. It is, I think, the top file, as you'd say, for both of our departments, and we're working hard on both fronts, in terms of defending against the allegations and looking at solutions, at this particular point in time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: can you please tell me and my constituents if the province is contemplating changes to the province's forestry management system because of this dispute?

MR. JONSON: Mr. Speaker, certainly there are a number of other provinces involved in this particular dispute along with our own, and British Columbia, which is the largest exporter of softwood lumber to the United States, is contemplating certain changes in their particular forestry practices. We here in Alberta are working with the industry with respect to looking at possible changes, but up to this point in time our efforts have been focusing upon defending against the overall charges or claims of the American forest industry that we are in fact subsidizing our production here. Certainly we are also looking at the possibility of a negotiated agreement here as well, and we're working with provinces such as British Columbia, Quebec, Saskatchewan, and so forth to come up with a set of acceptable but nevertheless good recommendations that would be mutually beneficial to the United States in terms of being able to continue to get our softwood lumber and, of course, would allow our industry to survive.

Calgary Stampeders

MR. HLADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How about those Calgary Stampeders? The Deputy Premier, the Finance minister, and I were fortunate enough to attend the game in Montreal yesterday, and let me tell you that the Canadian Football League is alive and well in Montreal. Sixty-five thousand wildly cheering fans, the second most in Grey Cup history, as well as people across Canada and around the world were treated to an exciting football game that came down to the last play of the game. With time running out on the clock, the Winnipeg Blue Bombers were looking for the end zone when the Stampeders defence produced a quarterback sack to end the game in heart-stopping fashion. The 27-19 win was a great way for past owner Sig Gutsche to end his time with the Stamps and a great way for the new owner, Mike Feterik, to take over. It is also rumoured that Mark McLoughlin, the second highest scorer in the history of the CFL, is about to announce his retirement, and I can't think of a better way for him to go out. Congratulations to the whole team, the coaching staff, and management in bringing the cup to Calgary and making all of Alberta proud.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

Crystal Kids

MR. MASYK: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure that I rise in the House today to recognize a very special group here in Edmonton that works hard to keep our children off the streets. Crystal Kids at the Gordon Russell youth centre is a place where kids can read, do their homework, play sports, and just generally hang around with friends. It was founded in 1992 and has grown considerably since. It's located on 118th Avenue, and over 10,000 kids have passed through the centre, which is a great indicator that they really know how to reach out to Edmonton's youth.

I'd like to take a moment to recognize each individual that participates in this wonderful program: Crystal Kids president, Mr. Phil Klein; vice-president, Louise Tod; secretary, Dorrene Belair; directors Henry Budnitsky, Kelly Cable, Brian Kearns, Henry Mah, John McDougall, Barbara York, Jack Macintyre, Tarig Chaudry, and Constable Dan Jones. In addition, I'd like to recognize the executive director, Frances Russell; treasurer, Shannon Smid; adviser, Gordon Russell; assistant, Franki Fairfield; program directors Patty Lymes and Dakota Basset; as well as the custodian, Linda Mount-Young.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Edmonton Viets Association

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to recognize the Edmonton Viets Association, which is a community group located in my riding of Edmonton-Centre. This is a wonderful organization to have in my community. They promote tolerance and understanding and do an extraordinary amount of work to teach others around them and to teach members of their own community better citizenship. In September I was invited to attend an event which was about promoting religious freedom in Vietnam, and it was a unique opportunity for me. They had a special guest, who spoke to a capacity crowd that was in attendance, and the special guest was Le Huu Nguyen. He's the executive director of the committee to promote religious freedom in Vietnam. In fact, he was allowed two years off from his Catholic parish in Australia to travel the world. I really appreciated being able to listen to him.

Thank you very much.

Dr. Fawzi Morcos

MR. YANKOWSKY: Mr. Speaker, I rise to honour Dr. Fawzi Morcos on the occasion of his retirement. Dr. Morcos obtained his specialty degrees in the United Kingdom before immigrating to Canada in 1969 and joining the Misericordia hospital with the department of obstetrics and gynecology. Becoming department chief in 1978, he continued to promote childbirth education and family-centred maternity care. Recognizing the importance of maternal infant bonding, he was instrumental in changing the policy where healthy babies were admitted to the nursery instead of remaining with their mothers. Dr. Morcos introduced midwifery to the hospital, a project supported by the hon. Dave Russell.

Dr. Morcos organized and chaired 33 obstetrics and gynecology conferences, presenting numerous papers at national and international conferences. His many awards include recognition from the department of hospitals and medical care, American Medical Association physicians recognition, teacher of the year, Physician Management Institute certificate of achievement, and Capital region medical staff outstanding physician award.

May God bless you, Dr. Morcos, and your wife, Corry, with a long and healthy retirement.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Cam Tait

MR. HUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This being the International Year of Volunteers, I'd like to take this opportunity and recognize a gentleman who has overcome great odds to excel in many areas of life. Mr. Cam Tait of the Edmonton Journal is a national journalist, an international comedian, and a much sought after speaker. Mr. Tait is an inspiration to many and a huge advocate and promoter of volunteerism and philanthropy in Alberta. Thank you, Cam Tait.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Old Strathcona Youth Co-op

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise and recognize an outstanding agency that operates in the constituency of Edmonton-Strathcona. The Old Strathcona Youth Co-op is a street-level agency concerned with securing the safety, self-worth, and dignity of youth. I've visited the co-op a number of times and have seen firsthand the dedicated hard work that takes place to achieve their goal of mobilizing and securing resources that are easily accessible to youth. In addition to the support given to youth via a plethora of programs such as resume writing, youth leadership, and computer workshops, the co-op operates a job board to assist youth in acquiring employment. I'm very impressed with the work that this agency performs. The most important part of it is that they're there for youth and bring to these youth not only valuable information and resources but a sense of community, connectedness, and hope.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, before calling Orders of the Day, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

MR. MASKELL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me the opportunity to make this introduction. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly two members of the Learning Resources Council of the Alberta Teachers' Association. The Learning Resources Council is a professional development arm of the ATA for teacher/librarians, and as all members appreciate, the library is the heart and the hub of the school. April Tilson is president of the Learning Resources Council. April is also teacher/librarian at Lord Beaverbrook high school in Calgary. Lois Barranoik is president elect of the Learning Resources Council, and Lois is a part-time teacher/librarian at Centre High here in Edmonton and is working on her PhD in school libraries at the University of Alberta. Would April and Lois please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Bill 30 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pleasure that I move second reading of Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2).

This bill provides funding in some very critical areas for our government: Health and Wellness, Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, Justice, Learning, Sustainable Resource Development, and in the office of the Ethics Commissioner. It also provides for some operating expenses that are in the nonbudgetary disbursements that are listed and in the Legislative Assembly support.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I move second reading. As per the discussions with the opposition, we will return to this bill apparently this evening, and therefore I move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Amendments to Standing Orders

21. Mr. Stevens moved:

Be it resolved that the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be amended as follows:

1. Standing Order 4 is struck out and the following is substituted:

4(1) If at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, the business of the Assembly is not concluded, the Speaker leaves the Chair until 8 p.m.

(2) If at 5:15 p.m. on Monday, the Assembly is in Committee of the Whole and the business of the committee is not concluded, the committee shall rise and report immediately.

(3) If at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday or Wednesday, the business of the Assembly is not concluded, the Speaker leaves the Chair until 8 p.m. unless, on a motion of the Government House Leader made before 5:30 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned until the next sitting day.

(4) If at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday or Wednesday, the Assembly is in Committee of the Whole and the business of the committee is not concluded, the Chairman leaves the Chair until 8:00 p.m. unless, on a motion of the Government House Leader made before 5:30 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the next sitting day.

(5) At 5:30 p.m. on Thursday the Speaker adjourns the Assembly, without question put, until Monday.

2. Standing Order 5 is amended by adding the following after suborder (1):

(1.1) If, during a sitting of the Assembly, a question of quorum arises, the division bells shall be sounded for one minute and if a quorum is then not present, the Speaker may declare a recess or adjourn the Assembly until the next sitting day.

3. Standing Order 7 is amended by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following:

7(1) The ordinary daily routine business in the Assembly shall be as follows:

O Canada (First sitting day of each week)

Introduction of Visitors

Introduction of Guests

Ministerial Statements

Oral Question Period, not exceeding 50 minutes

Recognitions (Monday and Wednesday)

Members' Statements (Tuesday and Thursday)

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

- Presenting Petitions
 Notices of Motions
 Introduction of Bills
 Tabling Returns and Reports
 Projected Government Business (Thursday)
4. Standing Order 8 is amended
    - (a) by striking out suborders (1) to (3) and substituting the following:
      - 8(1) On Monday afternoon, after the daily routine, the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:
        - Written Questions
        - Motions for Returns
        - Public Bills and Orders other than Government Bills and Orders
      - (2) On Monday evening, from 8 p.m. until 9 p.m., the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:
        - Motions other than Government Motions
      - (3) On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, on Monday evening commencing at 9 p.m. and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:
        - Government Motions
        - Government Bills and Orders
        - Private Bills
    - (b) in suborder (4) by striking out “55 minutes of debate” and substituting “60 minutes of debate and 5 minutes for the mover of the motion to close debate”.
    - (c) by adding the following after suborder (4):
      - (4.1) Before the mover closes debate on a motion under suborder (4), a member may move a motion, not subject to debate or amendment, that provides for the motion under consideration to be moved to the bottom of that item of business on the Order Paper.
    - (d) by striking out suborder (6) and substituting the following:
      - (6) Before the mover of a motion for second or third reading of a Public Bill other than a Government Bill closes debate, or the time limit is reached for consideration at Committee of the Whole under suborder (5)(a)(ii), a member may move a motion, not subject to debate or amendment, that the votes necessary to conclude consideration at that stage be postponed for 10 sitting days or the first opportunity after that for the consideration of the Bill, unless there are other Bills awaiting consideration at that stage in which case the Bill will be called after the Bills at that stage have been considered.
  5. Standing Order 18 is amended
    - (a) in suborder 1(h) by adding “, except as provided under Standing Order 49” after “committee”;
    - (b) by adding the following after suborder (2):
      - (3) In this Standing Order, “adjournment motion” includes daily adjournment motions and any motion to adjourn the proceedings of the Assembly for a specified or unspecified period.
  6. Standing Order 20 is amended by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following:
    - 20(1) In a debate on a motion, if a member moves an amendment, that member may only speak to the amendment and the main question in one speech.
  7. Standing Order 21 is struck out and the following is substituted:
    - 21(1) A member of the Executive Council may, on at least one day’s notice, propose a motion for the purpose of allotting a specified number of hours for consideration and disposal of proceedings on a Government motion or a Government Bill and the motion shall not be subject to debate or amendment except as provided in suborder (3).
    - (2) A motion under suborder (1)
      - (a) that applies to a Government Bill shall only refer to one stage of consideration for the Bill;
      - (b) shall only apply when the Bill or motion that is the subject of the time allocation motion has already been debated in the Assembly or been considered in Committee of the Whole.
    - (3) A member of the Executive Council may outline the reasons for the motion under suborder (1) and a member of the Official Opposition may respond but neither speech may exceed 5 minutes.
  8. Standing Order 23 is amended by striking out clause (g) and substituting the following:
    - (g) refers to any matter pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination
      - (i) of a criminal nature from the time charges have been laid until passing of sentence, including any appeals and the expiry of appeal periods from the time of judgment, or
      - (ii) of a civil nature that has been set down for a trial or notice of motion filed, as in an injunction proceeding, until judgment or from the date of filing a notice of appeal until judgment by an appellate court, where there is probability of prejudice to any party but where there is any doubt as to prejudice, the rule should be in favour of the debate;
  9. Standing Order 29 is struck out and the following is substituted:
    - 29(1) Time limits on speaking in debate in the Assembly on Government motions, Government Bills and orders and private Bills shall be as follows:
      - (a)(i) the Premier,
      - (ii) the Leader of the Official Opposition, and
      - (iii) the mover on the occasion of the Budget Address shall be limited to 90 minutes’ speaking time;
      - (b) the mover in debate on a resolution or on a Bill shall be limited to 20 minutes’ speaking time in opening debate and 15 minutes in closing debate;
      - (c) the member who speaks immediately following the mover in debate on a resolution or on a Bill shall be limited to 20 minutes;
      - (d) except as provided in clauses (a) to (c), no member shall speak for longer than 15 minutes in debate.
    - (2) (a) Subject to clause (b), following each speech on the items in debate referred to in suborder (1), a period not exceeding 5 minutes shall be made available, if required, to allow members to ask questions and comment briefly on matters relevant to the speech and to allow responses to each member’s questions and comments;
    - (b) the 5 minute question and comment period referred to in clause (a) is not available following the speech from

- (i) the mover of the resolution or the Bill in opening or closing debate, and
  - (ii) the member who speaks immediately after the mover.
- (3) Time limits on speaking in debate on motions other than Government motions, public Bills and orders other than Government Bills and orders, written questions and motions for returns shall be as follows:
- (a) the Premier and the Leader of the Official Opposition shall be limited to 20 minutes' speaking time;
  - (b) the mover in debate of a resolution or a Bill shall be limited to 10 minutes' speaking time and 5 minutes to close debate;
  - (c) all other members shall be limited to 10 minutes' speaking time in debate.
10. Standing Order 30(4) is amended in clause (a) by adding "the debate proceeds and" before "the Speaker".
11. Standing Order 32 is amended by adding the following after suborder (2):
- (2.1) When a division is called in Committee of the Whole or Committee of Supply, a member may request unanimous consent to waive suborder (2) to shorten the 10 minute interval between division bells.
12. Standing Order 34 is amended by adding the following after suborder (2):
- (2.1) Amendments to written questions and motions for returns must
- (a) be approved by Parliamentary Counsel on the sitting day preceding the day the amendment is moved, and
  - (b) be provided to the mover of the written question or motion for a return no later than 11 a.m. on the day the amendment is to be moved.
13. Standing Order 37 is amended by adding the following after suborder (3):
- (4) For the purposes of this Standing Order and Standing Order 37.1, a tabling must be in paper form.
14. The following is added after Standing Order 37:
- 37.1(1) Documents may be tabled by providing the required number of copies to the Clerk before 11 a.m. any day the Assembly sits.
- (2) When the Clerk receives a tabling under suborder (1) that is in order, the Clerk shall read the title of the tabling when Tabling Returns and Reports is called in the daily routine.
15. Standing Order 39.1 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 39.2 and adding the following before Standing Order 39.2:
- 39.1(1) The sequence of motions other than Government motions shall be determined by a random draw of names of members who have submitted written notice to the Clerk no later than 3 days prior to the date of the draw.
- (2) The draw referred to in suborder (1) shall be held on a date set by the Speaker in the July preceding the session that the motions are expected to be moved.
- (3) Prior to a motion other than a Government motion being moved, members may switch the positions in accordance with the guidelines prescribed by the Speaker.
- (4) A member who has a motion other than a Government motion on the Order Paper may, upon providing 4 sitting days' notice, withdraw the motion before it is to be moved in the Assembly.
- (5) When a motion is withdrawn under suborder (4), the Order Paper shall indicate "withdrawn" next to the motion number.
16. Standing Order 48 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 48(1) and by adding the following after suborder (1):
- (2) Dissolution has the effect of nullifying an order or address of the Assembly for returns or papers.
17. The following is added after Standing Order 48:
- 48.1 A member of the Executive Council may, on one day's notice, move a motion to reinstate a Government Bill from a previous session of the current Legislature to the same stage that the Bill stood at the time of prorogation and the motion shall not be subject to debate or amendment.
18. Standing Order 49 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 49(1) At the commencement of each session, standing committees of the Assembly must be established for the following purposes:
- (a) Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, consisting of 21 members,
  - (b) Public Accounts, consisting of 17 members,
  - (c) Private Bills, consisting of 21 members,
  - (d) Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund, consisting of 9 members,
  - (e) Legislative Offices, consisting of 11 members.
- (2) At the commencement of the first session of each Legislature, the Assembly must establish the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services consisting of 11 members.
- (3) The Assembly must determine the membership of the committees established under this Standing Order by resolution which shall not be subject to debate or amendment.
- (4) The composition of the membership of the committees established under this Standing Order must be proportionate to the number of seats held by each party in the Assembly.
- (5) The proportionate membership of committees as prescribed under suborder (4) may be varied by an agreement among all House Leaders.
- (6) The Clerk of the Assembly shall post in the Legislature Building lists of members of the several standing and special committees appointed during each session.
19. Standing Order 52 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 52 The Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund shall report to the Assembly on the Fund as prescribed in the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act.
20. Standing Order 56 is amended by striking out suborders (2) to (8).
21. Standing Order 57 is amended by striking out suborders (1) to (6).
22. Standing Order 58 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 58(1) In this Standing Order, "sitting day" means any afternoon or evening that the Committee of Supply considers estimates for not less than 2 hours unless there are no members who wish to speak prior to the conclusion of the 2 hours.
- (2) The number of sitting days that the Committee of Supply is called to consider the main estimates shall equal the number of members of the Executive Council with portfolio.

- (3) The Committee of Supply shall consider estimates in the following manner:
- (a) the Minister, or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, and members of the opposition may speak during the first hour, and
  - (b) any member may speak thereafter.
- (4) Subject to suborder (5), the vote on an estimate before the Committee of Supply shall be called after it has received not less than 2 hours of consideration unless there are no members who wish to speak prior to the conclusion of the 2 hours.
- (5) On Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoon, during the consideration of the main estimates, the Committee of Supply shall be called immediately after Orders of the Day are called and shall rise and report no later than 5:15 p.m.
- (6) The Leader of the Official Opposition may, by giving written notice to the Clerk and the Government House Leader prior to noon on the day following the Budget Address, designate which department's estimates are to be considered by the Committee of Supply on any Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoon during the period in which the main estimates are to be considered by Committee of Supply.
- (7) When the Leader of the Official Opposition fails to provide notice in accordance with suborder (5), the Government House Leader shall designate the department for consideration by Committee of Supply for that afternoon.
- (8) The estimates of the Legislative Assembly, as approved by the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services, and the estimates of the Officers of the Legislature shall be the first item called in the Committee of Supply's consideration of the main estimates and the Chairman shall put the question to approve the estimates forthwith which shall be decided without debate or amendment.
- (9) In respect of the supplementary estimates and interim supply estimates, a member of the Executive Council may, with at least one day's notice, make a motion to determine the number of days that the Committee of Supply may be called, and the question shall be decided without debate or amendment.
23. Standing Order 59 is amended
- (a) in suborder (1)
    - (i) by striking out "Monday," and
    - (ii) by striking out "midnight" and substituting "11 p.m.";
  - (b) by striking out suborder (2).
24. Standing Order 60 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 60 Committees of the whole Assembly shall rise and report prior to the time of adjournment.
25. The following is added after Standing Order 68:
- 68.1(1) The sequence of Public Bills and Orders other than Government Bills and Orders shall be determined by a random draw of the names of members who have submitted written notice to Parliamentary Counsel no later than 3 days prior to the date of the draw.
- (2) The draw referred to in suborder (1) shall be held on a date set by the Speaker in the July preceding the session that the Bills are expected to be introduced.
  - (3) Members may switch their positions in accordance with guidelines prescribed by the Speaker.
26. Standing Order 83 is amended
- (a) in suborder (2) by striking out "received, shall be read by the Clerk if the member so requests" and substituting "presented during the daily routine";
  - (b) by adding the following after suborder (2):
    - (3) Petitions must be submitted for approval by Parliamentary Counsel at least one sitting day prior to the petition being presented in the Assembly.
27. Standing Order 83.1 is amended
- (a) in suborders (1) and (2) by striking out "read and received" and substituting "presented";
  - (b) by striking out suborder (3).
28. Standing Order 102 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 102(1) and adding the following after suborder (1):
- (2) The Clerk shall be responsible for the printing of the Votes and Proceedings and the Journals of the Assembly.
29. Standing Order 109 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 109 The Speaker shall, after the end of the fiscal year, prepare an annual report on the Legislative Assembly Office and lay the report before the Assembly if it is then sitting or, if it is not then sitting, within 15 days after the commencement of the next sitting.
30. Standing Order 114 is amended by striking out suborder (2).
31. This motion supersedes the House Leader agreement for the 25th Legislature dated April 10, 2001.
32. This motion comes into force on the first day of the Second Session of the 25th Legislature.

[Adjourned debate November 21: Mr. MacDonald]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very anxious to continue my remarks on Motion 21. There is a lot to cover here in the limited amount of time that a person has left. However, again I would express my disappointment in this motion. I certainly don't see any need for further limiting, in my view, or restricting the opposition, whether it's the Official Opposition or the opposition provided by the third party, in keeping this government accountable.

This press release, for instance, that came out on October 24, 2001: I don't know whether this is an abuse of the executive power of the government or it is an example that the government perhaps doesn't understand the role of the executive branch in the legislative process. I certainly hope it is the latter, Mr. Speaker, because when you have a look at this press release, it states that it's the government of Alberta, and this is the furthest thing from the truth. It is the Progressive Conservative caucus who has come up with this proposed recommendation for changes to the Standing Orders, Motion 21. This isn't government legislation. This isn't a government motion. This is a mechanism or a motion to deal with the rules of the Legislative Assembly. It has absolutely nothing to do with government.

There are certainly individuals within that government that want to restrict and limit the role of the opposition in this Assembly, and if these rules unfortunately do pass, these proposed recommendations are going to further erode democracy as we know it in this province. There's no way around this. Now, if we look at this and we look at question period and we look at the minutes that are allocated to question period and we compare ourselves to other jurisdictions, well, in some jurisdictions, it is only members of the Official Opposition . . .

MS BLAKEMAN: In most jurisdictions.

MR. MacDONALD: In most jurisdictions; I'm corrected by the Member for Edmonton-Centre. In most jurisdictions it is up to the opposition to ask the questions, but here in this Assembly I believe it's a tradition or a change in the rules that goes back perhaps 20 years that government members get to ask questions. So whenever people talk about changing the rules and rearranging the minutes and looking at our time, that is one thing that I do not believe has been considered.

Now, we look at some of the reasons, perhaps, for wanting this Motion 21 by hon. members across the way. It is two years ago that the Premier of this province stated that there was no justification for the Official Opposition, and here's the quote: no justification for the Official Opposition Liberals to exist.

AN HON. MEMBER: What's wrong with that?

MR. MacDONALD: Now, an hon. member over there says: what's the matter with that? This is a reflection of this government. For instance, out in the constituency of I think it's Drayton Valley-Calmar in the last provincial election there was even a sign, Mr. Speaker, that it was un-Albertan, I believe it was quoted, to vote Liberal. What's the matter with that? That is antidemocratic. That is what's the matter with that.

Now, we have this attitude, as I expressed earlier, that reflects over two years ago, Mr. Speaker, and this attitude is again reflected in this motion. It is antidemocratic. It is a further erosion of the democratic principles from which this Legislative Assembly works.

Again, it is noteworthy that one of the proposals would eliminate Standing Order 49(1), which requires a striking committee at the beginning of each session to determine the membership of the various committees. Now, earlier in the remarks from the spokesperson from the government there was a comparison done with the federal House of Commons. Well, I would remind all hon. members of this Assembly that in the House of Commons in Ottawa – and surely the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford has a great deal of experience with this one – all hon. members of the Assembly, regardless of which party they belong to, get to play constructive roles with committees. Here we have committees that don't meet. We have committees that certainly don't allow opposition members on them, and we are now looking at eliminating, as I understand it, two committees . . .

REV. ABBOTT: That never meet.

MR. MacDONALD: As the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar has correctly stated, they never meet. Well, perhaps they should meet. Perhaps it's time that the standing committees on Public Affairs and Law and Regulations were to meet and have a comprehensive review of electricity deregulation in this province. I'm sure the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar's constituents are concerned about the high cost of electricity in the province and this whole boondoggle that we call electricity deregulation. Instead of taking a standing committee and eliminating it, perhaps we should put it to work.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment earlier this afternoon was talking about putting all Albertans to work, the clients of AISH and the clients of SFI, and how beneficial it is to put those individuals to work. Well, perhaps with this large majority an all-party committee could be struck under Law and Regulations to exam this issue of how we have squandered, how we have gone from one of the lowest prices of electricity in North America to one of the highest and now are settling back into the middle range with this electrical deregulation. That is only one purpose that the Committee on Law and Regulations could be used for.

For the members of this Assembly, the powers of committees should be noted. When we're thinking of doing away with two committees, I remind members that Standing Orders of the Assembly are largely silent on the powers of standing committees. In effect, these committees function in accordance with the provisions of section 14 of the Legislative Assembly Act. I'm not going to go into any more detail on that, but I would encourage all members of this Assembly to have a look at that, the Legislative Assembly Act, and perhaps there would be a better understanding of the differences between the various levels of government and the independence of these levels of government, whether they be the executive, the judicial, or the legislative branch.

Mr. Speaker, another curtain on democracy, in my view, is the section that is dealing with sub judice, section 8. Earlier an hon. member of this Assembly replied to me that there is a period of about 35 days in which members of the opposition could perhaps raise a question in this Assembly between different filing dates in court cases. Thirty-five days may seem like a long time, but when a Legislative Assembly such as this one sits so infrequently, that perhaps is not the right thing to do. There was a very, very interesting conversation at our caucus meeting this morning regarding this, and there were many, many good issues in regard to section 8 brought forward.

So at this time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring forward an amendment to the Assembly. If I could ask one of the pages to please bring it to the attention of the table officers and have it distributed to all members.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, while this amendment is being circulated, it simply reads that "Government Motion 21 be amended by striking out section 8." That essentially is what the amendment is.

Hon. member, you have approximately five minutes still in your speaking allocation if you want to proceed. You're on the amendment now.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes. The amendment is to move that Government Motion 21 be amended by striking out section 8. As I said earlier, this restricts the Official Opposition's role, and it is a muzzle to prevent us from doing our job, which is to hold the government accountable.

For instance, if this section is not to be removed and it is to go ahead, this would essentially render this House, this Legislative Assembly, incapable of inquiring about issues such as West Edmonton Mall or the Jaber case or any other criminal case for the years that it may take them to be resolved. This narrow window, this little opening in the window, this 35 days as it is described, would be gone.

Research indicates that this section is tougher than in any other jurisdiction. Now, why shouldn't members be allowed to ask the tough questions? What is being hidden? What exactly is being hidden? There are limited resources on this side of the floor, Mr. Speaker. There may be more to this than meets the eye. We do not have the opportunity, the research resources to have a look at every issue in detail. When we stand up in this Assembly, whether it be a government member or one of the members of the opposition, and ask one of the hon. members in Executive Council a question and they stand up and they say: oh, Mr. Speaker, I can't comment; it's before the courts – we will hear this day in and day out in the future.

Not only is that a poor reflection on this Assembly and the members in it, but it is a poor reflection on all of the province, because the public, whenever the statement "I can't comment; it's before the courts" is made, is immediately going to become even more suspicious of their elected officials, and we have to be careful of this. This amendment is a way for everyone to ensure that this does not happen. What is the matter with the existing Standing Orders? Why do we need to go even further? That is my question, and I would ask all hon. members of this Assembly to please support this amendment.

Now, I see the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore smiling, and I don't know whether that's a positive or a negative. I hope the hon. member certainly supports this amendment, but in light of the time that I have left, Mr. Speaker, I would be very anxious to hear the arguments from the hon. member about why we need to limit even further the ability of the opposition to ask the tough questions that need to be asked in order to hold this government accountable.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on the amendment.

MS BLAKEMAN: Absolutely. And thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to have the opportunity to rise and speak on the amendment as proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. Briefly, the amendment is proposing that section 8 be struck from these proposed Standing Order changes. What's being suggested in section 8 is quite a widening of the understanding and interpretation of sub judice and gives it a very wide scope, indeed, as it relates to our business here in the Assembly.

Well, what does that really mean to us? There needs to be a separation between what's done in the Assembly and what's done in the courts. Often I get people phoning me, and they'd like me to be able to phone the courts and say that this person's son is a good person – or so they tell me – and this shouldn't go against them, and can I do something to help them. I always explain to these people that it's important that there is a separation between what we're doing in the Assembly and what happens in the courts. The reason that it would be equally wrong for your neighbour to phone another MLA or the same one and have them phone the courts and go, "We think this particular person is really bad, and the sentence should be twice as hard on them" is the same reason why I can't be interfering. There has to be a separation so that we do have an unbiased court system. Our job in this Assembly is to write good legislation which can then be clearly interpreted and implemented by the court system.

We have had a sub judice rule in place under our Standing Orders for some time, and the interpretation of that sub judice has been that it included criminal proceedings. This change would be including civil proceedings and any appeals and any notices of any motions, which extends the prohibition of speaking or of questioning around any case that's active in front of the courts to cover the whole thing now, which could be a very long period of time.

My colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar had talked about that window of opportunity, of the 35 days before an appeal had to be filed, I think, that gave members of the Assembly an opportunity to ask questions of the government around a case that in fact had been decided, and that 35 days before the last possible opportunity for an appeal to be brought forward was an opportunity for the House to ask questions. The way this is being suggested now essentially renders the House incapable of inquiring into issues that are before the courts in any way.

Let me be specific here.

- (g) refers to any matter pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination
  - (i) of a criminal nature from the time charges have been laid until passing of sentence including any appeals and the expiry of appeal periods from the time of judgment, or
  - (ii) of a civil nature that has been set down for a trial or notice of motion filed, as in an injunction proceeding, until judgment or from the date of filing a notice of appeal until judgment by an appellate court.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Now, I mean, notices of motions can be filed on anything for all kinds of reasons, and in fact multiple ones can be filed, which severely limits the ability to question the government on issues that are so serious that they have appeared before the courts. I think that there is probably a reasonable use of sub judice, but I don't see what's happening here as being reasonable in any way, shape, or form. It is really muzzling the ability of the opposition or in the case of the Alberta Legislature any private member to ask questions of the government.

Where does this have other effects? I'm in my second term in this House, and I have already seen where commercial interests or other interests can attempt to control MLAs by throwing a suit at them and charging them, usually in a civil suit, with something. That has a pretty chilling effect on MLAs, and really it would be possible to shut down discussion of just about any issue that an MLA was bringing before this Assembly. If an outside interest decides to sue them or bring a charge against them in whatever way, that's the end of the discussion of that issue in this House. So it's a very interesting way to put a lid on just about any issue you can think of.

Now, obviously there would have to be a working in concert between what the members of the government did not wish to discuss and partners in the community that would be looking to bring forward the charges, but frankly I think we've seen that in the past. It puts a severe onus and a difficulty upon the MLA who now has this charge against him, because you have to try and go and find a lawyer and you've got to come up with the two or three grand that's going to get you into court just to answer that first motion or that first charge.

There's always a question about how this risk management fund actually works in this House and whether, in fact, nuisance suits that are brought against members of the opposition would be covered by the risk management fund. You would think that they would be, but given the way this government operates, that's not a for sure thing. Even if it does, we have a situation where in wanting to muzzle an issue from being brought forward in front of the Assembly, we have a charge being brought by private interests out in the community, and then, in fact, taxpayers' money has to be spent if there's an approval by the risk management fund to cover the cost of the MLAs going into court to defend themselves against whatever charge this is. So we're now limiting the discussion in the House of a number of issues, pretty wide issues, anything that anyone can think to bring a suit forward on, and we're incurring additional costs for the taxpayers by having to pull in this risk management fund.

Where have we seen this before? What's possible here? Without looking too far back, there have been a number of issues that have come before this House that have involved some of the issues and points that I'm raising here. We had the Principal Group. That's fairly far back but certainly involved the government's choices and policies in how certain things were regulated, and there were some questions that were able to be asked. Under these changes there would be no discussion on that. That affected an awful lot of Albertans and even wider than that, people across Canada. We wouldn't be able to have questions asked or answered on that under these new rules.

We still have cases ongoing right now around the involvement of government policy with West Edmonton Mall and Alberta Treasury Branches. We don't know what's happening there. We can't ask the questions, but there's another example of taxpayers' money being involved in something, choices and policies of the government that may have enabled private interests to benefit, conflict of interest. We don't know what all is involved with that, because we can't examine it.

Here's one. We had a seniors' report that was commissioned by the government which was then shredded, and we weren't able to get any information on that. Now, there wasn't, in fact, a court case brought forward about that, but there could have been very quickly, which would have prohibited anyone from discussing that in this Assembly. So you can see that very quickly just about any issue one can think of someone could bring a suit forward on, and that would be verboten to be discussed or questioned in this Assembly.

What about Bill 11, the privatization of health care? Certainly there were a number of private interests there who were itching to shut that discussion down as quickly as possible. It's not hard to imagine something coming forward from that. Or let's look a little further back when we had the Hotel de Health, which brought a charge against a member of the opposition which shut down that discussion and that member's ability to go forward and question the government any further on Hotel de Health. Now, that was an issue that really got Albertans hot under the collar, and they wanted to hear more about this. They wanted the questions asked and answered in the House. It certainly put a chill on that MLA when they had a suit brought against them, and then of course under these circumstances they now would be totally shut down and wouldn't be able to talk about it.

Here's another one. It may not even be where there's a suit or a charge directly against a member of the Assembly, but what about other cases that are brought up out there that affect government policy or perhaps should affect government policy? An example there is the Jaber case that was up last spring and brought forward questions about a lobbyist registry and whether the government had considered that and whether it was appropriate and whether they'd be working on it. In fact, we've never heard back from the government on that, although we were told that we would hear back in two weeks, but that was two weeks an awfully long time ago. Because that case went on and then there was consideration of an appeal and there were a number of notices of motion in there, that would have been the end of that. No more questions could have been asked around that.

So now I've talked about the kinds of issues and how the change in the sub judice rule could be used by others to severely limit what's being discussed in this Assembly and what the government is questioned on and can reply to. Around that I've talked a little bit about the risk management fund and whether it's accessible to members, and we don't know that. There are still questions out there. In fact, there's a court case out there about whether it was appropriate for that risk management fund to have been used by a previous member of this Assembly. Now, here I'm starting to watch what I'm saying very carefully because . . . [interjections] Oh, I'm being cautioned with good advice – I hope it's good advice – from the members across the way. But right now I'm having to think very carefully and tread very carefully on the words that I choose to put this issue before this House. How appropriate is that?

Now, I think it's perfectly appropriate that one does not sling people's names around and drag them through the mud, but if this is a legitimate issue that is of concern to taxpayers, is of concern to citizens in Alberta, we should be able to be discussing it in here. That's why we have privilege as members. That's part of our job as members, to be bringing those issues into this House. Our ability to speak about things without being limited and censured is about to change in many ways, but this is one of the ways specifically that it's going to change.

This has been an interesting process overall, because as the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was pointing out, there does seem to be an attitude that this Assembly is a department of the government. When we're talking about changes in Standing Orders that are affecting this Assembly and it comes out on government letterhead – it doesn't come out on letterhead from the party caucus. No. It comes out on government letterhead. This is not government business. It is the business of the Legislative Assembly, and that's always interesting.

I know that the Speaker has been very careful when he opens this Assembly – and he speaks to new members who are elected about being very careful – when talking about members of Executive Council, which are members of cabinet, and private members, which would be everyone that isn't in cabinet, including the opposition. Those distinctions are being made, and in fact that's appropriate. We do have members of Executive Council, private members, and members of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. What happens in here is that we're all supposed to be equal. That is the setup of that, and that's not what I see.

I even have the Minister of Environment shaking his head somewhat sadly at me as though I don't understand the principles of parliamentary process in the Commonwealth.

DR. TAYLOR: That's because there are 74 of us and seven of you, and that's not equal.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, the Minister of Environment is pointing out once again . . .

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Through the chair, please.

MS BLAKEMAN: Of course. I'm happy to speak through the chair.

The Minister of Environment is speaking once again about a particular party, one with 74 seats, and the fact that that made them government. It may have made them government; it did not make them God. It did not. In this Assembly there are still private members who are supposed to have equal standing, and we're having that eroded.

Now, let me pull back in to be specific to the amendment that we're discussing, in which the rule of sub judice is being expanded to the point where any issue could be made out of bounds and off topic. The time period that is involved in this also stretches almost a lifetime, because when you look at some court cases – and let me look at the West Edmonton Mall/Alberta Treasury Branches court case and whatever the heck is happening in there. Now, that court case has been up the entire time I've been elected – that's five years – and I don't think we've even gone into the appeal process on that. But, gee, come next spring when we're back in session and these amendments to the Standing Orders kick into place, I won't be able to talk about it anymore even in the times between appeals. I'm saying this to underline how long a period of time it takes certain issues out of this House and takes away from the ability of the opposition to question the government on its involvement in these cases. I think it puts the government's actions and involvement out of bounds. It insulates them.

I don't know, but government may well have been intimately involved in decisions that enabled or allowed companies to do things, and they're now before the courts as a result of it. I'm not being specific to any given case here. My point is that it puts government actions out of bounds, and therefore there's a lack of accountability to the people. The accountability now is only coming through the courts, and that's not the courts' job. They're not there to hold the government accountable – that's what the members in this Assembly are here to do – and all they can do is make a decision on the facts of law that are before them, but that isn't about whether government policy enabled this bad thing, whatever it is, to happen.

When I looked at all of the amendments that are being made to the Standing Orders, it struck me that the government had set out to change everything that had been done in the last seven or eight years that irritated them. I've been able to sort of go through and pick out memorial amendments or attribute different amendments back to individuals who have made use of parliamentary process to do something. I think this one I'm going to call the Howard Sapers memorial amendment, because in fact he was a member who was involved in a suit from an outside source around private health care that did muzzle him in this House. He tried very hard to bring the government to account and to get information on whatever the government's involvement is around West Edmonton Mall and the Alberta Treasury Branches. So this is the Howard Sapers memorial amendment.

DR. TAYLOR: Do you see where Howard is today?

MS BLAKEMAN: The Minister of Environment is wondering how I say that this is possible. It truly is. I think the amendments that are being proposed here are punitive, and they're meant to be punitive. I can go through and identify in each case what action they are trying to stop that in fact legitimately had been brought forward, usually by a member of the opposition.

So this particular amendment I will note as the Howard Sapers memorial amendment change in the Standing Orders, and I do ask people to vote in favour of this amendment. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: On the amendment, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I take this opportunity to speak on the amendment before the House. The amendment proposes to move that Government Motion 21 be amended by striking out section 8. Section 8 in the government's motion is an attempt to replace a subsection of Standing Order 23, which at this time is effective and is used to govern the business of this House. The Standing Orders currently in place and in use were updated and became effective on April 23, 2001, so that's the copy I'm speaking from.

When I look at the proposed change to the existing Standing Order 23, I find that its subsection (g)(i) that is being replaced. The replacement means that this Assembly will lose the right to ask questions and engage in debate with respect to a matter that may be before a criminal court from the time that the charges are laid to the time that the final decisions in the appellate court are made. This time may extend to years and years.

All of this already, the way the Standing Order currently stands,

I think is sufficiently restrictive to protect the rights of people charged, because charges in criminal court, when they're laid, are laid along with the presumption that the person who is being charged is innocent until proven guilty. So we do have to be careful about what we say about such cases when they are being heard in the court. The existing Standing Order 23 and its subsection (g)(i) I think are sensitive to the need for us to stay out of saying or doing anything that might prejudice a trial when it's under way. But when a trial comes to a certain stage and it ends, from that point to the time when a notice of appeal may be issued, there is that interim period during which the present orders allow us to ask questions, to raise questions that may be relevant with respect to the accountability of the government or the conduct of a member of the Assembly, whether that person is on the government side or on the other side. All of this is done.

When I read the last provision there, which is the concluding paragraph of subsection (g), it says, "Where there is probability of prejudice to any party but where there is any doubt as to prejudice, the rule should be in favour of the debate." So the existing Standing Order recognizes the clear division of powers between the three important branches of government: the executive, the judiciary, and the Legislature. I think those powers, the ability of each branch of the government to maintain its control over its jurisdiction, is an exceedingly important principle. The proposed amendment from the government side as part of Motion 21 I think in a sense questions the separation of powers and the principle that the Legislature, unless absolutely necessary, must never surrender the powers that it is given by the citizens, by the electors, by the voters in a democratic society. So that's the principal issue involved here.

There is the question of whether or not these changes are needed, the manner in which they have been proposed and brought forward. There are clearly other issues on which we will continue to express serious concern and reservation. Examples of particular cases before the courts have been given where this Assembly has had the opportunity and has used that opportunity in the past to ask questions on matters in which the conduct of the government or a particular decision of a minister or someone else has been put to question; I think rightly so. The government has not in proposing this change in the existing Standing Orders – I think one thing that will be required of us is to make a persuasive case, hopefully a compelling case, for a change in the rules which have proven more or less helpful in both respecting and protecting the rights of this Assembly, the rights of the Legislature, the rights of each one of us as members of this Legislature.

The case has to be made on the grounds that the use of those rights by this House or by a member of this House have in fact in the past prejudiced the dispensation of justice, the trial that might have been under way. No such evidence has been produced. In my more or less five years in the Assembly there are several of those cases, when they were concluded after the first charge was laid and the trial was held and the decision was given by the court – from that point on until the notice of appeal was given, there was a period in which questions in this House were raised, and at no time, on no occasion did the raising of those questions in any way prejudice the system of justice or the procedures of judicial function and activity. No person has been harmed. No principles of, quote, procedure have been compromised.

Given the fact that the existing rules have worked to protect the rights of the Assembly, the rights of the Legislature, and have at the same time not caused any harm whatsoever either to the authority of the courts or to the interest of the accused, I ask the question: where is the need? Where is the problem? Where is the need to do this? If there is no such evidence and we can't demonstrate the need for this change in terms of the harm done to the parties or doing anything that will harm the rights of the courts and the judicial system, then one is led to ask: why is it being proposed at all? Is it poor judgment, or is it motivated by some other concerns?

Mr. Speaker, I'm led to speculate that there may be other reasons, that the reasons are such that they're more to do with taking away from this Legislature, from this House, the opportunity to ask legitimate questions, questions about accountability for particular actions or of particular persons, whether they're on the government side or on the other, for having done things that in the judgment of the person asking questions require scrutiny, require public challenge, and require debate. To me, to take away that right, to take away that opportunity is to undermine the very process which we all value and seem to want to say is desirable. Otherwise we wouldn't have this on the books.

An issue like this, where changes in Standing Orders may affect the rights of the Assembly, the powers of the Assembly, the powers of each member of this Assembly, should not be seen in partisan terms. It is true that it's our obligation as members on the opposite side, in opposition, to ask those tough questions that sometimes are unpleasant to ask. It's not always terribly enjoyable to ask a member on the other side of the House questions that may reflect on the conduct of the individual, but those questions must be asked. That's our public obligation.

If one occupies this office that we all occupy, I think we have certain obligations. Those obligations compel each one of us to ask those tough questions.

DR. TAYLOR: Not to cast aspersions.

DR. PANNU: Whether they are seen by some as casting aspersions is a matter of judgment, but in my view the principle that must prevail is the ability of each member in this House to be able to raise those questions so long as in the judgment of the person who's asking those questions the questions being raised are crucial to the protection of the integrity of institutions, protection of public interests. Clearly, these are matters of judgment. All of us can't always agree on those matters of judgment. So given that we're all human, that we're all fallible, we should be modest enough to at least say: well, there can be mistakes made.

Nevertheless, because mistakes are made, the right that we all have as elected members of the Assembly must remain primary. That should never be challenged, and in my view this amendment would challenge that right. It challenges the right of the Assembly. I, therefore, ask all members to reconsider this. I ask the House leader, the deputy House leader, and members of all caucuses, including the government caucus, to reconsider this. I think it's going in the wrong direction to take away what's in Standing Order 23(g) and replace it with the proposed amendment, and that's why I guess the amendment that's before us seeks the striking of that section 8 in the motion.

I did refer very briefly to the fact that the existing order, Standing Order 23, works. There's no place that it has failed us or the government. Therefore, changing it in a way which may restrict the ability of us as elected members to raise questions, to hold the government accountable isn't justified.

So I speak, Mr. Speaker, in favour of this amendment being proposed, and I would hope that I have succeeded at least in part in persuading members on all sides of the House to vote for this amendment on which I've just concluded speaking. Thank you.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton Mill Woods on the amendment.

DR. MASSEY: On the amendment. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to speak in support of the amendment, which asks that Government Motion 21 be amended by striking section 8. Section 8, of course, is all about sub judice. One of the concerns that we have with sub judice is the balance that we have to strike between freedom of speech and the due process of law, and that's at the heart of the sub judice rules.

Freedom of speech is a cornerstone of our democracy, Mr. Speaker. It's the hallmark of most democracies. It's such an important principle to us that we have fought wars to protect that freedom, and we're not alone. There have been many around this world who have fought and died to protect that freedom of speech. There's been a whole body of law developed around free speech and challenges to those that would in any way curtail freedom of speech, and most democratic governments' constitutions make mention of freedom of speech, including our own. So it's a freedom that is at the heart of democracy, and I think that if you were to ask most laypeople to name the freedoms that they value most, freedom of speech would certainly rank high among those.

It's a bit of a two-edged sword, because freedom of speech allows people to say anything they want, within limits of course. They can talk about the untenable. They can talk about things that just don't seem to make sense to the mainstream population. They can talk about the unorthodox, and they can talk about things that are unpopular. They can make proposals that people take offence with. They do that without fear of punishment from the government, and that's at the basis of freedom of speech and concerns around freedom of speech, that you be able to say what you think and what you feel without fear that there'll be retribution.

Again, as I said, it's really critical to democracy and the way that our democracy works. The intent, of course, is that people will be able to say what they want and that it will allow ideas in our society to develop, that through that freedom our culture is refined, and it's through that freedom that arrogance or the abuse of power is controlled. So it's something that is essential to not only democracy but the growth of our culture and democracy, and it's a check on those that would abuse the benefits of living in a free and open society.

As we've seen in the discussion this afternoon, freedom of speech is not absolute. There are times when there are other interests that outweigh that freedom of speech. If there's a chance that speech may prejudice a particular case, then there are constraints put on freedom of speech, and that's based on some assumptions about court cases, of course. The assumption is that jurors and witnesses who are exposed to material that's not part and parcel of a court case, that hasn't been tested in a court will be influenced. I'd like to come back a little later to talk about a number of studies that have looked at just that question in terms of how influential media stories and comments that are made in Legislatures are on the behaviour of jurors and the kinds of decisions that they make.

There's a concern that impartial verdicts are impossible without some constraint on information prior to a trial being undertaken, and I guess the other assumption is that you have to curtail the things that are said prior to a trial. It might not be neutralized in the court with the use of evidence or judicial warning or mechanisms that are available within the court. So the fear for the kinds of damage that people speaking freely about a case might do in terms of the accused are used as reason for sub judice.

There are other reasons, of course, why freedom of speech is set aside. We've seen some discussions in the last number of weeks as we look at some of the terrorism legislation. When state security is at risk, there have been actions taken by people to protect them through curtailing freedom of speech. If there have been instances when public order has been, again, at risk, there have been some restrictions placed on the freedom of speech. There have been restrictions put on freedom of speech when individual citizens and their reputation could be damaged. So that freedom of speech is not an absolute freedom that is unfettered and not interfered with in our society, yet I think we're very, very careful and pause before we do anything that would interfere with that freedom.

[The Speaker in the chair]

That freedom was hard won, Mr. Speaker. It has its precedent in England, of course. The right to free speech stems from the right to freedom of the press established in England in the 17th century, and that's really where the notion of freedom of speech came about. Free speech was only extended to Members of Parliament initially. At one time, in the late 1600s, all the presses had to be licensed, and it was only when those press laws were not renewed that freedom of speech became more generally available and became a matter of principle. So freedom of speech has a long history, and as I said, it's been long, long defended and fought for.

I guess the question we have before us as we look at this amendment, Mr. Speaker, is: can justice be done and be seen to be done in the absence of sub judice? If we look at the amendment this afternoon, the government is saying no, that without sub judice justice in the province and elsewhere won't be done. From the perspective of the opposition, of course, the answer is the opposite, that sub judice and extending sub judice or interpreting it even more broadly than it already is does not serve us well and is an unnecessary restriction of freedom of speech.

I think there are a number of concerns we have with the sub judice rule and our reasons for not wanting one. One, of course, has been alluded to before, and that's time limits. Time limits for those of us in the Legislature, of course, are of the essence. When events happen that are of concern to this House, the faster they can be raised the better in terms of serving the public interest. The effect of extending sub judice, of course, is to postpone those debates and to drag them out. In many cases I would suspect that the effect is to put topics off the public agenda until court proceedings are completed. That can have some political benefits for a government, in particular when they can rest easy that any involvement they may have with public issues that are before the courts will not be raised or will be postponed for some time, and sub judice becomes a bit of a shelter. So for the opposition the time limits are of considerable concern.

One of the concerns, of course, is the influence of the media and the claim that the media will be reporting on items that are raised here in the Legislature or there'll be the publication of issues raised here, questions in Hansard, so that the debate becomes public. The charge is always made that that publication by the media or by Hansard is going to influence jurors. There are some counterarguments to that. I think the most common argument is that media stories tend to be quickly forgotten and that maybe – and I think it's certainly the case here – we tend to overestimate the public's awareness of news and issues that are being discussed here. I think it also ignores the fact that many people are fairly critical readers of news reports and of things that are said in this Legislature too, I suspect, Mr. Speaker. Most readers are fairly critical. So the charge that it has an undue influence on jurors I think is one that is really open to question.

It also, I think, is based on the assumption that jurors come to a trial without prejudices and preconceptions, that it's sort of a tabula rasa, this blank slate that they walk into a courtroom with, that you have to make sure that you don't do anything to disturb that slate. I think that's fairly hard to defend. I think it's really difficult to think that jurors would be wholly unacquainted with the facts of high-profile cases in this province. I think that's really an unreasonable expectation. I think the fact that they'll come to a jury with a diversity of opinions also speaks against not trusting them to be able to listen and to hear information about a case without being unduly influenced. Most jurors are average people, fairly well informed, and if there's something high profile happening in the community, they're going to know about it and even have some opinions.

There have been some American surveys for and against, I have to admit, the hypothesis that prejudicial pretrial publicity can lead to bias in jurors. A number of groups have looked at that. The conclusions, as I said, are contradictory:

Although jurors were more likely to believe that a defendant was guilty after reading a "sensational" story than a conservative story, there was no difference in how the jurors who had read the "sensational" story and those who had read the conservative story would vote for conviction.

So the kind of profile that a story had, sensational or not sensational, didn't seem to end up influencing their decision.

There's evidence from some of the studies that there may be stories before a trial but that the trial process itself takes and eliminates any of that prejudice that might exist. There are indications that those "persons not exposed to pre-trial prejudicial news coverage found the defendant guilty more often than those who were exposed to such coverage." So there's a discrepancy in the findings in terms of the coverage that we have.

Mr. Speaker, when you put it all together and you look at what's in the balance – and that is the balance between freedom of speech, in this case freedom of the opposition to raise matters in the Legislature, versus a broader interpretation of sub judice – I think that the amendment before us makes good sense, and that's that we should make sure we don't err on curtailing the kinds of questions and issues and speeches that can be made on issues in our province.

With that I conclude. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the amendment.

DR. TAFT: On the amendment. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My understanding of sub judice rules in many other jurisdictions under the British parliamentary system is that they are not handled in specific Standing Orders but that they are handled by convention. The effect of this amendment would be to achieve that same outcome for our Legislature here, to remove sub judice issues from the Standing Orders and to leave them to convention. Now, I suppose the crucial question would be: is convention adequate? If we pass this amendment, how would things work? I take it on the experience of British parliamentary systems throughout the world, not just in Canada but throughout the world, that it would work just fine. In fact, a great deal of the British parliamentary system relies on convention, relies on precedent, relies on an ongoing interpretation of the current circumstances and how those can be judged by historic events. So I think that the effect of this amendment would be simply to bring us into line with what's done elsewhere.

One of my concerns if we don't proceed with this amendment is that the sub judice clauses under Standing Order 23 – one of them in particular is poorly worded. I think everybody would agree to that. The first section – and I'm here referring to section 23(g)(i) – referring to "criminal nature," I think is pretty clear. Anybody reading that is going to be pretty clear. But if you refer to the subsequent paragraph, that relates to civil issues, it reads:

Of a civil nature that has been set down for a trial or notice of motion filed, as in an injunction proceeding until judgment or from the date of filing a notice of appeal until judgment by an appellate court.

The confusion and what worries me particularly about this clause, if we do not pass the amendment, is that it could be interpreted to mean that civil proceedings are sub judice from the moment notice of motion is filed onward, and notice of motion can be filed at the very beginning when a statement of claim is filed. At least that's my understanding. So there is a risk with the wording that sub judice rules will be greatly extended, and I think we would all share that concern.

I think some of the members in the gallery are with environmental groups, and I'm thinking of a situation in which a civil matter could be raised on an environmental issue, a statement filed, and depending on how this clause was interpreted, suddenly that particular issue would be out of bounds for us to raise in question period or for us to raise in other forms of debate in the Legislature. That's just one very simple but immediate example of why I am concerned about this particular proposal and why I would support the amendment to strike it.

Indeed, I think there is more generally a risk to good parliamentary debate that this sort of precedent could be extended to all kinds of nuisance lawsuits or SLAPP suits. So if a particular issue were to be raised or deserved to be raised in the Legislature and some party outside the Legislature did not want it raised, I would be concerned. Indeed, although there is debate on this, we certainly have had some legal advice to confirm this concern that a SLAPP suit could ultimately shut down all kinds of meaningful debate, meaningful questions in this Legislature.

Now, there are two sides to this, and I've got legal views arguing: yes, you're right to be concerned. I've got legal views arguing: no, there's no need to be concerned. The variance is a result of the awkward wording of clause (g)(ii) under Standing Order 23. I do notice that the proposed amendments actually add one comma to this clause. I've read it without the comma and then I've read it with the comma, and it's not clear to me why the comma is being inserted.

MS BLAKEMAN: Punctuation is important.

DR. TAFT: Yes, punctuation is indeed important. Shifting a comma around can fundamentally alter the meaning of a sentence.

So we've inserted a comma in a location where it doesn't seem to have any particular effect at all except that maybe it heightens my concerns. So it might be useful if anybody here, the House leader or anybody else, has a view on that to enlighten us as to why the comma was inserted there and why not elsewhere. That simply illustrates the confusion that's raised by this clause, and I think it confirms and supports the idea that we should perhaps just strike the clause and rely on convention. As we need to draw on precedent, we can draw on precedent from other Legislatures.

Due process is not an inconvenience. Due parliamentary process is crucially important for us to respect. It has arisen over centuries and centuries of debate and, as other hon. colleagues have raised here, even war. Wars have been fought over the proper way to handle parliamentary debates, and the due processes of the Legislature versus the courts are inevitably from time to time going to be in tension, going to be in conflict. Certainly the courts need to be concerned that what occurs in this Chamber not prejudice their proceedings and prejudice the administration of justice. If, for example, somebody was standing trial or some charge had been laid against an individual on a particular issue and we were to raise that in a particularly inflammatory way or particularly irresponsible manner in this Assembly and the media were to proceed, perhaps conceivably that court case could be affected and the administration of justice could be affected, although some evidence was brought forward here earlier that casts doubt even upon that. Nonetheless, we do have to be extraordinarily sensitive to the administration of justice.

At the same time, we need to be very sensitive to our own rights and indeed responsibilities as MLAs to raise issues that deserve raising and to ask the tough questions that need to be asked and to be free to pursue that and free to speak our minds and free to raise the issues as we see them. There certainly are a number of cases that come to my mind, just sitting here making notes over the last several years, that would raise concerns that there may be moments and maybe, indeed, prolonged periods when we cannot raise particular issues because of lawsuits before the courts.

Some suits have been raised here that may or may not have affected debate but certainly easily could under an interpretation of the sub judice issue. Probably the biggest case that has affected the most people in this province was the Principal Group case. There was a case around West Edmonton Mall. There was a case involving the former Treasurer. There was a case from a private health care company against the former leader of the third party. There's a case by another private health care company against a previous member of the opposition caucus. So we're not just talking theoretically here. There are lots and lots of cases that could be brought forward to stifle debate in this Legislative Assembly. We need to have the maximum flexibility to interpret those and to decide when a stifling may be justified and when it isn't.

Now, on the possibility that this amendment is not passed – and I have to be conscious that some of our amendments may not always succeed.

MS BLAKEMAN: We live in hope.

DR. TAFT: Yes, we live in hope.

There is some consolation to me in the final clause of that particular subsection, assuming it is interpreted in the way I think it was intended. It reads: "Where there is probability of prejudice to any party but where there is any doubt as to prejudice, the rule should be in favour of the debate." So it seems to me that if this amendment does not pass, we will need to then ultimately rely on the interpretation of this final clause. "Where there is any doubt as to prejudice" – in other words, if there's any possibility that prejudice will not be visited upon people in a criminal or civil case – "the rule should be in favour of the debate." So we will in fact be able to proceed. My unease around this is that this is not how the rules have always been interpreted. The sub judice clause could be invoked and frankly, I'm concerned, could be used to shut down legitimate debate here.

These days I think we all need to be particularly conscious of protecting the freedom of speech, and when I say "these days," I'm meaning in this period after September 11. Certainly there is a concern about improving security within our society and monitoring for so-called terrorist activity or activity that could become terrorist activity, but as we are seeing in public debate in the last several weeks, it is not always a clear line between what's terrorism and what's legitimate dissent. My concern is that as we expand the so-called antiterrorism legislation, more and more criminal charges could be applied to more and more groups, who before September 11 would simply be regarded as participating in a legitimate dissent but now run the risk of being charged as terrorists. Even though the charge may ultimately be dropped, throughout that entire process it seems to me that there's a clear risk under this Standing Order that we could not then address the issues related to that charge in this Assembly.

We need ultimately to protect and to stand for freedom. We need to stand for our ability to raise issues, to hammer them out, to agree to disagree, to argue, to even heckle. That certainly happens in here. Ultimately those are freedoms that we have to cherish and freedoms that we have to stand on guard for. I am concerned that as time unfolds and as the personnel of this Assembly, the people responsible for the operations of this Assembly change, the sub judice rule will be used to inhibit those freedoms, to constrain our ability to raise issues, and that it could ultimately be abused.

So I am going to be voting enthusiastically in favour of this amendment, as I'm sure many of the rest of us will be also. I think I've made my reasons clear. I think it will be a vote for freedom.

Mr. Speaker, thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, you've already participated in this amendment.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a few words that I'd like to say this afternoon. I listened with interest to the varied and wide-ranging opinions expressed by the members opposite. So I think it's important to go back to what exactly we're talking about so that the many individuals who are following this debate in the galleries and on the Internet and, I'm sure, those who read Hansard will have some clarity.

The amendment put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar is that Government Motion 21 be amended "by striking out section 8." Now, section 8 says that "Standing Order 23 is amended by striking out clause (g) and substituting the following," and the words follow. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview has said that the effect of this is to have us revert to a convention. The fact is that that is not correct. The effect of this is to revert to the existing Standing Order 23(g). Convention has little to do with this. This Assembly has a history of having a Standing Order dealing with sub judice, and we will continue to have a history of dealing with an order of sub judice regardless of how this amendment is dealt with.

Now, in dealing with what actually is done in section 8 of Motion 21, there are some words added to the existing sub judice rule, and they are the words that deal with the expiry of appeal periods from the time of judgment as it relates to matters "of a criminal nature." As a number of the hon. members have noted, there is a purpose to the sub judice rule. Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms, 6th edition, at pages 153 and 154 contains some comment about that, but I'd like to simply refer to paragraph 505, which in general terms sets out what the purpose of sub judice is.

Members are expected to refrain from discussing matters that are before the courts or tribunals which are courts of record. The purpose of this sub judice convention is to protect the parties in a case awaiting or undergoing trial and persons who stand to be affected by the outcome of a judicial inquiry. It is a voluntary restraint imposed by the House upon itself in the interest of justice and fair play.

As a number of hon. members opposite have noted, there is a test outlined in the existing and indeed in the amended Standing Order 23(g), which talks about the "probability of prejudice to any party" being the essential element that is important in determining whether sub judice has applicability. To those who are following this, it seems to me apparent that in fact a question that is posed in this House while there is a trial on, which is prejudicial to the party to that particular case, is equally prejudicial to that party if that question is asked during the period between the sentence and the filing of the notice of appeal, just as it would be during an appeal period. So what this particular provision does is cover off the relatively short period of time when a party to a case could be at prejudice, and therefore it seems to me it's very much in accord with the concept of justice and fair play being at the heart of the sub judice rule.

I think it is important for people who are following this matter to understand that there is no defined period of a trial; that is, when it begins and when it ends. And there is no defined period for an appeal; that is, when it begins and when it ends. But the issue of a notice of appeal is very much a defined term which is capable of understanding by those who work in the area of criminal cases. It is a very small time period compared to the time of trial and the time of appeal.

So I cannot support the amendment being put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar and would encourage the members to vote against it.

[Motion on amendment lost]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the main motion.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak on Government Motion 21, the main motion. Looking both at the proposed motion with all the amendments proposed in it and also the introductory remarks made by the hon. House leader when he was introducing the motion, one general thrust of his argument as I listened to him was that the changes proposed in Motion 21 are intended to make our work in the House more effective and make the Standing Orders more effective: it'll save us time, it'll provide more opportunities for private members to speak to the private members' bills, and it will rationalize the proceedings of the House if we change the order of business of the House. Those sorts of comments have been made.

He also of course made an interesting comment about why we need to perhaps cut back the time that we have available to speak from 20 minutes to 15 by using the analogy of the high school debate. That I found quite intriguing actually, comparing the business of the Assembly, which is about running a government, about governance and holding governments accountable and passing legislation, as somewhat analogous to a high school debate. He said he was impressed by the rules by which high school debates are conducted, allowing five minutes of questions for all parties taking part in the debate. He wouldn't want to of course bring in that model here to help us sort out our activities in the interest of improving our overall functions in the House. I'll come to that, but I just want to draw attention to the context first, Mr. Speaker, in which this motion is being brought forward and debated.

We have a changed House. We have on the opposition side nine members, and the amount of time that nine members can take to debate any bill, any motion is necessarily much more limited than was the case in the last Assembly, when there were 17 members on the opposite side to speak. So the issue of somehow saving time is one that doesn't make sense to me. That isn't in my view a problem that needs to be addressed by making changes to the our Standing Orders.

I also want to draw the attention of the House to the fact that I tried to look up the number of days that we sit. That is one of the arguments made, by the way, in Motion 21, that we need to reduce the time that members have to speak on private members' bills from 20 minutes to 10 minutes. That will allow more members to speak on bills, and I certainly see the logic of why we should provide opportunity to as many members as elect to speak on private members' bills. I think that's a good idea. But why do we not ask the question of whether or not to allow them to have time to speak on it can be fixed in more than one way. One way, of course, would be to reduce the length of time for which we speak. The other one would be to increase the number of days that we sit in the Legislature. That will certainly allow us more time, give private members more time and all members more time to speak on issues that they feel strongly about.

To compare the number of days that we sit in the House for the year 2001 – and this information has been taken from on-line research on Assembly web sites. This year, for example, the year 2001, the Saskatchewan Assembly sat for 71 days, Nova Scotia for 60 days – and they're back in the fall session now – Ontario, 55 days – and they returned to the Assembly for the fall sitting on September 24. Quebec sat for 49 days, and again resumed the sitting on October 16; Manitoba, 49 days; and New Brunswick, 41 days. We, compared to them, of course, had sat only 26 days this year until we resumed the sitting a couple of weeks ago. Today is our eighth day in session, and 26 plus eight makes 34. How many more days we will go I don't know, but I think we will probably not be able to say that we have sat at least as many days as New Brunswick, which sits for the lowest number of days of the provinces that I mentioned.

So the way to fix the problem is certainly more than one, and I would have liked to see the matter addressed perhaps in presenting the rationale for Motion 21 and the amendments that it proposes to the Standing Orders of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard some other interesting arguments, as I said, with respect to private members' bills. I think we should seriously consider extending the sitting days for the Assembly to fix the problem of members not having enough time to speak on private members' bills. On government bills the argument is that the only people who need to speak, that do normally speak are members of the two opposition parties, and therefore it's only appropriate that we provide an opportunity for government members to ask the opposition members some questions when they are speaking on government bills. Well, the government members, I am told, the private members from the government side, don't speak on government bills because they've already had the extended opportunity via standing committees, public hearings, caucus discussions to have spoken on the government bill. So the only time they need to speak is in the form of asking questions of us.

That has two interesting aspects to it. First, in a parliamentary system I guess there's nothing wrong with seeking information on the argument that's made. I think I'd be very happy to answer questions of fact, questions of information at the end of 20 minutes. So we could extend to 25 minutes that time available for any one member, and we can afford to do that if we are willing to sit for a few more days rather than going in the opposite direction of cutting the time back to 15 minutes and then saying: now you'll be interrogated from the government side.

The other side to this argument is to sort of turn the parliamentary procedure upside down, that somehow we should have what would become a sort of question period from the government to the opposition side. I find it intriguing that this should be suggested as a way of improving the business of the House. As I said, I don't mind getting into some sort of exchange of information provided that we allow for more time to do this. Otherwise it makes no sense, Mr. Speaker.

The intent of changing the order of business – the argument is made that we want to make predictable the time of the question period so that Albertans know exactly when it's going to start. Well, that's certainly one reason why we could do this. There are other Assemblies in this country, Mr. Speaker, who televise all the proceedings of the House, many other Legislatures, from Newfoundland to Saskatchewan, Ontario, Nova Scotia, and B.C. All of these Houses or Assemblies have learned and televise all of their proceedings. So rather than just trying to play around with the one and a half hours of televised time in the Assembly so that we can make a particular part of this proceeding more predictable or fixed in terms of time, I think what we need to do is increase access to the debate in the House to Albertans. In a province as large as ours someone sitting in Pincher Creek should be able to just click on the TV and watch the debate at any time, including question period.

So I don't think the argument given to change the order of business to accommodate interests Albertans have just in the fixed hour for question period makes much sense. We need to go in the opposite direction and increase access, increase visibility to Albertans so they have a sense of participation or at least the ability to watch anytime they want to see what we do here in the House. It certainly would be good for our own discipline, I think, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I have a few other comments here. I think the point has been made – I'll reiterate it at the risk of repeating what has been said, I guess, more than once already. That's the manner in which this change in the Standing Orders is being sought. I think it's inappropriate for the government caucus to proceed unilaterally to bring in these amendments, some of which are quite far reaching, which will impact the ability of this House and particularly the ability of the opposition parties. For a very small caucus like mine, the New Democrat caucus, it would certainly further restrict our ability to contribute to the debate if we were to accept many of the changes that are being made here.

The unilateral way in which the whole process has been undertaken is something that I find unacceptable. I have worked as House leader with other House leaders during my time in this Assembly. I worked with you, Mr. Speaker, and we were able to work out through negotiation, agreements the needed changes in the existing Standing Orders without too much difficulty. I think that's the process that needed to be used. The fact that that route was not even tried suggests that the intention is to steamroll some of these changes regardless. That's unacceptable and should be unacceptable in the Assembly, because these Standing Orders affect all of us. They belong to the Assembly and to all of us, not to one party or one caucus. So the method used to make the changes is not quite the one that should have been adopted in the first place.

I should qualify my remarks by saying that we were consulted once the decision was made and the agenda changes were determined, but those consultations haven't gone very far in terms of allowing us much of an influence in affecting the items of the agenda that we have before us.

I want to turn now to one particular part of the proposed amendments. That is that I want to propose an amendment to Motion 21, proposing by way of this amendment that Motion 21 be amended in section 18 in the proposed Standing Order 49(1). I just want to draw the attention of the House to this. I have the amendment here. Mr. Speaker, do you want me to read the amendment or to circulate it?

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, why don't you just give it to the page for circulation and read your amendment at the same time.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The amendment, as I said, is to the proposed Standing Order 49(1), by adding the following after clause (e). The additions are:

- (f) Justice and Government Services, consisting of 11 members,
- (g) Learning and Employment, consisting of 11 members,
- (h) Energy and Sustainable Development, consisting of 11 members,
- (i) Agriculture and Municipal Affairs, consisting of 11 members,
- (j) Health and Community Living, consisting of 11 members, and
- (k) Economic Development and Finance, consisting of 11 members.

These are the standing committees, and I'm proposing by way of this amendment that the proportionality principle be applied in the composition of these committees as an addition to the amendment of Motion 21 in the section that I just referred to.

If we go this route rather than striking out some committees, Mr. Speaker, it seems to be better to make the standing committees, the policy committees, all-party committees so that they reflect the true composition of the House. Thereby those committees would become more effective, more representative, and be able to reflect more successfully what Albertans want. Such committees would certainly become forums where Albertans can come and speak to their concerns and the issues that they want the government and the Legislature to consider. If this were to be done, I think the work of the Assembly – the job of policy-making, the legislation and statutes that this Assembly proposes, debates, and passes – would reflect comprehensively and truly a broad cross section of the concerns of all the voters of this province, all the citizens of this province.

In addition, of course, they will provide an important role to all three caucuses – my caucus, the New Democrat caucus; the Official Opposition, the Liberal caucus; as well as the government caucus – and will be able to raise issues and concerns and examine and scrutinize proposals that come before those committees either from the government or from interested groups and organizations in the province or from individuals who may have concerns with respect to government policies and issues. In doing that, I think we'll make the functions of these committees much more democratic, much more open, much more representative.

So this amendment that we're proposing, if passed by this House, will be of great consequence. It will mean a great improvement in the way the government does its business, the way the House does its business, the way we all have a say in the substance of the business as well as the manner in which business gets conducted in this House. I would ask all members to give serious consideration to this amendment that I'm proposing and ask them to support this amendment.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I conclude, and we'll have other speakers.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, I would welcome an opportunity to enter the debate on this amendment. I listened very carefully to the hon. member's comments when he proposed that rather than removing some committees that today probably do not fulfill a function that contributes to the process we enter into here, we add a number of committees. The hon. member spoke of the people's ability to provide input to the process, to participate, I think to paraphrase, in debate in the House. You know, I believe that Albertans reflected what they wanted on March 12. I believe Albertans understand that they live in what we call a parliamentary democracy, and I believe Albertans understand that under our Premier's leadership we have a process of standing policy committees that cover all of these. Those committees meet on a regular basis. They are policy-making bodies, and I believe that the people elected these members on the government side to develop policy.

The opportunity to debate that policy is in this Legislature, and I believe that's what parliamentary democracy is all about.

The opportunity for debate, Mr. Speaker, does occur in this Legislature. It occurs in the period of time when we debate the Speech from the Throne that Her Honour delivers in this House, which outlines the government's plan. It occurs when we debate in this House for a set number of days the budget of the government, which affects every department in the government, all of which are here. At the same time, the government presents its business plan for not only each department but for the government as a whole, and the opportunity to have that debate is here in this Legislature. So I have not in my experience, some 14 years last Friday, had a lot of calls from constituents from one of the very large constituencies, in geography at least, and had them say: we don't have an opportunity to participate. They believe they've elected a member, they believe they have an opportunity through that member, and they believe that every four years they elect a governing body who, until the next election period, will develop the policy and enter into debate with other parties in the Legislature on that policy and pass it. I think that's how the people's voice is heard in the parliamentary democracy which we enjoy and should cherish in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I believe so very, very firmly in the parliamentary process and parliamentary democracy that I don't want to support amendments to the Standing Orders, that govern the rules of this House, which I feel would not contribute to the continuance of that tradition and that form of government that has stood this country and this province in good stead for many, many years. I think that sometimes we complain a bit about our system, but when we look afield, we come back and say: you know, this works pretty well.

So I cannot support what I think would be a repetition of a process that we already have in place. I believe in having the standing policy committees and the many opportunities for other people from the public and/or opposition parties to participate in open meetings of those standing policy committees; in the opportunity for every member to be in this House right now at this moment to debate the Standing Orders, as we're doing; but, most importantly, in the time that we set aside where we debate the government's plan, the policies that we set for how we're going to expend the dollars that the people of this province entrust us with, and I think we have a very good system.

The other thing that I just wanted to make a brief comment on, Mr. Speaker, was when we get into comparisons with other Legislatures. I think we want to be very careful when we do that, and I think when we talk about this Legislature, let's talk about the hours that we put in rather than using the term "days." Some Legislatures do not sit in the evening. They sit at a different time of the day. They may start in the morning, pause at noon, sit for a while in the afternoon, and they call that a day. We start at 1:30 in the afternoon, recess or stop for supper hour, sit sometimes till midnight, and we call that a day.

AN HON. MEMBER: Sometimes longer.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Yes, this Legislature has been known on occasion to call a day 36 hours or some such figure.

So I think when you start comparing the number of days you sit, whether it be in Prince Edward Island or Quebec or the state of Montana, you should look at the hours you spend in the Legislature. Maybe what we should all consider more than anything is the quality of the time and how we spend our time here.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those brief comments I do not feel that I can support the amendment and would recommend to our members in this Legislature that they do not support this amendment.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I've been drawn into this debate, and occasionally we actually do have a debate in this Assembly which I find really exciting, where we have people putting forward their heartfelt belief in what is right. I believe that the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development genuinely, absolutely believes what she's saying, but what I find interesting is that the defence she is making, that the Progressive Conservative caucus committees replace the committees of the Assembly, is not acceptable to me.

Those caucus committees are caucus committees, and the government is perfectly entitled to have its caucus develop policy for government, perfectly entitled to do that, absolutely entitled to do that. However, let's be clear: that is the Progressive Conservative caucus developing policy for itself; that is not legislative committees. It is not, and we have always objected on this side to taxpayers' funds being used to pay for essentially a caucus committee that is developing policy.

Now, the minister says: oh, these standing policy committees are open and people can come and there can be debate. No, they're not open. Most of those meetings we don't even know have taken place. They're closed meetings. They are closed. Occasionally they are opened up for members of the public or the media to sit in. The media and the public cannot ask questions, and other members of this Assembly are treated as though they are members of the public. They do not have the same rights as those that are sitting around the table, and right there is the defining factor.

Again, I repeat: the government is perfectly entitled to give itself advice from its own party policy. Absolutely. But it does not replace the committees from this Legislative Assembly, and I say that it should not be paid out of taxpayer dollars for those committees. Those committees and any additional sums they're going to pay for their committee chairperson should come from PC Party moneys.

Now, the member also talks about the public having decided on March 12 the way it's going to be. Yes, they did, but we have to remember that in this province 30 percent of those who were eligible to vote put this government in power: 30 percent, not 60 percent, not 100 percent. Thirty percent of the voting public. That is not a slam dunk by any means, ladies and gentlemen. There are 70 percent of Albertans . . . [interjections] Oh, this always gets people upset, gets them engaged, Mr. Speaker. I find that very exciting, and I hope they're all going to get up and debate on it rather than just heckling me.

So what we've got is that 70 percent of the people that were eligible to vote did not vote for this party that formed government, did not vote for them. [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, please. The chair has recognized the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think we have to be very clear. This government, in having such a large majority for such a long period of time, has come to believe that it replaces parliamentary procedure. It doesn't replace parliamentary procedure. This political party's approach to government does not make democracy. It does not make this Assembly, nor does it replace it in any way, shape, or form. So it is perfectly legitimate to say that if the Progressive Conservative Party caucus is going to have policy committees to advise itself, we can have those committees for the Legislative Assembly, and it is not even a duplication.

One is giving policy of a political nature. The other is an all-party committee to work out how we're going to approach things in the Legislative Assembly. That would be true democracy. That is the problem with having a party in power for so long.

It's been interesting for me when I've been able to travel out of the province and speak with people in other provinces, and the minister cautioned against comparisons. You know, with these rules that are being put in place tonight, members of the government opposite would be horrified to have to work as opposition members under the restrictions that are being contemplated under these Standing Orders today, horrified at how limited their ability to perform as representatives of the people would be. But then the members that are on the government side here assume that they are never, ever going to be in opposition. Who knows? We will see in the future. But you have to consider, as you put these rules in place, that you will have to operate under them as well. Do you really want to be operating under these Standing Orders that are being put in place?

Now, just imagine, as horrific as I know this will be to all of you, that the Liberals are in power and the Liberals have their personal party policy committees. The rest of the members of the Assembly are not able to participate in that, and they bring forward an amendment that suggests that they want to have these committees in the Assembly and want to discuss that business in the Assembly. Of course, it's not possible because the Liberals, who've now been in power from 2004 to 2015, won't allow that. What's left for the other members of the Assembly is very restricted in what they're able to participate in, what they're able to bring forward, how long they're able to speak, what committees they can influence policy on, et cetera.

So while I appreciate that the minister believes very strongly that the Progressive Conservatives will form government in perpetuity, I do not think that that is the case. They were not elected by 100 percent. This is still supposed to be an Assembly that reflects a Commonwealth parliamentary tradition, and therefore it's perfectly appropriate that we do have all-party committees that reflect this Assembly. The payment for those – it's appropriate – would come out of taxpayer dollars.

The last thing is the public's ability to access and influence these committees. What the government has is not accessible by members of the public, but the Assembly is. They can come, they can watch, they can read it in Hansard, and they can listen to the live audio online. They are able to watch what's happening, and they're able to influence what's happening through their representatives. That is not the case through the PC caucus committees, not the case at all. There is no access there. There are no minutes kept. There's no Hansard kept. When the committee meetings are closed, nobody knows what's going on. So the public does not have access to that system even through their elected representatives. They have no way of holding their member accountable, because they can't tell whether their member spoke in those committee meetings or not. They have no way of tracking. Now, their member can come back and say: yes, indeed, I raised your point in the committee meeting. We have no way of knowing. We have to take the member's word, and of course we're all honourable members in this House. We would all want to accept any hon. member's word on this.

I don't want to take up any more time on this. I appreciate the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona bringing it up. I appreciate very much the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development speaking so passionately to it, but I disagree absolutely with her interpretation of it, and I disagree absolutely that internal party politics replaces the business of this Assembly.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

MR. McCLELLAND: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I did want to add a few comments to this debate because of the members presently sitting in the House, there aren't very many who have been in Legislatures that have both kinds of committees. I do have some sympathy for the intent behind this motion. Whether it's workable or not is a whole other question. I did want to put on record, though, the fact that the standing policy committees of the government are an exceptionally good way to provide for backbench members to have input into developing policy, and that's what is lost in this debate or lost in the greater debate in the public on just what these committees can and cannot do. The standing policy committees of the government, as represented through the caucus committees, have incredible oversight and incredible power as compared with my prior experience.

The prior experience that I have with committees is also such that because they're controlled by the government completely – not a little bit but absolutely completely – and the committees are creatures of their own and not governed directly by the Legislature, they are an exceptionally handy place for controversial items to go and suffer a quiet death. They're referred to committee, never to be seen or heard from again. Committees can also do some pretty good work in listening and becoming a listening post for all of the Legislature. So there are pros and there are cons, but I think that for the moment, in my experience, the capacity of the standing committees of the caucus to have meaningful input into legislation is quite remarkable. I did want to put that on the record.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion on amendment lost]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford on the main motion.

MR. McCLELLAND: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be very, very brief. I did want to also in debate – I've heard members speak to the question of questions and comments and whether or not that takes capacity or time from the opposition to make their point. The reality is that if the opposition chooses to, the opposition can actually get more time, because each time a government member speaks, the opposition is able to use five minutes, in fact, to question the government member speaking. The chair occupant normally will go to the opposite side of the aisle to select people for questions and comments. So while it will put considerably more responsibility and pressure on the chair occupant to control the debate, it will have the effect of actually generating debate in the House.

AN HON. MEMBER: Government members don't speak.

MR. McCLELLAND: The member says that government members don't speak. Well, if the opportunity presents itself, we will.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods on the main motion.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have an opportunity to make some comments about the motion before us with respect to Standing Orders. As I go through the changes that will occur, I guess the one I'd like to spend a little time on is the change that would be made to Standing Orders with respect to the Law and Regulations Committee. The proposal, of course, is that that committee be eliminated. I think that's an unfortunate proposal. From the time I've been in the Legislature, the opposition has made reference and attempted on numerous occasions to refer legislation to the Law and Regulations Committee. That committee operates in many Legislative Assemblies and parliaments. Australia and a number of the states have such a committee, and I think they have that committee with good reason. The purpose of such a committee, of course, is to scrutinize bills and regulations, bills that are passed and then regulations that are formulated to support or to carry out the legislation. They look at the bills with the intent, I think, of making sure that it's very clear, that any unclear references are cleaned up.

I think that it could be particularly useful in our Legislature as we look at the language that is used in legislation. I've taken the opportunity on a number of occasions to point out the promise that was made by the government in 1993 to bring forward plain-language legislation. I remember the discussion at the time. There was a commitment to make sure that the legislation that was introduced would be plain-language legislation. There was good reason for them to make that commitment at the time, Mr. Speaker. I think a number of bills demand plain language.

As I've mentioned before, the School Act is a bill that I think has to be open to all. The School Act, for instance, would have been a bill that would have benefited from an examination by the Law and Regulations Committee. It's become very convoluted over the last number of years. If you look at the Bill 16 debate that we just concluded last week and passed, for ordinary citizens to take that piece of legislation and actually trace back through the bill and through the amendments and then to the School Act itself, it takes a fair amount of perseverance and, I think, makes a demand that's really unnecessary on citizens who would like to understand laws that pertain to them and to their children and to the operation of their schools. So I think that it's a bill that would have benefited immensely in terms of suggestions for clarity should it have been referred to the Committee on Law and Regulations.

Such a committee scrutinizes bills for clarity. They make sure that those bills are not redundant, that they don't put in place laws that are already on the books. They have a bookkeeping function in terms of looking at past legislation, looking at other acts and how a particular bill might impact other legislation that's on the books in the province.

A third function of that committee is to make sure that laws are not ambiguous, that the references made in legislation are clear and easily understood. So those are generally three of the scrutinizing functions that the Law and Regulations Committee undertakes. I think that in looking at clarity and redundancy and ambiguity, someone has to make sure that legislation doesn't trespass on the freedoms or the rights of others. That's been a major function of law and regulations committees as they operate elsewhere. I remember reading some information about Australia where that is a major concern.

There's been legislation here. I can recall, since I've been in the House, that Bill 26, the bill that would have limited the rights of sterilization victims, when it came forward, was one such bill where scrutiny by a body such as the Law and Regulations Committee would have been very beneficial. That's the most glaring example, but I think that there were other pieces of legislation where we've raised issues about the rights of particular groups and how they're being affected by the legislation.

Another function is that it can make sure that the freedoms and the rights or the obligations that are embedded in legislation are reviewable, that they aren't shuffled off to administrators, never to see the light of day again. Such a committee has a role in making sure that there's sunset legislation, that there is some mechanism in place to make sure that legislation is going to be reviewed. In particular, there was an opportunity missed here that we didn't have an active Law and Regulations Committee working when we were looking at changes to the health act and practices that might have an adverse effect on the privacy of health information. That's been a topic for a number of law and regulations committees as the whole issue of changes to health legislation have occurred in a fairly large number of jurisdictions lately.

I think that a last commitment of the committee is to make sure that legislative power is not inappropriately delegated. Again, I think it was with Bill 57; we had just such a discussion in this Legislature in terms of the delegation of authority to other bodies and the appropriateness of that delegation.

I can see why the government would want this committee to no longer function. It can't be easy if you're a government member or you're a minister and you've worked on a particular piece of legislation and you've gone through the consultations and you've tried to as best you can meet the criticisms and the legislation comes forward and you find yourself then having to see the piece of legislation move to another body that can make changes to it. I can understand from the government's side where that might make them uncomfortable. I think that a Law and Regulations Committee would be even more uncomfortable for those members, who would be faced with either just rubber-stamping government legislation as it came along or trying to provide some constructive criticism of bills. I do understand why it's difficult for the government, but even though it is difficult, I think that it's important.

I don't have any experience with the committee here, although I once sat on it, was named to it, but if you look at how it operates elsewhere, bills are usually referred to the Law and Regulations Committee after second reading. That can take from overnight to five months, up to two months in other jurisdictions. The outcome is usually the tabling of a report to the Legislature that either makes changes to the bill – in fact, some jurisdictions allow the legislation to be disallowed, but I don't think that that's common practice.

So I have a great deal of concern with that particular part of the motion that would change our Standing Orders, and with that I would like to propose an amendment. The amendment is that Government Motion 21 be amended in section 18 by adding the following after the proposed order 49(1)(e): "(f) Law and Regulations, consisting of 21 members." So it would put that committee in place.

I have copies of the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, the pages will circulate this amendment, even though I'm standing here.

The hon. member basically indicated in his amendment that there be one clause added: "(f) Law and Regulations, consisting of 21 members."

[Motion on amendment lost]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on the main motion.

5:10

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I'm glad that I can speak on the main motion, although I express some regret that the previous amendment did not in fact pass, but I'll come back to the discussion about the Law and Regulations Committee.

There are some interesting changes and proposals that are being made with Motion 21, the amendments to the Standing Orders. As I was outlining when I spoke in support of the motion put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I think my reading of the history of this Assembly has been that because we've had the same party in power for a long period of time with large majorities – and I know that members find that very exciting – it has shaped and changed this Assembly. I think that what we get as a result is more than an expectation. There is an all-pervading belief by members of the government that they will in fact form government forever and that their way of doing business is the only way of doing business. It's not.

The comments that came out in the press release are disingenuous in many ways, and I'm wondering, actually, if there is a real understanding by the members opposite of the difference between government and this Assembly. It strikes me that in many ways they don't seem to understand the difference because so much of what happens in the Alberta Assembly has for so long been the absolute domain of a particular political party. As decisions are made to do more and more inside of that political caucus, then those members would likely see less and less reason to repeat the process in the Legislative Assembly. Thus we get things like custom-tailored, custom-designed committees, that the PC caucus wishes to say is government policy development. Fine. I disagree with that, but okay, let's leave that there. But then you can understand why the members don't want to come into the Assembly and have the discussion over again. They believe that they've already had it, so they don't want to have the discussion over again in the Assembly. They see it as a waste of time. Certainly that's been expressed repeatedly in the House.

In fact this is the place where the decisions are ultimately supposed to be made. We've had a subversion or a perversion, where that decision-making body has been shifted inside of a particular party caucus, and that shows all the way through the changes that are being suggested in Motion 21, all of the changes that are being anticipated here to the Standing Orders, things like question period. Well, they want question period moved up in the order of business. Why would that be?

Well, you know, when I look at what's happened in the five years that I've been in this House, I can see that the members of the government caucus get very annoyed when there are a lot of tablings. Tablings are one way that the people of Alberta can speak through their elected representatives and have their issues brought to the House. It's time consuming, say the government members; we don't like it, and we don't want it to be there. So they change the Standing Orders so that in fact the tablings go after question period. Well, we all know that the television cameras will be off by then. Nobody is going to see or hear. Oh, yes, I can hear the people in the government caucus; they think it's funny that in fact they've now manoeuvred it so what the public is able to see of the proceedings of the Assembly in this Chamber is very limited.

The press release also talked about how we have such a long question period. Well, that may be true. We might have 50 minutes here and it's 40 minutes somewhere else and 30 minutes somewhere else. But let's be really clear, people. Everywhere else question period is 100 percent questions from the opposition. It's very unusual to have government members included in question period. Very unusual.

How did we come to that in this House? Well, at one point we came to it because there were only four members in the opposition. At that time, the leader of the party in power said: it's important that we have an opposition; it's important that there are questions to the government; therefore, we will have government members act as opposition to fill out the ranks of opposition, if you will. I don't think it was the intention of that particular leader of the party and of the government at the time to in fact turn it into a platform for government press releases, which is what we've come to now.

As the Speaker often points out, we get through somewhere between 11 and 13 questions in a 50-minute question period, and out of that we have possibly six or seven that are questions from the opposition. So almost half our questions are in fact questions designed specifically for government to get up and talk about its platform in whatever way it wants to, because they're clearly questions that are designed to be complimentary and not to hold the government accountable in any way.

So we now have a question period that is not about holding the government to account. It's not about scrutinizing the government. It's now a 50-minute question period of which at least half is designed to give the government a platform. This is the kind of change that slowly shifts when you have a party in power for a very long period of time with very large majorities.

Let's look at a couple of the other things that are being suggested here. To cut speaking time. Again, it's perfectly understandable why members of the government believe that speaking time in this Chamber is boring and a waste of time. They believe they have already discussed all of this. This is in their little partisan caucus discussions in their little committees. My point – and I made it before – is that it is not the same as the representation of those people that elected us to be here. Those committees are not open to the public. They are not Hansarded or minuted, and if they are, the minutes are not made available to others. So it is decision-making that takes place in private, behind closed doors. It is not available for your own members to be able to scrutinize whether you represented them appropriately. It's not.

DR. TAYLOR: Albertans like the way we make decisions. They put 74 of us here.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, once again I'm being reminded about the 74 seats that have been put in, and once again I will remind the Minister of Environment that they were put in with only 30 percent of the vote. Seventy percent of the voting public did not vote for the members opposite.

One of the other issues I'd like to address is getting rid of some of the legislative, all-party committees that are never called. Now, again this is a little disingenuous. The setup is that you don't call a committee for 20 years, and then you stand up and go: oh, this is not a useful committee; let's get rid of it. Well, we don't know whether it's a useful committee or not. It hasn't been called. It hasn't been allowed to perform the legislative function that it's there for. You go: "Well, is that true everywhere else? If we look elsewhere, is it a useless committee that's never called?" No, it isn't. It's used lots of places, and to very good effect and for the bringing together of many different people's approach and good brainpower that's able to be pulled together on all of it.

The perfect example of that right now is that the Standing Orders are proposing to eliminate the Law and Regulations Committee. I had spoken earlier about how each thing that's being proposed to be eliminated or changed in these Standing Orders can be attributed to a particular action or individual that has annoyed the government in the past, and I think this one, the elimination of the Law and Regulations Committee, must indeed be acknowledged as the Gary Dickson memorial Standing Order.

Certainly the former Member for Calgary-Buffalo spoke often and passionately about the usefulness of this committee and often brought forward a motion to have the regulations of a particular bill that was being debated referred to the Law and Regulations Committee. Frankly, I backed him on that. I think it was a good idea. I've spoken many times about our having our bills and statutes available on-line; we do not have the regulations on-line. It's important that it is brought out into the open, that the decision-making process and the specifics of what the regulations are are out in the open. It's a shame that we're looking to lose it. I do have to point out that it's not that these committees are not useful, but to cripple the committee or not use it and then say that it's no good is not an accurate reflection of what's going on here.

Frankly, I'm sitting on another legislative committee right now, and I'm watching the government do exactly the same thing to it. So I'll put it on the record now. I don't think the Public Accounts is a useless committee. Ten years from now there will likely be a Standing Order back here saying: oh, well, it hasn't met, and it never gets through all the ministries anyway, so we're going to get rid of it. That's exactly what's happening right now. We are no longer in session long enough for this committee to scrutinize every government department. So every attempt by this member to try and ensure that the committee meets often enough to in fact scrutinize every department of the government has been turned down by the overwhelming majority of government members on the committee. But that's not to say that the work of the Public Accounts Committee isn't useful and shouldn't in fact be there. But I will bet you dollars to doughnuts that 10 years from now I can cast my eye forward and there will be a desired change in the Standing Orders to get rid of Public Accounts for exactly that reason: oh, well, it doesn't scrutinize all the ministries anyway, so what's the good of it?

So the government sets out to cripple a committee and then turns around and says: well, it's no good, so let's get rid of it. So there's a very current example of how it's done, and I want to make sure that people understand that.

This government has been quite progressive in e-government, and I think that's a good thing in many ways. We can't assume that unless the government is willing to pay for a computer for every household, which I don't think they're willing to do, nor would I suggest it – it must be remembered that people cannot necessarily keep up with the government. If everything is going to be put on-line and all press releases are going to come out that way, documents now – I was involved in one of summits that happened recently, and the whole report came out on-line. It was never published in paper form. That makes it very difficult for still a significant portion of the community to get access to it. I think we have to be careful about that. Again, this is around the Law and Regulations Committee. We don't get the regulations on-line. We just get the bills and statutes. So it's still important to get those. [interjection]

That's an excellent suggestion actually. I've just heard one of the members suggest that only the opposition would sit on Public Accounts. I'd be perfectly willing to have that happen, because at that point we could actually have the committee scrutinize every department. We could have the committee operate under the guidelines of the Canadian Council of Public Accounts Committees. We could have the committee meet outside of the sitting days in order to be able to scrutinize everything. All of these things have been defeated by the government members that are on the committee. So I wouldn't mind having opposition members only on that one at all, although I admit that it would defeat the purpose of the legislative committee. So I'm willing to have other people on the committee, unlike my colleagues on the other side.

AN HON. MEMBER: Question.

MS BLAKEMAN: No. I'm sorry; you don't get the question yet.

I've talked about question period. I've talked about shortening speaking time. I've talked about the House committees and the partisan committees. You know, there's some discussion that these Standing Orders would open up more time for private members' business, more time for private members' bills. Well, that's a really interesting possibility, because we've only managed to get through 12 private members' bills in this statutory year. Twelve. We're not even on Bill 212 yet. I think it's been introduced, but we certainly haven't debated it. So again that's something to think of.

What I'd like to do at this point is move a motion of referral. For the convenience of the House I have actually made copies of it although it's not required for a referral motion. Nonetheless, I thought that for the convenience of the members they might like to have a copy of it. I'll read the motion into the record: that Government Motion 21 be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing for discussion and that the committee be instructed to report to the Assembly no later than 15 sitting days into the spring session in 2002.

I've often seen members of the government side hoist their private members' bills. It's a favourite so that they're not actually seen voting down their own private members' bills. The temptation to hoist this is very high, but I chose not to do that. What I decided to do was incorporate what's available to us in the Legislative Assembly and use a referral motion, that this all be examined and sent to an all-party committee to carefully consider, with all members and all parties represented, what's being proposed here and whether, in fact, it is the best thing for the longevity of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, not the best thing for the Conservative Party or the Liberal Party or the ND Party. What is the best thing for the Legislative Assembly of Alberta? I don't think that is what is being proposed under Motion 21. I think it's partisan, and I think it is not healthy for this Legislative Assembly, and I think ultimately it's not healthy for Alberta.

So members have had an opportunity to examine the referral motion that I've put forward, and I would like to draw the attention of the Assembly to the Hansard for March 17, 1982, page 181, where a former member of this Assembly moved the same type of motion. It was dealing then with significant changes to the Standing Orders, and in fact the referral motion was passed by the Assembly. Support for such an action was even congratulated by the Speaker at the time.

I encourage all members of the Assembly with the best interests of our Legislature at heart to support this referral so that we can have a constructive and all-party discussion of these changes before we pass them.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:29 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, there is before the Assembly a division, and what is occurring here this evening, just from a procedural point of view, is that we are beyond the hour that is normal. There is a provision, though, in Erskine May and the traditions of parliamentary government that if in essence a vote is called and the time to leave has come, that matter of business must be concluded. That's the only reason we're into this scenario right now.

Amendments to Standing Orders

21. Mr. Stevens moved:

Be it resolved that the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be amended as follows:

1. Standing Order 4 is struck out and the following is substituted:

4(1) If at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, the business of the Assembly is not concluded, the Speaker leaves the Chair until 8 p.m.

(2) If at 5:15 p.m. on Monday, the Assembly is in Committee of the Whole and the business of the committee is not concluded, the committee shall rise and report immediately.

(3) If at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday or Wednesday, the business of the Assembly is not concluded, the Speaker leaves the Chair until 8 p.m. unless, on a motion of the Government House Leader made before 5:30 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned until the next sitting day.

(4) If at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday or Wednesday, the Assembly is in Committee of the Whole and the business of the committee is not concluded, the Chairman leaves the Chair until 8:00 p.m. unless, on a motion of the Government House Leader made before 5:30 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the next sitting day.

(5) At 5:30 p.m. on Thursday the Speaker adjourns the Assembly, without question put, until Monday.

2. Standing Order 5 is amended by adding the following after suborder (1):

(1.1) If, during a sitting of the Assembly, a question of quorum arises, the division bells shall be sounded for one minute and if a quorum is then not present, the Speaker may declare a recess or adjourn the Assembly until the next sitting day.

3. Standing Order 7 is amended by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following:

7(1) The ordinary daily routine business in the Assembly shall be as follows:

O Canada (First sitting day of each week)
 Introduction of Visitors
 Introduction of Guests
 Ministerial Statements
 Oral Question Period, not exceeding 50 minutes
 Recognitions (Monday and Wednesday)
 Members' Statements (Tuesday and Thursday)
 Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees
 Presenting Petitions
 Notices of Motions
 Introduction of Bills
 Tabling Returns and Reports
 Projected Government Business (Thursday)

4. Standing Order 8 is amended

(a) by striking out suborders (1) to (3) and substituting the following:

8(1) On Monday afternoon, after the daily routine, the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:

Written Questions

Motions for Returns

Public Bills and Orders other than Government Bills and Orders

(2) On Monday evening, from 8 p.m. until 9 p.m., the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:

Motions other than Government Motions

(3) On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, on Monday evening commencing at 9 p.m. and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the order of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be as follows:

Government Motions

Government Bills and Orders

Private Bills

(b) in suborder (4) by striking out "55 minutes of debate" and substituting "60 minutes of debate and 5 minutes for the mover of the motion to close debate".

(c) by adding the following after suborder (4):

(4.1) Before the mover closes debate on a motion under suborder (4), a member may move a motion, not subject to debate or amendment, that provides for the motion under consideration to be moved to the bottom of that item of business on the Order Paper.

(d) by striking out suborder (6) and substituting the following:

(6) Before the mover of a motion for second or third reading of a Public Bill other than a Government Bill closes debate, or the time limit is reached for consideration at Committee of the Whole under suborder (5)(a)(ii), a member may move a motion, not subject to debate or amendment, that the votes necessary to conclude consideration at that stage be postponed for 10 sitting days or the first opportunity after that for the consideration of the Bill, unless there are other Bills awaiting consideration at that stage in which case the Bill will be called after the Bills at that stage have been considered.

5. Standing Order 18 is amended

(a) in suborder 1(h) by adding "; except as provided under Standing Order 49" after "committee";

(b) by adding the following after suborder (2):

(3) In this Standing Order, "adjournment motion" includes daily adjournment motions and any motion to adjourn the proceedings of the Assembly for a specified or unspecified period.

6. Standing Order 20 is amended by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following:

20(1) In a debate on a motion, if a member moves an amendment, that member may only speak to the amendment and the main question in one speech.

7. Standing Order 21 is struck out and the following is substituted:

21(1) A member of the Executive Council may, on at least one day's notice, propose a motion for the purpose of allotting a specified number of hours for consideration and disposal of proceedings on a Government motion or a

- Government Bill and the motion shall not be subject to debate or amendment except as provided in suborder (3).
- (2) A motion under suborder (1)
- (a) that applies to a Government Bill shall only refer to one stage of consideration for the Bill;
  - (b) shall only apply when the Bill or motion that is the subject of the time allocation motion has already been debated in the Assembly or been considered in Committee of the Whole.
- (3) A member of the Executive Council may outline the reasons for the motion under suborder (1) and a member of the Official Opposition may respond but neither speech may exceed 5 minutes.
8. Standing Order 23 is amended by striking out clause (g) and substituting the following:
- (g) refers to any matter pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination
- (i) of a criminal nature from the time charges have been laid until passing of sentence, including any appeals and the expiry of appeal periods from the time of judgment, or
  - (ii) of a civil nature that has been set down for a trial or notice of motion filed, as in an injunction proceeding, until judgment or from the date of filing a notice of appeal until judgment by an appellate court,
- where there is probability of prejudice to any party but where there is any doubt as to prejudice, the rule should be in favour of the debate;
9. Standing Order 29 is struck out and the following is substituted:
- 29(1) Time limits on speaking in debate in the Assembly on Government motions, Government Bills and orders and private Bills shall be as follows:
- (a)(i) the Premier,
  - (ii) the Leader of the Official Opposition, and
  - (iii) the mover on the occasion of the Budget Address
- shall be limited to 90 minutes' speaking time;
- (b) the mover in debate on a resolution or on a Bill shall be limited to 20 minutes' speaking time in opening debate and 15 minutes in closing debate;
  - (c) the member who speaks immediately following the mover in debate on a resolution or on a Bill shall be limited to 20 minutes;
  - (d) except as provided in clauses (a) to (c), no member shall speak for longer than 15 minutes in debate.
- (2) (a) Subject to clause (b), following each speech on the items in debate referred to in suborder (1), a period not exceeding 5 minutes shall be made available, if required, to allow members to ask questions and comment briefly on matters relevant to the speech and to allow responses to each member's questions and comments;
- (b) the 5 minute question and comment period referred to in clause (a) is not available following the speech from
- (i) the mover of the resolution or the Bill in opening or closing debate, and
  - (ii) the member who speaks immediately after the mover.
- (3) Time limits on speaking in debate on motions other than Government motions, public Bills and orders other than Government Bills and orders, written questions and motions for returns shall be as follows:
- (a) the Premier and the Leader of the Official Opposition shall be limited to 20 minutes' speaking time;
  - (b) the mover in debate of a resolution or a Bill shall be limited to 10 minutes' speaking time and 5 minutes to close debate;
  - (c) all other members shall be limited to 10 minutes' speaking time in debate.
10. Standing Order 30(4) is amended in clause (a) by adding "the debate proceeds and" before "the Speaker".
11. Standing Order 32 is amended by adding the following after suborder (2):
- (2.1) When a division is called in Committee of the Whole or Committee of Supply, a member may request unanimous consent to waive suborder (2) to shorten the 10 minute interval between division bells.
12. Standing Order 34 is amended by adding the following after suborder (2):
- (2.1) Amendments to written questions and motions for returns must
- (a) be approved by Parliamentary Counsel on the sitting day preceding the day the amendment is moved, and
  - (b) be provided to the mover of the written question or motion for a return no later than 11 a.m. on the day the amendment is to be moved.
13. Standing Order 37 is amended by adding the following after suborder (3):
- (4) For the purposes of this Standing Order and Standing Order 37.1, a tabling must be in paper form.
14. The following is added after Standing Order 37:
- 37.1(1) Documents may be tabled by providing the required number of copies to the Clerk before 11 a.m. any day the Assembly sits.
- (2) When the Clerk receives a tabling under suborder (1) that is in order, the Clerk shall read the title of the tabling when Tabling Returns and Reports is called in the daily routine.
15. Standing Order 39.1 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 39.2 and adding the following before Standing Order 39.2:
- 39.1(1) The sequence of motions other than Government motions shall be determined by a random draw of names of members who have submitted written notice to the Clerk no later than 3 days prior to the date of the draw.
- (2) The draw referred to in suborder (1) shall be held on a date set by the Speaker in the July preceding the session that the motions are expected to be moved.
- (3) Prior to a motion other than a Government motion being moved, members may switch the positions in accordance with the guidelines prescribed by the Speaker.
- (4) A member who has a motion other than a Government motion on the Order Paper may, upon providing 4 sitting days' notice, withdraw the motion before it is to be moved in the Assembly.
- (5) When a motion is withdrawn under suborder (4), the Order Paper shall indicate "withdrawn" next to the motion number.
16. Standing Order 48 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 48(1) and by adding the following after suborder (1):
- (2) Dissolution has the effect of nullifying an order or

- address of the Assembly for returns or papers.
17. The following is added after Standing Order 48:
 48.1 A member of the Executive Council may, on one day's notice, move a motion to reinstate a Government Bill from a previous session of the current Legislature to the same stage that the Bill stood at the time of prorogation and the motion shall not be subject to debate or amendment.
18. Standing Order 49 is struck out and the following is substituted:
 49(1) At the commencement of each session, standing committees of the Assembly must be established for the following purposes:
 (a) Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, consisting of 21 members,
 (b) Public Accounts, consisting of 17 members,
 (c) Private Bills, consisting of 21 members,
 (d) Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund, consisting of 9 members,
 (e) Legislative Offices, consisting of 11 members.
 (2) At the commencement of the first session of each Legislature, the Assembly must establish the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services consisting of 11 members.
 (3) The Assembly must determine the membership of the committees established under this Standing Order by resolution which shall not be subject to debate or amendment.
 (4) The composition of the membership of the committees established under this Standing Order must be proportionate to the number of seats held by each party in the Assembly.
 (5) The proportionate membership of committees as prescribed under suborder (4) may be varied by an agreement among all House Leaders.
 (6) The Clerk of the Assembly shall post in the Legislature Building lists of members of the several standing and special committees appointed during each session.
19. Standing Order 52 is struck out and the following is substituted:
 52 The Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund shall report to the Assembly on the Fund as prescribed in the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act.
20. Standing Order 56 is amended by striking out suborders (2) to (8).
21. Standing Order 57 is amended by striking out suborders (1) to (6).
22. Standing Order 58 is struck out and the following is substituted:
 58(1) In this Standing Order, "sitting day" means any afternoon or evening that the Committee of Supply considers estimates for not less than 2 hours unless there are no members who wish to speak prior to the conclusion of the 2 hours.
 (2) The number of sitting days that the Committee of Supply is called to consider the main estimates shall equal the number of members of the Executive Council with portfolio.
 (3) The Committee of Supply shall consider estimates in the following manner:
 (a) the Minister, or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, and members of the opposition may speak during the first hour, and
 (b) any member may speak thereafter.
- (4) Subject to suborder (5), the vote on an estimate before the Committee of Supply shall be called after it has received not less than 2 hours of consideration unless there are no members who wish to speak prior to the conclusion of the 2 hours.
 (5) On Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoon, during the consideration of the main estimates, the Committee of Supply shall be called immediately after Orders of the Day are called and shall rise and report no later than 5:15 p.m.
 (6) The Leader of the Official Opposition may, by giving written notice to the Clerk and the Government House Leader prior to noon on the day following the Budget Address, designate which department's estimates are to be considered by the Committee of Supply on any Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday afternoon during the period in which the main estimates are to be considered by Committee of Supply.
 (7) When the Leader of the Official Opposition fails to provide notice in accordance with suborder (5), the Government House Leader shall designate the department for consideration by Committee of Supply for that afternoon.
 (8) The estimates of the Legislative Assembly, as approved by the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services, and the estimates of the Officers of the Legislature shall be the first item called in the Committee of Supply's consideration of the main estimates and the Chairman shall put the question to approve the estimates forthwith which shall be decided without debate or amendment.
 (9) In respect of the supplementary estimates and interim supply estimates, a member of the Executive Council may, with at least one day's notice, make a motion to determine the number of days that the Committee of Supply may be called, and the question shall be decided without debate or amendment.
23. Standing Order 59 is amended
 (a) in suborder (1)
 (i) by striking out "Monday," and
 (ii) by striking out "midnight" and substituting "11 p.m.";
 (b) by striking out suborder (2).
24. Standing Order 60 is struck out and the following is substituted:
 60 Committees of the whole Assembly shall rise and report prior to the time of adjournment.
25. The following is added after Standing Order 68:
 68.1(1) The sequence of Public Bills and Orders other than Government Bills and Orders shall be determined by a random draw of the names of members who have submitted written notice to Parliamentary Counsel no later than 3 days prior to the date of the draw.
 (2) The draw referred to in suborder (1) shall be held on a date set by the Speaker in the July preceding the session that the Bills are expected to be introduced.
 (3) Members may switch their positions in accordance with guidelines prescribed by the Speaker.
26. Standing Order 83 is amended
 (a) in suborder (2) by striking out "received, shall be read by the Clerk if the member so requests" and substituting "presented during the daily routine";
 (b) by adding the following after suborder (2):
 (3) Petitions must be submitted for approval by Parliamentary Counsel at least one sitting day prior to the petition being presented in the Assembly.

27. Standing Order 83.1 is amended
  - (a) in suborders (1) and (2) by striking out “read and received” and substituting “presented”;
  - (b) by striking out suborder (3).
28. Standing Order 102 is amended by renumbering it as Standing Order 102(1) and adding the following after suborder (1):
  - (2) The Clerk shall be responsible for the printing of the Votes and Proceedings and the Journals of the Assembly.
29. Standing Order 109 is struck out and the following is substituted:

109 The Speaker shall, after the end of the fiscal year, prepare an annual report on the Legislative Assembly Office and lay the report before the Assembly if it is then sitting or, if it is not then sitting, within 15 days after the commencement of the next sitting.
30. Standing Order 114 is amended by striking out suborder (2).
31. This motion supersedes the House Leader agreement for the 25th Legislature dated April 10, 2001.
32. This motion comes into force on the first day of the Second Session of the 25th Legislature.

[Debate adjourned November 26]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to put a couple more comments on the record about the proposed changes in the Standing Orders. This has a lot of implications for basically the way that information can be presented in terms of the material that is brought forward from people in the communities. It also deals with some of the issues that reflect on not only the flexibility of how we deal with things in this House, but we also have to look at it in the context of how we deal with the equity in terms of representation that occurs between individual MLAs that are elected from different parties, within the framework of that choice by the constituents. If we look at the process that's brought forward here in the motion and if we look at it in terms of how it works out in dealing with some of those issues, we end up with a lot of changes that are essentially making it more likely that members who do not have an active role in the government, whether it be in cabinet or a lead role in some of the standing policy committee positions, will have in some ways less opportunity to get input from their communities.

I know a number of the other speakers have addressed the issues of timing and how changes in process will affect the daily Routine, but if we look at it from the perspective of what we should be trying to do in terms of democracy, it's especially incumbent upon us to make sure that our constituents have opportunities to present their ideas to the Legislature. One of the things that has come up and that has to be dealt with in the context of how these changes will further limit what constituents can do is the changes in the process for petitions. There was quite a bit of concern, Mr. Speaker, expressed in my constituency when we made the original changes that required particular types of wording to petitions, because they felt that they wanted to be able to address a concern that they saw with the government in a language and in a format and in a way that reflected and allowed them to express what they were really trying to say and what they were really trying to mean.

What we basically did in a previous amendment to the Standing Orders was that we had a particular type of wording that had to be put in the context of the pledge or the prayer at the top, and then a lot of petitions were effectively not read in because of that. What we're doing now is basically telling those same constituents that there will be little if any public notification of their concern if they don't exactly meet that format. Under the previous structure an MLA had the chance to at least address the issue as they presented the petition to the House, and if it was appropriately in order, it would then be read back in and filed as a permanent part of the documentation of this Legislature. Yet this seems to be a process that we're moving farther and farther away from as we move to implement changes here in petitioning.

You know, I guess this is a kind of a question about what we mean in terms of constituent responsibility and constituent input. I know there is a private member's bill coming up that deals with citizen referendum. This is the kind of thing where if we really believe that our constituents should have an opportunity to have input and be able to come to this Legislature and say, “This is a concern; this is an action we want the Legislature to take,” we shouldn't be limiting how they go about doing that. We should be encouraging and in fact making it easier for them to deal with this kind of input into the legislative process or a reaction to a government action or, you know, any kind of other means they want to express in the context of how they see fit to put their words into this Legislature.

The continual change in terms of how these things happen I think will essentially discourage in many ways how a petition can be presented, Mr. Speaker. I think there is a good chance that if we really wanted to make the process a little more orderly, what we might suggest doing, instead of limiting access, is to put a more orderly process in place for actually making the presentations, in the sense that if a group of people is trying to put together a petition that is going to be presented by a number of MLAs, we could centralize the actual presentation so that you don't end up with a whole series of different presentations or limit them to a number of subject days. Say an education one would be done on this particular day, and then you only get a chance to submit your petitions on those days. This would create order, and that is basically the rationale behind what I've heard the Government House Leader say when he's talked about why they want to have this. They don't want to have a whole series of small petitions that say the same thing presented on the same day.

Well, there are ways that we can make that orderly rather than limit the ability of citizens to express themselves in terms of their concerns and their wishes in terms of government, in terms of reaction to policy. I guess I would hope that this kind of process might be looked at more so than just saying, you know: if it isn't written exactly the way I want, exactly in the order that I want, and with exactly the right commas and questions and all this . . . That really infringes on a citizen's ability. So I guess the main concern there, Mr. Speaker, is in terms of how we deal with that kind of process.

The other basic concern that I have and that I've heard from a couple of individuals who are kind of the parliamentary experts or the people who always come to me about process – I guess that's a better way to put it than to call them necessarily experts. They were very concerned about the elimination of the Standing Committee on Law and Regulations because they felt that we should in a sense be holding hearings or bringing out into the public in a much broader way how regulations are put in place by the government, how they are changed by the government, that a process that's more open on regulatory change should be initiated. A number of them compare it to their experiences as they followed through legislative change from the approach to the government to standing policy committee to executive committee to the Legislature: you know, that kind of a process.

They felt that that kind of openness, that kind of ability to first of all see what the regulations are and get a chance to read them in the context of the law they relate to, react to them, and have feedback into the government would be much better than trying to kind of react after and then have the government go back and change them. Even though that committee hasn't been used, I guess what they were saying was that we would have better relationships with our community and better government in the end if we actually used that committee and allowed it to operate in an open way so that Albertans would have a sense of what to expect and how to react to and how to incorporate the ideas of regulatory change just the way they see an openness in legislative change.

Mr. Speaker, I think over time that is going to become more and more critical because what you're seeing is that more and more of our actual legislation, the bills that we pass in this House is enabling legislation rather than actually functional legislation. The actual operational aspects of each of these pieces of legislation then show up in the regulations that are assigned or that are attached to the piece of enabling legislation. They wanted to see that kind of debate being put in place so that they could have an input to both the legislation and the regulations that operationalize them.

Mr. Speaker, I think the process that the minister of agriculture and the Member for Leduc have gone through on this intensive livestock bill, where the regulations, although not in final form but in a draft form, were made available to a number of the participants, shows how that committee could function. It could work if that committee were operating in conjunction with the policy committees and the legislative committees. You know, that kind of openness and that kind of good legislation and operational regulations could be developed.

By having that together, we wouldn't have this kind of piecemeal process, even though it was a very open process, that went on with the intensive livestock bill. You had to try and relate first to the draft legislation, and then as we started to debate that draft legislation, the regulations became available, and then it became too restricted in terms of the time frame for a lot of the citizens of the province to really get in a reaction to that. By having this regulations committee in place where it was really functional, it would in effect make sure that the citizens who were either going to have to operate within or were in support of the proposed legislation felt much more comfortable about the relationship between the legislative process and the regulatory process.

I guess the other couple of things that I was just concerned about were, you know, the idea of the changes in how we deal with debate. Mr. Speaker, I guess I'm going to sound a little bit out of key with a lot of people in the sense that we're going to have options for Q and A for a speaker in the Legislature, and that doesn't offend me at all. Anybody that stands in this House should be willing to stand and be held accountable for the things they say here. But the idea that it takes away from the ability to develop an issue is critical in the sense that there are a lot of times when we're dealing with extremely large pieces of legislation and we have to talk to the principles of them, we have to talk to how they are going to be operationalized because in some cases we don't even have the appropriate regulatory framework available at the time.

To say that we have to be able to stand up and deal with the principles that are associated with it in a matter of 15 minutes – I would suggest that if we had to deal with some type of policy or procedural change with respect to speaking times, what we should have done was left the 20 minutes for second reading, added on the five minutes, and then when we went into committee or third reading, we could have subsequently shortened those so that the total time on the bill was the same. But we'd have a lot more up front when we could raise the issues, start the debate, introduce the concerns, and develop the framework of how that piece of legislation was going to work. I think that would have been much better in terms of trying to deal with facilitating the appropriate development of good legislation, because it's through that kind of debate that we're allowed to start concerns.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I think the more we debate the legislation, the more we see the intricacies of the ways that it could be interpreted or applied when it actually becomes operational, so that gives us a better chance, then, to make sure that the legislation we're dealing with at the time gets to be the right legislation and good legislation. You know, I think what we need to do is look at that possibility of sustaining that 20 minutes in the second reading, add on the five minutes of Q and A, and then make adjustments at other stages if it's really felt that we have to have some kind of a limit on the debate that goes on in this House.

I think the other critical issue that comes up, Mr. Speaker, is the idea of the application of the sub judge ruling or the sub judge limit on debate. Here, you know, there have been a lot of different interpretations of what the change in the Standing Order is going to mean in terms of the ability to address issues that are an integral part of public policy. If that sub judge restriction is interpreted and applied to the extent that the wording in the proposed Standing Orders suggests it might be, there are a lot of issues that in effect could be removed from debate in this House just by the simple introduction of some kind of a challenge through civil court. I don't think any of us want to see that type of trade-off or that type of action potentially being facilitated by the kind of changes we make in legislation.

You know, I think it's imperative that as we go through and look at the changes we make in how we operate within this House, one of the fundamental responsibilities each and every one of us has is to make sure that as we make changes, we don't in any way limit what the public's perception of a true democratic and legislative process should be. The idea that we're going through here and in some ways trying to control debate, control the ability of an opposition or a citizen to hold a member of the government accountable in a sense reduces the ability that we have to make sure that democracy functions in an open and acceptable way for the citizens of our community.

It's like every legislative change. What we have to do is see how these things actually become operational when we actually start to deal with them, how they're interpreted and how they're going to be applied. Mr. Speaker, I think that what we have to start looking at here is that some of these have the potential to greatly reduce the ability to have constructive debate in this Legislature. The main thing that we have to look at as representatives of our community is that when these things actually become the new Standing Orders, we don't let them in any way inhibit our ability to have open and productive debate within this Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, I kind of talk about these things in terms of suggestions and input. I think when we deal with Standing Orders and the process, it would almost in many ways be unfortunate if we actually did what one of these Standing Orders is suggesting and did away with the committee that was supposed to look at Standing Orders and make sure that they were operational, because that's where we could have had a lot of the debate, a lot of the questions that we're raising in connection with these changes. That's where this debate could have gone on. We could have had an exchange of ideas, an exchange of alternatives. We could have had some negotiation, some give-and-take. I'm quite sure that in effect the final changes that we would be debating tonight would have been a lot better if we could have had that kind of open give-and-take in the process, recognizing – and I think everyone in this House recognizes it – that we have to facilitate proper discussion, that we have to make sure that there is a degree of order to the way we operate. But it's kind of unfortunate that when it comes to this particular case of really looking at how we're going to change the Standing Orders, that openness and that participatory discussion and what the changes were and how they should be implemented didn't occur as readily as it possibly might have.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would hope that as we look at these when we start the spring session, we interpret them with as much latitude and with as much ability to carry on good debate as we can get so that everybody feels that they've truly been able to represent their constituents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader to close the debate.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Motion 21 represents a comprehensive review of the Standing Orders, and once agreed to, these changes as they apply to the next spring sitting will improve the business of this Assembly. What I would like to do is highlight some of the improvements as a result of this initiative.

More private members will now be able to speak to private members' bills and motions. For example, under current rules if every member spoke the maximum at second reading, only six members could participate. Under the proposed rules twice that many, 12, can participate if speaking for the maximum time. The time on private members' motions will increase from 55 to 60 minutes. Oral Question Period will arrive at a much more predictable time each day, likely around 1:45 p.m. most days, instead of currently, where it varies from 1:50 to 2:15 p.m. each day.

Tablings may be done through the Clerk's office prior to the House sitting each day. This simple administrative change allows the Routine to progress more quickly.

Committee of Supply will be streamlined and evolve along lines previously developed in all-party House leader agreements. After several years of opposition complaints about the A, B, C, D subcommittees, these committees will be eliminated. After several years of opposition complaints about all estimates needing to be before the whole Assembly, now every single estimate from each ministry will have its own separate sitting day before the whole Assembly. Opposition designation of departments will increase substantially from eight in the spring of 2001 to 12 under the proposed rules for 2002, meaning that half of all the 24 ministries will be designated.

Closure will be eliminated and replaced with time allocation.

Sub judice will be made more comprehensive.

Speaking times will be reapportioned on government business before the whole Assembly – that is, second and third readings and government motions but not Committee of Supply and Committee of the Whole – so that generally a member may speak for a maximum of 15 minutes followed by a five-minute question and comment period in which other members can hold to account the member who has just spoken.

Redundancy of Reading and Receiving Petitions and Presenting Petitions will be eliminated with the striking of Reading and Receiving Petitions.

What I would also like to touch upon, Mr. Speaker, are those things that have not changed. Oral Question Period remains 50 minutes, one of the longest in Canada, the longest in western Canada by far, and certainly much longer than the 15-minute Oral Question Period in British Columbia. Oral Question Period rotation has not changed. Television coverage of Oral Question Period and tablings and all other items of the Routine has not changed. All will continue to be covered from the time prayers are observed until Orders of the Day are called.

Speaking times in committees of the whole Assembly, Supply and the Whole, have not changed; 20 minutes still applies. The Assembly will sit the afternoons of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday and the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday beginning at 1:30 p.m., adjourning at 5:30 p.m., and reconvening at 8 p.m. There will still be a throne speech, a budget, and a list of government legislation. The right of the government to govern and legislate remains balanced against the uncompromised opposition right to hold the government accountable.

I'd also like to spend a moment addressing some of the opposition criticisms. One general opposition complaint deals with process. Over the years several attempts to review Standing Orders in a comprehensive way have ended without result or with only minor changes receiving unanimous, all-party consent to proceed. In fact, on one occasion six months' worth of work in all-party meetings was lost when the opposition parties could not agree on the issue of one extra member's statement. Thus, honest attempts have been made to achieve change through the usual all-party consent channel, and that process has been unsuccessful.

Another general opposition complaint has been that we will be taking off and not sitting on Monday evenings, which would be perhaps murdering the truth or, at the very least, wounding the truth. The fact is that when the Assembly meets on Monday afternoons, it is obliged by the proposed rules to sit Monday night, so the Assembly will continue to sit, and there will be government business dealt with on Monday nights.

One of the hon. members opposite – I believe it was the Member for Edmonton-Riverview – complained that the opposition will now be questioned by the government. I notice that the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition does not have a problem on this account, and I appreciate that. The proposed rules allow for any member who speaks to government business in Assembly to have their speech followed by a five-minute question and comment period whereby any member may pose a question and make a comment regarding the speech. This is not Oral Question Period in reverse, with the government drilling the opposition, as the hon. member has suggested. The proposal is simply an improvement in the evolution of debate back and forth.

In summation, these proposed rules are good changes, and I urge all members to support the passage of Government Motion 21. But before concluding my comments, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank all MLAs who provided suggestions for change. I would like to particularly thank David Gillies, who is the executive assistant to the Government House Leader, whose knowledge of the rules, the procedure of this Assembly, and the practice of this Assembly was of inestimable value in putting forward these comprehensive changes under Government Motion 21.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, further to the ruling made on November 21, we will now proceed with three separate votes on the motion.

On the motion as proposed by the hon. Government House Leader, all those in favour of part 1, which comprises sections 1, 3, 4, 26, and 27 of Government Motion 21, please say aye.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:27 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

For the motion:

Abbott	Jablonski	Ouellette
Ady	Jonson	Rathgeber
Cardinal	Klapstein	Renner
Cenaiko	Lord	Snelgrove
Danyluk	Lougheed	Stelmach
DeLong	Lukaszuk	Stevens
Ducharme	Lund	Strang
Evans	Masyk	Tannas
Forsyth	McClellan	Tarchuk
Fritz	McClelland	Taylor
Hlady	McFarland	Vandermeer
Horner	O'Neill	Zwozdesky
Hutton

Against the motion:

Blakeman	Mason	Nicol
Bonner	Massey
Totals:	For – 37	Against – 5

[Motion carried]

8:40

THE SPEAKER: The second vote, then, is on the motion as proposed by the hon. Government House Leader which comprises sections 20, 21, 22, and 23 of Government Motion 21.

[Motion carried]

THE SPEAKER: The third vote is on the motion as proposed by the hon. Government House Leader which comprises sections 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 24, 25, 28, 29, 30, 31, and 32 of Government Motion 21.

[Motion carried]

THE SPEAKER: Well, hon. members, congratulations on the progress that you've made. This is akin, I guess, to building a constitution, and you did it in only several days' debate, which is rather interesting. Sometime in the next month or so this Assembly will rise, and when hon. members return in the spring, there will be new Standing Orders. For those of you who believe in collecting memorabilia, these Standing Orders which were printed April 23, 2001, will now be completely revised and will become part of the history of the province of Alberta. Please feel free to take these home with you and study them over the winter, and keep them in a safe place.

head: Government Bills and Orders
head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Bill 28
Agricultural Operation Practices
Amendment Act, 2001

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Leduc will offer some comments, after which we'll have comments, questions, or amendments.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. What I wish to do is to move an amendment to the proposed Bill 28, the Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001. I believe there are copies there for distribution.

The amendment is that the bill be amended as follows. In part A section 5 is amended in the proposed section 27 by (a) adding the following after subsection (1), "(1.1) An application for leave to appeal pursuant to subsection (1) must be filed and served within 30 days after the decision of the Board is made," and (b) in subsection (2)(i) by striking out "on application made" and in (2)(ii) by striking out "making of the decision sought to be appealed from, or within a further time that the judge allows under special circumstances" and substituting "application for leave being filed and served under subsection (1.1)."

The purpose of the amendment is to make it clear what is the requirement of the appellant and what is being requested of the court.

THE CHAIRMAN: Hon. leader, just to clarify, we don't seem to have some paper in front of us, and I don't think any of the members have, but as I understand, all members of the opposition have seen the proposed amendments. Is that so?

DR. NICOL: Mr. Chairman, I was shown the amendment this afternoon.

THE CHAIRMAN: You may proceed if you wish to, hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, or we can wait a moment till the paper comes.

DR. NICOL: In my conversation with the minister this afternoon I see no problems with it. It's a good amendment. It will improve the bill. So as far as I'm concerned, it's quite acceptable to proceed, but if we're going to wait for it . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: That wasn't a command. That was just a question to the committee.

Please pass them out then. You might begin with those that are actually sitting here. Thank you.

I believe we're ready to proceed now. This amendment will be called amendment A2, and we'll ask the hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition to start off.

DR. NICOL: Mr. Chairman, as I said, I saw this this afternoon. It makes it much more clear in terms of the relationship between the appellant and what is expected and how they'll relate to the court. It doesn't provide undue direction to the court. It provides the court with the freedom that should be provided to the court, and I think because of that very last statement, that it doesn't interfere with the court process, we should all support it.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

THE CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions and comments? The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I had submitted amendments during committee on the previous day of debate. I assume they're still at the table; are they?

THE CHAIRMAN: Hon. leader, you're saying that there are some amendments here?

DR. NICOL: I submitted a pile of amendments to this bill in our previous debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: When we last debated this; right?

DR. NICOL: They were left at the table, so I'm assuming they're still available for distribution.

THE CHAIRMAN: Either that or they're recycled. We'll just check.

DR. NICOL: Mr. Chairman, I'll describe the amendments while they're being located. They have been found.

Essentially, the first one and the second one that I had proposed deal with the same issue. We had labeled them A2 and A3 before. They'll now be A3 and A4. Because they do the same thing in two different sections of the act, I would suggest that we take them together. What they're basically doing is dealing with section 13(1) and section 14(1). Basically, what this does is it essentially further limits the ability of a person to construct either an intensive livestock operation or a manure handling facility and changes the wording in both section 13(1) and section 14(1) from a situation where "no person shall construct or expand" to "no person shall commence construction or expansion of."

The idea here is that there have been a number of instances in Alberta in an historic context where individuals have gone through and basically when they submit their application, they begin construction, and the construction is well under way by the time approval is obtained. By making this explicit, that they shall not commence construction of either the facility or the manure handling, basically we are making sure that they understand the repercussions if they go ahead and begin construction as opposed to completing construction. So I guess what it does is clarify them. Given that they are both the same in section 13 and section 14, we can handle them as one vote or we can handle them as separate votes if the chair would prefer.

THE CHAIRMAN: It's not a matter of what the chair would prefer, but as long as you have that it is a motion and yourself to move that Bill 28 be amended, then that has to have a separate vote.

DR. NICOL: Well, then, let's deal with the one that we numbered A2 the other day, which is the one that's on section 13(1). It'll now be A3: Dr. Nicol to move that Bill 28 be amended in section 5 in the proposed section 13(1).

THE CHAIRMAN: That is A3. Do we have that? It's a very brief one. It should have been the first one in the package that you received: section 13(1) of section 5. Okay. Do you wish to move that now?

DR. NICOL: Yes, I would move that amendment. I've already gone through the rationale for why I think it's a good amendment, so we'll allow the member opposite to react.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Mr. Chairman, we accept the amendment, and I'll ask members to vote in favour.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. Are you ready for the vote? [interjections]

Hon. minister, you're only allowed to speak or make noises when you're at your place and not when you're moving around.

The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition has moved amendment A3 to Bill 28. This is the one with respect to section 5 in section 13(1).

[Motion on amendment A3 carried]

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would now like to move what is amendment A4. We had labeled it A3 the other day, but now it will be A4. This is that Bill 28 be amended in section 5 in the proposed section 14 by striking out subsection (1) and substituting the following:

14(1) No person shall commence construction, expansion or modification of a manure storage facility for which an authorization is required pursuant to the regulations or commence construction, expansion or modification of a manure storage facility for manure that is in a predominantly liquid state or manure to which water has been added unless

- (a) the person holds an authorization that authorizes the construction, expansion or modification, or
- (b) the person holds an approval or registration that authorizes the construction, expansion or modification.

Mr. Chairman, again, the rationale is the same as it was when I asked for the modification to section 13(1). There have been cases where individuals have gone ahead and assumed that they can begin construction when their application is submitted, and they're well into the construction process by the time the approval comes. This way, by having it specifically stated that they are not to do that – there are provisions in the process for exceptions – this basically makes it clear to them that they cannot start without approval. I think that's important because it creates a lot of community friction if people are asked to reverse something that somebody has already started to build on. This makes it plain to them that if they do commence construction, they're doing so at their own risk.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Leduc on amendment A4.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Mr. Chairman, we accept the amendment and ask members to vote in favour.

THE CHAIRMAN: Because there's a little bit of a question on this particular one, just to reassure us, hon. leader, A4 is the one that amends section 5 in section 14(1).

DR. NICOL: In subsection (1). That's correct.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is amendment A4. Okay.

[Motion on amendment A4 carried]

DR. NICOL: Mr. Chairman, I had submitted an amendment that we had called A4 previously. This is the one that amends section 2(a) by striking out proposed section 1(a)(i). I would like to withdraw that. I will not be proposing that amendment. That's in the package that was distributed, so I just want everybody to be aware of the fact that it will not be dealt with.

I would like to move to the one that we had labeled A5, which will now be A5 because A4 has disappeared. I move that Bill 28 be amended in section 5 in the proposed section 19(1) by striking out

“the approval officer may notify” wherever it occurs and substituting “the approval officer must notify.”

Mr. Chairman, in the act, in section 19, we’re looking here at basically conditions under which the approval officer must notify individuals who have been designated as affected persons, and those affected persons are defined by the regulations. Section 19(1) basically classifies two groups that may be notified, first of all the people who have been defined as affected persons. There’s a process in the regulations both to determine who is an affected person and, secondly, how that notification can be carried out or should be carried out. What I would suggest is that if we have from a public perspective, first of all, set in place a process to define who is an affected person and, secondly, set in place a process to go about notifying those people or those individuals or those municipalities or those bodies of concern that they are designated as an affected person under this act, then I feel strongly that we should make sure that the board does go through the process of notifying.

The process in itself can be set up under the regulations to provide, you know, flexibility so that if I’m halfway around the world somewhere and nobody knows where I’m at, then due diligence in notifying me is appropriate. So from that perspective I think it’s really important, especially in that first part, that we notify them. What this will do is greatly reduce the potential for individuals to come back, subsequent to a ruling by the board, saying: “Well, you know, you’ve identified me as an affected person, but I never knew anything about it. I was never notified. I didn’t have any idea that it was going on.” If we have it in there so that at least they must follow the process, then what we’ll have is a situation where in a sense the person has lost that ability to say: “Well, why didn’t you notify me? You’ve already defined me as an affected person.”

The second part of that clause is a secondary notification of individuals who, under either the Environmental Protection Enhancement Act or the Water Act, are defined as affected persons subject to this application. Similarly, even though those persons are designated as being affected under a different piece of legislation, the process of notification is there as well, and just to reduce significantly the possibility of any after-ruling repercussions, I think it’s important that we make sure that these people be adequately notified.

So, Mr. Chairman, those are the reasons that I think in both cases here we should in a sense change that “may” to “must” just so that we go through the process and make a statement strongly to the board that within the constraints of the process that we define by regulation, they follow through on it. I don’t think the board should have the freedom not to notify somebody if they’ve already identified them as being an affected person subject to the regulations of this act. I think that in the end we’ll have a much more peaceful resolution as people either accept or do not accept the fact that they are being notified.

So for those reasons, Mr. Chairman, I hope everyone will accept this amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to just make a few comments on the amendment. The whole area of notification is rather a complex one in this bill – and I admit that – and it is for a good reason. Some of the reasons the hon. member opposite has outlined. We have a section that deals with the notification occurring to municipalities that are directly affected or may be affected. We talk about the necessity of notifying those who are directly affected. I think that is important, that that is a must in this case.

When we talk about this section, Mr. Chairman, we’re talking about the approval officer that may notify or require the applicant to notify, and I believe that begs the question of whose responsibility ultimately it is to defend the project. For that reason, this bill has been written in the way that once an application is received, the approval officer either may notify or require the applicant to notify the affected persons, who, as I indicated, are a different group than the directly affected, who must be notified.

Because of the importance of this section and because the hon. member had the courtesy to speak to me and through me to the mover of the bill, I would ask that we adjourn debate on this amendment for this time so that we can have a little more time for consideration and consider it tomorrow, when there is an opportunity to speak to it again. Is that a proper recommendation, that we adjourn debate at this time? [interjection] Well, I have no problem as long as I can speak again, and I guess I can in committee. I’ll withdraw the last part of my sentence for now.

The hon. member opposite, the Leader of the Opposition, would like to ask a question, and I don’t have any problem with that.

THE CHAIRMAN: Before I recognize the hon. leader, would the committee give consent to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

MR. DANYLUK: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It has been brought to my attention, and it gives me great pleasure when I see a class coming into this Assembly to learn about our procedures. I don’t know anyone’s name, but all I want to say is that this is a class from NAIT that has come to observe our procedures. I’d ask for everyone to give them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly, please.

THE CHAIRMAN: The chair would observe for the benefit of those that are here visiting tonight that at this time we’re in committee. Committee is the informal part of the Assembly, and members are allowed to move around. We stick to the rule that only one member stands and talks at a time, from his or her place. We are allowed to remove jackets and to even have coffee and juice in here as opposed to just water. The debate also can go back and forth, and people can speak more than once on the same issue, as the case may be, in committee.

Without further ado, the hon. Leader of Her Majesty’s Loyal Opposition on amendment A5.

Bill 28
Agricultural Operation Practices

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In my discussions the other day with staff from Alberta Agriculture we talked about this section, and they were kind of agreeing with my interpretation of it, but as I listened to the minister speak just now, there may be a different interpretation to this section, and then the section is written correctly as is. What we have is that the approval officer basically has two choices. Either the approval officer will notify the affected individuals or the approval officer will ask the applicant to notify the affected parties. Is that the interpretation? May I ask her to nod her head, Mr. Chairman? If that's the interpretation, then I would suggest it is worded correctly as opposed to the process of providing the approval officer with the choice of whether or not notification will occur. So it's a "may" in the context of which process as opposed to whether or not actual notification. If that can be clarified, maybe I will withdraw my amendment.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Chairman, thank you for your indulgence. As I did indicate, this is a complex part of the bill, and it's an important part of the bill. We should make sure that we are comfortable with our understanding of it. The affected persons can be identified also through regulation as to how this section works, but certainly my interpretation is that the approval officer may notify affected persons or he may require the applicant to do it in that particular section.

I didn't go on to the next area, which is asked to be amended as well, which goes on to say:

And the approval officer may . . .

And this is the "may" in question here.

. . . notify or require the applicant to notify persons and organizations who are to be notified under the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act and the Water Act with respect to the subject-matter of the application under this section and any other persons or organizations the approval officer considers appropriate.

It may be, in our understanding of this, that it is the approval officer that does that, but it may also be somebody from the departments, in fact, which operate these two acts that would make that requirement in this section. So hence it's written "may" there, because it may be the approval officer or it may be somebody from those departments.

If you go on to the next section in the bill, it states very clearly that "a notification under subsection (1) must be carried out in accordance with the regulations within the time period required by the regulations." Mr. Chairman, that was one of the reasons that we were particularly diligent in ensuring that we had the draft regulations – and they are a work in progress, but they are in draft form – to ensure that members could see the regulations as anticipated, because they are really the mechanism for carrying out much of the operation of this act.

I am giving my interpretation. I still would have no problem if members want to take a little bit more time to review this section, but that would be my point now. I am not comfortable in accepting the amendment because I have a different interpretation of how this section works. Because of the importance of this bill, the importance to the agricultural industry and to the citizens of this province that this bill is in a form that can implement the activity that it's designed to do, it would be my opinion that it would not be out of the way to come back and deal with this amendment when this business is called again by the House leaders.

So I would say, Mr. Chairman, that it's entirely up to the House, but my recommendation is that if the hon. members, in particular the Leader of the Opposition, who has spoken to this amendment, still feel they would like to carry the amendment forward, I would adjourn the debate on it until we can have more consideration.

THE CHAIRMAN: No. I think we want to get this one straightened out.

We have the offer to perhaps withdraw it if certain conditions are met. We now have the minister suggesting that we adjourn debate and rise and report progress at some later time. When we come to discuss it again, whether it's later this evening or tomorrow or whenever, then you can either withdraw it or allow your amendment to stand and take the chance on the vote. Is that where we're at, hon. members?

DR. NICOL: Mr. Chairman, given the interpretation that the minister just gave to that section, where the "may" is not related to the notification but to the actions of the approval officer, then my amendment, in effect, is not necessary. The bill as it is written carries out proper notification. They will be notified. It's just a matter of who will make that notification, who will carry out that notification. So with that interpretation, I will withdraw the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Okay. The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition has requested that amendment A5 be withdrawn. May we have unanimous consent for this motion?

[Unanimous consent denied]

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Chairman, certainly the mover of this bill and this government have I think throughout the process of this bill stated very clearly that we want this legislation to be effective, to carry out a very important role in this province. This has been a culmination of three years of work and interaction with the public, including the people who have concerns environmentally, people in the industry. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition would say that we've had a fair amount of debate and discussion on this.

I made the comment earlier that rather than have the section voted on tonight, if there is a concern over the interpretation of it, I would adjourn the debate. However, I believe that there is an hon. member who wants to debate the amendment. Mr. Chairman, having heard that there was no problem with carrying on the debate tomorrow from the person who objected to the unanimous consent, I move that we adjourn debate on the amendment A5 on Bill 28. Let's quit wasting time.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Chairman, I would move that the committee rise and report progress on Bill 28 as amended, I believe.

[Motion carried]

9:20

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

MR. LOUGHEED: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports progress on Bill 28. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

Bill 30
Appropriation (Supplementary Supply)
Act, 2001 (No. 2)

[Adjourned debate November 26: Mrs. Nelson]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak to Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2). We're looking here at basically going through a process of kind of changing the budget in response to changing conditions across the province, which required moving dollars within the general revenue fund from one department to another. We have a number of cases where we've also, as permitted under the Financial Administration Act, been able to move dollars within departments to facilitate different needs. But what we're seeing here is basically some new dollars being allocated to departments where unexpected activities have arisen since the time we did the budget. As we went through the individual departmental debates last Thursday afternoon, I think it was, we ended up talking about some of the particular aspects of how these kinds of changes were justified or needed, and they were basically a reflection of kind of unplanned or unpredicted activities.

I guess the question that comes up is in the context of: how do we deal with making sure that the dollars are there to support some of the activities we undertake? One of the repercussions of these kinds of changes, when we have to either provide new dollars or move dollars in from one department to another, is that what we're going to end up with is a lot of uncertainty in the planning process, and we have to look at the techniques or the practices that we have to sustain that kind of constant budget. The government started off this year with a contingency fund that would have allowed for these kinds of things to be dealt with without the kind of adjustment that had to occur within all of the departments, as we were faced with an erosion both of that contingency fund and any possibility of surplus revenues. So the idea that we're looking at and actually allocating additional dollars to these departments means that other departments either had to sacrifice greater amounts within their framework or we had to deal with the issue of how we provide for some kind of stability in those contingency funds.

Mr. Speaker, on a number of occasions when we've been talking about the public's reaction to the adjustments that are being made within the departments, what we're seeing is that ministers are standing up and saying, "Well, yes, we're making cuts," but they're making cuts in increases. The big one there is Health and Wellness, where we're hearing the minister constantly saying: well, you know, we're not actually cutting the budget; we're actually increasing it by $118 million. But what it amounts to is that as per the plan, the ongoing plan, the evolving plan, at one point in time the allocation to Health and Wellness was 1 percent larger than what it is here, because that is the amount that was actually taken out subject to the adjustments that were made in November.

We have to make sure, as we look at this kind of strategy, that we don't complicate how we present these budgets to the people of Alberta. We can't keep changing the base that we're using to make our comparisons. I think it's totally inappropriate for the minister to start talking about the fact that they didn't make cuts to Health and Wellness, yet what we're seeing is that had the reduction in revenues not precipitated the adjustments made in September and October, then we would have actually been allocating more dollars in this appropriation to health care, because in the interim announcement since the last budget there were more dollars promised to the health care system. It's a matter of: how do we deal with these kinds of adjustments to budgets, and what base do we use when we make comparisons of those budgets?

If we're truly going to deal with quarterly updates, with the issue of appropriate responses to crises by ministers, then what we've got to do is make sure that we deal with the discussion in an up-front way with Albertans so they know that an announcement is an add-on to the budget or is a subtraction away from the budget. We keep a running total, and then we deal with the debate that occurs from the point we're at in that running total, not going back to the budget or not going back to a different base.

We have to make sure that individuals understand our process so they know that as we go through the year, we can't always predict – and I don't think any of them expect us to predict with absolute accuracy – the kinds of expenditures that we're going to need within each of the departments every year, year in and year out. I notice that this year we're dealing with supplementary supply for five different departments, but it's not the same five departments. Some of them are the same, but they're not the same five departments as we dealt with last year. It's also not the same five departments that we dealt with in the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001, because these are allocations in our budgeting process that are contingent upon a change from where we're at at the point of time of the adjustment.

If we're going to deal with these kinds of measures only counting as a base when we actually pass a supplementary supply act or we pass the original budget, then what we should be doing is not adding to the confusion of the public by talking about stepwise additions to the budget when we haven't already put them in here. But if we're going to make announcements where we're going to say that we will be allocating new dollars to a program or that there's been a cost overrun from a natural disaster or for some kind of a contingency, then we should be starting from that number and going ahead whether it means adding more to it again or subtracting from it as we make subsequent adjustments. This allows for a clear understanding by Albertans that our process of budgeting necessitates a dynamic approach to it.

We can't just start off at the beginning of the year and say that this is going to be our budget for the year and hold to it, because contingencies come up, unexpected events come up, new opportunities come up. No individual, no business, no government should constrain itself and not be able to take advantage of those opportunities or not be able to deal with the crises or the disasters that arise, and we have to have the option to make adjustments in our budget. If we look at what has happened here, as I said, the public has been brought into the debate on Health and Wellness more than it has in any of the other departments. We look at it from the perspective of each of them. I know that the Agriculture, Food and Rural Development budget is now being increased by $129,519,000, and what we're ending up with is already adjusted for changes that have been made because of the September, October cuts. It is important that we make sure people understand that that dynamic process is there. So it's basically in agriculture; it's in health as well. We have to watch that those kinds of processes are appropriately applied.

You know, Mr. Speaker, if it were just a matter of using up the department's discretionary dollar or the contingency fund, that could just lapse to the end of the year and it would roll over into general revenue. We wouldn't have to have a supplementary fund, because any surplus in a department automatically goes back to general revenue. So we wouldn't have to have a supplementary supply to put those dollars back into general revenue. When we deal with these, we have to recognize that their net adjustments at this point in time reflect possible additions to a program within a department and subtractions out of a different program in a department or subtractions from or additions to the overall budget of a department. They need to be reflected in transition as opposed to a point in time. Otherwise, the way we do our budgeting is confusing in the eyes of Albertans.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I think it's important that we look at making sure that maybe in future times, as an addendum to a bill like this when we put in the schedule, we should go through all the public announcements and end up with, you know, a bottom-line, net adjustment here so that Albertans truly do understand the fact that there have been announcements made by the government suggesting or indicating a change in a budget or in an allocation to a department. When we actually come to the vote, it either is there or it isn't, depending upon subsequent actions after that announcement. It would be very useful, I think, from the perspective of Albertans to be able to track through the cumulative actions and the consequential actions of a government as it adjusts and responds to the needs of Albertans in terms of providing them with the services they've asked their peers, through their government, to provide for them. That's kind of the approach that I think would be important for us to look at, because just a simple number doesn't reflect fully all the dynamics we've gone through with the ups and downs of the budgeting process.

That's especially critical in a year like this. We started the year with expectations of possibly a very robust economy, a very robust natural resource revenue option, and then we got into the June, July period and started to see our natural resources prices weaken and drop. We ended up beginning to talk about adjustments, but in the meantime we had already made promises and commitments to spend more dollars in some of these programs. Subsequent to the first-quarter update and the actions that precipitated into the fall, we've had to make significant adjustments again, which basically used up all of the contingency fund in the budget and required an additional reduction of expenditures. That in a sense has been reflected in the fact that we're now at a point where we end up having to make sure that, you know, the people of Alberta contract that, because this supplementary supply act doesn't reflect all that activity that went on both in terms of additions to and subtractions from departmental budgets. So I think that would be a kind of suggestion that would improve the process, making sure that Albertans understand how we go through dealing with budgets.

The other issue that's been raised a number of times by some of my constituents is the final item in Bill 30, which is the Legislative Assembly adjustment. I guess people couldn't understand why, when we go through the process of approving a budget, we have an allocation for an election in the Chief Electoral Officer's budget when we had just come out of an election. They're kind of wondering what we were expecting to do, what we were anticipating in the sense of actually putting that in the budget in the first place. Nobody truly expected that we would be in a position to have an election this quickly in the budgeting process. That's the kind of issue that has been raised in connection with that, and I think we have to be a little bit more descriptive when we talk about why those dollars were put out, why they were allocated, and how they can be transferred back into the Legislative Assembly fund.

This is a necessary part of appropriate financial management. It's kind of hard to tell what the actual numbers are in the sense of dealing with the material that's behind them. We dealt with the specifics of the additional allocations when we did Committee of Supply last week, so we don't want to get into those anymore. The overall process I've made a few comments on, and I think in the future we may want to look at that so that it helps Albertans understand the dynamics of the actual budgeting process and the decision-making process of government as it responds to the issues of Alberta.

With those comments I think I'll take my seat. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to speak to the 2001-2002 supplementary estimates. It's always a question as to whether or not the government acted appropriately in bringing forward supplementary funding through special warrants and so on as opposed to budgeting appropriately at the time. Now, I want to indicate, before there are too many groans over there, that I think that in fact most of these expenditures seem to be justified. Certainly drought relief for Alberta's farmers is a legitimate expenditure. I think the taking over of the financing of student loans is a justifiable expense. Forest fire fighting certainly could not be foreseen. The immunization for meningitis I think is a reasonable expenditure that could not have been reasonably foreseen in the budget. So, Mr. Speaker, I just have three questions that I would like to put with respect to these estimates. I don't know if answers can be provided tonight, but they could be provided in writing at a later time.

I would appreciate detailed breakdowns for a couple of items. The first one has to do with the $2,797,000 of additional funding for support for the Legislative Assembly. I would like that number broken down so that we can see very clearly what that expenditure is for.

The other one that strikes me as very high is nearly $100 million of expenditure for forest fire fighting. Now, that is an incredible level of funding. Obviously there was a serious problem with forest fires of great magnitude, but I would like to have the minister, please, provide a breakdown of that.

The one expenditure that I was looking for and didn't find here, Mr. Speaker, was additional expenditures to fund Children's Services. I find it interesting that where you have a very significant increase in the caseload, this is not seen as something that would be funded by a supplementary requisition but instead has to come from existing preventative programs. This is a different approach in this department than I see in other departments where you have unforeseen expenditures. Whether it be drought or forest fires or student loans or increases for justices of the peace, any number of legitimate expenses that were unforeseen, those are provided for by supplementary estimates. But in the case of increases in caseloads for children, it must come out of the department and it must come out of the preventative program. So it will have a feedback effect, then, because by canceling and cutting back dramatically on the preventative programs, your caseloads will increase in the future, and you'll enter an upward spiral that you may not get out of, at least not very easily. So that's a question I would put to the Minister of Children's Services as well as to the Provincial Treasurer. Why the difference in how we treat departments, and why are children treated in one way and forest fires and farmers treated in another?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I at this time would like to get some remarks regarding Bill 11 on the record – or Bill 30. Pardon me. Why am I stuck on Bill 11?

MR. MASON: Old habits die hard.

MR. MacDONALD: Old habits die hard. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands is absolutely right. Yes.

On Bill 30 there are some things that certainly any government cannot foresee, and there have to be additional sums. I noted with interest the 9 million plus dollars that has been appropriated by the Ministry of Justice for increased justices of the peace compensation, to provide the costs of the new professional lounge for provincial judges, and for hiring additional Crown prosecutors, not only Crown prosecutors but support staff. This issue was brought to the attention of our constituency office in the summer. I don't know what else to say other than it took the current government time, but eventually they certainly did the right thing and hired additional Crown prosecutors and support staff and increased the compensation levels for those that were there. This was not only an issue of hiring; it was an issue of retaining staff. I'm pleased to see in here that this issue was dealt with, not in a timely fashion by this government but at least it was dealt with.

There are other nonbudgetary items in here, certainly from Agriculture, Food and Rural Development; from income assistance programs, specifically for the province's livestock and honey producers in response to drought conditions, some of the worst drought conditions that have occurred in the last half century; and $118 million has been appropriated by the Minister of Health and Wellness, as was mentioned earlier.

When we look at all this spending, you have to look at the plans. I would have to say that prudent management is not the name of a town in Saskatchewan. It should be the motto of this government, but unfortunately it's not. Alberta is blessed with abundant resources, and there can be a lot of mistakes made, and of course they can be covered up. Excuse me, not covered up. I will withdraw that description "covered up." A better word would be "bought." You know, buy their way out of trouble with millions of dollars of—well, they're referred to as subsidies by the hon. Minister of Energy in the Calgary Herald. Whenever you lurch from one spending spree to another spending spree, the public get concerned, particularly whenever there is talk of cutbacks, Mr. Speaker, and I would remind all hon. members of this Assembly that this year's projected revenue is the second largest in the history of the province.

Now we're having cutbacks. We're having this, and we're having that. I can't imagine what future supply estimates will be, but we need to recognize, you know, that there is money and that the money has to be made available to respond to urgent issues like the forest fires, like the drought. There's no denying that. However, one has to have serious concerns about the lack of planning within the entire government's budgeting process, and again prudent management is not a town in Saskatchewan.

We on this side of the House have always had concerns about the budgeting process here. I can't for the life of me understand why this government is operating on a three-month plan when the Government Accountability Act talks about a three-year plan. One of the main problems with this government has again been the improper management of the budget. They didn't manage the cuts properly in health care and education. They were reckless, and we're still paying for it. They didn't effectively manage reinvestment, and this government refuses to even consider better management practices in light of volatile crude oil prices and natural gas prices and the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East's solution of the stability fund. The hon. Minister of Community Development is fully aware of, you know, the prudence of having the stability fund and just exactly what it would do for this province and for the Minister of Finance as the price of oil goes up and goes down. The stability fund as proposed by the Member for Lethbridge-East is a sound idea, and we could avoid so much of this if the government would just do the right thing and say yes to the Alberta Liberal stabilization fund plan.

Now, if you're not sticking to your budget, Mr. Speaker, there is no ability for the departments to plan and to get full value for Albertans' money. Everyone is fond of saying that there is only one taxpayer, but the taxpayer with this government is, I guess, the Rodney Dangerfield of taxpayers because they're not getting any respect.

Even the Auditor General has said:

While subsequent additional funding may provide relief from immediate budget pressures, it is not conducive to good management since [repetition may] create the expectation of continuing amounts in addition to planned [annual budget increases].

Now, surely if the hon. members across the way are not going to listen to the Official Opposition, they could heed the advice of the Auditor General. They could listen to the Auditor General, but it seems there's always this issue of poor management, poor management covered up by robust natural resource prices. It's quite easy, as we saw last year before the election, whenever 'egonomics' is being practised: throw money at every problem. Every problem. Now that the election is over, oh goodness, we're going to have to start taking money out of the taxpayers' pockets or their purses. [interjection] It is true. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs is anxious to participate in the debate, but I don't know what's going to happen whenever constituents start phoning and asking about the deferral account and how we're going to pay this now that the election is over. Is this going to be in supplementary—no, in the budget.

Now, budgeting by this government is clearly resource based. It's not in any way, shape, or form service based, but it's resource based. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, if there is not sound management by adopting a thing such as the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East's policy, the stabilization fund, it's going to come back to hurt not only the hon. members of this Assembly but every Albertan. We cannot be at the whim of extremely volatile resource revenues. We are at their mercy because there's not sound management of international petroleum prices and in the natural gas market to the North American price. The real benefit here is that we have the benefit of a low Canadian dollar, Mr. Speaker.

AN HON. MEMBER: Benefit?

MR. MacDONALD: Yes, a benefit, hon. member.

Now, I have a few questions before I cede the floor. What criteria is the government using to determine whether extra or unbudgeted spending is necessary? I would like to know this on behalf of the constituents of Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Now, many of the government's goals and performance measures are too vague and are arbitrary. They fail to give a real picture of the government's performance. If there's a snapshot there and it's not approved, the performance measure, as the Member for Edmonton-Centre frequently tells the House, it is removed. Many of the government's goals and performance measures don't even relate to the government's actual performance, Mr. Speaker.

Now, in closing I would like to say that this isn't three-year budgeting; it's three-month budgeting. The government is simply engaged in reactionary budgeting or, as the people at the Capilano Mall call it, 'egonomics,' because it's simply a way of buying favours with the electorate. Then after the election is over, 'egonomics' is over and we're back to their reckless cuts to health care and to education and to children's services. That's what we have.

We've gone from 'economics' back to the old ways, without a plan.

Now, with those remarks, at this time I would take my seat, Mr. Speaker, and cede the floor to another hon. colleague. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 30 read a second time]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been another excellent evening of tremendously exciting debate with very good progress having been made. At this hour of the evening I would move that the Assembly do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, November 27, at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; at 9:55 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 27, 2001

1:30 p.m.

Date: 01/11/27

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O Lord, guide us all in our deliberations and debate that we may determine courses of action which will be to the enduring benefit of our province of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to table two petitions from my constituency of Edmonton-Riverview addressed to the Premier regarding the War Amps key tag identification program. The program has been denied access to motor vehicle operators lists in Alberta through AMV because of FOIP rules. This access has been provided since 1947, and the petition urges that such access continue to be granted.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to table petitions from constituents of Edmonton-Glengarry addressed to the Premier regarding the War Amps key tag program. The program has been denied access to motor vehicle operators lists in Alberta through AMV because of FOIP rules. This access has been provided since 1947, and the petition urges that such access continue to be granted.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table three petitions from my constituency of Lethbridge-East addressed to the Premier regarding the War Amps key tag identification program. They would like to have this program reinstated so that they can continue to do the good work that they've been doing through the War Amps program.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to table a petition from the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods addressed to the Premier with respect to the War Amps key tag identification program asking for access to the names that they have been denied under the FOIP rules.

Thank you.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the petition I presented yesterday on Chinchaga now be read and received.

THE CLERK:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to support the establishment of the Chinchaga Wilderness as a legislated protected area.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to request that the petition that I tabled yesterday in the House on Chinchaga be now read and received.

Thank you.

THE CLERK:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to support the establishment of the Chinchaga Wilderness as a legislated protected area.

head: Notices of Motions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(2)(a) to give notice that tomorrow I will move that written questions appearing on the Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

I'm also giving notice that tomorrow I will move that motions for returns appearing on that day's Order Paper also do stand and retain their places.

Thank you.

head: Introduction of Bills

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Bill 31

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2)

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice to request leave to introduce Bill 31, the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2).

This bill makes minor changes to nine pieces of legislation provincially, including the Health Disciplines Act, the Crown Contract Dispute Resolution Act, the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, and the Maintenance Enforcement Act.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 31 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

MR. COUTTS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the honour of tabling five copies of the 2000-2001 annual report of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. This is the sixth report since the act was proclaimed in 1995, and it highlights a number of significant accomplishments from the past year, including the development and delivery of an on-line course on information access and privacy protection, the first of its kind in Canada.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to table the requisite number of copies of the authorized accredited agency annual report summary statistics for April 1, 1999, to March 31, 2000.

MR. DOERKSEN: Mr. Speaker, I would take this opportunity to table a copy of the 2002 Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research calendar, which outlines some of the outstanding work this organization does on behalf of Albertans and, in fact, of all Canadians. Along with the calendar are the 2001 financial highlights and the consolidated financial statements for the 2000-2001 year.

Thank you.

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I have essentially three tablings today. The first tabling is the Child Welfare Act Review Discussion Guide. My hon. colleague from Calgary-Buffalo is distributing and discussing the act review.

The second tabling is the Children's Advocate report of 2000-2001 and the response Children's Services provides for the substantiated investigated summaries. Mr. Speaker, we are providing a comment on every single investigation without identifying the child and family service authority, without identifying the child, but it should anecdotally provide some assurance about the level of investigation into the cases that have been cited by the Children's Advocate in this report.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings, with your permission, this afternoon. My first is five copies of a letter to the federal secretary of state responsible for women's issues regarding the National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women on December 6, 2001. As you are also aware, I have provided a white ribbon, such as the one I'm wearing, to each of our colleagues in the Legislature today to mark this important event along with a memo requesting all of us to support actions and activities that help prevent violence against women. I know that our colleague from St. Albert will comment further on this later this afternoon. I also want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre for her leadership role in getting these activities started in our areas.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is in fact a letter from me to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre in supplement to my response to a question she raised in this House a few days ago regarding APLEN, the Alberta public library electronic network.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. First I'm pleased to file five copies of responses to questions raised May 14, 2001, in the Committee of Supply's review of Alberta Finance's 2001-2002 budget estimates.

Mr. Speaker, pursuant to section 10 of the Government Accountability Act I'm tabling five copies of the annual report of the government of Alberta, that highlights the successful implementation of the single-rate tax system. This report is for fiscal year 2000-2001 and includes consolidated financial statements that show a record payment on the province's accumulated debt.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to table annual reports on behalf of the following ministries and government agencies as required in section 14 of the Government Accountability Act: Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, Agriculture Financial Services Corporation, Children's Services, child and family services authorities' financial statements, Community Development, Economic Development, Resource Development, Environment, Treasury, Gaming, Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission, Government Services, Health and Wellness, health authority financial statements, Human Resources and Employment, Infrastructure, Innovation and Science, International and Intergovernmental Relations, Justice, Learning, Executive Council, and Municipal Affairs. These reports have been delivered to the Clerk's office as they are too numerous to bring into the Assembly.

Thank you.

1:40

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table with the Assembly today the Alberta Registered Professional Foresters Association annual report.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of petitions from individuals in southern Alberta to get education on track, asking the Legislative Assembly to support Bill 218, which will provide adequate funding for a properly functioning education system.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have three tablings. The first is from Rod Olstad of Edmonton, who is concerned that there is not enough protection in the Alberta foothills ecosystem, and he is "disappointed that oil and gas leases have been recently allowed in 'protected' areas in Alberta."

My second tabling is from David Montgomery. He is very concerned about recycling practices in this province.

My third tabling is from Jim and Pat Dittrich, who are "very concerned about the proposed shutting down of trails in the Canmore area."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I would table the required number of copies of 101 requests from Albertans who urge the government to vote for Bill 218, the class size targets bill, to "end the need for parents to fundraise for . . . basics" and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the required number of copies of 19 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size target bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings from constituents today. The first is a letter from Elizabeth Esaiw, who is very concerned about diabetic management in Alberta. She's paying an average of $100 per month for her diabetic supplies, and she's hoping that the government is going to show some positive change.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is from June Mowers. She is very concerned about user fees for health care and considers that a scare tactic. She would rather see a sales tax than user fees.

The third tabling is from John Shepherd, who was involved with the Mennonite Centre Welcome Home Community. He's very concerned and asks the government "to uphold its commitments and reconsider funding for the Welcome Home Community."

The final tabling is the appropriate number of copies of a petition from the War Amps, who are asking that the motor vehicle list, which they have been denied access to, be made accessible to them again.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the required number of copies of 20 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size target bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to ensure that Alberta can afford to keep teachers.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table copies of a letter from Theresa Driediger, a chartered psychologist and marriage and family therapist who has worked closely with the Welcome Home Community and calls it a wonderfully effective model. She is expressing dismay at the decision of the Ma'Möwe Capital region child and family services authority for cutting its funding effective February 15, 2002.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm tabling five copies of an open letter from Canada's Association for the Fifty-Plus asking the federal and provincial governments to address "the current crisis in affordable housing."

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, it is my pleasure today to table the appropriate copies of the first School at the Legislature report card 2000-2001. This is the Legislative Assembly educational program for grade 6 students co-sponsored by three community partners: Shaw Communications, Capital City Savings, and The Quality Group.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

MR. TANNAS: Thank you. I am honoured today to introduce to you and through you an individual who has given long and loyal service to this Assembly. Mike Chwok served with the Legislative Assembly security staff from March 8, 1984, until the 15th of June 2001. At his retirement he was the longest serving security staff member. Prior to his service here he was for 29 years a member of the Edmonton Police Service. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Chwok is in your gallery. He is accompanied by his wife, Evelyn, and I'd ask Mr. and Mrs. Chwok to rise and receive the grateful thanks of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two outstanding grade 6 classes from Lago Lindo school. They are accompanied today by Principal John Eshenko, teachers Marilyn Gehring and Kevin Peters, and parent Mary Anne Luellman. They are seated in the members' gallery, and with your permission I would ask that they now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege and honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House a great group of intelligent and energetic young people from J.J. Nearing school in St. Albert. They have 80 visitors in both galleries. They are accompanied by teachers Mrs. Reid, Mr. Raypold, and Mrs. Sowinsky and parent helpers Mrs. Brenneis, Mr. Manastirski, Mrs. Fontaine, Mrs. LeBlanc, Mr. Bell, and Mrs. Vanderwalle. They are, as I said, in both galleries, and I would ask that they all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have 17 guests from Kneehill home educators visiting the Legislature today. Unfortunately, they won't be in the Assembly till 2 o'clock, but I would like to acknowledge their visit with the traditional welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. HUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly 25 very bright and enthusiastic students from a school appropriately named Brightview elementary school. Accompanying the class are teachers Graeme Walker and Heather Parkinson and parent helpers Ms Kathy Dupuis and Mr. Searle. Unfortunately, they're not in the Assembly right now, as the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert has half of his constituency in the galleries. They will be arriving a little later on, and I would ask that we show them the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

MR. SNELGROVE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the members today a group of students from Tulliby Lake in Vermilion. They are accompanied by Miss Sandra Lawson and Mr. Allan Belsheim. I just want to dispel the myth of class size; all three of them are here today. I'd like them to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:50

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Natural Gas Royalties

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past few years the government has been moving natural gas royalties paid in the first quarter of the current year backwards to the previous year and adding it to the surplus. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. Can you explain why you've taken over $2.8 billion paid this year in royalties and moved it back and added it to last year's surplus?

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, the $2.8 billion that the hon. member is referring to was accrued into last year because it's the production from last year.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Finance: are you not trying to protect revenues for debt payment and not for education, children's services, or health, where they're needed?

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, oil and gas revenues usually come 60 to 90 days after the month in which they are produced, and it's normal accounting to accrue back into the actual year. This is the standard accounting principle that we have followed.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. But they don't do it with all the other revenues that they get as well that come late.

Given that the minister is willing to move these royalties back when last year's revenues are positive, what happens if the royalties are below the projection? Will you move a deficit back to last year as well?

MRS. NELSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's a silly question, but let's be very clear. Under standard accounting principles you usually report the actual year as close as possible, and you use a method called accruals to do that, to reflect what the actual picture for the year looks like. We did not deviate from that one bit. The second part of the question is just silliness.

THE SPEAKER: Second main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you. Everything else is done on a cash basis.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

DR. NICOL: Mr. Speaker, children in Alberta are going without essential services, parents are being forced to fund-raise for their children's education, and RHAs are cutting their budgets while running deficits. All this is happening while the government sits with over $2 billion in the bank. My first question is to the Minister of Children's Services. Why has your department cut 21 programs for children in the MáMōwe region when the government has over $2 billion in the bank?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I think that to a recent question I responded that 93 agencies are currently on contract to provide services within the MáMōwe Capital region. It's very clear to me that when you have that many agencies, there are naturally opportunities to find cost efficiencies. Many of the reductions and in fact many of the cuts have been done to become more efficient in our delivery of services, not to in fact squeeze children out of services but to become more efficient and cost-effective.

Mr. Speaker, after the first-quarter result we saw that Children's Services, if we had continued caseload growth, could well have a deficit. Much of the cost-containment strategy has been done in fact to make sure that we don't have a deficit, that we do refine our service delivery system, and that we do look after children in a very cost-conscious way but in an even better fashion.

There's something else that I want to reinforce for this House. We have an Alberta response model that is currently being taught to social workers, that is being transferred to the CEOs and co-chairs, which will mean that low-risk children will be taken care of at the community level, where they're most in need of services that support the family, not engage the child in Children's Services, through the full spectrum, Mr. Speaker, to still having high intake services for children most at risk.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why did your department announce more money for RHAs earlier in the year and then cut almost half that money when the government still has over $2 billion in the bank?

MR. MAR: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can say with some amount of confidence that we've been working with the regional health authorities in dealing with this. We make decisions, and unlike the Leader of the Opposition we do not have the benefit of his 20/20 hindsight, but we do make the best decisions that we can with the information that we have. In working with regional health authorities, both the Minister of Finance and I have satisfied ourselves that they will deal with the lesser amount of money that is made available to them because we have a lesser revenue available to us as a government. We have worked with them in order to reduce the amount of impact on frontline services.

Earlier this week the Premier himself tabled a press release from the Calgary health region indicating that they were able to take $30 million off their expenditures without any change in their frontline services. One of the areas that we've reduced in our transfers to regional health authorities was for energy rebates – and we know, of course, what happened to the price of energy: it's gone down – and that did not affect frontline services either, Mr. Speaker. So we have worked mightily with the regional health authorities to reduce our costs of delivery of frontline services.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Less revenue and they moved $2.8 billion back to last year and still have $2 billion in the bank.

My third question is to the Minister of Learning. Why do parents have to subsidize the education system when the government has $2 billion in the bank?

DR. OBERG: They don't, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

School Fund-raising

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. According to an Alberta Learning Best Practices study, computer costs for one area high school are $340 per student per year. Studies of other schools show costs ranging from $176 to $678 per student per year for computers.

My questions are to the Minister of Learning. Does the minister consider parents who are fund-raising for computers to be fund-raising for a basic school item?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, included in much of the curriculum is a need for computers. There is no doubt about that. There's a minimum number of computers needed for certain of our curriculum, and those are provided by the school board. If the parents want to go out and fund-raise for more computers, if they want to increase the number of computers to, for example, one to one in their schools, anything like that, they are very capable of doing that, and they can quite easily make that decision on their own. I do consider that a certain number of computers is essential for schools in this day and age. I believe it is an essential component. The question comes down to the number of computers in schools.

DR. MASSEY: Based on that study, how does the minister then propose to stop the hundreds of parent groups across the province who are fund-raising for computers for that basic program?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, I'll basically say the same answer as I did before. There is a minimum number of computers that school boards put in their classrooms. Many school boards have elected to put in many, many more computers than what is necessary. I think that's a good decision. I think that's a decision that the school boards have to make. If the parents want to fund-raise for more computers, again I say that they have that ability to do it, and I think it's good for their students.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member?

The hon. leader of the third party.

Children's Services

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have a Minister of Children's Services who is quite frankly failing in her duty to protect vulnerable children in this province. If the minister can't find children who will be hurt by brutal cuts to frontline services, it is simply because she is choosing not to look. There are many such real-life examples, including a six-year-old autistic child I'll call Jeffrey. Jeffrey has severe emotional and behavioural disorders and requires intensive intervention and treatment. My question to the Minister of Children's Services: can the minister please explain how removing Jeffrey from the Salvation Army Children's Village in Calgary with its round-the-clock care and professional staff and moving him into an already overburdened foster care system can be accomplished without hurting Jeffrey?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I am loath to comment on individual cases in this House because of the confidential nature and the manner in which we deal with children. I have accepted every single member's challenge to follow up on the hot spots of the individual children. From the Leader of the Opposition to the Member for Livingstone-Macleod, people in this House have been bringing me questions individually. It is my responsibility individually. But to cite the name of a child and a location in this House is totally inappropriate.

DR. PANNU: Mr. Speaker, let me assure the House that the name I used is not the real name.

Let me ask the minister a second question. How can the minister keep defending the absurd proposition that she will take care of individual children when she knows well that a one-kid-at-a-time approach is simply not practical in the face of the thousands of children who are being pawned?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, let's be perfectly clear. We had $647 million when we started this year, and we have barely half a million dollars at this particular point in time. For every individual case that is brought, I think it is our responsibility to deal with them, as Mother Teresa said, one at a time, and we are looking into these one at a time.

In terms of those overall agency reductions or eliminations, Mr. Speaker, I am very confident that the local authorities are examining these with their CEO. They're looking at what cases are possibly affected furthest from the child. On individual cases that relate to handicapped children's services, services for special needs, I think it is my responsibility as Minister of Children's Services to follow up on every single case, and I'll be pleased to follow up on the hon. member's case. It will be investigated and explored.

Mr. Speaker, we have not made the reductions that are being cited by the other side of the floor. We have reduced information technology, made administrative efficiencies, worked on our contract agency supports, and done numerous things. These individual horror stories that are coming forward could most productively be dealt with if they were passed directly to me so that as quickly as possible we could look after those through our department.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary to the minister: given that the cuts we already know about don't come anywhere close to making up the ministry's $40 million-plus budget shortfall, will the minister confirm that even more cuts are coming, and will she announce them to this House before the end of the fall session?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I am doing my level best day by day to do the very best thing with the resources we have available for children, and across Canada there is no place where the resources are so prolific for children. I could respond on behalf of myself and our government. The Minister of Learning, the Minister of Justice, the Solicitor General, the Minister of Health and Wellness: every single minister across this table has funds that are available for children and families in need, and we are providing those. At such time as our Premier and our ministers of Finance and Revenue deliver another budget, then I will be pleased to provide my comments, my projections, my expenditures and revenues, as this Legislature requires.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Internet Sales Regulations

MR. SNELGROVE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If we could deal with reality for a minute, please. In light of the recent bankruptcy of Canada 3000, the Minister of Government Services has explained that there are a number of protections in place for consumers, one of which is the Internet sales regulation. Can the minister explain the significance of this regulation and why it was necessary?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. COUTTS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta happens to be one of Canada's most connected provinces, and the number of Albertans that make access to the Internet will probably continue to rise as our economy continues to strengthen, so it makes sense that this government would put in place and take a lead in protection for consumers who want to shop on-line. The Internet sales regulation was thus put in place on October 15 of this year so that shopping on the Internet would become the same as shopping, say, at your local store or mall. On-line shopping of course comes with its challenges, and those same challenges don't exist in the traditional marketplace. As an example, you can check prices, you can compare products, and you can deal with your merchant right up front. So it was important that Internet sales regulations be put in place to protect shoppers, to assist on-line shoppers by providing standards that will help reduce customer complaints and misunderstandings.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. SNELGROVE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplement to the same minister: does that not mean that now it's safer to shop on-line than in stores?

MR. COUTTS: Mr. Speaker, that is a very good question, and I want to make it clear to the hon. member and to all consumers that Alberta consumer protection legislation, which is the Fair Trading Act, applies to all purchases whether they're purchased in a store or whether they're purchased on-line. There's no arguing that shopping locally does have its advantages and shopping on-line has its disadvantages. That's why we put the provisions in place, and both instances are covered by the Fair Trading Act. The goal of the Internet sales regulation is to level the playing field between on-line and retail shopping for both sellers and buyers. One of the specifics about on-line shopping is that the regulations that were put in place are to give customers the opportunity to have a cancellation provision, and by using a credit card, that cancellation provision comes into place.

MR. SNELGROVE: My second supplemental to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: can the minister explain what tools the government has to enforce the Fair Trading Act or the Internet sales regulation?

MR. COUTTS: Certainly, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned, the Fair Trading Act is Alberta's consumer protection legislation. It defines unfair practices and provides remedies if the act has been breached. For example, a breach of the Fair Trading Act might be in describing a used item and selling it as a new item. Penalties for that type of breach of the act include a $100,000 fine or up to two years in jail, as well as that a business can also be ordered to pay restitution. It should be added that all sellers, both traditional and on-line, have the right to establish a whole range of policies. So you'll see different policies for different on-line purchases, but for that reason I would advise customers to ask the proper questions when buying either on-line or in stores. We have a tip line that's available to help consumers through Government Services' toll-free number.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Provincial Fiscal Policies (continued)

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development said that the government is developing a policy for what it calls rationalizing the commercial fishing industry. In this rationalization the government is considering buyouts for people voluntarily leaving the industry. My first question is to the Minister of Finance. Why is this government considering underwriting business losses while cutting essential children's programs?

MRS. NELSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're not. We put forward a fiscal plan that has a balance that meets the demands and needs and priorities of Albertans. The hon. member is trying to play a little game here. Policy decisions are made through our caucus, through the standing policy committee, and recommendations are brought forward. They all must fit within the overall fiscal plan of the government. They're debated in this House in the Committee of Supply during the estimates of each department. In fact, we're in the process right now of debating supplementary estimates. So all of the moves financially and fiscally that the government decides on are in fact debated right here in this very Legislature, and I would encourage the hon. member opposite to engage in that debate. If she has questions of a particular ministry, she should raise them at that time.

MR. CARDINAL: Just for clarification, Mr. Speaker, the plan was put out as a five-year plan which will rationalize the commercial and sports fishing industry, because it is a very, very important subject to all Albertans. It's not approved yet, but once approved, the plan is designed where dollars can kick in at any time in the five years in order to proceed with the program. So when the budget is not there, like this year, we will not expect to implement that program this year, but I just want to approve the process.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that I am hearing the same thing, I'll repeat the question to the Minister of Finance. Why is the government making the choice to put industry before children?

MRS. NELSON: I think the Minister of Children's Services has in detail talked about how children are being protected in this province, far more so than any other jurisdiction in this country. She also challenged the opposition to notify her directly if they found that there was a child that hadn't been dealt with properly. She identified in her fiscal plan that she had made the corrections, the corrective action of October 18, by streamlining her administration. Not one frontline delivery program had been adversely affected by the 1 percent that her department contributed to the fiscal plan of this province. They in fact had accomplished their mission through administrative things like IT changes, et cetera.

Now, the member opposite can't understand that, so, Mr. Speaker, I would ask, with your indulgence, that the Minister of Children's Services and the minister for aboriginal affairs supplement this answer so it's crystal clear to Albertans how children in this province are being protected.

THE SPEAKER: Well, sorry, hon. members. We're moving on. I've got a whole list of members.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, my next question is to the Minister of Children's Services. Given what has just been laid out by the Minister of Finance, am I to take it, then, that there have been no cuts to frontline services? Well, does that mean that your department has been funding programs that were not essential programs for children, necessary for the protection of children in Alberta?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, presently we're in what I would call a transition zone, where we've had early intervention funding that has been provided by the province, about $30 million, and we are awaiting still more of the early intervention funds coming under the early childhood development funding of the federal government. Some of those funds that support aboriginal children in need are still not in receipt of any of the provincial authorities. So during this period of time we have been trying to be creative in our responses to early childhood delivery programs, starting first with the home visitation, in co-operation with the Minister of Health and Wellness, and working our way through these programs. Where those cuts have been furthest from the child in need of protection, we have had a belt tightening, to be sure, and we have had reductions in those services. But make no mistake; we have not at any time taken funds away from direct-line services to children who are in need, who are either handicapped or who are being served in a foster or a group home. I've reiterated that a number of ways, and I'll be pleased to go into more detail and bring that to this Legislative Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

TCE Contamination

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just recently in the media in Calgary there was a potentially dangerous leak of a chemical called TCE, namely trichloroethylene, a known cancer agent. It was detected in some of the homes near the Canadian Pacific railway workshop in my constituency. My question today is to the Minister of Environment. Can the minister explain the cause of this pollution and how it happened?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The CPR rail yards at Ogden were established in 1913, and as that happened, you then have commercial, industrial, and some residences that have grown up around this area. From about the '50s to the '80s TCE was used as a degreasing agent, and nobody was aware, quite frankly, of the chemical toxicity around that chemical during this period. It was used all over North America. You know, it wasn't just used in Calgary; it was used in all of North America as a degreasing agent. Over time the caretaking in handling it wasn't there, so obviously some was spilt on the ground. Then over the long period of time, with the concentrations of this spill, some of it has got into the groundwater, and that groundwater has carried the contamination off the CPR Ogden site.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. CAO: Thank you. My supplemental question is to the same minister. What measures are being taken to ensure the safety of my constituents?

DR. TAYLOR: Well, the contamination was first discovered in 1999, late 1999, and the CPR immediately informed Alberta Environment, as they must. They also immediately informed the residents in early 2000 that there was this contamination, and Alberta Environment is overseeing a cleanup process. We're working with the Calgary regional health authority in this cleanup process, and we will continue to work with them. It's my understanding that the CPR has been very proactive in this process and is at present installing ventilation devices in the homes where this was detected to take this out of the homes.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. CAO: Thank you. My last supplementary is also to the same minister. Who is liable for this pollution and the damages and cleanup?

DR. TAYLOR: The CPR has assumed all legal and financial liability for this cleanup, and they are proceeding with it at their cost.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment this afternoon. Does the government endorse $650 a month as enough for an Albertan to live on?

Thank you.

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, one of the measurements in terms of this government that appears in the Measuring Up document is that this government will provide assistance to Albertans who truly need our assistance. One of the principles that this government works on is the fact that it is, first of all, better to be working than to be on assistance, but we do recognize that there are people within our communities that will be unable to enter the workforce. So it is then incumbent on this government and upon the taxpayers of this province to provide for basic needs, and that is always going to be perhaps a contentious issue in terms of how much assistance a government does provide. In our case, within this province the assistance will be temporary in nature and will be basic in its components.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you. Again to the same minister: will the government announce its new, two-tier AISH system with its two sets of rules and its two sets of rates? When will this announcement be made?

Thank you.

MR. DUNFORD: I'm not familiar with what the member is talking about. It seems to me that it is an attempt somehow to perhaps incite a certain group that we have within our community.

If I might talk about our AISH program, it's recognized as one of the better programs across the country. It's received national attention. It provides income for people that are severely handicapped. I think that amongst the population generally it's seen as an excellent program, and we want to make sure that everyone is aware of how good we think it is.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you. Again to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: can the minister assure us that he will oppose an AISH system with two rates and rules for recipients, one set for new applicants and another for existing recipients who would be grandfathered under the old system?

Thank you.

AN HON. MEMBER: Quit giving him your questions.

MR. DUNFORD: Did I write your question for you? I don't think so.

The assumption is being made, I think, in anticipation perhaps of the low-income review that has been placed on my desk. I've indicated here that we've received the report, and again thank you to the committee for a very thorough and comprehensive report.

As we speak, department officials are taking a look at the information that's been provided. Of course, we'll be making that public at some sector, Mr. Speaker, and then we'll be reviewing how we provide assistance to low-income Albertans, and that will be well publicized. It would have to come to this House for any particular changes, because most of the programs that we provide are covered by the Social Development Act, and of course that's an act of this Legislature.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MR. RATHGEBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday and today in this House opposition members have raised concerns about fund-raising in Alberta schools. The Minister of Learning has been quite clear that fund-raising for basic educational requirements is not permitted under the guidelines drawn up by the Alberta School Boards Association. However, today I am hearing reports that parents at Bisset elementary school here in Edmonton have raised more than $60,000 for their school. I also understand that the principal at Bisset school has indicated that the money is required for basic educational needs. Could the Minister of Learning tell this House whether or not this is the case?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. OBERG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I gave the House the undertaking that if anything was brought to my attention about fund-raising for basic educational needs, I would take a look into it. In keeping with what was said yesterday, I made a phone call to the superintendent of Edmonton public. The superintendent of Edmonton public gave me some very interesting information. I will read it to you, if I may. This is the surplus or deficit for the past three years for Bisset school, which is the school the hon. member has just asked me about. In 1998-1999 they had a surplus of $96,788. In 1999-2000 they had a surplus of $129,737. In the year 2000-2001 they had a surplus of $70,556.

Mr. Speaker, I guess I do have some serious concerns when there are people making these allegations in public. I also understand that the principal of the school has stated that he needs it in case there are some major structural damages to his school. I think that's potentially true. I will say, though, that his school is 11 years old. I will also say that through my department there is roughly $310 million for operation and maintenance. Through the Department of Infrastructure there's another $50 million for building quality restoration projects.

Mr. Speaker, I think that these numbers raise some significant questions.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. RATHGEBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary is to the same minister. Could the minister advise this Assembly what measures are in place to ensure accountability for school budgeting?

DR. OBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, basically what is in place is that every school, every school board has to include the funds raised by their schools in their statements. As a matter of fact, I just tabled the statements of all the school jurisdictions in Alberta last week. So they do have to account for those statements.

Mr. Speaker, the Edmonton public school system has an excellent system of allowing the principals a great deal of leeway in how they spend the money. They are, however, accountable, and they do report what those dollars are and how they've been spent.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. RATHGEBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is for the same minister, the Minister of Learning. Perhaps the minister could offer some advice to parents who want to engage in fund-raising. If parents are raising funds for school-related activities, how can those parents find out how those funds will be used?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, that's an excellent question, and I do hear an awful lot about it. As a matter of fact, today we had lots of phone calls in the office saying that they were raising it for field trips or they were raising it for this or raising it for that. I think the very simple answer to this question to all parents out there who are fund-raising: make sure you know what you're raising the money for. The principal has an obligation to tell you what that money will be used for. I would really encourage it.

I would also add to what I said yesterday that the policy statement from the ASBA, the Alberta School Boards Association, the policy direction from me is that parents should not be fund-raising for the core activities of school. That's what parents need to remember. Go out and ask the teachers what the fund-raising is for.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Commercial Fisheries

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Will the minister explain to Albertans how government policy and lack of leadership have contributed to the fishing industry being destroyed in this province?

MR. CARDINAL: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe we have. We always have a balance between industrial development and environmental management, and that will continue.

Mr. Speaker, the oil and gas industry, agriculture, forestry, and tourism are the leaders as far as job creation and revenue generation in Alberta, and we will always have to keep that balance. That industry has to be strong while we keep good environmental management of our resources.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, given that the government has been trying to fix the fishing problems for over a decade, when can Albertans expect to see a revitalized fishing industry in this province?

MR. CARDINAL: Mr. Speaker, very soon, and it will not take any dollars from Children's Services.

MS CARLSON: Finally some good news, Mr. Speaker.

What studies or reports does the department have indicating how many people are affected by the request for financial compensation for commercial fishing that this government is going to supply?

MR. CARDINAL: Mr. Speaker, the process of rationalization of the sports and commercial fishing industry is very critical in Alberta, because what we have out there – and it is important for Albertans to understand. We have over 800 commercial fishermen. There is not room for 800 in Alberta. The plan that was developed was done jointly by the Alberta Fish and Game Association and the commercial fishermen of Alberta to try and determine how we may rationalize their industry so it continues to be economically viable and manageable at the same time.

All we are planning here is a program over five years that will cost a certain amount of dollars and can be implemented any time from here to the five- or 10-year term. The compensation package is very limited. Once succeeded, the compensation package will see a reduction of the commercial fisheries down to about 200 licences, which is going to be manageable.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Aboriginal Children's Services

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last night the House approved $355 million in supplementary estimates for drought relief for farmers, fighting forest fires, loans for students, and wage increases for MLAs. [some applause] Well, you might clap. What wasn't there was any money to take care of the increase in child welfare caseloads. Instead, money has been taken out of existing preventative programs for poor and at-risk children and in particular for aboriginal children. To the Finance minister: why did other departments receive approval for additional funds for unexpected costs and the Children's Services department was told to find their required funds at the expense of desperately needed children's programs?

MRS. NELSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, in filing these supplementary estimates in the House, it was an opportunity for all hon. members to go through the requests that had been made by ministries, to debate them, and to put them forward. Now, let's look at these as they came forward. There can be no secret in this province surely, even with the members of the third party, that Alberta has experienced the worst drought conditions in its history this last year. So to deal with the pressure points and the emergencies that occurred, this government felt it was absolutely appropriate to go and take the fiscal room that we had in the $819 million cushion and allocate it to emergency situations. The same applied as our forests were burning at a record rate this year. The options were to go into our cushion and deal with them.

Speaker's Ruling Anticipation

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, please specifically get to a question because this is anticipation. On the schedule for today is actually Committee of the Whole on Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2). The hon. member will have ample opportunity. A specific, focused question. We're not going to debate the estimates here in question period.

MRS. NELSON: So I won't go through them, Mr. Speaker, because that would be anticipation.

THE SPEAKER: Please don't.

Aboriginal Children's Services (continued)

MRS. NELSON: But in response to his first question, our government dealt with the pressure points and emergencies that were there before us. Insofar as the other departments of this government, we have a fiscal framework that we filed in this House the end of April and debated through Committee of Supply and dealt with the fiscal framework for the rest of year.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you.

The hon. member. Specifically.

MR. MASON: Given that the government clearly places a lower priority on aboriginal children than on other programs, what is the Finance minister prepared to do to reverse this discrimination?

2:30

MRS. NELSON: First of all, Mr. Speaker – and I know I'm not allowed to say this – that's a lie. You can't say that about this government.

MR. MASON: Point of order.

MRS. NELSON: Our priorities are clearly the priorities of Albertans. You just have to look around this House. We have 74 members and Albertans believe in us, and you have two. So I believe that Albertans have confidence in this government to set the priorities and do what's right to deal with the issues that face Albertans, and I object to somebody making a comment like that: that we don't have the interest of children at heart. Let's be quite frank. We have all children's best interests at heart because we deal with it every day not only as legislators but as parents.

Now, the framework has been put in place that deals with the priorities that we believe the people of Alberta want us to deal with. They were set, we laid them out clearly, and we're following through on them. Where there have been pressure points, we have been able to deal with those all the way through these first six months of operation. What was filed in this House was a recognition of some of those large pressure points, which we were able to deal with with the financial cushion we had.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, you rose on a point of order?

MR. MASON: Yes.

THE SPEAKER: We'll deal with it at the conclusion of the question period. Obviously, it was in reference to the hon. Minister of Finance's statement, "That's a lie." We will deal with this at the conclusion. The hon. Minister of Finance will define her arguments as well.

Last question, and I repeat again what I said. The purpose of the question period is not to review the estimates. We were here last Thursday afternoon for nearly three hours on these estimates. It's coming up again tonight. So focus on your question, please.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll try.

To the Minister of Finance: why does this government consider things like drought relief, forest fires, all very important things, and the many other important things that she's touched on to be an emergency and not aboriginal children in need to be . . .

THE SPEAKER: Thank you very much, hon. member. I've given notice that this is in committee later today. We can deal with it then.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Wood Preservatives

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are concerns being expressed about the use of wood preservatives, chemicals, specifically pentachlorophenol and chromated copper arsenate, in our community, especially in playgrounds. It appears that the level of soil or other contact leaching may be higher than previously thought, and therefore the level of toxicity and carcinogenicity may also be higher than previously thought. This represents a health concern, a concern to our overall environment, and a concern to our lumber industry. My first question is to the Minister of Environment. Could the minister indicate whether or not his department is investigating this concern?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

DR. TAYLOR: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes. Any lumber that is treated with any preservative falls under the jurisdiction of the federal government, and it's my understanding that right now the federal Department of Health is doing a review of treated lumber. Alberta Environment is in discussions with the federal government on this aspect of treated lumber. What we're encouraging the federal government to do is, one, properly test any product they put on the market before it goes to the marketplace, not just a general test but tests for specific purposes. So if that lumber is going to be used for playground purposes, then the tests should be around playgrounds. If it's going to be used for pilings in a dock, then that test should be around water and the transfer between the lumber and the water.

Secondly, we're encouraging the federal government to inform consumers about what is in the lumber, what is in the treatment process, and asking the federal government to provide precautions to consumers on how they handle that lumber: is there a statement of warning with that?

Finally, we're asking the federal government to very clearly delineate how that treated lumber should be disposed of, because that is a real concern to us here in Alberta.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister inform us as to whether or not his department is aware of these potential health concerns surrounding the use of wood preservatives?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I can advise that the answer is in the affirmative. We have been working with the lead department in this particular matter, which is the Ministry of Environment, and I can confirm, as stated by the Minister of Environment, that Health Canada has taken responsibility for determining which types of wood preservatives are safe for use in Canada, and that includes chromated copper arsenate. I have been advised through the lead department that Health Canada is currently evaluating CCA and its potential for harmful health effects. I am further advised by the lead department that the federal government's re-evaluation remains under way and that the results of this re-evaluation of CCA will help us determine whether there is a need to take further action on this issue to ensure that the health of Albertans is protected.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Could the minister explain if there's anything being done to find alternative ways of preserving wood so that we can reduce this potential threat to the Alberta lumber industry?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. CARDINAL: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Very briefly, my department of course does not regulate the products used by the industry. The federal government has the responsibility and has been working with the industry to introduce consumer labeling on treated wood products. In addition to that, our forest industry in Alberta generally is very well advanced as far as the discharge of toxins; for example, when pulp is produced. We are known to be leaders in this industry across North America. I think we are in good hands, and I know that the forest industry itself will continue moving forward to ensure that our environment is protected as part of their development plans. Part of the forest care program of course deals with these particular issues. I believe that our department is doing well in this area.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Building Code

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The safety and security of our homes and workplaces is something that we're all concerned about. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: when will the minister publish the results of the public consultation on objective-based building codes?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member raises a good point. Certainly that is in progress, and I can assure the hon. member and all Albertans that we are committed to the safety and security of all Albertans relative to safety codes and certainly will update this House as it becomes available.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what is the difference between the objective-based building code and the system currently used?

MR. BOUTILIER: Mr. Speaker, to the hon. member, I want to assure this House first and foremost that as we look at the priorities relative to the safety and security of all homes, we're going to be looking at it. I recently spoke with the chair of the safety boards commission; I have frequent meetings with those people. I'm going to continue to do so and, as I committed earlier, will report back to this House.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: in light of the workplace accidents and fatalities that we have had in this province, does the minister agree with the proposal that the Alberta building code should no longer include part 8, safety measures at construction and demolition sites?

MR. BOUTILIER: Mr. Speaker, again the hon. member raises an important point, but let me assure this House once again that no matter what the issue is, we want to protect all Albertans. We're reviewing it, and I'm going to report back to this House. It's incumbent upon not only this ministry but this government to do exactly that, and I'm committed to doing that.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Dogrib Creek Forest Fire

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Due to dry conditions and lack of rainfall this past season we've had an extremely busy forest fire season, a season that has seen over 160,000 hectares of forested land in Alberta burned by wildfire. There have been many contradictory reports in the community regarding the fire west of Sundre known as Dogrib Creek. My questions are to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Has the investigation into the Dogrib Creek fire in October been completed?

MR. CARDINAL: Mr. Speaker, of course it's been a busy year because of the dry season, like the hon. member mentioned. It is a standard procedure for our department to investigate any human-caused fires. In this particular case we believe that there was not only one human-caused fire but possibly a second one. We will be, of course, in the process of finalizing those investigations and will make them public.

2:40

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the same minister tell me what the response time was from the date the fire was first reported?

MR. CARDINAL: Mr. Speaker, the fire was reported on September 29 at about 10 p.m., and we had our resources in place early the next morning. At the peak of fire activity, in fact, we had 19 fire-fighting crews in there and three helicopters battling the blaze. The blaze was initially brought under control by October 4, but again the winds picked up, and 12 days later we had more crews in there. Finally the fire was under control.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is again to the same minister. Were the response time and the equipment allocated adequate to respond to this fire?

MR. CARDINAL: I believe they were, Mr. Speaker, but we do continue to review our fire-fighting policies. Right now, in fact, I'm working very closely with the 16 or 18 municipalities adjacent to the protected area to ensure that we respond as quickly as possible to any fire that starts. One of the policy changes I've made recently is to have the water bombers at the fire site at daybreak instead of waiting until 10 o'clock. It's one new process that we've put in place.

THE SPEAKER: Before we go to the next item on the Routine, I'm going to call on the hon. Minister of Finance.

Point of Order Member's Apology

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, in answering a question from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands, I indicated that I was going to say something I knew I shouldn't say, and I did say, "That's a lie." I know that's not allowed in this Assembly, so I do apologize to the hon. member. I was, unfortunately, not able to come up with a different phraseology that would be acceptable. So I would like to withdraw the phrase and apologize to the House for using unparliamentary language in this House.

THE SPEAKER: Now, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, I was going to recognize you later on the point of order. Will you accept that apology?

MR. MASON: No longer necessary, Mr. Speaker. I accept the apology with thanks.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you.

head: Members' Statements

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Violence against Women

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would note for all members of this Assembly that on December 6 Canadians will mark the 10th National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women. December 6 is the sorrowful anniversary of the Montreal massacre, in which 14 young women were murdered at Montreal's l'ecole Polytechnique in 1989. In addition to remembering these innocent women, December 6 is also a day to reflect on violence against all women. It is a time to think about women of every age who live each day under the threat of violence or those who have died as a result of it. It is a time to reflect on the tangible actions each one of us can take to prevent and eliminate violence against women.

Ten years ago a group of men formed an organization called Men Working to End Men's Violence against Women to build awareness among men about the persistent problem of violence against women in our communities. It encourages men to speak out against violence and to work in partnership with women to prevent it. As a result, for the past 10 years Canada has recognized the week of November 25 through December 6 as white ribbon days. Sunday, November 25, marked International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women. Wearing a white ribbon symbolizes our opposition to violence against women.

Thank you.

Mrs. Urvashi Sabharwal

MR. SHARIFF: Mr. Speaker, over the past few weeks I've attended several events celebrating Diwali, the festival of lights and the beginning of the Hindu new year. As I reflect upon years of attending such events, I have been moved by one individual who has touched the lives of thousands of children in Alberta. Since immigrating to Canada in 1970, Mrs. Urvashi Sabharwal has trained over 2,000 children in the art of kathak, a unique form of Indian dancing using storytelling techniques.

Mrs. Sabharwal initially settled in Edmonton and ran her classes at lunch hour at the University of Alberta. Her students in the '70s performed under the banner Hoppy Happy Tipy Tappy Dancers. She now resides in Calgary and runs a school under the name Urvashi Kala Kendra, meaning Urvashi School of Fine Arts.

Mrs. Sabharwal is a postgraduate in genetic science. However, her love for dancing led her to perfect her dancing skills in India, and she devotes her career to that field. Mrs. Sabharwal has performed on several renowned stages in India and Canada. In Alberta her school has performed at various events, including Heritage Days, the Commonwealth Games, United Nation days, Diwali festivals, to name a few.

Mr. Speaker, both of my daughters have been fortunate to have the privilege of learning kathak dancing from Mrs. Sabharwal. One of her students once told me that the lessons learned from Mrs. Sabharwal have helped her develop self-esteem, discipline, and greater understanding of diversity in culture.

On behalf of those children whose lives have been enriched and on behalf of their families I extend sincere appreciation and gratitude to Mrs. Urvashi Sabharwal. I also wish her and Albertans of Indian origin happy Diwali.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Children's Services

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are currently debating a supplementary supply bill that adds $443 million to government spending for this year. This extra spending includes more help for farmers to help them deal with the drought, more money for fighting forest fires, more money to hire more Crown prosecutors, and more money for health care and education. It also includes more money to pay for the enriched transition allowance for MLAs that was voted in by the government and the Liberal opposition last August. Yet when it comes to finding extra money to pay for frontline services that will benefit Alberta's most vulnerable children, all of a sudden the well is dry.

There was an unbudgeted increase of 9 percent in the child welfare caseload in the past year. Instead of having this Assembly provide funds to make up the $40 million shortfall that this unanticipated increase in child welfare caseloads created, the government chose instead to rob Peter to pay Paul. The government chose to rob the preventive early intervention programs to make up for the shortfall in child welfare budgets.

The sheer shortsightedness of the government's approach is incredible. The Conservative government seems blissfully unaware that these very preventive programs are a key to keeping children out of government care down the road. The lesson of an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure is lost on this government, Mr. Speaker.

The government's fiscal priorities are totally wrong. Last week the Premier indicated that going ahead with the planned $275 million in corporate tax cuts was a higher priority for this government than making sure their frontline children's services are adequately funded. I'm deeply disappointed in the Premier's stance. I think that respected Alberta businesspeople like Robert Stollery would also likely disagree with the government's priorities.

In conclusion, I once again urge this government to get its priorities straight. Don't proceed with the reckless and irresponsible cuts to frontline services for vulnerable children and families. Don't rob Peter to pay Paul. Find the money so that Alberta's children are not harmed.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Calgary Public Library

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to speak about the outstanding achievements of the Calgary public library. The library started out with a donation from Andrew Carnegie, an American industrialist, in 1908. It grew with the city, and by 1963 it had 100,000 books at the main branch near Calgary's city hall today.

Starting in the 1990s under the direction of director Gerry Meek, the Calgary public library has become a network of libraries across the city. Like other Albertans Calgarians exhibit a great thirst for information and knowledge. The Calgary public library is the busiest library in Canada, circulating over 10 million items. The rate at which Calgarians ask the library for information is the second highest in the country, 3.71 per capita. In the year 2000 B & M Gates Foundation provided 69 public access workstations, and close to a thousand volunteers donate their time to the library services.

The Calgary library has received many awards; for example, awards from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, the best practice award from Industry Canada, and the Stan Health achievement literacy award from the Canadian Library Association. Mr. Speaker, recently myself and the hon. members from Calgary-Buffalo and Calgary-Currie attended the celebration of another achievement, the multilanguage initiative approved by the Calgary library board and headed by Annemarie Mayer with the participation and work of many library staff and volunteers.

Calgary is fast becoming a cosmopolitan centre, drawing residents from all over the world. Several thousand new Canadians from all walks of life come to Calgary every year. Multilanguage and ESL resources are needed. Now available are books, magazines, and newspapers from all over the world in 30 languages, information on Canadian citizenship, and many other interesting aspects.

I would like to ask the House to join me in acknowledging and congratulating the Calgary public library for a job well done.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: I apologize, Mr. Speaker. My guests have departed.

Private Members' Public Bills

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, before we get to Orders of the Day, the chair would like to make a statement with respect to the order of private members' public bills, and particularly I would like to clarify what the order of business will be for considering private members' public bills this afternoon.

As members might recall, last Thursday, November 22, 2001, the chair tabled letters from the sponsors of bills 207, 208, and 209, all asking for early consideration of their respective bills. To be clear, Bill 207 has been reported out of Committee of the Whole and must come up for third reading consideration by tomorrow, Bill 208 is still being considered by Committee of the Whole, and Bill 209 is awaiting consideration by Committee of the Whole.

Although not part of the Standing Orders, Speaker Schumacher ruled on the process for members to have their private members' public bills considered earlier than the deadlines imposed under Standing Order 8(5). This process was laid out in the February 11, 1997, ruling by Speaker Schumacher and has been followed by this Speaker. Essentially, members who want their bills to be considered early must write the Speaker to that effect no later than the day before they want the bill to be considered. The practice followed is that the bill which is the subject of the request will be considered after debate is concluded on the bill then before the Assembly or the committee assuming that no other bills have reached their due dates under Standing Order 8(5).

Given that Bill 208 is currently before the committee and that Bill 209 is past its due date for consideration by the committee and that Bill 207 must be considered at third reading tomorrow under Standing Order 8(5)(d), the order of business today will be consideration of Bill 208 in committee, then Bill 209 in committee, and, if the Assembly gets through that, Bill 207 at third reading.

The chair also notes that the request for early consideration of bills 208 and 209 at third reading came before these bills actually reached that stage. Taken to the extreme, this practice could jeopardize the legitimacy of the draw by considering one member's bill early by virtue of one request, thereby prejudicing other members. Interestingly enough, the only other time the chair recalls a request for early consideration for a bill not at that stage was by the Member for Calgary-Cross by a letter tabled in the House on April 28, 1998, for her Bill 212.

The order of business tomorrow on these bills will depend on the progress today, but the chair will endeavour to give effect to the request of members for early consideration of their bills while preserving the integrity of the system.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We'll call the committee to order.

Bill 208
Alberta Official Song Act

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to indicate some support for this important bill and to congratulate the Member for Calgary-Fort for doing his due diligence in bringing it forward. In doing so, I have to pledge my personal bias when it comes to music and anything related to it. Since I've been involved in this music industry all my life, I find it very easy to support a bill that encourages the creation of more music in our province.

I also recognize that this is an important initiative with respect to our provincial centennial that will culminate in 2005, and all of the activities that are leading up to it indicate that it will be an incredible celebration indeed. I do believe that Albertans will appreciate having something to sing about.

In saying that, I also want to comment briefly on the impact that this bill will have and is already having in our communities. Mr. Chairman, it's a known fact that when we introduce an opportunity such as this for Albertans to become creative and talk about their favourite province, that generates a lot of activity throughout the entire industry. We get poets going. We get lyricists going. We get the musicians going, our recording studios and the recording companies. All of these entities begin to take a very active interest, and that's indicative of the tremendous driving force of creativity we have in this province, particularly so in the music industry.

Mr. Chairman, during five years in the late '80s and '90s I also had the privilege of chairing the Alberta Recording Industries Association, or ARIA as it's called, and I can tell you from my personal familiarity with several song contests in this province that we have an enormous amount of talent out there just anxiously waiting to take part in something official such as this bill, when it gets through, I hope will lead to. We are grateful to the contribution made by our creative community in this province, specifically the music writers and the lyricists and so on, and I say that having just recently experienced again the Prairie Music Alliance convention workshop weekend at the end of September, when we had literally hundreds of individuals come from all three provinces to our capital city of Edmonton and talk about the very important aspects of music, singing, and recording. That is what this bill is all about.

I would say that I do have a few concerns with respect to some of the time lines that are indicated in the bill, but I think they will be workable; at least I hope they will be.

So with that report of support from me personally and from me as the minister to whom this area will come, I will take my seat and say thank you once again and look for support from all members and from all Albertans interested in helping to promote our province through the medium of song. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. It has been an interesting process watching this. I think it's most notable because of the number of private members who have participated in the debate. I think that next to the debate about the dress tartan this is – perhaps the number of people that debated on this in fact surpassed that. I'm glad that it was such a good opportunity to give members of the side opposite a chance to get up and speak on the record. It's good practice for them, and I hope they will take that practice and now use it on some of the other bills that are available to be debated in the House.

A couple of questions that I had put to the sponsor of the bill that I've not yet heard an answer to. I'm still looking for those answers. In section 4, where the membership of the committee is being set out, the member has been very careful to give backup plans. It's very clear in here that if there are no members of the opposition who wish to participate on this committee or who are able to participate, then their places would be filled by government members. My question is: what if the reverse? The reverse has not been dealt with in here. So there's a bias in your assumptions that the opposition would not be willing to participate and therefore the plan is already in place that government would take that place, but not the reverse, that if government members are unable to participate, the mechanism is in there that opposition would take their place. It's a small thing, but it is one that I'm looking for an answer for.

My second issue that I raised in second reading of this bill was around participation of artists in this process. The point that I was making in second reading was that as much as we all love music, seemingly – everybody in here seems to love music – we are not all experts in it. My concern was that if we are going to put money into this project or put a lot of time and effort into it, we'd be looking for the best possible song. So I'm wondering why it is not specified in the bill that several of the other people that are going to be on the committee should be artists with an expertise in music, just to make sure that we don't end up choosing a song that is unsingable or lyrics that don't really go with a composed piece of music or whatever. There are a number of things that can go wrong for us here, and I wonder why we don't have the specific mention of artists in the membership of the committee.

The other question that I had put forward was the recognition that royalties would have to be paid. There needs to be some sort of payment to the artist or artists who come up with the song, whether that's a lyricist and a composer or one person doing both. There needs to be payment in recognition of that, certainly if they are professionals and they do this as their living. But I think that if we're going to recognize that, then it should also be offered to an amateur if they are the writer of the successful song. I don't know if the member has researched the intellectual property laws that exist in Canada, but if we are going to take someone's creative work and use it for our purposes, there has to be a payment made. There is no discussion of where that would be coming from, who would be responsible for it, or in fact that the member recognizes that that needs to happen and needs to be incorporated there.

Something that the minister had raised – and I thank him for that – was in referring to this being a legacy project. I'm aware that the funding around legacy projects has been altered in that some of the funding has already gone out and cannot be clawed back. Recent announcements in the 2001-2002 budget were announced for legacy projects, and it has now been announced that they were clawed back or that they're not proceeding or the money would not be given out. So where is the stability in the funding for this project? Is it inside next year's budget? Can we get confirmation that it's there, or does the completion of this project also rest on the given price of a barrel of oil or something or another of gas? I don't know how you measure gas.

I think that's important, because if this is as important as the government members would lead me to believe, then we need to make sure that it's doable. The doability has to do with whether the funding is in fact in place there. If this is going to be called a legacy project, is the funding there? Is it predictable? Is it long-term? Is it enough to get the project done, in other words? We've been mute on that. I haven't heard anybody get up and recognize that and put it on the record. So I'd like to hear that question answered.

So those were the questions I'd raised the first time. I've listened, and I haven't had them answered, so I raise them again. I'm happy to offer my services as the opposition member on the committee, but I'm sure that there are others that will vie for that position. I think it's important that the committee be chosen not only for – how do I put this? – the show of who's on the committee but also for the ability of the people that are on the committee. You've got a minister in front of you there who's already spoken on the bill and professes to have a great deal of experience. Perhaps he's a good choice as one of your government members. But certainly if we're going to do this, can we please do it right? Can we please have the experts on the committee that are going to advise and give us the good choices?

When I spoke in second reading, I pointed out the number of skilled and talented people that we have in Alberta who have an amazing talent for being able to choose music that people will enjoy, people like Holger Petersen from Stony Plain records, Maureen Chambers from South Country Fair, and Terry Wickham from the Edmonton and the Calgary folk festivals. There are three names of people who have a great deal of experience in this field, who know how to look at a song and listen to it and go: yeah, that's singable; yes, it's playable by high school bands. There's a lot to be considered here. You can choose a beautiful sounding tune that a high school band can't play. If we really want this to be a song that is shared by all Albertans, it should be able to be played on a tin whistle and right up to the Calgary Philharmonic and be enjoyable all the way through.

So those are the questions. I'm urging that if this idea is as important as it seems to be to the government, please do it right. Please show me that you have the funding there for it to be sustainable and that it won't be withdrawn halfway through. Please reassure me that there is an understanding that there is an obligation to pay the musicians that do this work. Maybe I should go off and do an amendment and bring it back so that section 4 clearly states that membership on the committee will include artists. Maybe it's enough if we have the member speaking to it on the record in the House, and we can combine that with what we see in the legislation, but I think it's important that it is clearly there if we're going to make it work. Otherwise, we can just have some pretty faces on the committee and we don't get anything from it, as nice as pretty faces are. I think if the member really wants to do it right, then do it right and get that expertise in there.

One last thing. Given that we are increasingly a group in Alberta who reflect a diversity of backgrounds, a diversity of ethnicity, a diversity of home countries that people came from either in this generation or past generations, I think it would be very interesting if we had music that incorporated and reflected that. Having said that, don't take my words on it. That could be very odd. That's why you need the artists on the committee.

So I'm glad that the members have had such a good time with this bill and have found it so entertaining and were able to get up and practise their speeches on it. That's delightful. I look forward to this bill passing with all of the meat and potatoes in it. [interjection] Well, it's a free vote, my friend. We're Liberals. So I am supporting this idea.

Thank you very much.

Bill 209
Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet)
Amendment Act, 2001

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Cross.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise today and present Bill 209, the Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001, to the committee. As my colleagues in the Assembly know, Committee of the Whole is an important third step in a long process of passing legislation into law.

First reading of Bill 209 took place on May 9, just six months ago, Mr. Chairman. During the early stages of drafting this bill, I carefully considered whether bicycle helmet legislation should be for all age groups. Initially I consulted with many of my colleagues, whose sound advice I value. I received an extraordinary response from them. Many indicated that for a variety of reasons they would support bicycle helmet legislation if it covered children and youth under the age of 18, and I believe that, that they would support it if it covered children and youth under the age of 18. They believed it was this age group that had the highest recreational use of bicycles, took far more risks when riding a bike, and had more potential years of life lost from a head injury than adults. From the input of my colleagues I determined that Bill 209 would be structured in the best interest of those under the age of 18.

With this in mind, Mr. Chairman, I then met with a legal representative from Parliamentary Counsel, Ms Shannon Dean, whose hand is at the heart of the creation of this bill. It was her patience and her ability to draft changes to the bill through several revisions that resulted in what I believe is a sound piece of legislation.

In essence, this bill offers protection from bicycle-related head injury to our young people through the use of a helmet. It is based on good, solid, up-to-date information, that was presented to the Legislature during second reading. During the summer I had the opportunity to discuss the proposed legislation on many occasions with countless people. They were medical professionals, educators, staff at Co-op, young people at the Boys and Girls Club. So many people took time to tell me that they support this bill as it is written, and rarely did anyone oppose it.

There are several sections within Bill 209 which I would like to bring to the attention of the committee and explain the reasons for their specific intent. Section 2 of this act will make it mandatory for all children and youth under the age of 18 to wear their helmet while riding a bike. I've chosen to encompass young people who are 17 and younger for a few key reasons. First, they are our future, and even brain injuries of the smallest proportions can have a lifetime effect on the child, which may have been prevented if he or she was properly wearing a helmet. The second reason I've chosen to make it for children and youth is because being a parent, I know how difficult it can be to have them follow rules. The protection of our children and youth is intrinsic to the belief that government will act to protect children who are unable to protect themselves. My third reason is to raise awareness about how serious brain injuries really are.

Mr. Chairman, it is my belief that those who do not support this bill do not realize how staggering the statistics are and their devastating effects. Whether they be physical, emotional, or economic, the effects are truly devastating.

Mr. Chairman, I've researched this issue extensively. A number of important groups have gathered in support of the creation of this sort of legislation. KIDSAFE Connection at the Stollery children's hospital, the brain injury association of Alberta, the Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research, all of the health authorities in Alberta, the RCMP, St. John Ambulance, and the Edmonton and Calgary police services have all vocalized their strong support for mandatory bicycle helmets. I happen to trust their judgment because they work in the field.

The treatment of injuries is an immense cost to our health system and to society. With health costs escalating at an unprecedented rate, it makes good sense to support cost-effective strategies. Bike helmet legislation, coupled with community-based education, has clearly been shown to be one of the most effective means to reduce head and facial injuries.

Section (5) of the proposed act, which ensures that bike helmets conform to regulations, is written in that way because we know that in a one-year period in Alberta 6,430 emergency room visits were attributed to bicycle-related injuries. According to the available diagnostic groupings 373 resulted in intracranial injury, 18 resulted in skull fractures, and 51 in facial fractures. A further 3,415 resulted in open wounds, contusions, and superficial injuries, many of which involved the head and/or face, and sadly, Mr. Chairman, five resulted in death. That's in a one-year period. You can see the importance of having a helmet which fits securely and meets certain specifications, which, as section (5) in the bill indicates, will be outlined in the regulations.

A number of scientific studies have shown that the use of approved bike helmets reduces brain injury by 85 percent and mid/upper facial smashes by 65 percent. In applying these results to Alberta figures, we could therefore project the prevention of 332 head injuries and 33 mid/upper facial smashes with the use of approved – and I stress the word “approved” – bicycle helmets in a one-year period. The efficacy of bike helmets is known to be high, and aside from the enormous costs related to treating head injury, prevention makes rational sense since it saves the cost of suffering.

Section 2 of this act is based on injury trends, best practice evidence and scientific support, consultation with injury prevention and trauma specialists, and public support as was indicated by our government's own discussion papers and a public provincial survey completed by KIDSAFE Connection.

Bicycle helmet legislation is an essential and positive role that we can take to reduce the significant public health problem of injury. Mr. Chairman, I happen to believe that all sections of Bill 209 are required despite advances in neurosurgical intervention, technology, intensive care treatment, and transportation of the injured. The reality is that improvements in the outcome of severe brain injuries have not advanced significantly over the past decade. The most promising to reduce the consequences of head injury is through primary prevention, which is preventing the injury in the first place. All sections of Bill 209 address secondary prevention, which is mitigating the results of the injury through bike helmets.

In Alberta our children and teens have the poorest bike helmet wearing rates when compared to other age groups, while recording a high number of bike-related injuries. They often cite peer non-use, non-use because nobody else wears them, as a rationale. Legislation supporting teens to wear helmets helps build social norms of use over time. A good example of this is the increased awareness of the perils of drinking and driving. More teens are choosing the designated driver option, and it has required the support of legislation, education, and public awareness over time to advance this social norm.

Mr. Chairman, section 149.1(1) through to subsection (5) recognizes that the rate of injuries for bicycles versus other recreational activities is higher for youth by 28 percent compared to adults at 18 percent. This is most likely due to the increased frequency of bike use by youth as compared to adults. Eighty-two percent of young people, compared to 75 percent of adults, admitted to a trauma centre for bike-related injury were reported not to have been wearing a helmet at the time of their injury.

Children and youth should be protected, as they have the most to lose in terms of potential years of life lost as a result of injuries, and caring for youth with debilitating injuries involves more direct and indirect costs over time than for adults.

Injuries to structures of the brain cannot be corrected through present medical technology, and the consequences are often disastrous. Study after study has shown that helmets of any type which meet CSA international standards, which is outlined in the bill, can prevent head injury from falls and crashes when worn properly.

I firmly believe that this bill will protect the lives of our children and youth from bicycle-related head and brain injury. I would ask that other members of the Legislature speak to Bill 209 in committee, and hopefully I can answer any questions that there are.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to speak on Bill 209, Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001. This bill raises a few concerns for me, Mr. Chairman. As I drive around my constituency, in particular in the city, I note a lot of habits of bicycle riders. It seems that they with immunity ride from the sidewalk to the street, whichever light is convenient, and even if the lights aren't convenient, many cyclers travel right through. They will follow you on the right-hand side of your car in the blind spot, where they can't see your signal light, and turn in.

The point I'm trying to make, Mr. Chairman, is that there seems to be a lack of enforcement on how cyclists operate right now, and I don't see anything in this bill that is going to create more enforcement. Indeed, it would make another rule for cyclers that would probably be hard to enforce if not impossible. Another thing: I don't see anything regarding penalties in here for noncompliance with this bill.

I'm concerned that this bill could even cause a false sense of security amongst riders.

Many of the proponents of this type of legislation cite the Australian study that was done some years ago. They state that there was a 51 percent reduction in the number of accidents the year following the institution of this legislation, but opponents of this type of legislation also cite the same study and claim that the ridership went down the same percentage. So if that's true, Mr. Chairman, then did the bill actually accomplish what it set out to do? If it reduced the number of riders, naturally the percentage of accidents would automatically be reduced as well. Perhaps we're not looking at this from all of the angles.

Another thing that concerns me is: where does the government stop taking personal responsibility away from individuals and start encouraging individuals to take responsibility for themselves and their own families? There's currently nothing that states that parents cannot go out and purchase a helmet and require their children to wear it. Surely the government does not have to tell parents how to raise their children. Perhaps we are dealing with the effects of a situation instead of the cause. Perhaps we should be getting back to the cause of things; that is, taking some personal responsibility for our actions.

I know the cost to the health care system can be increased through accidents. But in talking to some doctors in the past few years that have attended standing policy committee meetings – and I know we've had some on both sides of the question – and getting back to the false sense of security, I've had some doctors tell me that that indeed could happen, that children under 18 could think they're invincible just because they have a helmet on. I've been told by those same doctors that brain injuries are caused by the sudden impact of the brain hitting the inside of the skull, which could still happen even though you have a helmet on. So you may even take more risks with the helmet, which could cause greater cost to the health care system.

I just have those few comments and concerns I'd like to make about this, Mr. Chairman. I know the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross has done much more research than I on it, but these concerns that I've raised have not been addressed in the bill. I just don't think this is a bill that can properly be enforced or can cause any real changes to take place, and indeed it could even cause more problems.

With that, I'll take my seat and hope that other members would rise and also share some of their views on this particular piece of legislation. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MRS. JABLONSKI: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to say a few words in support of this bill. I think that protecting children is one of our most important principles in Alberta. Many parents are responsible and caring and will encourage their children to wear helmets. Some will have to force their children to wear helmets, and some will be very pleased to say: because it's the law. Some parents may not even realize how important helmets are, so I think it's important for us to reinforce the safety issue that goes along with wearing helmets.

I would like to quote from a letter that was written to the editor of the Smoky Lake Signal. It was written by Denise Matjushyk, who is the Lakeland injury control project team co-ordinator, and she sums up everything that I believe about this bill.

Dear readers,

The opportunity is here! Bill 209, a Bicycle Helmet Bill, passed second reading this spring and is now before the fall sitting of the Legislature . . . If passed, this bill makes helmets mandatory for cyclists under 18 years. Several more steps, including a third reading and a vote of support by MLAs, are required . . .

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but the committee has to rise and report before 3:30, so the chair will recognize the hon. Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Chairman, I would in fact move that we now rise and report progress on the two bills before us.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

MR. LOUGHEED: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports Bill 208. The committee reports progress on Bill 209.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

THE CLERK ASSISTANT: Motions Other than Government Motions. Motion 509.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Before I recognize any speakers, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

MR. DANYLUK: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two gentlemen visiting us today from northeastern Alberta, Mr. Darwin Ullery and Mr. Dennis Bergheim. Darwin Ullery is an agricultural fieldman in the county of Minburn, which is within the constituency of Vegreville-Viking, and is well known for being a cowboy extraordinaire. His skills in team roping won him over a dozen championships in the saddles at the amateur level in association finals, and since turning pro last year, he is currently ranked 13th in the Canadian rodeo association. Dennis Bergheim is the St.

Paul agricultural fieldman. He's also the past president of the Association of Alberta Agricultural Fieldmen and serves on the provincial committee for Alberta Environmentally Sustainable Agriculture. Darwin Ullery and Dennis Bergheim are seated in the members' gallery today, and I would ask them if they would now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. Gentlemen.

Private Health Care Contracts

509. Dr. Taft moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to require regional health authorities to collect and publicly release information on private health care providers whom they contract with, including details regarding services provided, public funding received, and charges to individuals.

[Debate adjourned November 20: Dr. Taft speaking]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Are there any speakers on the motion? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to support my colleague on Motion 509, the public release of information on private health care providers contracting with RHAs. I'm hoping that we're going to see members from the front bench of the government or private government members speak on this issue, because it should be one that they are at least somewhat interested in, and whether they support it or they don't support it, it would be good for them to put their comments on the record. In fact, what this motion does is encourage greater transparency by making public more information on private health care providers, which was one of our big concerns with the former Bill 11, and government members had a few things to say about that. We would like to hear what they have to say about this specific concern, because definitely part of the real issue with the private providers is transparency.

We have seen some of the regulations come forward on the former Bill 11, the Health Care Protection Act, that do make accommodation for the release of some information, Mr. Speaker, but it isn't going to be comprehensive enough, we don't think, to meet the kinds of needs that we're looking for.

The text of the motion itself reads:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to require regional health authorities to collect and publicly release information on private health care providers whom they contract with, including details regarding services provided, public funding received, and charges to individuals.

The public has a right to have this information, Mr. Speaker, on a service that is supposed to be universally accessible to people in this country. We believe that those regulations should have been included more extensively in Bill 11, and since they aren't, we're bringing forward this motion urging the government to do so. Particularly we'll be interested to see what the minister of health has to say. Certainly there's been some support in stakeholder groups for this kind of recommendation, and in fact there has been some support from the Auditor General of Alberta with regard to some of the comments he made around the control in keeping with new requirements for surgical service contracting.

We are particularly interested in the one he made where he talks about the performance standards and assessment criteria that should be very explicit, Mr. Speaker. Why does he say that? Because in his opinion it hasn't been the case, or he is concerned that it may not be the case. So what he recommended the government do, which I hope they will be undertaking, is that they need "to establish the extent of required outcome expectations and performance measures for services in both private and public facilities." We've heard the government say often that private facilities come under different kinds of rules than public ones do, and it's a problem when they're providing health care. Even the Auditor General recommends that.

He talks about provincial performance standards not being "defined for inclusion in surgical facility contracts." Of course, the question to be asked, then, is: why weren't they? What has the government got to hide in this regard? Why is it that they're not forthcoming? How many other kinds of deficits in this regard are we going to be looking at in the future? So that is a problem.

He talks about the "absence of standards (e.g. for mortality rates, surgery complication rates, wait times, volume of service)" making "it difficult for the Minister to evaluate performance of insured services on a consistent and comparable basis." Not just the minister; what about Albertans? You'll want to know if a private service has difficulties in any of these areas or is underperforming in terms of what other services they're providing or when you compare them to public services. So it's a real problem.

I want to know if a private provider has a high mortality rate compared to other private providers or compared to the public service or compared to other facilities in Canada. That's a very big deal to me and to my family, and I'm sure it is to everyone in this province. So it's a minimum kind of a requirement that's being asked for, and this motion certainly starts to identify that.

The Auditor General goes on.

Ambiguity could be reduced by improving contract assessment criteria with the use of quantitative and quality requirements relating to such matters as performance expectations, standards of care, conflict of interest, best practise and support for expected public benefits including access and quality of care provided.

A simple statement, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly an area where we want less ambiguity rather than more ambiguity. It's certainly not the case in this particular area and something that needs to be talked about.

Why aren't there quantitative and quality requirements related to any of those expectations? This is an ongoing criticism that the Auditor General has with the way the government performs and particularly how it addresses benchmarking and performance indicators. Of course, they're carrying this style of delivery into this new bill, which addresses the private health care providers. Very serious stuff, very important to be addressed, and isn't being as far as we can see. Hence, the reason for the motion to be brought forward.

The Auditor General has quite a bit to say about the proposed changes, Mr. Speaker. All of them have at least some minimum kinds of implications for private health care suppliers and more than enough concerns for us to be worried about the way these services will be delivered in the future. We haven't heard the minister of health or the Premier or, in fact, anyone else talk about this. When we send services to the private sector, we have to remember that in a universally provided system the first and foremost responsibility of the government is to ensure that the public benefits from a universality perspective, from the perspective of being able to have minimum standards met, from the perspective of having the maximum standards met. This is what we should be able to expect from our health care system, and we're not seeing that being met even in terms of the very least of the concerns here, which is the private health care providers and the details regarding the services provided. So that's why it's very important for us to see that these changes be met.

I know that the health care minister will say that there are lots of regulations in this new bill, but there aren't a lot. There are a few.

They do require that private health care providers must provide information on ownership of the surgical facility to the minister, and the minister is then required by regulation to publish the information. However, how it is published and where it is published is up to the minister. So that's an issue. Plus the minister is allowed to omit certain details if releasing the information could be considered a threat to the safety of a person, so you have to define "threat to the safety of a person" there. I think the filters we would use to make those determining criteria are quite different than what we have seen this government use in the past. So that's certainly an issue for us.

Under this act the R.A. is required to

- (a) make the agreement available to the public for inspection . . . and
- (b) publish the following information . . .
  - (i) the name and address of the owner and operator of the . . . facility;
  - (ii) the insured surgical services to be provided under the agreement;
  - (iii) the term of the agreement;
  - (iv) the amount or the estimated amount to be paid by the [R.A. for] facility services
  - (v) a description of the performance expectations and . . . performance measures . . . under the agreement.

Not bad in as far as it goes, but it certainly doesn't go far enough.

For one thing, the form and manner of the information to be provided is up to the minister. We see examples all the time of this government providing one-line information. Whether it's requesting billions of dollars in supplementary estimates or it's information in situations like this, the very, very minimum kind of level of requirement is met and not anything close to average or to industry standards or to what we think would be reasonable in this kind of a circumstance. Not at all what we think is adequate information in this case given the kinds of precedents that this government operates on, not the least of which is the most recent request for supplementary supply estimates.

Also, Mr. Speaker, we saw the announcing of the approval of the contracts under the Health Care Protection Act. Back in September of 2000 the minister released a list of reasons for approving contracts and the associated costs and what kinds of services we were going to see provided by that. The minister stated, and I quote: Albertans will now know what agreements have been made, how much they cost, and what is being provided. That part is good, but the problem is that's all the information they're going to get, certainly not enough information to make informed choices on and certainly not enough to make healthy choices on, we would argue. So our position would look for more information, more detail.

We agree with the health minister when he said that Albertans are interested in public contracts with private facilities, but the provisions under the Health Care Protection Act and its regulations do not go far enough in providing Albertans with information on these contracts. We've seen those issues arise many times in this Legislature in question period and throughout a series of debates and quite extensively raised in the media, in editorial reports, and through media contact with people in the community who have concerns in this area, and definitely not enough information is being reported. We think that greater transparency in reporting will contribute to an open and transparent government, something that we've been asking for a long time, something which this government says it provides but which isn't really true.

If you look at the process the government goes through, they have a real problem with understanding what the role of the government is and what the role of the Legislature is, and there's a big difference. It's not open and transparent when information is supplied to government members who take it to caucus, who take it to standing policy committees that are not all-party committees, who take it to their executive committees for decisions to be made, and then roll back through the departments, and the decisions are made without any input from any of the opposition. They have a responsibility to share that information with the general public. That is why other jurisdictions have things like all-party committees, so that the Legislature can support and integrate into the process of decision-making.

It's not fun for the government often when the opposition gets involved in decision-making, because it takes a lot longer. No two ways about that. It's a little messier. Ministers and the Premier are challenged on issues. New ideas are brought forward. Amendments are brought forward. They can be hotly debated. Information can be requested to go out to stakeholder groups and then brought in, but that is democracy, Mr. Speaker, and that is the process which all of us here in this room signed on for when we decided to run. That this government runs differently from that is in part a reflection of how long they've been in power and the size of their majority, but it isn't in fact a part of the process of the Westminster parliamentary system, which is the system that our system is based on. That system has a lot more input and does contribute to way more openness and transparency, something that we don't see in this government.

If you're not going to have the openness and the transparency at the beginning of the process, Mr. Speaker, then you must put it in somewhere along the process. The most natural place for it to be inserted would be on the regulations side, and that's why we ask for more detail in that regard. That is not usually forthcoming from this government, probably defeated in this particular motion, but important to request, important to speak on behalf of, and important to demand from a democratic perspective. So that's why we're here and supporting this particular message. The public has a right to have more knowledge, in fact a complete body of knowledge on this particular issue – on many others but in particular on this issue – and they need that information to assess the government's involvement with private health care providers. It's a very important point to bring forward, that we need that information. It's not good enough for the government to say: "Don't worry. It's going to be fine. We'll take care of it all." We've seen them say that often. We've seen them say that to their own backbenchers, and there have been some issues on it.

With that, I think I've got colleagues who want to respond to this, so I'll leave my comments at that. I wish there was more time available for motions, Mr. Speaker, but there isn't, so I'll take my seat at this time.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to join in the debate today and bring some common sense to the discussion surrounding Motion 509. This is the motion that would urge the government to require regional health authorities to collect and publicly publish data regarding contracts with health service providers.

Now, I must say that although I am sure the Member for Edmonton-Riverview is very well intentioned in putting forward this motion, the facts are that the motion he is putting forward is actually unnecessary, it is moot, and it's because all that he is asking for that could or should prudently be done in this regard is already being done. All health contracts with providers are already being published and provide specifically detailed additional information on individual treatments being received. Opening up this level of detail to the general public of what treatment individuals received is not only unnecessary, but indeed it could compromise the very privacy of Albertans who are seeking medical treatment.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important to scrutinize the contracts signed by RHAS in a public forum. No one here would dispute that. We are, after all, dealing with very important taxpayer dollars here. It must be ensured that these contracts are fulfilling an expressed need of the public and that the delivery of services is at least as cost-effective as would be provided by a hospital.

Now, I am sure that the Member for Edmonton-Riverview, as a high-profile critic on health care in this province, must already be aware that this is one of the requirements under the Health Care Protection Act, which continues to provide excellent guidance for the regional health authorities throughout the province. Any and all contracts signed by the regional health authorities are already being provided in full and are accessible during business hours at all R.A. offices. Not only is this the law, but I am pleased to report that the RHAS are absolutely following both the letter and the spirit of the law in a manner that makes sure they do not violate the privacy of individual Albertans.

Now, it's unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, that the motion did not stop just with the publication of contracts. Instead, the motion requests details, details that I worry could not be released without violating the privacy of Albertans and which would also possibly, if not probably, infringe upon the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, another law which this government is also very concerned with and diligently aspires to meet and exceed all expectations on as well. I am concerned that this motion, if carried through by this government, would make available for any dubious purpose the records of any private clinical procedure performed on any individual Albertans. Some of these clinical procedures are of a highly personal nature, as one might expect, and surely the motion cannot actually be endorsing that these records be made public. But right there in plain English – in plain English – it states, "Including details regarding services provided, public funding received, and charges to individuals."

Private facilities constitute only a very small fraction of the health care system in Alberta, but they certainly have been targeted for an inordinate, disproportionate, indeed overzealous amount of controversy. So it is necessary and, indeed, incumbent upon us to ensure that they not only meet but vastly exceed the amount of scrutiny required of others such that the province is absolutely assured of quality and effective service, particularly when these clinics are hired to perform publicly insured services. Not only must the contract be efficient and cost-effective, but the Health Care Protection Act also requires that there be no negative impacts to the publicly administered system as a result of contracts proposed by the R.A. If any contracts determined to have the potential to negatively affect publicly administered hospitals are identified and if there is not a net benefit to the regional health authority, then the health authority is obligated by the act to terminate that contract.

The quality assurances that must be provided by contracted facilities are comprehensive and strict. The facility must meet a very high standard of quality care at least as well as a public facility and still demonstrate significant cost-effectiveness on top of that. All of these contracts are scrutinized heavily by the Department of Health and Wellness, which is one of many checks for effectiveness and accountability. The other checks are made by way of the R.A. board members themselves, comprised of responsible community leaders that commit their time to guide the formation of health policy of the region. Of course, many in the public are also watching very closely.

Through a variety of accountability mechanisms, contracts for the RHAS are fairly awarded based upon the very best possible outcome for the overall health of citizens in that region. If a contract in an R.A. is not adding to the benefit of a region or there are better alternatives through the public system or another private health care provider, the contract will be terminated for the better option.

[The Speaker in the chair]

These provisions are part of the regulations of the Health Care Protection Act, and they're monitored directly by the minister, whose job it is to ensure the efficient provision of health services throughout the province. This is done by requiring frequent updates to the health proposals and business plans of all 17 RHAS in the province. Ongoing performance measures for every contract are monitored, and if a contract is failing to live up to the required standard, by law it must be terminated. Additionally, there must be a reason why the private sector is more able to provide effective service. This statement is made by the minister and is available to the public from the R.A. office that co-ordinates the contract. Additionally, every last detail of the contract is made available under section 19 of the Health Care Protection Act. A comprehensive list of all contracts must be made available to the public during regular business hours at each and every R.A. office pursuant to the act.

This is a very perplexing circumstance I find myself in, Mr. Speaker, because although I support the intent of any motion intended to ensure accountability, this motion I think is quite adequately already being done. While I agree that releasing details of health service provision to the public is of vital importance, this provision is already thoroughly provided for by legislation, namely the Health Care Protection Act. In fact, the Health Care Protection Act goes much further than the extent of Motion 509 in the accountability of regional health authorities to the public.

Mr. Speaker, I recognize the Member for Edmonton-Riverview's concerns and the goal that would be accomplished by Motion 509. The motion would urge the government to require RHAS to be open and accountable in their provision of health services. Well, there is already a great deal of openness and accountability that encompasses the member's motion. Not only do the contractual arrangements between RHAS and private health care providers have to be published, but the very reason for the contractual arrangement must also be made public. In addition to this, performance measurements and the expectations of the health authority relative to the contract are also made public. All of these records are obtainable at any Alberta regional health authority office in the province, all in accordance with the Health Care Protection Act regulations.

Perhaps it is the motion's intent that these records are published through an alternate mechanism other than the current posting at every R.A. office. Maybe that's what was intended. Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that the Calgary regional health authority and the Capital health authority are already publishing all of their private contracts on the Internet as well as making them available in the office. These contracts constitute the vast majority of all private contracts throughout the province, so they're a step ahead of the requirements already. I believe that this should more than satisfy the intent of Motion 509 as well.

Just so the members of the Assembly are able to verify for themselves what I have said, they can visit the Calgary regional health authority on the worldwide web and perform a search for contract. Every contract is there, supplied in full. Finding contracts on the Capital health authority web site is slightly more complicated. You have to look under reports and publications, under the topics area, but it is also there nonetheless, although it is not required by law to be published on the Internet either. Although publishing contracts on the worldwide web is not obligatory under the Health Care Protection Act, these documents are intended for public release. They have been released, and the RHAS apparently felt they may as well go even one step further and also post it on the Internet. I could not agree more. These resources are valuable both for the purpose of accountability and to let the public know about the services their health region has to offer. The larger health authorities are able to do this because of their size. Some smaller health authorities post a listing of all private contracts at their main offices because they have to budget their communications a little more conservatively, or perhaps they see no need because their region is less connected to the Internet. In any event, these records are available by several methods.

So while I support the intention of Motion 509, I really must say that it's only highlighting the good work this government has already done. Each contract is available in full from all the regional health authorities, detailing the charges for contracted service and the number of procedures performed under contract on an annual basis. The contracts detail how records are to be used and maintained and to what degree these records can and cannot be used for financial reporting and accountability purposes. All reporting must comply with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, which is extremely strict in the protection of patient information.

Mr. Speaker, I'm glad that the Member for Edmonton-Riverview brought up this important issue. I'm a strong believer in accountability in the delivery of services to Albertans, and this debate allows me to discuss our safeguards and stringent requirements for financial and quality assurance from regional health authorities and the contracted facilities.

Mr. Speaker, the Health Care Protection Act expressly prohibits a regional health authority from engaging in contract for services that are better provided by the publicly administered health care system. Also, the contract must be made public, must be demonstrated as cost-effective, and even go further to demonstrate that there will be no harm to the publicly administered services in the contracting region or in any other region. These regulations are a clear demonstration that Alberta takes very seriously the efficient, reasoned, and highest possible quality provision of health services. I fully support this quality assurance because properly administered health care will eventually prolong the length and quality of life for all Albertans. The Health Care Protection Act has ensured that private health care will not interfere with the provision of public services and that there are sufficient safeguards for individuals seeking either elective or necessary procedures from private clinics.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I would simply like to say that there is enough regulation upon RHAS and private contractors to sufficiently safeguard the public interest. To intrude into the sphere of private health care provision in this way would provide inefficiencies, annoyances, redundancy, and possible violation of personal and professional privacy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was listening with great interest to the remarks from the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie. However, all said, one has to recognize that the Health Care Protection Act, Bill 11, allows for increased contracting out by regional health authorities to the private health care providers. There's no doubt about this. While the act and regulations may make some accommodation for information on the operations of the private provider to be made public, it does not go far enough.

Now, with the motion that's presented by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, it was mentioned certainly that charges to individuals be released but not necessarily the names of those individuals, the patients involved. I'm going to get into why that is so important further in my remarks.

The health care protection regulations do specify that the private health care operator provide a report to the regional health authority, that there's a monthly report regarding inpatient and outpatient information. The regulations also require that the private health care provider must provide information on ownership of that surgical facility to the minister. The minister is also required by regulation to publish this information. However – this is important, and I would remind all hon. members – how it is published and where is entirely up to the discretion of the minister. That's at the discretion of the minister. Plus, the minister is also allowed, some would advocate, some people who were on the steps of the Legislative Assembly during the Bill 11 debate . . . [interjections] Yes, hon. members can remember them.

The minister is allowed to omit certain details if releasing the information could be considered a threat to the safety of the person. Well, fair enough. Now, that's in the regulations, but under the act the regional health authorities are required to make the agreement available to the public for inspection and publish only the following information: name and address of the owner and operator of the facility, the insured surgical service or services to be provided under that agreement, the term of the agreement, the established amount to be paid by the health authority for facility services, and the description of the performance measures and expectations for the agreement.

Now, we were talking about performance measures earlier with the last hon. member. However, when we look at the Auditor General's report, with all due respect to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie and her remarks, I believe it wasn't perfectly clear, obviously, to hon. members of this Assembly just what the Auditor General had to say. I'm going to quote. In this case, this is the Department of Health and Wellness, and this is in regards to performance standards and assessment criteria.

The Department needed to establish the extent of required outcome expectations and performance measures for services in both private and public facilities. Provincial performance standards were not defined for inclusion in surgical facilities contracts. Absence of standards (e.g. for mortality rates, surgery complication rates, wait times, volume of service) makes it difficult for the Minister to evaluate performance of insured services on a consistent and comparable basis.

It goes on to talk about – the quote is too long here, Mr. Speaker, but the Auditor General is perfectly clear.

In light of the remarks from the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, we all should support this motion because it is going to improve a system that is in need of improvement. On the accountability and transparency of our health system in this province, whenever citizens have concerns, they are justified. There are examples here of health authorities going through half the fiscal year before there's a set budget, yet an improvement such as Motion 509, an improvement in how health care providers are going to have their contracts with the regional health authorities, is dismissed. With section 16 of the FOIP Act I would have to question the hon. member as to how this could not work to protect the privacy of individuals that were looking at receiving treatment in a private facility. Now, we only have to look at our past here to see just why greater transparency in reporting will contribute to open and transparent government, since it will provide the public with a more complete body of knowledge to assess the government's involvement with private health care providers.

Now, I would refer to a letter. This is in the past, granted, but these are some of the problems that have been dealt with. This is a letter dated the 23rd of November two years ago from the regional clinical department head to the president and CEO of the Calgary regional health authority at the time, Mr. Jack Davis. There are a lot of expressions of concern here, but one thing that is stated in this letter is that "private facilities are accountable mostly to the Alberta College for certification." Now, this is two years ago, granted, but it's also noted here that "patients are unfairly taken advantage of through enhanced service charges." It's also noted in here that "if you contract out, you must either send cases out and do more inpatient procedures to alleviate the wait list of other services or contract out and close inpatient facilities." Should this not in itself be a red flag and say to all hon. members of this Assembly that Motion 509 is another check to balance the system?

It goes on to say here in this correspondence: "Will we see patients charged for an enhanced hip prosthesis without scientific data to back it up because of entrepreneurial marketing skills?" Is this sort of salesmanship going to be listed in the criteria that are given in a summary of approved contracts? Now, we're going to look at ophthalmology here. This is the rationale of the minister's approval of contracts under the Health Care Protection Act, and you can list them off here. I believe the words that were used to describe this motion were "unnecessary" and "moot." Mr. Speaker, here you have in excess of $5 million in contracts from the Calgary regional health authority. Some of these contracts: the Gimbel Eye Centre, Holy Cross Surgical Services, the Mitchell Eye Centre, the Rocky Mountain Surgery Centre, and Surgical Centres Inc. These contracts, as I understand it, have been renewed.

Now we come to the Capital health authority. We've got to realize that the Calgary regional health authority and the Capital health authority are about the same size with the same size budgets, and the population is relatively the same. Here there was roughly a little better than $1 million, Mr. Speaker, given out in approved contracts, so that's about 20 percent of what is done in the Calgary regional health authority. When you look at some of the concerns that are expressed, how are these concerns expressed? Well, they are expressed quite well, in my view, in correspondence dated October 1, 2000, and this again is to the hon. minister of health. It goes on here. This is quite a long piece of correspondence. Again, concerns expressed here are that the Private Contract scheme is now forcing us to consider our entrepreneurial abilities in setting up a private facility and negotiating a contract for surgery. These are skills which are not imparted to us in Residency training or the Hippocratic Oath. I encourage you to consider carefully all implications of the Private Surgery Scenario.

Now, that is only one concern.

Another concern expressed is that the current cost allotment of $515 per cataract to private facilities allows significant profit taking by parties with vested private interest. Through the Regional Eye Care Center the average running cost per case is approximately $150 per case for instrumentation and equipment plus $200 per case for an Intraocular Lens Implant.

Now, I'm curious. Are these costs that we have the same in Calgary as they are in Edmonton?

MS BLAKEMAN: We don't know. We don't have the details.

MR. MacDONALD: We don't have the details, so how are we to know unless we pass Motion 509 as articulated by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview?

Also in this correspondence is this concern, and it is stated in this way, Mr. Speaker.

It is both unfortunate and telling that the renewal of private contracts for cataract surgery in Capital Health Region 10 is announced only 1 day after Bill 11 is legislated . . . This ministry's mandate to legitimize for-profit private enterprise in the field of Ophthalmic Surgery is an insult to the Royal Alexandra Regional Eye Care Center which has only in recent years been developed as a Premiere Program to the tune of 3.1 million dollars of public funding.

Now, in light of that concern in the correspondence dated October 1, 2000, I don't know how this Assembly could not support this motion. We will have, I believe, a sounder health care system. There will be more accountability.

There are additional recommendations in the Auditor General's annual report that I think have to come to the attention and hopefully the interest of all members of this Assembly. Recommendation 18, contracting for services, states quite simply: "We recommend the Department of Health and Wellness assess reliance on contracted services and improve the control over contracting activity." This is exactly what the Member for Edmonton-Riverview wants to do through Motion 509.

This is another recommendation, unnumbered. I guess there were so many recommendations for the Ministry of Health and Wellness. I'm going to refer to this one as A, approving surgical service contracts. The Auditor General suggests or recommends that "the Department of Health and Wellness improve the process for approving surgical service contracts issued by health authorities." Health authorities would include, I'm sure, the Calgary regional health authority, which would encompass the entire constituency of Calgary-Currie.

Now, another unnumbered recommendation from the Auditor General, recommendation B.

We recommend the Department of Health and Wellness, in collaboration with health authorities, assess the benefits and risks of the approach to information systems management in the health system and clarify the accountability [the A word] of the chief information officer for health.

Now, there are more recommendations here: recommendation 19, reporting financial results. Financial results would be taxpayers' money; that's the source of the finances here.

We again recommend the Department of Health and Wellness improve the reporting of financial results in the Ministry and Department financial statements.

Recommendation 20, surgical service contracting – conflict of interest:

We recommend the Calgary Health Region and the Capital Health Authority enhance their conflict-of-interest processes:

- by extending private interest disclosure requirements to senior management who are in a position to influence contract decisions, and
- by using an independent third-party review, as part of a formalized appeal mechanism, when employees operate private practices or clinics that contract with their employers.

It goes on to say that "this recommendation should apply" not only to the Calgary and Capital health authorities but "to all regional health authorities."

Now, in light of that alone, that recommendation 20 from the Auditor General is proof enough that each and every member of this Assembly should support the motion by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview. We can have a better province.

MR. MASON: I'm sure they will.

MR. MacDONALD: The Member for Edmonton-Highlands is confident that this motion will pass the Assembly.

However, Mr. Speaker, an unnumbered recommendation again: Surgical service contracting – performance measures.

MS BLAKEMAN: That would be details.

MR. MacDONALD: That would be details.

THE SPEAKER: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, but under Standing Order 8(4) I must put the question with respect to the motion under consideration.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:17 p.m.]

head: Government Bills and Orders

head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We'll call the committee to order.

Bill 28
Agricultural Operation Practices
Amendment Act, 2001

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We are considering amendment A5.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This is the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition's amendment, as I recall.

AN HON. MEMBER: Which he tried to withdraw.

MR. MASON: Yes, and I wanted to just raise the issue because my interpretation was quite a bit different than that given by the hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. It was clear to me that the approval officer in this case need not necessarily provide notification to interested parties, and I can't see how an interpretation could be made that it's one or the other. Even with the hon. Official Opposition leader's amendment, it is not a question of either they must do it one way or require the applicant to do it. That is why I didn't want to have the motion withdrawn, because I felt that the Leader of the Official Opposition was missing a point there and I wanted to bring it to his attention. So I don't know if anyone from the Official Opposition wants to address this question further.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Seeing nobody wanting to speak, the question has been called.

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The Minister of Finance for some reason thinks that I don't want to talk about this bill, but there's still lots to be said about this. I'm very happy to speak to the bill, and I would encourage the Minister of Finance, who's a little chippy this afternoon, to get involved in the debate as well.

Mr. Chairman, this is one of those bills that we have some concerns about. In principle I like this bill a lot because it moves us forward on some of the issues that really needed to be addressed, particularly on environmental concerns. But when we look at the specific detail of the bill, we see that there are many, many concerns out there in the community with this kind of a bill, not the least of which is whether or not we should be setting up a program or an agenda in this province that will encourage continued or increased use of intensive livestock operations.

Recently I had a chat with some people who work on the municipal side of issues, and they were very concerned about this bill, Mr. Chairman. What they said was that their first issue with the bill was with the splitting of responsibility for who's going to be making the decisions here. They felt that the hybrid that we were looking at, in terms of municipalities having some form of input and control over what was happening and then the NRCB actually administering the registration and authorization and approval processes, wouldn't work. They felt that either the municipalities had to have the control and decision-making powers or the NRCB had to have the control and decision-making powers. They felt that what would happen – which is actually what the minister told us would not happen, so this is interesting to talk about – is that with the way the regulations would be interpreted, municipalities would have next to no control and the NRCB would have very far-reaching responsibilities.

If that's the case, if that's how this bill is going to be interpreted, then I do have some serious concerns, because as I read it, the NRCB only has the ability to make decisions based on environmental criteria. Based on that, there will be few spots in this province where you can't put an intensive livestock operation in, and with the NRCB not having any criteria or capacity to make decisions by incorporating a cumulative impact assessment on the areas in terms of a provincewide assessment, then we're setting ourselves up for some huge potential problems. Not the least of those are things like groundwater contamination, as we saw the world-renowned David Schindler respond to on or around November 20. So those are some serious concerns for me.

We still have increasing concern about the kinds of changes that municipalities can make to land zoning use in terms of being able to zone out these kinds of applications if they want to. The people I talked to, who have worked in the municipal area for a long time and have been closely studying this bill, had some very grave concerns about that. They said that they did not believe that kind of thing would ever be allowed to happen, that people wouldn't be able to zone out these kinds of operations if they wanted to.

I still haven't heard any comments or concerns about how the government is going to address any of the heavy metal issues. Even if we could take care of the air and the water issues, we can't get rid of the heavy metals. There's no place to put them, Mr. Chairman, so that's an issue that still needs to be addressed.

I did receive e-mails from Barry and Lana Love, one from each of them, on this issue, and I'm sure that the minister of agriculture has also received them. They have some concerns that I haven't heard specifically brought up, so I'll take a moment to just paraphrase what they talked about. They're grain farmers, and they own about 1,200 acres of land. They're very concerned about the ILOs potentially moving next door to them. They reference other provinces and other states where there has been intensive livestock production brought into the regions and that there are a number of dangers, not the least of which are lower property values because resale is tougher to do if you're a neighbour to an intensive livestock operator. I think that has been proven to be true in some cases.

They live in the Flagstaff county area, and they've seen all kinds of issues about sitings within the municipalities. Given that, they still feel that ILO sitings should remain in the hands of the county or the municipality involved. They think that even though communities are often torn apart, it is more important for those closest to the decision-making process to be the ones who have the freedom to speak out and the freedom to decide who their neighbours are going to be. So that's part of his comments here.

They think that the province should be able to "come up with definite scientifically calculated regulations to help Counties make unbiased decisions." This is in fact what we had asked for, provincewide regulations, when we first started talking about this issue. They feel that MLAs, that all of us here in this Legislature should investigate the damage and controversy caused by the possibility of ILOs in our own constituency.

They say that they've paid a high price for being so outspoken, that there have been a lot of things happen to them and their family, but they felt that it was worth while to continue to pursue these issues. Their point of view – this is Barry Love from Hardisty that I am specifically referencing – is that they should say no to the proposal to remove the local people from any decision-making regarding the siting of ILOs.

Now, Lana Love talks about the process itself. She says that people need to reconsider what she calls a "catastrophic decision," that they've been present at and sat through a couple of the committee meetings that went provincewide, read the reports resulting from the meetings, and were concerned about where the decisions came from. She states that "when 72 of the oral presenters wanted the land use issue left in the hands of the Municipalities and only 4 thought the Provincial Government should take it over," she was very concerned about the outcome. She feels that taxpayers' money and time was wasted because the decision had already been made. She goes on to say that the province should not be taking over all the responsibilities, and she feels that the minister of agriculture should have checked with other agriculture ministers for their opinions. That would have pointed out that there were problems caused by ILOs in all provinces.

There are concerns about the Natural Resources Conservation

Board, that they will be able to actually ease the fears about the safety of the environment. She feels that the government "is outwardly promoting ILOs in Alberta [and] cannot possibly pass on any unbiased information." So I think that's an interesting point.

Water quality is an issue for her. Water quantity is also an issue, this having been a dry year. We've had a few dry years. Water supplies are drying up. They reference Bellshill Lake, Mr. Chairman, which is a lake we have talked about in this Legislature, as being the perfect example of how this government has failed the people of this province. There is a fecal coliform count in the lake of 48, which is unbelievably high. In fact, the lake looks more like chocolate pudding than it does lake water. They're concerned that . . . [interjections] Well, it's quite disgusting. You have no idea. Even the ducks and geese don't go there. Nothing lives there. [interjection] Well, it's I think a reasonable comparison.

So the concerns about that lake have been there for a long time. It's called a lake, but really it's like a slough. The concern about that is that the contaminants of course are leeching into the ground-water and getting into the lake, so that's a real problem. We've been repeatedly told that this is a slough, not a lake, and that it should be okay, but I think that that is not a reasonable answer. We may come back to that issue again at another time.

She goes on to voice more concerns about this. This is a pretty good cross-reference, examples of the kinds of concerns that we've heard out there. You know, it's a tough bill for me because environmentally this bill will encompass – I agree with the minister when she says the best standards in Canada on the environmental side from a site-by-site location basis, but it doesn't address the overall problems, the cumulative impact. There's a lot of unease in the community about the lack of input and decision-making the municipalities will in reality have when this bill goes through in terms of siting issues.

I know that my colleague from Edmonton-Riverview is very much looking forward to having his turn to speak on this bill, because he's spent some serious time talking to farmers throughout the province in the last week or so on these issues. [interjection] That's right; he did. A lot of these farmers in the past have been government supporters, yet they don't really trust this piece of legislation to do exactly what the government says it's going to do.

So this is one that at the end of the day I'll have to support on some level, but, you know, it's really a hold your nose kind of bill, Mr. Chairman, literally a hold your nose kind of bill because of the little bit of good and a lot of concerns about the rest of it.

AN HON. MEMBER: They're fast-tracking it through.

MS CARLSON: They're fast-tracking it; that's true.

Part of the problem is that we've been talking about this issue for at least 10 years. I've personally been talking about it for five years for sure. I know that my colleagues in this Legislature have been talking about it for longer than that. Did we need something? Yes. Is this the full answer? This government never gets it right the first time around, Mr. Chairman. I'm sure we're going to be back here with amendments and changes and adjustments. I hope that those amendments, changes, and adjustments will improve the legislation down the road. Sometimes it works for this government, and sometimes it doesn't.

So I think with that I will conclude my remarks at the committee stage. [interjections] Of course, if you liked it so much, perhaps I have a few more things I could say and take up my full 20 minutes, because there are a lot of outstanding issues. The more I talk about it, the more concerned I get about this particular piece of legislation, Mr. Chairman. I haven't had my questions satisfactorily answered on the impact on the soil of the existing ILOs, never mind any new ones. We've got lots of nitrogen losses that need to be taken care of. Contaminated groundwater is potentially an issue. Surface water, when we talk about some of these sloughs in the area, we know is a problem. In areas where you get flooding conditions, the runoff can be huge, human health, the parasites that can result from that. Interestingly enough, there seem to be increasing concerns about those kinds of infections particularly in southeast Alberta, which has, as we know, the highest concentration of intensive livestock operators now.

I think that in general when you take a look at this from a global perspective, with proper manure management and storage threats to land, water, and human health can be eliminated. That includes deep injection of manure to prevent runoff. We've seen that this doesn't eliminate the heavy metal issues, it doesn't eliminate the human error issues, and it doesn't eliminate the poor management practices of some operators.

Now, I know that the minister had talked about this bill giving them greater ability to address issues with operators who pursue poor management practices. We certainly look forward to seeing tougher enforcement and penalties and perhaps the closing down of those kinds of operators and are happy to hear that the minister is quite interested in pursuing that. That's all good news. So if this bill will help in that regard, that's another piece that would be good about this bill.

We've seen quite a few issues. When there are this many concerns in a bill, Mr. Chairman, it's tough to support it. There's no doubt that it's tough to support. So I guess we'll hear what the rest of the people have to say at committee and at third reading and see what kind of support this bill has in the Legislature.

Thank you.

4:50

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to offer a couple of comments to the hon. member, who has expressed some interest and some support, albeit conditional, in some areas for parts of this bill. I think the recognition on all sides of the House is that this is a matter that we do have to deal with, that the concerns that could be here today or in the future of the effects on our soil, air, and water quality must be addressed and monitored. Certainly I have had the opportunity to pass on to the members the very much a work-in-progress draft regulations, which to a large extent deal with the issue around manure management, where a lot of those concerns are.

Certainly to this point we have concentrated more on nitrogen and its effect within the soil, but we are doing some work in the area of phosphorus. As I've indicated, we have 23 sites that we monitor constantly for water quality, but it is important that we continue to work in these areas and use the best science we have for manure management.

There's some excellent work happening at the University of Alberta in composting, in phosphorus. Certainly the agricultural industry itself has been very aggressive in finding new technologies and new ways to manage this, projects that use microbes to change the makeup of the effluent so that it can be all used by plants rather than some of it leeching into the soil. Many of those things are there today.

It's interesting that while it would almost seem onerous on the agricultural industry when you look at the extent and the, I think, very tough regulations that are around manure management, whether it's on minimum distance spacing, whether it's on level of effluent spread, many of those areas, we still have the total support of the feeder association, of the Alberta Cattle Commission, of the feather industry, of the dairy industry, and of the hog and pork industry in this province. I think that speaks to the industry's commitment to continue to develop in a very responsible way.

As I've indicated in the House many times, it is in their best interests to protect the quality of their soil and water. They drink the water. They use and depend on the soil for their livelihood, and of course they are the ones who are in the air 100 percent of the time, not just driving by. So they want to ensure that this industry grows and develops in an environmentally responsible way. I think that this bill will lay out clear rules that all can understand, and when they make their investments, they will understand the rules that they must play under.

So with those few comments I will commit to the hon. member, as I have always, that if there are questions that are detailed that we can't maybe take the time for in the House, she will receive a written response.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I would like to move an amendment, and I will provide that for you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, can you just wait for a second for us to receive the amendment, please?

The amendment that's being proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands we shall refer to as amendment A6. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, you may proceed.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Would you like me to read out the amendment?

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Please.

MR. MASON: All right. I move that Bill 28, the Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001, be amended as follows. Section 5 is amended in the proposed section 5(1) by striking out clause (b) and substituting the following.

- (b) appoint 3 persons as an agricultural practice review committee in the following manner:
  - (i) at least one appointee must have experience in the type of farming operation to which the application or referral relates, and
  - (ii) at least one other appointee must be recommended by the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties.

Mr. Chairman, I'd just like to speak to this. I think it's fine that a body that is responsible for the resolution of disputes ought to include people who are experienced in the form of farming that is under consideration, but I also believe that it's important that we not restrict or limit the membership on these committees to those that are strictly involved in the industry. I believe that to do so may well create a certain type of bias. It won't be a bias in terms of the acceptable practices in the industry, but it will be a bias in favour of that particular type of industry as opposed to other considerations which it might be asked to consider. I believe that it is appropriate that people who have some other experience – that is to say, some experience in representing people in the rural community – or who have a strong community background in the particular municipal district or county ought to be included. So I think it is important that we amend this.

If you look at the sections of the act:

- 8(1) A practice review committee, when acting as a mediator, may assist the parties in reaching their own mutually acceptable settlement by structuring negotiations, facilitating communication and identifying the issues and interests of the parties.

(2) . . . may inquire into and assist the parties in resolving the dispute and, if the matter is not resolved, may recommend to the Minister what should constitute a generally accepted agricultural practice in respect of that agricultural operation.

So it's clear, Mr. Chairman, that these practice review committees are not just strictly dealing with the best possible agricultural practice but are in fact dealing with the impact that practice or that operation has on surrounding communities.

It seems very apparent to me that there's a lack of balance on the committee as the legislation is currently proposed, and we believe that the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties is well suited to be able to advise the minister as to who may be acceptable from that point of view. I think it would be a very, very appropriate organization to assist the minister in selecting a well-rounded committee and one which could assist the committee in reaching a decision which is fair to all affected parties. I just want to indicate that I do believe it's very important to have someone who has some expertise with the particular agricultural practices in the industry that are used by that particular operation. I don't think that it's wrong at all in the act to present that as an alternative, but it is not sufficient.

I believe that the AAMD and C is seriously concerned about this issue, Mr. Chairman. In our conversations with the AAMD and C our impression is that they're in agreement with many aspects of this bill. They obviously want provincewide standards. They want to have some uniformity in the province around confined feeding operations or industrial livestock operations. I think they're quite supportive of that, and I think that they're hearing, as are members in this House, from their own constituents that something needs to be done. I think that that's a very, very real concern of anyone serving in any order of government whose constituency may be affected by these types of operations.

I do believe, as well, from our conversations that they have a concern with respect to the taking away of municipal authority under this act and rightly so, in our view, Mr. Chairman. We think that this is a very unfortunate step which is mixed in with a bill that otherwise has considerable merit. It is one of the reasons why we believe that the organization could very well be asked to participate in these decisions on an ongoing basis, and the practice committees are a perfect place for them to participate.

So, Mr. Chairman, just to conclude. We're not opposed. [interjection] I'm sure that the hon. member over there will get up on his feet and contribute to the discussion, because I know he's got a lot to say, even if he only communicates it this way. I do believe that the agricultural practice review committees are probably a good thing. It's a very good thing that people who have some expertise in the particular area are on them, but what is deficient is that there's no person there to bring a community point of view to the review committee. So if it is dominated or set up in a one-sided way, you may find that people who are very, very biased towards their particular branch of agriculture could end up on the committees and that there's not a balance there. I think that neighbours will not be getting a fair shake from these committees unless this amendment is approved, so I'd urge support by all members.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Leduc.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just to call to members' attention that the Agricultural Operation Practices Act is Alberta's right-to-farm legislation. The essence of that act is that if a farmer is farming in an acceptable farming practices manner, he has the right to do that.

The section that the member is seeking to amend is the nuisance section of this bill and is really separate and apart from the NRCB operations. Essentially it says that when there is a nuisance complaint, it will go to the minister, likely, according to the proposed regulations, in the person of the Farmers' Advocate, who will try and deal with it. If he cannot resolve it, he has the authority to strike a three-member committee, two of which are intended to be people that have familiarity with that particular agricultural operation, to help pass judgment on whether or not it's being done in an acceptable manner. So in that light I'm speaking against the amendment.

[Motion on amendment A6 lost]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

MR. LUND: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I want to just make a few comments on this bill. First of all, I want to say how pleased I am that we are bringing this bill forward. It's something that is really necessary as we build confidence in the public that confined livestock operations and livestock operations in general are quite safe and in fact are not harming the environment and therefore are not something that we need to be greatly concerned about.

I want to just touch on a couple of things, one of them being the whole issue about the fact that the government is taking over the process and that municipalities will have a major role but not the final say. Now, leading into this, I want to point out the fine work that the last committee that worked on this did. They were dealing primarily with the issue of approval and then, of course, the ongoing administration that's required afterwards. The committee did great work, but I think it's important at this point because of some of the criticism that I heard this afternoon about the whole role of the municipality – the committee, when you look at it, was chaired by the hon. Member for Leduc and made up as well by the Member for Lacombe-Stettler, the Member for Calgary-Glenmore, and then the former president of the AAMDC. So now you have three people on this committee that had long municipal experience, people who came from the municipality. Then, of course, to round out the committee there was a person who does operate a confined feeding operation, but this individual does a lot of research work, is a very, very entrepreneurial-type person and a person that is most interested in protecting the environment.

So the committee was well rounded out. It had the expertise from municipalities, knew the role of the municipality and how best we could satisfy the municipalities. They came back with this report, and in fact that's what you find in the act, a system where the municipalities will have input. They still have land use planning that they will be engaged in, and then the application can flow through that whole process.

Another issue that I constantly hear the opposition raising is the whole issue about the contamination of water. Yes, it's true that there is a lot of risk particularly for surface water, but there's not a lot of risk for groundwater. If anyone doubts that, I would like them to show me a lagoon that is in fact leaking and contaminating groundwater.

When I was Minister of Environment, this came up. When I was the minister of agriculture, it came up. Every time I asked my staff to show me where this contamination was. Right around my own farm we have about four or five confined operations with lagoons that have been there, some of them, in excess of 35 years. Now, nobody has shown me one yet where there's contamination. Just think about it. With most of these operations the family that's operating the operation lives at the same location.

MR. MacDONALD: Point of order.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on a point of order.

MR. MacDONALD: Yes.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Citation, please.

Point of Order
Questioning a Member

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Beauchesne 482. Would the hon. minister entertain a question regarding his remarks?

MR. LUND: Of course, Mr. Chairman.

Debate Continued

MR. MacDONALD: Earlier in the hon. minister's remarks there was reference made to the committee. Could you please explain if that committee traveled to southern Manitoba to examine the issue of extensive hog operations there, particularly around the municipality of Brandon, and if so, what were their findings?

Thank you.

MR. LUND: Mr. Chairman, I did not control where the committee went. I don't know if they went to Brandon. That question would be much better put to the individuals who were on the committee. If they did, they certainly did not report anything negative to me. They didn't report about any contamination. If the hon. member knows of any in Alberta, please let us know, and be sure that they're not just anecdotal. There are a number of people that like to spread that gossip, and it's just that. It's gossip.

So, Mr. Chairman, I think it's really important that these sitings and the whole operation be based on science, not emotion. Every time these members get up, they talk about all of these things that are very, very emotional. Yes, I will be the first to admit that there is a problem with offensive odour. I know that. We live close to one. I know that it's not pleasant at times, but the fact is that the groundwater is not being contaminated. When you see these families that have lived beside them for years using the water that's at that location, I can assure you that they are not drinking contaminated water.

I remember listening to particularly the third party talking about the regulations, that we need a lot of regulations. Now, I know they love regulations. They like big government. They like lots of spending, but they're very, very short on common sense. I'm concerned that if in fact we go way down the way with these regulations, the very thing that they claim they want, which is the family farm to operate – if you put in too many regulations, I can assure you that you will have no family farms getting into confined operations. It'll all be large corporations. Why? Because the costs of getting in, the capital cost, will far exceed what anybody can handle unless you're a very large operation. So that is a big concern that I have. I think we have to be very careful as we write the regulations that in fact we don't put ourselves in a position where it is just large operations.

Now, I'm sure that there are a few warts in the bill. One of them that I'm worried about is in section 16, where we talk about, "The owner or operator of a seasonal feeding and bedding site must construct, maintain, operate, reclaim and abandon it in accordance with the regulations." Here's one site that I'm talking about, where if the regulations are not very carefully drafted, you will put many, many of our family farms out of existence because they cannot afford to go way overboard on these bedding sites and all of the things that go with them. Now, it is extremely important that the environment be protected, that the groundwater be protected, so I'll be the first one to be watching that, but I've also got to put on record that we must be careful about it.

Now, the member who had the amendment and the third party whip this afternoon was concerned about . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: Does he whip?

MR. LUND: Oh, yeah, they have a whip. If you notice, it's important that they have a whip so that they can make sure one of them is keeping them on their toes.

This afternoon on that amendment: please, hon. member, read section 19(2). In case you haven't, I'll just tell you what it says: "A notification under subsection (1) must be carried out in accordance with the regulations." So it's extremely important that people be notified. They have to be notified. Certainly section 19(2) covers that. So I think that one has to be dealt with.

Mr. Chairman, I could go on with some of the other sections in the bill, but once again I've got to repeat that I think it's critical that the regulations make sure that there is protection of the environment, but we've got to also be very careful that we do not put the ma-and-pa operations out of business, because that's what we could do by drawing these regulations to the point where they cannot afford to operate.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to move an amendment, and I will distribute it now.

AN HON. MEMBER: Another one?

MR. MASON: One of several.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The committee has before it an amendment moved by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands. We shall refer to this as amendment A7.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will move that Bill 28, Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001, be amended as follows. Section 5 is amended in the proposed section 20(1) by striking out clause (a) and substituting the following:

- (a) the requirements are not met or the site is not zoned as a permitted or discretionary use pursuant to the land use by-law of the municipality affected, the approval officer must deny the application, or

Now, just to help people find that, it's on page 11 of the bill. It's an amendment, of course, to 20(1)(a). It has the effect, Mr. Chairman, of restoring the authority of the municipality to zone for these types of operations. In other words, if there is not zoning in place for an operation of this type, then the approval officer must deny the application. That could be a permitted use, or it could be a discretionary use, but if neither of those two uses exist, then it would be denied by the approval officer until the proper zoning was in place.

This is how it's done for every type of land use virtually in this province. There are only a very few types of land uses that are excluded from this authority of the municipality. In the first place, roads and pipelines are the main ones that are currently exempt from the authority of the municipality. What the bill would do unless this amendment is passed is take away that authority from the municipality to zone in a positive way for these types of uses.

We've said already in the Assembly that the biggest problem as far as we're concerned is that the ability of the municipalities to zone in a normal way for these types of organizations is taken away by this bill. We believe that it is expressly so that local municipal governments cannot stop these kinds of operations and that it forms a key part of the government strategy of extending this extremely unpopular use by very large-scale operations into rural areas against the wishes of the residents that live there. This amendment will protect those people. It will protect rural Albertans against having large-scale and potentially polluting but certainly smelly operations imposed upon them. It will give the local jurisdiction the capacity to deal with this as they deal with any other potentially incompatible land use.

Mr. Chairman, that's the essence of what local jurisdictions do when they do zoning. They try to do some planning so that incompatible land uses are not placed adjacent to one another. For example, you don't want to have a busy truck yard or a busy industrial use right next to an elementary school, so you provide for some separation and you make sure that different land uses are adjacent to one another and that they're compatible with one another and that there are transitions that occur in order to protect it. If you're going to tell me that we're going to have a massive operation like the one from the Taiwan Sugar Corporation that was so controversial placed next to a residential use, then I think you have a problem with it.

Now, they may argue on the other side – and I'm sure they will – that this bill gives the municipality the ability to negatively zone. That is to say that they will identify in advance places where these kinds of operations may not go, but that's a departure from the normal practice, which is that the municipality designates where they may go. Why is that? That particular approach has not been explained satisfactorily at least from our point of view. In our view, it is a way of restricting the ability of a rural municipality to prevent large-scale hog operations in particular from being placed in their county in places that may have an impact on the surrounding neighbours.

We believe that municipal government in this province is fully competent to make these decisions, that it is better made by those people who have to live next to the operation than by a board or a bureaucrat in Edmonton, and that we should respect municipal autonomy. That's something that we in this party firmly believe in, Mr. Chairman, and we think that the government ought to believe in it too.

Thank you.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Chairman, I will speak very briefly to this impassioned speech on municipal autonomy. I would ask all members to read the actual section. Just to make sure that it's in the record, I will read 20(1), which then you get to section (a).

In considering an application for an approval or an amendment of an approval, an approval officer must consider whether the applicant meets the requirements of this Part and the regulations and whether the application is consistent with the municipal development plan.

Yes, that is talking about zoning. You can use any excuse to alter a bill, but I understand what a municipal development plan is. It goes on to say, "And if, in the opinion of the approval officer . . ."

(a), which this member would like struck, says, ". . . the requirements are not met or there is an inconsistency with the municipal development plan, the approval officer must deny the application or . . ." It goes on into a number of other sections which really safeguard this bill.

One of the things that is assumed by the hon. member's speech is that things are perfect today. I'm having trouble with this, because I hear from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands about smelly large operations being sited by the municipalities, who have the authority for siting today. If this world were perfect in this area, we would not be dealing with this issue today. But we do understand, one, the importance of the protection of the air, soil, and water in this province for all citizens wherever they live and, two, the importance of the livestock industry to this province, which contributes over 4 and one-half billion dollars a year to the economy of this province, the importance of the investment that the people who go into these developments, who put hundreds of thousands, in fact over millions of dollars into it, that there are clear rules, consistent rules so that they and their partners or lenders can ensure that the rules are well understood.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard from many – and I believe the Minister of Infrastructure spoke to this just a moment ago – a concern that some of the regulations may be too strict. Today, if we go back to what we had, we do have an opportunity for some problems. That's why this bill is in the House. Today the decisions on siting a confined feeding operation will be made under clear rules by what is, I consider, a neutral board – it is not the Department of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, nor is it in Environment; it is Sustainable Resource Development, which I believe makes all kinds of sense – by people who have the scientific knowledge and expertise to make decisions, not based on hysteria or emotion or hearsay or "I drove by an operation and it didn't smell very good." They will make those decisions based on sound science. The municipalities will have given, I would hope, their land zoning plans to the NRCB with restrictions on where confined feeding operations should not be built and the reasons for that, and the NRCB will consider that.

Mr. Chairman, I see no benefit or advantage or anything in this amendment that makes this bill better than it is today. In fact, I think it weakens the bill.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd just like to close on this. I do not believe that everything is perfect with the present system and have not made that claim in any of my interventions in the debate. The question is: what is the most appropriate system? No system will be perfect. That's clear. What we have now is at least that the people who have to live with the decision can make the decision. They may not make it right every time, but they're the ones that we should be vesting this authority in and not, as this act would have it, with a board that can go back to their homes in the city in most cases and not have to live with the consequences of their decision. That's the key thing.

Now, the minister earlier indicated that the development plan was the same thing as zoning, but if you read through the bill, you'll find that the municipal district or county needs to make a plan which has to have specific areas where these operations are excluded and that they can't obviously do a very large-scale plan that eliminates them altogether, because the government can then come back on them. So it's not the same as zoning for something. There's a limited capacity to actually have local control over these kinds of operations.

Mr. Chairman, at this point I would take your guidance. It's almost 5:30. I can conclude my remarks and adjourn the debate, or we can go to the next amendment, as you wish.

[Motion on amendment A7 lost]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: As per Standing Order 4(3) the committee is now recessed until 8 p.m., at which time we will convene in committee.

[The committee adjourned at 5:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 27, 2001

8:00 p.m.

Date: 01/11/27

head: Government Bills and Orders

head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'll call the committee to order. Would the committee agree to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure this evening to introduce to you and through you to the members of the House a great group of kids that are with us tonight from St. Albert. They are with the 2nd St. Albert Cub group. They are seated in the members' gallery. With them this evening we have group leaders Mr. Larry Wright, Mr. Jim Green, Ms Wendy Radcliff, and Mr. Grant Chaney as well as parent helpers Mr. Bill Crockett, Mr. Leo Vilks, Mr. Ron Nadolski, and Mr. Neil Gamble. I would ask that they all rise and receive the warm welcome of the House.

THE CHAIRMAN: For the benefit of those that are in the gallery, this is the informal part of the Legislature; thus members can quietly move about. Indeed, if you're following your map of where the members are, you'll soon find that someone with a beard in fact turns out to be a lady and that they're not in their right place, so please be aware of that. We're allowed to take off our jackets and to have coffee or juice in the Chamber. So it is relaxed, and we don't have a limit to the number of times that members can get up and speak on a topic.

Bill 28 Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001

THE CHAIRMAN: We've already dealt with seven amendments. Are there any comments, questions, or additional amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I have an additional amendment, and I'll just ask that it be distributed now.

THE CHAIRMAN: To the pages, I would just remind you, please, when you're doing the handouts, hand them out first to the people who are actually sitting here, and then you can go and drop them off at the desks that aren't currently occupied.

Hon. member, I think you may commence your deliberations on amendment A8, if you'd move it and explain it.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I will move that Bill 28, Agricultural Operations Practices Amendment Act, 2001, be amended as follows: section 5 is amended (a) in the proposed section 34 by striking out "$10,000" and substituting "$20,000"; (b) in the proposed section 35, (i) in subsection (1) by striking out "$5,000" and substituting "$10,000", and (ii) in subsection (2) by striking out "$10,000" and substituting "$20,000"; (c) in the proposed section 36, (i) in subsection (1) by striking out "$5,000" and substituting "$10,000", and (ii) in subsection (2) by striking out "$10,000" and substituting "$20,000." Mr. Chairman, these amendments would simply double the fines in all respects. There are some very serious matters here that these fines apply to: the obstruction or delay of an inspector, producing false records, expanding an operation without approval, and misapplication of manure.

Mr. Chairman, it's well known that only politicians are allowed to misapply manure, and anyone else should be fined heavily. So with that, I'll take my place.

[Motion on amendment A8 lost]

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: I have one additional amendment, which I'll distribute now. I tried to renumber it as section 6, but they wouldn't let me.

THE CHAIRMAN: This amendment will be known as amendment A9. We'd invite the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands to move this.

MR. MASON: I move that Bill 28, Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001, be amended as follows: section 5 is amended in the proposed section 20(1)(b)(iii) by striking out "a reasonable opportunity" and substituting "at least 20 working days." Mr. Chairman, this is just to provide greater certainty for people who may be affected by this operation, whether the people are proponents or people who may be affected by such an application. So it makes a great deal of sense, from our point of view, to substitute a clear number of days instead of "a reasonable opportunity," which is subject to such wide interpretation as to produce potentially unsatisfactory results.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Motion on amendment A9 lost]

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Yes. Thank you. On the bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: We're on the bill, yes.

DR. TAFT: Okay. Thank you very much. I have not spoken to the bill yet, Mr. Chairman, and I appreciate the opportunity. I've put some effort into researching this bill. I've spoken to a number of people around the province, I've spoken to people within my constituency, and I've consulted with people in our caucus including in particular the leader, whose opinion I take very seriously on this, and I've done a fair bit of reading, not as much as I would like to. I have tried to make as informed an opinion as I can. Among the people around the province whom I've spoken to are included a number of farmers, one of whom is currently a county councillor and another who was a former county councillor, people who have been very involved in agriculture their entire lives and have been very successful at it, people who I would say are probably from the heartland of the Tory party.

MR. MacDONALD: No.

DR. TAFT: I talk to everybody.

I thought I would organize my comments into the pros and the cons as I see them with this piece of legislation, and there are a number of both. Clearly, one of the benefits of the legislation is that it will bring a standard process to an industry that has suffered from helter-skelter regulation and a lack of consistency. There's no question that a provincewide process laid out involving the NRCB and so on will make the rules clear for everybody, and I think there's a lot to be said for that. It also brings with it standards and regulations that I'm told are in many ways very strong standards. They're clear. They definitely improve the current situation in terms of environmental protection. Issues around water contamination, soil contamination, smells, and so on are covered under these regulations, and I'm told that they are regulations that are commendable, that they are quite strong and quite clear.

I'm also conscious that this is a piece of legislation that will facilitate the development of an industry in this province, and of course there are pros and cons to that. Among the benefits to it, I think, is providing a solid market for Alberta grain growers. Barley growers, growers of feed grains throughout the province will have a steady market and in many cases a very well-paying market. My information is that Lethbridge and the Lethbridge area consistently deliver the highest prices in North America for barley growers, and that's a real benefit for local farmers. If they want to be selling their grain at a premium price, this piece of legislation creates an industry that will give them an opportunity to do so, so there is some benefit to grain growers on that basis.

There is also the possibility, if there are plants developed under this legislation, of job creation in rural areas of the province. A significant intensive pork operation might employ, you know, a few dozen people, perhaps. These would be often in areas where a dozen or two or three jobs are hard to come by. So to the extent that they provide a labour market for people in some of the more remote rural areas of Alberta, I think that's commendable as well.

So those are the pros that I see, the benefits that I see with this piece of legislation.

The list of negatives that has been raised with me is also substantial. It's certainly substantial enough to make this a genuine dilemma in terms of voting. Obviously there are concerns about the environment. If we proceed with the development of, for example, a hog industry in this province on the scale that has been discussed, where we may be looking at 10 million or 12 million or 13 million hogs produced annually in Alberta, that is an enormous change to Alberta and to the environment of Alberta. I'm told that one hog produces waste equivalent to perhaps seven human beings, so if we're looking at 10 million hogs or 13 million hogs, we are looking at the equivalent impact, in terms of human waste, of several Los Angeleses or several Chicagos. I'm not convinced for a moment that most people in Alberta appreciate that this industry is developing to this scale or will soon be developing to this scale.

If that amount of waste were to be developed through human habitation in an urban development, there would be major waste treatment plants developed like the kind that we already see in Edmonton and Calgary. In the case of intensive livestock operations, or confined feeding operations, we will see a much lower level of waste handling. It's certainly by agricultural standards a good level, but given the intensity of the development, they are standards that are not up to what we would expect if these were urban developments.

When we think about the impact of, say, the equivalent to a human population in Alberta of 50 million or 60 million or 70 million people and we add on top of that the potential development of coal-fired power plants for export of electricity to the United States and we add to that the enormous environmental impact of the oil sands developments in northeastern Alberta, I am concerned that we risk turning Alberta into, in some sense, a sewer for North America. That's how some people have put it to me. In fact, last night I was talking to a constituent about this very issue, and he said: my gosh, I just spent the last two months driving around this beautiful province of ours, going all around and admiring it, and as I went around, I became more and more concerned that we were going to be losing this province, that we were going to be losing it to massive industrial developments and massive agricultural developments. So I'm not convinced at all that most Albertans realize the impact that this legislation could have on the natural environment of Alberta.

The issues environmentally cover the groundwater, and there is immediate concern of surface water contamination. Even in cases in Alberta now there have been real expressions of worry from local residents around these intensive operations that surface water may be contaminated. There are longer term issues around groundwater, although I also understand that so far in the whole development of the Feedlot Alley in the Lethbridge area there has been no evidence, I'm told, of groundwater contamination. So that probably can be managed.

I did, however, speak this morning to a county councillor whose county sits on a major, major aquifer that's about 55 feet below the surface, and he's very concerned that if drilling occurs and manure is pumped underground at the 30-foot level, it could seep into the aquifer and contaminate a massive area of Alberta. So there are both groundwater and surface water concerns.

There are soil concerns. As this manure is spread in intensive concentrations, it brings nitrogen levels up in the soil. That can be accommodated through crop rotations, but it also leaves elements that will remain in the soil, elements like copper and selenium, which will gradually accumulate in the soil and reduce the productivity of the soil. We do risk having these operations going for 10 or 12 or 15 years, at which point the surrounding farmlands will begin to see their productivity seriously depleted because of the continual application of heavy manure. So those are some of the concerns.

Of course everybody's familiar with the air contamination from these facilities, the odours that arise. They're often well managed; nonetheless, they do become problems. Again, people including farmers that I've been speaking to in the last few days have spoken about how from time to time it can be genuinely unpleasant to be within even several miles of these facilities, depending on humidity and temperature and wind conditions. So there is a host of environmental concerns.

Related to those are health concerns. There are questions about health effects of living within close proximity to these facilities, whether there are respiratory effects from the fumes and the odours. There are also concerns about consuming the meat that is raised in these operations, meat that comes from animals that are often fed significant amounts of antibiotics. There are, as we probably all know, risks of antibiotics getting passed through to human beings. There are also risks of antibiotic-resistant diseases developing. I am told that the majority of antibiotics in North America are actually consumed not by human beings but by animals.

Of course, the use of antibiotics is a direct correlation to the operation of these kinds of facilities. That also links to the question of the treatment of the animals themselves. Those people who are sensitive or concerned about the humane treatment of animals really often are raising serious, serious questions about the confinement of the animals, the poultry and the pork especially, in these particular operations.

Then there's the whole question of economic issues. As I mentioned earlier, there are benefits from job creation. There are benefits from strong prices paid to farmers for their feed grain, but other people have been quick to point out to me the economic drawbacks of these facilities. Because they're agricultural facilities, although they may be multimillion dollar operations with what looks to all of us like factories, they are in fact not considered industrial for tax purposes or other purposes. They're considered agricultural. As a result, they pay virtually no taxes. So we could have a major offshore company investing million of dollars in a plant buying up a quarter section of land and paying perhaps a grand total of a few hundred dollars in taxes to the local municipality. Clearly, this could lead to a net loss to the municipality as the wear and tear on the roads occurs, the wear and tear on the local infrastructure, quite possibly a decrease in property values, and as a result, a diminishing of the local tax base. So the economic impact of these facilities on a local economy is mixed at best, and that's exactly the feedback I've got from everybody I've spoken to, including people with a lot of experience on this. If these operations were considered as industrial operations, which I believe they should be, then it would be a completely different approach. Frankly, when we're talking about 10,000 or 20,000 or 50,000 hogs, for example, in one operation, this is an industrial operation. This is not a family farm operation.

There's also the question of labour laws and labour force. Although these are in effect factories, the workers, as I understand it, will not be treated as industrial workers. They will be treated as if they were no different than farm family people working on a farm. To the best of my knowledge, that's what the labour situation will be. I have heard even from people who, I would say, are decidedly not sympathetic to industrial labour organizations that this is a real concern for them. There are safety issues, there are fairness issues, and labour forces should be treated as industrial labour forces, not as agricultural workers.

Beyond that set of concerns, there is the philosophical question here that needs to be put to all of us about local control and our ability as individuals and as communities to shape the area in which we live and to choose how we want to live and what will occur around us to the maximum extent possible. I think that philosophically most Albertans would agree with that. So when I see a piece of legislation that turns over the decision-making on this kind of an issue to the NRCB, for which there are no appeals to decisions, I really worry about local input.

Earlier in the day or yesterday the minister of education had a nice phrase. He talked about the need for local people to have local solutions to local issues. I would really like to see that approach taken here. We need ultimately to give people the right to determine their local community and the local environment in which they live. This piece of legislation will allow them input, but we all know that input can be marginal, can be superficial, can be manipulated. So input on its own is not enough. I think the local communities need ultimately to have an appeal and a veto on these kinds of developments.

There's one other concern that's come to my attention, again raised by people who undoubtedly have historically supported this government, and that's the issue of setbacks. The point was made to me earlier today that a farmer on a quarter section or a section of land, whose house is on one side of that property, could be half a mile from the other side of his property, but the setback for one of these intensive operations going in nearby, next door, is not measured from the farmer's property line; it's measured from the farmer's buildings. So you could have a confined feeding operation of tens of thousands of hogs built right on the property line of a farmer who has no desire whatsoever for that development to be there yet has no real authority to deny it. In the longer term what happens then is that the value of that farmer's land is depleted. His ability to use it in ways in which he or she would freely like to use it is constrained because he then needs to respect the laws that define the space around this intensive operation. So there are very, very serious questions about the setback regulations here.

So as I wade through this issue and listen to the advice on both sides, I've tried to pay attention to the issue of providing a strong market for the grain growers in Alberta, yet I've listened to these very same farmers tell me: you know, at some point I can't sell my barley anymore to these operations because 100,000 tons of corn a month are being trucked into Alberta from the U.S., so it's not a really great benefit to me.

As I listen to these farmers and city dwellers talk about their concerns with the environment, with the long-term future of Alberta and the risk that Alberta could become a kind of wasteland for North America, and as I consider the issues of the economic depletion, I realize that this kind of development could lead towards bankruptcy, not prosperity. So in the end I have concluded that as much as the standards of this legislation are an improvement over what we have today, it's not enough. As a result, I will be opposing this legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. leader of the third party.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate this opportunity to make some observations on Bill 28 in this debate during the committee stage. It's a very important piece of legislation. It's the result of work done by our colleague the MLA from Leduc. I appreciate the work he has done along with other members of his committee, so what I say by no means reflects on the personal commitment and the effort that the hon. Member for Leduc has put into the public hearings and the consultations that he has undertaken, from which, ostensibly, this bill has resulted.

There are concerns about this bill that the New Democrat opposition has tried to clearly put before this House, and it has sought amendments to the bill to make it more palatable, more acceptable. All of those amendments made to this point in time have been voted down. I'm not surprised about it given the overwhelming majority that the government caucus enjoys here. Nevertheless, I think the points made need to be reiterated and expanded upon, the points which led us in the first place to propose changes in the act by way of amendments which we were convinced would help improve this piece of legislation, which, as I said during its second reading, has some positive side to it.

Albertans living in the rural areas, farming communities do need some positive actions and policies that will strengthen their agricultural economy, their rural communities, so in principle we should do everything we can to make sure that Alberta's farmers, particularly Alberta's family farmers and family farms, have an opportunity not only to remain viable but to grow. Lots of Albertans take great pride in family farming. It's a part of our history. It's a part of our history that we take a great deal of pride in. There's nothing in my concerns that leads to questioning the very principles and the fundamental commitments that we have to making sure we strengthen our rural communities and strengthen the likelihood of family farms sustaining themselves and going into the future.

But there are serious concerns. I mentioned earlier in my remarks during second reading of the bill that the bill is absolutely silent about whether or not these ILOs or CFOs are industrial operations, first and foremost large industrial business operations, or if they are agricultural operations. In fact, it underlines, it reiterates the commitment of the government to the fact that these operations will be treated as agricultural operations, therefore they will not be subject to Alberta's labour standards code or, a point that I was unable to make last time around, to the provisions of WCB coverage for people who work in these ILOs. When I look at the report and recommendations of the Sustainable Management of the Livestock Industry in Alberta committee, the Klapstein report, it refers to this as industry.

If in fact the livestock sector is a cornerstone of Alberta's agricultural industry and not of agricultural activities as farming activity, then why is it that there's no attention paid to whether or not these operations that will be covered by this act, particularly large ones, not family operations but large ones, will indeed be reclassified as industrial operations and as such will be subject to the same requirements with respect to the observance of labour laws and labour standards and WCB coverage that our other industrial operations in this province are subject to? The reports about accidents of when people get killed in these operations is well known, yet there's a very serious omission in this bill with respect to addressing those very concerns.

We hear a great deal of talk about leveling the playing field. Well, here we are not doing that. We are bypassing the very question. Why is it that we should subject some of the industries in this province to the labour laws and standards of this province, diluted as they are, and to WCB coverage requirements and on the other hand, at the same time, what we consider a growing industry in this province, these intensive livestock operations, industrial livestock operations we want to exempt from the same requirements, thereby creating uneven conditions for investors, entrepreneurs, and capital as such? That makes no sense to me. That's unreasonable. It should be unacceptable, particularly when it's coming from a government which committed to creating what they call level playing fields. Well, this particular legislation seems to create a clearly unlevel . . .

DR. TAFT: Their level playing field is covered in manure.

DR. PANNU: A level playing field covered in manure. Well said.

We thought up till this point that, by and large, it was just my hon. colleague from Edmonton-Highlands and I who were so strongly concerned about some of the flaws of this act. I'm very pleased to hear the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview eloquently presenting several arguments which show why this bill is not ready to be proceeded with to the next stage at this time. It needs to be mended, it needs to be fixed, it needs to be changed, and I hope we will take our time and do that rather than having to deal with the aftermath of all kinds of problems: environmental problems, potential health problems, the economic issues, the labour-related issues, the taxation issues, and the WCB coverage of Albertans.

Essentially, farm boys from rural areas will be working in these ILOs, and why is it that our rural counterparts, these young boys and perhaps girls, who will work in these ILOs should be denied the coverage and the protection and the security and safety that we associate with industrial workplaces in this province? There are laws in this province which address the issues of health and safety at the workplace, but there's nothing here to suggest, to promise that this workplace, the ILOs and the CFOs, will also be covered under the health and safety laws of this province. I think that's regrettable, deeply regrettable. We are in fact discriminating against our rural workers who will become workers in the ILOs by denying them coverage which we think is a normal expectation in a civilized society for workers to have; that is, to be covered under health and safety regulations.

The counties and municipal district councils have expressed concern on another account which is economic in a sense. They say they are subjected now to centralized decision-making, that this bill takes away from these councils and these local governments the right to zone, the right to permit, the right to site, the right to make decisions about siting, about permitting, and about zoning the areas and lands under their jurisdiction. That's been taken away from them and centralized in Edmonton, yet this bill if passed will oblige the same local governments to pay part of the cost that will be involved in the approval process, in the permitting process that they will have no control over. So they are saying: why is it that we should be burdened with the additional costs of implementing this bill if it becomes law, yet we also have to lose the power, the authority, the democratic control for whether or not we want these farm operations, these big industrial livestock operations to be sited and permitted in our localities?

Another point, Mr. Chairman, that has to be made again and again until someone is listening and does listen is the issue of the potential environmental risks involved with this. One of the foremost authorities on water pollution, on environmental pollution works right here in this city in one of the best universities in the country, one of the best scientists in the world, Professor David Schindler. He went public just a few days ago expressing his grave concern about what this act might unleash and lead to if we don't address the threat that it poses to the environment, particularly the quality of water, the contamination of soil. He does warn us, so we won't be able to say that no one told us this. He said: look, you are creating serious potential hazards insofar as the health of Albertans who'll be living around the areas where ILOs will be established. He talks about Walkerton in Ontario. The Ontario government was just as smug and as insensitive to the potential dangers that the operations in other environmental-related activities posed to the health of Ontario citizens.

So why is it that we are not even willing to learn and simply give the arguments which have nothing to do with really sustaining the family farm or sustaining the economic well-being of our rural areas but primarily seem to be designed to promote large-scale, industrial-sized livestock operations in the province? Thus everything else has to be sacrificed on the altar of enabling, permitting, and encouraging large-scale investment regardless of where it comes from, regardless of how long it stays here and whether or not it creates permanent jobs, permanent economic growth that benefits all residents of rural areas.

It's a one-sided piece of legislation which seems to be designed to encourage, I guess, capital, not necessarily from within Alberta or from within Canada, wherever it comes from, to come here and feel welcome and in so doing risk the health, the working environment, and loss of taxes, all of these things together. If we put all of these things together, the potential costs of allowing this bill to go through and the benefits that may accrue from it to some rural Albertans, I wonder if the balance really would suggest that we need to proceed with it.

A couple of other points, Mr. Chairman. Organic farming in this province is growing as an agricultural activity. Organic farming is growing, and lots of Albertans are concerned about the health consequences of the kind of meat we produce through these industrial operations. I think my colleague from Edmonton-Riverview drew attention to the concern about the excessive use of antibiotics. Lots of Albertans who are in growing numbers switching to consuming organically produced vegetables, meats, and dairy products are asking those questions. What chances do they have to take to consume these products? They're concerned about it. They think that the industrially produced agricultural products, particularly meats from these confined feeding operations with thousands and thousands of animals stacked together one over the other and fed antibiotics to keep them healthy and hungry at the same time, hormones and what have you – this kind of production is not good for our own health. We are concerned. The minister of health would concur with me that we shouldn't be producing those kinds of foods and encouraging other Albertans, Canadians, and others to be consuming foods which might potentially produce certain health crises, certain health problems because the health care system is expensive. Why do we want to create more health problems? Why do we take the risk of creating more health problems through the production of these agricultural products and then complain that we can't economically afford the health system we have?

These things seem to work at cross-purposes. The health minister doesn't want to speak on what the minister of agriculture might be promoting, and the minister of agriculture doesn't want to pay much attention to what are the causes of growing health problems and therefore health costs. So I suggest that the Assembly seriously address these concerns before it proceeds further with this bill.

With these comments, Mr. Chairman, I will close and let my colleague take the floor.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I have listened with interest to the last couple of speakers, to their remarks regarding Bill 28. I, too, have some concerns about this bill that I certainly would like to get on the record this evening at this stage. I certainly can understand why it is necessary to regulate such operations or such practices. Certainly there's not one member of this Assembly that wants to turn our entire agricultural economic sector into 21st century sharecropping, but I would caution all hon. members about going ahead with this bill.

Earlier this afternoon I asked an hon. member from across the way about the consultation process that had been initiated by the hon. Member for Leduc and two other colleagues of this Assembly, specifically if they had traveled or studied the hog industry in and around Brandon, Manitoba. There has been a lot of development there certainly since 1998. In 1997 we closed a major hog slaughtering facility in this city, and the enterprise, I believe McCain Foods or an associate corporation, got well over 10 percent of the money to develop their plant in Brandon from various levels of government. Certainly that, as far as I know, is not the practice that is going to occur in this province. I didn't think that was fair, but certainly there are other reasons than government money that attracted this facility to southern Manitoba. Of course, one of those is feed grains. Not only are feed grains accessible, but the price is right, as it was explained to me. And labour is available. There is a willing pool of labour to work in the slaughtering facility and on the farms surrounding it that are going to produce all the hogs.

Now earlier, in 1996, there was a great deal of excitement and enthusiasm about the future of the industry in this province, Mr.

Chairman. Surrounding the city, if you were to go to Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, there is certainly the capability for feed grain there. You go to the district of Redwater. There were plans for quite a large, extensive hog operation in an arc starting in the northwest and going around to the northeast of this city. That did not come to pass, but perhaps it will with this bill. I don't know if it is in the long-term interests of the province to have these huge factory farms.

This gets back to my question about what sort of analysis was done, because Manitoba is essentially five years ahead of us. What sort of analysis has been done on the Manitoba operations by this committee? I can recognize the fact that this is an issue. Many people are frustrated. If the consultation process didn't get to Manitoba, did the committee at least look at the Virginias? There are also ILOs there, and in North and South Carolina there are huge operations. If the committee had a good, careful look at exactly what has occurred there – also, I can't help but think about Taiwan. It used to be the island of Formosa, Mr. Chairman. You know, the Taiwan Sugar Corporation has expressed an interest in establishing a foothold in Alberta. I'm interested to know from any of the hon. members: what sort of practices are allowed in Taiwan? Are they strict? What sort of limitations are put on extensive livestock operations in Taiwan? We can go through this issue, and of course we think of Holland. We think of some of the European countries and the regulations they have. In fact, a lot of farmers want to leave the Low Countries, as they're affectionately described, and come to Canada particularly to farm in Ontario, western Canada, Prince Edward Island because we don't have the same regulations.

Now, when we recognize that this legislation is attempting to meet a need, that's fine. Mr. Chairman, I was driving out towards Alliance. Alliance – and many people may not know this – is a town and it's a fine town. The people were looking into the future whenever they planted all the beautiful trees in Alliance. I was out there recently and pulled into the cafe, and this very issue came up. I sat quietly and listened to the discussion. The discussion centred around the fact that the people in the cafe – and I had not heard this before – had felt let down by their government. I asked why. They felt that the provincial government had a highway 2 mentality. I asked again: what is a highway 2 mentality? They said: well, the government is concerned about development in a 50-kilometre zone east of highway 2 and a 50-kilometre zone west of highway 2 between Edmonton and Calgary, and they're forgetting about the rest of us.

Now, this may be a recognition of that oversight, and this may be the need that's trying to be met: to develop other parts of the province and other industries in other parts of the province. Now, Mr. Chairman, we can certainly see, for instance, that towards Alliance and out that way, as the oil and the gas reservoirs are depleted, for an industry to move and locate there is a sound policy, but I don't know if an ILO is that sound a policy. I'm just not convinced. Do the risks outweigh the benefits?

We can only think of the town of Brooks. Of course, there's a large meat packing industry, American owned, in that town, and there have been some consequences from this industry. There are problems recruiting and retaining staff. There are issues around housing. There are issues around schools. Many people, as I understand it, commute from Calgary because there is a shortage of housing, and that's a long commute, a very long commute. If you go south, Mr. Chairman, to another meat packing facility about a 40-minute drive south of Calgary, you have the same problem. So when we create these massive farms, are we perhaps creating the same problems that have been experienced in Brooks and to the south of Calgary in High River? Perhaps all this has been studied and analyzed and my concerns don't have merit, but I believe they do.

In relation to the comments that were given earlier by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I would like at this time, Mr. Chairman, to remind all members of the Assembly that it's hardly 18 months ago when there was a tragic double fatality in an Alberta workplace that was not covered by WCB, as I understand it. The two individuals were working for a company – I believe it was called the Drain Doctor, and I may stand corrected – and they left Calgary and went out somewhere within an hour's drive of Calgary to unclog a drain on a huge farm. The breathing apparatus was not used in the job, and unfortunately these two individuals lost their lives. There was no WCB coverage, as I understand it, not because this was a company that wasn't covered, but it was their location. It was on some sort of corporate farm. It is my view that if an individual is collecting pay, whether it be in a gas plant, whether it be in a bank, whether it be in this Legislative Assembly, or whether it be on a farm, if they're collecting a cheque, they should be covered by WCB. That is not the rule in this province, and I think it's about time we deal with that issue, long before we deal with this bill.

Now, Mr. Chairman, many members talked about the accumulation of waste with these enterprises. I would like to share a couple of facts with all hon. members, and that is that the average hog produces three times as much waste as a human does in a single day and also that from birth to market a hog produces one cubic metre of waste. How is this going to be handled? I was assured that there were going to be no leaks in the holding lagoons, that this would never happen. I hope, for the sake of our environment, that it does not.

I spoke earlier about the Dutch government and the regulations in the Low Countries, and I don't think there needs to be anything further said about that.

In conclusion, I would like to ask if, in the studies and the consultation process that has occurred, there has been any consideration taken regarding property tax reductions in areas around ILOs. [interjection] Now, I hear from across the way that properties will increase in value. This would be very interesting, and of course one way of indicating this would be to check in West Virginia or perhaps check in a municipality anywhere around Brandon, Manitoba, to see how they're dealing with this, because there certainly are consequences to intensive livestock operations. Mr. Chairman, I understand there are individuals in this Assembly who have constant contact with municipal officials in Brandon, so that's going to make all our jobs that much easier. They will be that much easier. This is an important piece of legislation, and to consider that an intensive livestock operation will change the entire community if it's permitted, we can't take this legislation lightly.

Under this legislation the municipalities will still only be able to designate discretionary and accepted-use provisions for intensive livestock operations. Now, the NRCB is going to be the final authority on approval of an ILO or a factory farm. I don't know if in the spirit of this government that's precisely what they want to do. I can understand where they want to get rid of the highway 2 mentality and have economic development all over the province. I can understand that, but I can't understand where this legislation will benefit Albertans 10 and 20 years down the road. I just don't think it's the right way to go.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports Bill 28 with amendments. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

Bill 22
Builders' Lien Amendment Act, 2001

MR. DUCHARME: Mr. Speaker, it is both an honour and a privilege to move third reading of Bill 22, Builders' Lien Amendment Act, 2001.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a third time]

Bill 23
Regulated Accounting Profession
Amendment Act, 2001

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Regulated Accounting Profession Act, or RAPA, brought the governing legislation for three accounting organizations under one statute and replaced the Chartered Accountants Act, the Certified Management Accountants Act, and the Certified General Accountants Act. Since RAPA was proclaimed, a few amendments were identified to fine-tune the legislation by clarifying its wording and updating its provisions and references. I wish to acknowledge the collaborative work of the accounting organizations – the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta, the society of Certified Management Accountants of Alberta, and the Certified General Accountants Association of Alberta – together with Alberta Human Resources and Employment in developing these amendments.

With that said, it's a pleasure for me to move third reading of Bill 23, the Regulated Accounting Profession Amendment Act, 2001, and I hope this Assembly will support this important piece of legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Bill 23, the Regulated Accounting Profession Amendment Act, which the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie has described, is certainly a piece of legislation that the Official Opposition at this time is quite willing to support. Many organizations have expressed their support for this legislation.

I would at this time like to remind members of this Assembly that this legislation is considered by some to be just a change that is housekeeping in nature but that it is a bill that demonstrates to all members of this Assembly that perhaps we need to take a closer scrutiny of all legislation that comes before the Assembly. I refer in this case to the original Regulated Accounting Profession Act, which originally passed, but of course we're back sooner than later to make some improvements to it. Some would consider this to be little more than corrections of drafting errors, but one has to be diligent, I believe.

With those few remarks at this time, Mr. Speaker, I again would like to say that we are fully supportive of this initiative. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a third time]

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 30
Appropriation (Supplementary Supply)
Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE CHAIRMAN: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm happy to respond to Bill 30 in committee tonight. We have a few comments in addition to those ones that I shared with the Assembly on Thursday past, when we had estimates before us.

We didn't get through the estimates in one afternoon, which is quite a common practice because there's so much money requested in them, Mr. Chairman. We only got through three out of a possible five departments in terms of the questions and comments that we had, because there is never enough time allocated for the money that's requested at those times. We find the same thing when we see the bill as it comes before us, Bill 30, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2). A lot of money is asked for. A lot of it is asked for because this government in most cases has an inability to plan and forecast properly. There are some exceptions to that. One of those would be the requests for fires, because that's one of the areas where you can never actually forecast what the demand is going to be. However, as we've said many other times in this Assembly, it would be quite fair and reasonable to put aside a contingency fund based on a five-year rolling average of what those kinds of costs are so that when they did come back for supplementary estimates, it would be minor in nature and not substantive, as we see.

I do find, Mr. Chairman, that when I read through the second-quarter fiscal update released on November 21, 2001, that we were given, there are a few things that actually are quite hard to swallow when we take a look at how the government is pitching this new need for money and the manner in which they account for what it is they need. For instance, on page 1, where they talk about the 2001-02 forecast, they list the highlights. Under the highlights they talk about implementing "corrective actions to maintain a balanced budget." What they don't put in here is that in terms of corrective actions, what they're actually talking about is cutting 21 direct, on-the-ground programs that enhance children's lives in this province, that enhance their lives not just in terms of providing extras or trips or new clothes or skateboards. We're talking about taking kids off the street, off drugs, out of abusive families, giving them a network of social support. Those were the kinds of programs that were cut.

We've seen the Minister of Children's Services state day after day in question period that those programs closest to the children weren't cut, Mr. Chairman, but in fact in this city we know of 21 programs that we firmly believe were programs that were closest to the children and which directly affected them and made a huge difference in the quality of their lives, in fact perhaps even in terms of their having lives and certainly in terms of giving them any kind of a hand up, that this government so commonly says that it likes to give to people. Those were not hand-up programs that they cut. Those were very necessary and integral support services. That's what this government means when they say implementing corrective action.

They state in the next highlight that in their corrective actions were deferred infrastructure projects, many projects that have been put off for years because of the kinds of restraints, which become critical in terms of sustainability and that this government doesn't talk about. Also lapses in energy assistance programs, energy assistance programs that we wouldn't have needed in the first place if this government didn't totally foul up energy restructuring here at the beginning of the year. It looks like we're taking a look at higher prices and all kinds of ongoing problems there over this next winter. And a freeze on hiring, Mr. Chairman, with the exception of Crown prosecutors. In some of these areas of hiring, particularly social workers, there is a desperate need in this province, not just a minor need but a desperate need.

You know, the problem is that the government doesn't use judgment when they do these things. They do these across-the-board cuts, which sometimes means that programs that are very necessary are not sustainable. That brings up the key problem of how this government decides. Everything for them is dollars and cents. It's money in, money out. If you're not getting as much money in, you just arbitrarily cut, but that isn't really the role of government, Mr. Chairman. The role of government is to provide for those basic needs of the people that the people have decided the government should provide. That means not only a universal health care system in this province but some universality of education. We're starting to see a huge erosion in that regard, particularly in terms of tuition fees.

So we end up getting a two-tiered health care system. We end up getting a two-tiered education system. We see the huge increase in private schools. Many parents send their kids to private schools now because they want them to be associating only with children who have parents of like minds, those who have a high focus on academic scholarship. Well, the problem with that is that you ghettoize those left in the public system. We see that happening.

Tuition fees too. This government says that, well, you can get a student loan. It's true that you can, but first of all you need to know how to access the student loan program. You need to be earning below a specific amount of money, and many middle-income families these days just can't afford to have their children access those systems. They're making a little bit too much money, but they can't afford to send their child to university with paid tuition, so it forces the children either to not go or to leave home for some period of time and then apply for a student loan. So where is the promotion of family values in that kind of system, Mr. Chairman? I say that's a totally skewed kind of perspective for them to take.

The last part of this, the second bullet, in terms of corrective actions, is the discretionary spending. You know, discretionary spending to me means potato chips, not potatoes, Mr. Chairman. Now, we've seen a lot of potatoes go by the wayside in the last week, with potentially more on the cutting block in the near future if we see a continued decline in energy prices. The kind of destabilizing of our economy wasn't even necessary in the first place had this government ever taken our good idea of essentially bomb-proofing this government by putting in a stabilization fund, and they wouldn't be in the kind of problem they are in right now. That fund would be well funded, given the surpluses we've had in the last few years, and the government would be able to access that fund to flatten out the revenue stream and stop us from having the kinds of peaks and valleys that we've seen in prior times. This government I believe felt that the good times were going to roll forever and didn't foresee, weren't able to forecast the kinds of falls in energy prices we've had now and therefore were very shortsighted in their planning. They still can't seem to get a handle on this, which is a real deficit from their perspective. We hope they start to listen to some of the people who are advising them in terms of finding ways to level out the revenue stream, because what they're doing is really not too bright.

Speaking of the revenue stream, I want to speak for just a moment to what they do with the surpluses they book forward to pay off the debt in the future. I'm seeing if I can find this. Oh, here we go: accumulated debt, including cash set aside for future debt repayment, is forecasted to decline. Well, tell me, Mr. Chairman, what is the justification for setting cash aside for future debt repayment rather than an ongoing set-aside of the existing revenue stream when we're in these kinds of cost reductions? It's a real problem. This is, I think, only because the Premier wants to see the debt paid off by the 2005 anniversary, and that's his ticket out of this particular job. That's the big thing he wants to have done before he retires, the debt paid off, but at what cost?

There's a huge cost of him doing that when we don't have these huge surpluses we've seen in the last little while, so he needs to show some leadership in this area in terms of putting people first in this province rather than putting his own agenda first. If oil prices skyrocket back up to where they have been before, if gas prices increase to where they have been before, then fine; let him go ahead with his accelerated debt repayment plan and nobody is the worse for that having happened. But in this kind of situation that we find ourselves in right now, people do get hurt by what he's doing. He needs to really show some leadership and statesmanlike behaviour in terms of saying: "You know what? The debt can wait." We need to feed families, we need to provide support for families, and we need to ensure that our children are educated adequately to a level so that they can compete in the global marketplace. We need to ensure that those kinds of pillars of our society are put in place, are well funded, and are maintained before he takes a look at the other options.

So what he's doing now I believe is very shortsighted and is definitely a problem from the perspective of funding core programs and thinking about what the core service of government really is, which is not to balance the budget. It is to properly provide for people in the province within the dollars they have available to them. That ends up in a balanced budget, Mr. Chairman, but the filter that you use to make the decisions on where the money goes, how it's spent, and how it's accounted for is quite different.

Speaking of how the money is accounted for brings to mind the question the Finance minister responded to today. She needs to get a little bit of an update from her technical people on the accounting side, because she either didn't understand the question or she was particularly leading the people of the province down a path that is absolutely incorrect in terms of talking about how revenues are booked and used to pay forward and pay back debts. It has been the policy of this government to accrue revenues, to account for revenues on an accrual basis, which means that anything meant to be earned in this fiscal year-end is counted in this year regardless of when it's received. That's fine. Those are generally accepted accounting practices, and that's a good way to operate. But for the rest of the cash flow in the province they operate on a cash basis regardless of whether it's actually received within the 12 months that it was booked in or not, and that is wrong, Mr. Chairman. If it's an accrual basis for one system, it's an accrual basis for every system. There are a couple of accountants in here who know that to be true, and we would certainly appreciate it if they could stand up and speak to that issue or at least privately take the Minister of Finance aside and ensure that she understands that if they're going to play fast and loose with the books of this province, then at least she doesn't state otherwise on the record in question period.

So, Mr. Chairman, many concerns. I am completely in disagreement with the way they allocate their economic cushions and in most cases with how they take their corrective actions. I'm completely in disagreement with what they term to be highlights of this particular budget, which I think are anything but highlights. They show very poorly on this government and they show very poorly in terms of how the government reports. Not just the Official Opposition think this. We have seen many, many reports over the years from the Auditor General on this, not the least of which was the 2000-2001 report, where we see the Auditor General taking no less than five pages for serious concerns about the manner in which this government talks about accounting issues and inadequate progress on how the money is spent. Those include Health and Wellness, where they talk about risks, that costs escalate but results don't improve. So what that means is poor management, plain and simple. There is no excuse for it. You should get at least the same benefit out of the dollars you're spending, at least that if not better.

In these days of continuous improvement as a base level for industry to perform, costs escalating when results don't improve is simply not acceptable. It isn't acceptable in industry. It isn't acceptable in government. He states where the Department of Health and Wellness "continually spends more money on our health system without knowing the value of that extra spending." How can that be? They are clearly not doing their job. He goes on to talk about that in some detail, not the least of which, Mr. Chairman, is talking about findings and recommendations from three years ago that still apply today.

This is a government that tries to tell the people of this province that they know what they are doing, but the Auditor General still states for Health and Wellness, which is the biggest dollar fund in this province, that they can't figure out what they are doing still, after three years. After three years of having assistance from the Auditor General, it is a real shame. So that's a problem.

He states that "progress is unsatisfactory," and that his office "will continue to recommend ways to improve the management of health resources since that is our job." He'll "continue to report on our performance in terms of whether our recommendations are implemented," which haven't been so far, Mr. Chairman. He also says that "the challenge is to get senior people to invest time, effort, and personal commitment in resolving the issues outstanding since restructuring of the health system began."

Now, you know that leadership starts at the top, Mr. Chairman. The Auditor General is stating here that the problems come with senior people, and I agree with him. That's where the problems come. That's where they need to start addressing them, and they're just not doing it. [interjection] Well, that's right. My colleague from Edmonton-Riverview makes a very good point.

The Auditor General goes on to talk about the ministry business plans. Serious problems with those since the beginning of time, when they first implemented them, which I think, Mr. Chairman, was when I was first elected, in 1993.

It's one thing for them to name these things and to say that they're going to do them. It's quite another thing for them to actually do them, and they haven't. The Auditor General previously recommended that the costs of core businesses be reported. It's hard to believe that they talk about costing for businesses and they have business plans, but they don't actually do it. So that's a problem.

He states that "approximately one third of ministries did not adequately link costs to . . . core businesses." Well, what are they reporting them for? They're wasting everybody's time, Mr. Chairman, not the least of which is the time of all those civil servants who are churning out these documents and churning out these numbers without ever linking the cost to the core businesses. So that's a problem that needs to be addressed.

Performance measures and targets. Again, we've been talking about this since '93. The Auditor General "previously recommended the performance measures and targets in business plans be improved." They state that the quality of measures has improved, but few ministries disclosed the external factors that affect performance. You know, that's directly linked to the motion we brought in this afternoon in the Chamber, Mr. Chairman, that this government voted down because they do not want to be accountable. So that's a problem.

The Auditor General talks about recommending that "best practices in business planning be stated," once again a very common practice in industry, the very industry that this government prides itself on following and recommending, but not a practice that this government wants to implement.

So all in all, Mr. Chairman, a very shoddy performance by the government at this stage. It's very disappointing, no surprise to me, but very disappointing. We hope they can do better when they bring in what will likely be another fiscal update before the end of this year comes, and more supplementary estimates. Not likely that they'll be able to get it right yet, but let's hope they don't do it on the backs of children.

Bill 28
Agricultural Operation Practices
Amendment Act, 2001

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development on behalf of the hon. Member for Leduc.

MRS. McCLELLAN: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I would move third reading of Bill 28, the Agricultural Operation Practices Amendment Act, 2001, on behalf of the Member for Leduc.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to speak briefly about this bill. Much has been made about difficulties in siting industrial livestock operations in different parts of the province. Much has been made about the conflicts which can exist. Much has been made by the government about the need for it to step in and ensure that things are done more rationally where local jurisdictions have failed in the task. Much has been made by a number of people about the advantages of having parts in this bill that deal with consistent regulations and so on for environment and for siting. Those are some of the parts of the bill that people have supported, but I don't think these things really capture the underlying motivation for the bill or the essence of the bill.

What we have here is a tool which the government plans to use in order to facilitate larger scale, including some potentially very large-scale, operations which may in fact have a significant amount of foreign ownership. As the Premier said – and I attended his news conference in which he talked about increasing the number of hogs in Alberta from around 2 million to around 12 million, a 10 million increase. So what I see and what we see in the third party here, in the New Democrat opposition, is that this bill is a tool to override local opposition, to regulate it, to be sure, but primarily to ensure that large-scale operations, including those on the scale of the proposed Taiwan Sugar plant, can be sited in this province whether or not the people of this province agree. They can increase the pig population to the point where it is four times the population of the province, and you don't have to go farther than southern Manitoba, but you can go into the Carolinas in the United States and you can see all kinds of situations in which this particular policy has been followed. It doesn't matter which party it is, Mr. Speaker, it's not a good policy. Certainly there are very, very serious problems as a result.

So the province's vision in agriculture is one which will squeeze out the small producer and the family farm, and we heard some comments earlier from the Minister of Infrastructure expressing that concern. We're going to industrialize agriculture, and we're going to intensify agriculture. There will be great consequences not just for the environment of this province, Mr. Speaker, but there will be great social implications as well, because the small producer who owns his or her own land will be driven out of business and will become an employee working for a wage for some big foreign company. That is the future that this government has in mind for many Albertans with this bill.

I want to just come back, Mr. Speaker, to the question of what consequences might exist for the environment of this province as a result of this. Don't forget that this comes on top of the same policy that's gone on for many, many years in this province with respect to the oil and gas industry, where its rights have been put ahead of the rights of the ordinary citizens of this province, and then the forestry industry, and now they're going to do the same thing. Foreign-controlled, industrial-level, intensive agriculture is the vision that this province has for its people.

We're going to have a very serious problem with pig manure. I know we'll hear some tittering from the backbenchers over there, but we did some calculations, and I referred to them in an earlier comment. If there are 12 million hogs in this province, we break it down that about 1 million of them would be dry sows. They will produce between 11.3 and 15.9 litres of manure per pig per day times 365 days times 1 million dry sows: 5 billion litres of pig manure. We're assuming that there would be 2 million nursing sows which would produce 7.3 billion litres of pig manure, that there would be 3 million starter pigs for 2.2 billion litres of pig manure, that there would be 3 million grower pigs for 5.8 billion litres of pig manure, and that there would be 3 million finisher pigs for 12 billion litres. A grand total, Mr. Speaker, every year in this province, if this government has its way, of 32.3 billion litres of pig manure, and if it was spread evenly over the province, our calculations are that we would all be ankle deep in the stuff. Now, it may be somewhat higher in rural areas, and we're hoping it will be somewhat less in urban areas, but clearly that exceeds any practical measure of containment and treatment and disposal. We think this is a very, very serious problem.

Now the Minister of Infrastructure, when he spoke today, talked a little bit about his ideas. Certainly he argued very strongly that there's a very small chance of contamination of groundwater by this process. You know, he was the minister of agriculture and he may know better than I about that, but there are certainly cases of contamination of groundwater which we have looked at in other jurisdictions, so it is not impossible. On the other hand, there are plenty of examples of contamination of surface water by these huge containment ponds. There aren't adequate regulations around those containment ponds. They kill fish, they contaminate with bacteria, and they contaminate with chemicals. They are a real threat to the environment of this province.

Now, I want to come . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: What do you think of pig shit?

MR. MASON: Well, I don't know if that would be a parliamentary term or not. I was tempted to make use of it, but I prefer thinking of these lagoons maybe in terms of having not a song for the province but a provincial ballet, and we might call it Swine Lake, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps one of the members opposite can propose a private member's bill to establish a provincial ballet.

Mr. Speaker, the Tory vision for agriculture in this province is one that will contaminate the environment, drive small producers out of business, and create an odour that will waft from one end of the province to the other. I urge hon. members to vote against this bill. Hold your noses now or hold your noses for evermore.

[Motion carried; Bill 28 read a third time]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's been a very interesting day, ranging from an official song to an official ballet, potentially. Who knows?

That having been said, I would move that the Assembly stand adjourned until tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; at 9:58 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, November 28, 2001 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 01/11/28
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O God, grant that we the members of our province's Legislature may fulfill our office with honesty and integrity. May our first concern be for the good of all our people. Guide our deliberations this day. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly Mr. Chornovil, Member of Parliament of Ukraine and member of the Committee for the State and the Development of Local and Provincial Government. I would like to welcome Mr. Chornovil and his colleagues: Ms Kravets, head specialist, Ministry of Economics; Mr. Kononenko, deputy head of Sviatoshyn regional government administration; and Mr. Voronin, head of the Secretariat Committee for Government Building, Municipal Self-Government, and Council Activity.

Our friends from Ukraine are visiting Alberta on their official visit under phase 2 of the CIDA-funded Canada/Ukraine legislative and intergovernmental project. This project advances legislative development in Ukraine, which is striving to become more market orientated and grow its economy. Our guests today have come to Alberta to examine Canadian federal/provincial relations, fiscal federalism, and municipal government. At this time I'd like to ask our honoured guests to now please rise in the Speaker's gallery and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table a petition signed by 447 Albertans urging "the Government of Alberta to provide health care coverage for medical supplies for diabetic children . . . financial assistance to their parents to enable them to meet their children's necessary dietary requirements and cover costs incurred in traveling to Diabetes Education and Treatment Centres." A total of 1,447 Albertans have so far signed this petition.

Thank you.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table five copies of the provincial judges and masters in chambers pension plan annual report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 2000. This is pursuant to section 5 of the provincial judges and masters in chambers pension plan regulation Alberta No. 265/88. Members who would like a copy of this annual report can obtain a copy from my office.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table the required number of copies of the annual report for 2001 of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities. As all members know, this is a very active council that works very hard to present issues related to our disability community, and I want to thank our chairperson of that particular council, the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, for his stellar stewardship as well as our own Premier for his good guidance in this regard.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

MR. COUTTS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last spring the Premier asked Government Services to study the issue of lobbyist registration, and today I'm pleased to table five copies of that research report. As we committed, the report identifies what's being done in other provinces and federally on lobbyist registration, the cost of the bureaucracy needed to run such a registry, and on the basis of those factors whether or not a lobbyist registry should be established in Alberta.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. BOUTILIER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. Pursuant to Standing Order 37(1) it's my pleasure to table the requisite number of copies of the Safety Codes Council 2000 annual report. The council, of course, is a valued partner of this government and of Municipal Affairs. It works to ensure the safety of all Albertans.

My second tabling today is pursuant to Standing Order 37(3). I'd like to table the requisite number of copies of a letter I sent to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry in response to his good questions of November 27 on public consultation relative to objective-based building codes and the good work we're doing in partnership with the National Research Council.

MR. DUCHARME: M. le Président, il me fait grand plaisir de déposer cinq copies de la Charte du Jeune Citoyen Francophone du 21<sup>e</sup> Siècle, créée par 85 étudiants provenant d'une quarantaine d'états et de gouvernements de la Francophonie réunis à l'Assemblée nationale du Québec pour le premier Parlement Francophone des Jeunes en juillet dernier. Cette charte s'articule autour de cinq grands thèmes: l'éducation, la santé, et les questions sociales; la culture, la communication, et la nouvelle technologie; les libertés fondamentales et la démocratie; la prévention des conflits; et l'environnement.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table five copies of the Charter of the Young Francophone Citizen of the 21st Century, created by 85 students from 40 Francophone states and governments meeting at the Quebec National Assembly last July for the first Francophone Youth Parliament. This charter centres around five main themes: education, health, and social questions; culture, communication, and new technologies; fundamental liberties and democracy; prevention of conflicts; and the environment.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table five copies of a letter sent to the Minister of Transportation and copied to the Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert and to me, authored by the mayor and council of the city of St. Albert, endorsing the St. Albert RCMP Community Advisory Committee's resolution that asks the government to put in place regulations under the Traffic Safety Act making the wearing of approved bicycle helmets mandatory for bicyclists of all ages.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

MR. SHARIFF: Mr. Speaker, I wish to table five copies of an information sheet prepared by the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters that informs us that over 9,000 abused women did not receive shelter services last year.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table five copies of a brochure from the Mill Woods Welcome Centre for Immigrants. They had an open house celebrating their new location and paying tribute to their volunteers on Friday, November 23, 2001.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of the fall newsletter from the Terra Association, which is a very good, hardworking association in my riding for young mothers and teen mothers. It's outlining their new family literacy program and their services for young fathers.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I have three tablings today. The first is an open letter representing 48 principals in Beaumont, Calmar, Devon, Leduc, New Sarepta, Thorsby, and Warburg in part indicating that parents are often required to fund-raise to maintain libraries, purchase new equipment, and provide important learning opportunities for students.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the licensing information put out by the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission.

My final tabling is 41 requests from Albertans who want to urge the government to vote in favour of the class size targets bill, to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the required number of copies of 40 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

1:40

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first one is a letter, an e-mail, from Natasha Wiebe of the department of pediatrics at the University of Alberta suggesting that the Ministry of Children's Services' cuts are breaking faith with the families it serves.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a news release from the Edmonton Aboriginal Coalition for Children and Families. This coalition is organizing a community public meeting on November 29 at 9:30 in the morning at the Canadian Native Friendship Centre, which is located at 11205-101st Street.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter addressed to all MLAs from Penny Davis, RN and bachelor of science in nursing, where she urges all members to support Bill 209, and she goes on to say that this is extremely important, that the safety of our children is worth it.

The second tabling is from a teacher that wrote to me, and he goes on to say that he is very concerned over the Conservative Government's apathy with regard to teacher's concerns over education funding. I know I speak for a great many of my colleagues when I say that I'm feeling extremely undervalued, underpaid and ignored. I am very concerned that the Government is underestimating the level of commitment that teachers are feeling as we enter into a potentially volatile contract year.

Thank you very much.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Leduc. Happy birthday.

MR. KLAPSTEIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature three visitors from the constituency of Leduc who have come to see their Legislature in operation. They are Paul Cissell, Leroy Paulson, and Andre Sirois, and I'd ask the House to extend to them the traditional warm greeting.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to introduce 43 special guests from Whitecourt-St. Anne, 35 students from the Grasmere school accompanied by three teachers: Mrs. Hansen, Mrs. Brayford, and Mrs. VandenBiggelaar. There are five helpers: Mrs. Renz, Mrs. Ehrenholz, Mrs. Tiedeman, Mrs. Schroeder, and Mrs. Jacques. I'd ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the House 96 constituents who are visiting us from St. Albert's Muriel Martin school. Three teachers, 14 parent helpers, and 79 students are a great example of why Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert is one of the best constituencies in the province. These bright, energetic students participated in your Christmas decorating program this morning and are accompanied by three teachers, Mrs. Kane, Mrs. Boyd, and Miss Griffiths, and fourteen parent helpers: Cathy McLelland, Marion Jasinski, Chris Patterson, Cynthia Olson, Pamela Radford, Mark Brown, Sandy Graveline, Jason Wood, Mrs. Olson, Mrs. Chies, Mr. Born, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Schimpf, and Mrs. Joshi. They are seated in both galleries, and I would ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

MR. DUCHARME: M. le President, j'ai le plaisir de vous presenter ainsi qu' à l'Assemblée Legislative M. Marc-Andre Vincent, étudiant à l'école Maurice-Lavallee d'Edmonton. Marc-Andre fut choisi pour représenter l'Alberta à la première rencontre du Parlement Francophone des Jeunes, qui a eu lieu en juillet dernier au Québec. Marc-Andre faisait partie de l'équipe responsable pour la rédaction de la Charte que j'ai déposé à la table il y a quelques minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly Mr. Marc-Andre Vincent, student at Maurice-Lavallee school in Edmonton. Marc-Andre was selected to represent Alberta at the first meeting of the Francophone Youth Parliament, which took place this past summer. Marc-Andre was part of the team responsible for drafting the charter which I tabled earlier today. Marc-Andre is seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that he please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to introduce two very special friends who are in your gallery this afternoon, and in doing so, I want to thank the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose for allowing me this privilege to introduce two long-standing friends who are accompanying our special delegation from Ukraine. They are, first of all, Mr. Jim Jacuta, who does a yeoman's job working at the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies at our university, and the second is Yuri Loutsenko, who is providing interpretive services. [remarks in Ukrainian]

I welcome you both along with all the special guests who are with you from Ukraine. I greet you warmly. [as submitted]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Dr. Jacob Ross, who I believe is seated in the visitors' gallery. Dr. Ross is a postdoctoral research fellow at the Perinatal Research Centre at the University of Alberta. He comes to the University of Alberta from Adelaide, Australia. He is one of the many distinguished scholars attracted to the University of Alberta, many of whom I have the distinct honour of representing in this Assembly. I would ask Dr. Ross to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Mrs. Patricia Gordon. Mrs. Gordon is here to observe the working of the Assembly and the contributions her granddaughter is making to its operation. Mrs. Gordon is the grandmother of Maya Gordon, a page of the Assembly. Mrs. Gordon is seated in the members' gallery. I would now ask Mrs. Gordon to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly two excellent volunteers in the community of St. Albert. They are Heather and Gareth Jones. Gareth is also a member of the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Gaming Revenue for Children's Services

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government relies on gaming revenue to fund essential services. Given that this is the case, we would expect that all essential programs are given their fair share of gaming revenue, but according to this year's budget figures some programs are more essential than others. My question is to the Minister of Gaming. Why did the racing industry renewal program receive 18 times more funding than the fetal alcohol initiative?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to say that in Alberta we have a unique model where all gaming revenue goes into the Alberta lottery fund, and that Alberta lottery fund is used for the benefit of our communities through charities, not-for-profit organizations, and also for public initiatives. Each spring we vote on the lottery estimate, and it is through that vote that it is determined whether the money will go to charitable foundations or whether it will go to public initiatives.

MS CARLSON: To the Minister of Gaming: why did the Calgary Stampede receive seven times more revenue than the entire Children's Services department?

MR. STEVENS: The Alberta lottery fund as it relates to public initiatives is not to be used for operational matters but, rather, to be used for capital. So if you take an analysis of each of the ministries which receive funding, you will find that there are specific projects under each ministry which are to have the money spent on them and those projects only. The one exception that I can think of is relative to the Ministry of Health and Wellness, where through the Alberta lottery fund we fund AADAC's budget in its entirety, which includes operational funding.

MRS. NELSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, I feel compelled to supplement the answer. In the hon. member's question she left the impression that Children's Services had not received its fair share of budget dollars in this fiscal plan. Quite clearly, Children's Services in the overall budget received $648 million in funding. The Calgary Stampede through lottery allocations received I believe it was $7.1 million. So, please, let's not play that game; that's not fair.

MS CARLSON: We're talking about lottery funding to Children's Services, and that minister heard the question.

Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Children's Services then: how does this minister defend a policy that chooses to fund horses over children in need?

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, quite frankly, programs like fetal alcohol syndrome do not use capital dollars. Some of the prerequisites for funding are quite different. If in fact the hon. member is concerned that we should be exploring dollars from gaming revenues or liquor revenues to fund programs, we're currently reviewing a program in Manitoba, where they are looking at the dollar revenue possibilities from the sale of liquor. I believe they've already enacted a program. We're going to look at the results of that program. We've had a lot of willingness from partners that are distributing alcohol throughout Alberta, through the bottling agencies and so on, to get involved in the program.

There has been no request specifically for lottery funding for Children's Services because we've been receiving funds from general revenue and have not made it a target for revenues for any particular area.

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, once again I have to get up. The hon. member across has made an innuendo that is an unwarranted assertion as to the government's priorities, and I would ask her to withdraw that, because she knows perfectly well that we have put a main focus on Children's Services by being one of the few governments that I'm aware of that has a full department that is focused on children's services in addition to our support for families in addition to our support for aboriginal children. To indicate through innuendo that there's any priority that is different is unwarranted, and I would ask her to withdraw that and do the right thing.

THE SPEAKER: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

School Fund-raising

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Parents are working casinos to raise funds for schools. The Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission rules state that casino proceeds may be used for "providing equipment, supplies or programs to educate students. Not included are social or recreational activities." My first question is to the Minister of Gaming. Will the minister confirm that schools buying textbooks, mathematics equipment, and library books have done so under this provision?

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think it's important to understand that we have a unique model in the province of Alberta. It's called a charitable model. The casinos and bingos are operated by charities through licences granted by the AGLC, and each year, as a result of the charitable model, some $171 million is provided to charity for good works in our communities throughout the province. Some of those groups are without a doubt school advisory groups. They make application and are granted licences.

I would refer the matter to the hon. Minister of Learning, who has on a regular basis commented on the appropriateness of using funds for textbooks.

DR. OBERG: Again, Mr. Speaker, I don't want to delay the Assembly here. That question has been answered numerous times. They are not allowed to use the money for textbooks. The Alberta School Boards Association has said no. When it comes to the Edmonton public school board, they've said no. I've said no, and the school boards have said no.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. Then my question is to the Minister of Learning, Mr. Speaker. Given that school-run casinos can only fund education programs, why does the minister stand by his claim that parents are only fund-raising for extras?

DR. OBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, if these regulations do say that, then obviously the regulations need to be taken a look at. That's what this government is there for, to take a look at regulations such as this.

The bottom line is that they are to be used for extras. Casino-derived revenues can be used for things such as school uniforms, trips to Europe, band trips, all these other types of things. They're not to be used for the core supplies of schools. Unfortunately, that's the way it is.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. My final question is to the Minister of Learning, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister's promised review of school financing result in a formula that ensures that parents need only fund-raise for what he calls the extras?

DR. OBERG: Mr. Speaker, that is what is occurring now, or that is what is supposed to occur right now. Certainly anything that we do with regards to funding on the funding formula will be consistent with that, so I have no problems at all with agreeing to that.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Implementation of Auditor General's Recommendations

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In his latest report the Auditor General said that "the Department of Health and Wellness has not made adequate progress in implementing past recommendations." The Auditor General points out that he doesn't believe management is ignoring his recommendations; however, he calls their progress "unsatisfactory." My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Is the minister aware of any impediments in his department that prevent it from implementing the Auditor General's recommendations?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, let me say at the outset that we have a great deal of time and respect for the Auditor General of the province of Alberta, who has made a number of constructive comments not only on the operations of the Department of Health and Wellness but other departments as well. We are endeavouring to move forward on some of his recommendations. Some of them are not as easy to implement as others. So our progress on some has been immediate. Indeed, of the recommendations made by the AG a number have already been implemented, but there are others.

One that comes to mind immediately is determining the value of the services that we pay for with physicians, as an example. This is a very complicated matter that will require not just a change in government policy but perhaps a change to the contract that is negotiated with physicians in the province of Alberta. That clearly is not something that is entirely within the ability of the government to change on its own. It will require the co-operation of stakeholders. There are, I should say, other recommendations that fall into that type of category.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Auditor General has said that "the challenge is to get senior people to invest time, effort, and personal commitment," can the minister tell the House why this is a challenge for his senior people?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I don't see any reason why we should be standing on the floor of this Legislature besmirching the reputation of our senior staff in the Department of Health and Wellness. They are extremely dedicated, hardworking, committed individuals, and I see no reason why we should make a disparaging remark.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's simply in the Auditor General's report.

Is the minister prepared to implement all of the Auditor General's recommendations before implementing recommendations from the Premier's advisory council?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I've already indicated our willingness to move forward on many of the recommendations made by the Auditor General. I'm advised by the provincial Minister of Finance that we will be soon tabling our overall government response to the recommendations made by the AG. Again, good recommendations that are constructive, and we will move forward on them.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Children's Services Funding

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The cuts to children's services that we know about so far may only be the tip of the iceberg. Provincewide the cuts that we do know about total only a few million dollars while the projected deficit for children's services across the province is at least $40 million. It's clear that many more cuts to children's services will be necessary to make up this shortfall. To the Minister of Children's Services: can the minister confirm that in fact more cuts to programs for children's services will be necessary in order to make up the full approximately $40 million that has to be cut?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge all authorities were to provide their cost-containment strategies to the deputy minister by November 23. We have received in some considerable detail all of those estimates from the authorities, and I don't anticipate any further reductions. I'd just qualify my answer this way. There may be some people in programs further away from the child that do not know or have not yet had the communication about some particular dollar figure.

If I could just make one observation, all of the authorities were alerted as early as August that we were going to be in a cost-containment mode because of some anticipated deficit dollars, so we had been working with them. In some cases, such as in M&Möwe, there was a letter sent out to each one of the agencies, 140 some odd contract agencies in all, 93 of which were involved in early intervention projects. Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge all agencies, all individuals, all programs should now know what their dollar figure targets are.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, can the minister indicate to the Assembly the total dollar value of the cuts made to programs in her department so far?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, I will be pleased to table a document that illustrates that, perhaps even before the end of this question period today. I have a breakout of that on the basis of each individual authority. The Department of Children's Services has made a reduction of some $7 million, so we will be able to provide that and would be pleased to give the hon. member some details.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, will the minister assure the Assembly that there will be no further cuts to children's programs in her department in this budget year?

MS EVANS: You know, Mr. Speaker, I think there's a lot of temerity, and that's natural. When we're making changes, people are concerned, and indeed so am I. But I'd like to reference something from Hearthstone that has come to me from one of our hon. members, which example has been put in the newspaper. It quotes the CEO Jon Reeves as stating that there were $68,000 worth of reductions within their region, that they will be able to meet their targets fairly, and that there have been no allusions to more cuts.

Mr. Speaker, unless the sky falls in Alberta and there's immediate change that all of us will be fully aware of and acknowledging, I don't anticipate more change, but I do not have a crystal ball that tells me exactly what our revenue picture will look like next week or next month or early next year. I am doing my best with what we've got, and so are all of the authorities.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Children's Advocate

MRS. JABLONSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Children who are at risk or in need of protection are of special concern to all Albertans. Although there will never be a government program or service that can replace the loving care of parents, there are many caring people in the Children's Services system that do their very best to care for these children in need. My question is for the Minister of Children's Services. Can the minister tell the House what she is doing to address concerns raised in the recent Children's Advocate report?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, the advocate's report for the year 2000-2001 raised some very serious issues because of anecdotal references made in consultations and meetings held in five centres on five different dates in communities in Alberta. Specifically those cases, over 186 in all, were individual children who had either been referenced or reference made to. We have investigated every single one of those circumstances and have released a nonidentifiable report; in other words, not showing each child by identity but showing what the investigation entailed. That investigation and the follow-up has been taken very seriously not only by the authorities themselves but by other authorities such as the police, in some situations, and the advocate as well. We are satisfied that we have followed up on that report.

The second part of my answer would be that during this Child Welfare Act review with the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, we will be looking at recommendations from the Chan Durrant report about what type of advocacy model should be in place and listening to Albertans through their responses on the discussion guide and through other submissions that will be made to the hon. member in the review of the Child Welfare Act.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MRS. JABLONSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Also to the Minister of Children's Services: are you taking any action as to the role of the Children's Advocate at this time?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, beyond what I have currently suggested, there's nothing in place at this time that has changed at all. We have had an Acting Children's Advocate in place, especially while we go through this consultation, making sure that we get all of the thoughts and views of Albertans. We're looking at some other changes that are systemwide in concert with that. At the time the advocate's role was put in place and at the time of the Chan Durrant review, many people were suggesting other roles for other people in the system as advocates. One example is that we used to centralize the child welfare director. Now there are child welfare directors in each of the individual authorities.

One anomaly that I have discovered in the review of the Children's Advocate report is that frequently not all parties who should be advocating on behalf of the child were on the same wavelength at the same time. We need to ensure that the child welfare director is directly accountable for the work done on behalf of that child and that any advocacy about any anomaly that'll occur to the child in the system or anywhere else, as a matter of fact, would be reported to that director at that time. So there are a number of things we're doing, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. JABLONSKI: Mr. Speaker, my final question is to the same minister. The minister has stated that her department is reviewing specific cases that were cited in the Children's Advocate report. Has that internal review been completed?

MS EVANS: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Redwater.

Day Care Workers

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Children's Services has forgotten about the children and those that care for them. My questions this afternoon are to the Minister of Children's Services. Seven months ago the minister said that the Cleland report on day care workers' salaries was not yet ready to be tabled. Is it ready today?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, the first phase of that report that examined the day care workers and day cares themselves has been done. This report has not been completed, however, because we are now looking at the emerging issue that arose with family day homes. This was another part that we discovered when we went out talking to the day care workers and to the people throughout the communities of Alberta. They pointed out and cited quite properly that over 6,000 children in Alberta were looked after in family day homes and wondered, if we were going to make changes to any part of the system, if we would look at yet another part of the system.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: with the mandatory 1 percent cutback this year and who knows what next year, will the minister have any money to be able to act upon the recommendations of the Cleland report and provide a salary increase to the day care workers in this province?

Thank you.

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, we are in the midst of planning for our business plan presentation at our standing policy committee. At such time as I can divulge that to this House, I will so do. Let me be very clear though. On the matter of early intervention and early childhood development we have taken on the task of planning for several programs which we believe will certainly and clearly benefit the children whether they are low-risk or high-risk children, whether they are in day cares or universally throughout any community of Alberta.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: how can we have among the lowest salaries for day care workers in Canada when the 2000-2001 Children's Services annual report shows that $2.4 million dedicated for supporting day cares went unspent? Why couldn't you have put that into the pool of money for the child care workers, the day care workers? Why not?

2:10

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, oversimplification would be an answer to that question. There are many components to the situation of day care supports through supports to families. I think quite clearly that the targets we have had are the programs for those children that are most in need. When we did do some of the data collection, in reference to the Cleland report, we found out that throughout Alberta some of the profit-making day cares had dissolved and that nonprofit groups had come together and done exemplary jobs of providing day care and day care supports for their children.

One additional thing in the context of the low-income review. We have been talking to the people that have been working on that report, with the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment, and some of these things will tie in very nicely together when we bring out our report in due course.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Lobbyist Registry

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the hon. Minister of Government Services. Now that the report on a lobbyist registry has been tabled, can the hon. minister tell the House if this government plans to proceed with a registry?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. COUTTS: Certainly, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is correct. After studying the lobbyist registries in other jurisdictions, it's clear that such a registry is not needed in Alberta today. So the answer simply is no. This government will not be proceeding with a lobbyist registry.

Presently, Mr. Speaker, there are two lobbyist registries operating in Canada, one in the province of Ontario and one federally. British Columbia and Nova Scotia have just come on with new legislation to establish lobbyist registries. However, in all four of those cases our research has shown that those registries are being set up in climates where an existing government is trying to provide stability and public trust that has been eroded by the previous governments. Those levels of concern simply do not exist here in Alberta today, so it's strictly a public relations move on behalf of those governments.

When you take a look at the $300,000 or $400,000 that's required to set one up and set up a bureaucracy to operate the registry, to run it for one year, we don't think that that cost is warranted at this time. That cost does not even come close to making sure that compliance and enforcement are looked after, so the costs could be much greater in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BRODA: Thank you. To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: can the hon. minister better explain why a lobbyist registry would not be effective?

MR. COUTTS: Well, Mr. Speaker, we seriously considered, for example, the concerns that were raised in this House last spring around a particular incident that happened last year, and we determined that a lobbyist registry would not have uncovered that particular situation. Even though a registry requires lobbyists to register and provide general information on their activities, it would not catch illegal acts between lobbyists and public officeholders. As well, under the definition currently being used in existing registries, only individuals or organizations that spent a significant proportion of their time and work on lobbyist activities would be required to register, so registries do not cover onetime lobbyist incidents. The operating records of existing lobbyist registries show quite simply that they are not capable of deferring illegal activity or enforcing registry requirements that are already in place.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BRODA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: can the minister explain, then, how a report from 1996 can recommend a registry, yet this report can arrive at a totally different conclusion?

THE SPEAKER: That strikes me that a lot of opinion is involved in that, Mr. Minister.

MR. COUTTS: Well, the research that was put in certainly did help form some of our opinions, but the research was based on what is actually happening in these other jurisdictions. It's interesting to point out that since 1986 there haven't been any prosecutions in the federal system, and there is evidence of widespread noncompliance in the registry system. So the fact is that we have had enough information that raised the red flags to say that although other reports have indicated that we should have lobbyist registries in the province, the evidence in our research shows that it is not needed at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Driver Testing for Seniors

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Currently physicians may require seniors to go for special mandatory driver testing if the physician feels the senior may no longer be capable of driving safely. The physician could refer the senior to the private Drive-able program just as he would for a CAT scan, an MRI, or lab work except that the fee, over $200 with tax, is not covered by Alberta Health, and the minister of health in correspondence with an Edmonton senior has referred the issue to the Minister of Transportation. So my question is to the Minister of Transportation. Considering that his department publicly acknowledged on August 1, 2000, that it was considering paying for these tests, why has there been no decision in the last 15 months?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STELMACH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member across the way is identifying an issue that's becoming more prevalent right across Canada, and that is that as our population ages, we have more and more people that are wanting to retain their driver's licence at a time when maybe family members are concerned about the safety of their parents. I would inform the House that one of the most difficult issues is to try and find some balance between the safety of the traveling public, the issues centered around the family with the senior, the registry agents, and also the police.

MS BLAKEMAN: There was no answer.

Since seniors are being forced to take this test for medical scrutiny, is it not unfair for the government to charge them for the medical component of this test over and above the actual driving component that any other driver would have to pay?

THE SPEAKER: Well, again, we're searching for opinions again, hon. minister.

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to inform the House that if any one of us has a class 1 driver's licence, the regulations require an annual medical checkup. The government doesn't pay for that particular medical. The person who has the privilege of that driver's licence pays for the medical. For anyone that wants to retain the privilege of owning a driver's licence, there are some obligations; there are some rules that we have to meet. But they're all centred on ensuring the safety of the traveling motoring public.

MS BLAKEMAN: Is the minister not worried about some cases where physicians may not require seniors to take the test because they know the financial strain that it could place on the seniors? How does that put us ahead?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, I believe the member is asking more for an opinion as opposed to government policy.

Cloning of Human Beings

MR. LUKASZUK: Following the recent line of questioning, Mr. Speaker, my question may suggest a way to double the opposition caucus size.

Mr. Speaker, on a serious note recent news reports confirm that scientists now have the ability of cloning human beings. Many people have expressed concerns at the serious ethical dilemma this development in science imposes. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell us if he will propose any legislation to deal with this serious issue?

MR. MAR: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is clear that the cloning of human beings is an issue that is recognized as a matter of major significance on a number of different levels. At present the federal government is taking the lead on this particular issue, and on the 3rd of May of this year the federal Minister of Health tabled the assisted human reproduction act. This act was tabled for consultation purposes. It is clear in this act tabled by the federal minister that there is a prohibition on human cloning. The bill also has provisions that allow for the delegating of responsibilities to a province with equivalent laws.

Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the House of Commons Standing Committee on Health has been asked to provide its views on this particular bill by January 2002. The province of Alberta has been asked for its input, and we obviously have concerns with the legislation. We are working with our counterparts in other provinces and territories throughout Canada to improve the bill from a provincial perspective, but at this time my department will also closely monitor this issue to determine if, in fact, there is a need to move forward on provincial legislation, if required.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. LUKASZUK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second and last supplemental to the Minister of Innovation and Science: since there is, as the minister has indicated, no legislation in place at this time, what precautions are in place to ensure that ethical practices are followed on research that currently takes place in Alberta?

MR. DOERKSEN: Mr. Speaker, this is a very important question. Even though the legislation is not yet in place in Canada, there are other safeguards in place to ensure ethical research. In fact, all across Canada and Alberta strict ethical guidelines and review processes are part of any research involving human subjects. No research can receive public funding unless it has been shown to meet the ethical review process in the tricouncil policy statement.

The tricouncil policy statement on research involving humans was put together in 1998 by the Medical Research Council, which is now known as the Canadian Institutes of Health Research, the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council, and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council. In this, it expresses the continuing commitment of the three councils on medical, social, and natural sciences to the people of Canada to promote the ethical conduct of research involving humans.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you very much, hon. minister. There is as part of the Routine something called Ministerial Statements.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Rebuilt Air Bags in Automobiles

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Transportation: does the minister support Quebec's call for a nationwide ban on rebuilt air bags in automobiles?

MR. STELMACH: Did he say airplanes or automobiles? I never heard the question.

THE SPEAKER: Well, actually, the House was rather quiet at the time. The question had to do with air bags.

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, I must apologize. I heard air bags. Then one person said windbags. I'm not quite sure what he was asking for.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, please.

MR. BONNER: To repeat the question, Mr. Speaker?

THE SPEAKER: Please proceed. We have now spent a minute.

MR. BONNER: Thank you. My question to the minister was: does the minister support Quebec's call for a nationwide ban on rebuilt air bags in automobiles?

MR. STELMACH: We are looking at the information that's coming forward from a number of organizations that are quite knowledgeable in this area and will be making a determination on the information as it comes forward.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BONNER: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: is the minister planning any type of public education campaign to let Albertans know about the concerns regarding rebuilt air bags?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, we have a number of organizations that partner with Alberta Transportation in terms of traffic safety and all of the issues related to repair of equipment or automobiles following accidents and also many of the issues related to highway traffic safety. I will endeavour to just check with some of the organizations, like AMA, and see what their position is on it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. BONNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: will the minister be creating regulations to protect Albertans from rebuilt air bags?

MR. STELMACH: Mr. Speaker, we don't build regulations in isolation from the other provinces. Any regulations that come forward in this particular area are done in partnership with the federal government and all of the provinces. It could be done through the Council of Motor Transport Administrators or all of the other individuals that are involved in doing regulations for various areas centred around not only the safety equipment on motor vehicles but also the actual construction of trucks or cars that we use on our highways.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Mazankowski Report

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans were subjected to a multimillion dollar advertising blitz two years ago during the debate over Bill 11. The government used taxpayer dollars to outspend the bill's opponents at least 10 to 1. It now appears that the government is once again preparing to take its expensive PR machinery out of the hangar to sell Albertans on the dubious propositions that are no doubt contained in the Mazankowski report. All of my questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why is the government preparing to spend millions of dollars to convince Albertans of the merits of user-pay health care while simultaneously cutting millions from programs benefiting disadvantaged children? What kind of warped priorities are these?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that we spend a considerable amount of money on health care in the province of Alberta: $6.4 billion. I should further note that the hon. member does not appear to be able to frame a question without besmirching the reputation of a fine person like Don Mazankowski. I should further note . . . [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister has the floor.

MR. MAR: I should further note, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member does not appear to be able to get his own facts straight on a number of occasions. We know that between him and his colleague who sits to his left, his far left perhaps – between the two of them they are not able to do a sufficient amount of research to provide us with a question on government policy as opposed to mere insinuation. Really there is very little that can be answered in this question. The quality of the response must necessarily be governed by the quality of the question.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the Minister of Health and Wellness needs to feel better than he is doing now.

THE SPEAKER: Let's get to the question.

DR. PANNU: Given that the Tory caucus is being given an advance briefing on the Mazankowski report tomorrow, will the minister extend the same courtesy to opposition members, and if not, why not?

MR. MAR: The purpose of question period, which has been stated by you on a number of occasions and has been understood by most members of the Assembly, is to ask questions about government policy, Mr. Speaker. It is not to answer questions about how a caucus works. We certainly do not want to know how their caucus works. The matters that go on within our caucus are not matters of government policy that are the proper subject matter of question period.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wonder if the Premier's council is a government body or not.

Why does the government believe that the recommendations in the Mazankowski report will actually save dollars in health care when it is authored by the same person who as federal Finance minister racked up the biggest budget deficit in the history of this country?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Palliative Care

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my work I hear and read about the increasing public awareness of our aging population and its impact on Alberta society. We have recently heard in this Chamber a certain amount of discussion around the issue of palliative care in Alberta. All of us have known someone who is terminally ill. My first question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell us exactly what palliative care involves?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, earlier this week the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview also asked a question about palliative care, and at that time I did outline in broad-stroke terms what palliative care is. It is a term that we use for the type of care that our health system offers for people who are terminally ill. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview and the hon. Member for Calgary-West know, palliative care is active, it is also particularly compassionate, and it focuses on the quality of life of an individual who is dying and also the quality of life of that person's family. In the province of Alberta palliative care includes therapeutic and supportive services. These services are designed to meet not only the physical but also the spiritual, psychological, and social needs of the person and their family. It's for that reason that the provincial government considers palliative care a core health care service in our province, and we will continue to provide it on that basis.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, my second question is also to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell us how palliative care services are delivered in Alberta?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, regional health authorities in the province are responsible for delivering palliative care services in Alberta.

Each region can differ with respect to the manner in which it is delivered. It is for that reason that we ask regional health authorities to determine their own needs within their jurisdictions and gear their programs accordingly.

As an example, Mr. Speaker, the Calgary health region has devoted considerable resources to delivering more palliative care services in the homes of those suffering from terminal illness. I should say that palliative care can take place in a number of different settings. It could be in acute care facilities, long-term care facilities, at home, or in hospices. In the case of the Capital health authority, they have instead chosen to invest their dollars devoted to palliative care in subsidizing the cost of patients for some of their palliative care accommodation charges. That is the reason why there is regional difference in the cost in each different region.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, my third and final question is also for the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell us what Alberta is doing to improve palliative care services in the province?

MR. MAR: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a matter where we can have some amount of pride in the work that we've done to improve palliative care. As an example, we've changed the home care regulation to exempt palliative care patients from the $3,000 limit for home care services that would normally apply. In 1999 we implemented a $3 million palliative care drug program that supports the cost of medications and allows patients to receive treatments in their homes or in a hospice or in a lodge. The department has also released a three-year action plan to implement Alberta's aging in place strategy, and part of that plan is to enhance palliative care.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Child and Family Services Authorities

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Budget cuts are threatening and disrupting the work of personnel in the Children's Services department. My questions are all to the Minister of Children's Services. Have any regional Children's Services CEOs resigned for refusing to implement budget cuts?

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any resignations as the hon. member has suggested.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, have regional Children's Services CEOs had their positions threatened should they fail to implement budget cuts?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, this morning I attended Public Accounts, and there was a reference in the Auditor General's report about governance. It's very clear that the governance of the authorities is with appointed and approved boards that are managing those authorities. Those boards evaluate performance, they institute policy, and they work with the CEOs and a management team where the board sets policy and works with the CEO. I have not been given any communication heretofore that anybody has felt threatened and have not any information to support providing any further answer.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what are the consequences for CEOs should they not implement the budget cuts?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, we've got full agreement, and if I could just say that all of the authorities have agreed with signing a plan on the support of their targets. Every authority will send in signatures of all the members on their service plan. I will similarly be forwarding to our Premier and to Finance a copy of the signatures of our department officials and myself supporting that we will achieve our targets. There has been no other policy or process in place.

Women's Shelters

MR. SHARIFF: Mr. Speaker, at the request of the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters I met with Ms Jan Reimer, provincial coordinator for the council. The council brochure which I tabled suggests that last year over 9,000 abused women and over 10,000 children could not be admitted to Alberta shelters. Given the upcoming holiday season, I am very concerned for the welfare of abused women and their children. My questions are to the hon. Minister of Children's Services. Could you confirm if the statistics circulated by the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters are accurate? If so, what is your ministry doing about it?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, we are very concerned about the rising incidence of women and children who are seeking shelter. We have instituted a committee and liaison with the executive director of the Council of Women's Shelters to see if we can identify the best possible manner in collecting statistics. Prior to this we were not collecting them as well as we might. I think there's a real importance in understanding that many of those statistical references are not substantiated. They are different, given different authorities' management of the system. So we are taking every one that leaves as a serious issue, hoping that they are getting proper direction. Quite frankly, some of them do not want us to know where they're going, do not want us to follow up on their behalf. We're working very hard to make sure that we manage the issue in the best way possible.

MR. SHARIFF: My supplementary is also to the same minister. According to the document I tabled earlier, is it true that women's shelters have not received an increase for their operating costs since 1985? If that's true, how can the minister justify such an omission?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, we have put increases in the budget in the last two years. Two years ago it was just over $11 million; today it is approximately $14 million. We had an increase again this year. Women's shelters across this province are one group of support agencies which I have suggested to all the CEOs and to the authorities we not ask for reductions during this period of cost containment because of my concern that many of those programs needed our support because of the accelerated exposure of women and children, predominantly, to family violence. The phenomenon of increase in the statistics on family violence is something that's happening Canada-wide. This is not simply an Alberta issue.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. SHARIFF: Thank you, sir.

head: Recognitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Webber Academy

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Thursday, November 22, I was very pleased to represent the province at the official opening ceremony of the new Webber Academy campus in my constituency of Calgary-West. Webber Academy opened in 1997 with an enrollment of 85 students, and the new campus opened September 4, 2001, with an enrollment of 410 students. Webber Academy is a combination of a vision for learning by Dr. Neil Webber, four-time MLA for Calgary-Bow and former minister of social services, education, and energy. The mission of Webber Academy is to prepare students to strive in university and beyond, to be accomplished by creating an environment of high expectations of achievement, behaviour, and service. Webber Academy reflects the principles of Alberta's learning system: choice, learning opportunities for future success, and focus on lifelong learning. I heartily congratulate Webber Academy and Dr. Neil Webber in particular on this significant day in the history of the academy.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

2:40 Mill Woods Welcome Center for Immigrants

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to recognize the Mill Woods Welcome Center for Immigrants. For this organization the resources of Catholic Social Services, the Indo-Canadian Women's Association, and the Mennonite Center for Newcomers are combined into a multidisciplinary team which works through the Mill Woods Welcome Center for Immigrants. This team is dedicated to improving access and opportunities for immigrants through strategies that contribute to the building of the whole community. They are settlement assistance, employment strategies for foreign professionals, language and educational counseling, community development, homework club, and citizenship classes. They have been operating in this joint venture fashion for the past four years in Mill Woods and have been a welcome addition to our community.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Lindsay Thurber Volleyball Team

MRS. JABLONSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pride that I stand before the Legislature today to congratulate the Lindsay Thurber high school senior women's volleyball team on being the very first team in Red Deer history to win a provincial 4A championship in volleyball. With determination, hard work, poise, and a lot of Red Deer fans cheering in the stands this team of young ladies played well under great pressure, especially in the final game, to defeat the defending champions from Edmonton's Harry Ainlay high school. This championship team with gold medals from the Tom Bast tournament, the Hunting Hills tournament, the Notre Dame tournament, and the southern Alberta regional championships in Medicine Hat has made Red Deer very proud.

Congratulations to the coach, Kirsten Andersen, and to each member of the team; namely, Cheryl Kranenborg, Jen Atkinson, Julie Young, Ashley Costigan, Raelene Purnell, Chelsa Kallis, Azadeh Boroumand, CaraLeigh Newfield, Ashley Fleming, Sara VanDoesburg, and Justine Barthel. As the very first team to win a provincial 4A volleyball championship for Red Deer you have earned a place in high school history.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

International Human Rights Day

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On December 10 we will celebrate International Human Rights Day, commemorating the signing and proclamation of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948. The United Nations has designated 2001 the Year of Dialogue among Civilizations for reconciliation, peace, and respect of human rights among all people.

In keeping with this designation and in light of the events of September 11 of this year, the theme chosen for this year's event is Reach Out, Make a Difference: Respect the Rights, Freedoms, and Dignity of Others. It calls on each of us to make a commitment towards building a peaceful society by reaching out to ensure fairness and equity for all.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Center.

HIV/AIDS Living Positive

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I stand today to recognize the citizens of Alberta who are living with HIV and AIDS and the organizations that work so hard to provide support for living positive. As we observe AIDS Awareness Week and on December 1 World AIDS Day and the Day With(out) Art, we must recognize that we are all affected by this disease.

HIV does not discriminate. It knows no sexual, age, cultural, ethnic, or religious boundaries. The HIV/AIDS epidemic in Canada has changed from one that affected primarily gay men to the current epidemic that increasingly affects injection drug users and heterosexuals. Because of this shift, HIV/AIDS affects a growing number of women. In Alberta 23 percent of new cases of HIV infection reported in the first six months of 2001 were women.

HIV Edmonton, AIDS Calgary Awareness Association, and the Alberta Community Council on HIV are just three of the 21 agencies devoted to addressing the needs of the living positive community. As we go about our business this week, I would ask that you wear the red ribbon that I have distributed in recognition of the living positive community.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Character Cities Initiative Drayton Valley

REV. ABBOTT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today to recognize a town that is taking a major step towards making Alberta a better place to live, work, and raise a family. Today the town of Drayton Valley will be the first municipality in Canada to implement an international initiative that has been proven to reduce crime, drug abuse, family breakup, as well as many other societal ills. This is called the Character Cities initiative, and it's a communitywide strategy to promote 49 different character traits amongst local governments, businesses, families, and citizens. Character qualities such as compassion, creativity, generosity, gratefulness, responsibility, and tolerance, to name only a few, will be promoted at schools, in churches, at jobsites, and in offices simultaneously each month. The Character First implementation seminar is being taught in Drayton Valley today and is being attended by community leaders and other municipalities that are thinking about joining in this great initiative.

Mr. Speaker, I must specifically recognize Mayor Moe Hamdon and Pastor Gary Carter, who have together quarterbacked this dream for almost three years to make it a reality today.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Big Smoky Bridge Opening

MR. KNIGHT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with pride and pleasure that I rise today to give recognition to an important event in the Grande Prairie-Smoky constituency. Government staff, engineering firms, and contractors all worked through some very difficult situations, including a flood in July which took out a temporary crossing and some of the forming. Notwithstanding these setbacks, on Tuesday last the second bridge spanning the Big Smoky River on highway 43 was opened. This 303-metre – and for those of us who don't really understand that, that's 985 feet – $7.8 million structure allowed for the opening of an additional 40 kilometres of twinning on the very important Canamex trade corridor.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, I'm going to recognize the hon. Deputy Speaker for a special recognition.

Page Recognition

MR. TANNAS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All hon. members, each day of the session we are served by the tireless efforts of our pages. On behalf of all of the members we want to give each page a small Christmas gift to say thank you and to wish each and every one a Merry Christmas. I'd ask our head page, Brett Shewchuk, to distribute these gifts for us.

Bill 207 Alberta Personal Income Tax (Tools Credit) Amendment Act, 2001

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

MR. LOUGHEED: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege today to move third reading of Bill 207, a bill that has been debated at some length in this Legislature, the bill that would provide, if it continues to receive the support that it has thus far, that apprentices and journeymen in the 50 trades recognized in Alberta be placed on par with other taxpayers who are required to incur expenses in order to do their jobs, in order to complete whatever task is before them to build Alberta's economy.

Mr. Speaker, this bill has received support, I believe, because it simply makes sense. This morning I was at a breakfast meeting with about 300 or 400 people from the Sherwood Park area, and a contractor came up to me. I was just speaking with him briefly, and he said: how's that bill coming along that you had introduced? I was really surprised that he knew anything about this bill. It hadn't been talked about much in the media or any such place. He inquired of it, and I asked him: well, what do you think of it? He said: "Well, it just makes sense. It makes sense to enable those apprentices and journeymen who are expending considerable sums to buy those tools with which to ply their trade to be on par with other taxpayers, to be able to deduct those expenses and not have to purchase them with after-tax dollars."

I'd like to leave time for others who've indicated that they'd like to comment on this bill. I would take my seat at this time and listen to their comments. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to take a moment in this Assembly to acknowledge those apprentices and journeymen who have contacted me and asked for my support of this bill, indicating that it would indeed be a helpful financial opportunity for them to establish themselves in their chosen trade. I would like to go on record in this House as saying that I believe it is a very good bill. It is one that will serve Albertans and particularly the new workforce that we hope to encourage within our province. So I lend my support to it.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

MR. MASYK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this opportunity to rise and speak in favour of Bill 207. Bill 207 is important for Albertans because it will help address the growing gap and the need for success in our province and fill in the gaps in the shortage of trades in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, qualified tradespeople are what fuel our economy. I appreciate that we're in the midst of difficult times, but Alberta, more than any other province, is well positioned to ride out the slump in our economic cycle.

Tax relief is a goal for all Albertans that want government tax policy to be fair and not penalize them for making good choices, good choices such as going into trades, apprenticeship and journeymen. This province, Mr. Speaker, is no stranger to the benefits of tax relief.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage the members of this Assembly to support Bill 207 and provide the tradespeople in this province with the support necessary to move ahead.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to take this opportunity to congratulate my colleague from across the way for having the initiative to bring this type of bill forward. I have had a number of phone calls in the constituency office in support of it, and I appreciate him doing this.

The apprenticeship program has been a huge part of my family for many years. My husband is a journeyman carpenter by trade and does work for the Department of Learning and is responsible for managing the Red Deer office of the apprenticeship program, so I'm told often about the skills necessary to become a journeyman and often what is required as to the time commitment when they're going to school, the need for them to sometimes move away from home and go to where they can receive their apprenticeship training for that period of time each year, and of course the cost. I think that this, as was just said a minute ago, enables many, many people to consider the apprenticeship program.

While I have the floor, I would like to congratulate the government of Alberta and the Minister of Learning as well. I think we have an excellent apprenticeship program in Alberta. Hon. minister, this certainly is not my husband telling me to say this, but I do know that we have one of the best in all of Canada, and a lot of other Canadian jurisdictions look to Alberta for assistance in qualifying many trades to be part of the apprenticeship program. The hon. member talked about 50-some trades. That's where they're at right now, but yearly there are new trades that come onstream because, of course, of all the changes within our society. So I think this particular bill, when passed and when proclaimed, will become a very useful tool once again for the other jurisdictions looking our way to see exactly what we're doing.

Right now in Alberta all the trades are very, very busy, and a lot more people, men and women, are looking to the trades for a very good way of life. There are some people that make exceptional money in many of the trades, and many of them are specialized, so I think we can encourage our students to look this way.

I'm very proud, again, of what has been accomplished today. I will be supporting it. Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert to be followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three-Hills.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today in support of Bill 207. I want to be on record as being in favour of this piece of legislation. I realize that it may take some time for this to become effective, but I believe we need to rectify somewhat of an inequity between a sole-proprietor contractor and an employee who must purchase his tools to work. The constituents of Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert have advised me that we should support our tradespeople in this way, and I will be voting in favour of this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to add a few final comments on this bill before passage. I'd like to commend the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan for bringing it forward. It does bring the tradespeople who are employed and who are required as a condition of employment to purchase their own tools basically on the same or a comparable playing field as those tradespeople who are self-employed, and I certainly do support this.

One of the things that I heard just last Friday night at a Future Summit town hall in my constituency was that fairness in taxation is a high priority for people in my constituency, and I believe that this Bill 207 does set a fine example of fair taxation amongst the tradespeople. I'm sure that we're going to hear more about fairness in trade at the Future Summit next February, and this gives us an opportunity to show some leadership and get out ahead of what Albertans want by passing this bill now.

I thank you for the opportunity to add those comments.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be siding with the concerns of the Treasurer on this particular bill. I am very concerned about the cost impact of this. I have a concern that so many members are supporting it when we have no sense, that I'm aware of, of the cost impact of this piece of legislation. It does entail a tax expenditure, and a tax expenditure is the same, in effect, as a cash expenditure. My information is that there could well be a hundred thousand or more applicants for this sort of a benefit, and it could end up easily, easily costing the provincial treasury tens of millions of dollars a year, not to mention the very substantial bureaucratic development that may be required to handle that many applicants and the impact on the whole trades registration system.

I am also aware that while this is certainly intended to stimulate trades training, there is a very tight limit on funding for trades training at the technical schools. In fact, NAIT, for example, is expecting no increase whatsoever or at least very little increase, as I understand it, in their budget for trades training for years to come. So I think that may be a more direct way to address any shortages in the supply of tradespeople. I am concerned that we are proceeding with an idea here for which we have not got a clear sense of the cost. My sympathies on this one are with the Treasurer.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

MS HALEY: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I wanted just to make a few brief comments on third reading of this bill. I do appreciate the motivation behind bringing the bill forward, and I totally concur and respect what he's trying to accomplish. I do however have some concerns about it, starting off with that during the past year we've changed our income tax system in the province of Alberta. We left a graduated system that tied us to the federal government. We brought in a 10 percent flat tax to the benefit of all Albertans. The point behind it was that it was to the benefit all Albertans.

We've brought in some tax cuts for corporations with promises of more in the future as we can afford to bring them in. The key on that is: as we can afford to bring them in. We've tried to implement through business tax reviews and corporate and personal income tax reviews over the last six or eight years a careful, methodical, studious method of where the problem taxes were and how to deal with them. The goal, of course, was to try to stay away from things called one-offs, and this is, in fact, a one-off.

I mean, I have no desire to stand in the way of anybody taking up a trade or being able to buy their tools or, in fact, being able to write them off. My concern is that it is not costed out. When you ask for information on what this will cost, no one can answer. If it costs $100,000 for the entire province, it's not a big deal, but if it costs $10 million in lost revenue to the province of Alberta in this particular year, it is a big deal.

We're struggling right now. We've virtually wiped out transportation and infrastructure and the construction of new schools and health care facilities because we have a revenue shortfall because of oil and gas right now. There is a recession occurring in the entire country. Whether any of the other provincial governments are admitting it or not, they're all dealing with reduced revenues. We all have increased expenditures. Health care has an inflationary spiral of 10 to 15 percent. Nobody knows where the additional dollars will come from to cover additional costs as our population ages.

We come up with ideas like this, and yes, who doesn't want to have another tax break or a tax cut for anybody? I wouldn't mind another one myself. My concern is that we don't know what this will cost, and I don't think that's a good way to pass laws in the Legislature of Alberta. I think that you have to be careful and methodical and understand all of the ramifications of what you're doing before you do it.

On that basis, Mr. Speaker, I do appreciate the opportunity to get those points on record, but I won't be supporting this bill.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I spoke earlier on this tool tax credit, and I want to make some comments regarding the speech earlier by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview about the cost. Early costs no doubt have been calculated and are estimated to be in that 3 and a half million dollar range. But one thing that we all forget is that a tax credit that's derived from the purchase of tools – there's a profit side to the people that are selling the tools, and no one has really thought that it could just be a wash. With a wash really all we do is have an opportunity to recognize a segment of our population that's really created the Alberta advantage.

So I really want to thank the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan for introducing this, and I do support this wholeheartedly. Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

MR. DUNFORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I share many of the ideas that have come forward in support of this bill. Two things I want to comment on. First, I congratulate the member as a private member for bringing forward this bill. I know it's caused lots of debate, and you can see what's happening today. You have people on both sides of the House both for and against it. I think that's what a previous Government House Leader wanted to accomplish when some of the rules of order were changed so that private members would have better access to bring some of their ideas forward. I can remember at the time that that happened in '93 or '94, I interjected, "Free at last; free at last; thank God Almighty, we're free at last," on the part of private members. So certainly I want to support all private members as best I can on the particular issues that they bring forward.

The angle that I want to bring forward in support from the Human Resources and Employment side is one that I haven't heard discussed as yet on this particular issue. Inadvertently in a government's wish to provide assistance to its citizens – and it's not just this government, but it's all jurisdictions across Canada and, I would suggest, right around the world. When you want to care for citizens, there's a fine line, of course, that any person has to cross over at some point when they go from the assistance of the state to the assistance of independence. What has happened, as a matter of fact, in our country – and I would say here in our province as well – is that we've created a welfare wall, and part of the construction of that wall has been medical benefits that apply to people that are on assistance. It is very scary to think that they should go out and get a job, because there might not be the kind of benefit package that's available within that employment that they would have being on government assistance, and I want to say that I think the cost of tools in sort of granting a job has been one more brick in that particular welfare wall.

With the consideration of this House in terms of this private member's bill it would seem to me that we can provide some kind of encouragement now to those who are just on the cusp of moving from where we have found them. As a department we have moved them into career development and we have provided them with some skills, and they're now ready to move out into that wonderful world of work. We don't want to and we shouldn't be providing any more possible barriers than are absolutely necessary.

It would seem to me that while the purchase of a tool is a necessary expression of being able to work in a particular occupation, we as a government should be able to find the kind of flexibility so that we after all can live with our overall philosophy, and that is that Albertans will be better off working than they will on assistance. I believe that this private member's bill helps us meet that government philosophy.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan to close the debate.

MR. LOUGHEED: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the comments today that have been put forward. It's certainly important to express some of the concerns. The Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne has indicated that the rough and as best as could be brought forward estimate is around the $3 million to $7 million mark based on current trade enrollment, current practitioners of those trades, the apprentices that are involved. Those are the kinds of dollars that have been estimated are at stake here.

We should recognize the kinds of dollars at stake for the individual. The apprentice who is perhaps just getting started has to go out and buy those tools, and the amendment that was passed the other day would permit for that individual a tax break because of the cost of those tools of $450. A much bigger impact certainly if the federal government would take this on and as well bring it forward and say that they would acknowledge the same kind of deduction.

You'll also notice that the bill will come into force when proclaimed. That will give the ministries time to negotiate with the federal government about how the line would be put on the Alberta tax sheet that we've got that each individual taxpayer has to fill out, and there has to be some monitoring of that. Those negotiations will take place over some period of time if the bill continues to move through those ministries with their bureaucracy working it out.

So those were some concerns that have been there for some period of time. We believe we've put into place the necessary cautions to help those things be taken care of.

So thank you for your support, fellow members of this Legislature. Shall we have the question, Mr. Speaker?

[Motion carried; Bill 207 read a third time]

head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

THE CHAIRMAN: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 209
Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet)
Amendment Act, 2001

THE CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

MRS. JABLONSKI: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Doing all that we can as a government to help protect children in small and big ways will never be enough to see every child reach adulthood safely without injury. This is no reason to stop trying. I support Bill 209, the bicycle helmet bill, because every small step we take to help our parents protect our children helps all Albertans. I would encourage all MLAs to support this bill.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I certainly appreciate the opportunity to speak to this bill in committee and again to echo not only the concerns but the support that so many members of this Legislature have had. When we consider that approximately 100 children under the age of 14 years die in Canada every year from head injuries related to bicycle injuries, then certainly we have to consider this type of a bill.

We certainly are long overdue in recommending this type of safety equipment for people that ride bikes. We have had this type of legislation by various sporting groups throughout the province, whether it be hockey, whether it be skiing, whether it be baseball or softball. So it is a bill that is long overdue. The only recommendation I would have that I don't see in here is that we certainly don't stop at age 18, that we require every adult who is riding a bike to wear a helmet.

So with those few comments, Mr. Chairman, I would urge all members of the Assembly to support this bill and to see that it does get speedy passage through here.

Thank you very much.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

MRS. ADY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to rise today and speak to Bill 209, the traffic safety amendment act. First of all, I'd like to begin by thanking the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross for caring about children and wanting to protect them. I support her in that and thank her for her intentions, but I have to say that I think those intentions that center around the safety and protection of children – and as the mother of four boys, trust me, over the years they've needed protection. But good intentions do not necessarily mandate the intervention of government into the lives of citizens, and today I'd like to speak for a few moments on why I think Bill 209 should be defeated by this Assembly.

I rise today not to question the value of wearing a helmet but the statement that is made when government imposes that decision on its citizens, as illustrated in section 2(2) of this bill. Mr. Chairman, I believe that the role of government in the lives of citizens should be limited, that inherent in our system of values is the emphasis on the ideal of individual responsibility. It's true that government does have great responsibility for the public's safety and public health, yet it's also true that responsibilities in these areas should also be the work of average citizens.

I believe in the principle that you teach correct principles and then you allow people to govern themselves. It is the role of parents – and I'd like to repeat that: the role of parents – to decide for their children if they should be wearing bicycle helmets. It is not the role of this province. I worry about the province taking over any more of the role of parents or that law enforcement officials should be making that determination through legislation.

I would also like to point out, Mr. Chairman, that this bill deals with only one aspect of helmet safety. At what point should hon. members consider bringing in legislation to enforce a helmet law on the thousands of individuals who take to the ski slopes annually? At what point should we be protecting skateboarders from potential falls and mandate that they wear helmets too? Clearly, these individuals are taking a risk when they strap on their skis or visit a local skateboard park, just like bicyclists do when they take to the streets. Why are bicyclists any different from these individuals and the choices that they get to make? Is it government's role to protect these individuals from themselves? That is not our role, Mr. Chairman. That's why I think that Bill 209 should be defeated.

Government does have a duty and a role to educate the public on the benefits of using safety devices in their own lives. The money and the energy that Bill 209 would use to enforce sections of this bill like section 2(2) on children should instead be used to educate both parents and children alike to help them make better choices for themselves. I know that my family and I have enjoyed many hours in Fish Creek park on bikes with helmets on because it's a choice that we've made as a family. I feel that it's a correct choice, but it is one that we made.

Education makes people easy to lead, Mr. Chairman, and that is the direction this province should be headed in. If this Assembly believes that children should be wearing helmets, teach them about the benefits of helmets. Convince them. Win over their minds and those of their parents in this debate, but do not mandate that decision for them. Let's never forget that one of the things that makes this province so strong is our individual ability to make good decisions, to live good lives, and to contribute back to this province.

I encourage all Members of the Legislative Assembly to vote against this bill and let the citizens of this province make their own decisions. Thank you.

Chairman's Ruling Decorum

THE CHAIRMAN: Before I recognize the hon. Member for St. Albert, perhaps I should just remind all hon. members that even though we're in committee – and for the benefit of those in the gallery, this is an informal session, and people are actually allowed to move around and go and sit in places other than their own chair and in a very quiet voice converse with others. Whether it's in the Chamber under Assembly or in the Chamber under committee, you're not supposed to walk between whoever it is that is speaking and the chair, whether the chair is here or there. So that's to benefit all members, because there are many members who in fact transgress from time to time.

The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Debate Continued

MRS. O'NEILL: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I rise today to speak in favour of this bill brought forth by the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross. The reason I want to lend my support to it is not because I feel that the bill is usurping the right of parents to guide their children. In fact, on the contrary, I think it is our civil duty as legislators to look at those means which provide for the children, indeed for the people of Alberta those opportunities that would make their lives safer and consequently their usage, if you will, of the services that would be required to be paid for by the state less cumbersome and less obligatory to the state.

3:20

What I would like to do is read a letter that I tabled earlier today, Mr. Chairman, a letter that was sent to the Minister of Transportation and copied to me, as I indicated, and to the Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert. It's signed by the mayor of St. Albert, and I would like to read it since I tabled it earlier.

At its meeting on November 5, 2001 St. Albert City Council endorsed the St. Albert Royal Canadian Mounted Police Community Advisory Committee's resolution that states the following:

Whereas 71 Albertans suffered a severe head injury requiring hospitalization as a result of a bicycle-related incident in 1997;

Whereas 461 Albertans made ambulatory visits (including emergency room visits) for medical treatment as a result of bicycle-related head injuries between April 1, 1997 and March 31, 1998;

Whereas bicycle helmets are extremely effective in reducing deaths and head and brain injuries resulting from bicycling incidents;

Whereas a combination of legislation and education is the most effective way to increase helmet usage and decrease bicycling-related head injuries;

Whereas the cost of care of a brain-injured individual can reach $300,000 in the first year, $2.5 to $5.5 million over a lifetime;

Whereas the human societal costs of brain injuries resulting from bicycling incidents are immeasurable;

And whereas 65.4% of Albertans and 77% of Alberta parents are in favour of mandatory bicycle helmet legislation.

And therefore be it resolved that the Alberta Government enact regulations under the Traffic Safety Act making the wearing of approved bicycle helmets mandatory for bicyclists of all ages, and carrying a penalty of a $50.00 fine for failure to comply with the regulations.

Now, I realize that this is a resolution that originated with the St. Albert RCMP Community Advisory Committee and it is signed by the mayor of the city of St. Albert and we are dealing with a private member's bill, Mr. Chairman. I would like to say that any effort or any consideration that is brought forward here that speaks to the safety of our children and to those circumstances which would enable our children to play safe, free from, we hope, the occasion to unnecessarily injure themselves and cause concern to their families and indeed to us as legislators in this province – so I would like to speak specifically to the details and the contents of this bill.

It does ask that individuals who are under 18 wear helmets while they are cycling. It is only common sense. Whatever we can do to wave that flag of common sense and protection and care for those who play, cycle, enjoy, exercise within our communities, I think it testifies to our strength as a government and indeed our strength as a province that we want to have laws that assist individuals in looking after their own safety under these circumstances.

So, Mr. Chairman, I would again encourage everyone here in this Assembly to realize how important this is not only to the individuals who will be required to wear helmets but also to the greater community at large, the greater community who will benefit by their health, by their contribution, by their work, and by their studies within our respective communities. I would encourage everyone here to look very specifically at the strength of this bill. I commend again the Member for Calgary-Cross for bringing this forward not only as her private member's bill but bringing it forward, as well, having done all her research and the understanding from both the medical community and the resolution that was brought forward by the police council in St. Albert, a recognition of the research and the statistics that have been presented in favour of this recommendation as they look at the imposition, if you will, upon the health system and societal care within our community.

Again, I would urge everyone to support this. There is a great deal of support in my community for this proposal.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

MS HALEY: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Once again I'd like to commend my colleague from Calgary-Cross for bringing forward an interesting bill idea, and once again, keeping to my true form, I'm not going to be supporting it. The reason I'm not going to be supporting it is not because it's not a good idea. Everybody should be wearing a helmet when they're riding a bike. There's just absolutely no question about that.

I think in the latest study that I saw comparing the late 1970s to today, at that point there were about 800,000 cars on the roads in Alberta, and today there are over 2.2 million vehicles on the roads in this province. The real problem is not whether or not you wear a helmet. It's: where, in fact, do you ride a bike safely in cities, in towns, on rural roads? Where is it actually safe to do so?

I was trying to do some research on this, and I hooked on my computer, Mr. Chairman, and I found an article in the New York Times that was talking about a bicycling mystery, and the mystery was that head injuries were piling up. The article went on to talk about that the number of head injuries had increased 10 percent since 1991. Even as bicycle helmet usage also rose very sharply during that same period of time, head injuries were in fact increasing. They were trying to figure out why, because over that same period of time that helmet usage was increasing, there was in fact a 10 percent increase in injuries and a 51 percent increase in the use of helmets. So it wasn't logical, what was happening. They were saying that helmets, of course, don't prevent accidents. They are very effective – there's no question about it – at reducing the severity of head injuries, and that's incredibly important.

There were other parts to what they were trying to determine. One of them was that some cycling advocates were contending that the rising number of aggressive drivers was at fault, and possibly that's true. I mean, we hear more about road rage all the time. One of the things that probably annoys people is having cyclists weaving in and out of traffic. When you're trying to slow down for a light, you end up passing the same bicycle rider three and four times in the space of a block. You know, there's probably a confluence of things going on. Maybe people driving vehicles aren't driving as carefully as they should, but people driving bikes aren't paying attention to the rules of the road either.

So the specialists came along, and many specialists in risk analysis argue that something else was at play. It wasn't just helmet laws. They believe that an increased use of bicycle helmets may have had an unintended consequence, making riders in fact feel an inflated sense of security and therefore taking more risks. In the last nine years in the United States 19 state Legislatures passed mandatory helmet laws, and today such statutes cover over 49 percent of American children under the age of 15. I think that's another difference with the law that's being proposed here. When you're dealing with children under the age of 14 or 15, perhaps that's one level, but dealing with people up to the age of 18, I think you've probably gone too far.

Law is not about common sense, and I disagree with my colleague who made that comment. Law is in fact law. Common sense is what we as individuals are supposed to have. As a parent I tried for years to get my sons to wear helmets even when they went skateboarding or snowboarding – and he knows who I'm talking about – but it doesn't always work. These are my sons. When it was 40 below outside, I had a hard time getting them to wear anything to cover their ears so they wouldn't freeze to death. I'm not sure that by passing a law, you will in fact solve the problem.

One of the things they discovered in the United States is that ridership on bikes actually declined. That's counterproductive, because we're trying to encourage people to participate in sporting activities and become more healthy and look after themselves. At the same time, we're doing things which actually have the opposite impact, because during the same period that these laws were being passed in the States, bicycle ridership declined by 21 percent, and participation in other things – inline skating, skateboarding, and other sports – all increased.

So where do we go with the laws? We can pass this one today, and maybe in the spring session we could bring one in that said: if you're going to ski, snowboard, rollerblade, in-line skate, you name it, we've got it; we got a law for you. I don't think that's why I was sent here. I don't know. I could be wrong. I've never had one call in my office from my constituents. Now, I've been lobbied by other groups and I respect that, but I've never had one call in my office from my 45,000 constituents saying: oh, please, you've got to pass another law.

There's one other thing I wanted to bring up, and that was something that was interesting. One parallel risk expert in the States was talking about antilock brakes. He said that when they were introduced in the 1980s, they were supposed to reduce accidents, but government and industry studies in the mid-1990s showed that as drivers realized their brakes were more effective, they started driving faster and the accident rates rose. Insurance companies have long been familiar with a phenomenon which they call moral hazard. Once someone is covered by an insurance policy, there's a natural tendency for that person to take more risks. That, I think, is probably the phenomenon that we'll find when we pass a law and it says that everybody must wear a helmet. Perhaps people will in fact start to relax a little bit more about that and say: well, it's perfectly logical; now my son, my daughter will be safe. I don't think that's the intended consequence of the law, but it may well in fact be the consequence of that law.

I guess the last thing I want to say, Mr. Chairman, is that I believe that as Conservatives we have to be very careful about trying to live people's lives for them. I think we need to educate children, we need to educate young families particularly, and we have the ability to do that. We have the well-baby clinics, where we could be passing out information on the importance of looking after your little child whether he's riding a tricycle, moving up to a small bicycle with training wheels, or right on up to the mountain bikes and BMX racers that we have today in the province of Alberta. It is absolutely imperative that we respect adults and people in this province to make decisions in the best interests of their own family.

I don't know how you enforce a law like this when you're not going to put any more resources into policing throughout the province. It's yet one more thing for the police to do, and I believe that they're fairly overburdened now. What are you going to do if they don't pay the fine? Take the bike? Who are you punishing? I see reams of little bike bureaucrats going out there and having a real good time. "Don't just wear your helmet. Make sure it's on properly. By the way, you know, you could break your neck. Your head will be okay, your neck will be broke, but we'll worry about that next year because I'm sure we'll be able to find a collar or a brace or a bodysuit that we can wrap you up in to keep you 100 percent safe for 100 percent of your life."

It can't be done, Mr. Chairman, and we've got to stop deluding ourselves and the people of this province by passing laws that will not make that much difference at the end of the day. Educate them instead. Make sure that parents know the importance of this. Make sure that children understand the importance of it for their own safety, their own security, and the health of their lives. I think that's what we can do, and we can do a really good job of it.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

MR. SNELGROVE: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman and hon. members. I have to tell you that in all likelihood this isn't a really pleasurable thing to debate because there probably are no winners in a caucus when we have to debate an issue that doesn't really have, I believe, a positive yes or no. I don't believe the debate here about this law is about whether people should wear bicycle helmets or not, because I think, as the hon. member previous said, there is no question that in the right circumstances or the wrong circumstances a bicycle helmet can save serious injury and possibly a life. That goes without saying.

I've got four children, and by and large their mother tried very hard to make them wear bicycle helmets. Many, many times they were spread out down the block or back up the block, and it's pretty hard for a six year old to remember exactly where he's left his bicycle helmet. I, too, would hate to see the bicycle gestapo chase him down to tag him with a little ticket.

I don't believe that the debate should be about the statistical information on whether or not bicycle helmets increase or decrease ridership, whether they will in fact kind of hurt some of the other programs we have, because I don't believe that's the issue here either. I don't believe that the issue about saving health care is fair either. We all remember the arguments used when we passed the seat belt law here, that it was going to save us millions and hundreds of millions of dollars, and in fact our health care just went through the roof. There's no question that for individuals in some circumstances it saves their lives, and under those circumstances it may have in fact saved health care some money. But if he's not fixing Joe for a seat belt, he's fixing Fred's knees, so it isn't going to save health care money, folks. We know that going in. It's us that made the system not hold people accountable for what they do. It's not them. We've made a health care system that doesn't recognize personal responsibility. Let's not start passing laws to cover that. That doesn't make any sense.

The hon. member before me talked a little bit about enforcement. We might all have this wonderful picture of the friendly beat cop going down the street helping the kids on their bikes and patting them on down the road. That in fact isn't going to be the problem, but when we see the RCMP pull up to a group of teenagers beside the 7-Eleven or beside the convenience store and they're there without their helmets, they're going to scatter. They're going into alleys; they're going out on streets. They don't want to get a ticket. So we're not going to have a very positive relationship fostered between our young children and the police, and I think that's very counterproductive, because if you start running when you're eight, you'll be running when you're 18.

I guess you have to go back to the poor families in Alberta too. There are lots of people that aren't on any of the government programs. We've talked about them. Maybe they don't have the wherewithal to just go and buy helmets at will for four or five kids. Are we going to provide them helmets? Are we going to make them make a choice whether they have to do without food or rent to get a helmet, or are we just going to make them criminals? It's quite a bit like the gun law the federal government passed. It didn't accomplish what it set out to do, and this won't either.

We talk a little bit more about enforcement. I'm not a lawyer, thank goodness, but I would have to wonder about enforcing a helmet law at a school when the child leaves his home with the helmet on, gets to school, and takes it off at noon hour to go for a bike ride. He probably had to go for a bike ride because his playgrounds were ripped out. He forgets to put his helmet on. The police come along and say: well, that's it. Who's responsible? We don't even hold 13- or 14- or 15-year-old kids responsible for bad things they do. How are we possibly going to hold them responsible for riding without their bike helmet? We can't go home and tell mother or father that we caught them. It is unenforceable. If we can't enforce it, don't pass it. It won't work.

We've got to go back a little bit to this false sense of security. I grew up playing hockey, and my kids are all playing hockey now. Over the years we've had a lot of people involved in that sport who probably never played it, and we've put our little kids into armour now. They're covered from head to toe. They can't be hurt, you see. You're right; we get very few stitches. We hardly lose any more teeth. We may have a great looking bunch of NHL stars, but what we're breaking are backs and necks. The kids think they're invincible. They dive into boards. They fall into nets. It has hurt seriously more than it has helped. You can't start to tell people: "Don't worry. We're looking after you. Put your helmet on. You're safe. Get out there on the street."

There are a bunch of causes we can have. I call this bill a cause. There are skateboards. There are rollerblades. There's rodeo. We all witnessed the young man hurt here in Edmonton. Are we going to outlaw rodeo? Least of all, we should have maybe seat belts on them so they wouldn't fall off. We can't eliminate people from doing things that hurt themselves.

Folks, this isn't about: is it right to wear a bicycle helmet? Of course you should. I'm not arguing that, but there is no end to good causes that we can write laws or create motions about. It is not government's responsibility to pick one or two from the tree and say: let's do this this year, and let's do that next year. We are going to have children hurt no matter what we do. That's unfortunate, but it's going to happen.

I just know from experience, or feel I know, that when government starts to get in the business of raising families and making personal choices for you, they don't do it very well. I would just ask you to think of any issue where we've taken personal responsibility from people that has helped in the long run. It doesn't.

Now, I only say this to the people here. The government taxes our money. We have to accept that, but please, please don't start to tax my responsibility as a parent, because I do resent that part of it. Other than that, I just ask you to consider where we are going when we start to bring bills like this through the Legislature.

Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

MR. HORNER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to Bill 209 as well. I've had a lot of opportunity over the last few months to talk to my constituents on this matter, and I am reminded of when I was a young lad growing up in Alberta and the big debate over seat belt regulations. The last hon. member mentioned it, and he raised probably all of the same arguments that were raised for the seat belt debate. I know that it is still a pretty serious concern for a lot of people, but I do know that now I wear my seat belt out of a sense of habit, as I'm sure all hon. members of this House do.

Mr. Chairman, as I said, I've had the opportunity to speak to my constituents about this matter. I've talked to the parents, I've talked to the teachers, and I've talked to the kids. These are the people that we're going to affect with this legislation in this House. These are the people who put me here. When I was talking to them and visiting them in the classrooms, they told me that this is a good bill to pass. This is what they would like me to support.

I know the arguments from both sides because of the debates that we've had over these issues. I am a Conservative as well, but government does have a responsibility, and one of those responsibilities is to listen to our constituents. I take that responsibility very seriously. So the message to me was very clear. The majority of my constituents want me to support this bill, so I must, and I ask the support of this Legislature to support the bill as well.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to add a few more comments in committee to the ones I have made in second reading. I've listened to the debate so far with quite a bit of interest, and I appreciate both sides of the argument. I acknowledge that the number of injuries has increased even though the ridership in some of those jurisdictions has decreased, but the style of riding has also changed over the years. I watch on television some of the freestyle and high-risk ways that young people are riding in competitions, and I'm reminded of when I was a young person so very long ago, when television first came out.

AN HON. MEMBER: They had television back then?

MR. MARZ: Yes, we did have television back then. It was black and white and it was brand new, and we watched it through the store windows because we couldn't afford one of our own.

One of the shows that was prevalent, Mr. Chairman, was Stampede Wrestling. I'm sure all of you who are of similar vintage to me will remember watching Stampede Wrestling and the influence it had on our lives. We went to school and our mothers could never figure out how come we came home with our shirt in shreds and all our buttons missing, because how could this happen sitting in a classroom and just playing on the swings? Well, we were doing body slams and dropkicks just the same as we envisioned it to be on television, and we did some severe damage to our clothes and sometimes to ourselves.

Cyclists today, as you can see in the parking lots and shopping malls and on the stairs of public buildings, are riding up and down, they're skidding them across rails, they're trying to do all sorts of things, and you see them pile up. They do the same thing on skateboards and snowboards and rollerblades. Those that they're mimicking are wearing safety equipment, but where do we stop with legislating safety equipment? You can have elbow injuries, you can have knee injuries on bicycles as well, and I'm sure they're a cost to the health care system, for those that are concerned about that. I'm concerned about where this is going to end up. As the hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View stated, next spring it will be dealing with skiers, snowboarders.

I see that probably the activity that has the most number of injuries is driving a motor vehicle. There are thousands and thousands of them on the highways, and there are far more accidents involving motor vehicles than there are bicycles, because there are simply more of them and there are lots of accidents. We have air bags and we have seat belts, as was stated by some of the hon. members, but race car drivers have those types of safety equipment and they also wear helmets. Are we going to put helmets on people that are driving motor vehicles? It makes as much sense to do that as it does this if we're looking at saving costs to the health care system.

I'm concerned that taken to the limits of another couple of sessions, we won't be able to legally leave our houses unless we appear like the Michelin Man so we won't hurt ourselves. Mr. Chairman, that is a concern. I believe that government has a responsibility, but part of government's responsibility is ensuring that individuals take responsibility themselves for their actions and encourage that as much as possible.

So with that, Mr. Chairman, I'll close, but I would like to close by saying that I think education, not legislation, is the key to safer riding on our roadways. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to put a few comments on record with respect to this important private member's bill, Bill 209, the Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001, brought forward by our colleague from Calgary-Cross. I, too, have received a few phone calls, not a large number by any stretch. Nonetheless, a few comments have come to my office from constituents who are supportive of this particular legislation. I think the recognition in their support is with respect to the issue of safety for children and for society in general.

I know that it's by and large a commonsense issue, and I can certainly tell you from my personal perspective that when my children were growing up, we did provide them with proper headgear, be it for bicycling or skateboarding or rollerblading or skiing or whatever it happened to be. We did take those precautions. We did it voluntarily. We didn't need a law to have common sense prevail.

I'm also well aware that there are impacts on injury numbers as reported through our emergency wards and through other mechanisms, so that point is not lost. In fact, the Alberta Center for Injury Control & Research – everyone knows the group I'm talking about I'm sure – does have some compelling evidence that it has advanced with respect to the need for some stronger guidelines, perhaps laws, that would support erring on the side of safety and caution.

Having said that, however, I do have some concerns about the enforcement that might become necessary here and to what extent it would be possible to police this issue. It's not quite the same, in my view, as the argument for seat belts, for example, where we have certain age restrictions apply. Quite obviously, you need to be at least 16 years of age to drive a motor vehicle in this province, and there are certain places where you can ride that particular vehicle and so on. So it's easier, if you will, to enforce the seat belt legislation than it would be to enforce the outcroppings of what this legislation may become.

The fact is that children especially are in the habit of just jumping on a bike and driving where ever at whatever time. It poses one type of a problem in the cities, but I can tell you that as a young man growing up in the rural climes of our province, in Sangudo particularly, there was a whole different perspective on bike riding. It was a main activity, because we didn't have all that much to do. But we grew up looking after ourselves in a different way, and I'm not suggesting that we don't still apply common sense today, because I know that we do. I'm simply pointing out that during my time as a bike rider, specifically a bicycle rider, we did exercise proper precautions to the best of our ability. Of course, we had the benefit of things like balloon tire bikes. I don't remember anyone in the town owning a 10-speed or a five-speed or any of those. We had one speed. It was slow, and we were very careful about that. We also didn't have the benefit of paved roads; we still had wooden sidewalks. So I'm going back a little bit down memory lane here, and I'm sure . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: When were you born?

MR. ZWOZDESKY: I was born a long time ago, hon. member.

We did take great precautions as did our parents to exercise education on a very commonsense level.

Now, with respect to the calls that I've had from some of my constituents, whom I'm bound to represent, I do understand their points, and I do understand the need for us to be vigilant, especially where children are concerned, but having said that, I do have some reservations with respect to how we might be treading on that ever so dangerous ground of trying to legislate common sense.

I want to conclude there and allow other members, should they wish to, to continue speaking on this important bill. Thank you.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Wainwright.

MR. FISCHER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to make a few comments on this particular bill. I know that a lot of the issues have already been brought up on this bill, but I think that to begin with everyone in here is very supportive of wearing bicycle helmets. I think we should underscore that, because we want to see that happen. What we're talking about with this legislation is: how do we make it happen, and should government make it happen?

I just want to say that it's going to happen a bit like this. When government steps in and takes that responsibility, then parents will step out and let them do it. In many, many cases you'll have the police trying to do what the parents should be doing, and we do not have anywhere near enough police to do that. And should they? When should people take their own responsibility? And how many freedoms and so on do we want to interfere with? How much do we want government to come in and run our lives?

I happened to be around here at the time that the seat belt legislation came in and remember very well some of the arguments for and against. Whether it has proven to be a whole lot better – yes, it did at the beginning. Would we have educated ourselves enough to have done it anyway? I guess we don't know that answer, but I think maybe we should try it a different way this time so that people are educated and they want to, and then they will have their helmets on a lot more.

It interferes with your own personal life each time we run another bill through the Legislature like this, and there are many, many more. I mean, you can go all the way to smoking and drinking and whatever. There are many, many things that you can start legislating, whether it's bike helmets or, as was mentioned, rodeo helmets. It could be any kind of thing. But let them do it. I think that we should see that the opportunity is there to do it, but to get in and actually legislate it, one after another after another, slowly does take away any responsibility that you might have.

I want to just make my final point about the responsibilities and the freedoms that you're taking away, and I'll do it with this little story about the fellow that went to the doctor. "Doc," he says, "If I quit drinking and smoking and chasing women, will I live to be a hundred?" And the doctor says: "No, you won't, but it'll seem like it." I want you to think about that. I want you to think about that a little bit as we gradually take away every freedom. At some point it will start interfering with your quality of life.

With that, I don't think I can support this bill the way it is, but I do want to see us get helmets on. Thank you.

Bill 208
Alberta Official Song Act

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort to move third reading.

MR. CAO: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move Bill 208 for third reading.

Since the introduction of the debate on Bill 208 last May, even knowing that the bill has not been passed and without my solicitation, many Albertans from across our province sent in many supporting inquiries and song submissions in the form of lyrics, music sheets, tapes, and CDs. My thanks go to each of them. I also want to acknowledge queries from some of the hon. members about the costs and copyrights of their musical works. I must say that the musical and poetic works so far are the labour of love for Albertans from the authors. No one asked for money. Everyone wants to sing about Alberta. We should not underestimate the labour of love and volunteering spirit of Albertans.

Bill 208 does not intend to address the detailed process of selection and arrangements with the authors. It is the work to be done by the official song committee, as stipulated in the bill. As to the composition of the official song committee, Bill 208 does specify the participation of all parties in the House and the Alberta public. However, the number of committee members has to be limited to be effective as a working committee, but everyone is welcome to participate.

Hon. colleagues of the House, your passing of Bill 208 and its song selection process will give Albertans a celebrating spirit for our bright future, uplifting us beyond the current cloudy and stormy weather of our world. Your passing of Bill 208 will give our 25th Legislature a landmark of an Alberta official song for our centennial celebration in 2005.

I would like to sincerely thank my MLA colleagues, media professionals, and many fellow Albertans for speaking in support and passing votes on the bill. My special thanks go to the hon. Minister of Community Development for his expression of support. Once the bill is passed, his department will help in the implementation.

To conclude, I would like to thank our colleagues in the House and all fellow Albertans with a lyric that I wrote last weekend. It's adapted from the musical score of Mr. P.H. Luu of long ago, that I am familiar with. I don't know if it's appropriate for me to sing, so I just want to read it.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Sing. Sing.

MR. CAO: With the permission of the Speaker. So at the request of my colleagues, may I have your permission?

Our Alberta, the land of people free,
Together we're building our great province,
From Western Rockies to Eastland prairies,
And Northland forest to Southern rivers,
Blue sky, white snow always pure,
Green grass and wheat fields abound.
We're Albertans, so blessed and free.
We're Canadians, proud of country.
From all parts of the world we have come here
To live together in peaceful joy.
Albertans, we stand together.
Albertans, we will forever
Keep on building province we love.
Blessings from God to Albertans.

With that bellowing, I thank you for bearing with me.

Hon. colleagues of the House, Bill 208 has passed committee debate; for that I thank you very much. In the final third reading stage it is now in your good hands to pass it again.

Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've never seen the Assembly so attentive before. Perhaps we've discovered a new form of debate. If we can carry it out in song, I think we'd keep everybody's attention.

I spoke to this in second reading last spring, and since then a number of my constituents, not a lot of them but quite a number of them, have spoken to me about this. They expressed the view that they thought having an official song was a good idea, and certainly having a competition amongst Albertans so they all have the opportunity to participate in it was certainly another good idea. I would like to pass on my compliments to the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort for bringing this forward.

I just have a few brief comments, Mr. Speaker. In the haste of speaking in the spring on this bill, there were some errors in identifying the writers of certain songs. I would acknowledge a couple of great Canadian songwriters: Mr. Gordon Lightfoot, who did write Alberta Bound, and Ian Tyson, who wrote and sang Old Alberta Moon. I just wanted to clarify that for the record.* Both songs depict the wonderful Alberta lifestyle that we have, just two fine examples of songs that have been written about our fair province already, and I'm sure that on the passage of this there'll be a lot of Albertans that will be excited about getting involved in putting forth their submissions to add to the one the Member for Calgary-Fort graced us with in the House just moments ago.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say that I will be supporting this bill and urge my colleagues in the Legislature to do the same. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

MR. DANYLUK: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will present my little speech, and I emphasize "speech," because I will not be singing. But it is my pleasure to support Bill 208, the Alberta Official Song Act. I think it's a great idea, and I would like to offer my thanks to the Member for Calgary-Fort for bringing this matter to the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would give a committee the power to seek out original songs and the power to recommend one of them as an official song for Alberta. The nonpartisan nature of this committee displays this bill's goal to be representative of all Albertans with a submission process that will allow composers from all over the province to compete. This song will then be officially unveiled in 2005 to mark Alberta's hundredth anniversary as a province of Canada.

Designating a song for Alberta on our centennial anniversary will provide a lasting impression of the people and the culture that make up our fair province. We would seize this opportunity and create a legacy that future generations will recognize and be proud of. I would imagine, Mr. Speaker, that our hundredth anniversary might be just the biggest event the province has seen since the turn of the millennium. Many ideas have been brought forward and are being considered for the centennial celebrations, but a song for Alberta might just be the best yet the most economical venture we can do for the hundredth anniversary.

This debate has been a breath of fresh air in this Assembly. It has allowed my hon. colleagues to talk about and, as we have recently seen, to sing about this province, which might include the praises we have and the respect we have for our province. Some of my colleagues have offered that it should be a testament to the diverse culture and ethnic history of Alberta. Others have mentioned a desire to hear a song that will tell all who hear it about the beauty of our environment. These are all valid propositions, Mr. Speaker, and I think that any and all of these ideas would make an excellent song for Alberta. Maybe that is why this bill has caught the attention of so much of the public and the media. First of all, it's great, and second, it's a fun idea because the possibilities for this song are truly endless.

Mr. Speaker, I am touched and inspired by the words recently shared with me and written by one of my constituents. They reflect upon this great province, the hard work of those who built it, and the pride and appreciation of those who remain living here, raising their families on this beautiful land. There are undoubtedly so many great things to say about this province.

Another point of consideration is that our province already has a substantial range of official emblems. I am sure most Albertans know the wild rose, our official flower, and our provincial coat of arms, but we have an official animal, tree, tartan, stone, and even fish. The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort made a very good point in his opening speech by remarking that all the symbols are visible, and it is time to indulge one of our other senses with the official song.

The song will always be for Albertans by Albertans, but I am sure it will be heard by many, many people. In the same way that the opportunities and advantages of coming to Alberta have drawn so many to our province over the years, the official song will call for our Alberta advantage in years to come.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 208 read a third time]

PARLIAMENTARY COUNSEL: For third reading, Bill 209, Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Cross.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to speak today in third reading, but before I do, I wondered if I could ask for unanimous consent of the Assembly to introduce guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce Mrs. Jackie Petruk, executive director, and her staff from the Stollery children's hospital who are with us today. I know that they've been in the Assembly several times to listen to this bill throughout the different readings that we have had. Could you please rise.

Bill 209
Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet)
Amendment Act, 2001

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Hon. member, if you'd move the bill, then you can speak to it.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move third reading of Bill 209, Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is about the very special value that we as a society have for our children and youth. It is about protecting them from injury, disability, and death, and it is about saving our health care system millions of dollars through safe bike-riding practices.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank everyone who supported making bicycle helmets mandatory for our children and youth. KIDSAFE Connection at the Stollery children's hospital, the Brain Injury Association of Alberta, the Alberta Center for Injury Control & Research, all the health authorities in Alberta, the RCMP, St. John Ambulance, the Edmonton and Calgary police services have all vocalized their strong support for mandatory bicycle helmets, and I strongly thank them today for that support.

The biggest supporter of this legislation has to be the parents in this province. I know that over 77 percent of parents in a public survey that was conducted by KIDSAFE Connection supported mandatory bicycle safety helmet legislation because they have the same fears as I do. Although we cannot foresee every danger, we can prevent some accidents, and I think that we should use every tool available to us as parents to protect our children and prevent the worst from happening. Mandating children and youth 17 years of age and under to wear bicycle safety helmets at all times while riding a bicycle will give parents one more tool to help protect their children.

Mr. Speaker, along with Alberta's parents who voiced their strong support for Bill 209, there are a number of groups and organizations within the province who treat head trauma and know how serious bicycle-related head injuries are and how preventable they can be. KIDSAFE Connection, who's with us today, is sponsored by Capital health and works together with the Stollery children's hospital to promote child safety. This report that they had released in 1997 with a number of shocking statistics and truths about bicycle-related trauma suffered by our children was interesting, and I know it was filed with the Assembly earlier in other debates.

For example, the report detailed that close to 6,500 people are admitted to an emergency room in Alberta in a one-year period for a bicycle-related injury, and of these 6,500 over 4,000 were children under 20. Only 18 percent of these children who came to the emergency room had been documented as wearing a helmet at the time of their accident. The most impressive statistic is that bicycle helmets have been shown through research to reduce brain injury by 88 percent and upper and mid-facial injury by 65 percent. National statistics show that only 15 percent of children wear a bicycle helmet while riding a bike. That's national statistics: 15 percent. It's a very serious concern since in a one-year period our hospitals here in Alberta recorded over 460 emergency room visits for head injuries due to a bike-related accident. When you consider that the bike-riding season is only six months long in Alberta, that averages to 75 emergency room visits per month.

Bike riding is the most popular sport amongst our children; 90 percent of children and youth ride bikes. Because they are the most frequent users, they're the age group most hospitalized. Not only could this be attributed to proportionally greater numbers of young riders, but it also has been proven that youth in Alberta are not as cautious or as responsible as they could be. Children tend to take more unnecessary risks than adults do.

Mr. Speaker, approximately 50 children in 1997 required an inpatient hospital stay for their bike-related injury. Most of the injuries sustained happened close to home, and only one-quarter of bicycle-related injuries involved a motor vehicle. Most occurred from a fall, and statistics show that a fall from a bike traveling only 20 kilometres per hour can cause death.

Mr. Speaker and hon. colleagues, there has been some considerable discussion about the mandatory safety helmet infringement upon the freedoms of choice for individuals. An encroachment on personal freedoms is a difficult challenge for any government, and I respect what I heard in the Assembly here earlier today. I know that Hansard will be read and people will be very interested, because there really are two sides to this issue. It was very well balanced today in Committee of the Whole, and I appreciate the debate of my colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak, though, a bit about the Canadian provinces, including B.C., Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, as well as other countries, Australia, New Zealand, many of the United States. They all have bicycle safety helmet legislation in place. A recent study conducted in B.C. after the 10-year anniversary of helmet legislation shows that legislation has drastically aided compliance. Mandatory helmet legislation does work, but I believe, much like my colleagues had mentioned earlier in Committee of the Whole, that it really should be working along with an education program.

More and more scientifically documented information becomes available every day. I found it very interesting over the past few months since Bill 209 was first introduced to read a great deal of new and helpful information in the area of efficacy of bicycle helmet protection. I now have three very large volumes of letters from renowned physicians and medical personnel and many others, as well as significant data and research. It ranges from the cost-effectiveness of bike helmet legislation to, as we said earlier and heard from colleagues, the need for education programs in order for our children and youth to change their bike riding habits so they'll include wearing a helmet so that they can live long, healthy lives.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to quote Dr. Dan McGowan, who took the time to write and give strong support to Bill 209. He wrote:

I am a physician specialist in Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation. Many of the people that I look after in hospital have suffered spinal cord injury and multiple trauma. Others on the unit have had traumatic brain injuries. Many of the events that caused these injuries could have been prevented. The cost to the health care system for life long care for these people runs in the millions. The impact on families is always devastating. The drain on health resources is immense. Research shows that bicycle helmets reduce the risk of brain injury by 88 percent and 77 percent of parents support it. There are pages of information to describe the benefits of helmet use, but isn't this enough? Wearing a bike helmet is, at worst, a nuisance or a small inconvenience. This is an opportunity to demonstrate preventative cost incurring strategies for health care not to mention the opportunity to protect our children.

Mr. Speaker, for clarification, how many minutes is it in third reading that we can speak?

THE CLERK: It's 20 minutes.

MRS. FRITZ: It is 20 minutes? Okay. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, every taxpayer pays for the cost of treating head injuries, and according to information from the center for disease control every dollar spent on a bike helmet results in a societal cost saving of $32. It must be understood that for everyone who has a bicycle-related accident and sustains a fall, whether the cause is a collision with a motor vehicle or a fall due to gravel, a pothole, loss of balance, whatever, it's still a fall. Everyone who falls from a bicycle is at risk for a head injury due to the mechanisms involved in the event: the speed of the bicycle, the height of the body exaggerated by biking position, the velocity of the head during the fall, and the rigidity of the impact surface. At the time of impact the brain, which is an organ of jellylike tissue, undergoes an additional internal collision within the confined space of the skull. The brain is the most important organ for all of us to protect from injury. It does not recover in the way a fracture from a fall will. In fact, people who sustain a brain injury can have effects from their injury for the rest of their life.

The efficiency of bicycle helmets is very high. An interesting summation at a recent research conference stated that far more lives can be saved through the application of known injury prevention strategies than would be saved with the next generation of vaccines currently being developed.

[Mr. Lougheed in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Kenneth Petruk, who is a proactive leader in the field of brain and spinal cord injuries, acknowledged through a written letter his strong support for Bill 209.

As Director of the Division of Neurosurgery at the University of Alberta and Regional Clinical Program Director of Neurosciences, Capital Health Authority, I strongly urge you to support this very important legislation. With the increasing cost of acute health care provision, it is now mandatory that a strong focus on preventative measures be undertaken by legislators, health care providers and leaders within the private sector. Recent scientific research has overwhelmingly demonstrated the efficacy of helmet protection against mild, moderate and severe head injuries. This reduction in brain injury incidence translates into a health care cost savings of hundreds of millions of dollars per year.

I respect what he has to say to this issue because he works in the field.

Mr. Speaker, last week, too, I had an opportunity to visit and tour the Stollery children's hospital here in Edmonton, and I understand that our Premier attended the opening ceremonies just three or four weeks ago. It's a beautiful pediatric hospital, and during the tour from the staff that are here today, I learned that children between five to 17 years of age fell into the most at-risk group for bike-related injuries. Mrs. Jackie Petruk, executive director, whom I introduced earlier, and Kathy Nykolyshyn and other staff, I thank you all for your wisdom. You're here with us today, and I thank you for showing me the data which stated that in 1999 there were 4,288 children and youth who went to the ER as a result of a bicycle injury; 162 were hospitalized. Sadly three young people died as a result of their bike accident. These are actual facts. It's raw data from the Stollery children's hospital.

In terms of a public health problem bike injuries really are the leading one for youth. I know we heard earlier about in-line skating, skateboarding, skiing, and snowboarding and whatnot, but this is really the number one problem, which is why we're beginning with this in this bill today. It's quite incredible really.

Also, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Louis Francescutti, director of the Alberta Center for Injury Control & Research, who deeply believes the positive effect that Bill 209 will have on so many lives, wrote:

Research has proven both the protective effect of helmets in reducing devastating and costly head injuries and of legislation in raising the awareness and usage of helmets by the public. Bicycle riders with helmets have an 85 percent reduction in their risk of head injury and an 88 percent reduction in their risk of brain injury. During the first year of legislation in Victoria, Australia, cyclists killed or hospitalized with head injuries decreased by 51 percent compared to the year before the legislation.

I trust and value what Dr. Francescutti has written.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

At our recent injury prevention and control conference he wrote:
Her Honour, the Honourable Lois Hole, Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, reminded us that the ultimate violation of an individual's rights is death or a severely disabling injury. Please take this to heart. The citizens of Alberta and, in particular, our children need your support.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it's clear that we need bicycle helmet legislation in this province. As I said earlier, I respect that there are both sides of this issue. It's been well stressed and spoken to here in the Legislature, but I am hoping and I ask the Assembly that they would let this come to a vote here today at third reading.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

MRS. GORDON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I first would like to begin by thanking my hon. colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross for bringing this bill forward, and I would like to compliment her. I've known the member for a number of years, even before she and I graced the hallowed halls of the Legislature, and she has always been one to do a very, very thorough job, just as she finished telling us about all the facts, statistics, the names of the people she's written to and talked to and that she had the opportunity to view a hospital. I think it attests to her ability that the people are in the gallery today. I thank them for coming.

Mr. Speaker, I grew up in a house where it was often said that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. I know with many, many people in my constituency and all over Alberta, their children are wearing bicycle helmets, so the passing of this legislation would not be a hardship on them. They're already doing it, but not everyone is. This is what the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross and the others that are in favour of this are trying to achieve. We want to protect these children.

I think what we're talking about here is a very low-cost investment whose yield will be very, very high. These helmets, as the hon. member and several members have talked about, will prevent skull fractures, prevent a life from being spent in a wheelchair, prevent the loss of human life. Part of what we have been dealing with with the revamping of health care over the last number of years is talking more about wellness and prevention, and I think that here what we're trying to do is talk about prevention.

While I am standing before you, I think back – and I think it was mentioned earlier – about the wearing of seat belts while driving a car and how all that came to be. There was a lot of controversy several years ago. Would it in fact save your life? Would it be cumbersome? Would people do it? What would be the fine? Et cetera, et cetera. We now know today that seat belts do save lives, and we do know that most, in fact all, jurisdictions in Canada have mandatory seat belt laws as well as several jurisdictions outside of Canada.

I know that in my particular area of central Alberta right now the RCMP, who are to be commended for the outstanding job they do on our highways – and I'm primarily talking about the RCMP that patrol highway 2, the central Alberta corridor – are very, very concerned about the number of male drivers under the age of 25 that refuse to buckle up. They right now in central Alberta have a huge advertising campaign to really encourage these young males drivers to please use their seat belts. In fact, now when there's a fatality, an RCMP officer will literally stand there and say: this life could have been saved if the individual had been wearing a seat belt.

So we do know from that history and that period of time that we did make the right decision in making people buckle up, and I think it was said here earlier that it has now become habit that most people just fall into and do. It isn't a hardship, and I don't think the mandatory use of helmets will be a hardship. I think that children will learn to wear them and will want to wear them. So I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that everyone in the House think back to when we made mandatory seat belts the law and where we are with seat belts and safety and the number of traffic deaths today compared to then per our population.

Again, I congratulate the member for her hard work, and I thank her.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak at third reading in support of the bill. I believe it's a good move, and I'm delighted that it's before the House. I do think, though, that it's just one piece of what is needed in terms of bicycle safety, and I looked at the national program that is carried on in the United States in terms of bicycle safety. That bicyclists wear helmets is just one part of a five-part program that their national strategy has in terms of making sure that people riding bicycles, in particular children, are kept safe, and the other four parts are important. I would hope that at some future date there might be consideration for a provincial initiative in terms of bicycle safety that would include some of the factors that are considered in the American national program.

The first goal for their program is that motorists will share the road. This is an important goal, and making motorists aware of the need to make way to accommodate bicyclists is an important goal. Any of you who have driven in this city and been near the university campus and other parts of the city where there are bicycle riders trying to share the road know that the kinds of indignities they suffer I think sometimes border on the very, very dangerous.

A second goal of the national program and, I think, a worthy one is that bicyclists will ride safely. That, I think, has been referred to by a number of members in debate, that along with the helmet program we need to make sure there's an education program in place that will make bike riders very aware of their obligations to ride safely for their own safety.

A fourth goal of the national program is that the legal system will support safe bicycling. They go on to mention the need for courts and the law system to be aware of bicycle safety statistics and to accommodate that awareness in the kinds of judgments that are being made and the work that is done that involves legal bicycle safety.

The last goal that they have is that roads and paths will safely accommodate bicyclists. I think that this is something that we have made a little progress on. There are bicycle routes set aside, lane-marked in some areas, and certainly bicycle routes within the city, but if you ride some of those routes, for instance in the southwest part of the city, they are still designed as an afterthought to the transportation in the city. Certainly even when the bike trails are marked, you have to be extremely careful. The other disconcerting thing is they can end without any notice, so you can be on a trail and find yourself stranded and having to get out on the road with the traffic.

I think the five goals of that national program are worthy of consideration here, and the passage of this bill, I think, this afternoon hopefully is just the beginning of a more comprehensive bicycle safety program.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

MR. HLADY: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate you allowing me to stand today. I'd like to thank, as many others have, the Member for Calgary-Cross for doing this. I first introduced this back in about 1994, and this House wasn't ready for this legislation back then. I'm glad it is today.

I guess many people have talked to it from many different angles. What I wanted to do is strictly go from an economic point and make that point for a moment and the cost to our society and why it's necessary. I think the reason for the legislation is because our society is not quite into the libertarian mode and to accept it at that level. We aren't accountable. Therefore, there is a need for this to help make sure that we can make it a safer society. That's why it's there. The example is that if in a libertarian society you would allow people to choose whether or not you wanted to do this or not, then you'd also be responsible for having to take care of the costs. It is a major cost, and that's been referred to many times. In talking to the neurosurgeons in the Calgary regional health authority, they know, as do other doctors across the province and across Canada, that the costs are horrendous when we have someone who hasn't had a helmet on.

Quickly, I would like to tell a short story of why I had first introduced it and why I think this is still important today. Many people here would know of Bill Almdahl. Bill Almdahl is a person that many people would have known through the oil sands. Originally from Calgary, he was working up in Fort McMurray. He had a son. His name was Mike Almdahl. Mike Almdahl was a provincial road race champion two years in a row, a national team cyclist, an excellent cyclist. His skill was unbelievable. We were on the same team. I was a triathlete; he was a road racer. In Calgary he was riding along Bowness Road by Shaganappi Trail, heading toward the intersection. A car turned in front of him, cut him off, and his head hit the frame coming up the side of the door. He was in a coma for a few days, and he ended up passing away. A very sad story. The best skilled person that you could find to be on a bike doesn't have a chance against a car.

The sad part is another one of our teammates had been out for a training ride the week before, and he had a helmet on. Almost the exact same accident in a different location. He did run his head into the side of the door when he was cut off by a car. He had a helmet on. He was in the hospital for a week.

A sad loss of life that didn't have to happen. I will be supporting this legislation, so thank you for bringing it forward.

[Mr. Rathgeber rose]

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

4:50

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, I sure hope you get an opportunity. You've been very persistent.

Again, I certainly appreciate the opportunity to speak to Bill 209 in third reading, and I once again congratulate the Member for Calgary-Cross on bringing this bill forward.

When we look back in this province, Mr. Speaker, we see that initially when seat belts were introduced, they were not accepted. Today the majority of us don't think twice about strapping on our seat belt before we leave a location in our car. At one time we had a tremendous amount of resistance to wearing helmets when we rode motorcycles in this province. Today we don't have any problems with that. When we think of the range of people and the types of people that ride motorcycles, if they're quite prepared to wear helmets, then why can't we have our children wear helmets?

A few years ago we had a law introduced in this province where children, young babies, had to be strapped into their car seats, and today in hospitals in this province they will not give up that baby to the parents unless there is an approved car seat in that car. So here we have it today that we are violating the rights of children to try and get a very worthwhile bill passed, but we didn't violate the rights of adults riding in cars or of people that wanted to ride motorcycles or of babies who were riding in car seats. Now, why can we not have protection for all members of this society?

When I look at those other examples that I have given, Mr. Speaker, we passed those laws here in this province, and we have moved on to the betterment of this society. So, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View said, this certainly is long overdue legislation and certainly legislation that I would again urge all members of this Assembly to pass today.

When we look at cycling in Canada, Mr. Speaker, it is the number one activity; that is, of course, when the weather co-operates. The types of risks that our cyclists are exposed to are certainly reflected by the great variety and types of bikes that they have to ride. We have to realize here as well that in Canada we have more bikes than we have cars, and whereas lately the sales of bikes have flattened out, we find that the number of miles traveled by bike in Canada has increased greatly. We use the bike more and more for transportation, but an even greater increase of use is for fitness. We also know that 2 percent of motor vehicle related deaths are bicyclists. The most serious of these injuries is to the head.

We know that bike helmets are designed for two major reasons. We look and we see that in the design of that helmet we have a hard outer cover and a very soft interior. These are built that way specifically for two reasons. One, of course, is that the hard outer shell is for instances when people are thrown off their bikes and slide along the pavement or the roadway, the gravel or whatever. The softer, thicker padding inside is put there for those occasions when the cyclist strikes some type of a fixed object, and in doing so, they have to pad the brain and prevent what could be serious injuries occurring.

MS BLAKEMAN: It collapses; doesn't it?

MR. BONNER: Yes. It does collapse.

As well, one of the recommendations that manufacturers of bike helmets have is that once you've been involved in any type of a serious blow to those helmets, we discard the helmet and get a new one.

Now, as well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross indicated that there is an 85 percent reduction in head injuries when people wear bike helmets, and there's also an 88 percent reduction in brain injuries when they are wearing helmets. It is critical that we pass this legislation. We all know that cyclists have the same rights and responsibilities that drivers have when they're on the road. We know that there are a number of organizations where bicycle helmets are mandatory if you wish to participate, and of course in any racing that is done in the United States people must wear bicycle helmets. As well, in the Olympics anybody participating must use a bike helmet. So in doing this, I don't think we are infringing upon people's rights. We are giving them an opportunity to participate in an activity where they can be very, very safe.

Now, then, as well, Mr. Speaker, we have an organization here in Edmonton called Sport Central. Sport Central provides sporting equipment to disadvantaged children free of charge. Of course, one of the pieces of equipment that they pass out – and they have just a tremendous call for these in the spring – are bicycles, but before any child is issued a bike, the one thing they must promise is that they will wear a helmet when they ride that bike. As well, they provide that child with a helmet.

Now, are we talking about a big expense here? Absolutely not. The cost of a bike helmet today that is CSA approved is somewhere in the neighbourhood of $10 to $15. We can certainly get Cadillac varieties that are much more expensive than this, but it is not a big expense when people are looking at riding bikes. It is amazing that when we see people skateboarding, they have all the various safety equipment on. So, as well, I think that when we are looking at this particular issue, to expect somebody to wear a bike helmet when they're riding a bike, when they are traveling at speeds in excess of 30 miles an hour, we certainly are not doing anything out of the ordinary.

The Bicycle Helmet Safety Institute has tracked what happens with the helmet use rates when legislation is passed, and it's amazing in the United States, Mr. Speaker, that in nine out of 10 jurisdictions that have passed bicycle helmet safety legislation, the increase in the use is certainly much more, and it certainly has not impacted the use of bicycles. So we are not looking at something that's going to restrict people riding bicycles here at all.

We have also had a tremendous amount of scientific research over the past few years, and this certainly indicates, Mr. Speaker, that if we wear the right types of protective equipment when we are involved in various sporting activities, whatever they may be, then certainly the incidence of injury is going to go down and the severity of that injury is going to go down.

Mr. Speaker, there is so much consumer awareness today that society has at its fingertips. So I would urge all members to look at that scientific evidence, to realize that a bicycle helmet law in this province is long overdue, and to please vote for Bill 209. Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

MR. RATHGEBER: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to stand and finally get to speak in support of Bill 209. This bill is taking a necessary step in the protection of Alberta's youth.

Bicycling involves extraordinary risks which cannot be ignored. The speed that a bike can travel, even with a child on as a rider, can be well in excess of any speed required to sustain severe head or spinal cord injury in the event of any collision. In passing this bill, we will be acknowledging the inherent risks involved in cycling and informing children that these risks are never to be taken lightly. This bill and what it aims to achieve is extremely relevant in today's society and will only become an increasingly important consideration.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has grown over the past century and has become more and more urban. There are more hazards for cyclists today and more paved surfaces that not only facilitate a much greater speed but also are far less forgiving in the event of a crash. Bicycle technology has also changed, and today's bicycles are more efficient. They can travel across far more jagged terrain and can even sustain the impact of a crash far better than bikes built during the days of our youth. There are far more recreational options for cyclists, and many are so risky that even experienced cyclists would never consider riding without a safety helmet.

Nevertheless, children often have to learn the hard way that function, safety, and responsibility must come before fashion. Although many would much rather sail over bumps and hills with the wind flowing freely through their hair, sooner or later one of those bumps will bump back, and the price may be much dearer than only a scraped knee. In far too many instances throughout Alberta children are severely and permanently injured in falls off bicycles. What is tragic is that most of these injuries could have been avoided through the proper use of a bicycle safety helmet. The technology for bicycle helmets has also progressed in the past decade. Lighter weight yet strong, they provide minimal burden to the rider, yet in the event of a fall they provide extraordinary protection.

Mr. Speaker, bicycles are not just a harmless diversion or a toy. They are amazing machines capable of carrying people at speeds in excess of 50 kilometres per hour. Unfortunately, their capabilities are often not respected, and when there is a loss of control, a tragedy can result. Head and spine injuries have much further reaching consequences than any other type of injury. Injury to the brain can lead to behavioural problems, memory loss, and even loss of physical control. A spinal injury can be more devastating, leaving some with permanent paralysis of the lower limbs or even the entire body. Medical science cannot treat these conditions. They are irreversible by all known methods of treatment. The old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is inapplicable to this situation because brain and spinal cord injuries have no cure. In this case an ounce of prevention has a value that cannot be measured.

Mr. Speaker, when we consider the asset that we will be protecting, there is a clear responsibility on the part of this Legislature to pass Bill 209. We may save only one life or prevent one innocent child from becoming severely disabled, but that is enough incentive for me to vote in favour of this bill. With an increasingly traffic-congested and chaotic series of roadways, we must ensure the security of young cyclists. Bill 209 affirms that Alberta's youth is valuable and worth protecting.

This has been an interesting debate, Mr. Speaker, and I've listened to both sides of it. I agree with the members who are not in favour of this bill that this ought to be a parental responsibility, but the reality is that if all parents lived up to this responsibility, we would not need this bill. The fact that we see so many cases of children being taken to emergency clinics with preventable bike-related injuries means that unfortunately some parents do not measure up to that responsibility, and it's for the children involved in those situations that we need this legislation. Children might not always appreciate what we do for them in protecting their safety, but we nevertheless recognize the necessity of setting reasonable limits upon them. I feel that this bill will help Alberta parents protect their children, and I encourage all members of the Assembly to support this bill.

I thank the Member for Calgary-Cross for her hard work and efforts in sponsoring this bill, and I hope that all members will help her make this bill become law in the province of Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

MRS. JABLONSKI: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to speak in support of Bill 209, Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001. We have all fallen off our bicycles at one time or another. We have seen and heard of others doing the same. Learning to ride a bike is a rite of passage for Alberta's youngsters, an early taste of independence from their parents. It's a part of growing up. So, too, are the cuts and scratches that come with occasionally falling off. Unfortunately, not all tumbles from bicycles are minor or harmless. In 1999 children and teens under the age of 17 made over 450 trips to Alberta emergency rooms for bicycle-related head injuries. People say that you never forget how to ride a bicycle. I hope they always remember to wear an approved safety helmet. With roughly nine out of 10 Canadian children aged 10 to 14 riding bikes, this is something that must be taught and enforced from a very early age.

Bill 209 requires that nobody under the age of 18 shall operate or ride on a bicycle unless they are wearing a regulated bicycle safety helmet and that it is the parent's or guardian's responsibility to ensure this to the best of their abilities. In addition, this legislation would require that only safety helmets that meet the regulated specifications of the Canadian Standards Association could be bought or sold in Alberta for use by operators or passengers on bicycles.

Mr. Speaker, the wording and intent of this legislation are very clear about putting children's safety first. Bill 209 has been backed up by mountains of evidence over the years that bicycle helmets save lives and prevent injuries. In fact, helmets have been shown to reduce the likelihood of head injury by 85 percent and brain injury by 88 percent. In spite of years of educational programming promoting bicycle helmets, too many young Albertans are still not wearing helmets when bicycling. This is why the Alberta government needs to introduce and enforce mandatory bike helmet legislation.

Bill 209 is no more an impingement on the freedom of choice of youngsters or their parents or guardians than laws concerning underage drinking and seat belts. It's a matter of health and safety. Many of us know someone who has been spared death or serious head injury thanks to their bicycle helmet. I think the member for Calgary-Mountain View made that point very clearly. Believe me; these people are not worried about the cost of a good helmet or how wearing one might make them look. Surviving and realizing one's full potential in life are worth far more and look much more cool than the alternative.

One of the potential benefits of Bill 209 is that a mandatory bicycle helmet law for minors could encourage more adults to wear helmets when cycling. This is particularly true of parents or guardians who wish to lead by example while requiring their children to observe the helmet law. With such a law in effect I would not be surprised to see a drop in the number of visits to Alberta's emergency rooms by adults in addition to minors with bicycle-related head injuries.

Mr. Speaker, there are already bicycle helmet laws in Ontario and British Columbia. The laws have served these provinces well, with solid increases in the use of helmets and a decrease in bicycle-related head injuries. With Bill 209 we will be taking yet another step to ensure that our youngsters have every opportunity to grow up and become Alberta's future leaders. We owe this to them and to ourselves.

For young people cycling is a sport, a hobby, or even a job. The same is true for football and ice hockey, in which safety helmets are the norm. Granted, cycling is not a contact sport or activity. However, cyclists compete on their asphalt and concrete playing fields not only with other cyclists but with cars and trucks, that outweigh and outpace them by many times. Young cyclists must also contend with their own developing reflexes and equilibrium in addition to obstacles such as pedestrians and uneven sidewalks and roads. Collisions and falls cannot always be prevented. However, we must do everything possible to minimize the risk of serious injuries when bicycle crashes do occur. Bill 209 would be an important step in accomplishing this.

I would encourage everyone to support this bill. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

MR. MAGNUS: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank you for the opportunity to speak to Bill 209 this afternoon. You know, in listening to this debate – and I've listened fairly carefully – there have been a lot of statistics thrown about and talked about, all the good reasons for bringing this bill into place. But I think what this bill is about, plainly put, is common sense. Some people have it and some don't. I remember my mother's favourite expression was always: if you expect common sense from someone else, you haven't got any yourself. However, I would like to state that we as adults . . . [interjection] Did you guys just get that? I'm glad to see I'm waking them up now.

I'd like to state that we as adults and as lawmakers rightly or wrongly make the assumption that most children do not have the same level of common sense as adults. We see countless laws that prevent children from doing some things that adults are free to do. Laws related to the consumption of alcohol or cigarettes come to mind right off the bat. We make these laws because we don't feel that children have the requisite life experience to make fully informed decisions about the consumption of these products. We also have a little law in place that says that you can't quit school until you're 16. I have to tell you as the father of three teenagers that none of them prior to 16 wanted to go to school. They'd all quit if we didn't have that law in place. It's just another example.

Also, we look at the criminal justice system. We see that we give children lighter sentences, second chances, and the benefit of the doubt when they break the law. We do this not because their acts are objectively less harmful but because we make the assumption that most minors do not have the life experience necessary to fully understand the scope of their actions.

Part of our job as parents and as role models in society is to help educate our children about the right way to do things and the consequences of those things that they do. Mr. Speaker, what I'm trying to get at here is this. When we make this assumption, we do it in the name of protecting the safety of our children so that they can become responsible adults capable of leading their children into the future. This is really at the heart of the bill proposed by the Member for Calgary-Cross, and I would like to join the legion of fans for this member bringing this bill forward. It isn't a punishment of children; it is the introduction of a responsible measure.

I believe I have a few minutes left; don't I, Mr. Speaker?

It is, admittedly, government telling children that we know what is best for them, but if anyone here could name me a government that doesn't do this with children, I'd be very, very surprised. Our own government, which takes great pains to get out of the personal lives of citizens, often tells children what to do. We do it in the name of common sense – there's that word again: common sense – and public and personal safety. In this regard Bill 209 is a prudent step.

On the other hand, I've heard it argued that this bill tells parents how to raise their children, Mr. Speaker. Some have even gone so far as to call this bill an imposition into the personal lives of individuals, parents, and families. In response I'd like to again revert to the common sense argument. In most cases we do not have laws to tell people with common sense what to do. For the most part we have laws to protect decent people with common sense from those who do not act with that same common sense. As an 18-year-old motorcycle driver – and I won't tell you how many years ago that was – I can recall very clearly that I was not happy when the Alberta government brought in motorcycle helmet laws. On the other hand, I've had a number of experiences in my life and through people and acquaintances that I've known that have had accidents on motorcycles. Today were I to get on a motorcycle – I'd love to ride a Harley,

I have to tell you – I frankly would not get on one without that helmet. Now, that's changed over 30 years. Again, common sense.

Mr. Speaker, this may be a bold assertion, but I'll make it anyway: anyone who lets their child get on a bike without a helmet is obviously lacking in common sense. While they may have unlimited faith in their five year olds to safely navigate our streets, do they really have that much faith in everyone else to be safe around their children? In both the child and the others on the road – other bikers, other motorists, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera – there is a huge margin for error. As adults we may decide to take that risk, but we should not let our children do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all of my colleagues here today to exercise some of their own common sense and pass Bill 209. Thank you very much.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

MS KRYCZKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to speak this afternoon on Bill 209, the Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001. What I'd like to do is address three questions surrounding this bill: are bicycle helmets necessary, will all Albertans be able to afford helmets for their children, and, finally, will children actually wear helmets even if the legislation exists for them to do so?

I believe that the comments my colleagues have made on this bill in the past few months and today especially as this bill has gone through the readings and through Committee of the Whole have made it clear that bicycle helmets certainly do make an enormous contribution to reducing deaths and injuries to children. It is foolish for all people and especially children not to be wearing a bicycle helmet when riding.

Just a few statistics from the United States that confirm this point one more time. Medical research shows that 85 percent of cyclists' head injuries can be prevented by using a bicycle helmet. More than 800 bicycle riders are killed each year in the United States alone, almost all in collisions with cars. Seventy-five percent of these deaths are the result of head injuries. Many other thousands of cyclists suffer less severe but still debilitating brain injuries which are far worse than the physical pain of scraped skin or even broken bones. Children can suffer permanent personality changes and learning disabilities from a brain injury. Other common long-term effects include concentration difficulties, aggressiveness, headaches, and balance problems. Imagine the anguish any parent would feel if this happened to their child. I would have to say on a personal note that I have listened to parents who have been in my constituency office who have told me stories that are reflective of exactly what I've just said.

The need for children to wear helmets is clear, but what of the concern that mandating bicycle helmets for children will cost Alberta parents money they don't have? A concern has been expressed for low-income Albertans in that the cost of a bicycle helmet can be a significant financial challenge. In fact, Mr. Speaker, quality bicycle helmets can be purchased for as low as $30, sometimes even less when sales are on. Some parents might object saying that $30 is misleading because children will need many helmets as they grow up. In fact, a child needs surprisingly few helmets throughout their growth cycle. Heads do not grow nearly as much or as fast as arms or legs, and many helmets come with two or even three sets of foam fitting pads. When I say that helmet costs are only $30, this is not to say that $30 is not a substantial burden for some Albertans, but when this price is compared against the potential injury to a child, is there a parent who can afford not to buy a helmet for their child?

A final concern I wish to address, Mr. Speaker, is whether the bill will have an actual impact on the Alberta community resulting in more children wearing helmets. Well, similar laws passed in other jurisdictions have made a mark on helmet usage and have significantly reduced the incidence of head injury. New Jersey, for instance, passed a law calling for mandatory use of bike helmets for people under the age of 16, and after five years of enforcement New Jersey reported a 60 percent reduction in fatalities for the age group covered by the law. Many states and dozens of counties and cities have passed similar legislation in hopes of attaining these results. Of course, it's ultimately up to the child, though, to decide whether they wish to wear a helmet or not.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Calgary-West, but Standing Order 8(5)(a)(iii) provides for up to five minutes for the sponsor of a private member's public bill to close debate. Therefore, I invite the hon. Member for Calgary-Cross to close debate on Bill 209.

MRS. FRITZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to close debate on Bill 209. In doing so, I sincerely want to thank all members of the Assembly who have encouraged me and guided me with their wisdom from both sides of the debate. It's been a well-balanced debate which is essential for the public to hear. I'd also like to thank, as I mentioned earlier, the staff that are here from the Stollery children's hospital and especially to thank the hon. Minister of Transportation and his staff as well for their guidance.

So I appreciate that, and with that I'm calling for the vote.

[Motion carried; Bill 209 read a third time]

5:20

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been a very good afternoon of excellent progress once again, and I would move that we now call it 5:30 and reconvene this evening at 8.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:21 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, November 28, 2001 8:00 p.m.
 Date: 01/11/28
 [Mr. Shariff in the chair]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Please be seated. Before I recognize the hon. minister, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

MR. LOUGHEED: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and to the members of the Assembly present the 153rd Ardrossan Scouts, who are accompanied by their leaders Garth Petryk, Harold Petryk, Andrew Otway, and Steve Otway as well as Ken Ferguson. The 153rd are mostly residents of the Ardrossan area. We also have some tie this evening. The son of our Sergeant-at-Arms was a member of the 153rd at one time. Would you please rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly?

Thank you.

Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act Review Committee

22. Mr. Coutts moved:
 Be it resolved that
- (1) A Select Special Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act Review Committee of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be appointed to review the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act as provided in section 91 of that act, consisting of the following members, namely Mr. Rathgeber, chairman; Mrs. Jablonski, deputy chairman; Ms Carlson; Ms DeLong; Mr. Jacobs; Mr. Lukaszuk; Mr. MacDonald; Mr. Mason; and Mr. Masyk.
  - (2) The chair and members of the committee shall be paid in accordance with the schedule of category A committees provided in the most recent Members' Services Committee allowances order.
  - (3) Reasonable disbursements by the committee for advertising, staff assistance, equipment and supplies, rent, travel, and other expenditures necessary for the effective conduct of its responsibilities shall be paid subject to the approval of the chair.
  - (4) In carrying out its duties, the committee may undertake limited travel within Alberta to consult with interested Albertans.
  - (5) In carrying out its responsibilities, the committee may with the concurrence of the head of the department utilize the services of the public service employed in that department or the staff employed by the Assembly or the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner.
  - (6) The committee may without leave of the Assembly sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned.
  - (7) The committee must submit its report, including any proposed amendments to the act, within one year after commencing its review.
  - (8) When its work has been completed, the committee must report to the Assembly if it is then sitting. During a period when the Assembly is adjourned, the committee may release its report by depositing a copy with the Clerk and forwarding a copy to each member of the Assembly.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Seeing nobody else wishing to speak, the hon. Minister of Government Services to close debate.

MR. COUTTS: I close debate, Mr. Speaker.

[Government Motion 22 carried]

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Hon. members, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. HUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two wonderful constituents sitting in the public gallery this evening, and I'm not the only one in the room that thinks they're wonderful. Parliamentary Counsel's wife and son are here this evening. They are residents of Glenora, and I would ask them to please stand and be recognized by the Assembly. They're Ritu Khullar and Rob's son, Samir Reynolds. I'd like you to rise and receive the warm welcome of the House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Bill 24 Regulated Forestry Profession Amendment Act, 2001

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

MR. STRANG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move third reading of Bill 24, the Regulated Forestry Profession Amendment Act, 2001.

The new Regulated Forestry Profession Amendment Act will replace the Forestry Profession Act and consolidate the regulations of Alberta's two professional forestry associations under one statute. The new act was developed to improve the quality of forest service throughout the province by enhancing the professional requirements of foresters and forest technologists. By continuing to ensure high-quality standards within the forestry profession, the act serves to protect both the public interest and Alberta's sustainable forest resource.

I wish to acknowledge the efforts of both forestry associations, the Alberta Registered Professional Foresters Association and the Alberta Forest Technologists Association, together with Human Resources and Employment and the Alberta sustainable resource department in developing these amendments. Mr. Speaker, I think this is a great example of two organizations getting together and looking at the public good and working to make sure our forests are there for our grandchildren as well as our great-grandchildren.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We support this bill in third reading.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead to close debate.

MR. STRANG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I'd like to certainly thank all members in the House for this aspect of going over this Regulated Forestry Profession Amendment Act. I think our forests will be well protected by this.

Thank you very much.

[Motion carried; Bill 24 read a third time]

Bill 25

Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice I'm pleased to move third reading of Bill 25, which is the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to spend some time putting on the record some concerns that I have about the bill. I did express some of those concerns when I spoke earlier on the bill. I continue to harbour those concerns and also have had, of course, the advantage of having had some time to reflect further on those concerns, so I would like to spend some time sharing those concerns with the House and putting them on record.

It's a very important bill. It's a bill that will certainly do two things: assure victims of crime that they are compensated for the loss, personal or financial, that they may have incurred as a result of the crime committed against them, and this bill also will ensure that the proceeds of crime are not left with the people who are guilty of committing those crimes and are taken away from them and used, in fact, to compensate the victims of those very crimes. So I am fully supportive and the New Democrat caucus is fully supportive of those principles and intentions behind the bill. But because this bill deals with the powers of police, powers of the state, and powers of the courts when dealing with the matters that are covered under this act, I want to make some observations on the nature of the concerns that I think the House should take note of. At this late stage in the debate on this bill the only thing I can hope for is that in developing the regulations for this bill, some of these concerns, if not all of these concerns, will be addressed by the minister and the department.

Mr. Speaker, I'll make my observations relative to two or three different parts of the bill. First of all, dealing with part 1 of the bill, part 1 of this legislation is extremely broad and in my view invades the federal law powers related to criminal law. It's a matter that I raised before in my earlier observations, and I want to reiterate this. The province obviously cannot assume such authority, particularly when it is so directly related to "illegal acts," which includes a contravention of the Criminal Code and other federal legislation. It was a point I made on that day; I'm making it more explicit now.

My further study of this act leads me to also observe that this part of the act may be unconstitutional as it does invade federal criminal law jurisdiction and in any event is overly broad in its scope. I had the benefit of consulting with some defence lawyers, and one of them observed – and I want to share that observation with the House – that it was reminiscent of Cicero's days, when a successful prosecutor was able to take an individual's property as part of his or her award. Several individuals might want to allege illegal acts simply to obtain another person's property, and that remains a concern of mine here. There's nowhere a clear definition or process described or defined in this act which would help the courts determine who the real victim is. Who is the victim? I think that still remains a question.

This part also makes the unfortunate assumption that individuals are victims – and this is a point that I just made – without a court having found that to be the case. That's what I mean when I say that there's an absence in this act of any procedure that would allow the courts to determine who the victim in fact is. We are well aware of the numerous cases where people claim to be victims and after trial were found in fact to be perpetrators and not victims.

Section 4(2) permits an ex parte application, which in my view is again rather dangerous and out of step with present criminal and civil practices in providing notice to other parties. There is no reason why, if such application is to be brought, the possessor of the property does not receive notice. These portions of the act may be struck down as being in violation of the natural rules of justice.

Section 5, again in my view sets too low a standard, permitting the court to be satisfied only on "reasonable grounds," which in the judgment of people that I have consulted is lower than even the civil standard of balance of probabilities. It appears to me, therefore, that if property is going to be seized as a result of illegal acts, the test ought to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

Section 5(3) also raises some difficult questions; for example, where there is no necessity to charge or convict anyone of an illegal act. This leave open the possibility that where it appears to be an illegal act, property can be seized. Imagine the bank manager who fears that a loan is in jeopardy, who perceives the act of his customer to be illegal. Pursuant to this legislation, with the help of the state the individual's bank account could be seized without notice in order to secure the outstanding indebtedness. I suspect that writing a cheque when there are not sufficient funds to cover the cheque but when the customer believes there are sufficient funds might be considered an illegal act, and reasonable grounds could be made. This is the kind of potential mischief that the legislation can create.

I think that I'm concerned about the provisions of section 6, which would allow a police officer, for example, in essence to provide a restraint order based upon reasonable grounds only. This means that the police officer could seize the item or restrain it in some fashion without the concordance of a judge. It appears to me that section 6 is in direct violation of section 8 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, which protects all of us from unreasonable search and seizure. The Supreme Court of Canada in the case of Hunter versus Southam held that any search and seizure without judicial authorization is presumed to be unreasonable and unlawful. This legislation is totally inconsistent with that cornerstone decision. At a minimum the police officer should have to obtain a warrant from a judicial officer, which in these days can be obtained by a tally warrant system. That at least would protect the individual from an unlawful seizure. Section 6 in my view in that sense is seriously flawed and may in fact be unconstitutional.

Section 6 is not saved by subsection (3) or any of the judicial reviews that occur later, as provided for in this piece of legislation. What has been found in the past is that the police drag their feet on these sorts of things, and the courts subsequently condone that practice by issuing retroactive orders, therefore protecting the police and its actions.

It's of interest that section 6(6) provides for a penalty for anyone who fails to comply with the direction but does not provide for a penalty against the seizing individual where the seizure may subsequently be proven to have been unlawful, unreasonable, or unconstitutional. I did make that point when I spoke a few days ago on this bill. This matter has not really been addressed at all in the bill at this stage in third reading.

So in relation to my observations relating to part 1, one must bear in mind that the Criminal Code now has a specific section that deals with restitution and the use of Criminal Code judgments, which can be enforced without the necessity of a trial. One wonders in light of that why the government feels that this particular provision of the legislation is necessary.

In addition, this type of legislation waylays the longstanding tradition of civil disputes being settled between the parties involved. This now allows a plaintiff to pursue another person's property using the state and the state's resources. One can see quickly how this legislation can be abused and undoubtedly will be if this flaw is not removed and this bill becomes law.

Now to part 2 of the bill, Mr. Speaker. I'm concerned that once the minister is to be a party against the respondent – that is, the accused person – this means that the state will carry the expense of the restitution application and the respondent will have to bear that cost himself or herself. This is an attempt by the state to avoid a plaintiff bringing a civil action and in my view ought not to be permitted.

Section 25(1) is extremely problematic, Mr. Speaker, in that it requires the offender to provide documentary evidence as to his or her assets. As you can appreciate, in a civil case this might not be mandatory, but in this instance the individual would be subject to contempt of court or further punishment by the court for failing to provide this kind of information.

Section 25(2) does not appear to contemplate the alleged victim testifying; rather, the restitution assistance hearing will proceed based upon representations only. Despite the fact that the Criminal Code does not provide the power to have someone denied their liberty in this instance, the courts are permitted to bind the offender over to appear for the hearing where one has failed to attend. This suggests that somehow the province has the right to deny the individual bail. In my view, this is likely to be unconstitutional again, Mr. Speaker.

So these are some of the concerns that I have. They're based on sound advice from lawyers who have long experience in defence. I hope that in the drawing of the regulations some of these matters will be addressed or at least will be considered and that before this piece of legislation is proclaimed, those concerns will be explicitly addressed. I think it's in the interest of all of us and in the interest of justice and in the interest of maintaining the integrity of the justice system that we address those issues.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to close debate.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did listen very intently to the hon. member opposite, and I assure him that his comments will be brought to the attention of the mover of the bill, the hon. Minister of Justice. With that, I would close off debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a third time]

Bill 26
Trustee Amendment Act, 2001

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise again on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice to move at third reading Bill 26, the Trustee Amendment Act, 2001.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've had some concerns about this bill but in general support it, so we'll support it at third reading.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to close debate.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Justice I want to thank all members of the House, including those opposite, for their support. With that, I will close debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a third time]

Bill 27
Provincial Court Amendment Act, 2001

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice I'm pleased to move at third reading Bill 27, that being the Provincial Court Amendment Act, 2001.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that we have been pleased to support at all readings, and we will continue to do so.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to close debate.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice, thank you to all members in the House for their support. With that, we'll close debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 27 read a third time]

Bill 29
Alberta Municipal Financing Corporation
Amendment Act, 2001

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance on behalf of the Member for Calgary-North Hill.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Calgary-North Hill I move third reading of the Alberta Municipal Financing Corporation Amendment Act, 2001.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, once again this is a bill that we have been happy to support at all readings, and we will do so again.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance on behalf of the Member for Calgary-North Hill to close debate.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased with the support from the House on this bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 29 read a third time]

Bill 30
Appropriation (Supplementary Supply)
Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to move third reading of Bill 30, Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2001 (No. 2).

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that we have a lot of problems with in terms of the process by which the government decides what it will and will not fund, but I think that we have had adequate debate about that at other levels in this Legislature, so we will call for the question.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Finance to close debate.

MRS. NELSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the debate that has occurred through the process of this bill and have noted the comments from the opposition and thank them for their support in third reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 30 read a third time]

Bill 31
Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Justice minister it's my pleasure to move for second reading consideration Bill 31, the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2).

Miscellaneous Statutes typically is not a debated bill in the Assembly because it comes to the House under an all-party agreement, as everyone knows. However, another informal all-party agreement has been reached whereby the Electoral Boundaries Commission change outlined in Bill 31 will be discussed this evening and tomorrow afternoon under the following understanding: first, this evening in Committee of the Whole the Opposition House

Leader and the leader of the third party New Democrats will speak; secondly, tomorrow afternoon interested members will have an opportunity to speak at third reading, the only proviso being that all do understand that Bill 31 will pass third reading prior to 5:15 p.m., when Her Honour is expected to attend upon the Assembly to grant royal assent to bills awaiting royal assent, including Miscellaneous Statutes.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

8:30

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to close debate.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With those comments I would ask for debate to be closed.

[Motion carried; Bill 31 read a second time]

head: Government Bills and Orders
head: Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We shall call the committee to order.

Bill 31
Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We do have one amendment that we'd like to place on the floor at this time. I believe there are copies available for distribution. As it's going around, I think I should just point out that the nature of this amendment is simply to correct a small typographical error which unfortunately occurred. So this particular amendment to Bill 31, which of course is the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2), deals with that typographical error.

Specifically, while it's being circulated, with your permission, Mr. Chairman, I would just read what that amendment is all about in order that we might proceed more expeditiously in dealing with it. The suggestion is to amend the bill as follows. In part A section 7(8) is amended by striking out "(4)" and substituting "(6)." That is the entire amendment. As I indicated, it is purely a clerical error, and we would certainly ask for the support of everyone and their understanding to see this amendment dealt with in order that we can get on with the rest of the debate during the committee stage.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: We shall refer to this amendment as amendment A1.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Chairman, we support the request for this particular amendment and call for the question on the amendment.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Happy to take this opportunity to start the debate on the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, part of the miscellaneous statutes amendments as we see them before us. We are happy to support this particular amendment, which requests that a commission be appointed on or before June 30, 2002, which actually states a specific date, which is only laid out in terms of years in the original commission act. We say that this couldn't happen too soon. Because of the nature of the agreement for our debate tomorrow afternoon, I will take some time this evening to go over the history of what's happened with the boundaries distribution in this province for the past couple of decades to indicate why it is that this is required and that it's very important for us to have an opportunity to debate boundaries and the way boundaries are drawn in this province given the kind of past history we've seen in this province.

Mr. Chairman, as every citizen of Alberta knows or should know, the Charter of Rights and Freedoms gives Canadians the right to vote in an election of members of the House of Commons and here in the Legislative Assembly. This right to vote is guaranteed, but it doesn't mean that every Albertan actually gets a vote of equal value. In this province traditionally since 1951 we've seen that rural ballots have a great deal more weight than those in the city. This is an unpopular statement to make in this province, because everybody always wants to capture the rural population in an election. Traditionally, for the last 30 years or so, that capture of votes has gone to the Conservatives, and nobody really wants to rock the boat on this issue, but it is really important to stand up and be counted on this particular issue in terms of what's right and what's wrong. If the Charter of Rights and Freedoms gives Canadians a vote, it is not a bonus. It is a right that we are given under our Charter. That vote is guaranteed and, we believe, should be of equal value.

Now, what does equal value mean in terms of the kind of legislation we see before us? It may not be a one-for-one vote, Mr. Chairman – I'm not saying that – but at least it has to be reasonable. As people who work in this building have said to me, their vote here in Edmonton or in Calgary or any other urban center should be equal to every other riding in this province. So that is what comes up for debate when we take a look at the amendment that's being brought in to establish electoral boundaries.

There's been a significant imbalance in urban versus rural representation in Alberta since certainly the late '60s. Back in the early '50s Alberta rural residents outnumbered urban dwellers, Mr. Chairman, but by 1957, which is the year I was born, the balance had shifted with more people living in cities than in the country. At that time 150,000 to 200,000 more lived in the cities than in the country. According to the Canada West Foundation, in 1996 the provincial census put the ratio at 4 to 1, or almost 80 percent urban population and 20 percent rural.

We know that as time continues, the rural and farm populations are dropping in absolute terms and as a population percentage. Urbanization has affected almost every jurisdiction in this province and certainly throughout Canada. Since representation by population is a fundamental democratic principle, electoral boundaries have to be revised from time to time to reflect where people actually live, and increasingly in Alberta that means Edmonton and Calgary. Particularly it's an issue in Calgary at this time with their rapidly increasing population.

Of course, there's the argument we hear from rural Alberta that there's little reason to alter the status quo from their perspective. We hear the arguments that the constituencies are very large – they are very large – that it's harder for the MLAs to get around in them, and that therefore their constituents should have a greater weighted vote than ours do, but in fact those are relatively solvable problems, Mr. Chairman. If the Legislature were to compensate those MLAs who have wide-ranging boundaries with access to travel and access to placing constituency offices with support services in strategically placed locations, it would counterbalance some of those issues in terms of access to their MLA and the length of time it takes an MLA to cross.

It is a privilege for those people to be overrepresented in terms of population. It is a privilege denied to those people in the larger centres. Not a popular concept in this province but in fact a reality. It's a lifestyle choice for people to live where they are, and they should not be hampered by that choice in terms of their ability to weight their vote in elections.

Alberta for a long time had 83 constituencies, and we find that the overrepresentation and underrepresentation are quite extensive. If we take a look at 1991, Athabasca-Wabasca had a population of 16,621 at that time, or 46 percent fewer people than the average constituency, while Calgary-Fish Creek had a population of 35,666, or almost 16 per cent more than the average. This means that the people who live in Athabasca have more than twice the representation and voting power that people in Calgary-Fish Creek have, and it takes so few of them to elect an MLA. So these are the kinds of inconsistencies that boundary redistribution is supposed to correct. Not actually the case, Mr. Chairman, as we will find out as I proceed through this debate.

There was a pivotal case laid out in 1989, Dixon versus British Columbia, where B.C. Supreme Court Judge Beverley McLachlin interpreted the right to vote in section 3 of the Charter as requiring relative equality of voting power. By this she meant that electoral divisions must be relatively equal in population. The importance of this ruling for Alberta cannot be overstated, because it opens the door for a possible Charter challenge. The grounds for this kind of action would be that the right of a citizen to representation shouldn't be unduly compromised by the voter's place of residence. Judgments of the Supreme Court of Canada have suggested maximum permissible deviations from the provincial average of plus or minus 25 percent. In Alberta this would mean a constituency could have a population as small as 23,085 or as large as 38,475, based on those 1991 numbers.

I would strongly suggest, Mr. Chairman, that when the committee is struck to take a look at electoral boundaries, they are strongly held by this decision in 1989 and the criteria laid out. Those have not been the exact parameters that have been used in the past. It's resulted in a great many problems in this province. We would not like to see that happen again, because we are bound by this decision by the Electoral Boundaries Commission, as it states in the act, for at least eight years, not longer than 10 but at least eight years. So the decisions they make after this commission is appointed on or before June 30 of 2002 are binding for a very long time and binding at a time when we see seriously increased representation in the cities.

At the time of the Dixon case half the constituencies in Alberta deviated from the provincial average by more than plus or minus 25 percent, Mr. Chairman, so that was significant. In August of '89 the Alberta Legislature formed an all-party Select Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries to analyze the Charter's implications for electoral boundaries and the distribution of constituencies. Then in November of 1990 the provincial government passed a revised Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, which included some provisions to Charter-proof electoral boundaries. Then in January of 1991 the government appointed an Electoral Boundaries Commission based on the new act. However, by May '92 the commission found itself deadlocked over the issue of the creation of hybrid or what we call 'urban' constituencies, which helped to reduce some of those tensions between urban and rural populations. In fact, I myself have a 'urban' constituency. Two-thirds of the area is rural in nature, only holds 237 of the people in my constituency. The other 35,000 or so live in one-third of the constituency, which is very much an urban area.

In July of 1992 the final report of the commission was thrown out, and a special select committee of the Legislature comprised of seven MLAs – four Tories, two New Democrats, and one Liberal – was established. Opposition parties refused to participate in the select committee, objecting in principle to the process of politicians drawing their own boundaries. That was, I think, a very good move on behalf of who was the Official Opposition at the time, the New Democratic Party, and the other opposition party, which at that time was the Liberal Party. So what happened at that point, then, was that the people left on the committee were Tory MLAs. They were Bob Bogle from Taber-Warner as the chair, Stockwell Day from Red Deer-North as the vice-chair, Pat Nelson from Calgary-Foothills, and Mike Cardinal from what was then Athabasca-Lac La Biche.

The committee held no public hearings but listened to nine invited consultants and 18 other groups. The committee's recommendations for constituency boundaries were presented in November of 1992 and were based on the average populations drawn from the 1991 federal census figures for Alberta. Some problems with that, Mr. Chairman, as you can see: no public input; a little in-party decision-making was made. What happened as a result of those decisions: the elimination of Calgary's only New Democrat-held constituency and the creation of four special consideration districts with an average deviation of 42 percent below the provincial quotient, two of which happened to be the seats of the chairman and the vice-chairman of the committee at the time. It also raised Calgary's and Edmonton's seat numbers by one each to 20 and 18 respectively. The provincial quotient there was then 15.4 and 11.3 percent respectively. With the additions Calgary and Edmonton were, on average, over the provincial quotient, and 33 primarily rural constituencies fell below the quotient by an average of 11 percent.

Charges at that time were made by the opposition parties of gerrymandering, and they began in earnest in late 1992 . . . [interjection] No. I'm going to speak for this 20 and probably another 20. So get a coffee, sit back, and relax, because it's very important to put this information on the record.

It's interesting that that particular member would be raising a white flag when I'm talking about gerrymandering, which is what the all-Tory committee actually did with the decisions they came out with in 1992. If you would like me to continue talking about Tory gerrymandering, I could do that, or you could stop interrupting me. I'll give you the choice.

There's a little bit to be said about gerrymandering. Let's talk about where that name comes from and the kind of precedents that are around it. Gerrymandering is the political legacy of Massachusetts Governor Elbridge Gerry, who in 1812 redrew the boundaries of his electoral area in such a way as to ensure his re-election. [interjection] You see, it gets worse. You should have given up a long time ago.

The resulting shape resembled a salamander, Mr. Chairman, and pundits coined the word by combining the names of the man and the reptile, so Elbridge Gerry and salamander: gerrymandering.

If we think it's a joke to talk about gerrymandering in this province, Mr. Chairman, I would refer people to look at a map of the boundaries of the Premier's own constituency.

There was a constitutional challenge from the town of Lac La Biche, that was subsequently withdrawn as a result of those decisions in 1992, and the Electoral Divisions Statutes Amendment Act, 1993, was proclaimed in force on May 18, 1993. For urban people it resulted in some small boundary changes; for rural people, more significant changes. To attest to its constitutionality, they referred the act to the Court of Appeal of Alberta, and while the court was deliberating, a general election based on the new boundaries was held on June 15. That was the first election that I was elected in.

The Conservatives formed a majority government, taking 51 seats and about 45 percent of the popular vote. The Liberals and NDs won 55 percent of the popular vote but only 24 seats. So a Legislature with rural overrepresentation decided the question of whether or not rural overrepresentation should continue. In other words, the government said: we've got the control, and you can't have it. Forty-five percent of the popular vote and the government won 51 seats; 55 percent of the popular vote and both oppositions won 24 seats. That brings to question the idea of proportional representation or some other form. If you're not going to give people an equal vote, then we should take a look at some of the other options.

I know that some of these comments are going to be quite unpopular tonight, and I expect to see them pop up in some rural papers throughout the province. I'm quite happy to defend the position that votes should be equal for people in this province and that the government should be bound and the committee should be bound by how the Supreme Court defined "equal" in this context, and that's with deviations allowed. If that's the decision that's made with this committee, then certainly, Mr. Chairman, we need to talk about how rural ridings get representation and what kind of resources the MLAs representing those ridings get in order to adequately be able to represent the people in their ridings.

The judgment was ultimately delivered on October 24, 1994, and the court was very critical of the electoral divisions that had been established, claiming that the very brief report of the select committee had offered no detailed explanation for the specific boundaries. While it acknowledged that effective representation sometimes requires the formation of a constituency of a below-average population, it reaffirmed that "there is no permissible variation if there is no justification [and that] the onus to establish justification lies with those who suggest the variation." That was a direct quote. There was "little justification in the materials supplied by the Legislature," they stated. They stated:

The Legislature offered no reasons, but essentially adopted the recommendation of the Select Committee. Before us, Alberta equated the Committee's reasons with those of the Legislature. We did not know with any certainty or detail what those reasons are.

So they made all these decisions and couldn't back it up with anything substantive.

No transcripts of committee meetings were provided to the court. While it was the primary task of the court to pronounce upon the constitutionality of the approved boundaries, the court had no option but to conclude: "It is impossible for us to say that the effort here meets a Charter challenge when we do not know with any precision the reasons for the boundaries under review." So when you make decisions in a vacuum and provide no back up, this is the kind of decision that the courts are bound by. So very interesting and very reminiscent of how this government has continued to operate in other areas after this decision was made.

So the court claimed, and I quote one more time, that the practical necessities raised by the principle of effective representation did not, alone, guide the hand of the legislators. On the contrary, what seems to have motivated this scheme at least in part was the acknowledgment that, whether or not some disparities were warranted, change would be made slowly so as not to offend unduly the political sensibilities of some electors. The boundaries before us, at least in part, seem to be a response to widespread protest from those Albertans who live in farming communities.

The court then took Mr. Bogle to task for advocating the retention of one of the smallest divisions in the province, which by happenstance was that for which he was the sitting member at that time. While Bogle had argued that the sudden reduction in the level of representation would greatly displease his constituents, the court ruled that the comfort zone of a vocal portion of the electorate was not a valid Charter consideration. The court went on to conclude that the fact that a significant number of Albertans did not like the results of an equal distribution of electoral divisions was no reason to flinch from insisting that they take the burden as well as the benefit of democracy as we know it.

On that note, Mr. Chairman, I will conclude for this time. I will finish my remarks after the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona speaks. Thank you.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to speak to one particular part of Bill 31. All of us agreed that that particular section is one on which we will have some debate. This deals with the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act. This is the act that is revised only every 10 years, so it is important that we pay some attention to the kind of revisions we want to make to it. Otherwise, we will have missed the chance for another 10 years and won't be able to return to it until the year 2011 or so. The reason for having to wait 10 years is that the Electoral Boundaries Commission changes are tied to the decennial census, which takes place every 10 years across Canada, and only the population changes that are indicated by that census serve as the basis for redrawing the boundaries by the commission.

In any case, I am pleased to address this bill, Bill 31, in its debate in the committee. As usual, there was prior consultation on the contents of this bill. I will therefore restrict my comments to only the one legislative change, contained on page 6 of the bill, which really calls for a repeal of the existing section 5(1) and the substitution of a very short sentence which reads, "A Commission is to be appointed on or before June 30, 2002," which is next year, roughly seven months from now.

This change, this amendment, certainly results from a request I made last June when I first wrote the Premier asking that the date for the appointment of an Electoral Boundaries Commission be moved up. In that letter I also asked that an opportunity be provided for a full debate on electoral boundaries including such important considerations as the appropriate number of seats in this Assembly as well as the population variances that were to be allowed between constituencies.

To my letter I received a reply from the Justice minister. The Justice minister indicated that the government would be prepared to move up the date on which an Electoral Boundaries Commission would be appointed. He suggested that it be done by way of a miscellaneous statutes amendment in the fall sitting. Earlier this fall I again wrote the Justice minister. I told the minister that while I appreciated his willingness to move up the date for the appointment of the commission, the position of the New Democrat caucus was that it should be done by way of a stand-alone bill. A stand-alone bill would provide an opportunity for a much more wide-ranging and open-ended debate on this important matter than a miscellaneous statutes amendment would.

Since then, more discussion took place between the Justice minister, the Leader of the Official Opposition, and myself. What resulted from this was a decision to move up the date for appointing a commission while allowing a more wide-ranging debate than is normally allowed when debating a miscellaneous statutes act.

So I'm appreciative of this opportunity to engage in this debate this evening. I encourage other members to engage in this debate as it continues tomorrow afternoon. While the actual amendment is a very simple one, it will begin a very important process. Let's face it: changes in the boundaries commission affect all of us. As elected members we have a direct interest in the outcome of the electoral boundaries process that will be initiated by this amendment. Because of our direct interest in the outcome, it is all the more important that the commission making decisions be at arm's length from the current members of this Assembly. In this respect Alberta's current law does pass the test of fairness. That wasn't always the case in the past, but now it does.

Sitting MLAs are not allowed to serve on the commission. Two members are appointed on the recommendation of the Premier. Two members are appointed on the recommendation of the opposition leader in consultation with the third party. The commission is chaired by an impartial person such as a retired judge. All of this to me seems quite fair.

In discussing the matter of electoral boundaries, I want to touch briefly on three issues. First, the number of seats in this Legislative Assembly. By approving this amendment, we will be saying that 83 is the appropriate number of seats as we go forward into the next two elections. I'm not at all convinced that we need that many seats in this Assembly. Let me suggest why. If we compare Alberta to Canada's other large provinces, we have significantly more members per capita, per 10,000 or per 20,000. For example, the province of Ontario only has 103 members in its Legislature despite having a population four times as large as ours. B.C. has 1 million more people than Alberta and has four fewer seats in its Legislative Assembly. I am disappointed that the government did not consider reducing the number of seats in this Assembly in this particular redistribution. At least we should have considered opening up the issue and debating it. The number of seats we presently have could be reduced to 75 or even to 70 without compromising effective representation.

I know some members will say that their existing constituencies are already sufficiently large or much too large. However, modern communication technologies provide us with so many more options for interacting with our constituents than was the case in the past. Moreover, constituency size is an irrelevant matter. Recently I spoke to the leader of the Ontario New Democrats. He represents a northern constituency that comprises 35 percent of the landmass of the province of Ontario. Translated to Alberta, that single constituency would be half the size of Alberta.

This brings me to my next concern, the population variances allowed within constituencies in this province. Alberta's rules are at the very outside of what the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms allows in terms of population variances. Alberta's rules allow population variances 25 percent above and 25 percent below the average of all constituencies. Moreover, there is a provision for up to four constituencies to be up to 50 percent below average in population. This is a considerably greater variance than that allowed in other provinces. For example, the province of Saskatchewan only allows a variance of plus or minus 10 percent for all but two northern constituencies. The province of Manitoba allows for variances of plus or minus 15 percent except for a few northern constituencies. While the provinces of B.C. and Ontario do allow variances of up to 25 percent, they do so without the exceptions Alberta allows. So relative equality of voting power is an important principle in a democratic society.

I am disappointed again that the government has not chosen to reduce the population variances allowed under Alberta's law. I believe that a variance of plus or minus 15 percent, with perhaps an exception for ridings located above 55 degrees north, would be more fair than what exists now. There are better ways of addressing the challenges of effectively representing geographically large rural ridings than diluting the voting power of urban residents. For example, this could be accomplished by providing extra money for travel for rural MLAs or extra funding to allow them to operate more than one constituency office in their areas.

I believe the government lacks boldness in not addressing the above issues, for once the boundaries commission completes its work, constituency boundaries will be set in stone for the next 10 years. That is why I want to conclude my remarks by making a bold proposal to consider even more fundamental changes to how members of the Assembly are elected. I believe that the time has come to seriously consider reform of the voting system itself. Under the existing system of first past the post, citizens do not get what they voted for in terms of the composition of this Assembly. Political parties that are elected with a minority of votes routinely receive a majority of seats in this Legislative Assembly. How many Albertans are aware that in two of the past four provincial elections the Progressive Conservatives did not secure even 45 percent of the provincial vote? Yet in those 1989 and '93 elections the Conservatives ended up with large majorities in this Assembly.

Even in the recent elections this past March, the Conservatives received just over 60 percent of the provincewide vote, yet ended up with 90 percent of the seats in this Assembly. If seats in this Assembly were based on each party's share of the provincewide vote, then there would be 31 opposition seats in the Assembly rather than the existing nine seats. Instead of 75 Conservatives there would be only 52. Instead of only seven Liberals there would be 24. Instead of only two New Democrats there would be seven. Because they have 90 percent of the seats in the House, the Tories and the government act as if that percentage of the electorate supported them, but that's false. Even in this most recent election over 38 percent of Albertans voted for parties other than the governing Conservative Party, yet in most cases those votes did not translate into seats for those opposition parties in this Assembly.

Proportional representation is an idea whose time has come. More and more democratic societies are using some form of proportional representation to elect their parliaments and legislatures. Canada and the United States are the only two remaining holdouts. New Zealand now uses a proportional representation voting system. Britain uses proportional representation for its regional assemblies in Scotland and Wales. Australia uses proportional representation for its Senate elections. Every single country in western Europe uses some form of proportional representation, as does the European Parliament.

It is time that Albertans got what they voted for at election time in terms of representation in this Assembly. That is why I'll conclude by giving members a bit of a heads up. Next spring I plan to introduce in this Assembly a private member's bill that proposes to develop a made-in-Alberta proportional representation voting system. I welcome the opportunity to debate such a voting system in this Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I wish to continue the remarks that I previously started. I was talking about the judgment of the Alberta Court of Appeal that was delivered on October 24, 1994. If we remember, the election in that time period was June 15, 1993, so the decision came some time after the election. What they concluded was that they recognized that they had the power to cause major disruption in the electoral process, and the court then decided to withhold any Charter condemnation and restrained itself from insisting upon a correction of electoral boundaries. Faced with the possibility of invalidating the 1993 election results, the court said, and I quote: We do not see the democratic value in creating a political crisis. End of quote.

So they were dissatisfied with the unjustified boundaries used in 1993 and called for a new and proper review before the next general election. Clearly hinting at the political make-up of the all-Conservative special committee that had established the 1993 electoral boundaries, the court called for a review that would be "insulated from partisan influence" – that part's a quote – and would be free of "traditional political games, like gerrymandering or log-rolling."

So we come to the Electoral Boundaries Commission as it was amended extensively in 1995. The act provided a more balanced appointment procedure involving opposition parties and equal representation from cities and country, and that is the proposal we are looking at for this time. It specifies the factors to be considered in drawing boundaries and sets the population of proposed electoral constituencies at a maximum of plus or minus 25 percent variance from the average. As we will see as this game unfolds before us next spring, once again those very interpretations and definitions of what plus or minus 25 percent variance from the average means will be debated, and the government will have a position that I think will not be supported by many people in this province.

The new commission held two rounds of extensive and well-attended public hearings in 1995, and the final report was presented to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly in June of '96. The commission attempted to measure the difficulty of representing a constituency. Recognizing the need to protect rural interests, they concluded that the scale of difficulty should be the prime indicator of the allowable deviations in population in the interest of effective representation. Of course, because there are only 83 constituencies – or perhaps many people would argue, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona just did, that 83 is too many – our caucus would support that. We had a bill in '93 or '94 that asked for a reduction in constituencies, so we would also be happy to look at fewer rather than greater, but because of the way the boundaries are decided and the large increases in population in Calgary and Edmonton, it's hard to resolve the issue by adding more urban constituencies.

What happened, then, in '95 is that the commission proposed adding two, one each for Calgary and Edmonton, and was forced to eliminate two of the four special constituencies, Cardston-Chief Mountain and Chinook. That was an interesting time in this Legislature, Mr. Chairman, as ministers – ministers – were lobbying for position. By adding the extra constituencies in the urban centres, the commission believed that it adequately resolved the imbalance in the representation. The commission said that it was satisfied that urban city populations were not currently underrepresented to any significant degree, but it was interesting that they went on to say that they believed the interests of approximately 68 per cent of Albertans who live in urban centres were well served by the 68 per cent of Alberta's MLAs who represented those cities in the Legislature. But once again this is completely open to interpretation, Mr. Chairman, because the commission counted the constituency of Vermilion-Lloydminster as urban since Lloydminster is identified as an urban center. So the MLA for Vermilion-Lloydminster is regarded by the commission as part of the 68 per cent representing urban interests within the province, which I think is open to challenge at any level, but that's what happened there.

To give them credit, though, the government re-examined the act that set the rules, and at that time the MLA for Calgary-Buffalo, who was Liberal Gary Dickson, worked extensively on this and said that the government had no intentions of further amending the current Electoral Boundaries Commission Act. He stated that he thought "the government's sense is that they've tinkered sufficiently with the boundaries to buy some time to at least avoid a further court challenge." He found "the government's use of the 25 per cent variation particularly preposterous and the combined effect of rural and urban differences significant." He stated: "They've taken an element of flexibility that the Supreme Court, in the Dixon case, attempted to afford legislators and they've shamelessly exploited it until it has become the norm." He stated that "with section 17 of the boundaries commission act, they've tried to entrench it, without qualification." He stated that "it's a question of where all city constituencies are up to 25 per cent above and all rural districts are below 25 per cent to pass muster." He was in support of a plus or minus 10 percent level and made an interesting observation. He stated that he gets "very angry when people say that an urban MLA's job is easier," that at the school south of his constituency office, "there are 24 languages spoken." When he publishes anything, "it has to be in five different languages."

So, Mr. Chairman, I think urban representation is underrepresented in terms of the kinds of challenges that we face here. Certainly I know the caseload for files for social assistance and WCB cases in my offices are significantly – significantly – higher than they are in rural centres. While they have problems of travel logistics and access logistics, we have problems of huge caseloads.

So at that time many of the Conservative members put forward their positions on why they should have fewer people to represent. What the Alberta Court of Appeal stated was that each year the problem worsens, it impacts significantly on the right to vote of urban Albertans, and that this cannot be permitted to continue if Alberta wishes to call itself a democracy.

So we would say that the degree of difficulty of representation is really a bogus issue, because there are points of view on each side that are solvable if the Legislature had the will to put their minds to it. Once again we are appealing to the committee to take into account in its truest sense the words of the Alberta Court of Appeal. The problems with these nonurban and urban population increases and decreases significantly impact the right to vote for urban Albertans, and we can't state too strongly that this cannot be permitted to continue if Alberta wishes to call itself a democracy.

Mr. Chairman, we will be appointing one urban and one rural member to the committee. They are charged with the very heavy weight of ensuring to the best of their ability that every Albertan has a similar weighting of their vote and taking on issues that are controversial and hard to solve but finding an answer that will meet the needs of Alberta not just today and tomorrow but for the next ten years until we see the revisions happening again.

So with that, Mr. Chairman, I will take my seat and look forward to the comments from all members tomorrow afternoon, most particularly those comments from government members, private members, and cabinet ministers. Thank you.

[The clauses of Bill 31 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE DEPUTY CHAIRMAN: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that we now rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

MR. MASKELL: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports Bill 31 with some amendments. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

HON. MEMBERS: Agreed.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are indeed making very good progress, and on that note I would move that the Assembly now stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow, Thursday, November 29.

[Motion carried; at 9:20 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, November 29, 2001

1:30 p.m.

Date: 01/11/29

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

THE SPEAKER: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. O Lord, grant us a daily awareness of the precious gift of life which You have given us. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we dedicate our lives anew to the service of our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

MRS. ADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pleasure and honour that I rise to introduce two very special ladies in the Assembly today. The first one is someone who could see great potential in a skinny, 155-pound gas jockey at Exxon. She had enough confidence to become the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne's sweetheart, later wife of 26 years and mother to two children. The name of this valiant person is Liz VanderBurg.

The second lady that I would like to introduce today to the Assembly is also a woman who has proven that she can go the distance, that she is also valiant. She has been married for 36 years. She's the mother of three children and has nine grandchildren who all call the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky grandpa. She's indelibly printed on Mel forever.

These are women that have shown both vision and endurance, and I would ask that they both rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly today.

head: Presenting Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

MR. YANKOWSKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to present three petitions signed by my constituents addressed to the Premier requesting the reinstatement of access by the War Amps to motor vehicle registration lists to be used in their fund-raising efforts.

head: Reading and Receiving Petitions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to request that the petition I presented yesterday be now read and received.

THE CLERK:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to provide health care coverage for medical supplies for diabetic children under the Alberta Health Care Plan and provide financial assistance to parents to enable them to meet their children's necessary dietary requirements and cover costs incurred in travelling to Diabetes Education and Treatment Centres outside their own communities in Alberta.

head: Notices of Motions

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise now to give notice that after Oral Question Period I will be introducing a motion under Standing Order 40.

Thank you very much.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

MR. DUNFORD: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table with the Assembly today the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta 2001 annual report.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table today five copies of the Persons with Developmental Disabilities Community Governance Act review. In doing so, I'm very grateful to the hon. Member for Highwood, who chaired this committee, and also I'm grateful for the assistance provided on the committee by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora and other Community Development and PDD officials who were involved.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon I have five copies of a response to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre to a question that was asked of me in question period on November 20, 2001.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table a copy of a letter that I e-mailed to Mr. Mazankowski this morning requesting that he give advance briefing to our caucus just as he has given advance briefing today on his report to the Tory caucus.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first tabling is a letter from Marleen Cowan, president of the Riverside Meadows Community Association, opposing the proposed closure of the John Howard youth group home in Red Deer.

My second tabling is an e-mail from Gary Martin about Children's Services' cuts and urging the Minister of Children's Services to "stand up for what is right for society and not for what just makes a government look good."

MR. MASKELL: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table the required number of copies of a letter from the Lewis Estates Community League regarding the proposed casino project on the Enoch First Nations' lands.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table five copies of a letter from Lise and Dave Riffel, who are very concerned that natural medicine is not covered by Alberta health care insurance.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With permission I would table copies of requests from constituents regarding the War Amps key tag identification program asking that they be allowed access to lists that they've had since 1947 so that they can undertake their program.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is an e-mail that I received at the constituency office from Catherine Roth. It is urging the government to "uphold its commitments and reconsider funding the Welcome Home Community."

The second tabling this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, is the required number of copies of 20 requests from Albertans who want the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill "so that classrooms will no longer be overcrowded," to "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I have two tablings today. The first is an e-mail I received from Brent Jeffery wanting to know how it can be justified that starting teachers have a salary of $35,372, and nurses at that same starting position have a salary of $52,639.

The second is a letter, as well, that I received from Michael Benoit, and Michael wants to know where the Alberta advantage is in regards to teachers' salaries, and it's titled Tired of Lip Service and Being Treated Unfairly.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I table today the appropriate number of copies of a brochure of a conference being held tomorrow and the next day in Edmonton. The title of the conference: Protecting or Neglecting Groundwater? Whose Future Is at Stake?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the required number of requests from Albertans who ask the government to vote in support of the Liberal opposition's class size targets bill, "end the need for parents to fundraise for classroom basics," and to "ensure that Alberta can attract and keep the very best teachers for our children."

Thank you.

head: Introduction of Guests

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

MR. HUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure for me today to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly 29 bright and cheerful students that I had the pleasure of meeting with prior to coming into the Assembly today. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Jill Atkins-Cyr, and also a few parents and, I might add, friends from my neighbourhood: Ms Lois MacLean, Mrs. Dawn Haack, Mrs. Debbie Claypool, Mrs. Searl, and a special guest, the newly appointed Hon. Madam Justice Sheila Greckol.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.
1:40

MR. LUKASZUK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a very special man. Emilio Woolsey is a seven year old and is a member of Champs through the War Amps program. He attends St. Lucy Catholic elementary school in Edmonton-Castle Downs. Although Emilio was born without his left arm, he has worked very hard to overcome his challenges. He has conquered his natural shyness and currently speaks publicly to other children, educating them about the Playsafe program. He has already accomplished three such presentations. Emilio today is accompanied by Madison, also his parents Claudia and Kirk Woolsey, grandma Shirley Helle, and two brothers, Kirk and Gerald. I would ask the Assembly to extend a warm welcome to those fine individuals. I'd ask them to stand, as well, in the members' gallery.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

REV. ABBOTT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and to introduce a very special person that helps both myself and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, and that is our legislative assistant, Brendalee Loveseth. She's sitting up in the members' gallery, and I'd ask her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

MR. MASKELL: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you 66 students, staff, and parents from La Perle elementary school, one of the schools of excellence in my constituency. These bright, eager youngsters participated in the Race for the Riding program today and are enjoying a tour of this magnificent building at the moment. They'll arrive in the members' gallery after 2 p.m. Would you please give our visitors the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

MS HALEY: Thank you. I wanted to introduce to you and through you, Mr. Speaker, to the Assembly a group of students from my constituency, from the Airdrie Koinonia Christian school. Unfortunately, they're not in here just yet, but I wanted to make sure that they and their main teacher, Mr. Paul Holmes, were recorded in Hansard.

Thank you very much.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

MR. CARDINAL: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the Legislative Assembly 23 grade 6 students from the beautiful village of Boyle in my constituency. They are accompanied by their parents and teachers, and I believe they are seated either in the public gallery or the members' gallery. I'd like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

MRS. ADY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise again today to introduce somebody that has been very special in my life as well as the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. That would be our legislative assistant, Cheryl Koss. She might not be very tall in stature, but she's mighty in spirit indeed and I think one of the hardest working Leg. assistants in the building – I might be biased – and I would ask that Cheryl stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

MR. LORD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly our very hardworking, competent, and cheerful administrative assistant, who I share with the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky. I would ask that Stacey Leighton rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development.

MS CALAHASEN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to introduce someone who's a very good helper of mine, who has just been hired as my executive assistant. He's seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that Dale Monaghan please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of this Legislature Graham Steel. He's a young man who's enrolled in the doctors' program at the University of Alberta, and I'd like to ask him to rise with Aaron Roth, who's been introduced before. Graham, we wish you all the best in your future in the health services sector in Alberta. Congratulations on your participation.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly two different people. The first is a visitor from Saskatoon, Mr. Arnold Edwards, one of Saskatoon's most prominent business leaders. Would he stand in the public gallery? Mr. Edwards is a member of the second generation of a family business that is now in its fourth generation, the Saskatoon Funeral Home. His family makes enormous contributions to the economic, cultural, and political life of the prairie provinces.

My second introduction is Mr. Edwards' sister Alma, who is a longtime resident of Edmonton. Would she rise? Alma is an award-winning writer and a pioneer in western Canadian television programming. Among many achievements she taught drama and television at Victoria composite high school in the 1960s, helping to plant the seeds for that school's growth into a major arts education centre. Her greatest achievement has been raising her four children, one of whom is me.

Please give them a warm welcome. Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

MR. DANYLUK: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you all of the other Leg. assistants, who work very, very diligently and hard for the welfare and direction of the MLAs here today. They are busy listening on the intercom and just can't make it.

head: Oral Question Period

THE SPEAKER: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Within eight months this government has gone from recording the largest surplus in the history of the province to cuts in spending of over a billion dollars. A number of other provinces, like Saskatchewan and Manitoba, draw upon a fiscal stabilization fund to sustain services for health, education, and their children. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. Why do you refuse to be quality fiscal managers and set up a fiscal stabilization fund like Saskatchewan and Manitoba?

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, the path that this government has chosen is through fiscal responsibility. We believe that you cannot spend dollars that you do not have. We therefore go through a business planning process each year, which feeds into setting a budget. We also then follow through every quarter with an update to Albertans to let them know where things are going within the province.

Our goal since December of 1992 has been to present a plan that first of all eliminated our deficit – it is now against the law to run a deficit in this province – and, secondly, to pay off the accumulated debt that the province had built up over a number of years. We've stayed that path, and we've done it through a vehicle called the Fiscal Responsibility Act. That act governs us very, very dear and in fact is the one act that I give credit to for holding politicians' feet to the fire to stay the course and stay the plan.

What we have done with corrective actions, which I really wish the hon. Leader of the Opposition would pay attention to, is dealt with the fiscal realities that the whole world is facing today. Our plan was to deal with it in a managed process. We decided as a caucus and government that we would not put the long-term future of Albertans in jeopardy by doing what other jurisdictions have done by raising their debt level and running expenditures through their fiscal plan of this year that puts them further in debt. Our plan is a managed plan that focuses on the realities that are there in the global arena but also is backed up by our Fiscal Responsibility Act. We intend to follow that, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Provincial Treasurer: do I take it from that that stability is not part of the fiscal mandate of this government?

1:50

MRS. NELSON: Mr. Speaker, let's talk about stability. In August the province of Alberta was the only government jurisdiction in all of Canada that received what I call the triple crown. We received a triple A rating from the Dominion Bond Rating Service, along with Moody's, along with Standard and Poor's. We're the only government in all of Canada to do that. Part of the reason was because of the fiscal plan that we have laid out and stayed the course on.

Now, all of that being said, what that has done for the economy in the province of Alberta is ensured that our growth continues. We have a framework that is conducive to investment and development. It attracts private investor capital to this province, which creates jobs, creates stability, and creates confidence not only from investors but from consumers. The result is that the economy in the province of Alberta is moving two times faster than any other place in the entire country. So confidence is here because of this framework, not because of the frameworks in other jurisdictions that the hon. leader is talking about but because of the framework that is here in the province of Alberta.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Provincial Treasurer. So the policy of this government is cut, spend, cut, spend, cut, spend instead of the prudent, stable management of our fiscal policy. [interjections]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. leader, please. Hon. minister, please.

MRS. NELSON: I hope that the hon. Leader of the Opposition won't have a hissy fit when I give him the answers.

The situation in the province of Alberta is to manage the realities that face us in the economy. The alternative, which the Liberal leader would want, is for us to put us in debt, spend beyond our means, raise taxes, and not deal with reality. Albertans went into a contract with this government again this year and said: "Stay the course. Keep our taxes low, pay off our debt, and spend wisely." The corrective plan that we have put forward is in response to exactly what Albertans have asked us to do. This hon. member would like us to abrogate that responsibility and move away from it. We're not prepared to do that.

THE SPEAKER: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Children's Services

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Because of the government's mismanagement of its budget children's authorities are facing cuts that are forcing them to make decisions perceived by many to be shortsighted. My questions are to the Minister of Children's Services. Is it good policy to force authorities to make decisions like the one that was made by a particular authority to terminate its contract with a fetal alcohol syndrome specialist who is a medical doctor with years of experience and give that contract instead to an individual with a two-year college diploma and no experience?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is citing a program which is under the local fetal alcohol syndrome co-ordinating committee, which is managed through selections of people representing a number of different authorities: the child and family services authority, the people that are on the health authority. A number of people are involved.

One of the great misnomers of the entire question period sessions from November 13 till today is that Children's Services has an exclusive right to the programs that are affecting children. So to supplement what is actually happening for children that have fetal alcohol syndrome, I'm going to ask my colleague the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness to discuss some of the programs that are going on in that department that support children at high risk.

THE SPEAKER: I welcome and I will call on the hon. minister, but we're not here to discuss. We're here to answer questions on policy. The hon. minister.

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, the programs that are available for children that have fetal alcohol syndrome, I don't think that anybody in this House is suggesting that they are not important. We do have a number of programs that we work on with other departments of government in developing a fetal alcohol syndrome initiative. One example of such a program is the Lakeland Centre for Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. This is located in Cold Lake. What that program does is provide outreach services that serve the needs of individuals with fetal alcohol syndrome and their families in the communities in which they live. That's one example. There are many of course.

The point that I think needs to be made is that one cannot simply look at the Children's Services' budget and suggest that those are the only programs that are in operation. Nor is that the only source of funding. In a cross-government initiative we can devote resources from a number of different departments and get the best result for children in need with this particular situation.

DR. NICOL: It's a Children's Services' program that they're cutting, Mr. Speaker.

Back to the Minister of Children's Services: are you telling us that you have no standards set to determine who is qualified to make assessments, that it's up to the regional authorities totally in terms of how they set standards for doing assessments?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, Children's Services' standards are contained in the accountability document that is approved by the ministry on submission and agreement with each one of the authorities. They do have standards. They're expected to comply with those standards. We have also asked them through their service plans to come back and let us know those areas where they have made cost containment a priority so we're able to review those submissions. We have not received all of the submissions, although I understand most are on the way.

Mr. Speaker, I'm very satisfied that the local authorities understand clearly that priority must be given to the need to protect those children that are most needing care, not necessarily to engage in cost-containment strategies in any way that affects that particular area. It is still the priority for our government.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. leader.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Children's Services: are you telling this House that it is part of the standards and the guidelines that you give to the regional authorities that a person with a college degree and no experience has the capabilities to fully assess all of the needs of a child with fetal alcohol syndrome and make a proper recommendation of a diagnostic or remedial program?

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not entirely sure I understand what the hon. member is driving at, but let me answer the question in this way, because there seems to be an allegation that the Ministry of Children's Services is not conducting due diligence on children at risk. For this entire week the hon. members have been challenged by me to bring the names forward of any child that's at risk. Only one name from the Leader of the Opposition has come forward, and I've addressed those concerns. So bring me the names.

THE SPEAKER: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you. Each year vulnerable children under government care or supervision are mistreated. Given human nature, Mr. Speaker, some incidents might be expected but surely not the hundreds of cases documented by the Children's Advocate and recently confirmed by the Minister of Children's Services. My questions are to the Minister of Children's Services. Why is the department unable to keep safe young people that they remove from family homes?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, much of what Children's Services has done has been redocumented in my response to the Children's Advocate report yesterday. Perhaps for further clarification the family law reform currently under way with the Minister of Justice will clarify some of these issues, and I would refer this question to him.

MR. HANCOCK: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to advise the House that we are undergoing an extensive review of family law in the province to consolidate family law to make it more accessible to Albertans and to make sure that Albertans have a clear understanding of what family law is. The public consultation on that process is starting now and will be going on until the spring session. We hope to bring forward comprehensive review of family law in the spring session. That addresses directly the whole question of children in this province, because if people don't have access to good dispute resolution processes, if people don't have access to family mediation, if people don't have access to those sorts of issues, then family breakdown causes a lot of the problems, the root causes of some of the issues which the Children's Services department and, indeed, all departments of government have to deal with.

Mr. Speaker, it doesn't end there. Maintenance enforcement has probably about 61,000 children that it provides for by collecting maintenance on behalf of children and families. We have a mediation process in the family law area. So there are many, many programs which are addressed to the root causes of why children are at risk and how we can prevent children from becoming at risk.

DR. MASSEY: It's all very interesting. These are children the government has in care. Why is the department unable to keep them safe once you take them out of their homes?

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact it is a good question, because it really focuses on what happens when a child is taken into protective custody. What happens is that they are placed, frequently with their siblings, in homes where they are both part of either a temporary or permanent guardian relationship. Many of the children who made allegations of abuse while in care related to abuse by a sibling, their own; abuse by a parent on a visit, their own parent; and abuse under many circumstances. Indeed, when we are concerned that there may be abuse by a parent, we have visitation with social worker supervision. A child care worker is present, but Children's Services is not in the bedrooms of the nation, albeit maybe at times we should be. Quite frankly, these children are supervised to the best of the ability and due diligence of the workers and the parents, with every bit of training and faith and capacity. I truly hope that nobody in this House would ever suggest that our workers weren't doing a good and proper job.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the lack of quality placements is at the root of many of these cases, when can we expect some action from the minister?

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, we are always looking for people who will become good foster parents and will be engaged in looking after children. We are engaged in a number of programs not only to advertise for people to become part of our team and to be trained, but we are taking extensive recruitment through different parts of the province.

It's been exceptionally difficult this year because many of the children who have been coming into care – and I've cited this in the House before – for example 31 percent in one of our authorities, have been children over the age of 11, children whose parents have given up on them. The root of the problem, I would suggest, is not the government and the kind of care we're providing. The root of the problem stems from things which are occurring in families, where a family breakdown is concerned, and that is a problem that's much beyond the breadth and depth and responsibility of Children's Services.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mazankowski Report

MR. MASON: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the leader of the New Democrat opposition asked a question of the Minister of Health and Wellness and received in response a torrent of abuse but no answer. Today I wish to repeat the question to the minister in the hope of a calmer, less confrontational, clearer, and more forthcoming answer. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: how much money is this government planning to spend to promote, publicize, or otherwise communicate the recommendations of the Mazankowski report?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, I would refer the hon. member to budget debates. That is not the purpose of question period.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, the minister's dodging and obfuscation can't save him. I ask the minister again: how much money, how many taxpayers' dollars is his government going to spend publicizing the recommendations of the Mazankowski report? This is not a budget question.

MR. MAR: Same question, same answer, Mr. Speaker.

MR. MASON: Mr. Speaker, given that the Mazankowski committee is appointed by the Premier and reports to him, I ask the Minister of Health and Wellness: who is responsible for health policy in this government, he or the Premier?

MR. MAR: Mr. Speaker, it is clear that policy is developed through a very clear process in this government. It goes through our standing policy committees. It goes through our caucus. It goes through cabinet. These are decisions that we reach as a caucus, as a team. I don't know how the hon. member's caucus works. It's perhaps easier for them to meet. But that process is clear, and the responsibility for policy clearly rests with the government on this side of the House.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Heritage Savings Trust Fund

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my constituency of Whitecourt-Ste. Anne many comments have been made to me just recently about the fair market value of the heritage fund. It's declined to $11.8 billion in the second quarter from $12 billion in the first. My question is to the Minister of Revenue. With the uncertainty in the markets today, sir, what do you expect the fund to drop over the balance of the year?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As he rightly said, we've seen over the past number of months the volatility of the marketplaces, and that's reflected in a drop in value of the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. But we do actually project, in the forecast going forward, to see some stabilization. We now have revised our income forecast for this year to be $175 million. We still see a prudent approach to diversifying your portfolio in stocks and bonds, in real estate as the best long-term strategy for maximizing the return.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental question is to the same minister. With the provincial shortfall that's expected in revenues – and we've talked about it during this fall session – is now the time to dip into this fund to replace these shortfalls in this budget year?

MR. MELCHIN: Mr. Speaker, we have not been dipping into the principal of the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. It has been there, and Albertans have continually said that we should retain it and see that it's there for future generations. However, we have used over $25 billion of income that this fund has generated over the last 25 years to benefit Albertans substantially for their programs, for repayment of debt, for capital works projects, and it continues to provide income every year for the needs of all Albertans.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. VANDERBURG: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question, again to the same minister. There seems to be lots of confusion out in the public regarding the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. How are you letting Albertans know about the good news, and how this fund is being managed?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. MELCHIN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's a lot of good news to tell about the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. You know, when you go around and talk to people, there's a high awareness of the fund, but I do acknowledge that there's a low awareness of the value of that fund. It's a $12 billion fund, and part of the challenge we have is seeing that Albertans are educated and know about its management, the income that's derived, the benefits that derive from the fund. Every year we announce quarterly reports, annual reports. We specifically try to go out and make sure it's very public. That information is sent out to all MLA offices. As part of the education we've also revamped the web site, www.albertaheritagefund.com. We would invite all Albertans to log on to that web site, acquaint themselves with the fund, its uses, its benefits.

A very significant part of this Legislative Assembly is an all-party committee that is there to oversee the fund, that is there to see that public meetings are also held on the fund. We've had just a tremendous annual meeting, the best we've had recently. It just happened to be in Whitecourt. A certain member, a former mayor, the previous mayor, and many of the citizens of Whitecourt came out: the best attendance. I would say interest in the fund is going up, and we'd compliment the Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne on his efforts there.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

2:10 Teachers' Contract Negotiations

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is predicted today that Edmonton teachers will almost definitely vote to go on strike. Now, a lump of coal is rich in carbon and rich as a symbol. This lump of coal is what the government wants to give Alberta teachers for Christmas. My first question is to the Deputy Premier. Will the Deputy Premier hold over the Legislative Assembly so that we can all work to find a resolution to the current contract talks?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, I would assume that this is what the hon. member is referring to. I would suggest that if the hon. member opened the package and had a little bite, he might recognize that it isn't coal.

Speaker's Ruling Items Distributed to Members

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, we're going to stop here right now, and I'm going to give the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar another opportunity to address his question.

The members have been coming to my office on almost a daily basis wanting to put things on every member's desk, and oftentimes there are no explanations. Yesterday we had complete confusion in this House when one member did not follow the policy of doing it. I received at least six to 10 notes saying: what is this ribbon? Today we have something with a piece of black coal. It's provided by one member to represent his constituency, but there's no explanation given, so there is confusion now.

All the time that was taken here to deal with this little matter in the question period we're going to add on to the end of the question period, and we're going to give the hon. member additional time in dealing with his question. In the future there will be less confusion with respect to these things being put on people's desks every day without going through a normal process and some explanation.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Teachers' Contract Negotiations (continued)

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is predicted today that Edmonton teachers will almost definitely vote to go on strike. It would be very nice if this government would not give the teachers a lump of coal for Christmas but give them some candy instead. Now, my first question is to the Deputy Premier. Will the Deputy Premier please hold over the Legislative Assembly so that we can all work together to find a resolution to the current contract talks?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment may want to supplement my answer, but it is not my understanding that this Legislative Assembly has any responsibility or should in fact be involved in a negotiation that is clearly between the school authorities in this province and the teachers that they employ.

MR. DUNFORD: The Deputy Premier is entirely right. I think we need to have a perspective on all of this. Negotiations are under way right across the province as we speak. ATA locals are doing what they're supposed to be doing, and that's taking items to a collective bargaining table. School boards are doing what they're supposed to be doing, and that is negotiating towards an agreement. We're doing what we're supposed to be doing, and that's providing for mediators whenever we're called upon by the parties. And the newspapers are doing what they are supposed to be doing, and that of course is ratcheting up if there might be any potential controversy in any of these issues.

So, sir, I think as we head into the holiday season, just relax a little bit and enjoy a merry, merry Christmas.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Deputy Premier: if the government won't hold over the Legislative Assembly, isn't the Deputy Premier concerned that this sends out the message that the teacher couldn't care less about the teachers' negotiations?

MRS. McCLELLAN: I think the hon. member probably wasn't suggesting that the teachers didn't care about the teachers' negotiations.

I will only reiterate that this Legislative Assembly does not have a role in the negotiations, in my view, between duly elected school authorities, elected as recently as October 16 of this year, and the teachers that they employ. Secondly, I would remind the hon. member that in many, many, many questions we've been accused of interfering in those very negotiations, so I am hearing a bit of a conflict in this request today. Mr. Speaker, I believe that we all have a responsibility to allow those negotiations to proceed as they're supposed to do.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question will be to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. My final question is this: does the government have a plan to force the teachers to go on strike so that it can introduce legislation that makes teaching an essential service?

MR. DUNFORD: He's a mischievous little elf today; isn't he? The answer is no.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Feed Imports

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The issue of importing corn from the United States and feed wheat from Ukraine into Quebec has been of concern to many barley growers and wheat growers in Alberta, who had such a poor growing season due to the drought this year. I know that many of my constituents are very concerned about the subsidized U.S. corn imports due to lower barley production and higher barley prices. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Can the minister advise what the government is doing to assist farmers who are caught in this predicament?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, certainly the department of agriculture has been monitoring this situation. The economics, of course, of bringing corn into the province on a regular basis is probably not sustainable; however, the issue now is probably not necessarily price but supply. Currently corn is trading on par with barley or very close to it. Cattle do need to be fed, and we do have a feed shortage. The fact is that it's a reality that if feed doesn't come in in whatever form from other parts of Canada or, indeed, perhaps the U.S., we might have to move our cattle out, which in some instances we have had to do.

I should just inform the hon. member and other members that last year the Manitoba Corn Growers did file a complaint with the Canadian trade tribunal, and they did rule that although there was some dumping and maybe subsidization on pricing, it had not caused injury to prairie grain farmers. Therefore, there were no duties further charged, and the ones that had been collected were returned.

Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any challenge in this area from producers here, but we are going to certainly continue to monitor the situation and be concerned about the quality beef that we produce in this province, primarily barley fed.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MARZ: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplementary to the same minister. It's been my understanding that the feed wheat coming into Quebec from Ukraine was subsidized. Has the minister been in contact with the Canadian Wheat Board to find out why the Canadian Wheat Board isn't protecting farmers from subsidized grain coming into this country?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Mr. Speaker, I don't have any information that would suggest that the wheat coming into Quebec from Ukraine was subsidized. Ukraine is not part of the European Union, and as I say, I don't have any information that would suggest that it was. However, the Canadian Wheat Board is, of course, a federal government agency which markets product both domestically and internationally, particularly wheat and barley, for producers in western Canada. As all Alberta producers know, they must sell their product through the Wheat Board, and as has been noted on many occasions, Alberta farmers would like that changed. They would like to have a choice, and certainly we're working with the federal government and the Canadian Wheat Board to try and effect that choice.

MR. MARZ: To the same minister again, Mr. Speaker, my final supplemental: has the minister received any information, then, from the Canadian Wheat Board that would explain why the Wheat Board would miss such a golden opportunity to market grain in Canada rather than allowing wheat into this country from Ukraine?

MRS. McCLELLAN: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've had a couple of meetings with the Canadian Wheat Board over the last six weeks, one in Alberta and one in Winnipeg. There's no question that I raised the whole question of marketing and how they market. I would say that primarily over the years the Canadian Wheat Board has done a reasonable job of marketing grain, barley, and wheat for producers on the international side. However, there is a real concern on the domestic market. It seems ludicrous to producers in this province that they can invest in a farm, have all of the intellect to plant a crop, shepherd it through its growing season, harvest it, and then all of a sudden they become what I would term almost idiots, not intelligent enough to market it.

So we have asked the Canadian Wheat Board to consider change at least in the domestic market to allow producers to market their grain domestically. This may be a way of solving this issue so that grain can be sold producer to client. What I was told is that there will be elections again in 2002 and for us to try to continue to elect people that have like-minded views to those of Albertans. So, Mr. Speaker, that's my recommendation to people.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Health Care Spending

DR. TAFT: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, health care spending in this province is in no way out of control. It's time this Minister of Health and Wellness gave some straightforward answers on this. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Will the minister deny that in the last fiscal year his department spent almost exactly the same amount per Albertan, adjusting for inflation, that it spent for each of the 10 years from 1983 to 1992?

MR. MAR: Well, that is quite a remarkable observation by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Indeed, it would appear that his observation is out of step with provinces in other parts of Canada. I should note also that those provinces may have Liberal governments. They may be NDP provinces. We of course have Liberal Senator Michael Kirby drawing conclusions about the sustainability of the health care system based on its current spending patterns. We've had a former NDP Premier, Mr. Romanow, of course drawing certain conclusions about the sustainability of health care.

The fact of the matter, Mr. Speaker, is that health care costs have gone up dramatically in this province. They were 24 percent of our overall provincial government spending some 10 years ago. They are now in the range of 35 percent. There are those that suggest that with the current expenditure increases, by the year 2008 it could reach 50 percent of our overall provincial government spending. I spoke with Minister Clement, the Minister of Health from the province of Ontario, just yesterday. He confirmed to me that 44 percent of Ontario's operating budget is spent on health care. That, of course, excludes capital spending, but on operating expenditures it's 44 percent. That is the reason why in the province of Quebec the Claire report has come out, why in the province of Saskatchewan the Fyke commission has done its work. That is the reason why the federal government has commissioned Mr. Romanow. It's the reason why the province of British Columbia is looking at strategies to look at the sustainability of their health care system.

Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge the statistics cited by the hon. member, but his conclusions I think are quite likely out of step with the balance of thought throughout the rest of this country.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My material was taken straight from the Canadian Institute for Health Information.

Will the minister deny that in the last fiscal year his government spent an even lower percentage of Alberta's gross domestic product on health than it spent on average for the 10 years from 1983 to 1992?

MR. MAR: Trying to express health care expenditures as a percentage of gross domestic product is not a particularly useful exercise because of the size of the denominator, Mr. Speaker. So let us look instead at the types of services that are being provided. Let us look at the changing demographics. Let us consider what it is that people are paying for their health care system in the province of Alberta. To measure it against gross domestic product is not a particularly useful exercise.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. TAFT: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's actually a standard measure.

Will the minister deny that in the last fiscal year his government's spending on health was just barely above the per capita Canadian average?

MR. MAR: Well, I think it is well recognized by this hon. member and most health economists that there is a certain connection between the age of your population and the per capita expenditures. When adjusted for age, Alberta remains one of the highest per capita spenders on health care in this country. So, Mr. Speaker, again, while I acknowledge the source of the information cited by the hon. member, his conclusions, in my strong opinion, are completely wrong.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

First Nations Gaming Policy

MR. MASKELL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents in the community of Lewis Estates have expressed interest in the new First Nations gaming policy announced in January 2001. Their interest is due to the proposed casino on the Enoch First Nations lands adjacent to their community. My question is to the Minister of Gaming. Will the minister please tell me how the policy works?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is quite correct that it was in January of this year that the First Nations gaming policy was announced. That policy came about as a result of negotiations between this government and Alberta First Nations in the year 2000. I think it's important to recognize that in Alberta we have a charitable gaming model, the only one in Canada, and the First Nations gaming policy is an integral part of that charitable model. First Nations gaming will be regulated by the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission and will operate generally under the same terms and conditions as traditional casinos.

There are, however, some differences that are worth noting. The first is that the host First Nation will be designated as a charity through a distinct not-for-profit society. As such, there will not be some 180 charities per year that will be working at the on-reserve casino. Additionally, there will be a portion of the proceeds from slot revenue, some 40 percent, that will fund a new lottery fund initiative, the First Nations development fund. The terms of that particular fund are currently being discussed with the hon. Minister of Community Development, and ultimately the terms will be announced. That First Nations development fund will support the economic, social, and community development projects on the First Nations, including such matters as addiction programs, education, health, and infrastructure.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. minister, thank you very much.

I would like to point out Beauchesne 428, which prohibits questions seeking information which is clearly available in published reports and the like.

Go on, hon. member.

MR. MASKELL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is also to the Minister of Gaming. In light of the recently announced gaming licensing policy review, what is the consultation process surrounding any new First Nations casino?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the key components of the review was to ensure that communities would have a prominent role in determining whether or not a casino would occur within their community. In the case of First Nations proposing an on-reserve casino, expressed consent in the form of a band resolution is necessary. Additionally, there must be a land use designation supporting the facility provided to the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission.

I might advise that no such applications can be received at this time. There is still a moratorium in place. It is proposed that it will be lifted in January 2002. Yesterday the AGLC went out to start its consultation with stakeholders with respect to operational policies that are necessary to be put in place prior to the lifting of the moratorium.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MR. MASKELL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. If the Enoch First Nation were to submit a proposal for a new casino, would the views of my constituents in Lewis Estates be taken into account, including the infrastructure issues that approval of such a project will create in the area, such as the major roadway upgrades to 79th Avenue, otherwise known as Whitemud Drive, and to Winterburn Road?

THE SPEAKER: The hon. minister.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again, community support for the on-reserve casino will be community support from the reserve in question, once again reflecting the terms of a band resolution. Similarly, community support in a non First Nations area will be from that municipality. If there happens to be an adjacent reserve, the support of that reserve will not be looked to. Having said that, the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission in certain cases might consider objections from adjacent communities if those objections deal with some matter that may materially affect the viability of a proposed casino.

Regarding casino development as such, it's up to First Nations to look after their infrastructure and servicing requirements, and this must be done in co-operation with adjacent municipalities.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Women's Shelters

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Taber and district family crisis centre spent years raising money and then building and furnishing a 20-bed emergency shelter for victims of domestic violence. The CFSA confirmed the need for the shelter and made verbal assurances of the availability of an operating budget. Since November of 2000 the ministry has avoided that commitment in a series of form letters. My questions are to the Minister of Children's Services. Why did the children's authority stand by and watch these volunteers build a shelter that the authority knew it couldn't fund?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, it's clear that there has to be a better framework for the shelter construction that is done by people throughout the province. The operative words in the hon. member's question are the words "verbal assurances." The board itself had not issued or agreed with the mandate of this particular facility. The hon. member that represents the people of this constituency has been on top of the issue, has met with those individuals that have built the shelter capacity. We have been discussing with the child and family services authority in Sun Country the best ways to manage the issues there now.

Clearly, Mr. Speaker, many people feel motivated to build shelter capacity in communities. We have significant development and planning in other parts of that constituency for shelters, and the dollar support for the operations is also significant. There are many other centres in Sun Country where they have not only planned but have actually looked at, designed, and plotted the budget capacity within the community. There are only so many shelters that we can support. We are very sensitive to this issue. We are working with the authority and looking at perhaps next year being able to support the planning.

The partnership for construction of shelters is with the community and the local child and family services authority. Mr. Speaker, in this particular instance this has become the trigger for our further examination of what the shelter construction policy should be and what we should do to encourage people to address the needs of women as well as children where they are victims of violence but not necessarily always through shelters, which may not be the total solution.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. To this same minister. We've had shelters in this province for over 20 years. Why hasn't the ministry developed an overall plan for women's shelters in this province? How many do we need? Where should they be? Why don't they know this?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, there are indeed almost 30 shelters, 19 of which receive funding directly from this ministry. Some are funded in other ways, on First Nations reserves, for example, by the federal government. When we decentralized to the child and family services authorities, there was a hope that with not only the work done by those authorities in dealing with children and families that are affected by violence but also in the interpretation of the legislation for protection of victims of violence by removing the perpetrator of violence from the home, we would also make significant inroads in protecting families and, more than that, in getting families help and retribution where they need it. The policy that was in effect early in the '90s no longer seems appropriate, because we have a number of developments in the sexual assault centre. So we're looking at all of these aspects, and over the next year I hope we've got a framework that is agreeable to the members.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: aside from increases specific to salaries, why have shelters been forced to continue to work under a 1985 funding model?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, a shelter by its very nature is a temporary solution. Fundamentally what our society has to look at is how we can reduce the violence that occurs in the homes of the people of Alberta and, in fact, necessitates shelters and necessitates other measures. I think the hon. member is fully aware of an additional dollar commitment made by this ministry this year and additional supports that have been made. Even during this period when throughout the ministries of government we are reducing by 1 percent, the shelters themselves have continued to receive support. I think we could engage in further discussion, but at this time that's all I have to answer it.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Aboriginal Children's Services

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today the aboriginal coalition of Edmonton held an emergency meeting. At that meeting, the coalition called for the name of the Ma'Mōwe Capital region to be changed to a nonaboriginal name. Ma'Mōwe means "all together" in Cree, and the government's recent actions are perceived by this coalition as a serious breach of that principle, as well as a breach of faith with the aboriginal community. All of my questions are to the hon. Minister of Children's Services. My first question: given that most of the cuts identified in the document tabled by the minister yesterday negatively impact agencies that benefit aboriginal children, can the minister please explain to this house why this breach of faith with the aboriginal community?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I indicated that of those early intervention reductions in the Ma'Mōwe region only 19 percent were directly affecting aboriginal children. We are dealing with a reduction that is modest in comparison with the overall budget. I would remind the hon. members of this House that we had a 35 percent increase in the budget of Children's Services over the last two years. The $647 million represents an extraordinary increase, and on behalf of aboriginal people on reserves, we added in, after that 1 percent reduction, $4 million.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think that the Ma'Mōwe child and family services authority still is working together. The people that are represented on that board are very pleased to review the programs, and they remind me that many of these programs that have been reduced are programs which should have been affected because by their very nature they were not doing all they should be doing in the protection of children and in the encouragement of children to grow safe, secure, and independent.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me ask the minister another question on the numbers that she quoted here. Can the minister please explain the statement in the document she tabled yesterday that only 6 percent of the early intervention program is being cut when the cuts in a total $6.5 million early intervention budget for the Ma'Mōwe region are closer to 50 percent, not 6 percent?

MS EVANS: Mr. Speaker, some key messages about the Ma'Mōwe cuts and just a correction to the hon. member. The document that I generously shared yesterday was not in fact tabled in the House, but at the conclusion of my remarks I will be pleased to table that so it would be here, the required number of copies for the record.

The reductions in Ma'Mōwe were effective in terms of dealing with some of the information technology needs, the travel, the freeze on the numbers of people that were employed in the Ma'Mōwe child and family services agencies, the administrative efficiencies. In fact, in the cuts that have been made, 22 agencies or programs were either terminated or reduced because they were not under the criteria ensuring that children, youth, and families were not put at risk. They were in fact superfluous in many cases to that design. Learn to swim programs by their very nature are very nice for children to have, but they are not programs that keep children from risk, from abuse, either neglect or the serious concerns we deal with under the child and family services authorities.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. member.

DR. PANNU: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question: why is the minister failing to get the message that the unilateral cuts to programs benefiting aboriginal children are unacceptable – unacceptable – to the aboriginal community? The minister seems to be deaf to the message.

2:40

MS EVANS: Well, Mr. Speaker, at last count I've had 10 percent of the questions in the House in this session, and believe me: I've got the messages.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, despite stopping the clock for one minute, unfortunately there were a number of members who were not able to get their questions today, and I apologize for that.

Prior to the Clerk announcing Members' Statements, an hon. minister would like to revert in the Routine to tablings. Would there be support for that?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports
(reversion)

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

MR. MAR: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the requisite number of copies of my response to Written Question 5 that I wish to table.

Thank you, sir.

head: Members' Statements

Volunteer Wall of Fame

MR. LORD: Mr. Speaker, throughout 2001 many organizations across Alberta have been actively involved in promoting the International Year of Volunteers among the province's volunteer sector. I am sure that we have all watched and cheered as Alberta communities engaged in a major effort to raise the profile of volunteers and to raise the public consciousness of the role that volunteers play in all our communities, and an important role it is, indeed. In fact, I recently read a report indicating that if the efforts of volunteers in our society were ever to be quantified and measured, it is estimated that the amount of services delivered by our volunteer sector – if we had to pay wages for all this work that's so selflessly donated, the budget required for this might rival if not even exceed that of government.

Frankly, I don't think that we can say enough good things about the efforts of our volunteers across Alberta. Thus, it was very fitting and proper to have had a year dedicated to them. Now we are quickly approaching the end of 2001 and thus the end of the International Year of Volunteers. The efforts this past year have certainly succeeded in leaving us all with a greater appreciation of all the vital contributions that volunteers of all ages make to our communities as well as a desire to show our support for their continuing efforts.

So I'm very pleased to inform this Assembly and all Albertans that on this December 5 coming up, which is declared to be International Volunteer Day, the Wild Rose Foundation and Alberta Community Development will unveil a new volunteer wall of fame in the pedway mall of Government Centre to commemorate and highlight the effort of volunteers across our province in contributing to an increased quality of life for all. This is such an important event that our hon. Premier himself and the hon. Minister of Community Development will be presiding over the induction of 13 members, Alberta volunteers, to this volunteer wall of fame, the first to be entered into it. New portraits of outstanding volunteers will be added each year going forward.

As the International Year of Volunteers comes to a close, I would ask that this Assembly join me in congratulating the volunteers who will be honoured through the volunteer wall of fame and, indeed, join me in applauding all the wonderful and very important volunteers throughout our province.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Forest Protection

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For a number of years, in conjunction with groups like the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society and Albertans for a Wild Chinchaga, the Official Opposition has been lobbying the government to protect larger areas of Alberta's forests. Along with many Albertans we had great hopes for the Special Places 2000 program, but in the end we watched deadlines go by and listened to excuses about why areas could not be protected and how starting points had become the final product. There are acreages with more land than some of the areas protected under this program.

In various policy statements and documents the government has recognized the need for large areas of protected forests. The importance of ecological management is not something new. What the government can't seem to do, however, is find a way to get those words off the paper and into action. They do little bits and pieces here and there, but they have not made a real commitment to substantial habitat protection.

The Official Opposition does not want to put up signs that say: industry go home. We believe that development can be done in a reasonable manner. Sensitive areas must be protected, and the industrial footprint can be reduced. The only thing stopping the process is the lack of will on the government's part. We cannot afford to debate habitat protection for another 20 years while the trees are cut down and the rivers fill with silt and chemicals. We have the research, and we know what needs to be done. Albertans do care, and they expect action from their government.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Coal Industry

MR. STRANG: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about the coal industry in Alberta and its importance to West Yellowhead. Coal is the most abundant fossil fuel in the world and the international fuel of choice for electrical generation. Alberta is blessed with an enormous amount of coal. Reserve estimates indicate that the province has enough coal to generate electricity at the current consumption rate for the next 800 years. Alberta has a competitive advantage over a number of other countries because Alberta's resources are widely distributed, have low-cost production, low sulfur content, and have a diverse technical characteristic that can compete in a number of domestic and international market sectors.

Our province's mines generate 90 percent of Alberta's electricity and in 2000 exported over 6 million tonnes of coal annually to 12 countries, mainly for steel production. In 1999 Alberta produced approximately half of Canada's coal production. Coal contributes substantially to the Alberta advantage through the major role that it plays in terms of energy, investment, trade, income generation, and employment. There are 12 active coal mines in Alberta, of which three – the Coal Valley, Luscar, and Obed mines – are in West Yellowhead. I am encouraged by the efforts to get the Smoky River coal mine back in operation under new management. The proposed Cheviot mine will also generate greater economic activity in the region.

I cannot stress enough the importance of the coal industry to the economy of West Yellowhead and Alberta as a whole. With our coal, oil, and natural gas Alberta's status as a key energy supplier in North America is assured well into the future. As a small token of the coal industry, you will find a small gift package on your desks. As we approach Christmas, you may get this in your stocking anyway.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Teachers' Contract Negotiations

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it is predicted that Edmonton teachers will almost certainly decide to go on strike. Their decision will affect thousands of students and parents, yet the government has no valid plan to deal with the issue. I urge the government to hold over the legislative session so that a resolution to the teachers' contract dispute can be found before Christmas. If this government doesn't hold over the Legislature, it will send a strong message to Edmonton teachers that their concerns are not important.

I would like to point out that in 1999 at a Conservative Party policy convention it was recommended that the teaching profession become an essential service. In the last 100 years in Edmonton there have only been two teachers' strikes. This Conservative government has put its policy resolutions before the interests of the province's children. Maybe a decade from now students will learn how 2001 was the year they stopped being important. The government's current hard line of confrontation, not negotiation with teachers indicates that it wants to force them to strike so that it can have an excuse to legislate the teaching profession as an essential service.

Teachers work very hard because they love their jobs and the children whom they serve. Like anyone, they expect fair compensation for what they do. The government considers teachers to be essential, but it won't even sit down and talk to them. The government considers teachers to be essential, but it gives them no respect. I urge the government to stick around long enough to deal with teachers' issues. I urge the government to respect teachers and find a resolution to their problems rather than shackle them to overcrowded classrooms with inadequate resources. I urge the government to finally make teachers and public education a priority.

Thank you.

head: Projected Government Business

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, at this point in time we would ask the Government House Leader to share with us any projected government business that he may have.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It would appear that for the first time in living memory the Order Paper is clear.

THE SPEAKER: Actually, hon. members, for the 12 days in this fall session we've had a dearth, a lack of points of order. Today it seems we may have up to four of them.

So let me first of all call on the Leader of the Official Opposition on a point of order.

Point of Order Decorum

DR. NICOL: Mr. Speaker, I just want to take this opportunity to recognize that through this session and through your tenure here you've really tried to maintain decorum in the House. I broke that decorum this afternoon, and I apologize to you.

2:50

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader on a point of order. You have two, so the first that you would deal with, in a note you sent me.

Point of Order

Notice of Motion under Standing Order 40

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, indeed. I wanted to raise a point of order with respect to the purported notice of motion that was received today with respect to a Standing Order 40 motion. I rise under Standing Order 2 because I find that the Standing Orders and Beauchesne don't provide us with an awful lot of help, at least on a cursory review, in this area.

It has been the custom and practice of this House that notices of motions under Standing Order 30 and Standing Order 40, the two urgent Standing Orders, are normally delivered to the Speaker's office, as I understand it, prior to 11 o'clock on a given day. Then oral notice is given in the House, and then the notice of motion comes up under Orders of the Day.

Now, it is true that the Standing Order itself negates Standing Order 38 in saying that there is no written notice necessary for a Standing Order 40 notice of motion, and in fact no one expects written notice. But today we had a most unusual occurrence, and that is the receipt of a letter saying that there would be a Standing Order 40 notice of motion brought up, and then during Notices of Motions the hon. Leader of the Opposition stood and gave notice that he was going to bring forward a motion. But under most understandings of Notices of Motions it includes the content or the subject of the notice of motion. Otherwise it is not a notice of motion. It's just telling you that there's going to be one, and that is not what a notice of motion, in my understanding, means.

So I would ask you as the Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 2, if there are not other Standing Orders which cover it or in Beauchesne, which, as I acknowledge, I haven't been able to find in a cursory look, to outline for us the appropriate procedure to be used in this House. Quite frankly, I find the process that was used this afternoon with respect to the notice of motion highly inappropriate. I have absolutely no problem with the concept that urgent notices should be brought to the House and no problem with them being brought even at the time of Notices of Motions, even though the Speaker's office is usually given advance notice. The custom and practice has been that the House receives notice of this motion and members receive notice or at least the Government House Leader typically has received notice prior to the opening of the session during the day. That may have been just a courtesy in practice, and if that is the case, then I'd be interested in that being outlined for us, but it's in my view totally inappropriate to rise during Notices of Motions and give no notice of motion, only advise the House that there will be a motion, which is not under the definition of notice of motion.

THE SPEAKER: Shortly, the hon. Opposition House Leader.

MS CARLSON: Of course. Very shortly. Certainly the information in the notice of motion was immediately distributed to all members in the Legislature upon the Leader of the Official Opposition having given notice. We presumed that that was a common practice from previous presentations of these kinds of motions and find that there was nothing wrong with the process.

THE SPEAKER: Are there other hon. members that want to participate?

Hon. members, there are basically two Standing Orders that come into play with respect to this. The whole objective of all of this is to waive the ordinary Routine of the day and abrogate it and then proceed to another order of business. In one case, under Standing Order 30, there's a required ruling by the chair. In the case of Standing Order 40 it's by unanimous consent of the House. So later on this afternoon, when the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition is recognized, the Leader of the Official Opposition under Standing Order 40 will rise and very, very briefly provide a "case of urgent and pressing necessity." Then the chair will ask: is there unanimous consent to proceed? If one member says no, that's where it's ended. No debate, nothing else, done. So that's the process.

Now, in terms of the manner in which this has been dealt with, in terms of Standing Order 30 there's absolutely no doubt at all about the fact that there is a requirement to advise the Speaker's office two hours prior to that, but no such requirement is contained in Standing Order 40. In the past we've had Standing Order 40s when the chair has not been informed. The chair has been in the chair when this part of the Routine has been recognized. An hon. member stood up and basically said: I intend to later in the afternoon rise on a Standing Order 40 and to request unanimous consent of the House to consider an urgent matter of business. So we've had both of these and more and even in this session.

I do believe that with the last Standing Order 40 that was dealt with in this House, the chair, after recognizing an hon. member to proceed with it, had no knowledge of what it would be. In today's situation the letter arrived in the Speaker's office at 11:50, which was a courtesy. It was not required but was a courtesy. Then when the hon. member stood up early in the afternoon and basically indicated what it was, that was the point in time that the chair, like every other member, found out what the text of it was. That's a courtesy. That was not a requirement under Standing Order 40, because Standing Order 40s are negated very quickly by the need for unanimous consent. Needless to say, it works this way. If hon. members feel that they have been slighted because of a lack of courtesy or knowledge about what this would be, the chances of them giving approval to waive the Routine of the day would be negated pretty easily and pretty quickly.

So it would be a great courtesy, but it's not a requirement. That has not been violated today. We will wait a few minutes from now, when we recognize the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition to formally proceed with his Standing Order 40, and find what the response of the House will be when the question is on unanimous consent.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands. You wish to proceed now? Okay.

Yesterday the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands identified to the chair his desire to rise on a point of order, but the member was not sure whether or not the member wanted to rise on a point of order or a point of privilege. There was a consultation, but the hon. member wanted to have the benefit of the Blues or the Hansard before he would rise. So he advised the chair yesterday that he wanted to rise on a point of order today on a matter resulting out of the question period yesterday. That in itself is a bit unusual, but there are some mitigating circumstances in the background, and the chair will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Point of Order

Provoking Debate

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise on a point of order pursuant to Standing Order 23(h). Standing Order 23(h) says that a member shall be called to order if allegations are made against another member by imputing "false or unavowed motives" or using "abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.” I also cite Beauchesne 417, that a reply in Oral Question Period should “deal with the matter raised and should not provoke debate.”

In yesterday’s question period the Minister of Health and Wellness in response to a very legitimate question raised by my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona violated each one of the above citations. In his answer to the member’s first question the minister said and I briefly quote from Hansard:

The hon. member does not appear to be able to get his own facts straight on a number of occasions. We know that between him and his colleague who sits to his left, his far left perhaps – between the two of them they are not able to do a sufficient amount of research to provide us with a question on government policy as opposed to mere insinuation.

Clearly, these remarks are argumentative, they are insulting, and they are certainly designed to provoke debate. I therefore ask that the point of order be sustained, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

MR. HANCOCK: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would have thought it prudent in a circumstance of this nature where no one is even aware of the point having been raised that notice might have been given to the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness so that he might be able to speak in his own defence.

That being said, it would appear from what was read that there was nothing more than banter of the usual nature, and I would suggest that it’s nothing more than that and need not be sanctioned.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Opposition House Leader on this point of order.

MS CARLSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hardly could the Government House Leader state that what occurred yesterday in question period was merely banter. The minister of health was very aggressive in his comments and certainly was targeting the member from whom the point of order was raised. I would ask that the Government House Leader withdraw the comment that it was mere banter.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on this point of order. Please be brief.

3:00

MR. ZWOZDESKY: Mr. Speaker, I was here for this discussion, and as I read the point that the hon. member is raising, it’s clear that the Minister of Health and Wellness was simply referring to the size of the caucus of the third party, with no dishonour meant. It simply says that there are only two of them, who are perhaps unable to do a sufficient amount of research. On the basis of that, I don’t believe there was any insult intended by that remark.

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, in the last several days in the Assembly you’ve seen a lot of body movement by the chair during the question period. Members have observed that. In fact, members might have observed that on almost every question that has been raised in the last several days and on almost every answer given in the last several days. Now, there are exceptions to this. There are exceptions. Some exchanges have been top-notch, of total value, to be used as examples for the future, but there has been a tendency in the last several days to have questions seeking opinion and other types.

Now, I’m not going to spend a great deal of time dealing with

Beauchesne, but in Beauchesne 409:

It must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate . . .

The question ought to seek information and, therefore, cannot be based upon a hypothesis, cannot seek an opinion, either legal or otherwise, and must not suggest its own answer, be argumentative or make representations.

I can go on and on.

Now, the same rules basically apply, though, to answers as well, by custom and tradition and everything else. It’s also fair to say that there has been some intensity on the odd occasion in the last several days in some of the questions and the answers, perhaps in terms of the exchange that occurred between the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, who the chair in his own view thought was rather enthusiastic with his question, and then observed the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, who again the chair thought was rather enthusiastic as well. Perhaps the word “enthusiastic” is better than “aggressive” or something else. Let’s just assume that it’s all in the spirit of the time that we’re at, at the concluding days of a session.

I know that this may not be the best reading that people would want on Saturday mornings, but over the next couple of months let’s just take a good look at some of this stuff and see exactly how we might want to deal with it. Intensity is fine. The chair has the Hansard in front of him, and I would like to indicate as well to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands that the Minister of Health and Wellness did meet with me personally and did indicate that he was rather aggressive, but he was very concerned that an individual who’s not in this Assembly whose reputation was coming under question – now, that’s what his assumption was, and it was in that light that he was responding. So it strikes me that no one is purely innocent in all of this, and by the same token the chair will not find anyone purely guilty.

The hon. Government House Leader on the second point of order.

Point of Order Exhibits

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was going to raise a point of order under 501 to 504 of Beauchesne with respect to the use of exhibits by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, but I will withdraw that point of order and follow the good example of the hon. Leader of the Opposition with respect to decorum in the House and thank him for his remarks instead.

THE SPEAKER: For the clarity of the House, was an exhibit used by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar? Okay. The chair would like to clarify again. The chair interceded at that point in time because there was absolute confusion, which was unfair to the Deputy Premier, who had the question directed to her, and I believe unfair as well to the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

From time to time people come and want to bring exhibits into this Assembly. There is a process, and sometimes we get maybe a little enthusiastic about these exhibits. So the process is important, but never once should the exhibit become then a problem for hon. members within the Assembly. No one suggests for a moment that the exhibit today provided by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead falls into that category, because it was done in good faith, but therein lies part of the problem.

head: Motions under Standing Order 40

THE SPEAKER: Having said all of that, we’re now dealing with the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition and his application for a Standing Order 40 request.

Children's Services

Dr. Nicol:

Be it resolved that this Assembly address a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the need for a full debate on the cuts to the Children's Services budget, which threaten the well-being and future of Alberta's children.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've heard a lot of debate about and a lot of questions about the current status of children in the province in the past three-week period of our session. There have been a lot of issues raised, a lot of input provided to all members of this Legislature by constituents, by individuals, and by families. I think it's important, as we look at how we address the issues they're raising and in the context of the discussion here in the Legislature, that we look at, first of all, two different aspects of what we've seen arise during this week.

First of all, the issue comes up that the change in budgeting truly has affected services that are being provided to children. Even though they're in a transitional state, they're in a sense unexpected by the families and the children that have been getting these services on a past basis or in an historic manner. What we're looking at, then, is that the recipients of these services have sensed or felt that the change in service has directly affected their children, yet we've heard on numerous occasions in this House the minister insisting that no children are being affected within the context of the mandate that she sees for her department. So what we need to do here is really look at how that mandate for her department fits with both the historic services that have been provided under the auspices of her department and the expectations of families and children in our province in terms of what they can access through her department.

The second issue that I wanted to raise today and feel strongly that we should clarify for Albertans before the end of this session is the fact that on November 20 the minister spoke about a new response model, and it appears that what she's looking at here and basically saying is that her department is solely responsible for children who are in immediate danger as opposed to any of the preventative programs that have historically been offered through her department. So I think it's important especially at this time, as the government is preparing to undertake discussions and processes for the new budgets that will be coming forward to deal with our next fiscal year starting in April, that we clarify for Albertans the true status of what is the mandate and what is the responsibility of the Minister of Children's Services. You know, this is where we're looking at the kind of issue that comes up, Mr. Speaker, in terms of what we see as the responsibility of this department for the relationship between the children's authorities and the families and the children that are in those communities. They have seen the Alberta government, through its mandate, as a means to deal with the issues of stability that they can perceive both in caring for their children and for the role of children in their community.

So I think it's really important that we take time this afternoon and dedicate it to a clear debate of what is our option and what are options for delivery models for children's services in this province. It's really a critical issue, based on the calls that have been coming into the offices we've been in communication with, and it's important that Albertans understand if there is to be a change in mandate of that department.

Thank you.

THE SPEAKER: Thank you, hon. leader. I'll now ask the question under Standing Order 40.

[Unanimous consent denied]

Bill 31

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No. 2)

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move Bill 31, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001 (No.2), for third reading.

As has been previously outlined for the House, while we normally do not debate miscellaneous statutes, as they only get introduced with the unanimous consent of all three parties in the House, we have by special agreement agreed to debate the particular section of the act relative to electoral boundaries.

The provision in the act itself really does only one thing. It changes the date so that rather than having to wait until June of 2003 to appoint an Electoral Boundaries Commission, which would then have the result of the commission having a year under the act – seven months to bring in its initial report and five months thereafter to bring in a final report – to do a redistribution process, which would end up close to the time of the next election, we believe that with the census having been taken in the year 2000 and with the new information available and with the imbalance that's obviously there, it would be prudent and in the interest of all Albertans to do a redistribution earlier than as provided in the act and to therefore just change the date so that it could be done prior to the June 2003 date which would otherwise have been provided for. Of course, after the commission reports, then the report has to be brought to the Legislature, and there has to be a resolution of the Legislature. Then the report, if accepted by the Legislature, has to be translated into an act to go to a session. So it's really an 18-month process, at the least, and perhaps a two-year process. So it is very prudent in our view, Mr. Speaker, to deal with the issue by bringing in an amendment. We've chosen, with the good graces of the opposition, to do it by way of just changing the date to allow us to call the commission earlier, as provided for in this amendment made through the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act.

Now, I've had the privilege of reading the Blues from earlier debate, and there is some suggestion that other issues should be dealt with. I think that's probably outside the scope of the debate, but I will say this, Mr. Speaker. I have some history with redistribution, having been an active member of a political association since I was about 14 years old and having been involved in redistribution processes from outside this House on numerous occasions previously. I can tell all members of this House that the act that we have in place now is probably the best, in terms of setting up the parameters for a redistribution commission, that you could find anywhere. It puts the discretion in the hands of the commission to draw boundaries in an appropriate way, and it gives the commission very, very broad parameters and considerations in which to do it.

Previous acts in this province have tried to delineate how many seats should be urban and how many should be rural, have tried to delineate what was urban and rural, have tried to handcuff the hands of the commission in terms of how they draw the boundaries, but the act that we have now does not do that. It does not handcuff the commission. In fact, it gives the commission some broad guidelines with respect to what it should consider or what it may consider. Actually, it says, "shall take into consideration," and I think it's important to look at what it shall take into consideration. Essentially those parameters talk about what goes to the very essence of representing Albertans in this Legislature: how you get in contact with them, how many people you have to contact, how far you have to go to do it, and how far you have to come to the Legislature. Things like:

- (a) the requirement for effective representation as guaranteed by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms,
- (b) sparsity and density of population,
- (c) common community interests and community organizations . . .
- (c.1) wherever possible, the existing community boundaries within the cities of Edmonton and Calgary,
- (c.2) wherever possible, the existing municipal boundaries,
- (d) the number of municipalities and other local authorities,
- (e) geographical features, including existing road systems, and
- (f) the desirability of understandable and clear boundaries.

The act doesn't tell the commission how to take those into consideration. It just says to the commission that these are relevant considerations to take into account when determining what boundaries there should be.

The only other thing I want to add, then, in the discussion – I do believe that we're doing the right thing by appointing a commission which is a bilateral commission. It has two members appointed by the opposition and two members appointed by the government and a chair who has to come from a specified category of people, as outlined in the act. So it's a very fair process. One of the things that we often get into is this discussion of the equality of a vote. I just want to very briefly dwell on this question of equality of a vote.

In Alberta we have a unicameral system; we have one House. Nationally, of course, we have a bicameral system with a House and a Senate. Quite often in Alberta we argue that the Senate should be effective, equal, and elected and that we need an effective, equal, and elected Senate because we don't have the population that Ontario has and therefore we don't have the representation in the House of Commons that Ontario has because we effectively do the redistribution basically on a population basis. Now, they have some parameters, as well, to vary that. But we argue vociferously from Alberta of the need to have an equal, elected, and effective Senate to bring the regional viewpoint into that discussion. Well, Mr. Speaker, how do we bring in the viewpoint of the region in a unicameral setting unless we take into account the very things that are set out in the act as direction to the commission to consider in terms of the various regions of the province having an effective voice in this House?

Now, I come from an urban constituency. I could argue that we should have an absolute equality of votes and that that somehow would improve the representation of the process, because each vote in the province would be equal. But, as you know, even if you did that on an absolute basis, it would only be so for a day, because populations move, constituencies grow, and constituencies change. So you'll never have absolutely equality of votes except for that one moment in time when you actually drew the boundaries to do it. Even then, you probably wouldn't be able to get it that accurate.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

There will always be an inequality of votes. The question is how big and for what reason. I think it's a perfectly valid reason in a province such as ours, where there is a balance of interests to be represented in the Legislature from all regions of the province and a need for all regions of the province to be heard and to have an effective voice. It's more than just counting up the numbers and dividing by the number of seats to arrive at equality of vote. Equality of vote has also got to be an ability for members to be effective representatives by being able to be in touch with their constituents, by being able to meet with all the representative bodies in their constituencies, and by being able to properly get the information to assist them in bringing that information to the House.

That equality of vote is not just achieved, Mr. Speaker, by adding up the number of people in the province and dividing by the constituencies and saying that that provides an equal vote. It does not. The act which we have in Alberta is an act which I think – I'm very proud that we have it, because we've moved away from all the restrictions which the Legislature used to put on in doing a redistribution. We've given a commission a broad mandate. We've said: you should take into account as a first order of business "the requirement for effective representation as guaranteed by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms." We've provided for other parameters. We then let the commission of Albertans go through the province and hear representations from Albertans as to how Albertans believe the boundaries should be drawn, come up with an interim report and then go back and justify that interim report to Albertans, hear again how Albertans think that the boundaries should be drawn, and then come back to the House with an independent report.

It's a good process, Mr. Speaker. It's an excellent act. The only thing that needs to be changed, in my humble opinion, is the date so we can get on with the job.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

DR. NICOL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to stand for a few minutes and discuss the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act amendment that's in the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act. I want to, effectively, agree with the Government House Leader in his comments that in the context of providing, if you want to call it, nonpartisan guidance to the commission, the current act does a reasonable job of that. What we want to do, though, is also look at the structure of the amendment now, and I think I'll just kind of put on record some of the comments that might be useful, I guess, in the future.

I also want to thank the Government House Leader for his efforts. While we were developing this, he had a chance to meet with both myself and the leader of the third party opposition and discuss how it was going to be brought about, how it was going to be set up. I guess the suggestion maybe for the next time, because it's too late for this time now, might be to try and make this kind of an amendment – what we're doing here now is that this amendment is going to have to be made every time we want to have a boundary redistribution. What we should be doing is looking at some of the parameters that were in the act that we're deleting. Basically we should be setting a series of guidelines that just say that this should have been commissioned during the First Session of the Legislature sitting after a certain number of times after the previous one. So it becomes automatic unless for some reason, because we have very short Legislatures, we end up out of kilter.

You know, one of the main things that will be used in this is the census of Canada. That's being completed, will be available for them, hopefully, by early spring to use as a basis for their judgment. So what we should have been looking at, instead of putting a specific date in there, was just allowing it to occur on a regular basis during the First Session of a particular Legislature. But this serves our purpose now. It's good. It will get the commission started. It will get the process started, and it will provide for the information that'll come from the census to be the basis for it.

A couple of things that I want to look at in the context of how we charge that commission. I think one of the things that has to be looked at is that the committee should see their mandate as something a little broader than just drawing a set of lines on a map, because as the Government House Leader mentioned, there are a lot of different aspects that come about in the context of how do we get effective representation, not necessarily just equality of representation, and the trade-off that has to occur here. You know, in a representative government there should be a degree of adherence to the concept of one person, one vote, or everybody's vote has the same weight if they choose to exercise it. That's part of the issue that in this process we can't address. What we also may want to look at in terms of our discussions about this whole process of trying to develop new constituency maps, moving into subsequent elections, is: how do we deal, as well, with encouraging people to exercise that vote? But that's not the mandate of this change, Mr. Speaker. We should deal with that in another debate.

In the context of the mandate we're giving to this commission, what we should look at is: how do we make sure that they act in a way that will be acceptable to most Albertans? We have to make sure that some degree of equality is adhered to in the vote, but we also want to make sure that representation is accessible. We've heard a couple of comments about that already from the Government House Leader. One of the things that we have to make sure of – this act is going to facilitate elections for possibly the next two or three elections. As we go about putting those lines on the map today, what we've got to do is kind of look at whether or not they will be fair representative constituencies as we move over this eight- to 10-year period. To do that, what we need to look at is where communities are growing, where communities are not growing as fast, things that come up about where the new economic development initiatives are likely to occur.

I think Fort McMurray has to be really a prime example of that in the sense that the expanding oil sands development up there is very labour intensive. So what we're going to be looking at is that as these new projects come on, there will be a high probability of increases in population in that area. In effect, that constituency probably should start a little bit below the average. Where we look at other constituencies that are going to remain stable, they can be a little above the average.

I would hope that part of the process that the commission looks at is kind of the transition that is going on in Alberta in terms of where changes are occurring, where changes in growth patterns are coming about. The opportunities that are coming up in some of our communities do portray long-term growth, and we should be making sure that we don't end up with the situations like we've had in southwest Calgary. Those constituencies are now unbelievably big because the subdivisions that the city had approved, the subdivisions that were being talked about, hadn't been incorporated into designing the constituencies when we did it two elections ago. So as those subdivisions were developed, we ended up with very high population constituencies in our current election. If the process that we went through previously, two elections ago, would have looked at where subdivision approval had already occurred or was being sought, some of the issues like how cities are growing, then we could have looked at possibly adjusting those boundaries.

I know that in my own area, Mr. Speaker, the city of Lethbridge, historically a lot of our growth has been into the west Lethbridge component, but if we're going to look at where the subdivisions are occurring now, a lot of them are occurring in the southeast corner of the city. So what we should be doing is looking at those subdivision approvals instead of just saying: well, the growth is going to occur in west Lethbridge. It may not now because the city has undertaken some infrastructure development that will really facilitate growth out into the southeast quadrant as well. So we don't want to necessarily just project a constituency that would say that population growth is going to go where it has historically.

Another thing that we want to look at is that as the committee goes out into the community and talks to Albertans, they'll get a sense of how the communities feel about their representation. Even though it's not written directly into the mandate of the commission, it probably would be very appropriate, as they develop constituencies, to address the issues that the Government House Leader brought up in the sense of: how do we have effective representation? It would be extremely helpful to the Members' Services Committee if they would convey to the Members' Services Committee some of the criteria that they used in determining what constitutes effective representation, accessible representation, because then what we need to do is marry together their analysis, or their thought processes, with a new model of constituency funding from the Members' Services Committee.

3:30

Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to suggest here in any way that this commission take over any of the responsibilities of Members' Services, but what we need to do is make sure that if the commission is using a set of criteria when they look at what is accessible representation, effective representation, then those criteria be included in their report. So when we develop models, then, of actually facilitating the individual who is elected to represent that constituency, we need to provide them with the resources that are consistent with the kinds of parameters that the commission put in place.

What we need to look at also is the approach that comes up with a debate about whether or not we should focus on consistency of constituency or a broad-based constituency. I would suggest that the more diverse we can make the constituencies, the more the representative who is elected from there will have information presented to them that represents the pros and cons on both sides of an issue. If we make a constituency and if we create the boundaries so that we really have a homogeneous community within that constituency, there's no opportunity for the representative to do a little of the balancing that's necessary to have government that represents all Albertans. The individual interest groups, the individual single-issue communities that are there have their opportunities through the structure that we have in terms of input to committees in the Legislature, through input to, say, provincial party platforms, through input to the open consultations that are conducted by the government.

When we're dealing with issue-specific or uniformity-type issues, that should not be a criterion that we look at in terms of trying to put lines on a map. We want to make sure that that line on the map is easy to represent, not easy in the sense that it's an homogeneous issue but easy in the sense that it facilitates gathering of the information and bringing into the debate that goes on here all of the pro and con arguments that are necessary for us to evaluate the aspects of the piece of legislation that deals with that concern. If an individual can hear about all of the issues in their community, they get a chance to feed back to their community members issues that are either important or not important.

In a way, Mr. Speaker, I have that in my community in the sense that Lethbridge is an agriculture service centre as much as a government service centre, you know, in the sense of health care, education, and government support. It's also an agriculture service centre, and being the Agriculture critic I communicate a lot with the interest groups in the community and across Alberta. When I go back to deal with my constituency, which is inside the city of Lethbridge, I can address with them the issues that are important to the community around them so that we can get a real balance of how things work. If we can make sure that within a constituency there's a diversity of ideas, to me that facilitates good representative government more than having one representative stand up here and speak only on behalf of one constituent group where that constituent group is an issue-based group.

Mr. Speaker, those are some of the issues that I think we have to look at and make sure that we're basically able to go through and, when we're done, say that within the boundaries that will be created, what we've got is a degree of the concepts of equality of the individual in a democratic system, but that equality has to be tempered by the ability of the individual to have their information presented in the debate. We also have to look at it, you know, in terms of: can that elected representative actually effectively consult with their community members with the breadth, both in terms of geography and in terms of interest, of all of the members of their constituencies?

In many ways representing a constituency where you have a very broad base of socioeconomic characteristics is just as hard to represent as a community that has a lot of distance characteristics in it. You know, you may have to drive from one end of a constituency to the other and take a couple of hours at it, but when you get there, the message is going to be fairly similar, so there's not a lot of background work that needs to be done. If you're in a more compact, less dispersed constituency, you may end up having to deal with an awful lot more subject matter issues, so the ability to represent them takes just as much effort. So what we need to do is make sure that these kinds of considerations are all part of the debate.

Mr. Speaker, I put them into the record so that when the commission gets established, I hope what they'll do is take the prerogative to read Hansard, look at the guidelines that are listed in the act, and listen to some of the discussion that went on here so that they get a full understanding of, I guess, the perceived responsibility that we're passing on to them to make sure that over the next eight to 10 years we have effective representative government established once again in the province. We're fully aware of the discrepancies that are occurring now in some constituencies because of the growth factor and changes in demographics. So I think that on that basis I would like to recognize that the government is introducing this now instead of waiting until the normal guidelines would have come about in the current act. I support that idea that they're moving it forward, getting at it. Let's get this process under way, and let's support this commission so that we can effectively find out where our constituency boundaries will be.

The issue that does come up is the earlier we do it, the longer the constituency will be in place before it gets changed again, so the more important it is that they look at both the forecast and the projected dynamics that may occur so that they effectively establish constituencies that will be just right halfway through the term of the next set of constituencies. In effect, they could be a little unbalanced now, a little bit unbalanced 10 years from now, but in the midpoint they'll be perfect.

With that, Mr. Speaker, we wish the commission well. We put our trust in them, and we'll wait for their results. Thank you very much.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

MR. MASON: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to speak briefly on Bill 31, and I'll be restricting my comments to the proposed amendments to the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act. I will try to focus just on one main point, and that is the view of Alberta New Democrats that some sort of proportional system of representation is required in order to better represent the actual wishes of the people in Alberta.

We appreciate that the government has agreed to permit this debate. It was certainly the position of our caucus that a comprehensive bill dealing with electoral boundaries ought to have been introduced either in this session or in the spring sitting, but I think what's been proposed by the Government House Leader today is a reasonable compromise, and I'm pleased to speak to the bill.

There are a number of things that we were looking to do which were dealt with by the leader of the New Democrats in his speech last night. They include more balance between rural and urban constituencies, and of course in Alberta we have much wider variances permitted than in a number of other provinces. We think that that could and should be narrowed from a 25 percent variance to something more like a 10 percent variance. That is something that the city of Edmonton has done in its ward system. I participated there on the committee that drew up the ward boundaries. It's certainly a difficult job, and I'm sure it would be a much more difficult job when you're considering the whole province. We were able, as some other provinces are able to do, to get the boundaries such that the population variance did not exceed plus or minus 10 percent. I think we could do that here as well.

We also wanted to address the size of the Assembly and ask the question: do we need all 83 seats in this Assembly? I think there is a strong move towards downsizing government, but I think it generally starts below the legislative level in most governments' practice. So that's something I think we should be discussing as well.

I really want to talk mostly about proportional representation. Certainly if the number of seats in the opposition were based on the proportion of popular vote in the last election, we would see that there would be 31 members of the opposition in the House as opposed to the nine today. For that reason alone, I would expect the government would not favour this proposal, Mr. Speaker, but that, indeed, is how it's conducted. [interjections] Now, I know that this proposition excites some of the hon. members beyond belief, but in fact it is the case that some sort of proportional representation system is the norm in parliamentary democracies in the world, in the western countries in particular, and it's . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: In the civilized world.

MR. MASON: Well the hon. member here says, "In the civilized world," but I believe that Alberta is civilized.

I think it's clear that the type of system we now have tends to perpetuate governments, and it tends to overstate their strength in the Legislative Assembly. This Assembly is a perfect case in point, Mr. Speaker.

In most countries in Europe except Britain proportional representation is the norm. It is, I think, something that can be combined with a system of constituencies such as we currently have. It doesn't have to just be members drawn from a list in direct proportion to their party's popular vote. There is something called a mixed-member system. I believe that it's in practice in Germany and some other countries, Mr. Speaker, in which approximately 75 percent of the seats in the Assembly are allocated to geographic constituencies in the same fashion as we now have. The remaining 25 percent are drawn from a list depending on the popular vote and are allocated so that the total number of the seats in the Assembly approximately equals the popular vote of each of the parties in the House. So that is something that I think should really be discussed as part of the political future for Alberta. We have a democratic system of which we are rightly proud, Mr. Speaker, but it can always be improved, and it can always be made more democratic.

A recent survey by the Canada West Foundation, hardly a socialist think tank, showed that almost 7 in 10 people in Alberta supported making the electoral system more fair. Electoral reform is on the minds of Canadians, Mr. Speaker. They're no longer satisfied that our system is as democratic and as open as it possibly could be, and you don't have to look any further than some of the proposals that were put out 10 years ago, for example, by the then Reform Party which really engaged Canadians in a big way on the whole question of how decisions are made and how the democratic machinery operated in our country. They talked about recall and talked about referenda and talked about, as the hon. Attorney General and Government House Leader talked about, the triple E Senate, which is an idea whose time has come and gone.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, it's clear that Canadians and particularly western Canadians are intensely interested in the issue of electoral reform, and I think it behooves us to look more broadly at this question than simply, as the government is proposing, having a one-line entry in the miscellaneous statutes act establishing a commission. We certainly are in favour of an early drawing of boundaries, but the government is assuming in its proposal here that Albertans are comfortable and happy with the status quo when it comes to our electoral system, and I think that that's not so, as the Canada West Foundation study clearly shows. Albertans want to see parliamentary reform. They want to see parliamentary change. They want to see electoral reform in this province and indeed right across the country.

So with those comments, Mr. Speaker, I'll conclude. We would really urge the government to consider during the term of its office establishing a broader commission which would look at the electoral system in Alberta as a whole, with a broader mandate to consider more than just drawing where the lines on the map ought to go. It ought to in our view consult with Albertans as to which type of electoral system they would like to see, what size of provincial Legislature they would like to see, and indeed how the functioning of our Assembly could be made more open to the public and, in a sense, reformed and democratized further. So I would urge the government to consider that proposal sometime during the term of its mandate.

In the meantime I would wish the commission the best of luck in drawing up fair boundaries that will serve Albertans as well as they have so far. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

MR. BONNER: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I certainly enjoy the opportunity to speak to the electoral boundaries component of the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act. I think this is integral to democracy in Alberta, and I would certainly like to hear the comments of all members of this Assembly as to how we as an elected legislative body could represent all the constituents of Alberta to the best possible degree.

Certainly one of the objectives of this particular amendment act is to change the date, and we are changing the date when the commission must be appointed to June 30, 2002, instead of the proposed date of July 1, 2003. Certainly I welcome this suggestion, support this suggestion because it is with this redistribution of the constituencies that we will have, hopefully, better representation.

Now, we do know, Mr. Speaker, that an election is a fundamental component of representative government. It provides effective representation from the population, and in Alberta the foundation of this process is made up of the 83 electoral divisions. When we have elections, we do it on the basis of one vote for one person. In assuming that, we assume that every Albertan's vote is equal to any other Albertan's vote, but unfortunately that is not the case. I only have to look at the results from the last list of electors in the last election. When we compare, for example, the constituency of Athabasca-Wabasca and the number of names on their election list, as of May 2001 at 12,598, and we look at the names on the electors list for Calgary-Shaw, as of the same date at 49,380, then we have quite a disparity.

We also have to look at this. For the Member for Athabasca-Wabasca to drive from the southern end of his constituency to the northern part of his constituency, he does have quite a chore. [interjection] He does indicate that he sometimes requires a dog team, and if he'd like somebody to accompany him on one of those trips, I'd be most willing to, yes.

This in itself, Mr. Speaker, does pose some of the problems that we do have and the challenges that will be facing the commission when they do look at this whole issue of redistribution. Certainly in some parts of the province we have regions where there's a very sparse population. In order for those people to have the same representation as, for example, people in Calgary-Shaw, then how does this member travel throughout his constituency? At the same time, how do we address the issue that there was roughly a 3.9 to 1 ratio of voters in Calgary-Shaw to those in Athabasca-Wabasca? These are challenges that the commission will once again face when they do their redistribution.

Certainly our boundaries are going to be determined by population. It is going to be determined by area. I think that somehow, Mr. Speaker, the commission will have to look at ways that we can address these problems. In the case of Athabasca-Wabasca, one of the solutions, perhaps, could be to make an allowance where this constituency could be provided with more funds so that there could be more offices in different areas and to have those offices staffed. As well, you know, I think the commission faces enormous challenges when we look, for example, at the rapid growth in Calgary and how some of these constituencies were determined in – I believe the last time was 1996. They have grown incredibly since that time and certainly do not follow along the recommendation that we look at these and review how we address redistribution every second election here in Alberta.

Now, then, we also have, when we look at elections here in Alberta, a deviation figure, and this deviation figure certainly is quite large when compared with other provinces. I see that section 17(1) allows the population of a proposed electoral division to be as much as 25 percent above or below the average population of all the proposed electoral divisions. This is quite high, but again to maintain the number of electoral divisions at 83, perhaps this figure could not be altered too much. Now, also, in section 17(2) it allows up to four of the proposed electoral divisions to have a population that is as much as 50 percent below the average if the commission is of the opinion that at least three of the five criteria apply to that proposed electoral division.

I guess this brings us back, Mr. Speaker, to the issue: what is the average, and how is that determined? It seems to be an increasing difficulty that the commission will face, because we have seen certainly a greater move to urbanization of the province over the last decade, and there doesn't seem to be much of a trend to get away from this.

So those are a few comments that I wanted to make in regards to this particular Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act.

I also would wish the commission every success in addressing the challenges that all members who have spoken so far have outlined, and I certainly think that with their good work all Albertans will be well represented.

I thank you very much for this opportunity to speak today.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

DR. MASSEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to make a few comments about Bill 31 and in particular the electoral boundaries component. It seems to me that we can look at and have traditionally looked at representation from two perspectives. The first perspective is a delegate model of representation, where citizens send people to this Legislature as their delegates and expect that the representative, the MLA, will reflect their wishes in his or her behaviour in this Assembly and in the way they deal with matters. We spend a great deal of time as MLAs under that model trying to be good delegates. We hold town halls, we send out questionnaires and opinionnaires, and we monitor carefully the kinds of telephone calls that we get and the e-mails that we receive. We log them, and we keep track of public opinion. We watch local newspapers for what's being said, and we try to keep our antennae tuned in to what the community is saying in order that we can in this Assembly try to reflect those wishes in our behaviour.

There's a second model, however, and that's a trustee model. There's been very little attention paid in any of the reviews that we've had to a trustee model and, I guess, with good reason. A trustee model of representation is one where we would be acting more on our own convictions and attempting to put forward principles that we believe in and act on them regardless of current popular opinion, and that's what makes the model very, very difficult for the context in which we work, where a delegate model is the norm. I said that it's a difficult model, and we've seen a couple of examples in the House this last week where MLAs were acting more in tune with the trustee model than the delegate model.

We saw it when the Minister of Finance and the Member for Edmonton-Riverview spoke in opposition to I think it was Bill 207, the tool tax exemption. The tool tax exemption is obviously a popular notion in the community and has widespread support, yet we heard the Minister of Finance and the Member for Edmonton-Riverview saying: "Just a minute. It may be the popular thing to do, but is it really sound policy at this time?" They went on to indicate a position that was quite different, that paid attention to the economics of the proposal and paid attention to what it meant for the tax system if that bill were proceeded with. I'm sure that it wasn't easy for them to stand and to take that position. So a trustee model makes it much more difficult. It also means that members have to have thought through very carefully their own philosophical and political stances and be ready to defend them.

It's apparent that the Electoral Boundaries Commission has in the past done everything they can to further a delegate model of representation. It's highly weighted in favour of a delegate model. They've made some improvements, but again they were done to, as I said, improve that delegate model. The last commission put forward a rather interesting matrix. They took six factors and tried to assign a numerical weight to each of those factors and then to come to a total that ranked the constituencies in the province in terms of how difficult it was for the member to represent them. Those factors have already been mentioned: the geographic area, the population that the constituency contains, the density of the population, the number of households, the number of elected bodies that have interests in the constituency, and the distance of the constituency points from the Legislature.

It was an interesting exercise and one that I think was long overdue to try to bring together some quantitative analysis to the decisions about the making of electoral boundaries. I found it interesting, for instance, that Edmonton-Mill Woods under that model is the easiest constituency in the province to represent. You can cross my constituency in five minutes if you're driving slowly. In terms of the number of organizations that we have to deal with, they are ones that other MLAs in the city also have to deal with. So it resulted in a ranking of constituencies from the easiest to serve to the most difficult and, I think, was an attempt to provide a rationale for the work of the commission.

They also indicated that they could have looked at some other variables and added to the model. That was the number of communities that could only be reached by air, for instance. They didn't include that. They could have looked at the number of special interest groups that a constituency has. These are concentrated in some areas with respect to interest groups that have concerns with water or interest groups that are concerned with agriculture or livestock and interest groups that are concerned with the environment, but they rejected additional variables, indicating that they thought it would add clutter to the model that they had presented. It's something that I hope the new boundaries commission will re-examine, that they'll look at that matrix and might consider adding more variables to it, because I think it takes us past the one person, one vote argument that has so often bogged down electoral boundary reform and brings to it a wisdom and dimension that I think are sorely needed.

The easiest model, of course, would be to look at a trustee model, and then it wouldn't matter. As long as they're roughly close, I suspect, in terms of population, people would be happy. But given the direction that we've taken in the past and what seems to be popular interest in fairness with electoral boundaries, I suspect it's something that's not going to happen.

I'm pleased that the commission is going to undertake the work, and as other members have indicated, I'll await with interest the results. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

MS BLAKEMAN: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Aw.

MS BLAKEMAN: Well, the rest of the members should've clearly listened to what their House leader was telling them about the deal for this afternoon.

I am pleased to be able to rise and speak to one particular section of Bill 31, which is the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2001. The agreement was that although there isn't usually a debate around miscellaneous statutes, members of the opposition, of course, could speak for up to 20 minutes on the miscellaneous statute dealing with moving up the date for the establishment of the Electoral Boundaries Commission.

A number of other people have already spoken on the need for this commission to be charged with being fair and equal. The Government House Leader and Minister of Justice had also urged us to try and stick to the point being put forward in the miscellaneous statute, and that is that, in fact, we'd be looking at an earlier date to establish the Electoral Boundaries Commission rather than waiting until the legislated time of 2003. This would allow us to establish the commission by June of 2002, thereby giving us more time to look at electoral boundaries and prepare for any changes that might come prior to the next election.

I think that in Alberta there is a great need to address the perception of fairness and of equality. It's fairly well known that the votes are not equal here. A vote in one riding is not equal to a vote in another riding. We have a disparity of more than two, so in some ridings a vote is worth more than two votes compared to a vote in another riding. When we are looking at an increasing suspicion from voters or even an apathy and unwillingness for them to participate in an electoral system, things like perceived fairness and equality become even more important. If they don't believe that their vote is going to count for anything, it's very difficult to encourage them to vote. As I said, we do have between a 25 and a 50 percent deviation here.

An earlier date for establishing the Electoral Boundaries Commission allows for consideration of a number of things, obviously the number of ridings. I think there's a good argument to look at having fewer ridings and therefore having a larger population base that each MLA is responsible for representing, and I'll come to why.

Part of what this earlier date is allowing the commission to look at is the criteria for determining the number of ridings, and we've got a lot of things in that mix, the traditional considerations, or the geographic size of the riding and the population. Now we have come to look at percentage of deviation, which was certainly the consideration in the '95-96 boundary commission, and that commission also started to look at other complexities of representation. As a matter of fact, in their press release at the release of the commission report they talk about "a conceptual model to objectively measure the degree of difficulty each member for an electoral division encounters in representing his or her electoral division." It is a degree of difficulty, and there are differing difficulties in different ridings.

Part of what the last boundaries commission looked at was a matrix. They chose 10 quantitative considerations for qualities matching criteria set out directly or indirectly in the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, and then they quantified this to numbers, and they worked it out in a whole mathematical scheme.

So I think that by establishing an earlier date for the commission to come together, we're allowing the commission to have more time to consider those complexities. I hope they do, because it is a time of more complexity.

They had looked at things in the past, as mentioned by the House leader when he introduced this miscellaneous statute for debate: the distance to travel, the time or distance to cross the riding. Some of those have already been considered. I've heard my rural colleagues comment on how difficult it is to represent ridings that have more than a couple of towns of equal size. I agree. That probably is difficult. I can counter with saying: yes, and I likely have to spend an equal amount of time dealing with different business revitalization zones and different organizations like that that require time and attention and their own political ability to manage and lead in their communities. So I'm only dealing with one city hall but four business revitalization zones, probably comparable on a matrix to someone trying to deal with four towns of more or less equal size.

I think we have to look at the balancing of interest between the complexities of representing rural ridings and balancing the interest between the rural centres and constituents who really are out in the country, farming activity, oil and gas activity. On a matrix what would be equivalent for me to be looking at? Probably the number of different ethnic and language groups in the riding, perhaps the number of community leagues or nonprofits and charities that are in my riding and are all expecting time and attention from me. Of course, I think we need to be looking at the challenges that are presented by different levels of income, wealth and poverty, in areas, because that certainly affects your ability to represent, to make yourself available to people.

An earlier date for this commission to start to meet allows for consideration of other criteria. We have the issue spoken briefly about by one of my colleagues of predictable changes in population. We have some areas in rural Alberta who are losing population, others who are gaining population. The same thing in my riding. There has been a tremendous amount of infill housing, for example. We've had a change of about 5,000 constituents in the last couple of years with infill housing. That was predictable. When you looked at the plans from the city of Edmonton and the designed ARPs, area redevelopment plans, that was predictable, and it could have been anticipated that there was going to be an increase in that riding. So hopefully with the additional time this commission will be able to look at how to better plan for those changes of population.

Balancing that are also changes in technology. There is still a desire from some constituents, certainly, to meet face to face, but increasingly I think constituents are making use of technological advances like e-mail and computers. They're very happy to correspond certainly with me by e-mail. They don't want to come in and see me; they want to correspond by e-mail. It's fast, and they have a written version of something. That's how they want to do it. There's also technology like videoconferencing and 1-800 numbers. All of that helps us to be more accessible and available to our constituents. Certainly computers I think have made a huge difference in my riding.

We're also needing to look at issues of urban sprawl and, as I mentioned, urban infill plans. I think it is quite possible, and I would certainly encourage members of the commission to look at reducing the number of MLAs in the Alberta Legislature and having us work with . . .

AN HON. MEMBER: How many? What's the number?

MS BLAKEMAN: I don't know. That's the job of the commission, to look at that and figure it out.

Certainly in my discussions with representatives in other provinces – I mean, in BC they're representing 75,000 people in a riding, and they didn't seem the least bit flapped by it. I spent some time talking to different representatives there to find out how they were doing it. You know, they had more staff in their offices. They made better use of things like long-distance telephone lines; travel, aside from them driving themselves in their own cars, better access to travel across the province. It was certainly doable. So maybe what needs to happen out of this are recommendations from the commission to, I guess, Members' Services Committee to have a look at what's possible in constituency budgets. So you're reducing the number of MLAs in total but increasing the constituency budgets to allow people to hire more staff or take advantage of technological advances that would allow them to serve more people.

So I think there are lots of possibilities. Certainly as a member of the opposition in Alberta I approach this with trepidation. I trust and I know that the system is set up to make sure that this is a fair process, that there is no gerrymandering. Certainly there are fears about that; I'm not going to pretend there aren't. We've already gone through a process here in Alberta where the boundaries that were chosen were considered inappropriate under the court system and there was a request to re-examine it. In fact, that happened.

That was the '95-96 Electoral Boundaries Commission, and we've got their report here to look at. They're the ones that have come up with a number of these variables and how they approached it with a mathematical precision in trying to be fair.

So I'm willing to support the earlier date to establish the commission. I think that's important. I certainly wish them the best of luck, and I urge them to look forward. We're setting this for the next 10 years. I think technology will be very important. I encourage them to take all possibilities into consideration.

I know there are others following me waiting to speak, so I won't belabour the point at all. I hope that if the commission has an opportunity to read this and understand why we were supporting the earlier date, they're able to take advantage of the concerns and the hopes and the desires that I'm putting forward.

Thank you very much for the opportunity.

4:20

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to add my voice to the number of hon. members of this Assembly who have expressed an interest in the boundaries commission getting an early start on their work. Certainly I would like to see, in my view, an eraser taken to the entire electoral map and the process of the election.

Alberta, I would remind all hon. members of this Assembly, has had a rather unique tradition and proud past as far as proportional representation goes – and I will discuss this in a minute – but one has to be very, very careful with each constituency. I would like to see 65 constituencies. I think we have far, far too many MLAs in this province. I think we could get by with 65. I don't think we need this number of constituencies with telecommunications the way they are today, Mr. Speaker, with the fax machine. We even have the RITE line. It's just not necessary. Other provinces, certainly Ontario comes to mind where I understand they have exactly – I could be wrong on this – the same number of MPPs as MPs they elect to Ottawa, or if it's not precisely the same number, it's within one or two.

Now, the gerrymandering that can occur is a reality. In the last redistribution 10 polls in the Bonnie Doon area were moved from the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar. They were moved. People asked me: why are we no longer in the constituency? Well, historically there was a large number of Liberal votes collected in those polls, and suddenly they were moved, Mr. Speaker. It was to give the Conservative candidate in this case a better chance of winning. The constituency was reduced.

THE SPEAKER: The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Imputing Motives

MR. HANCOCK: Mr. Speaker, under 23(h), (i), and (j). I think there's a great deal of latitude being allowed in debate this afternoon, and by agreement I'm not concerned with the latitude or the fact that much of the debate isn't directly relevant to the section of the act being amended. But I think it goes way too far for the hon. member to suggest that this House in previous years, in passing the act which created the electoral boundaries, did so in a manner to gerrymander, I think was the term that he used, or in fact to take Liberal voters out of one constituency and put them into another constituency. That really is an affront to all members of the House at that time, and I think that by inference that's reprehensible to the members of this House.

MS CARLSON: Mr. Speaker, on the point of order. I would refer the Government House Leader to the judgment of the Alberta Court of Appeal that was delivered on October 24, 1994, where the court was very critical of the electoral divisions that had been established, claiming that the very brief report of the select committee had offered no detailed explanation for the specific boundaries. So I would state that this member is completely within his mandate to be making the claims that he is.

THE SPEAKER: Well, hon. members, suggestions that decisions made outside of this Assembly would come under some veil of electoral irregularity are rather serious statements, and one would only hope that one who makes such statements would be doing more than providing opinion with respect to such statements and actually be in a position to back them up. Now, the chair, to his knowledge, is unaware of any statement by anyone, any court decision or any other statement outside of this Assembly ever, to suggest that there has been voting irregularity in the province of Alberta.

Certainly there is an independent officer appointed by this Assembly responsible to this Assembly called the Chief Electoral Officer, there's an all-party committee that supervises the work of the Chief Electoral Officer, and all reports of the Chief Electoral Officer are in fact filed in this Assembly, as is the work of the Chief Electoral Officer. To the chair's knowledge never once has there ever been a suggestion made by the Chief Electoral Officer that in fact such events have occurred.

So might I just ask for caution by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar with respect to certain comments?

Debate Continued

MR. MacDONALD: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Precisely, the fact is that there were 10 polls that were removed after the 1993 election, 10 polls west of Connors Road.

AN HON. MEMBER: Don't go there.

MR. MacDONALD: I'm sorry. Every hon. member can look up the election results and count the number of votes that each respective party got in that election. That is just a fact, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

Now, getting to my . . .

Speaker's Ruling Improper Inferences

THE SPEAKER: Hon. member, please, please. I mean, there's no advantage, hon. member. This particular chair has had three different constituencies in seven elections. In fact, at the time the hon. member was talking about, I think that this particular Speaker had probably 30 polls changed from one constituency to the next. This particular candidate at the time had to deal with the cards given to him. Never once did anybody come to this particular candidate and ask him: well, would you like to get rid of those 30 and get these 30? No, I don't think so. We all marched according to the documents given to us.

That's why I say: please, let's be cautious in our statements in here. Do we want the Chief Electoral Officer or somebody else to start sending letters to the Legislative Assembly lambasting an individual member of the Assembly for his statements in the Assembly? That will happen, but we don't need it.

Debate Continued

MR. MacDONALD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Between the 1924 election, the Edmonton by-election, and the 1955 provincial general election this province, I would like to remind all hon. members, adopted a relatively complex and unusual system of both preferential and proportional voting. It's not that long ago. It's only two generations ago in this province that we had proportional voting. All constituencies except for Edmonton and Calgary were single-member constituencies. In single-member ridings electors marked their ballots in order of preference, and if no candidate received a majority of votes cast as the first preference of the electorate, the bottom candidate in the field was dropped.

MRS. NELSON: So what? Who cares?

MR. MacDONALD: Now, the hon. member says: "So what? Who cares?"

There was a system before in this Assembly of proportional representation. Not only would I like to see the boundaries commission look at different boundaries – that's fine – but also look at different ways of selecting members for this honourable Assembly. I see no problem with this. If you look at the makeup of the Assembly, there was Social Credit, there were Independents, there were Liberals in this time period, there were Veterans, and there were members of the Labour Party. They were all elected. I look at the election results from the vote last winter. You see that there is the Alberta First Party, the Alberta Greens. What I'm saying is that perhaps if there were a larger number of political parties represented in the Assembly, we would have a better government. There would be more voices heard. Why should not the Social Credit, if they get a certain percentage of the vote, be allowed a voice in this Assembly? Why should not the Alberta First Party be allowed, if they get a certain percentage of the vote, at least one voice in this Assembly? The Alberta Greens: if they get a certain percentage of the vote, why should they not be able to send someone to this Assembly? I think we would have a much better Assembly.

Now, we had in this province, Mr. Speaker, incredibly at one time, between 1959 and 1963 – and I'm sure this is going to please some people in the province – no recognized Official Opposition leader, but we do now fortunately. If these parties were in the Official Opposition or members of the opposition benches, I don't see what harm that would do. It would strengthen democracy, and this is what we need to take a look at. It's been part of our history in the past.

I think in conclusion I would again like to remind all hon. members that such systems of proportional and preferential balloting were relatively popular here in western Canada in the 1920s and again in the 1930s, but few other jurisdictions retained these methods of selecting representatives as long as Alberta did or applied them so broadly. Many political scientists, Mr. Speaker, generally agree that the popularity of both preferential and transferable ballots is connected to the widespread distrust in western Canada of the power of political parties. So perhaps we could lessen this distrust if there were more parties with representatives in this Assembly. The political history of Alberta is full of many individuals, stirring campaigns, and interesting experiments in democracy.

I think that at this time it is an excellent opportunity to have a look at preferential voting. It is used in many European jurisdictions. The first one that would come to mind, Mr. Speaker, is Switzerland. If this committee would have a look at this system of electing hon. members to the Assembly, I would suggest that in the time that we're allowing it, the extra year we are allowing it to do its work, it perhaps should entertain a complete change to how we select members to this Assembly, and we should select less members to this Assembly.

Thank you.

MR. McFARLAND: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to just make a couple of comments, and then I'll sit down. I know probably most people don't want to listen to any discussion on electoral boundaries. At least people in my constituency have never once brought up the issue between the times that the boundaries are reviewed. It seems like the only time we'd get into the comments that keep coming back every once in a while is when we have the opportunity to even mention electoral boundary reviews. I think it's worth noting that not everyone has the same point of view, and the ones that always seem to object to the boundaries being redrawn or making accusations that they're falsely drawn are those that don't have the majority in this House.

I know for instance, Mr. Speaker, when I first became elected in a by-election, we had had one of the longest serving MLAs in Little Bow for quite a number of years, and the previous member talked about how there needed to be more parties. Well, if my memory is correct, my former MLA served probably in no less than four. One he created himself; one was one of the old original governing parties, the Social Credit; also the Independent Party; and then he saw the light, apparently, in about 1989 and crossed the floor, I believe it's called, and sat as a member of the government. Following that time, of course, he went on to other things.

When I became elected, our constituency was about half the size of what it is today geographically. I find it interesting and I get a little bit upset, maybe not a little bit – I get awfully mad – when people suggest that there should be fewer MLAs and that they have a hardship dealing with special interest groups in a city two blocks from this very Legislature Building.

I would like to remind a lot of people here, maybe even some of my own city colleagues, that my riding is probably, give or take, the seventh or eighth largest in the province, but it's not big compared to my hon. colleagues from Highwood or Livingstone-Macleod, from Cardston-Taber-Warner or Drumheller-Chinook, from Strathmore-Brooks. They're all about the same, but actually when you look at it in terms of the overall province, they're quite gigantic, because it covers off an area basically from Airdrie south to the American border and from Saskatchewan over to B.C.

I found it interesting at the last electoral boundary review – and if anyone ever felt that some of the information in the backgrounders to that was contrived by us, it definitely wasn't. They had indices of the things that affected effective representation for an MLA, things like the number of elected boards that each of us represents, the number of municipalities, of local governments. I was quite amazed that with the small population my riding has in comparison to Calgary-Shaw and some of the larger ones in Edmonton and Calgary – when you factored in all the various elected boards that I was charged with helping to represent, the distance, the number of miles – other than my colleague from Athabasca-Wabasca my riding was apparently the second hardest to represent in this entire province. I didn't really think too much of it. I just thought that was part of the job. I didn't really get in a fit about whether or not I had 5,000 more or less than somebody in a city riding. I just thought it was kind of normal that a lot of people would expect to have to travel and drive like I do 13 weeks out of every year, to cover the mileage that I put on the truck. Thirteen weeks: that's a quarter of the year.

That's really amazing to a lot of the grade 6 students, which I know, Mr. Speaker, you'd appreciate. Many of us go to the social studies classes where they study federal and provincial and municipal governments, and they want to know what we do, because they think that all of us fly around in a jet from here to there. They are really amazed that we sit here as often as we do and that many of us have to travel five hours one way to get back home.

So I wanted to add those comments, not that it's going to make any difference to some people's minds. Just the fact that if anything needs changing, maybe it's the whole legislation that requires us to review these boundaries after every second general election. I've never yet had one constituent in Little Bow ask us to change the boundaries. It never comes up. And if there is a piece of legislation that needs to be changed, this is it. Maybe we could rescind it.

[Motion carried; Bill 31 read a third time]

- 207 Alberta Personal Income Tax (Tools Credit) Amendment Act, 2001
- 208 Alberta Official Song Act
- 209 Highway Traffic (Bicycle Safety Helmet) Amendment Act, 2001

[The Lieutenant Governor indicated her assent]

THE CLERK: In Her Majesty's name Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor doth assent to these bills.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. McClellan left the Chamber]

[The Mace was uncovered]

THE SPEAKER: Hon. members, as we await the return of the hon. Deputy Premier, let me just make several comments, and the pages will continue the work that they have to do.

First of all, let me congratulate all of you on the excellent work that was done in the calendar year 2001. I think the hon. Government House Leader was a bit modest earlier this afternoon when responding to the question from the Official Opposition House Leader as to the order of business for next week. The hon. Government House Leader basically said: well, the Order Paper for the first time in a long time is actually empty. In my memory I don't ever recall when the Assembly actually rose on the last day of session with an empty Order Paper. The table officers and I had a discussion, and we're going to undertake some historical research to see exactly how many times this has actually occurred in the Legislative Assembly in the province of Alberta since 1905. Such an accomplishment is absolutely unique, and of course it comes as a result of excellent leadership by the House leaders on the government side and excellent co-operation from the opposition House leaders. You cannot accomplish this without the two working together.

I might also point out that with the three additional private members' bills that were approved here yesterday, we now have arrived at 25 private members' bills which have received third reading in the province of Alberta since 1993. To my knowledge there's probably not one parliament anywhere in the world that can say one or two in the last eight years. This one can say 25. That makes it very, very unique.

Today we had another historical first. This has never happened before in the history of this Legislative Assembly, going back to 1905. For the first time in our history – hopefully, as well, it'll be the last time in the history of our Assembly – today an hon. member rose, the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul, and actually introduced guests who were listening via the Internet. That is unique, and I repeat: I hope that will be the first and the last time in the history of this Assembly in this province that that actually is going to happen.

If all of the hon. members go back one year from now, at this time in the year 2000 some members were tired and in anticipation of an upcoming, quote, provincial election. Some members were tired and nervous about an upcoming provincial election. Some people in this Assembly today were not members of this Assembly and were out wherever it was trying to organize, plan, create something for a provincial election. Since that time, you hon. members have had little time for rest. This has been a fast, fast moving 12 months. Quite frankly, it has been nonstop when you consider the events of last fall, the events of January, the events of February, the events of March, the events of April, and right through the whole thing. I ask you one thing: get some rest.

In the last few days I have been looking at all these agenda that various caucuses are setting aside for their various members for meetings in the month of December and the month of January and the month of February. There's no rule, there's no law in Alberta that Members of the Legislative Assembly must work 12 and 14 hours a day, seven days of the week, 52 weeks of the year. That's not a law; that's not a rule. That's a thing that you create for yourselves. I strongly ask you to consider that after these last 12 months you need to get some rest, and you need to get some time for yourselves. So please take advantage of that.

As the hon. Deputy Premier returns to the House, may I wish all of you the best for peace, health, joy, and family in this upcoming season.

The hon. Government House Leader.

4:50

MR. HANCOCK: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I take the opportunity to wish all members of this Assembly a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year and ask that we all take your advice to heart and in so doing move that we call it 5:30 and adjourn pursuant to Government Motion 16 agreed to April 24, 2001.

[Motion carried; pursuant to Government Motion 16 the Assembly adjourned at 4:51 p.m.]
