

Province of Alberta

The 25th Legislature
Fourth Session

Alberta Hansard

February 17, 2004 to May 13, 2004
and Index

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, February 17, 2004

3:00 p.m.

Date: 04/02/17

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! All rise, please.

[The Clerk read the Royal Proclamation dated February 4, 2004, summoning all Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to convene on this date]

The Clerk: Please be seated.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! Order! Mr. Speaker.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the Speaker, accompanied by the officers of the Assembly, entered the Chamber and took the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Almighty God, author of all wisdom, knowledge, and understanding, we ask Your blessings on all here present. We ask Your guidance in order that truth and justice may prevail in all our judgments for the benefit of all Albertans. Amen.

Ladies and gentlemen, I would now invite Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us in the singing of our national anthem. Would you please join in in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members and Guests:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: What a wonderful choir. Please be seated.

head: Entrance of the Lieutenant Governor

[The Premier, the Clerk, and the Sergeant-at-Arms left the Chamber to attend the Lieutenant Governor]

[The Mace was draped]

The Speaker: Ladies and gentlemen and hon. members, prior to the arrival of Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor the Royal Canadian Artillery Band will play a brief musical interlude.

The RCA Band, Canada's oldest regular army band, was formed in Quebec City in 1879. It was subsequently stationed in Montreal and Halifax. It has seen service in both world wars and in Korea, and it has travelled across Canada and beyond our borders. Reconstituted in the city of Edmonton in 1997, the band is today under the direction of Captain Gerry Heslip, who is in the Speaker's gallery.

The band will now play a piece written by English composer Gustav Holst, the details of which are in your program.

[The Sergeant-at-Arms knocked on the main doors of the Chamber three times. The Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms opened the doors, and the Sergeant-at-Arms entered]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Ladies and gentlemen, all rise, please.

Mr. Speaker, Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor awaits.

The Speaker: Sergeant-at-Arms, admit Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

[A fanfare of trumpets sounded]

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, her party, the Premier, and the Clerk entered the Chamber. Her Honour took her place upon the throne]

Her Honour: Please be seated.

Ladies and gentlemen, before I start the Speech from the Throne, I would very much like to thank the Premier for the lovely letter he sent to the Prime Minister on my behalf. [applause]

Also, I would like to thank all the rest of you because I know I have your support. So I thank all the hon. members. I thank the ladies and gentlemen who are here today. Thank you very much.

I also would just like to say that every one of you should have the opportunity to ride escorted by the police. It is truly magical. I know that the people are wondering: what is going on? I just wish it were an open car and I could stand up and wave. But it's exciting, and it really is truly magical.

Lastly, may I say that the rotunda looks absolutely beautiful. To Ruth, who made sure that she got all the flowers: well, I noticed. They're lovely.

head: Speech from the Throne

Heading toward Alberta's Second Century A Proud History, A Promising Future

Her Honour: Fellow Albertans, I am pleased to welcome you to the Fourth Session of the 25th Alberta Legislature. It is once again my distinct honour to mark the opening of the Legislature with the Speech from the Throne. While I am always honoured to fulfill this aspect of my duties as Lieutenant Governor, I am particularly pleased to be addressing my fellow Albertans this year as it gives me the opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to you all.

Thank you to everyone here in this Chamber and across the province who offered hugs and kind words of encouragement over the past year. Thank you to those who sent messages of hope and understanding and kept me in their thoughts and prayers throughout what has been a challenging time for me and for my family. Your messages and other expressions of support helped me gather the strength and energy I needed to overcome the obstacles I faced, and overcome them I have.

Your words and actions over the past year have reminded me of the many qualities that are so fundamental to the Alberta spirit, qualities like generosity, strength, compassion, and above all optimism. This is a province of people who never shy away from a challenge and who look to the future with boundless confidence, enthusiasm, and hope.

Albertans will soon have an opportunity to appreciate and to celebrate everything that sense of optimism has achieved. The year 2005 will mark this province's 100th birthday. It will mark a century that allowed Albertans to forge a unique identity. That identity is one of confidence in our ability to work hard and achieve great things, pride in the prosperity and growth we have accomplished together as Albertans, and gratitude for the many strengths, privileges, and responsibilities we enjoy as Canadians.

This government shares Albertans' sense of optimism for the future. It has developed a 20-year plan to help the people of this province build on the many successes of the past 100 years and create even greater success in the century to come. The plan identifies four key areas, or pillars, that will be crucial to Alberta's continued success and sets out specific goals for Albertans to achieve in those four areas. The pillars of the plan are unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit.

While the 20-year plan contains long-range goals that will require the co-operative efforts of many individuals and sectors and over many years, there are a number of steps the government is taking now to begin building on the successes of the past and create an even brighter future for all Albertans.

Unleashing Innovation

An important key to building that brighter future is the ability to unleash the full potential of Albertans' innovation. As the global economy continues to shift toward knowledge-based industries and technologies, so will the government's focus on expanding the province's capacity for innovation.

Our province's wealth of natural resources has long been a source of pride for Albertans. While Alberta has traditionally gained much of its prosperity from the rich resources that grace the province, some of the opportunities that lie before us will hinge on what Albertans are able to do with those resources, on the ability to create new economic opportunities out of traditional strengths. That includes finding new and innovative ways to turn Alberta's raw resources into manufactured products for export markets, which is why the government will unveil a strategy to develop a diversified and competitive manufacturing, tourism, and business services sector for the province.

Building a culture of innovation also takes new ideas and new processes, and that means research. In 2004 government will expand on the work already taking place through the Alberta energy innovation strategy to ensure that Alberta continues to lead the way in energy innovation and research.

The energy industry has been a key factor in creating Alberta's prosperity. The industry's positive impact on this province is clearly felt through the royalties it contributes to government revenues that help fund front-line services for Albertans, and its impact is clearly demonstrated by the hundreds of thousands of jobs the industry creates and by its tremendous contributions to the growth and well-being of Alberta communities. The new strategy will help to build on those contributions. It links public- and private-sector partners from across Canada to work together on research to further oil sands technology, develop cleaner coal technology, reduce greenhouse gas emissions, manage water resources, improve conventional oil and gas recovery, and explore alternative energy sources.

The government will also encourage innovation in the way Alberta's resources are developed through its water strategy for the province. This spring a provincial water council will be established to help manage this resource for future generations of Albertans.

Other promising opportunities for new innovations can be found in developing sectors such as information and communications technologies and life sciences. To encourage Alberta's expertise in information and communications technology, or ICT, the government will create an ICT institute to guide research and innovation in this emerging sector. Work will also continue this year in the area of research and technology commercialization, which focuses on providing opportunities for Alberta-grown innovative products and services to be developed.

The life sciences sector is another area where Albertans are showing their innovation and where their research and development are showing even greater promise. The government will assist in this area with the creation of a life sciences institute to co-ordinate research taking place across the province in areas such as agriculture, environment, forestry, health, bioenergy, and water research.

Co-operative research will be further considered with a new prior research program with an initial focus on BSE. This past year Albertans have found themselves at the centre of debate over this disease, and the province will also be at the centre of work to find solutions.

The government understands that building a culture of innovation goes well beyond supporting technical research and scientific development. That is why this government is also committed to building a future where Albertans can continue leading in learning.

Leading in Learning

The process of learning begins as soon as a child is born and continues throughout that child's life. The government recognizes this fact through a full spectrum of programs that covers every aspect of child and adult education.

This year the government's commitment to lifelong learning in Alberta will be further strengthened with the introduction of a bill to establish the new Alberta centennial education savings plan. Under the plan, beginning in 2005, every child born in Alberta will receive a $500 contribution toward an established registered education savings plan. This program will provide a foundation for children born in Alberta's centennial year and those born in the years following to plan for and pursue whatever postsecondary education opportunities they choose.

The program represents more than an investment in individual children. It is an investment in our shared future as Albertans, in the generations who will inherit all that Albertans have worked hard to create and who will lead the province in the century to come.

While this investment will have an important impact on future students, improvements must also be made now to ensure that young Albertans already in the kindergarten to grade 12 system enjoy every possible advantage. This year increased funding for learning will work in combination with a new funding framework to give school boards increased flexibility to meet the unique needs and circumstances of each Alberta community. Under the new framework government will not dictate to school boards how to allocate the dollars they receive, leaving it to each board to address priority areas and account to parents in each community on their decisions and outcomes.

These investments come on top of other improvements to the basic learning system in response to recommendations from Alberta's Commission on Learning. Some of those improvements are already underway including implementing new guidelines to ensure that class sizes are manageable. Work has also begun to create a new school wellness program that recognizes that a strong mind is nurtured by a healthy body. That includes phasing in a mandatory program of daily physical activity for all students. The change will help set all young Albertans on a path toward lifelong health and fitness.

While the Alberta Learning Commission has generated increased awareness and debate over the kindergarten to grade 12 system, the province's postsecondary education system is of equal importance to Alberta's future. Postsecondary education and lifelong learning experiences are important, and they should be accessible to all Albertans. These experiences offer much more than simply a path to a new career or a better job. They also offer one way for Albertans to achieve their dreams and realize their full potential. Nothing could be more important.

This year new funding for postsecondary learning will include an increase in base operating grants for all postsecondary institutions as well as additional dollars for new spaces in high-demand programs. That initial investment will come with a commitment to create a total of 2,000 new spaces over the next four years.

Access to lifelong learning opportunities will also increase this year with the implementation of the new postsecondary learning act. The legislation gives more postsecondary institutions in the province the opportunity to offer degree-granting programs. Each student's ability to access a quality education will be further enhanced through the creation of the Campus Alberta quality council. The council will review all new degree program proposals to ensure that each program is of the highest possible quality.

As well, government will strengthen and enhance apprenticeship programs. While Alberta leads the country in apprenticeship training, the province's economic growth continues to create a shortage of skilled workers in many key economic sectors. In addition to helping Albertans get the training they need to find and keep jobs, the Alberta government will also work with the federal government to attract highly skilled immigrants to the Alberta workforce. These initiatives will help employers find the skilled workers they need in this growing economy.

Competing in a Global Marketplace

Alberta is poised to enter its second century from a position of economic strength, but that position offers no guarantees for the future. Just as they have throughout the province's history, Albertans will need to continue working hard and looking ahead to future challenges and opportunities in order to secure long-term security and prosperity for the province.

Potential threats to Alberta's economic prosperity and security were made abundantly clear this year, when the challenge of prolonged drought was compounded by a single case of BSE, bringing the province's beef industry to a virtual standstill. As steps were being taken to restore the industry, a single case in the United States connected to Alberta only served to deepen the crisis. Albertans were quick to rally around affected producers and communities, offering their support and showing their confidence in the quality of Alberta beef, but more work needs to be done to restore international confidence in Alberta's beef industry and open borders to live cattle.

The recent BSE situation served as a sharp reminder of the interconnected nature of today's global economy. More than ever the policies and decisions of other jurisdictions can have a direct effect on Alberta's economic health. That is why the Alberta government will redouble its substantial efforts to strengthen its ties with the province's largest trade and investment partner, the United States.

To that end, the government will open an Alberta office in Washington, D.C., to advance the province's economic and policy interests and to help expand Alberta's contacts with top American decision-makers. Alberta is consulting with the federal government on this matter. Alberta will also continue to work with the government of Canada on key trade and policy areas of importance to all Canadians including improving and enhancing common border practices and trade policies and regulations.

While the Alberta government is committed to working with the other provinces and the federal government on areas of mutual concern, it will also continue to use opportunities such as the newly established Council of the Federation to ensure that Alberta's unique needs and perspectives are heard and respected. Alberta will also pursue other avenues as required to represent the interests of Albertans. That includes aggressively pursuing options to create grain marketing choice for wheat and barley producers so their operations can realize full market potential.

The people of this province are fiercely proud of their Canadian identity, but they are also proud of all they have achieved as Albertans. The government will continue its efforts to ensure that national policies and decisions do not take away from those accomplishments or affect Alberta's ability to make the most of future opportunities. Those opportunities may be national and even global in scope, but their effects will be felt much closer to home. Economic growth and prosperity help to ensure a high quality of life for all Albertans. They are key factors in what makes our province the best place to live, work, and visit.

Making Alberta the Best Place To Live, Work, and Visit

This year the government will continue building on the programs already in place to ensure that all Albertans enjoy the highest possible quality of life with a particular focus on the most vulnerable members of Alberta's communities. This focus includes all children. There can be no greater accomplishment for Albertans than to raise healthy and strong children who are confident in their knowledge and their abilities, optimistic about their future, and compassionate in the way they interact with their peers, their community, and the world at large. Our goal is simple: to ensure that Albertans, especially children, feel safe and protected.

A first step toward creating that kind of environment for all children will be the upcoming Round-table on Family Violence and Bullying. The round-table will be held in May and will be preceded by province-wide workshops. These efforts will help communities and government partners find ways to break the cycle of violence that can have a devastating and lasting effect on individual families and on the fabric of Alberta communities.

Alberta's most vulnerable citizens will also be protected through a new plan to prevent sexual crimes that target children, such as Internet crimes, Internet luring, child pornography, and child prostitution. Alberta already has unique legislation to protect children involved in prostitution. This new plan will bring all crimes that sexually exploit children together under one initiative, strengthening the way in which young Albertans are protected from exploitation and abuse.

The safety of all Albertans will be enhanced through changes to the way the government funds policing. This year the government will begin implementing a new funding formula for policing which will significantly increase the dollars to deliver this important service. This initiative comes about in part as a result of this government's ongoing consultation with municipalities on their concerns in this area.

More effective and better co-ordinated services are also the goal of the Alberta disability strategy. It calls for the creation of an office for disability issues which will work with the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities and government ministries to encourage greater cross-government co-ordination and more effective delivery of programs for disabled Albertans, promote positive attitudes toward the disabled, and raise awareness of disability issues.

A third area where the government will be looking to create greater co-ordination is in its response to the diverse and changing needs of Alberta's seniors. A plan will be developed to help the province's health system, workplaces, and other institutions prepare for Alberta's aging population. The focus will be on initiatives and approaches that contribute to the well-being and independence of seniors. The upcoming budget will provide sufficient dollars to meet the current program needs of Alberta's growing seniors' population and ensure that services continue to be available to those in need.

To better serve those Albertans who can no longer live independently and have moved to a long-term care facility, the government will establish a new process to ensure that facilities are accountable for the accommodation services they provide. The government recognizes the many contributions of seniors and will work to ensure that they receive quality accommodations at an important time in their lives.

For Albertans who need support meeting their basic needs or finding a job, the government will introduce a new program called Alberta Works. The program will help clients assess their strengths and needs, whether it's job-search assistance and training, income support, health benefits, or child support services. For the first time financial assistance will also be available for people fleeing family violence, to help them establish a new household and make a fresh start.

This year will also see improved programs and services for aboriginal Albertans. The government will continue to work together with its aboriginal partners in key areas such as economic development, joint relationship building, consultation on resource development, learning, and health care to meet the specific needs of aboriginal communities. Upcoming initiatives for this year include an expansion of the mobile diabetes screening program to include off-reserve communities and the creation of new programs dealing with HIV, tobacco use, and community-based care for aboriginal citizens.

Good health care for all citizens is also a vital component of preparing for Alberta's second century. For most Albertans the measure of a strong health system is its ability to provide front-line service and response to their everyday health needs. Toward this goal, the government will continue to work with the Alberta Medical Association and regional health authorities to implement a new primary care initiative. Under the initiative Albertans will have access to a team of health care providers that can offer primary care 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Greater access will also be provided through greater choice of where and how Albertans receive the care they need. That includes increased government support for community-based care options for seniors, persons with disabilities, and mental health clients looking for alternatives to acute care in a hospital setting.

Quality of patient care will be further strengthened through a new mandate for the Health Services Utilization and Outcomes Commission. This year the commission, which will be renamed the health quality council of Alberta, will take on an expanded mandate for patient safety. This builds on its current role of monitoring and reporting on the performance of Alberta's health system.

Alberta needs to continue pursuing meaningful health reform so the system remains affordable and accessible to future Albertans. There has been great progress in Alberta in health reform in recent years, and the government pledges to continue that work. The goal of reform is not to weaken the system but to strengthen it. Alberta also pledges to work with other provinces and the federal government on a program of national health reform because every government, regardless of ideology or party, has acknowledged that the system is not sustainable unless meaningful reform is made.

Ensuring the safety and health of individual Albertans is important, but so is the health of Alberta communities, of the traditions, institutions, and infrastructure that form the backbone of our province. For rural Albertans that structure has been challenged through the recent years of drought, the BSE crisis, and the migration of certain jobs and opportunities to larger urban centres. In response to those pressures, the government will introduce a new rural development strategy to help ensure that the people and businesses in rural Alberta enjoy every opportunity to reach their full potential.

The approach of Alberta's 100th birthday will also be marked by continued investment in the centennial capital plan, announced last year. Year 2 of this infrastructure plan will see continued investment in new health facilities, schools, postsecondary institutions, government facilities, and centennial projects. As well, in the upcoming budget the capital plan will be extended out another year to keep infrastructure work rolling into 2007. In the coming year Alberta municipalities will also continue to benefit from ongoing centennial capital plan investment in municipal roads and water infrastructure.

As always, all new government spending will be carefully measured to ensure that new programs and services don't jeopardize the financial security Albertans have worked so hard to create for themselves and for the province as a whole. The principles of the sustainability fund will be respected, and the fiscal discipline that carried Alberta successfully through the past decade will continue to move the province forward into its second century.

To ensure that future generations of Albertans are no longer burdened with the debts of the past, the government remains committed to paying off Alberta's debt as it comes due until that debt is zero.

Conclusion

The many new projects and initiatives to be launched in the coming year are much more than the result of careful fiscal planning. They are also a testament to the remarkable energy, dedication, and forward-looking spirit of Albertans.

Albertans are keenly aware of the privileges and obligations they hold as citizens of this province and this country. They are confident in their ability to take on the challenges of the future and are anxious to make Alberta's approaching second century even more successful than the province's first hundred years. The government stands ready to support all Albertans in that goal. Albertans have achieved remarkable things together since 1905, and the coming years will show that those achievements were but an introduction to an even brighter history yet to be made.

Thank you, ladies and gentlemen, and may God bless you all.

God bless Alberta.

God bless Canada.

God save the Queen.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! All rise, please.

The Speaker: Ladies and gentlemen, I would now like to invite Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us in the singing of God Save The Queen. Would you please remain standing at the conclusion.

Hon. Members and Guests:

God save our gracious Queen, long live our noble Queen,

God save The Queen!

Send her victorious,

happy and glorious,

long to reign over us:

God save The Queen!

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

Her Honour: May I just say lastly, before I leave, that this could be, you know, the last throne speech. I hope not, but I just want to say that I look around and I see people who have put on wonderful concerts, done wonderful things. I've attended wonderful community events and enjoyed everything that I have done and have met so very many wonderful, amazing people. So I thank all of you.

To the hon. members, all of you, from all parts, thank you very much for your support.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, Her Honour, her party, and the Premier left the Chamber as a fanfare sounded]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

[The Mace was uncovered]

[The Premier returned to the Chamber]

head: Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Bill 1

Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I request leave to introduce Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act. This being a money bill, Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act. Next year Alberta will celebrate its 100th birthday, and it's fitting that this milestone be recognized with a commitment to the province's children and to Alberta's continued success for years to come.

In keeping with this government's promise to be a leader in learning, Bill 1 will establish the Alberta centennial education savings plan. Under the plan the government will contribute $500 to a registered education savings plan for every child born or adopted to an Alberta family beginning in 2005, provided that the parents open a registered education savings plan in the child's name. In other words, there is some parental responsibility. The ultimate goal of this initiative is to provide an incentive for parents to plan and save for their children's future education.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a first time]

head: Tablings

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have the honour to table a copy of the speech graciously given by Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

head: Motions

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I move that the speech of Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor to this Assembly be taken into consideration Wednesday, February 18.

[Motion carried]

[Motion carried; at 4 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, February 18, 2004 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/18
 [The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. Our Father, we confidently ask for Your strength and encouragement in our service of You through our service of others. We ask for Your gift of wisdom to guide us in making good laws and good decisions for the present and the future of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Naim Ahmed, consul general of the United States, from Calgary. He's accompanied today by his wife, Linda. There is no doubt that the United States is Alberta's most important trading partner and closest friend. Alberta exports to the United States over $50 billion in goods annually. This accounts for more than one-quarter of our GDP and includes over 80 per cent of our beef exports. Today, unfortunately, the U.S. border remains temporarily closed to live cattle exports. However, we remain very optimistic that live cattle trade will resume in the near future.

Mr. Speaker, the United States also provides two-thirds of our foreign investment in our province and 60 per cent of our tourists. In return Alberta remains a secure and reliable supplier to the U.S. for many products. This is particularly true in the case of energy with our oil and gas feeding markets from California to Chicago to New York and many places in between.

Alberta's ties with the United States go far beyond dollars and cents. We have shared interests and common values as well as friends and family on both sides of the border. Mr. Speaker, I would ask that all members of the Assembly give our guests the customary and traditional warm welcome.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure that my guests have arrived yet, but I wanted to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature some people with whom the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development and I had the opportunity to meet earlier today and whom we deal with on a government-to-government basis with respect to the province of Alberta. These are the chiefs of Treaty 8. We met with Chief Archie Cyprien, Grand Chief; Chief Bernie Meneen; Chief Francis Gladue; Chief Rose Laboucan; Chief Don Testawich; Chief Fred Badger; Elder Francis Meneen; Elder Gabe Meneen; as well, Allan Willier, Lorraine Muskwa, Janice Chalifoux, Donna Roberts, and Richard Auger.

I had understood that they would be coming into the galleries today. Perhaps they will, but I'd like this Assembly to welcome the governments of the Treaty 8 First Nations of this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through to the members of the Assembly Dan Astner. Dan is chairman of the board of the Battle River Rural Electrification Association and has been for about the last 10 years, I believe. He's also on the Alberta council of electricity. As the new head office for the Battle River REA is located near Camrose, it's no surprise that Dan spends a great deal of time in my constituency. Later on the Order Paper I'll be giving a member's statement about the accomplishments of the Battle River REA, and it's a pleasure to have Dan here for that as well. So I'd like to welcome you, Dan, and ask the members of the Assembly to give you a warm welcome as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To you and through you to colleagues of the House it's my pleasure to welcome and introduce a group of students from the University of Alberta in the Speak Out club. They are students whose intent is to forge lines of understanding and communication between the electors and the elected. May I ask our distinguished visitors to please rise when their names are called. Oh, that's fine: all stand up. Jung-Suk Ryu, Calvin Loewen, Woo-sun Shim, E.N. Keteku, Joo Yeon Kim, Jung-Woon Whang, Shad Thevenaz, and Anika Loewen. Thank you and welcome. Please receive the warm greetings of the House.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, would you like to do your introduction now?

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure if my guests have arrived yet, but I would like to introduce them anyway. They will be here a little later today. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 136 of the brightest stars from central Alberta from the school of Fox Run in Sylvan Lake. They're also going to be accompanied by about 24 adults: teachers, parents. I would also like to make special mention of them because the daughter and granddaughter of our own Clerk Assistant and Clerk of Committees, Louise Kamuchik, are going to be amongst them, Danielle Breton and Lynne Breton.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Dr. Ken Nicol Former Leader of the Official Opposition

Mr. Klein: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to express the congratulations of the entire government caucus as well as my own personal best wishes to the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, who has recently left his post as Leader of Her Majesty's Official Opposition and who is expected to leave this House entirely before the end of the year.

Over his career in the House the Member for Lethbridge-East has brought great and well-deserved distinction to himself, his constituency, his party, and this Legislature. As leader of his party he has shown a deep respect for the traditions of this Legislature and a deep commitment to his constituents and his province. To my occasional chagrin he has also shown himself to be a thoughtful and effective debater both on the floor of this Assembly and outside the Assembly in front of the media.

Being leader of a political party in a democratic system is a great honour for anyone and I feel humbled by that honour every day and I strongly suspect that the Member for Lethbridge-East has felt that way as well. With that honour comes responsibility as well as tremendous pressure. The hon. member has borne that responsibility and pressure with grace and skill. In his actions he has always fought hard for his constituents and for his vision for a better Alberta. In his approach he has always focused his attention on issues, not personalities. In his personal conduct he has always shown that the honour of serving Albertans in this Legislature meant more to him than mere words.

Mr. Speaker, for all those reasons I want to extend the very best wishes to the Member for Lethbridge-East and to his family, who have obviously stood behind him throughout his career and brought him great strength. This Legislature has benefited from his presence over the years, and he will be missed when he leaves us. I also wish him luck in his next public endeavour, though not too much luck. Regardless of how he ends up serving Alberta in the future, serve it he will, I am sure, and he will serve it with the same dedication that he has brought to this Legislature every day.

If Mr. Speaker will allow an exception to the rules of the House, let me simply end by saying thank you, Ken, and may the hopes and dreams of you and your family come true in the future.

Thank you. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of my Liberal caucus colleagues I am pleased to offer tribute to Dr. Ken Nicol, our leader. In a world of politics that becomes more complicated and challenging every day, Ken represents the opposite. Ken's values are deeply rooted in rural Alberta. Ken knows how to govern himself, how to contemplate, and how to create. He has a reputation for thoroughness, concentration, inner discipline, and invention, a talent for thinking things through.

Financier and philanthropist George Soros said:

At the moment, people are voting their pocketbooks all the time. They are trying to bend legislation to their own financial interests. The common interest gets lost. [I think] there used to be a concept of civic virtue.

Soros doesn't know Ken Nicol. If he did, he would know, like all of us, that civic virtue is not dead. Guarding the public interest and working for the common good has been the hallmark of Ken's work in this House.

Ken came forward to be Liberal leader at a time when we most needed his help. He brought to the leadership strong beliefs. He said that government policy must be based on what is fair for all citizens, that our task is to view all public policy first and foremost from a sound set of principles, and that we have a special obligation to connect citizens with holders of public office in order to develop policies for the common good. Much to some critics' dismay and to his credit he saw no barriers to working in a bipartisan manner with the government in the interests of a better Alberta.

Ken is equally at home in the lecture halls of a university, as his work at the universities of Lethbridge and Iowa attests. His management expertise sees him welcome in the boardrooms of any business, and he is a respected government adviser on the international scene, as his work with the Royal Thai government demanded. Most important this past year has been his role as father, grandfather, and Linda's husband.

Lest this sound more like a eulogy than a tribute, Mr. Speaker, I must tell you and my Legislature colleagues that there are times when Ken won't be missed. Ken won't be missed when we have one of those caucus discussions on finance that just happens to coincide with his old economics 301 lecture notes, an unfortunate coincidence, my caucus colleagues all agree. Ken won't be missed, according to those who sit next to him in this House, on those days when he used to clean the barn and drive directly to the Assembly without changing boots. Nor will Ken be missed by staff who joined him on his long, long car trips throughout Alberta when Ken preferred to just keep driving instead of stopping for coffee or a comfort break.

Seriously, Mr. Speaker, one of the great joys of being elected to this House is meeting outstanding Albertans of high integrity serving on both sides of the aisle. They come from every corner of this province, and Ken Nicol is one of them. We will miss Ken's qualities as a leader but are pleased to have him around a little longer as our friend and our colleague in this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, unanimous consent will have to be granted in order to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Would there be any member opposed to granting such a request?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank the House for this opportunity to say a few words of thanks and pay tribute to the Member for Lethbridge-East, who recently resigned as Alberta Liberal leader.

I think I know as well as anyone the sacrifices involved in leading an opposition party in the province of Alberta. Being the leader of an opposition party is very challenging when you're small in numbers and the resources at your disposal are minute in comparison to the resources at the disposal of the government.

The Member for Lethbridge-East has served this Legislature and his constituents with distinction for the past 11 years and since 2001 as Leader of the Official Opposition. I've always been impressed by his dedication to public service. He always conducted himself with the utmost integrity. He is a principled person who has earned the respect of his colleagues on all sides of this House. Glancing at today's headlines, some might say that leaving as Alberta Liberal leader and deciding to run as a federal Liberal candidate is a bit like going from the frying pan into the fire. However, I know that all members of this House know that the Member for Lethbridge-East has never backed down from a challenge. After all, the Member for Lethbridge-East defied the odds before by getting elected as a Liberal in southern Alberta three elections in a row.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Member for Lethbridge-East for all the service that he rendered to Albertans through his presence in this House and by his work outside. Best wishes to you and your family as you embark on the next stage of your political career.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Would the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East like to participate? I'm sure unanimous consent will be provided.

Dr. Nicol: Mr. Speaker, I just want to say thank you to everybody. It's really an honour for me to have served the province of Alberta with each one of you.

I think each one of us probably sits here in this House and has a vision of how we would perform as government. With the 83 members here, if each one of us were a dictator, to say, in a position, we would all have a different Alberta. But democracy works because all 83 people in this House come together both in their government role and in their opposition role and work to make Alberta the greatest place in the world. I hope that I can continue to be involved in public service in this province to help the people in this House continue to make Alberta that great place.

In conclusion, thanks to everybody. It's been an honour to work with you. I look forward to staying in contact. If you're ever in southern Alberta or, hopefully, if you're ever in Ottawa, look me up.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Government Travel

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the government said that "all new government spending will be carefully measured." But documents acquired by the Liberal opposition indicate that in the recent past it is the taxpayers of this province who have been taken for an expensive ride by this government. My first question is to the Premier. Was government spending being carefully measured when a whopping $8,000 was spent on a car service on a four-day trip in New York City in December of 2002?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, to answer the question, that mission involved, I think, about 14 people or maybe 10 or 12, and for the length of the mission we had an Econoline van and a Suburban with a driver from 8 o'clock in the morning to midnight. That is hardly luxury. These were not limousines; that is the going rate. If the hon. member has ever been to New York, that is cheap probably at twice the price for transportation. These people had to get around, both officials and political leaders, and the use of the Suburban and the Econoline van were very effective and very utilitarian vehicles to get these people to their various meetings and other obligations.

Mr. Speaker, ministerial travel is part of the job of any government, and God knows that the federal Liberals know about travel. As the hon. Deputy Premier pointed out in her introduction of the consul general from the United States, we are an exporting province, and we rely on capital investment from outside the province. So having ministers work with business leaders to promote the province is essential to the success and the prosperity of this government and this province and the people of this province.

Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member was paying attention yesterday to the Speech from the Throne, he would have noted that one of the pillars is to take advantage of our potential to add value to the products we produce so we can further export them. Ministerial missions occur in order to promote Alberta businesses, products, and services to international customers; attract investment to the province; encourage new businesses to set up shop in Alberta; meet with international government and business leaders to inform them about Alberta and inform them positively about Alberta; promote cultural ties with friends and neighbours around the globe; and reciprocate visits that are made to Alberta by foreign dignitaries.

Mr. Speaker . . . Well, I'll wait for the next question.

Mr. MacDonald: In light of that, Mr. Speaker, the next question is: how are Alberta's interests being served by this delegation going to the Cornell Club in Madison Square Garden? What were you doing in those places to enhance Alberta's exports?

Mr. Klein: I don't know anything about the Cornell Club. I've never heard of the Cornell Club in New York City. Perhaps one of the other ministers on that mission can respond. But perhaps I was at that club, and I was giving a speech to a group of investors, or one of the ministers was giving a speech to a group of investors.

Mr. Speaker, I want to put this thing totally and absolutely in context, and if the Liberals were honest, they would put it in context too. By the Liberals' own estimate the government has spent $1.1 million on all missions over the last three years. Now, to put that into perspective, listen to this: over three years this entire caucus has spent only one-fifth of the $5.3 million that the Governor General of Canada spent on one single mission – one single mission – and that mission was concocted and designed by the federal Liberal government, the soulmates of Alberta's Liberals.

Mr. MacDonald: Given that the next comparison is probably going to be to George Radwanski, how can this government consider that they are spending money carefully when the Premier and his staff have forked over over $1,100 of taxpayers' money to maids in Mexico when you refused even to put the minimum wage up in this country?

Mr. Klein: Well, first of all, $1,100 is a lot to me, and it's probably a lot to that member, but, Mr. Speaker, the matter of $1,100 spent on tips to hotel staff in Mexico City in 2002 is also very explainable. In Mexico, if the hon. member has ever been there, service charges are added automatically to the bill. We estimated what our total bill would be for that mission and, as I understand, got a deal on the service charges. I'll have the hon. Minister of Economic Development explain the deal that was achieved. But you have no choice because the tip is added to all the bills, and when you . . .

Mr. MacDonald: Put the minimum wage up.

Mr. Klein: This has nothing to do with the minimum wage. I don't know where this guy gets off; I'm telling you that, Mr. Speaker. You know, he's over there chirping about the minimum wage, and he's talking about $1,100 for tips for one full week for a full mission, tips that are added automatically to a bill.

I'll have the hon. minister explain.

Mr. Norris: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, I would really encourage the hon. member to focus more on what's happening in Alberta than Mexico. The trip was a remarkable success.

I want to say here right now to the House that Alberta is remarkably fortunate to have a Premier who understands international markets and our international marketplace and spends so much time on these missions because it's vital to the success of Alberta. I want to say thank you, sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars globe-trotting at Alberta's taxpayers' expense. Now, if we want to focus on Alberta, let's focus on Alberta seniors, students, and health care patients that are being told by this government to do with less. To the Premier: how does this Premier justify jacking up seniors' long-term care fees when this government spends over $8,000 on car services in New York City? Tell that to seniors.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'm sort of curious. Is the hon. member saying that we ought not travel, that we ought not sell Alberta, that we ought not sell Alberta products, that we ought not concentrate on adding value to our products and travelling the market, that we can find all of the officials, the 22,000 employees, many of whom are in different parts of the globe right now selling Alberta – not politicians; we're stuck here. At any minute of any hour of any day of any week of any month of any year we have numerous officials, probably hundreds of officials, in different parts of the world selling Alberta. Is this hon. member saying: stop all of that right now? If that's what he's saying, let him stand up and say so. Let him stand up and say so.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I want this government to be careful not careless.

How does this Premier justify soaring tuition and crowded classrooms while his government spent over $5,900 on accommodation, food, and services at the Sheraton hotel in New York City?

Mr. Klein: Fifty-nine hundred is not very expensive in New York City, I'll tell you that for sure, Mr. Speaker. His Liberal cousins have spent that in one night on hotel rooms in Ottawa.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: how does the Premier justify increasing health care premiums and contemplating other user fees on seniors while this government forks over $1,100 in tips to maids in Mexico?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, you know, I could go on if the hon. member would promise to publish all of the information on the web site. I can tell this Assembly about the value of any mission.

As a result of one mission by the Learning minister to southeast Asia, many Vietnamese students are choosing Alberta institutions as a place to study, both in postsecondary institutions and primary. It is estimated that the potential number of students from Vietnam could bring in $2.7 million in revenues for our learning institutions. That one mission alone would therefore result in revenue for Alberta more than two times the total estimated cost of all – of all – ministerial missions over the past three years. That one mission.

On a mission to the U.S. in 2001 the Minister of Economic Development and I took part in discussions that led to some Alberta businesses signing lucrative business deals in California.

Energy-related missions have led to face-to-face meetings with the vice-president of the United States to talk about how Alberta can contribute to the new U.S. energy strategy. They've also led to literally thousands of key decision-makers around the world learning a great deal about the energy sector in Alberta and investment opportunities. As a matter of fact, we now see either on stream or contemplated about $50 billion – $50 billion – worth of new investment in the oil sands, much of that investment coming from the United States.

A 2001 mission to California primarily to promote the Alberta energy and film industries resulted in successful negotiations for a Disney miniseries that is being shot this spring near Okotoks. Many other Alberta film deals followed on the heels of that mission.

Mr. Speaker, the list goes on and on and on, and I would like a commitment from the hon. member to publish the success of all these missions on their web site.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hundreds of thousands of dollars this government spends on globe-trotting, it's clear that the promise to carefully measure spending rings hollow. In fact, this is a government hiding travel expenses from the scrutiny of Alberta taxpayers. My questions are to the Premier. Why has the government not publicly released itineraries for 79 out-of-province trips taken since March 2001? Where are the itineraries?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I can't speak for the other ministers. I do know that this government is probably one of the most, if not the most, open and transparent governments in the country. If it weren't for this government, the Liberals wouldn't have put our officials to the great expense – and I don't know how much their FOIP requests cost our officials in this government, but if it weren't for this government, they wouldn't have been able to get any of this information.

Relative to the openness and transparency of this government I'll have the hon. Minister of Finance speak to it.

Mrs. Nelson: You know, Mr. Speaker, back in 1992-93 when our Premier took over as Premier, we introduced as Bill 1 the open and transparent Financial Accountability Act in this province. We have led the nation by putting in place not only an act that governs openness and transparency but also through the Auditor General Act even an external audit committee that meets with the Auditor General and reviews the policies and procedures that are in place with this government. If there are difficulties, they have been identified and rectified.

Insofar as openness I can tell you that there isn't any other government that has had as many filings as we do in this House, well, since December of 1992. On a quarterly basis we bring Albertans up to date with all the expenditures. We explain various analyses where we have variances from budget to actual on a quarterly basis. We identify the costs that are coming through our government. We deal with pressure points. We deal with emergencies. We are open and transparent. It was Bill 1 under this Premier.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Massey: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why has the government not publicly disclosed the costs of 26 out-of-province trips taken since March 20, 2001?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I will attempt to get the answer, really. We do as a matter of policy require ministers to issue a news release relative to the itinerary for international missions as well as the estimated costs.

Now, we don't issue news releases for government travel within Canada; that is, out of province but within Canada. In almost all cases when ministers or I travel to other parts of Canada, the trips are to attend meetings with federal and provincial counterparts or various committees: the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, for instance, the francophone matters; yourself, Mr. Speaker, the parliamentary sessions. There are numerous others including some that the members of the opposition attend as well. But for any mission sponsored by my office a full report on the mission and what was accomplished is posted on the web site. The International and Intergovernmental Relations department is responsible for producing that web site, and it's provided in other ways as well, through the media, newsletters, and so on.

So our caucus, if there are any shortcomings . . .

Ms Blakeman: Twenty-six of them.

Mr. Klein: Send us the 26. I hear the chirping over there again: there are 26. Identify the 26. We'll have a look at them, and we'll review the matter of publicly releasing detailed receipts and detailed accounts of missions if it's absolutely necessary within and without Canada, but normally we don't issue news releases relative to meetings within Canada.

I'm going to Vancouver next week for a meeting of the Council of the Federation, which is the former Premiers' conference. Now, do you object to that? Do you want me to stand up and, you know, explain? I usually do a news conference before I leave for those meetings. I do stand up at the uni-mike while I'm there. You're welcome to take a car and drive out to Vancouver and watch all the Premiers in action if you want to, but I don't see where it would be worth while in any event to stand up and say that I need the Liberals' permission to travel to Vancouver or to feel: oh, my God, this is going to make it 27 now; oh, good Lord, what are we going to do?

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Massey: Thank you. Then in the interests of accountability, Mr. Premier, will you today agree to report all Executive Council expenses to the Public Accounts Committee?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, we have been very, very good in my office about reporting all Executive Council, at least as it pertains to my office. We will do it to the best of our ability. Lookit; I have to sit here and face the music relative to public accounts and the questioning that comes from the opposition, so I'll be prepared for any questions they have to ask me, and hopefully I'll be able to provide them with the proper answers.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Alberta Blue Cross

Dr. Pannu: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, last Thursday the New Democrat opposition blew the whistle on changes that will pick the pockets of 1 million Albertans with Alberta Blue Cross coverage. A major change being proposed forcing Blue Cross to make payments in lieu of taxes is contrary to the advice of the Blue Cross Review Committee, chaired by the Member for Calgary-Lougheed. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why is the government going against the advice of its own review committee, which argued that the change in Alberta Blue Cross's tax-exempt status would result in a transfer of costs to Albertans and would not be appropriate?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to note that the committee chaired by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed looked into the matters of the operations of Alberta Blue Cross in a great deal of detail, and I thank her for her work and the dedication that was spent in coming up with the recommendations that are coming forward and are being implemented.

Mr. Speaker, there is some erroneousness about what the hon. member has said with respect to the number of clients that would be affected by these changes, but the long and the short of it is that where Alberta Blue Cross's efforts are in competition with the private sector, we felt that it was most appropriate since the private sector was paying these premium taxes, in order to level the playing field, Alberta Blue Cross should do the same. Now, the impact on a per-client basis is that for individuals now paying roughly $140 a month, depending on the package of Blue Cross that they decide to take, it would result in a $3 change to such an individual, a very reasonable amount of money.

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Speaker, why won't the minister admit that the so-called level playing field is code for high premiums, which is being done for no other reason than to allow the private health insurance industry to take business away from Alberta Blue Cross?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I wouldn't admit that because it's an asinine suggestion.

Dr. Pannu: My final question to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: why is the government forcing Albertans with Blue Cross coverage to pay more just so that Tory friends in the private health insurance industry can make more profits by grabbing a bigger share of the market?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Blue Cross is a valued service to individuals who are in the province of Alberta, but they, of course, should have the choice as to where they get their services from. It appears that Alberta Blue Cross does provide a very solid service, and that's why Alberta Blue Cross has many, many clients.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member's suggestions are simply unsubstantiated. They are untrue, and as I said, it's perfectly reasonable to be looking at levelling the playing field between Alberta Blue Cross's operations and the private sector vis-à-vis other private-sector insurance operators.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Protection for Persons in Care

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During my time as an MLA I've learned much about the complexities of elder abuse, whether physical, financial, mental, or emotional. It can occur at any time, whether deliberately or innocently, and by anyone, even in one's own home by a family member. Last month a senior resident at the Jubilee Lodge Nursing Home in Edmonton appears to have died as a result of burns to her legs. I understand that among other investigations Community Development's protection for persons in care branch has completed its investigation. My main question is to the Minister of Community Development. What was the outcome of the investigation by the protection for persons in care branch?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me begin by expressing my personal and collegial sincerest condolences to the family who has suffered the loss of a loved one in this particular instance.

I also want to briefly explain that the Protection for Persons in Care Act, over which I have responsibility, is required to review all cases of alleged abuse or outright abuse that are submitted to us where a particular client may reside in a publicly funded care facility. Of course, I can't comment on the specific details of any single case, such as the one that is being referenced, but I would like to say that after a preliminary investigation of the particular case that has been asked about, we did ask the PPIC branch people to consult with the local police department. They did that, and it was determined to hand that file over to the Edmonton Police Service. They did do that, and then shortly after that the Department of Justice also became involved, and the Minister of Justice may wish to augment where the process went from there.

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Justice, you'll have to guide the chair. Anything sub judice in here at all?

Mr. Hancock: No, Mr. Speaker, no sub judice at the moment. I won't comment on the police investigation other than to say that yesterday I signed an order calling for a public fatality inquiry into this particular situation. We made that request public today after notifying the family that the inquiry would be called. Of course, members of the Legislature will know that public fatality inquiries do not proceed until other investigations, particularly police investigations, are completed. So when it's actually held, the timing of it will be after that has been completed, but a public fatality inquiry will be held. The purpose, of course, of a public fatality inquiry and the reason why it follows the other inquiries is because it does not find fault. It finds the facts and makes comment if any with respect to how these types of situations can be avoided in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Kryczka: Thank you. My next question is also to the Minister of Community Development. If Albertans have concerns about potential abuse in publicly funded care facilities, how can they get Protection for Persons in Care involved?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, the short answer is that they can call our reporting line, which is toll-free. I believe the number is 1-888-357-9339. They will be assured of some follow-up because it is the mandated requirement of the protection for persons in care unit to in fact follow up on every reporting of abuse or alleged abuse. We will then usually contact an investigator who will look into the details and provide a report back to us for further action.

However, I should tell the member that if someone feels they have a relative or a loved one or an acquaintance who is in some immediate danger, they should immediately contact the local police department to have that issue looked at.

The final point, I think, is that there are several other acts that might come into play which people should also consider reviewing. So anyone who is residing in a publicly funded care facility has protection from a number of other avenues besides the Protection for Persons in Care Act.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Kryczka: Yes. Thank you. Also to the same minister: how can you improve and strengthen protection for persons in care?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, when the Protection for Persons in Care Act came in approximately five years ago, it was already determined that within five years it would be reviewed for the very purpose that the hon. member is raising the question. So a couple of years back I did appoint an MLA-led committee which was chaired by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner. As a result of that, a report did come out which I think all members of the House are aware of. We then sent it out for public feedback.

We've received that. We are now analyzing it all. We're looking at and considering changes to do the very thing the member is asking, and that is to look at the mandate of the act, to look at the definitions of abuse, the definitions of intent, to look at the scope and coverage of the act, and perhaps also expand the act to provide greater coverage to more individuals who may need it which the act currently does not cover.

Climate Change Initiatives

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, in January the Minister of Environment

sent a letter threatening industry leaders. He stated that if companies failed to consult with the province on any federal Kyoto initiatives, tax credits and royalty breaks could be lost. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. What was the minister thinking when he sent such an arrogant letter?

Dr. Taylor: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I did not send any threatening letter. What the letter stated quite clearly was that we wish to work with Alberta companies. We wish to work with the federal government to reach a solution on climate change initiatives. Quite clearly, the owner of the resource is all Albertans, and all Albertans need to be at discussions with the federal government so that we can work co-operatively with both the industry and the federal government.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, does the minister believe that using strong-arm tactics and placing our industries in the middle of his fight with the feds will encourage investor confidence and innovation in this province?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Premier mentioned just a few minutes ago, we have $50 billion worth of investment in this province. I think there's extreme confidence in Alberta.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, can this minister tell us what this government's commitment is to helping Alberta businesses meet Kyoto targets?

Dr. Taylor: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. We have an Alberta climate change action plan that, hopefully, the hon. member has read by now. We are putting that climate change action plan into effect. We've done that action plan in consultation with industry, and it's an action plan that works.

I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that we're hopeful that the federal government will pay attention. There is a policy vacuum in the federal government at the present time on climate change, and we feel that by Alberta once again being in the lead on climate change action plans, we can fill that policy vacuum. The new Prime Minister is making the right sounds. He is saying that he wants to consult with the provinces. So we need to take him at his word, and after the next election we need to hold his feet to the fire and make sure that he lives up to his commitment to work with Albertans on climate change.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Downer Cows

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The two North American cases of BSE introduced many nonranchers to a new term: downer cow. Since then, many of my constituents have wondered what a downer cow is and if they pose any danger to the safety of our food supply. My questions are to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Could the minister please explain to my constituents: what is a downer cow?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, very simply put, a downer cow is an animal that cannot stand or walk without assistance, so nonambulatory. The more important thing is the cause of this, and right now that is the source of a lot of discussion around downer cows being presented at abattoirs.

Downer cows can be identified in this way because they are injured on the truck, have a leg injury, break a leg. They could have an injury from calving, somewhat unusual, but it definitely happens that an animal is injured during calving and experiences some inability to walk from an injury to her hind quarters. It can be a metabolic disease. The important thing in our province is how downer cows are handled.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: are downer animals allowed in the human food chain?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I would like to just take a moment to explain how we handle downer animals in this province and how we have handled them for some time. First of all, if downer animals are presented at a provincial abattoir – and I must say that this is not a common experience – they are inspected by a qualified veterinarian prior to slaughter to ensure that they are healthy enough to even move into the slaughter line.

Mr. Speaker, the carcass from a downer cow is held in this province until it has tested clear for BSE before it would be allowed to move into the human food chain. That is a very, very important aspect of how we handle downers and how we see continuing to handle them.

Mr. Johnson: My final question, then, is to the same minister. Do downer cattle pose a health risk to Albertans?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, handled in the way that they are in this province, with the inspections that we have and the fact that they are held, which is in every case, until they are cleared before the carcass is allowed to move on, yes, they are allowed in the human food chain.

Again, I have to go back, Mr. Speaker. A downer animal can be an animal that was being transported to an abattoir that is injured in transport, and the meat from that animal is perfectly safe. So I think we have to put this into perspective. It has in light of the BSE issue become a term that's used in some very negative ways. The term "downer" isn't new in the industry. The understanding of what a downer is is very clear in the industry, and it's important that the public understand what this terminology means.

Health Care Reform

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, on January 22 a government news release stated that the government had decided that Albertans would not accept recommendations from the Graydon report like increasing health care taxes and introducing medical savings accounts. Then less than a week later the Premier arbitrarily decided that, quote, the Graydon report is coming back. My questions are to the Premier. Exactly who is in charge of health reform in Alberta? The Minister of Health and Wellness or the Premier? It seems they're not talking to each other.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I don't recall saying that the Graydon report wouldn't be tabled at all or considered. Not all recommendations in the Graydon report are acceptable, but that report along with other reports – and when I'm talking about other reports, I'm talking about reports we might get from places like Sweden, France, places that have been touted as having much better health care systems than we do and why. We will consider all of these documents in conjunction with a number of processes that are now underway vis-à-vis the national health ministers and finance ministers, the Premiers and territorial leaders across the country including the Prime Minister and including our own budgetary problems related to health care.

Notwithstanding what the hon. member says and this hokey-pokey relative to GDP, the fact is that health care costs are rising much faster than are revenues. Indeed, across this nation we're spending about $72 billion – billion – a year right now. By the year 2020 it's estimated that if health care costs continue to rise the way they have been rising, it'll be $172 billion. Mr. Speaker, many governments across this nation are already in crisis related to health care where health care spending has now reached 50 per cent of their total provincial budgets. All Premiers and all territorial leaders are saying: we have got to do something about this.

So, Mr. Speaker, I'm serving warning right now that the Graydon report along with all of the other information we can obtain from all sectors, including other countries that have been rated much, much higher than Canada, will be brought together as we embark on a program of meaningful reform to achieve sustainability.

Dr. Taft: Well, given the chronic confusion around these reforms, let me repeat: who is in charge of health reform in Alberta? Is it the Premier, or is it the Minister of Health and Wellness?

Mr. Klein: Not that it makes any difference, Mr. Speaker, but it is a joint responsibility. The primary responsibility, of course, rests with the minister. [interjection] What's that? [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. the Premier, ignore it, and please proceed.

Mr. Klein: Thank you. He's loud enough to be recorded in Hansard.

The responsibility is a government responsibility. The primary responsibility, of course, is with the minister for the development of policy, but through our system of standing policy committees any policy changes are brought to the SPCs or considered by cabinet or considered by this 83-member caucus, Mr. Speaker. Of course, I'm involved at the Premier's level in addressing health care reform with my provincial counterparts and with the federal government. The minister is involved with his colleagues across the country and the federal minister. He's also involved with other ministers like the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Seniors, Environment to some degree, Community Development to some degree.

So, Mr. Speaker, who's in charge? We're all in charge, except that they are not in charge, thank God.

Dr. Taft: That incredibly convoluted and confused response explains the problems.

Mr. Speaker, then I ask a simple question to this Premier: does he know when his government signed off on the budgets of the regional health authorities for the current fiscal year? Or have they even been signed off now? Is anybody in charge? Hello?

The Speaker: Okay. Question period is not the place for theatrics time and histrionics time. I'm sure there's some local community theatres in the city of Edmonton who would love the entertainment, but that's not what we're doing here.

I heard at least four questions, and I don't know how anybody can answer four questions at one time, so we're moving on to the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Beef Exports

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or BSE, has caused unthinkable devastation to our cattle industry and to rural Alberta. The Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development has said on more than one occasion that the real solution is to get the borders reopened, and I would agree. All of my questions today are to that minister. What countries are currently importing Canadian beef?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, currently there are 24 countries who have lifted a ban at least partially on importing Canadian beef and cattle. They range from Barbados to the Cayman Islands to Russia to most recently Macao. But more importantly, very early in this issue our two largest trading partners, the United States and Mexico, lifted the ban on boneless beef.

Mr. Speaker, certainly the most important issue is the complete opening of borders, complete resumption of normal trade in beef and beef products, but I must say that the opening of the borders to boneless beef was a huge, huge bonus for our industry because that is the majority of what they ship. I'm pleased to inform the hon. member and indeed all of the Assembly that our exports of beef into Mexico have increased significantly, and in fact the last week in December Mexico imported more than 10 million pounds of fresh or frozen beef and cattle products.

So, Mr. Speaker, we're making progress. Is it fast enough? No. Is it enough? No. But we are making progress, and 24 countries have opened their borders at least partially to our beef.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is very encouraging.

Are there any conditions that our trading partners are demanding of us that we have not yet met before they will reopen their borders to our live cattle?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, this is one of the very frustrating aspects of dealing with this issue because we, frankly, have not had from our trading partners a specific list, if you wish, of things that would be required in order to open the borders entirely. We have put some measures in place as a country. Reflecting, though, on the international panel's report saying that there were some things that we could do that would further strengthen our already excellent system – and I do remind all members that the international panel applauded the systems we do have in place in this country – we put some new mitigation measures in including the removal of SRMs, specified risk materials, from the food chain, removal of them more in their entirety from animals.

We continue to negotiate through our federal negotiators with other countries to try and ascertain what they would require for a complete opening of borders and a complete resumption of normal trade. In fact – and I hope you'll listen; I will put out an itinerary – I will be travelling to Washington early in the week to further those discussions with our largest trading partner in beef to understand how we can work more closely with the U.S. on a North American solution so that our product on a North American basis is accepted in every country in the world.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thanks again, Mr. Speaker. Given that North America has an integrated cattle industry, is the minister prepared to encourage the federal minister of agriculture to place a ban on the processing of any sick animal to mirror the recently announced U.S. policy on downed animals?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, we don't process sick animals. Animals are cleared by inspectors and veterinarians to ensure that they are healthy before they are processed unless they're going to rendering.

On downers the question is: should downers be allowed to be presented at all? The fact is that they are not allowed to be presented at slaughter plants that are federally inspected for export beef. Should they be allowed to be presented at all to provincial abattoirs, which is in our domestic market? That is a discussion that we continue to hold.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the safeguards that we have in place, where we have inspectors on-site, where we have veterinarians who examine the animals and ensure that they are fit, are sufficient. However, it will be the consumers of that product that will finally determine how we should handle this.

I just have to remind all members that all animals that are termed downers are not sick. They maybe have been injured or in some way incapacitated, but their meat would be very healthy. In Alberta no downer animal would enter the food chain until all tests on that animal were cleared. They are held, and I think it's important that the consuming public knows that.

I should also point out that there are a number of our 52 provincial abattoirs that have made a decision not to accept downer animals, and that is certainly within their prerogative. If a farmer has an animal that has been injured and he wants that animal slaughtered, they will require a veterinarian to examine that animal on the farm, give a letter of clearance for that animal to pass to their abattoir, where it could be slaughtered and would be further inspected.

So we have a good system, Mr. Speaker. It's tough. It's a tough system, but I think it's stood us in good stead.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On January 11 a 90-year-old woman died after being scalded during a bath at Edmonton's Jubilee Lodge Nursing Home. Both the woman's family and I repeatedly called for a fatality inquiry. The fatality inquiry review board has now recommended that an inquiry be held, and today the minister has complied. My question is to the Minister of Justice. Is the minister looking into this one person's death as an isolated incident, or will he order an investigation into the questionable deaths of other nursing home patients documented by FAIRE and by the Elder Advocates of Alberta?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, with respect to the fatality inquiry that's been called, obviously it's been called with respect to this particular incident. In looking into this particular incident, the inquiry should consider the circumstances around how this death occurred, determine what the facts are, the manner of death, and the judge that leads the inquiry may make recommendations on the prevention of similar occurrences in the future. But a fatality inquiry relates specifically to a particular incident, a particular death, and a particular individual.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. My next question is to the Minister of Community Development. Given that the Protection for Persons in Care Act review is complete, would this tragic death have been automatically investigated out of the changes that are now flowing from the review?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we have not made any changes yet to the legislation that's being referred to. We are simply contemplating and considering all of the feedback that has been received, both during the consultation process, which was province-wide, and also the feedback that has now been actually received in the form of the recommendations that were in the report.

I will be coming forward with some of those recommendations in the not too distant future, and we will be looking at places where we can improve the act, where we can strengthen the act. That will hopefully help stem any of these kinds of occurrences in the future.

We can never guarantee it, Mr. Speaker, but we do what we can through the PPIC Act, which, by the way, is more educative, as the member knows, than it is punitive. There are a couple of punitive sections within the act, but we do what we can by way of following up with every single one of those investigations and reports, which for the timing being at least are mandatory to be done.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. My final question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Will this incident prompt the minister into creating and implementing standards of care for all long-term and continuing care which can be applied across all of the health regions in Alberta?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, let me say first of all that this, as the hon. Minister of Community Development said, was a very tragic set of circumstances, and I join him in expressing personal condolences to this family.

Capital health has conducted a review of this, and I can assure you that Capital health is most interested in ensuring that throughout all of the facilities that it has responsibility for, it takes the appropriate corrective actions to ensure that this doesn't happen to somebody else. As an example, the Jubilee Lodge, on the advice of Capital health, will be improving its water system, and the staff at Capital health are checking the water temperature at all of its long-term care facilities, and Capital health has also sent revised bathing guidelines to all long-term care operators.

Mr. Speaker, I can say that long-term care operators throughout the province are watching this particular set of circumstances very carefully and that throughout the province if any circumstances like this happened, there would be the appropriate investigations, as were done here at Jubilee. A number of reviews took place. The regional health authority did a review, the Jubilee operator itself, and Protection of Persons in Care also reviewed it. The department takes this very seriously. I think that there is some merit in making the suggestion that we make these types of learnings available to all operators of long-term care centres so that we can hopefully do our very, very best and make every reasonable effort to ensure that this doesn't happen again.

Recognitions

The Speaker: Hon. members, 30 seconds from now I'll introduce the first of the hon. members. The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Battle River Rural Electrification Association

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the Battle River Rural Electrification Association. REAs have served the Wetaskiwin-Camrose constituency for over 55 years. They arose out of necessity because rural power customers were being overlooked by the larger power companies of the day.

Today the Battle River REA ensures that rural consumers have a reliable power supply. The Battle River REA is an amalgamation of 19 REAs from around central Alberta. It continues to grow, and this is growth undoubtedly linked to the fine service that it provides to its members.

Not too long ago I helped the Battle River REA open a brand new centralized office in my constituency at Ervick, just west of Camrose. The opening of this building is the culmination of the Battle River REA's tireless work in rural communities in Alberta.

REAs are extremely important for our rural communities. They ensure that the concerns of rural Albertans with regard to electricity are properly heard by both government and industry.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Edmonton Oilers

Mr. Hutton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A sports franchise cannot be successful without the support of its fans and followers. As a sports fan myself I don't believe that I'm out of order in saying that sports enthusiasts are a demanding bunch who expect the best out of their beloved team day in and day out.

As a result, it is not every day that a small franchise sports team gets rated by the fans as the most popular in the league. Earlier this month the Edmonton Oilers received such a prestigious rating by ESPN Magazine. The magazine rated the Oilers not only as the fan favourite in the NHL but also the overall number one bang for your buck in all professional sports. The recognitions, Mr. Speaker, are not only reflective of the organization's commitment to its fans and supporters, but they also reinforce the notion that a sports team does not have to be located in the richest city or have the largest player payroll in order to be successful and popular.

I wish to congratulate the Edmonton Oilers on their great achievement and wish them the best to make a spot in the playoffs, and they'll need it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Freedom to Read Week

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Next week, February 22 to 28, is Freedom to Read Week in Canada. This annual event encourages Canadians to think about and reaffirm their commitment to intellectual freedom guaranteed them under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Check out www.freedomtoread.ca for events in your community.

In Edmonton the freedom to read committee has organized Read is a Four-Letter Word: Teens' Views on Censorship, a reading and debate at 7:30 on Monday, February 23, at the Whitemud Crossing library.

The Writers Guild of Alberta is also encouraging folks to participate in the BookCrossing, an international endeavour to make the whole world a library by having people read a good book, register it at www.bookcrossing.com, and then release it into the wild for someone else to read. Leave it on a park bench or a bus, give it to a friend or a coworker, or leave it at a shelter.

In Calgary the freedom to read committee is celebrating its 10th anniversary by awarding the 2004 freedom of expression award to Greg Gerrard of Pages Bookstore on behalf of his late wife, Cathy McKay, and with readings by past award winners and raising funds in support of the Writers' Guild of Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

South Calgary High School

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the Calgary board of education and the construction firm of Stuart Olsen. They announced last week that they will be opening the new south Calgary high school one full year ahead of schedule.

On behalf of my constituency and all of the high school students in south Calgary I'd like to recognize and thank them for this much-needed, timely completion of a new high school in Calgary.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Lac La Biche Forest Capital of Canada 2004

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my great pleasure to stand today to announce to members of this Assembly the designation of Lac La Biche as the forest capital of Canada for 2004. The forest capital of Canada program is spearheaded by the Canadian Forestry Association and highlights the valuable role that forests play in the economic and environmental health of our communities. This is a great honour for Lac La Biche, a community that was created and continues to flourish today due in large part to the success of our forest industry.

It is fitting, then, that the theme of the forest capital of Canada should be Lac La Biche, gateway to the boreal forest. As forest capital Lac La Biche and its neighbours will embark on a 12-month celebration of historic community and forest relationships with a focus on the future through public awareness and education on the wise use of our forests.

I would like to ask members of this Assembly to join me in congratulating the people of Lac La Biche and the surrounding area for this great honour.

EPCOR

Mr. Yankowsky: Mr. Speaker, I rise to give recognition to EPCOR on the occasion of their winning the 2004 national award in governance, sponsored by the Conference Board of Canada and Spencer Stuart. The award recognizes innovation and excellence in board governance. EPCOR was one of only three winners.

It all began in 1891, when the city of Edmonton's first power plant was built in the North Saskatchewan River valley. From this early beginning, the company has grown into one of Alberta's leading power companies.

EPCOR won this prestigious award because of its governance model, which blends the best of the private sector with public-sector accountability. This governance model works because the shareholder, board, and management have clearly defined roles and responsibilities.

Congratulations and thanks to Don Lowry, CEO, and the EPCOR board and management for your efforts in winning this award.

The Speaker: Hon. Opposition House Leader, my notes suggest that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods is the next participant. Is there a substitute? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Henry Harder

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to recognize the life of Mr. Henry Harder, who, unfortunately, passed away at the age of 78 years last November. Mr. Harder lived with his wife, Molly, in the Strathearn neighbourhood of Edmonton, where they were very active in their community and their church while they were raising their family and ever since their family has grown up and moved away.

Mr. Harder was a passionate golfer and a very proud grandfather. He found enough time from golf and his family to act as returning officer in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar for many elections. It was this job that displayed his sense of fairness. Everyone who dealt with his office was treated with dignity and respect.

Mr. Harder's strolls through our neighbourhood on Sunday mornings will be sadly missed. His walk to Strathearn United Church was an event. He will be missed, but he will not be forgotten.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move to the next order of business, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

head: 2:50 Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you two very special constituents of mine: Keith and Maureen Griffiths from Coronation. Yes, they're my parents. These two people helped make me who I am. I can honestly say that I am as proud of them as they say they are of me. I'd ask them to rise, please, and have the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

head: Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Bill 2 Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will allow limited recreational vehicle access to continue through the Black Creek heritage rangeland on two already existing trails to maintain access to the few existing designated OHV trails in the adjacent Bob Creek wild-land. Recreational OHV activity is prohibited in heritage rangelands. However, in this case we truly have a unique and exceptional circumstance. Therefore, this bill provides an exception for two specific existing trails through Black Creek heritage rangeland as there are no other feasible alternatives that would allow access into the Bob Creek wild-land. It's also important to note that off-highway vehicles are already allowed in wild-land areas in certain circumstances, such as in Bob Creek.

In conclusion to this introduction to this bill I'd like only to add that this bill fulfills our government's commitment to local stakeholders without opening up the possibility of general recreational off-highway vehicle use in any other heritage rangeland or in any other parts of this particular heritage rangeland. The ranchers and landowners who live in that area have been very cautious and careful stewards themselves and so, too, have their predecessors for many decades.

So we will look forward to the support of all members of the House as this bill goes through the various stages.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Architects Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Architects Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, this act would define the registration and scope of practice of licensed interior designers and clarify registration and renewal for other professionals included in this act.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 3 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 4, that being the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004.

This bill is in response to a public review process, and it addresses concerns raised by stakeholders and concerned groups and individuals from across the province. The bill includes changes to legislation affecting blind persons who rely upon the use of guide dogs. The amendments will clarify the existing Blind Persons' Rights Act and will strengthen those areas that pertain to the rights of blind persons.

Specifically, this bill will provide a more acceptable definition of blindness as determined by the medical profession. It will also establish higher maximum fines for violations of the act, and it will provide protection for certified dog trainers and for dogs in training, and it will allow an identification card for the blind person/guide dog team to be issued. Finally, it will allow the minister responsible for the act to make regulations respecting qualifications for guide dogs.

I know that blind persons across the province are looking forward to this bill and the amendments that it contains, and they are also looking for support from all members in the House. They already have the Premier's support, Mr. Speaker, and they certainly have mine.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 4 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Bill 5
Family Support for Children With Disabilities
Amendment Act, 2004

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce to the Legislature Bill 5, Family Support for Children With Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004.

There are primarily three minor amendments made following consultation with stakeholders on regulations to make this act as we know it, this legislation, the first of its kind in Canada, more user friendly for people especially requiring supports, family members who require supports in caring for children with disabilities. This adds a little clarity.

I move first reading of the bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 5 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Alberta Human Resources and Employment I request leave to introduce Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, this bill makes minor wording changes to the Income and Employment Supports Act and protects the privacy of third parties who provide information to help government obtain child support agreements and court orders for children and families.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 6 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 6 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Jonson: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce for first reading Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, the current act expires at the end of this year. We are proposing an amendment to the act which would extend the act to December 31, 2010. This allows the Alberta government to hold Senate elections beyond 2004 should we decide to do so.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 7 read a first time]

head: 3:00      Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Mr. Hutton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the appropriate number of copies of the letter I've received from my constituent Abdulahi Mahamad regarding his concerns with false allegations of sexual abuse.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table appropriate copies of a document that I referred to during the question period called Alberta Blue Cross Review Committee report. It was submitted to the Minister of Health and Wellness in December 2002.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there additional tablings?

Hon. members, the chair has several today, first of all being a copy of Members' Services Committee Order 2/03, Constituency Services Amendment Order (No. 12); as well, Members' Services Committee 3/03, being Constituency Services Amendment Order (No. 13). Number 13 may be of interest to hon. members. Essentially, it will look at the base constituency office allocation numbers to be coming into effect on April 1, 2004. In the base there will be an adjustment from $52,699 to $56,915 and a mailing clause increase from 96 cents to 98 cents. The additional information will be forthcoming in that one.

Hon. members, pursuant to section 63(1) of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act I am pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Information and Privacy Commissioner. This covers the activities of that office from April 1, 2002, to March 31, 2003.

The third one. I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the 14th annual report of the Legislative Assembly Office for the calendar year ended December 31, 2002. This report presents the audited financial statements of the fiscal year ended March 31, 2002, and the sixth annual report of the Alberta branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, which contains a complete inventory of all travel by all members of this Assembly funded under the Legislative Assembly of Alberta.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the Office of the Clerk on behalf of the hon. Mr. Mar, Minister of Health and Wellness.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Consideration of Her Honour
the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Griffiths moved that an humble address be presented to Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To Her Honour the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank you, Your Honour, for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour for me to be able to rise today to move acceptance of the Speech from the Throne as delivered by Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

This fourth session of the 25th Alberta Legislature will be one of the most significant in the history of our province not only because it is the last year before our great province reaches its centennial but because of the bold and promising statement delivered by Her Honour yesterday on the course of this province and the future that awaits Albertans.

Her Honour referred to four key areas, or pillars, that will be crucial to Alberta's continued success. I was very excited by that terminology. You see, I had the honour and pleasure of co-chairing with my very talented and hard-working colleague from Innisfail-Sylvan Lake a committee that was tasked with finding a way to ensure that the Alberta advantage would be enjoyed by all Albertans. We approached our work by looking for ways to extend the Alberta advantage off the highway 2 corridor into rural and remote communities. I'm proud to say that the first major step in our work has been completed with the report entitled rural Alberta, land of opportunity, set to be released shortly. In our report we spoke of four key pillars, pillars that are crucial to the success of any small rural or remote community. Those pillars are health care, education, economic growth, and community infrastructure.

All Albertans know that we enjoy one of the best quality health care systems in the world. Rural Albertans also are most keenly aware of the particular challenges that our health care system faces in trying to deliver those services. The challenge of trying to get the same work done year after year while input costs continually rise but little new money comes in is very reminiscent of farming. Our rural Albertans are creative, imaginative, and hard-working and are prepared to be part of a long-term solution, Mr. Speaker, to the health care issues that our province is facing.

The Health Services Utilization and Outcomes Commission has the current role of monitoring and reporting on the performance of Alberta's health system. The commission created a report card of provincial health care, part of which analyzed the key components of health care delivery by health authority region. What was discovered from that report was that the East Central health authority, the only health authority without a full-scale regional hospital designed to achieve economies of scale on health care service delivery, had far and away the greatest level of customer satisfaction, a commodity often hard to come by in today's world of exceedingly high expectations. This accomplishment, Mr. Speaker, was possible only because of the close co-operation between the authority and the rural communities it serves. Thanks to their close work they were able to find ways to meet the health and community needs of those rural Albertans.

There is so much yet to do, Mr. Speaker. Communities across this great province are working hard to find ways to deliver quality health care in creative and innovative ways that maximize efficiency and assist in the repatriation of services to rural Alberta. Such solutions could help us maintain quality rural services while relieving stress on urban centres. But the implementation of new and creative ideas will need the support and co-operation of both urban and rural health regions, the public, provincial health unions, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Rural Physician Action Plan, the provincial and federal governments, and, well, as you can see, the co-operation of nothing short of every organization associated with health care in this province. I know it may sound challenging, but everything worth doing is.

I must say that I was excited to see the continued commitment of this government to delivering quality health care services in cost-efficient and innovative ways through numerous initiatives, not the least of which is the expansion of the commission mandate to that of a quality health council. That commitment will reap great results for all Albertans.

We know rural Albertans are creative, imaginative, and hard-working, and whether it is in delivery of health care or finding new ways to grow their local economies, Mr. Speaker, they will continue to find ways to succeed.

From an economic point of view, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has led the nation, even North America, in fiscal and economic policies that other jurisdictions have been working hard to mimic for years now. Rural Alberta and Albertans have experienced some very trying times in the past few years, mainly the worst drought in historical record, followed by a lone case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy that has devastated our beef industry.

These trying times have led many rural Albertans to feel that they are economically underdeveloped and inadequately diversified to cope with the new world and changing times. They see buildings and facilities closing, youth, young families, and even seniors moving away, sometimes for new jobs, sometimes for better access to education or health care or community services, but always – always – for new opportunities that today appear few and far between in the rural landscape. Rural Albertans need faith, and they need hope, but most of all they need to know that there is a vision for the province, a vision in which they are viewed as growing, prospering Albertans and positively contributing to the collective province.

I was excited to see some of that vision in the new and renewed commitments I heard yesterday, Mr. Speaker, commitments that are designed to ensure that Alberta's entire economy not only remains strong but builds on its foundation to grow and diversify every corner of our economy. The new value-added strategy will lead the process of moving our provincial economy from one that is predominantly based on harvesting and exporting natural resources such as grain, oilseeds, raw wood products, oil and gas, coal to one that turns those resources into finished goods for export, thereby creating jobs here in Alberta, adding value here in Alberta.

Other initiatives outlined in the Speech from the Throne such as the life sciences initiative and tackling the Canadian Wheat Board issue head-on will do much to compound the advantages that can be achieved with the value-added strategy. Rural Albertans will be pleased by these commitments and with ample reason too. However, the government must ensure that the new economy, the value-added industries, and new technologies that lead this economy and this province into a prosperous second century are not located only within urban strongholds. Placing or locating value-added industries and technologies in urban centres and merely leaving rural Albertans and the rural economy to harvest natural resources for those processes will do nothing to mitigate the situation in rural Alberta. In order to attract business and industry to rural Alberta, there must be a sound physical infrastructure within and among those communities.

I was glad to hear a commitment to extend the capital plan another year, until 2007. Quality transportation, whether by plane, train, or automobile, is essential to ensuring that artificial barriers aren't created, thus making location in rural areas unfeasible.

We cannot forget either, Mr. Speaker, that infrastructure is also important in areas of telecommunications and the Internet. Improved telecommunication service and SuperNet access to every community within Alberta means that rural Albertans and rural communities will be able to partake in the attraction of ICT industries and business, which will again assist in mitigating the dependence on our resource-based economy.

I was also very pleased to hear about the province's commitment to tourism across the province. Tourism continues to be one of the fastest growing industries around the world. Alberta has one of the richest and most unique histories on the continent, Mr. Speaker, blending strong cowboy traditions with native culture, with buffalo, grain elevators, and steam trains. People around the world are fascinated by those aspects of our culture, and the potential to capitalize on that interest could lead to an industry infinitely more dynamic than the one inspired by the dinosaur craze, but we need to ensure from this moment on that we are prepared to commit to developing and packaging tourism products that cater to these new interests and not just marketing familiar favourites. This is one case where the approach "if you build it, they will come" could never hold more true. I look forward to seeing the tourism strategy fleshed out in the weeks and months to come.

I could speak about economic growth opportunities all day, and I'm sure that some members may feel that I already have, but I simply could not leave this subject without mentioning what is likely one of the most important initiatives that I believe this government will undertake in its entire 20-year strategic plan, Mr. Speaker. I'm referring here to the water strategy. Simply put, all of the economic issues discussed to date are futile without water. This province would be hard-pressed to grow tourism, to grow value-added production, to grow primary production, for that matter, or even to grow its very own population without access to clean, potable water. Regardless of what anyone believes should be done with water, none can deny that water will become a major issue and will remain so forever. This issue needs to be addressed now, while we can act now, rather than later when there is only reaction. So I applaud the government for addressing this issue now.

The government has long had an understanding of the nature of the global economy and is fully aware of the need for open borders and free trade to ensure a strong local economy. Border and free trade issues have not been restricted to beef and BSE, however. They have grown in number in recent years with duties on Canadian wheat, softwood lumber, and a host of other issues. Those issues have direct negative consequences to all Albertans, Mr. Speaker, but specifically to rural Alberta.

Opening an Alberta office in Washington, D.C., is a clear demonstration that this government will not wait for the Canadian government to take the initiative on behalf of this province, and it will no longer allow the mood of the federal government to determine our province's economic fate. This action is welcome. It shows leadership, and it inspires confidence most among those dependent upon the relationship with our neighbours to the south.

There is a very common saying that I'm sure everyone in this Assembly is familiar with: give a man a fish and he will eat for a day, but teach a man to fish and he will eat for a lifetime. Well, Mr. Speaker, that is the nature of education, and that phrase shows its intrinsic value to society. But as I have done so far in this address, I will not speak of the benefit to all Albertans of education but specifically to the importance of education to rural Albertans.

I have always seen this government's deep commitment to education at every level and to every single student, and much of that commitment was reflected within the Learning Commission's report, that was released only recently. There are, however, still small but significant issues that remain unsolved in rural Alberta. These issues are outside the scope of the commission's report, but I am confident that they will be addressed in the months to come.

To be more specific, Mr. Speaker, transportation is a growing issue within rural communities as younger and younger children are finding themselves on longer and longer bus rides, sometimes caused by school closures, sometimes by fewer buses to make up routes, but always caused by shortened resources. The cause is not necessarily provincial funding, but can also be school board management as student numbers decline in many school jurisdictions while dollars spent on administration often remain the same.

In many rural communities class size is not an issue, but rather it is the inflexibility in class accommodation. In a community with one school and one class for each grade, how is the community to handle one class that may be an anomaly and have 40 students at the grade 7 level? A good teacher often cannot be hired for one year to deal with such a situation, and it's impossible to find a teacher with the credentials to follow the class from primary grades right through to high school. How do rural schools address these anomalies in these situations? Those are educational issues that need to be addressed.

It's imperative that communities, school boards, the Alberta Teachers' Association, and the provincial government work to find ways to deliver education in a manner that utilizes public dollars to the maximum available benefit of the community as a whole. However, kindergarten to grade 12 is not the fundamental issue in many small communities. Many communities are curious about how to improve access for adults to education, and how to address on-site training for high school graduates that may want to stay in or close to their community while they work.

These ideas are not just about education but are also about the economic growth of a community. Many communities struggle with how to attract business or industries when further on-the-job training or upgrading of skills cannot be done close to the community; the employees would have to travel. Communities also face difficulties in retraining and attracting youth and young families when higher education opportunities are lacking and far flung. Young people usually move to places where higher learning opportunities are in greater abundance and inevitably just tend to be located in those areas. I cannot suggest any solutions, Mr. Speaker, but I am confident that this government will continue to lead in the pursuit of finding solutions to these and other issues in education with all stakeholders and will work hard to present all Albertans with opportunities for life-long learning.

From a community infrastructure perspective many rural communities, counties, towns, and villages find that they are falling behind. Whether we are discussing community halls, sports facilities such as rinks and ball diamonds, bowling alleys, service clubs, and so on, the community infrastructure across rural Alberta is weakening and in some places deteriorating quickly. What is at stake here, Mr.

Speaker, is the quality of life of rural Albertans. Rural Albertans lose quality of life as they lose affordable and available community infrastructure. They also lose the ability to attract new and young people who are looking for opportunities in small communities. To remedy this problem, we need to offer rural Albertans supports and tools which will not only help them realize their full potential but which will enable them to energize their local economies, their volunteers, and their fundraising capacities.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, we need to encourage and promote rural development projects regardless of whether they are funded publicly or privately in order to expand the local infrastructure and capitalize on the entrepreneurial spirit that is so readily available and already in place in rural Alberta.

After the first case of BSE was discovered, Mr. Speaker, I was very heartened that Albertans came together in support of the beef industry, which in turn resulted in a 70 per cent rise in the consumption of beef in our province. I have often said that rural Albertans are strong and proud and that this group has survived droughts, pestilence, flooding, blizzards, tornadoes, hailstorms, and even the odd bout of government intervention. Federal intervention, mind you.

At this time for many rural Albertans the situation seems desperate, and for some it undoubtedly is. There are also a lot more questions than answers, and unfortunately there is no magic bullet that will resolve this emotionally charged and hotly political international issue.

However, there are two things that all Albertans, especially rural Albertans, can be sure of. First, regardless of what happens at any political level in the weeks, months, and even the years to come, nothing in the beef industry, indeed in rural Alberta will ever be the way it was. Secondly, the provincial government and all Albertans will be there for the people of this devastated industry in the days, weeks, and years to come, whether it be through redevelopment, refocusing, repositioning, or transitioning the industry. Two eternal truths remain. Albertans don't just survive; they succeed. And they do so because they look out for each other.

There is not a more pivotal point in our province's centennial than this 99th year. I and all Albertans are proud of this government's continued commitment as outlined in the Speech from the Throne to a rural development strategy that will help ensure that people and businesses in rural Alberta enjoy every opportunity to reach their full potential. It is imperative, especially now, that something be done to share the Alberta advantage with that part of Alberta that so desperately needs our immediate attention and co-operation. If we don't, that segment of the population stops producing what amounts to far more than its share of the economy.

The consequences for the entire province will be devastating. The Alberta advantage created in rural Alberta could be lost to all Albertans. Without healthy, vibrant rural and remote communities it will be impossible to continue to ensure that our resource-based economy continues to grow and thrive. Furthermore, it will be next to impossible to ensure continued diversification and the growth of value-added production within this province without strong, vibrant rural communities. In short, it will be almost infeasible to effectively and successfully implement any of the great new initiatives that the government has announced to take us into the next century without rural Alberta enjoying it.

I would like to take this final moment of my remarks to pay the deepest of respect to Her Honour the Honourable Lieutenant Governor for her eternal grace, her constant dignity, her unwavering faith in the human spirit, and of course her fabulous hugs. Mr.

Speaker, I know that if Her Honour could give rural Alberta a hug right now, she would. I'm confident that all hon. members in this Assembly agree with me when I state that Her Honour is a shining example of the capacity of the human spirit to endure, survive, and prosper through adversity. In hard times may we all, rural and urban Albertans alike, remember Her Honour's strength, grace, and faith and aspire to such levels of composure, dignity, and strength in times of despair. May she also continue to serve us in her current capacity for years to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It has truly been a pleasure to have the opportunity to move the Speech from the Throne.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm extremely proud and honoured to have been asked to rise on behalf of the people of Calgary-Egmont to second the motion put forward by the hon. and young Member for Wainwright to accept the Speech from the Throne – I'm sure that his parents must be very proud of him today – a speech that was delivered with grace and special charm by the Honourable Lieutenant Governor, Lois Hole. Her Honour represents the best traditions of the office of Lieutenant Governor, and I'm sure that I speak for everyone in this Chamber when I say that Alberta's favourite grandmother has been in our thoughts and prayers during the personal challenges that she endured and overcame with such grace over the past year.

Mr. Speaker, I wish I were in a position of eastern influence so that I could influence the extension of her appointment at least to the end of 2005, our centennial year. Her Honour is loved by all Albertans and, in my view, is a true expression of the values and steadfastness that have made Alberta what it is today. A centennial celebration without Her Honour is just not an option. Show us that you're listening, Mr. Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker, in delivering the Speech from the Throne, Her Honour has opened the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature of Alberta. I feel so privileged to be a member of this Legislature and to represent the people of Calgary-Egmont, who have honoured me with the responsibility to speak on their behalf as we prepare to move into our second century.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Calgary-Egmont embody the qualities that make Alberta such a wonderful place to live. In many ways they embody the qualities that we so admire in Her Honour: directness, honesty, entrepreneurship, strength of character, kindness, dedicated service, and a willingness to tackle problems head-on, persevere, and emerge stronger for the future, and – I would agree with the hon. Member for Wainwright – her hugs as well. Those same values and attitudes have brought Alberta from a fledgling member of Confederation in 1905 to become one of the strongest provinces in this great country in less than a century.

Albertans continue to make significant contributions to the freedom and quality of life that we have experienced as Canadians, and I'd like to take this opportunity to offer my best wishes to our troops currently stationed in Afghanistan and throughout the world. Their past and present service to Canada and Alberta contributes to the richness of our lives and has secured the freedom for Albertans to pursue their dreams in peace and security.

Mr. Speaker, I've called Alberta my home for all of my life, as has my father before me and two generations before him, and now two more generations, my children and grandchildren, continue to be blessed with the opportunity to be all that they can be and contribute to the fabric of this great province. I have considered myself privileged to be able to live and raise my children to appreciate the awesome natural beauty that is Alberta and the entrepreneurial strength of character of Albertans that define who we are as a people. Additionally, my children have enjoyed the benefits that come from the wealth of natural resources and the hard work of previous generations that have made Alberta what we have become today.

The strength of character of Albertans that rise to every challenge has never been so evident as during the current agricultural crisis. Albertans did not hesitate to wholeheartedly support the cattle industry and continue to do so in the face of ongoing difficulties. I'm confident that we will ultimately emerge stronger and resume our international role as the beef of choice for all nations.

Mr. Speaker, while we can look back at success and the current challenges for our people, we must look forward with Her Honour for ways to contribute to the conditions that will enhance the future success of our grandchildren. Almost two years ago I was blessed with my first grandchild, and I was so proud when Her Honour announced the Alberta centennial education savings plan, because my grandson Matthew provided the motivation for the plan, and now thanks to the statesmanship of our Premier we have the opportunity to make it a reality for all future Albertans. Statesmanship, for the benefit of those across the way, focuses on the benefits for the next generation, while partisan politics frequently focuses exclusively on the next election.

I'll look forward to the debate in this House as we examine the benefits of this tremendous investment for the future generations of Albertans.

3:30

Mr. Speaker, in my former life I was involved in the computer and telecommunications industry, so I was especially pleased when Her Honour spoke about unleashing innovation as one of the four pillars that will become the framework for future success for all Albertans. By supporting innovation in Alberta, we can not only move from being exporters of raw material but to being exporters of finished goods and now a new product called knowledge. I feel that the knowledge industry has the potential to become the fifth pillar in Alberta's economy in our second century, the 21st century.

The creativity required for the knowledge industry depends in part on successfully unleashing innovation and successfully deploying ICT initiatives like SuperNet that will become the conduit of knowledge. Another critical initiative to support this vision announced by Her Honour is the creation of an ICT institute to guide research and innovation in this emerging sector. This initiative will in turn help support Alberta's booming economy, that saw the creation of 206,300 jobs over the last five years and 47,900 jobs in 2003 alone. Our unemployment levels continue to be amongst the lowest in the country, and the provincial average hourly wage is higher than the Canadian average.

Mr. Speaker, I've been privileged over the last 10 years to play a small part in the initiatives that have advanced innovation and ICT to the forefront in this government. As politicians we are often quick to take credit for these initiatives when in reality we are accidents of democracy, that happened to place us in the presence of great Albertans who are the ones who, in reality, make it all happen. So I salute all of those clear-thinking Albertans from all disciplines who continue to serve Alberta on all types of authorities, boards, and committees of government and who provide the good counsel from which our decisions flow. Another critical initiative brought forward by these clear-thinking Albertans will see the creation of a life sciences institute to co-ordinate research taking place across the province in areas such as agriculture, environment, forestry, health, bioenergy and water research.

Mr. Speaker, this new knowledge age must be supported from a young age, and that's why I was so pleased when Her Honour spoke to the government's continued strong support for education at all levels. As most Albertans know, Her Honour has a passion for ensuring that Alberta's children continue to benefit from one of the best education systems in the world, and I share her passion. As the international community evolves around globalization, having an excellent educational experience and, I might add, in more than one language will become even more important to ensure the future success and quality of life for our children.

In October 2003 the members of the Alberta Commission on Learning released their final report. They detailed 95 recommendations that they felt would improve the education system in Alberta. This past December the government responded by adopting 84 of the 95 recommendations. This shows the level of commitment of the government to ensuring that Alberta continues to have one of the best education systems in the world.

The recommendations of the Learning Commission provide opportunities to improve our education system in a variety of ways. I'm pleased to note that the throne speech confirms that the government is taking the report seriously and is taking the necessary steps to implement a great number of the recommendations. This year increased funding for learning will work in combination with a new funding framework that gives school boards increased flexibility to meet the unique needs and circumstances of each Alberta community. Government will not dictate to school boards how to allocate these dollars they receive, leaving it to each board to address priority areas and be more accountable to the parents in each community for their decisions and outcomes.

Mr. Speaker, access to postsecondary institutions is key to producing a productive and caring society. Her Honour described new funding for postsecondary learning that will include an increase in base operating grants for all postsecondary institutions as well as additional dollars for new spaces in high-demand programs. Indeed, that initial investment will come with a commitment to create a total of 2,000 new spaces over the next four years.

Mr. Speaker, on another matter, Her Honour knows of what she speaks because she's played an important role in making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. I was pleased to hear Her Honour describe how this year the government will continue building on programs already in place to ensure that all Albertans enjoy the highest possible quality of life with a particular focus on the most vulnerable members of Alberta communities, a focus that includes all children. In her words, and I quote: there can be no better accomplishment for Albertans than to raise healthy and happy children who are confident in their knowledge and their opportunities about their future and compassionate in their interests with their peers, their community, and the public at large.

While the government steps forward to create that kind of environment for all children, it will be the subject of an upcoming Roundtable on Family Violence and Bullying, and I certainly want to congratulate the Minister of Children's Services for putting that together, because I think that's a tremendously important initiative. That round-table will be held in May and will be of course handled with prior consultation province-wide. Communities and government partners find ways to break the cycle of violence, that can have a devastating and lasting effect in dividing families and on the fabric of Alberta communities.

Ultimately, many Albertans are acting in support with communities to strengthen the modelling of values and attitudes in our communities. I was very pleased to see comments dealing with values and attitudes in the Learning Commission report. I think that they're on the right track, and I'm aware that the ASBA is doing some good work in this area and is planning a conference soon to deal with this very important issue.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta's most vulnerable citizens will also be protected through a new plan to prevent 21st century sexual crimes that target children such as Internet crimes, Internet luring, child pornography, and child prostitution. We're fortunate here in this province through the actions of our Solicitor General, the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, to have legislation to protect children involved in prostitution, but this new plan will bring all crimes that sexually exploit children under one initiative, strengthening the way in which young Albertans are protected from exploitation and abuse.

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne, delivered by Her Honour, contained much more that time does not permit me to discuss. She re-emphasized the government's commitment to Alberta ideals of making spending decisions that best meet the needs of Albertans while being fiscally responsible. These ideals, coupled with strength of character and the willingness to face difficult challenges, will ensure that all Albertans, including my grandson Matthew, will be proud to live in the best province in Canada.

So may God bless Her Honour and Alberta. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would add my comments and praise of Her Honour for the speech that she delivered yesterday. Her Honour always speaks with grace, good humour, and warmth, and each occasion that you meet her is one that you remember. She's also very unique in terms of Lieutenant Governors of this province in her ability to speak out in terms of what she believes in, and she's been an outspoken advocate for education and schools in the province, as she has been for libraries. Yet she does it in a way that doesn't offend and has, I think, the desired impact on listeners. She again delivered a speech yesterday that we were all privileged to be part of the audience and listen to.

As I listened to the speech, Mr. Speaker, I couldn't help but think back to my constituency. I had been in the office for a number of days and had gone through the log of constituents that we had worked with in the last week or so, and I was struck by how there seem to be two worlds in our province: the world that we heard about yesterday, for the most part but not exclusively, in the throne speech and a world that is lived in by a whole large group of other Albertans.

As I listened to the speech, I wondered what that speech would sound like to the mother who phoned our office and is on a multiple handicap program. Her income is $675 a month. She was provided at the beginning of the year $173 for school fees for her teen daughter, and she called because she was in great distress that her daughter was not going to be able to take part in a number of junior high school programs because she didn't have the funds to pay the fees.

I wonder how she would have listened and reacted to the centennial savings plan. What kind of chance is there that she'll be able to even get a hundred dollars to open such a plan for her daughter, much less add to it over the coming years? I wondered how she might react to the K to 12 suggestions in the throne speech saying that there is going to be more money added.

Yet she lives in a world of school fees. We now have fees for courses in schools. We have always had and still continue to have the textbook fees and a whole host of other fees that have now been resorted to by schools particularly in this city, where they have been desperate for funds. The cuts have really hurt a lot of schools. It seems to me that one of the things that has been lost over the past number of years has been the “public” in public education, and I think it is mothers and children of parents like this that suffer the most.

The second constituent that I thought of was again a lone-parent mother who phoned me in desperation, saying that her utilities were going to be cut off because she was unable to pay the utility bills. And she’s not alone. We have recommended and had to draw upon the CFRN Good Neighbour fund to try to bail out constituents who find themselves in a similar situation more times than I care to recall. I wondered, as she listened to the throne speech, what she would think of the lack of any mention of a deregulation plan and modifications that might be made to it that would help the province return to utility rates that were affordable, but the throne speech was strangely silent.

Another constituent phoned, a young man who was mired in debt, postsecondary school debt and private debt that he had added to that to try to complete his program, and through some unfortunate circumstances healthwise found himself in some difficulty meeting all the obligations. I wondered, as he listened to the plans for increasing funding for postsecondary education, how he felt about nothing being said about tuition and nothing in terms of support for students with respect to loans and the kinds of difficulties that they find themselves in.

A third constituent came in with his son and brought with him their invoices from their automobile insurance company and tried to make the case – at least we’re looking into it for them – that they were facing some unwarranted increases in their rates. They were getting little sympathy from the insurance company and found themselves facing the possibility of not being able to drive their vehicles. Again, if you looked at the throne speech, for that constituent the speech was strangely silent. I guess I wonder why the two pocketbook issues that seem to be front and foremost, utilities and auto insurance, were strangely missing from the Speech from the Throne.

The K to 12 class-size proposals leave me a little concerned because as I read the throne speech carefully, it talks about regulations. I hope that’s not going to be the solution for the Learning Commission recommendation that K to 3 students be in classes of 17 or less and the other recommendations with respect to class size, that there won’t be a set of regulations put in place that lays on the board the responsibility, for instance, for saying that there shan’t be more than 30 students in a high school class and then leaves it up to board to try and figure out how that’s going to work without the additional resources that are going to be needed. I had looked forward to that reference to class sizes to be accompanied with some recommendation in respect to funding increases, but it wasn’t, and I’ll watch very carefully for that link to be made when the spring budget is presented.

As you go through the recommendations, I think, as I said, that for many Albertans and a growing number of Albertans the throne speech presented a different world and not one that they’re very familiar with. Again, I think it’s unfortunate at this time in our history, when we are so blessed with resources, that there isn’t a huge attempt to make sure that all Albertans are benefiting from the richness of those resources. It’s something that’s troubled me, and I think even more troubling, Mr. Speaker, is the dismissal of these people and the growing feeling, it seems to me, that they are somehow responsible for their own plight and that whatever happens to them is just too bad and that the greater community has no responsibility or if not no responsibility, then minimal responsibility for what happens to them. As I say, that’s a feeling I’ve had for the last number of years, that that’s a growing perception among some Albertans.

As I look back at the speech itself, the fact that base funding for postsecondary institutions is going to be increased is going to be welcomed, certainly, by those institutions. I think the proof in the pudding will be, of course, in the budget in terms of how much it is. For a long time I wished and hoped and advocated that the government work with those institutions and the federal government to bring in a long-term plan for financing postsecondary schools in this province.

I don’t think we can continue the way we are. If you believe the president of the University of Alberta – and he presents the figures to support it – 20 years ago a student’s dollar in tuition was matched by $10 from government sources. Today a dollar put in by a student is matched by only $2.34 from the government. There’s been a tremendous drop-off of financial support for our postsecondary institutions, Mr. Speaker, and I submit that it can’t continue, that we’re going to have institutions in crisis and that the pressure on students for increased tuition and the pressure to try to access outside funding is going to reach a breaking point where these institutions are not going to be able to cover their costs.

If you look at one area alone, utilities, the massive growth in those utilities over the past number of years, the expenses for those institutions are not going down. That’s why my call for a long-term plan for funding for postsecondary institutions in the province. As I said, I think that whether the government recognizes it or not, it’s eventually going to have to happen.

A similar thing may be said about the K to 12 system. I find it a little irksome, Mr. Speaker, that the government in the speech talks about giving boards the authority to spend money as they see fit. It was this government that took that authority away when they started enveloping money. So it is a little irksome to say the least. But just to say, “Now we won’t have an envelope for administration, and now we won’t have an envelope for instruction; now you can spend it any way you want,” isn’t going to solve their financial problems if there’s not enough money. It’s the total money in the envelope that’s going to be very important. I don’t think tinkering with the funding framework or giving boards more freedom with respect to how they spend it addresses the fundamental problem for the K to 12 system, and that is that no one knows what it costs to educate a youngster in the K to 12 system.

Adequacy has not been addressed. I give the government credit for addressing equity in the early 90s, when they addressed the problem of some wealthy boards with a large tax base being able to finance their schools at a much higher rate than school districts who found themselves in jurisdictions where there was a smaller tax base to draw upon. The government’s solution was to take all the money in and then redistribute it across the province on a per-pupil basis, which is a commendable step in terms of equity.

But equity is not enough, Mr. Speaker. Equity has to be coupled with adequacy. It’s no good saying, yes, we have a system that’s equitably funded if everyone is equally poor. I think that at least for the large urban boards in this province, those that educate 75 to 80 per cent of the youngsters, that’s exactly what has happened. They find themselves not being able to access the resources they need to provide programs for the youngsters that they’re expected to serve.

The recommendation from the Learning Commission that would have given them some taxing authority, as distasteful as that was, Mr. Speaker, would have at least given them some flexibility. Whether it would have led to the situation we had in the ’90s before the changes were made, where that taxing became unacceptable to communities, it's hard to tell, but at least the proposal from the Learning Commission was designed to give them some access to funds.

But again the problem is adequacy, and our neighbours south of the border have had to face the problem of adequacy because they've been forced to by the courts. You have a number of American states where parents have gone to the courts and said, "Look; the state is not providing adequate funds for my youngster," giving that youngster the program that he should have, and the courts have said to those states: then you better revise your funding formulas and your funding frameworks so that adequacy is addressed.

Of course, that raises the whole question of adequacy. What is an adequate education? You'll have states like Wyoming who have said that schools must prepare every youngster to be eligible for a postsecondary program on graduation. That could be vocational. It could be university. It could be an institute. It could be a whole variety of things. But there's the obligation on the school system there of an adequate education. It's one that prepares every youngster for that world when they leave 12th grade.

Other states have approached it quite differently and come up with different measures of what they consider adequate, but it's something that we haven't even looked at in this province. It's been raised. We held a town hall meeting, and I know some government members were there. At least one member of the Learning Commission was at that meeting, yet again we see a throne speech with nothing in terms of adequacy being addressed.

A number of other proposals in the throne speech are going to cause a lot of discussion. I've already mentioned the centennial education savings fund, and as much as I welcome any kind of help for parents and for students in terms of financing their education, I think it may have some unfortunate consequences. One of them is to signal to parents: you're the one that has to pick up the costs for postsecondary education. That's fine for those parents and those students where that's a possibility, but there are a vast number of students in this province where that's not the case. There's a television ad on by one of the insurance companies the other night promoting an educational savings plan and indicating what tuition is going to cost 10, 20 years down the road. Astronomical. I think it's a well-intentioned plan that's going to have some unintended consequences, as I said.

I think the other thing that it seems to do is to pick winners and losers: those people in the province that can afford those kinds of programs for their youngsters and those that can't. A third thing that it does is that it takes away the pressure for the government to really seriously examine postsecondary funding. Again, I think that's a task that the government needs to address in the very near future.

So as much as some may applaud the centennial education savings, I think we'd be naive if we didn't realize that it's going to have varied effects and some policy effects in terms of the future of the province.

I wanted to touch briefly on the postsecondary degree-granting proposal in the speech, Mr. Speaker, and the move of the government to open up degree granting. It's something that I support, and I think any move that can be taken to open doors to widen the opportunity for students to have access to degrees is worthy of support. I think the major roadblock for this in the past, of course, has been fears of quality. Are the degrees that are going to be offered from some institutions going to be of the quality that one would expect from a university or a college in this province? We have the Campus Alberta quality council which is going to be charged with sanctioning those degrees.

I think it's a move, as long as it's well monitored – I remember serving on a committee that looked at an institution in the province that wanted to be given degree-granting status and the close scrutiny that they were given in terms of their library collections, the qualifications of their staff, the condition of their laboratories. Those things were looked at extremely carefully, and if that kind of standard remains in place, then I think that this will be a good move in the province.

The fear is that the opposite will happen. We have had experience with that in the province already, not with degree granting but with some of the diploma granting, the private institutions granting diplomas. We've had a couple of those fail and leave students stranded. We've had representations from groups of students from some of those institutions really concerned about the quality of instruction, the kinds of resources that they have to work with, and how much the final paper that they were going to get at the end of the program was really worth. As far as I know, there are still no standards in place, and there is no way that they can be enforced. I had one student tell me that the instructor was two pages ahead of him with respect to instruction in the computer course that he was taking, and that's just not good enough.

I think we can and should at this time raise legitimate concerns about the quality of those degrees. But I think it would be great for our students to be able to access a degree and not have to move to Edmonton or to Calgary but to get it elsewhere in the province and to get a good quality program that was recognized elsewhere. Right now for students in some parts of this province there is no choice, and hopefully this will open the doors to that.

There has been a comment about the school wellness program and the daily physical education. I think the research on daily physical education is pretty well founded. It has an impact on student achievement, to say nothing of their physical well-being. It's been done elsewhere and probably long overdue. The concerns raised, of course, are the preparation and the resources to put that kind of program in place. Are schools going to have the facilities where that daily physical education program may be carried out? Are they going to have the resources for people to run quality programs that youngsters deserve?

I think the last item I'd like to comment on, Mr. Speaker, is the centennial capital plan. The reaction to me by people in terms of the infrastructure plans is confusion. It seems that money is announced then reannounced, that jurisdictions make plans and those plans have to be changed or those plans have to be delayed, and I think that that's unfortunate. It seems to me that it is one area that badly needs attention, badly needs resources, and the kind of confusion and the uncertainty that exists around the plans, I think, has to be dealt with and dealt with directly. I think that, for instance, there should be some limit on how many times you announce funds for a project. It does no one any good when they're repeatedly announced and then they end up being delayed or not completed at all. So I would make a plea for the centennial capital plan to be clear and straightforward and carried out as quickly and as carefully as we would hope those plans would be.

I'll just conclude, Mr. Speaker, returning to what I started out with, and that's this notion of two different worlds. I give credit to the throne speech where there is going to be assistance for families that are facing violent situations. I think the concern for bullying and its impact on children, trying to protect youngsters from the Internet – these are good initiatives, but they are certainly among the minority proposals in the Speech from the Throne.

Like the previous speaker, Mr. Speaker, I too have a grandson. Mine's four years old, and his name, too, happens to be Matthew. I look in this throne speech and just wonder: 14 years down the road is he going to have the opportunity to access a postsecondary education? Will his high school experience be the kind of experience we would want for all Alberta children? I'm afraid I leave the throne speech with more questions than answers.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29 kicks in. Anybody have any questions for the hon. member?

There being none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to have this opportunity to speak to the Speech from the Throne delivered by Her Honour, the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, Lieutenant Governor, at the opening of the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature, Tuesday, February 17.

Mr. Speaker, let me begin my remarks today by commending Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor Lois Hole for her delivery of the Speech from the Throne with her characteristic warmth and humour. For the past four years the Lieutenant Governor has fulfilled the duties of her office with grace, generosity, and, yes, with the hugs for which she is world famous. Over the past year she has shown remarkable courage in facing enormous personal difficulties and health problems. Through it all her characteristic good cheer and work ethic have been an inspiration not only to members on all sides of this House but, indeed, to all Albertans. Thank you, Your Honour. One thing the Premier and I do agree on is for her to remain as Lieutenant Governor through Alberta's centennial year and for as long beyond as she sees fit.

Had the Lieutenant Governor written the throne speech, I suspect it would have read differently, Mr. Speaker. But the throne speech is only read by the Lieutenant Governor; it is written by the government and sets out its agenda for the next year.

Mr. Speaker, I smell an election. It's almost as sure as the first sign of spring that as this Conservative government enters the fourth year of its electoral mandate, the purse strings get loosened, and Albertans are asked to forget what they were put through the previous three years. Albertans are told to forget about the fiasco of electricity deregulation that had drained $6 million out of their pockets. They're told to forget about the highest auto insurance premiums in western Canada. They're told to forget about student tuition that has tripled in the last dozen years. Albertans get three years of Mr. Hyde, and, presto, the year before an election they get Dr. Jekyll. We need stable, predictable, multiyear funding, but what we get is the government's Jekyll-and-Hyde approach: turn on the taps before an election and turn them off afterwards.

Much was made in yesterday's throne speech about an education savings plan under which the government proposed to provide a $500 contribution to children born in 2005 and beyond. The question must be asked, though: is introducing this kind of voucher-style system the most effective way to fund postsecondary education? I think not. Only about 40 per cent of Alberta parents are able to afford to set up a savings plan for their children's postsecondary education. How will this plan assist the 60 per cent of Albertans who lack the financial means to participate?

Mr. Speaker, we need a tuition freeze, not a half-baked savings scheme that will only begin, presumably, to benefit students starting in the year 2023 – eighteen years of wait for even those ones who are fortunate to start receiving this money. Is this what the Conservative government means by a 20-year plan: pay high tuition now and hope for the best 20 years down the road? It's today's students that have seen their tuition fees triple in the past dozen years. For little more than the cost of this education savings plan the government, if it chose to do so, could immediately freeze tuition fees for every student in university, public college, or technical institute today. Unless we tackle today's sky-high tuition fees, which continue to rise at two or three times the rate of inflation, we are saddling the current generation of students with a lifetime of debt.

In commenting on the government's education savings scheme, Shirley Barg, president of the Council of Alberta University Students, described the RESP strategy as bad policy and went on to say, and I briefly quote: a flat, across-the-board giveaway like this program is about the election, not about postsecondary education. This is indicative of the chronic government underfunding of universities. Albertans won't be fooled. End of quote.

Brett Bergie, executive director of the Alberta College and Technical Institute Students' Executive Council, points out that the program will not benefit anyone born prior to 2005, which is grossly unfair to young people facing sky-high tuition fees now and in future years.

Mr. Speaker, this Jekyll-and-Hyde approach is also evident when it comes to support for K to 12 education. This past September this government laid off 1,000 teachers, causing class sizes to skyrocket. Yet in yesterday's throne speech the government undergoes an election-year conversion by promising to hire more teachers and make class sizes more manageable. In the throne speech the government has the audacity to say, and I quote, the Learning Commission's recommendation to reduce class size is already being implemented, unquote.

Well, tell that to the students of Edmonton public, which lost 450 teachers last September. As a result, 25 per cent of K to grade 3 students are in classes of more than 25; 70 per cent of K to 3 children are in classes of more than 20 students. Class sizes are up significantly in every grade. Try telling these students and their parents that the Learning Commission's recommendations to reduce class sizes are already being implemented. These students and their parents will see such a statement for what it is: pre-election rhetoric from a government that has failed to deliver on its claim that K to 12 education is a top priority.

What about seniors, Mr. Speaker? There was no mention of seniors in the Premier's TV infomercial two weeks ago, and once again seniors barely rated a mention in yesterday's throne speech. There's a vague mention in the throne speech about the government setting up a new process to ensure that long-term care facilities are accountable for the accommodation services they provide. Well, the frail and elderly in Alberta's long-term care centres, who recently faced a hike of anywhere from 38 to 50 per cent in their accommodation rates, must be sleeping easier knowing this. Does the throne speech commit to rolling back some or all of the 50 per cent rate hike? No, it does not.

What about eliminating seniors' health care premiums as a first step to phasing out this regressive and unfair health care tax for all Albertans? Now, that would be a concrete initiative to help the province's seniors. But is scrapping seniors' health care premiums mentioned in the throne speech? No, it's not, Mr. Speaker. That is because the government's priority is not the province's seniors. It is continued corporate tax cuts and royalty giveaways.

The situation facing our rural communities does receive several mentions in the throne speech, Mr. Speaker. A vague mention is made of a comprehensive research program focusing on BSE. While lacking in details, this sounds like a worthwhile initiative which may do some good in the long run but does very little to address the looming farm crisis in the short term.

After recovering late last year, the prices for both finished cattle and feeder cattle are once again in free fall. In some cases cattle are fetching only half of what they were last year. The seriousness of the situation facing our families and our rural communities cannot be overstated, Mr. Speaker, yet not everyone is suffering. Prices in our supermarkets have barely budged. Profits at Tyson Foods and Cargill, which process 90 per cent of Alberta's cattle, are up, despite the hardship being experienced by our farmers and ranchers.

What else isn't in the throne speech? The throne speech makes no mention of the fact that Alberta has the highest auto insurance rates of any western Canadian province. The throne speech makes no mention of the fact that this province has the highest power bills in Canada because of the Tory government's bungled deregulation scheme. No mention is made of a plan to increase Alberta minimum wage, which is the lowest of any Canadian province and, at $5.90 per hour, has not been adjusted for almost five years.

The bottom line, Mr. Speaker, is that there's not much in the throne speech that offers a better deal to middle-class and working Albertans except for vague promises to ramp up spending in areas where the government is vulnerable on the eve of an election. Perhaps all the government's rhetoric about a 20-year plan is an excuse not to deal with the problems of the present. The problems of the present are piling up: mad cow and a looming rural crisis; the highest electricity bills in Canada; the highest auto insurance rates in western Canada; a refusal to scrap health care premiums, which would be good medicine for everyone; royalty giveaways instead of meaningful action to reduce class sizes; the nickelling, diming, loonie-ing, and toonie-ing of our seniors; subsidies for the horse racing industry instead of a break for students on postsecondary education fees.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, while the rest of us have to worry about rising power bills, auto insurance premiums, class sizes, tuition fees, and long-term care centre fee hikes, the government's priority in the throne speech is to go on a 20-year blue-skying exercise in the hope that the government's poor track record in dealing with current challenges will be overlooked. Well, this doesn't wash with Albertans, and it doesn't wash with the New Democrats.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29; any questions for the hon. member?

There being none, the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, it's a pleasure to be able to respond to Her Honour's Speech from the Throne. Like many Albertans, I have admired the strength and compassion with which the Lieutenant Governor has undertaken her duties over the past year, and it was a joy to once again listen to her deliver the throne speech.

Mr. Speaker, I am an Albertan by choice. Back in 1980 when my husband was transferred to Alberta, we hesitated to accept the job placement. After all, Alberta? It was too far from home. But we had heard how beautiful the Rockies were, and we laughed with a friend who had visited Olds and spent a few evenings at the old Penholder. Maybe Alberta was an okay place to live. Well, we were young and full of adventure, so why not?

When we arrived, it became all too clear to us that this was home. It had called to us, and we had come home. This was indeed the land of opportunity and majestic mountains and fly-fishing streams unequalled. It was the land of rednecks, where you were not judged by what your family was but by who you were. This was the land of promises: work hard, work smart, and you can make all your dreams come true. Thank you, Alberta, for making my dreams come true.

I can speak for my husband, who is also very thankful for having his dreams come true. So our province moves into its second century. We need to have a plan that will keep this province strong so that the opportunity to work hard, work smart, and make your dreams come true is there for our children and all our grandchildren to come.

In my view, the foundation of any strong province or country has been the individuals and the families who reside there. It is interesting that the teachings of Aristotle, an ancient Greek philosopher, are as relevant today as they were more than 2,000 years ago. Aristotle's philosophical view of a strong nation was this: you start building a strong nation with strong and healthy family units; when that foundation is secure, it creates healthy communities, and those communities come together to create healthy nations or, in our case, a healthy province. Aristotle had one major concern, and that was that should any of the family or the community be corrupted, the entire nation suffers.

So as MLAs, if you want to keep our province strong and free from corruption, then we must keep our families strong. We face the challenge of protecting and enhancing not just our province but the lives of those who reside within our communities. It is our duty to listen to our citizens, to hear their aspirations, and to work to maintain the supports that will help them to achieve their full potential.

For Conservatives this doesn't mean that we become the centre of families. It can't ever mean that. What it means is that the government takes its rightful role as the stewards of a clean, healthy, and safe environment and as facilitators of programs that help those families who need help. It means that we undertake our duty to maintain a strong education system, solid environmental standards that guarantee clean air and clean drinking water, and finally programs designed to aid those who are at a disadvantage, including children in abusive homes, persons with developmental disabilities, seniors who face health and income problems, the homeless, and single parents working hard to raise their families. Just as in every other constituency in Alberta we face all of these challenges in my home constituency of Red Deer-North.

As I think about where Alberta has come during the past 100 years, I often find myself doing so by reflecting on Red Deer's growth in its 100-plus years. Red Deer started out as a small village on the Alberta prairie. It, like many villages in pioneer days, was focused on agricultural pursuits. Red Deer was inhabited by determined men and women who worked tirelessly to build the sort of community that could sustain them through good times and bad. I imagine that when they were told they were going to Alberta, they thought, just like me: Alberta? It was too far from home. But they came anyway because they sensed the opportunity and the promise that was here in this land. I think those pioneers would be proud of their city and proud of our province were they able to see it today. We have kept the promises they made to future generations.

Red Deer has grown from being simply an agricultural hub to being a centre for oil field and gas services, food processing, manufacturing, and retail. We've got a college that is the pride of central Alberta. We've got great workers and hard-working volunteers. We've got strong community values, and like other communities in the Calgary-Edmonton corridor Red Deer has continued to grow, showing itself as a true economic engine and a vital part of the great western tiger. We have much to be proud of.

Yet with that growth has come several problems, and it is these problems that cause me great concern. My focus lately has been on the issue of community safety. Like others who live in Red Deer, I find that our city is in a sort of in-between phase. We all want and appreciate the small city feel, the closeness of our neighbours, the feeling of safety, the promise of lifestyle and community that gives its young every opportunity to succeed and become the future pillars of Red Deer and of Alberta, but with our huge growth we also find the emergence of gang activity, drugs, family abuse, and violent crime. These elements are eroding the solid foundation of our families and therefore our communities.

I feel comfortable speaking for every upstanding citizen of our city and our province and saying: I want them out. We've had too many families ripped apart by the violence and terrorism of drugs. We've had too many families ripped apart by the terrorism of domestic violence. We've had too many families ripped apart by addictions.

So with our growth and prosperity come the enemies that would destroy us. When these enemies weaken our families, they weaken our province and our country. Aristotle was right. Should any of the family or the community be corrupted, the whole nation suffers, and therefore it becomes our duty to ensure that all Albertans are safe and protected.

Her Honour outlined in the throne speech that in May the province will conduct a round-table on family violence and bullying. These efforts will help communities and government partners find ways to break the devastating cycle of family violence. We will fight crime and drugs through changes to government funding for policing. There will be a new funding formula for policing that will increase the dollars to deliver this very critical service. Special police units have already been assigned to defeat the gangs that seek to control drugs and prostitution in this province, and we look to AADAC to help fight addictions.

I share with Her Honour a commitment to a better and brighter education system. I share with Her Honour and with many of my caucus colleagues the desire for our government to make as strong a commitment as possible to the education of preschool- and elementary school-age citizens, so much so that I believe our government should take on the aim of ensuring that every child in Alberta can read by the time he or she is eight years old. In fact, we should adopt a policy that guarantees that every child who is able is reading by the end of grade 3. Reading is the basic building block of a good education. One of the four pillars of the 20-year plan is leading in learning. Let's lead in learning by guaranteeing that all children will read by grade 3.

A good educational system is the foundation of a strong nation. During my trip to Bangladesh in October, when I attended the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association conference, I saw a poor nation with great potential. The Bangladeshi people were very friendly and welcoming. They had fought for their independence in the early '70s, and they are going to build a strong nation one day. The majority of people in Bangladesh live in poverty with inadequate food, very little health care, inadequate housing, and a questionable educational system. As I observed the people in the countryside around me, I asked myself how the problems in Bangladesh could be solved and what would be the quickest and most effective way to bring these beautiful people to our higher standard of living. I came to the realization that the only way the quality of life in Bangladesh could be improved for everyone was through education. Education is the foundation of a strong and prosperous nation. For Canada to be a strong and prosperous nation, there must be strong and prosperous provinces and territories.

In November 2003 I was given the honour of being appointed co-chair to the government MLA Committee on Strengthening Alberta's Role in Confederation. It has been a great pleasure to travel to the communities and towns in Alberta to hear what the people have to say. While we hear about an Alberta police force, an Alberta pension plan, and collecting our own taxes, we also hear about the gun registry fiasco, the Canadian Wheat Board monopoly, and infrastructure needs like roads and regional water and sewage systems. We have also felt the pain of hard-working, desperate farmers whose livelihoods are affected by mad cow disease. I have felt the pain of good and loyal citizens being labelled criminals because their guns are not registered.

The first of the four pillars described in the throne speech is unleashing innovation. We need research and innovation to help us prove to the world that our beef and our food supply in Alberta is safe. We need innovation to help us strengthen the role of this province in Confederation. When we make this province stronger, we make all provinces stronger. I am receiving e-mails from all over Canada saying: go for it Alberta; we are right behind you.

The four pillars of the 20-year plan that Her Honour spoke of are the four pillars of promise. We need to have research and development point us in the right directions. We will lead in learning. We will compete in a global marketplace because this world is getting smaller and smaller and we are a big part of the world's breadbasket. We will go beyond wheat and raw materials to develop centres of manufacturing and export. The fourth pillar will follow from the first three: to make Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit.

There is no doubt in my mind that Alberta is the best place to live and work, and we welcome all visitors. Alberta is the land of the pancake breakfast and the beef barbecue served up with friendly faces and cowboy hats, and if this province is calling you home, as it called to my family, then we offer you goodwill and opportunity. Welcome. But when you come to make it your home, then give it all you have, because you will be expected to return that welcome and to protect the heritage and rights of all Albertans and Canadians.

I agree with Her Honour when she states that the many new projects and initiatives to be launched in the coming year are much more than the result of careful fiscal planning. They are also a testament to the remarkable energy, dedication, and forward-looking spirit of Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans understand that of those to whom much is given, much is expected. We will fulfill those expectations as we take on the challenges of the future and make Alberta's approaching second century even more successful than the province's first hundred years.

Aristotle was right when he taught that a strong nation rests on a foundation of strong families. This is the promise of Alberta, a province that offers an economy with jobs and safe communities so that your family may grow up strong and free, strong and free to dream and to succeed, a strong province that offers a good education to make your dreams possible and a health care system to keep your body strong and free.

On my way home late at night when the northern lights dance in the winter sky, I pause to watch the beauty and the majesty. I breathe in the crisp air as it fills my lungs with life and energy, and I'm compelled to say a humble prayer of thanks: thanks for the many gifts that I have been given, and thanks for giving me the opportunity to help make this province strong so that I may be able to pass those gifts on to others.

My final thanks is to the people of this great province. Thank you, Alberta, for all that you have done for my family and me.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29 kicks in. Any questions for the hon. member?

There being none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne is always an interesting one, and I listened with great respect and fondness to my hon. colleagues opposite put their feelings, their passions on the record.

It's always nice to hear what people really believe in and want to promote.

I'm picking up a theme as I listen to a number of them today, as though the Lieutenant Governor has written the speech, and we know that it's a quaint tradition that we regard it that way, but in truth it's meant to be – and it is – the government's plan, setting forward its blueprint as read into the record by the Lieutenant Governor. I've listened to a number of very kind remarks about the Lieutenant Governor and her place in the hearts of Albertans, and I think they're all absolutely true and they're all heartfelt, and I would add my voice to that. She has been a wonderful representative for all of us, representing the Queen to the people of Alberta, but I'm sure that also goes the other way, representing Albertans back to the Queen. We all appreciate the heart and soul that she has brought to this position and made it a very human position, and we admire her strength in pursuing that.

We are looking at the Speech from the Throne, and it is the government's blueprint: vague, no new ideas, and once again telling Albertans to lower their expectations, which I always find really interesting coming from this government. It's not about good news and let's look forward; it's about how you need to expect less and how things are going to be a little tougher. Always interesting.

The one thing that I did see as a theme this year – and perhaps the Minister of Environment has been reading some books or having some influence with his colleagues. I can certainly see the three Rs of recycling coming into play here, so we have reuse, reduce, and recycle. Certainly, we have reuse when I look at what's being proposed around the Alberta workfare. That's a reuse of a program that we had in place here in Alberta a good 15 years ago: the Alberta Works program to “help clients assess their strengths and needs,” where they go in and you sort of do a little test and they tell you, you know, that you should go off and be a doctor and you should be a ditchdigger and that kind of thing. So here we have it again, Alberta government recycling, in this case reusing an old program.

We have the reduce factor involved here as well as we tell university students that they need to reduce their economic viability with continued high tuition costs and associated costs of trying to get postsecondary education in this province. We have some recycling of some platitudes and ideas when we talk about what's in this particular throne speech for seniors and the usual, well, yes, we respect the dignity and uphold the independence of seniors.

Overall, this speech sounded very much like last year's and the year's before that. I actually had one fellow who hadn't been to listen to a throne speech in a couple of years pull me aside and say: you know, this could have been the same speech. The only thing that was different was that Martha and Henry were no longer involved in it, but other than that, he really couldn't see much difference and wondered if it was possible that it could be the same speech. I hope not, but it's possible, I suppose.

Part of what I'm noticing from this government is that since paying off the net debt in 1999, it's lost its unifier, its glue, its focus, its absolute adherence to a vision that it had, and it's all over the place now. Some members of caucus say: spend money. Some other members of caucus say: don't spend money. Some people say: go forward. Some people say: go back. So it's all over the place, and I think that the throne speech reflects that. That unifying focus has gone, and there's a lot of dissipation of energy.

When I look more specifically at what's being laid out here, I think I am most profoundly disappointed by the flagship bill or the flagship idea, the centennial education savings plan. Talk about reuse, recycle, reduce. Once again we have the government picking winners and losers. Everybody born this date forward gets to be a winner; anybody else, you're on your own. We'd had so many assurances that that was not going to happen any more, but that's exactly what's happening. Honestly, if you really wanted to be helping the young people and families in Alberta today, then put that money into the universities and the postsecondary educational institutions and reduce the tuition fee across the board for all of those students. That would have an immediate effect on not only those students but their families and any children they're going to have. That would be far fairer than anything that's being contemplated here.

What do I mean by fair? Well, the government says that it plans to offer this $500 initial amount of money to anyone, any family or parent, that can open a registered education savings plan for their children. Well, if you start to look into this, which I have done, you in fact have to invest some money to get one of these going. You have to buy a minimum number of units, and I suppose, depending on the banking institution or your own tax status, that probably has some effect on what the bottom line is. But you don't get into these things for $10 or $25. You're looking at a much more substantial investment. The figure, I've been told, is a hundred dollars, and I'm having that confirmed from someone across the way who would know: a hundred dollars to start it.

So what the government has really said is that for those families out there who can afford to put a hundred dollars into a registered education savings plan, then we will give you $500. Okay. Then my question here is: what about those families who with a new baby born in 2005 do not have a hundred dollars to put aside into this registered education savings plan? Do they not get the $500 then? Do they not get to participate in this? Sounds like it. So once again winners and losers. People who are wealthy enough to be able to put aside that hundred dollars get to enjoy the government's largesse. Not wealthy enough? “Sorry. Bye. You're not part of the Alberta advantage.” Back to the winners and losers theme.

I find this a gimmick bill, and this is the biggest disappointment for me in what's being talked about in the government's blueprint. I would like to see the government follow through on lofty ideals about helping students. Well, good; then reduce that tuition. That will help students right now and for a long time to come. But picking those winners and losers and especially setting up families to fail with new babies in 2005 – I'm really disappointed.

Here's another way. You really want to help students? You really want to help young families? Well, the Learning Commission came out with 95 recommendations. The government has already said that they're going to institute 84 of them, but no money has been invested in actually implementing those 84 Learning Commission recommendations, so let's see the money. Invest that money now. Let's get them happening. Let's make it happen. Thus far we've got, “Yeah, yeah, we sure do agree,” but no money that's going to actually implement them.

One of the other things that struck me as I went through this was that I have a concern around BSE, which is of enormous consequence to everyone in Alberta. I represent an inner-city riding. Yes, we recognize as well what kind of impact this has already had in Alberta and could have in Alberta. My concern when I read what is in the Speech from the Throne is that I see an attempt to control the message, to spin the message out rather than concrete plans about how it is going to achieve what's being asked from us from those international markets to restore our credibility, to restore our position in the world.

You know, the talk about the single case of BSE and then later there's the second – well, it doesn't say: second case. It just talks about the “single case in the United States connected to Alberta.” I heard someone on CBC who was really laying out some of the things that are possible and that are being asked for by other countries that could be purchasing our beef, things like the exact labelling of where it comes from and the idea of marketing beef, in the way that wine is marketed, from certain regions of Alberta to help restore that credibility. Testing is a huge issue. I don't see that in here. What are we doing about testing? I don't see where that is. So I don't know what the government is trying to tell us with this. All I can see is the massaging of a message, but I don't see the concrete plans to move us out of this.

There's a discussion about skilled workers and the need to strengthen and enhance apprenticeship programs. At the same time it's talking about attracting highly skilled immigrants to the Alberta workforce. Well, let's face it: in most countries that you would go to that already have a highly skilled workforce, they're not going to move from where they are to come to Alberta. So you're actually looking into markets and into countries where they are facing much more stress financially or far fewer opportunities. So really what we're talking about here is cheaper labour rather than more skilled labour, and I am interested to see how the government looks forward to working with and strengthening the workers and particularly the unionized workers in the province as compared to bringing in cheaper labour from somewhere else and how those labourers are going to be treated.

Policing. You know, I'm not going to complain when I see an about-face by the government when it's an about-face that comes to a position that I have been championing. I know that in the draft police report that we actually saw, it specifically said that they would not be looking at funding municipalities, and now in this throne speech they seem to be saying that the government will be funding or considering a different funding formula for police forces. I'm happy to see that. Once again show me the money. What does this actually mean? We're not getting a very clear indication of what would happen. Implement "a new funding formula for policing which will significantly increase the dollars to deliver this important service." That's all it says. So again it's a very vague plan. Let's see the actual money and what that means here.

We've got a number of municipalities and municipal organizations that have indicated, you know, that they have been squeezed by the province on the issue of police funding. The Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics has indicated that the province is way behind in funding policing. Saskatchewan pays twice as much per capita on policing, and Newfoundland spends four times as much per person on policing as does Alberta. The same Centre for Justice Statistics has indicated that the province's municipalities pay the highest percentage of the provincial policing costs at 82 per cent, and some communities like Lac La Biche, High Prairie, High Level, Edson, St. Paul, Cardston, Valleyview, and others are paying nearly 50 per cent of their municipal revenue for policing. So we look forward to seeing the money there and what that actually means.

There's also a discussion about continuing a centennial infrastructure program here, and that I am having problems with. What I'm really seeing here is that the regular maintenance of infrastructure and upgrading of infrastructure that's needed in this province, that should be planned for and budgeted for all the way along, that this province has failed so miserably in in the last 10 years has created an infrastructure deficit. They're now going to plow money in there under the guise of the centennial project. What they should be doing all the way along, what they should be doing as prudent managers and stewards of the assets that all Albertans own, they're now going to gussy it up, call it the centennial capital project, and do the work they should have been doing anyway. We're not getting anything, you know, extraordinarily new here, and I don't see any money, and the end of this fiscal year and the period of time that this throne speech anticipates – there's no money forthcoming for communities to implement centennial plans.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to join those who have spoken in a positive manner in light of what was said in yesterday's Speech from the Throne. I find it most oppressive listening to those who speak from the school of negativity. I have found that the speech yesterday which was read by Her Honour, who is a constituent of mine in the community of St. Albert, was, indeed, one that was full of optimism, and as the speech read, it spoke to the Alberta spirit of generosity, the spirit of strength and compassion, and certainly to the optimism that is in the hearts of so many Albertans, particularly those, I might add, in my community.

I'd like to speak about and pay tribute to, of course, Her Honour for a moment because I do find her to be a woman of true dignity and the embodiment of the common touch. She has presented to us a spirit of Albertans that is very, very honourable, and unlike the Member for Edmonton-Centre I do feel that the tradition is not a quaint one. I believe it is an honourable tradition for Her Honour to read the Speech from the Throne, which is, indeed, not only the blueprint but the vision that we as a government have for the people of this province in the years to come. That vision is embodied in the registered education savings plan for children as it was detailed yesterday in the Speech from the Throne. I believe it is the cornerstone of all that we are envisioning for building the strength of this province as we move into our second century.

I couldn't help but note as well that it is the Speech from the Throne for the 99th year of this province, and 99 has a special meaning, if you will, and is a very lucky number, I think, for those of us who live in the area of the capital city and, indeed, right across the province because of the hockey player who skated with that wonderful number and brought great fame and encouragement and delight to the people of Alberta.

But I want to return specifically, of course, to the sentiments that have been expressed and to the vision that has been articulated in the Speech from the Throne. The four pillars of the plan to take us and lead us and initiate us into the second century of this province are "unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit."

I want to speak, first of all, about the unleashing innovation. In the speech Her Honour spoke of the incredible emphasis and that we will be directing our resources to research as it will be done in this province, research both pure and applied. It will give us opportunity to create new economic opportunities or circumstances out of our traditional strengths. In particular, I find great delight in the creation of the life sciences institute which will co-ordinate research as it relates to much of what life presents us with for our challenges, from water and a water strategy to agriculture, indeed, to health issues and everything else that encompasses the quality of life that we hope to strengthen for our province.

The second pillar mentioned was leading in learning. Of course, for the people of the constituency of St. Albert that I'm honoured to represent here in this Assembly it means that we can continue our journey of facilitating for everyone the ability to reach their full potential, whether that means my friend Sarah whose abilities are challenged and encouraged every day in Vital Grandin school or whether it means any one of the 284 Rutherford scholarship recipients from St. Albert over this past year. The important thing is that we will lead everyone and provide the circumstances, the encouragement, and those opportunities for everyone to reach their full potential. This is a value that my community has expressed often.

I should speak a little bit about the preschool programs, the early intervention and the Head Start programs that currently exist in my community. There are many volunteers and qualified teachers who work with young children to enable them and to create a climate of readiness to learn so that those individuals who might have been somewhat shortchanged by either circumstances or ability will be able to be ready with everyone else to reap the benefits of a really remarkable education system.

But the topic in yesterday's Speech from the Throne that did excite me greatly was the postsecondary level opportunities as mentioned. As far as postsecondary facilities go in my community, we do have the NAIT/Fairview College St. Albert campus facility. Also, not only for the students who attend that facility in the community but for the thousands who attend or learn cyberly from postsecondary institutions around the world, the statements and the commitment in yesterday's Speech from the Throne speak to our value that we highly, highly regard of investing in the future, investing in our own lives, and, indeed, investing in the knowledge base that we believe resides and will grow in our community.

Also, I'm particularly encouraged by the ability for more qualifying postsecondary institutions to offer degree-granting programs, and I, too, believe that this is an opportunity where students around the province will be able to perhaps stay closer to home while they raise their families, work at their jobs, and receive a degree at the same time. The Campus Alberta quality council will indeed make sure that those degrees are valuable and recognized around the world. You can't have one without the other, so it is opportunity and quality control.

Competing in a global marketplace is the third pillar. I want to say that what I have been hearing from Albertans as I've had the opportunity to travel around the province is a desire to assist in this whole movement called value added. It was best expressed to me the other evening and to a group of us who were doing some hearings in Wainwright, Alberta, by a farmer who spoke about the crop of oats. In fact, I know a number of landowners in my community who do own some of the finest quality oat crops grown around this province. This farmer from around Wainwright mentioned that what he really wanted to do – and he stated the obvious – was not only continue to grow his quality oats in Alberta, but he didn't see why we had to ship them to Ontario where the cereal was manufactured and packaged and returned by shipment to Alberta so that I can buy my Cheerios from the shelf of the Garden Market near home.

This is what I would call value added. This is what I am hoping: that unleashing innovation and competing in the global marketplace will enable us to enhance our products, to innovate where needed, to increase our ability to add value to our natural resources and in some cases our nonrenewable resources so that we have here in this province the opportunity to compete and to compete at a very high level in the global marketplace.

Finally, I wanted to speak about making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. In St. Albert our economic development a couple of years ago had a slogan saying: St. Albert, the best place to live, work, and shop. It is a play on the same words, but indeed it is the same activity. We want to have a quality of life – and the Speech from the Throne yesterday enhanced that desire – that is, indeed, valuable, life giving, and enhancing for our residents, our constituents, and our citizens of Alberta.

Health care, of course, has been mentioned in the Speech from the Throne and new ways of delivering health care that are really quite exciting, but they are more customer/patient-friendly. They will be more one-stop shopping, a better, more comprehensive, and inclusive way for individuals to approach the health care system at the primary care level for the services that they need, not only that but to get the right services that they need.

Yes, I will speak of car insurance. It was not specifically mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, but that's because the plan is underway for a new delivery of how car insurance will be delivered in this province. I look forward to it, having been the sponsor of a private member's bill a couple of years ago that looked to gender equity insurance premiums. It was defeated, but I'm very happy to say that that issue is being addressed in the new plans, which I look forward to seeing implemented come this spring.

For my community the centennial infrastructure program, or the centennial capital program as it was called in yesterday's Speech from the Throne, speaks to an opportunity that the folks in my community will indeed, I know, respond to. We have been dealing over the years with the concept of a recreation facility. We do have some very fine ones in my community, but in no way do they meet the needs, the demands, and the desires of those in my community who want an active lifestyle, an opportunity for their children and themselves to lead that active lifestyle, whether in organized sporting events or in healthy self-directed activity programs. So I look forward to that because we do look forward as a community to a centennial celebration in which we can not just recognize it by, if you will, monuments or facilities, but we can recognize the spirit, the pioneering spirit, the building spirit, the generous spirit, and the optimistic spirit of the people of Alberta.

I find that the Speech from the Throne articulated in so many ways in such a broad spectrum our vision for the future. It looked for opportunities for our children. I look forward to the next generation and the succeeding generations to capitalize on the opportunities that we are presenting to them, to their parents, to their families, and to their friends to join in making sure that they have the wherewithal, the opportunity, the training, and the resources to assist them in their postsecondary education.

I have confidence in the people of Alberta, in particular in the people of my community, to share in the responsibility and the exciting optimism as it was presented in yesterday's Speech from the Throne. I am very, very happy to say that I believe Albertans, who have always been positive thinkers, who have been conquerors of obstacles that got in their way, who have been able to use their abilities to the best of their powers, are looking forward to a new century in which we will build on all that is good and strong from the past.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. Any questions for the hon. member?

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, before I recognize the next speaker, I just want to caution members. It's been – well, it's day one, technically – a little over three and a half hours since we've been in session. I know that a lot of people want to catch up with what has transpired over the last few weeks and few months. If you have anything to converse with your colleagues, please step outside, and you can do that. I hope that you will give due respect to every speaker that's speaking on this very important subject.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Debate Continued

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate those words of caution and advice to all of us. I'm sure they will be closely heeded.

I appreciated listening to the Lieutenant Governor deliver this speech yesterday. It was great to see her in fine form and excellent health and speaking so clearly and so forcefully to Albertans. It's always a pleasure to be in her presence in this Assembly, and I think we all feel that way.

I will struggle here to lead with the positive. There are some things in here, actually, that I think are good ideas. I will mention those and elaborate a little bit on those before making some other comments.

I do believe that the idea under Leading in Learning that a new school wellness program will be developed recognizing that a strong mind is nurtured by a healthy body is a good idea. It does emphasize a mandatory program of daily physical activity for all students. Terrific. Well placed. I value that. My wife and I have two boys in the school system, and they're both really active. I think all kids and, indeed, all adults should be.

I'd like to see this program go a little bit further, emphasizing not just physical activity but proper diet. I would be one who would support restricting vending machines, for example, in schools, especially in elementary schools where soda pop and candies are turning up, and they're turning up even more so in junior high and high school. I'd be happy to support any activity by this government to restrict or eliminate that development as part of this program for nurturing healthy bodies. In the long term these are significant health issues that we'll be paying for over and over and over.

I also found some other things in the policy here under the pillar of making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. The general idea of expanding government funding to municipalities for policing services, I think, is certainly something I endorse. I'm not seeing very many details here. We've read some leaks in the newspaper about this, how this might be handled, so I'm reluctant to give it a wholesale, unqualified endorsement because I don't know the details. But in general this level of government, the province, has to show stronger support to municipalities, and this is one way to do it.

I also endorse the idea of a mobile diabetes screening program for aboriginals living off reserves as well as emphasizing programs dealing with HIV and tobacco use and community-based care for aboriginal citizens. That's all to the good.

I also endorse the idea – I'm on page 9 now – of “increased government support for community-based care options for seniors, persons with disabilities, and mental health clients looking for alternatives to acute care in a hospital setting.” Again, there's not a lot of detail here. We don't know how much increase, and we don't know how that will be delivered, and I would encourage the government to deliver these services through nonprofit groups as much as possible. I especially think that mental health clients need strong community-based alternatives to keep them out of the very costly acute care treatment system.

So those are all points to the good and that I endorse in principle, and hopefully when I see the details, I'll be able to endorse them in details. Beyond that, I have a number of comments and concerns, and I think some of these will reflect the attitude of ordinary Albertans. The four pillars truly sound vague and general. I was actually talking to a former cabinet minister of this government this morning who said very much the same thing and, in fact, that these could have been drawn from government documents of the 1980s. He mentioned a white paper in the 1980s that sounded a lot like this.

Unleashing innovation. It's a slogan, and frankly I don't think it's even a very clever slogan because it makes one ask: well, who's leashing it? Who's keeping innovation on a leash that it needs to be unleashed? I certainly hope this government hasn't been leashing innovation although I am concerned that it has. I think that Alberta has one of the lowest research and development expenditures as a percentage of its economy in the country. So we need to be moving aggressively on that. We should have been doing that long ago.

Leading in learning. A clever slogan, I suppose. Competing in a global marketplace. We've been talking about this year after year after year. Making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. Again, kind of a vague slogan. I guess the Public Affairs Bureau with its 260 staff or however many got their hands on this. In fact, I know they did because they produce this kind of thing, but it doesn't ring with anything specific.

I know that what I'm getting called about at my constituency office are very specific concerns. The kind of Speech from the Throne that would excite Albertans, would get a real endorsement from me, would be a Speech from the Throne that addresses those specifics. If the pillars were things like bringing in public auto insurance, unplugging electricity deregulation, reducing classroom sizes – those are specifics, those are something you can grab onto. Whether you agree with them or not, at least you know what you're dealing with as opposed to something like leading in learning or unleashing innovation.

So I'm finding it frustrating to deal with this kind of a vague document. If it was a Liberal government, I know what we would be saying. We would be bringing in specific pillars or specific points aimed at resolving the issues that Albertans are facing today, like their high electricity bills and their high auto insurance rates. So I find that generally a huge disappointment in this speech.

If I wanted to get more specific I would like to see something addressing, for example, electricity costs. Why is there nothing in here when that turns up as an absolutely top concern of ordinary Albertans, of Alberta businesses, of Alberta postsecondary education institutions? I mean, we talk here on page 5 about new funding for postsecondary learning including “an increase in base operating grants for all postsecondary institutions.” Well, aside from the fact that it doesn't say how much – it could be 2 per cent or something – unfortunately, it doesn't address the largest single underlying cause of why this has to go up, which is soaring utility costs to our postsecondary learning institutions, especially electricity costs. So it's unfortunate that that's not here.

5:10

I also am concerned – and I see the Deputy Premier is here, and she will undoubtedly respond here – about false hope about opening the American border to our live cattle exports. I know that the Deputy Premier made comments earlier today about how she's hoping those open soon, and I see a reference here to this sort of thing. I am concerned and I know many, many people in the beef industry in this province are concerned that we're into a long, long problem here. In fact, it's almost certainly many, many months and quite possibly a few years before the American border is fully open again. So we might want to have a BSE strategy that recognizes that we're into a long-term crisis here. At least let's be prepared for that possibility.

Our goal here – I'm quoting from the plan, page 7, under Making Alberta the Best Place to Live, Work, and Visit. It says, “Our goal is simple: to ensure that Albertans, especially children, feel safe and protected.” A laudable goal, of course. Everybody would feel that way. Again, if there was a specific in here – I'd love to see something like a hot lunch program, some commitment that no child goes to school hungry or no child is taught at school on an empty stomach. That doesn't mean that we have to feed every child in Alberta who's going to school, but we do know that there are an unacceptable number of Alberta children who are hungry at school and that the school is often their only shelter from a harsh world and their only opportunity to get a hot meal. Why can't we make that sort of commitment to our children?

I'm also concerned in this throne speech about several places where there are new institutes or new councils or new offices that in fact instead of taking what we've got already and making it stronger, we're window-dressing by putting up another office. I'm thinking here specifically of one example on page 8, the creation of an office for disability issues, and it says here in the Speech from the Throne that this "will work with the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities and government ministries." Well, why are we adding yet another player to an already complex mix? Why aren't we strengthening what's there now? Why aren't we giving the muscle, say, to the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities instead of adding another player to the mix?

Earlier today there was heated debate in question period over health care reforms, and one of the things that's clear is that there are too many players in the mix. It seemed like every person in the government benches was involved in one way or another in health care reform and all kinds of people beyond that.

I am concerned about the same kind of loss of focus drifting over this government generally, whether it's health care, persons with disabilities, innovation. We have the Minister of Economic Development; we have the Minister of Innovation and Science; we have Sustainable Resource Development. We've got a government that's losing focus, and it shows in this Speech from the Throne.

Again, another example: a new rural development strategy. Well, how many rural development strategies has this government brought forward, and where are we? Where we are is with a rural economy that is in crisis, with rural towns that are emptying out, with rural towns that are seeing their provincial buildings vacated, government employees reduced, schools downsized, health facilities downsized. Rural development strategy: I'll bet that if we did a search in the library under that term, we would find that there have been dozens, quite possibly, of rural development strategies. So, again, a sense that I reflect for many people, including former members of this government, that this is a pretty tired document.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to wrap up by saying that perhaps underlying that fatigue is what's become known as the democratic deficit in this province. The kinds of things that would reinvigorate this entire Assembly have to do with reforming the way it works and quite possibly addressing how all of us here are elected and how the representation of the population is reflected in this Assembly. In the last election almost 50 per cent of Albertans who were eligible to vote did not vote, and certainly a majority of those who voted supported the governing party. Nobody debates that. But when you do the math, what it means is that about 30 per cent of eligible voters voted for this government. I think that's a reflection on how a sense of fatigue and a sense almost of irrelevance has settled on this government and on this Assembly.

So, Mr. Speaker, if this had something substantial in it that addressed any of those issues I've mentioned, whether they're relating to the democratic deficit or to policy issues around electricity or insurance or education, we could get really excited. As it is, there are bits and pieces in here that are good, but overall I think most Albertans would say that it's a real disappointment.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd move that we adjourn until 8 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:19 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, February 18, 2004 8:00 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/18
 [The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Government Motions

4. Mr. Stevens moved on behalf of Mrs. Nelson:
 Be it resolved that the Assembly do resolve itself into Committee of Supply, when called, to consider supply to be granted to Her Majesty.

[Government Motion 4 carried]

5. Mr. Stevens moved on behalf of Mr. Hancock:
 Be it resolved that the Assembly resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, when called, to consider certain bills on the Order Paper.

[Government Motion 5 carried]

Spring Recess

6. Mr. Stevens moved on behalf of Mr. Hancock:
 Be it resolved that when the Assembly adjourns on Thursday, April 1, 2004, at the regular hour of 5:30 p.m., it shall stand adjourned until Monday, April 19, 2004, at 1:30 p.m.

[Government Motion 6 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: May we have unanimous consent for a brief introduction of guests?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all hon. members of this Assembly 33 air cadets and four individuals who are accompanying them tonight. These 33 individuals are members of the 810 Grant McConachie Air Cadet Squadron, and they are accompanied this evening by Second Lieutenant David Jackson, Mrs. Deb Leonard, Jen Carter, and Scott Packrant. They are in the public gallery, and I would now ask them to please rise and receive the warm and traditional welcome of this House.

Thank you.

Adjournment of Session

7. Mr. Stevens moved on behalf of Mr. Hancock:
 Be it resolved that when the Assembly adjourns to recess the spring sitting of the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature, it shall stand adjourned until a time and date as determined by the Speaker after consultation with the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

[Government Motion 7 carried]

head: Consideration of Her Honour
 the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Griffiths moved that an humble address be presented to Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To Her Honour the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank you, Your Honour, for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Debate adjourned: February 18]

The Deputy Speaker: Do we have further speakers? I was going to indicate that we didn't seem to have any speakers, and then suddenly my eyes deceived me and there are three. We'll take the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and share with the Assembly my response to the throne speech tonight. As always, I was impressed with the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as she delivered her speech, and I always ask myself: why do we have such a deep affection for her? Why does everybody when they speak of her always talk about these wonderful characteristics and the things that they like best about her? I thought: the thing she represents to me sometimes is that she just really loves the province and she loves us, and you just love the things that love you. You can feel that come off her. Her words kind of bring a pride into this House, and it's a thing that reminds us what being an Albertan is like and what loving your home means.

It's been almost three years since I rose on the floor of this Assembly to give my maiden speech, and I'd like to say that these past few years have provided me with many opportunities and experiences that I'll be forever thankful for. In my maiden speech I shared with the Assembly, as some of you may remember, a brief perspective of the Calgary-Shaw constituency. At that time there were some 80,000 constituents living in the constituency, and they expressed similar concerns to those I've heard from my colleagues. At that time they wanted a good education system, strong, accessible health care, and the assurance of a bright and prosperous future for their children.

The three main concerns, though, for Calgary-Shaw were infrastructure, infrastructure, and infrastructure. I represented Alberta's most populated constituency, and it was growing at a breathtaking rate, a far cry from the three subdivisions and a cow pasture that once was Calgary-Shaw as described by the hon. Jim Dinning in his 1986 maiden speech. However, this was 15 years later, and in place of a sparse subdivision and abundant pasture came the most densely populated constituency in the province. We needed schools, we needed roads and health care facilities, and we needed them yesterday.

Much has happened since my maiden speech, and I'd like to acknowledge the work that we as government have done to address those needs and to help make the constituency of Calgary-Shaw what it has become. The thing that I have learned since I've come into government is that the work is never finished. You can never sit back and say: all is well, and there are no problems in the province of Alberta. Constantly that landscape changes, and government has to be able to be adaptable and flexible as it meets the challenges that come to it.

For example, who would have thought that one cow could create so much devastation to an industry in this province? As I listened to my colleagues today in their responses to the throne speech talk about their areas, I have great sympathy for them as they are dealing with changes in their constituencies that they never anticipated and with families that are looking at lifestyles changing, industries, homes. So I have great sympathy for them. The thing that it has taught me is that as government you can't relax. You have to always be mindful of the challenges that are coming and be ready to meet those. But I think it's also important that we not spend all of our time on today's problems, that we take just a moment and we pause and we recognize the things that we have received in government and what government has been able to do for us and that we be grateful for those things.

Government has done a lot of work in the Calgary-Shaw constituency. It has successfully laid the foundation that will allow the communities and families within the constituency to flourish as Alberta enters its second century. Over the past three years we have announced or opened nine educational facilities, including six new elementary and middle schools, a private school, and two high schools. That is not an insignificant number of educational facilities, and that's just in the south end of Calgary. So I think that government has done a great deal of work and that we should be able to look back on that and acknowledge what has been done.

The traffic tribulations have been eased with the construction of the extension of the Deerfoot Trail. In this month's newsletter I was saying to my constituents that everybody in the constituency is saying, in whispers almost, how much better our life has become since the Deerfoot Trail extension opened. We went from bogged down and miserable to almost overnight going back to something that is reasonable. My constituents could tell immediately that the Deerfoot Trail extension had opened. It fundamentally changed the quality of their lives in the south end of the city of Calgary, and we want to say that we're grateful to government for the work that they did on that.

In June an urgent medical care centre will open in Sundance, part of the new SouthLink health centre. For the first time in Calgary when we need stitches at night or someone breaks a bone, we don't have to go necessarily to the emergency wing and try and triage ourselves between people that are having serious health concerns such as heart attacks. We'll be able to access this new health centre, and it'll open this June. It's a wonderful example of a P3 partnership in the province of Alberta. As well, the Calgary health region has acquired land for a hospital south, by the community of Cranston. I can assure you that you will hear me as well as my colleagues discuss this project in the future as we work toward its approval. This adds to the two health care facilities that opened in Calgary-Shaw over the past three years.

We must also not forget the 18 local projects that are government supported through the community facility enhancement program and the community initiative programs. These projects range from recreational complexes to playgrounds to community centre renovations.

They're all amazing contributions and accomplishments, and I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the Alberta government on behalf of the citizens of Calgary-Shaw for their attention to the needs of the constituency. I came into the office with a long wish list, and many of the concerns have been answered by this government. It's no surprise to me that the rest of the country has figured out that Alberta is a wonderful place to live. They are coming and they continue to come in record numbers not just to Calgary-Shaw but to many constituencies in this province, and this work will go on.

8:10

As we commence the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature, we continue to build on the commitment the government embarked on 12 years ago. To ensure Alberta's continued success and prosperity, the government has developed a 20-year plan. This plan will build on Alberta's first hundred years and take us into the province's second century equipped to excel locally, nationally, and internationally. The four pillars that were discussed during the throne speech encompass much of what has contributed to Alberta's overwhelming success over the past hundred years. They will act to further advance the province in what has made it so successful. I'd like to commend the government on committing to these long-term goals and ensuring that Alberta's future will be bright and rich.

A substantial portion of Calgary-Shaw's constituency is represented by some 25,000 children within this constituency looking for this government to make the choices that will ensure them educational opportunities, jobs, a healthy environment, and a successful, prosperous province. That's what they heard yesterday in the Speech from the Throne, and I commend the government on making those choices. It's now up to us to follow through and make that future a reality.

The Alberta centennial education savings plan is an investment in Alberta's children, and it encourages parents to plan for their children's future. I am the mother of four children, three of them at the age of advanced education with one more joining them in a year, and I know that planning for your kids' educational future is critical. This plan will help encourage that investment and will undoubtedly contribute to the future success and well-being of Alberta's children, but also, as the Premier said in remarks about this, the Alberta centennial education plan is an exciting way for Albertans to support and encourage children to pursue further education and help ensure future success. It is fitting that the end of the province's first century be marked by an investment in the children who will carry on the Alberta advantage in the second century. I find this an exciting venture that the government is heading into.

The Alberta centennial education plan is an investment in Alberta's children that encourages parents to plan. It is important. This investment will undoubtedly contribute to future success well into the future. The government has made education a top priority in its 20-year plan. That bodes well for the 25,000 children living in Calgary-Shaw as well as for the children that live throughout the province. They are, after all, the leaders and the workers of tomorrow and the ones that will be taking care of us when we're no longer able to.

The government's support of the recommendations from Alberta's Commission on Learning is also important to the education of Alberta's children and the families of Calgary-Shaw. Five hundred copies of the report were distributed from my constituency office alone last year. I had the privilege of meeting with parent councils at schools throughout the constituency to discuss the recommendations, and I think that some of the more interesting moments I've spent in government I spent listening to those parents as they talked about what they wanted to see education look like in the future of this province. Some of the recommendations have been carried out, but it's also important that we continue to study and implement the remaining recommendations to ensure that every Albertan has the opportunity to take part in Alberta's educational opportunities and excel while doing it.

Finally, I would like to commend the government on their commitment to continue with the centennial capital plan, which addresses infrastructure concerns in the Calgary-Shaw area but also throughout the province. We know that people will continue to come to this province because we've set in place those things that make this province successful. People are attracted to success, and they will continue to come. We can make all the promises we want concerning education and health care, but those promises are empty without schools and health care facilities to make them a reality.

In closing, I would like to take just a moment to thank my colleagues for their support and their friendship over the past three years and express my most sincere appreciation to the government for addressing the many needs that I expressed in my maiden speech. Calgary-Shaw is a constituency built on strong families of all shapes and sizes. That strength is seen throughout this province, and it is apparent that the province is committed for the next 20 years to ensuring that things will only get stronger.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, were you wishing to ask a question of the hon. member, or is it okay to go on?

Okay. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this evening and participate in the Speech from the Throne that was delivered by Her Honour on Tuesday, February 17. Certainly, whenever one is sitting here and watching the parade of people entering the Assembly, one would be left with the impression that this is an open and a transparent government. The doors are opened and many people from many walks of life enter the Assembly, and unfortunately we don't see or hear from them again until the next Speech from the Throne. Sometimes I think that the interests of Albertans would be better served if, perhaps, a little of this space were allocated on a daily basis for the taxpayers.

We on this side of the House listened with a great deal of interest to this plan. It was an extension of what the hon. Premier had said in his television address, and I forget exactly how much that cost the taxpayers, but it was a significant amount of money. It's wonderful to talk about Alberta's second century, which will unfold next year. We're talking about our proud history and a promising future, and certainly the first 100 years for this province have been proud.

There have been significant achievements not only in this province but in this province's role in the country, and it is a role, I hope, that will continue to develop. At the end of another 100 years of this country's history I am certain that Alberta will be playing a leading role. Despite some of this government's policies I think this province will grow and it will prosper, but it will certainly change from a province which is reliant upon natural resources, which are depleting, to a province which will rely upon a public education system that is used to produce economic wealth, an education system that would be accessible to all.

The first criterion of a good education system, Mr. Speaker, is accessibility. Unfortunately, in this province we are rapidly becoming a place where not everyone who has the ability can go to a postsecondary institution. I would caution all members of this Assembly to reflect on this, and perhaps we can make further improvements so that each and every student that has the ability and wants to go can improve themselves through the education system.

The education system has to be accessible, and it has to be affordable. The best way to do this is, of course, through a public education system just as the best way to deliver the maximum amount of health care to the most number of citizens is through the public health care system. We can't allow our public health system and our public education system to be eroded by a government that seems to think that privatization is the answer to everything.

Now, the hon. member who spoke previously, Mr. Speaker, talked about the 20-year plan. Twenty-year plans are fine, but this government has overlooked the fact that because of electricity deregulation we don't even have a 20-week plan in this province as far as the planning for electricity transmission expansion goes or the expansion of our generating capacity. We can talk about 20-year plans and we can talk about the future, but we can't talk about that with this government's electricity deregulation plan because there was no long-term planning. If we're going to talk about planning for Alberta's future, well, then, we should also be talking about our future as far as the electricity grid goes, and that has not been done. It has been a major policy failure. There is no mention in this throne speech about unplugging electricity deregulation.

In fact, we're talking about bills. We talk about a lot of bills in this Assembly. We're already talking about bills 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7. This government has forgotten about the really important bills for Albertans, and that's their natural gas bill at the end of every month, their electricity bill at the end of every month, their insurance bill, the bill for their children's tuition fees, the increasing number of tax increases. They may call them user fees; I call them tax increases, Mr. Speaker.

I received my car registration the other day. It's gone up. Look at the bills seniors have to pay. We've got long-term care costs. We have CHOICE programs that are now being paid for partially by the seniors. There is no end to the bills that because of this government's policies consumers – Albertans, citizens, taxpayers; call it what you like – are having to pay. This document does not mention those bills, those bills which Albertans are telling us they are most concerned about. In fact, in our constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar we had a town hall meeting last week to hear directly from the citizens exactly what they want this government to do. It would be a great centennial gift to the citizens if this government were to simply say: we were wrong; we're unplugging electricity deregulation. This has not worked. It is the biggest public policy failure in the history of Canada. That's what they would like to see.

They would like to see some sort of control on skyrocketing insurance costs, but there's no mention. There's no mention of auto insurance in this document, Mr. Speaker.

How are we going to deal with the high cost of natural gas over the long term, over the 20-year period? No mention of that either.

In fact, I would have to say, you know, that this is really a lite document. It's a lite document, and it's the first piece of campaign literature that the public, the citizens of this province, are seeing before the next provincial election. I consider this nothing more than campaign literature, and unfortunately it had to be financed by the taxpayers. If the Progressive Conservative Party wants to produce campaign literature, I think they should do it out of their ample budget because they do have, as far as I know, a lot of money. They have plenty of money.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are some other issues, I'm sad to say, that were not addressed, and one of them is connected to the high tuition costs. Everyone knows the crisis that has occurred in rural Alberta as a result of BSE. Alberta has several vacancies in the medical professions for individuals who are trained to perform the tests for BSE, chronic wasting disease, and other transmissible diseases. Now, there's a shortage of these veterinary pathologists around the world, and many of them are snatched up by the private sector, who pays better and provides better benefits and better working conditions. For the sake of food safety the government needs to increase the salary and benefits of these professionals in order to be able to compete in the world market for these much-needed people.

We have to attract young people into these professions. I don't know; maybe the hon. minister has a plan that is going to attract, for instance, the brightest and best in the 4-H club movement to these professions. Hopefully, that's going to happen, but we not only have a shortage of veterinary pathologists, we have a shortage of trained surgeons, we have a shortage of registered nurses, and we'll probably again have a shortage of teachers. This in my view is called long-term planning to deal with these shortages. We just can't keep jacking up the tuition fees and then scratch our heads whenever we have shortages of some of these skilled and much-needed professionals.

Now, intensive livestock operations. We've had a number of debates in the past in this Assembly on ILOs, and there have been several instances where communities have been torn over the establishment of these intensive livestock operations, or confined feeding operations, in Alberta. Hardisty was one such example, and there are also serious concerns in the Valleyview and Grande Prairie regions. The government brought in the Agricultural Operation Practices Act in order to standardize the approval of these facilities across the province; however, as I understand it from calls to the office, there are serious flaws in that act, and I don't see anything to address that in this throne speech.

There is the improper safeguard for the environment. There are water concerns as well as air pollution concerns which remain, and I would like an explanation from the members across the way as to how the provincial water council, which is to be established to help manage the resources for future generations of Albertans, is going to deal with this issue, Mr. Speaker. These facilities are not required to undergo health impact assessments to ensure that Albertans close to these operations but also at greater distances are not affected by them.

There have also been concerns expressed about the expertise of the officers who examine the lagoons. There was one case where an officer approved a lagoon in an area where the soil content was 50 per cent sand. Further, it was located near an aquifer. These sorts of rubber-stamp approvals . . .

Dr. Taylor: Aquifer.

Mr. MacDonald: I stand corrected. I'm really glad to see that the hon. minister is awake. That's certainly a change, Mr. Speaker.

Communities are the ones that have to live with these operations. They should be the ones to have the final say as to their approval or expansion.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, there is a sense in this province that it's time for democratic renewal. This Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004, is a start. One could call it a start, but it's certainly not what we need in this province. Several provinces such as B.C. and New Brunswick have started consultation on changing the electoral system in favour of a system which better reflects the true wishes of their respective citizenry for representation. For instance, if we had representation by population, there would be a lot more Liberals and there would be a lot more New Democrats in this Assembly and a lot less Conservatives. I think you have the best government whenever you have a strong opposition regardless of which level of government you're at, Mr. Speaker. There's no mention of a gift to the citizens of this province in their next 100 years in Confederation of even going back to the system we had previously, which was a form of representative elections.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: No indication of questions. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, a question?

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. I'm wondering: does he think that Bill 1 will provide the framework for people to begin saving now for their children who are yet to be born so that they can afford all of the tuition increases between now and the time their children enter university?

Mr. MacDonald: Certainly, that is a very good question because if we look at the children that are born next year, by the time they enter university, they're going to need close to $92,000 to get a four-year degree. A four-year degree. Now, this amount of money will probably buy a few books. It's a start. It's a very modest start, but we would be better served, I believe, with a freeze of tuition fees. We can freeze car insurance premiums. Why can't we freeze tuition fees? Why can't we make postsecondary education accessible and affordable? But it's a gesture. Perhaps it's an admission of guilt by this government that they have allowed tuition fees to skyrocket and many people cannot afford them.

In conclusion, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, I would have to say that many of the citizens will not be able to set aside any money for their children's education as the government had planned because they need it all for their electricity bill, their natural gas bill, and if they can afford a car, to insure it.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-West, a question?

Ms Kryczka: Does it have to be a question, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: Or a comment.

Ms Kryczka: A comment? Yes, I would like to make a comment. I heard the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar make a comment on bills, bills, bills. He made specific reference to the long-term care increase for seniors, and as the member well knows, though, there has been no real increase in long-term care rates in Alberta since 1994. By far we have been for many years the lowest in Canada, and even with the increase that we recently had, we are still among the lowest, if not the lowest, in Canada. I would say that if you want to look at a glass that's half full rather than half empty, I feel that our seniors and those who are in long-term care situations had a great deal for many years, but it was catch-up time. We all want quality of care, and quality of care costs.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Do you want to respond to the comment?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I would like at this time to remind the hon. Member for Calgary-West that this government has been slowly but surely eroding the benefits from the seniors in this province, and it's got to stop. Seniors can no longer afford to take these insensitive hits from this government. Seniors have been nickelled-and-dimed by this government for the last 10 years, and they cannot afford any increase in their long-term care rates. I'm sorry; many seniors in the community that I represent in this Assembly are appalled at how this government is treating them.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar could share with the House his mathematics and how he came to the conclusion that a four-year undergraduate degree was going to cost over $90,000 in 17 or 18 years. It would be some interesting mathematics to try to figure out how to make that particular investment.

While the member is on his feet, perhaps he can explain to the House, if deregulation of electricity has been such a startling failure in his eyes, how it is that we end up with over 30 per cent more surplus power in the province with a price per kilowatt hour that is lower than virtually every other jurisdiction in Canada, and why we have not one cent of public investment in that extra generation capacity, we haven't had a brownout, industry is growing, consumers are gradually shaking out the problems.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you're unable to respond. That's the rules of the game. You have the five minutes.

I wonder if the hon. members would agree to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure this evening to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Dr. Paul Grundy. He is a parent of children in Belgravia elementary school, Vernon Barford junior high school, and Ross Sheppard high school. Accompanying him this evening is Dr. Robert Price, who is a parent of a child in Belgravia elementary school, as well as Preet Sara, who is with the Action for Education committee. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would now ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed with pleasure that I rise this evening to respond briefly to the Speech from the Throne and particularly as it relates to northern and northwestern Alberta. As many are already aware, the north is in the beginning stages of some critical world-scale developments that will meld with past success to define this province as a dynamic player in North American and global political and industrial jurisdictions. This throne speech, with its four key pillars, speaks volumes to our confidence and ability as we plan for the next two decades in this province.

Allow me, Mr. Speaker, to take a moment to look back at a few of our previous successes and connect them to this encouraging throne speech and that to our bright, positive future. Innovation is no stranger to Albertans and certainly not to northerners. OSTR, the Alberta Oil Sands Technology and Research Authority, was a program initiated by Shell and the Alberta government, and they started with the underground oil sands in the area just out of the town of Peace River, a little east of Peace River, and worked there on steam-assisted drainage, in those days called huff and puff. Those meagre beginnings about 24, 25 years ago have resulted in some tremendous, tremendous potential for the province of Alberta in the SAGD recovery of oil sands in north and northeastern Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, another example of innovation is the new biomass generator that we see in place in Grande Prairie, start-up to be commencing in April, where we'll produce about 50 megawatts of power from biomass that used to be burned as waste from the fibre industry.

On the Peace River we have a run-of-the-river weir that is now being re-permitted or at least the application is being reassessed. Again, run-of-the-river, a more or less benign operation with respect to the environment, producing 80 megawatts of much-needed power in Alberta's northwest.

We've seen advances in engineered wood products. The first off export line cryogenic or deep-cut plant to remove natural gas liquids from sales gas, done in northwestern Alberta about 35 miles west of the city of Grande Prairie. Again, innovation, Mr. Speaker, that keeps Alberta at the lead of this industry in North America and certainly in the world. Directional drilling technologies are certainly another one. Livestock diversification programs, which, although I do admit are under siege at this moment, still – still – have opportunity and do show promise. One of Alberta's ads could read: innovations are us.

Mr. Speaker, as we move to leading in learning, I believe that the Learning Commission, the first full review of the education system in Alberta that was undertaken in more than 30 years, was much needed and well received certainly by educators, by most parents in Alberta, and I believe by most members of this government. What we need now and what we have and what I believe we have is the courage to move ahead with the recommendations contained in that report. Things like the new funding framework and new funding for postsecondary schools and a capital plan in place to replace and modernize schools are things that will keep Alberta at the lead in learning.

We don't have to look far, Mr. Speaker. The information and the writing is everywhere, in newspapers, certainly in reports from school boards across the province, that shows that Alberta produces some of the best students in the world. Our system is rated one of the best in Canada in a report from Stats Canada, and Alberta students continue to score amongst the highest marks in the world on reading tests and certainly close to the top with respect to science and mathematics. Those initiatives that have been brought forward by this government will stand Alberta in good stead as we look ahead to our next 100 years.

Mr. Speaker, the global marketplace is another initiative in which Alberta, with its very, very strong leadership both from our Premier and from the Minister of Economic Development, is moving out – we are moving out – into new areas, into areas where we have traditionally had good markets. Our success is phenomenal. Albertans can be found working and contributing on every continent on the globe, and that, I believe, for a place the size of Alberta, 3 million people, is remarkable.

I would like to touch a bit on the contribution of Albertans globally in areas such as medicine, energy, agriculture, forestry, and the environmental and hydrology fields. Closer to home, Mr. Speaker, we continue to explore ways to increase the capabilities to supply North American energy markets. We have in place, soon to be brought into action I believe, the Alaska/Alberta bilateral task force. These initiatives taken on by the Premier of the province of Alberta in conjunction with contemporaries in the areas where we trade and do business will assist us as we move forward with a number of our large projects that will again enhance the province of Alberta. Certainly, the Alaska gas pipeline and Northern Gas have to come to mind as major initiatives that will play quite large in the future of Alberta and certainly in the prosperity and competitiveness in North America.

Mr. Speaker, another area where we have certainly something to be thankful for is Alberta's fibre resource. In northwestern Alberta the fibre resource is an extremely important part of our economic diversification program. In very recent times the Alberta government, again through leadership, through the leadership of our Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, took steps to reallocate some of the fibre available in northwestern Alberta. This reallocation took place in a fair and open market, in an auction that returned a very fair return to the province of Alberta for the resource. It encourages industry to build and rationalize to meet market demands. Markets connected to fibre sales send positive signals to international traders and will assist us with resolutions to trade barriers.

With respect to Alberta being the best place to live, work, and visit, we need only look again at some of the forward-looking comments that are in the throne speech and connect them again to things that we have done in the province of Alberta. We are building and have built strong and safe communities in the province of Alberta. We have, Mr. Speaker, in front of us the Traffic Safety Act that helps to make Alberta's roads safer. We've invested in an organized crime unit to help make Alberta's communities safer. We have continued to invest through the centennial legacy program in libraries, galleries, performing arts centres, and places that certainly will in the future increase our quality of life in this province and the quality of life for young people that start out to build families and build a future for themselves in Alberta.

So, Mr. Speaker, rather than maligning what has been brought forward and presented in this Assembly with respect to the most recent throne speech, I find many positive things in the document. I look forward to working with my colleagues and working with the government to see to it that the initiatives that are laid out in this throne speech are committed to and come to fruition through this and successive governments.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Questions? Comments?

I'll call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Hlady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It certainly gives me great honour to stand up and speak to the throne speech this evening. As many of my colleagues have said before, I would like to speak of the Lieutenant Governor, a wonderful lady that we have serving us here in this province and that all Albertans have come to enjoy and appreciate so much. I do hope that maybe we're successful at seeing her be here for an extended period of time for the future. I think that would only serve us to a better quality.

Mr. Speaker, my constituency of Calgary-Mountain View going into this next election when the next writ is dropped will actually be the largest by population in the province with over 42,700 people plus. So I'm very excited and honoured that I'm able to represent the largest constituency by population here in the province going into the next election. I'm looking forward to that as we approach that.

There have been very many things inside the constituency that are exciting. We've had some wonderful growth at the Calgary Zoo, one of the top 10 zoos in North America. Destination Africa has changed the whole face of the Calgary Zoo, and the numbers of people that are going there are unbelievable. I was visiting it this weekend actually, Mr. Speaker, during the Family Day weekend, and the parking lots were packed. They were parking on the streets. It was lined up at every facility. We were fortunate because a chinook had also blown in. It really has turned the zoo into a year-round facility and a wonderful investment here.

I also have the fortune to have SAIT and the Jubilee Auditorium and Alberta College of Art and Design, and as we know, there is some expansion going on at our Jubilee auditoriums here in the province as we approach the 100th anniversary of our province. It's exciting to see the growth there as well in my constituency.

As I move west with the new boundaries, I pick up Foothills hospital, which I'm excited to see become a part of my constituency as well, a centrepiece and a major trauma centre for southern Alberta. So lots of exciting and dynamic things happening in Calgary-Mountain View.

I'm going to start off this evening, Mr. Speaker, speaking to Alberta's continuing to lead in learning. I was a little surprised just to hear the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar a little earlier in regard to saying that he felt that freezing tuition for 20 years would be a much more effective way than having our Bill 1, which is allowing Alberta's children of the future to have a chance and a better opportunity to be successful in their education. I mean, if he's asking for a freeze in tuition for 20 years, to follow on that he must be saying that he wants to freeze professors' and support workers' wages for 20 years as well, which just doesn't seem likely. If you're freezing tuition, you wouldn't have any more money to go up for our professors and our support people, so I don't think that that logic probably follows quite the way he was thinking.

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, I did want to speak to the education savings plan because I think that's a very, very exciting piece of legislation that we have. It's forward thinking; it's visioning for the future. Just to give an example: my wife and I have a four and a half year old and an 18 month old. When our eldest was about one year old, we started putting into an RESP, which is interesting. In three and a half years we're close to $7,000 sitting in there for him. When I grew up, I didn't have an RESP. My parents couldn't afford to put me through school, and I had to have loans and so forth that I was actually still paying off when I was a member of the Legislature. I was fortunate enough to get through that, but it was a very, very tough thing. I think the cost of education will only go up in the future. So to have this starting to build already and to see that maybe by the time he's 18 or 20 when he decides, hopefully, to go into postsecondary, he will have the cost being covered for him is a very exciting thing.

More important, Mr. Speaker, I believe, is the fact that having this structure for an RESP for all children being born in the province is really going to help our lower income families. I really see it as an opportunity and a bridge to allow our lower income families to move past what maybe their parents and their grandparents never had, which was a postsecondary education which gave them the opportunity for higher earnings and a better life for their children as well. As I understand it, I think there are approximately 27 to 30 per cent of families that actually have an RESP today. Of this, in over 80 per cent of the families that have an RESP, the kids actually go on to postsecondary education. That's a very, very impressive number, and you know that they're going to have a much better chance of being successful in the future.

So as I say, I believe the real opportunity is for our lower income people to break that cycle because they're going to have a chance for a vision. By having even a small nest egg waiting for these children when they complete grade 12, I think this opportunity will certainly be picked up by a much larger number of the lower income people and give them that hope and a strong hopeful future.

The next piece I wanted to talk about a little bit tonight, Mr. Speaker, is unleashing innovation, which was another focus of our Speech from the Throne. The first part I want to talk about is Inno Centre. It's something that's been running for a couple of years now. It's a real key piece about innovation, about technology. It's about the future, and it's about really building on the strengths that we have — we have a highly educated workforce in this province, the highest in North America – and taking the pieces and what we have to make it happen. Inno Centre, Innovation Centre, is being supported by organizations in this province, and it's becoming a cornerstone. It's a cornerstone in the sense that what it has is about an 80 to 90 per cent success rate in taking companies from noncommercial to a commercialization process, from a precommercialization process right through to being successful.

When you have technology companies being started up in other parts of the world, even down in San Jose, in the centre of where we see technology growing in California, the centrepiece in the world by far, a 20 per cent success rate on start-up companies is considered pretty good and very much an average. But the model of the Inno Centre, allowing for an 80 to 90 per cent success rate, means that you have such a better chance, a better place to be investing your money, a better place to be coming as workers and having a chance to continue to be successful. That's a big piece of unleashing the innovation in this province that we have been working on.

Another big piece, I believe, Mr. Speaker, is going to be around the petrochemical area. The oil and gas has been a raw product that we've been able to ship, and it has been a huge piece of allowing us to have the advantages that we do have in this province. The royalties we've been collecting off that have been fantastic. At the same time, we've been shipping a lot of the product as a raw product off to other parts of North America, and it hasn't been graded and brought up to full value and getting the value-added piece that we want to see.

Right now the Alberta Chamber of Resources is working on setting up a task force. That's been talked about; the industry is out there working on it, working together with the petrochemical industry and bringing this task force together. Hopefully, that will happen in the very near future. What they're looking at is a cornerstone of potentially one more refinery. Potentially an $8 billion private-sector investment, this particular refinery would probably work maybe in the area of clean fuels, polypropylenes, and this piece along with what we already have here would allow for a big piece of the cornerstone of the value-added structures, products, manufacturing to be happening here in the future. It's very crucial for creating a cluster that we have this other cornerstone, and we certainly hope that we can see this sort of thing happen and that the private-sector money sees it as a good investment and a place to do this.

I want to give an example of what we have right now. Out of our natural gas comes the product of ethane. When you have the rich natural gas, you have more ethane. NOVA Chemicals takes and buys the ethane at four cents a pound. They take that four-cents-a-pound ethane, and they turn it into 40- to 70-cents-a-pound polyethylene and really upgrade the product. They have the largest polyethylene plant in the world right here in Alberta in Joffre, just outside Red Deer. They ship that polyethylene all over the world today to take it to other values. There are a few manufacturers here in the province but not very many.

One example of what we do have is a company in Calgary that buys the polyethylene and other products coming out, and they turn them into hockey sticks. So they're taking a pound of the ethylene that has gone from four cents to 40 to 70 cents, and they're turning it into hockey sticks at $200 to $300 for a hockey stick. That's where the value-added is. That's the advantage of what we have with the raw products that we have in this province, and the opportunities are there.

In Germany in the city of Marl it's a very interesting model. They did a very specialized set-up, and over a 1,200 hectare area they set up 70 companies, 70 companies hooked up in a couple of sections of land. In those 70 companies working together, there are 400 different products being produced. Very, very exciting. We have that opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to be doing that with the Fort Saskatchewan site that we have, working all the way from Fort McMurray down to Joffre and the pipelines and rights-of-way that we have created out to Lloydminster and the wonderful opportunities to bring all of that together, whether they're right together on the same site or slightly along the pipelines. Great opportunities to make it happen.

Today about 40 per cent of our product, our ethane, is going out as a waste product. I'm sure everyone has seen the big, black Procor cars when they're going south. Well, they go south full, and they go down to the Gulf coast or they go out to eastern Canada, down into southern Ontario as well. We don't have the ability to take those products and refine them and turn them into finished goods. They're taking them down there. What we have is a waste product, and they're turning them into finished goods. We don't have the catalyst size, the cluster size, that we need to be able to take those products and turn them into finished goods.

These are the opportunities, Mr. Speaker, that allow us to grow. I think that by working to really make some things happen around this task force, we will see some really big innovation things happening in the future and growth in this province, hopefully in the manufacturing sector.

Mr. Speaker, this sort of leads me into the global marketplace, which I think is really the most exciting piece as we see things happening, and you've seen it in the speech as well. With the approach of our 100th anniversary, certainly we are bursting with opportunities in this province for Albertans to be successful inside the province and taking the technology, the knowledge, the products out of the province and selling them world-wide. Albertans certainly know this, and they do like to compete globally. We see it happening. However, it's important to continue to push out the envelope, to be present in all corners of the globe. With 85 per cent of our trade with the U.S. it's extremely important to have a presence in Washington, which we've talked about as well, and the expansion for that. It's important that we have that presence there. We must continue to work on that. That is our one trade partner that we have some amazing success with today.

It's also important that we get to the rest of the world. We heard the minister of agriculture speak earlier today about 24 other countries that we're exporting our beef to today. Very, very exciting. But you have to be present in those countries to be able to talk to the people, to talk to the people who are going to buy the products, to help market them and make it happen. I think that when we're so dependent on one country, as we are with our neighbour, it is a risk by not being out into the rest of the world. So I think it's very important that we continue to expand and work hard at being everywhere as well as strengthening our relationship with the United States.

I was also very happy to hear Her Honour speak to creating grain marketing choice. I think the words she actually used were "aggressively pursuing" grain marketing choice. I believe our producers desperately want that. I think it's a wonderful thing, and I'm glad to see the minister of agriculture thumping and supporting me on that. I believe that's what we need to see happen.

I think a couple of facts are important to say again, and I'm sure you've heard me say it before. Pre-1945, 35 per cent of the value-added agricultural products due to wheat and barley in Canada were produced in Alberta – 35 per cent, pre-1945, pre-World War II. Along came the Canadian Wheat Board, and we saw a migration of the value-added products moving to eastern Canada. We today have less than 5 per cent of the value-added agricultural products here in this province. One of the targets that the minister has set forward is a $20 billion agricultural industry. To achieve those goals, we need to have the value-added agricultural industry here in this province, and we have to fight hard to make sure that that does happen. I think we will work hard on that this spring. I'm excited to see it, and I hope we can be successful in achieving that.

I'm also hopeful in the fact that we have a new federal minister of agriculture, Minister Speller. He has done some wonderful things in regard to agricultural expansion and wanting to see a test market happening. I hope that we have a chance to work closely with him to make that sort of thing happen here in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I think there are many, many pieces of this throne speech that we have gone through that have allowed us to see wonderful things happen: our seniors, which have been spoken of earlier tonight, funding for our police officers. Many, many other pieces are going to make an exciting time in discussion as we go through the spring session.

We're very, very fortunate to live in this province, and I'm honoured to have a chance to speak to the speech here this evening. It's going to be a great, exciting year, and I look forward to hearing more debate on this tonight.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments?

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure and a great honour to rise today and respond to the Speech from the Throne delivered by the Lieutenant Governor, Her Honour the Honourable Lois Hole, to open the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature. The Speech from the Throne is rooted in tradition. This speech is more than a simple message. It symbolizes the ideals and aspirations of Albertans. This speech is a road map for future years. It outlines the goals and directions for the upcoming session. It also holds the priorities of our government and focuses on addressing the challenges that Albertans face.

I am proud to stand before this Assembly representing my constituency of Lac La Biche-St. Paul and respond to this important message. It is evident that the government continues to look towards the future with high hopes. It has instilled the values that will benefit all Albertans. This government has worked diligently to foster goals, principles, and policies that all Albertans can be proud of and proud to call Alberta their home.

The government has taken a proactive approach in planning for the future not only for our children but for our grandchildren and great-grandchildren. We have witnessed this course of action over the last year, and it is evident from the Speech from the Throne that these intentions will continue. As Her Honour mentioned, the government's 20-year plan will identify key areas of success and set goals relative to these areas to secure the future of all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, this forward-thinking is definitely not new to this government. Earlier this fiscal year the province created the stability fund to bring predictability and stability to Alberta's finances. This year the government has put $2.5 billion into the fund, and it is forecast to be $3.4 billion by March 31, 2004. As the Premier mentioned in his televised address, the fund is based on a simple principle that you don't spend every dollar you have. This fund is designed to stabilize provincial resource revenues in planning for the future of Albertans. It also allows for government flexibility in funding for immediate necessities.

During this past year it has permitted the province to respond to natural disasters as well as providing compensation for high energy prices without having to take money away from core programs. It also has been there to help the province through the difficulties experienced in agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to spend a few moments commenting on Alberta's agriculture sector. As one of the major industries in Lac La Biche-St. Paul this subject is of great importance to my community. Agriculture is the backbone of this province and undoubtedly an important part of the economic future of Alberta. This industry has faced many challenges over the last year. Farmers from across the province have felt the effects of BSE. This has dramatically altered the entire Canadian cattle industry. I would like to stress that the province has responded to the crisis by offering support to producers while working diligently to restore confidence in our beef industry.

As Her Honour alluded to in the throne speech, the North American cattle market is highly integrated, and therefore we need to continue working on restoring international confidence in Alberta's beef. Rebuilding beef markets is at the forefront of that effort. The province will continue to work with industry leaders to make necessary changes for sustainability and vitalization of agriculture. Government and industry together need to take appropriate actions while developing solutions that reflect new market realities.

The province has responded with a variety of programs. Since last May this government has committed nearly $400 million to BSE recovery and related programs, which is more than any other province in Canada. These efforts are designed to help ease some of the difficulties our producers are facing. Programs were developed by the Alberta government along with the Alberta cattle industry to assist livestock producers. I would like to stress that the programs were not designed to solely provide compensation. These programs focused on ensuring the system worked effectively and moved cattle throughout the entire process. Cattle movement from feedlots and packing houses was crucial and provided a positive impact back through the system for cow-calf producers and truckers.

I want to acknowledge that BSE is not the only area where Alberta farmers and ranchers have felt industry pressure and hardships. Drought was still a factor that impeded crop harvest, although the province experienced some increased moisture levels this past year. Moisture levels are significantly low, and revitalization of pastures and replenishment of groundwater levels is crucial. The government rose to address this impediment with programs and security measures for our farmers. Alberta producers have access to comprehensive risk management tools and support programs to respond to drought. These include emergency water pumping programs, crop insurance, the Canadian agriculture income stability program, and the farm disaster loans.

Grasshopper infestation has also devastated crop production over the last year. The grasshopper outbreak was widespread, affecting many areas of the province, but it was exceptionally evident in my constituency. The potential crop damage can be ravaging if left uncontrolled. The Alberta and federal governments have recognized this problem and provided more than $20 million in producer assistance over the last two years.

Despite the many difficulties that farmers and ranchers are experiencing, we must remember that agriculture is an important industry to this province as well as the future of Alberta's economy. The government is working to facilitate agriculture industry growth, enhance rural sustainability, and provide safety nets for producers. The government will continue to operate alongside industry to develop creative and responsive solutions to challenges we face in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to spend a few moments addressing tourism, which I believe is another important industry in the province. The Lac La Biche-St. Paul constituency is the home of Alberta's Lakeland region. This area offers much diversity, including boreal mixed forest; clean, clear lakes; sandy beaches; marshy wetlands; and prairie landscapes. The tourism sector holds great potential for the future of this province, and Her Honour brought attention to it in the throne speech. Albertans need to look ahead to future opportunities that can aid in securing prosperity.

Many tourist activities exist, and opportunities are continually being developed. However, I believe we must further encourage this development and expand the scope of provincial tourism. Alberta's tourism industry derives its strength not only from its magnificent scenery, but it does so in conjunction with its service excellence and its strong private-sector partnerships. During 2003 Alberta's tourism industry generated over $5.3 billion in annual revenue. Revenue estimates are expected to continue growing over the years. Mr. Speaker, I feel tourism efforts should be promoted for all areas of the province. Great potential resides in other locations as well as the Rocky Mountains, Alberta's splendor.

Alberta is very fortunate that tourism is supported by provincial, national, and international visitors. The province must continue to invest in our parks and campsites to continue attracting national and international travellers. This is a vital part of our future. I'm pleased that the Premier mentioned during the televised address the importance of our provincial parks and protected areas. Twenty-one million dollars will be invested in our parks in order to upgrade facilities. This money will be allocated over the next three years. I truly support this initiative to revitalize provincial parks. They are an important attraction to generate revenue in this province. We must also ensure that there is a consistent standard across all parks and that we maintain the infrastructure in order to continue providing premium service in Alberta tourism.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased that the government will stay dedicated to spending in priority areas such as health care and education. It is crucial to promote sustainability conditions and equitable health care for rural communities. We need to strike a balance between providing essential health care services in rural communities while remaining cost-effective. Her Honour in the Speech from the Throne referred to increasing access through providing greater choice of how and where patients can receive the appropriate care. I welcome the province's increased support for community-based care options. It is imperative to keep important health services in our communities. We need to concentrate on bridging health care gaps between urban and rural settings in order to increase access for rural Albertans. Health care providers and the delivery of medical services must remain effective and be provided in an efficient manner for all communities regardless of their location.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to mention that over the last year Albertans saw improved access to health care services. A key strategy of this government is to improve the overall health and wellness of Albertans. Health spending in 2003-04 was increased to $7.35 billion, which is up 7.4 per cent from the previous year. As well, the new electronic health record offers health care providers access to patients' medical information, which translates into optimal care decisions for Alberta patients.

Mr. Speaker, this government remains committed to seniors. It recognizes the valuable contributions these individuals make to communities across the province through their work in volunteerism. Seniors donate their time and services to enrich and enhance our neighbourhoods. The Alberta government is dedicated to providing support and services needed to maintain their independence and well-being. I believe this is crucial. As Her Honour mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, the government will be creating further co-ordination in its response to the changing needs of Alberta seniors. We must ensure that as Alberta's seniors population grows, we have the services as well as program assistance to provide for our seniors.

As all Albertans can tell, the government will be dealing with a lot of important issues over the course of the next year. In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for the opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne. I am pleased to support this vision as it represents our government's sound principles, leadership, capabilities of forward thinking, goals for continued prosperity, and commitments made to all Albertans.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Questions? Comments?

The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to respond to Her Honour the Hon. Lois Hole's Speech from the Throne. Her Honour talked about the four pillars in Alberta's 20-year plan to help develop Alberta's success. Today I would like to relate these pillars to the issues affecting the people living in Whitecourt-St. Anne.

The important issues in the Whitecourt-St. Anne constituency that affect each and every one of my communities are related to agriculture. Alberta's agriculture industries continue to battle major issues. Drought continued to destroy crops in 2003, and of course the presence of BSE in northern Alberta crippled Alberta's multimillion dollar beef industry. Hundreds of jobs have been lost, and many farmers are left with few options. The Alberta government needs to continue to support this industry focused on ways to help our primary producers.

There's another threat to Alberta's economic prosperity that's also important in Whitecourt-St. Anne, and that's the ongoing softwood lumber dispute. I hope the opening of the Alberta office in Washington, D.C., can help make progress with Alberta's largest trading partner. I also hope that the Alberta government can work with the federal government and other provinces to find a solution to these major trade disputes.

One of the factors that makes Alberta a better place to live, work, and visit is its tourism industry. People from around the world enjoy Alberta's wildlife and environment. However, in Whitecourt-St. Anne illegal hunting and fishing continues to threaten the stability of our natural resources. Conservation officers in my area have told me that more resources would help to find and catch more poachers. This session, Mr. Speaker, I'll be sponsoring a motion that asks the government to levy a surcharge onto existing fines for fish and wildlife offences. Under the Wildlife Act or the Fisheries (Alberta) Act surcharges attached to the fines are collected and dedicated to the victims of crime fund. I think we should expand the spirit of the Alberta victims of crime fund to all offences to the Alberta fish and wildlife resources by dedicating funds to the conservation fund. Amending existing legislation to create a conservation fund would help solidify additional revenue for provincial conservation and enforcement programs.

Mr. Speaker, a safe and well-maintained transportation system is important to help Albertans work and live. Transportation is an important factor assisting the growth of Alberta's rural economy. Through good planning by the Department of Transportation the twinning of highway 43 is progressing very well. I hope to see this project completed through Whitecourt-Ste. Anne in the near future, but as well the department needs to continue to work closely with my municipalities to meet their ongoing needs and pressures.

A special note I have now is to the Minister of Infrastructure. You know, things are going well in the Department of Transportation, but I'm not quite as optimistic about the infrastructure projects. Her Honour talked about the changes and improvements to Alberta's education system. I worry about some areas in my constituency that will struggle to meet leading in learning goals. For example, some of the schools operating in my constituency were built in the 1920s and have been scheduled for replacement for some time. New school construction has been delayed due to other provincial priorities. I can understand that immediate issues keep arising. At the same time, students in my area are trying to learn while chilling winter winds blow through the cracks in the walls. I've even had the opportunity to tour the Minister of Infrastructure through Whitecourt-Ste. Anne to have a first-hand look at these buildings. I'm hopeful, given that the minister has seen the light – that's through the walls, I mean – that he will find a way to address the situation. I wonder what would happen if a school built before the Second World War and in poor condition were used in our more modern, newer communities. How long would it take before a new school would become a priority in these centres? I hope the government's commitment to infrastructure improvements will help address these old schools.

On the learning front a concern that I hear directly from the teaching community deals with their benefit plan, and I think many MLAs have heard this. One way to help teachers is to revisit the unfunded liability in the teachers' pension. Alberta is blessed to have young, energetic teachers entering our public system. These teachers will be forced to carry a financial burden created before many of them were in school. According to the current repayment schedule the unfunded liability will not be paid down until 2060. Mr. Speaker, this means that the burden will be on the shoulders of today's teachers for long after they retire. It's important for these teachers to keep as many of the dollars they earn as possible. I proposed a motion for this session that will raise this issue.

Another important pillar to the Whitecourt-Ste. Anne area is competing in the global marketplace. I agree with Her Honour that we need to continue to work hard to secure long-term prosperity for the province. Some sectors of Alberta's economy will need our help. This time I turn to the Minister of Revenue for an important message. I share in Her Honour's optimism for the future of Alberta. I also agree with the urgency to find new ways to generate capital. Right now Alberta is only attracting 3 per cent of Canada's venture capital. Mr. Speaker, we have to do better, and I'm sure with the help of the Minister of Revenue we can. I would think we should look closely at ideas such as flow-through shares to encourage more venture capital into Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, most members are aware of my support for the mining industry. Flow-through shares would encourage junior mining companies to look at northern Alberta's large kimberlite deposits. These deposits are an indication of diamonds. I think this government should consider flow-through shares as a way to raise the capital needed to diversify and expand the northern Alberta economy.

Venture capital is also important for two other growing industries in Alberta: nanotechnology and new agriculture initiatives. The potential for nanotechnology is incredible. Some believe that it could be the next Industrial Revolution, and I'm proud that Alberta began the centre for nanotechnology in 2001. I think more needs to be done to ensure that the knowledge discovered in Alberta results in profits and economic success for Albertans. We also need to ensure that the scientists we train continue to work and succeed in our province.

As I mentioned before, the agriculture industry has been hit hard in recent years, but the resiliency of this industry is something that must be admired. For example, proposals for slaughterhouses owned and operated by Alberta's producers are on the table now. Again more work and more investment must occur to move these ideas forward. Why not take a few per cent of our heritage trust fund or introduce flow-through shares? This could help the industry raise the capital that's needed today. Some may say that venture capital is risky business because the financial benefits aren't guaranteed. Well, the Premier tells us to be prepared to think differently. There's a great deal of energy and different thinking in this Assembly and throughout our great province. We should not be afraid to explore these new ideas.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, it was a pleasure to see Her Honour speak yesterday afternoon, and it's been a pleasure to serve the residents of the Whitecourt-Ste. Anne constituency. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Comments or questions?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I first recognize the enormous contributions to our province by our Lieutenant Governor, the Hon. Lois Hole. Her grace, her carriage, and her courage embody the highest ideals of service and of the Crown in our parliamentary tradition.

In these dark days when elected public service is under a cloud as a result of a culture of entitlement, as a result of a betrayal of trust by some who bring discredit to all members in all Legislatures if only by association, it is most important that our government and our Legislature reflect society's highest ideals of public service. In my experience the vast majority of persons in public life are persons of the highest character, on both sides of the aisle. We should be careful not to demean public life by action or by innuendo. Citizens must be inspired and confident in their leadership. I'm proud to be part of a government committed to honesty, transparency, and sound principles, a government that is, above all, of the people. There is no light between Albertans and their provincial government.

Tonight I am honoured to speak on behalf of the residents of Edmonton-Rutherford in reply to the Speech from the Throne opening the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature. Edmonton-Rutherford is an established community with a wide demographic mix of income, age, and ethnicity, a constituency of vibrant community leagues where citizens come together to create a better future and life for all. Like other constituencies Edmonton-Rutherford is not without challenges. There are individuals and families living on the edge, living without great confidence in their future, some with little hope. We have not and will not allow those Albertans to be forgotten or left behind. It is specifically to those Albertans, individuals at the margins, that this Speech from the Throne offers not just a promise but a blueprint of future possibilities and opportunities.

How is this to be achieved? It starts with vision. The Lieutenant Governor on behalf of the government of Alberta outlined a 20-year strategic plan designed to ensure that Alberta's economy will have balance and strength and stability even as our natural resource revenues decline. The vision is based on four pillars: innovation, learning, competitive ability, and quality of life.

Innovation. We need to ensure that we are a value-added economy. We must turn our natural resources into value-added products, thereby enhancing not only the value of the resource but also the value of the labour and profit in the resource.

Learning. A knowledge-based economy requires both a positive attitude towards lifelong learning and the necessary investments in the bricks and mortar of learning. Our ongoing investment in learning is reinforced and confirmed. This Speech from the Throne clearly confirms our government's commitment to education: kindergarten to grade 12, postsecondary, and lifelong learning including apprenticeship training. Specifically, it recognizes the contribution of educators and of the teaching profession to our society. It is fair to say that in recent years many teachers felt undervalued. This Speech from the Throne and the subsequent budget following the Learning Commission firmly establish this government's commitment to education, to students, and, indeed, to the teaching profession.

Competitive ability. In a global economy Alberta requires a global reach and the ability to communicate directly with our customers. The throne speech commits us to that end and to continue to work with the federal government and our provincial partners to ensure that we are competitive.

Quality of life, making Alberta the best place to live, work, and play. A government sensitive and responsible, responsive to those in need; a government committed to using tax dollars wisely, carefully, as a trust responsibility; a government sensitive to and responsive to seniors, including seniors living on a fixed income, seniors apprehensive as they witness their cost of living rising faster than their income; a government capable of responding to citizens generally ambivalent about health care until personally involved. Then health care becomes priority number one and must be responded to immediately. No matter how much money is spent, those citizens expect everything at that time, no questions asked. We must ensure our ability to fund health care according to our expectations, and that will require honest debate, thought, and resolution. Let us not demonize those who challenge the status quo. We will not arrive at a responsive, sustainable health care system without serious, honest debate.

A government sensitive to and investing in art and culture, the beating heart of our province. We don't live on bread alone. Our artistic and cultural community is a critical economic driver of our economy and reflects our values. The brightest and best of the world, encouraged to make Alberta their home, will base their decision not only on economic considerations but also on the quality of schools, the safety of streets and community, quality of health care, and the beauty and safety of our environment.

This, then, is the hope of the future, the road map of opportunity for those yet unborn, a vision of the future to inspire confidence and hope in all Albertans. Acquisition of knowledge leads to the application of knowledge. It is the application of knowledge that creates wealth and opportunity. Our future is based on a foundation of opportunity and education for every Albertan.

Mr. Speaker, there's one more thing that I'd like to touch on in the throne speech debate, and that is Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act, a plan to encourage families to prepare for and to plan for postsecondary education for Alberta's children. Not only does the plan make a positive financial statement; it also suggests to families the desirability of postsecondary education in preparation for life. As we know, education is in large part the ladder of opportunity.

Surely, all Albertans will applaud this throne speech and the government for its vision, its action, and its promise for the future.

Mr. Speaker, may I move that debate do now adjourn.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 1

Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the hon. Premier.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier it's my pleasure to move for second reading Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think I beat them to their feet probably. I'm honoured to speak at second reading to Bill 1 on behalf of the Premier. I want to thank the hon. Deputy Government House Leader for moving second reading on this bill.

Speaking to the principles of the bill, I want to begin with some of the principles on how this bill first came about. I think you've heard me talk in this Chamber very proudly about my grandson Matthew. Really, about two years ago my wife and I were blessed with the birth of Matthew, our first grandchild. [some applause] Thank you. After discussing what we could do to celebrate this new life, we decided to start an RESP for his future postsecondary needs. That seemed natural enough because 35 years earlier we had done the same for our own sons, and the funds were very helpful in their postsecondary education despite the fact that RESPs were not nearly as flexible then as they are today. We discussed how precious this young life was and how fortunate it was that he was born in Alberta and had parents or, in this case, grandparents with the means to start saving early for his future advanced education.

The discussion turned to the financial disadvantage that those children without a savings plan faced when the time came for funding a postsecondary program of studies and, in particular, the difficulties that some of our rural children face when having to move away from home to the big cities where some of the postsecondary institutions are. So I remember thinking out loud about how great it would be if all newborn children in Alberta had an opportunity to have an education savings plan. As she has done so often in the past, my good wife, Rose, encouraged me to look into it, and thanks to our Premier, the Learning minister, and many others who offered encouragement and good counsel, here we are with the opportunity to make it a reality.

I want to also thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, who successfully passed a motion in this House in 2003 called Motion 506 that urged government to look for new ways to help students finance their education. That motion put many of the issues on the table and, in my view, paved the way for the bill that we have before us today.

I began looking into the possibilities of how the province could contribute to starting an RESP for every newborn and how much such an investment program would cost and what benefits would accrue over time. I found that on average 36,000 children are born each year in Alberta and that the average cost of an RESP unit was about $500. That didn't seem like a very large investment considering the benefits that were becoming more apparent as the work progressed. One of the most significant benefits was that on average 80 per cent of the children who have RESPs go on to postsecondary education. Now, that's a very significant number, Mr. Speaker, especially when you realize that less than 50 per cent of students who graduate from high school in Canada go on to postsecondary learning. That information was very useful and was provided by the RESP dealers association, which has more than 40 years of statistics on plan holders and their success.

Now, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has one of the most highly educated populations, but what an opportunity to increase the number of high school students who go on to postsecondary education immediately after graduation. What an opportunity to build on the knowledge age, where knowledge can become the fifth pillar of our economy. What an opportunity to lead the country once again through a postsecondary brain gain that produces a vibrant economy, a healthier population, and a quality of life that is better than the one we currently experience; in other words, a brighter future for our children and grandchildren in a better educated society.

So let's look at some of the benefits of doing such a plan. It is estimated that increasing the number of postsecondary certificates, degrees, and licences by 20 per cent has potentially about a $3 billion impact on our economy. That's in 2003 dollars. That's in higher wages and salaries when compared to earnings of those who don't graduate or don't go on to postsecondary education. What will that be worth in 2023 dollars? Perhaps $6 billion, perhaps $9 billion. Who knows for sure? But it is very, very significant indeed.

A financial analysis of several scenarios determined what could be available to Alberta students in 2023 as a result of the savings plan. The worst-case scenario that we looked at was: what if Albertans decided not to participate at all? There would still be about $800 million available in 2023 due to the magic of compound interest and the federal government's RESP participation at 20 per cent. This would produce approximately $2,588 for every child enrolled in the program available for their postsecondary education. That's if everybody did nothing.

The second scenario is if Albertans contributed to the level of the current national average for RESPs, which, I'm told, is about $500 per year. The amount available for Alberta students to pursue their education in 2023 would be between $6 billion and $8 billion, depending on the return on investment and assuming an 80 per cent participation rate in the plan. Now, those are huge benefits, Mr. Speaker, and that would contribute approximately $21,291 per child enrolled in the plan for their postsecondary education.

The final scenario that we looked at: what if Albertans participated at the level that they did in 2002? In 2002, Mr. Speaker, the last year that figures were available, Albertans contributed an average of $1,489 per year to RESP plans, but only 17 per cent of Albertans with children in school had a plan. So what would happen if 80 per cent of Albertans with children in school had a plan and contributed to that level? The amount available in that case would be between $16 billion and $20 billion. Now, even in Canadian dollars that's a huge return on investment and would make $59,340 per child available for their postsecondary education.

Some of the other benefits of passing this legislation. First, we believe it will enhance awareness of the benefits of postsecondary education among students and parents. The plan sends a message to Albertans that postsecondary education is valued and is worth saving for very early in their children's lives. It will increase the number of Albertans that participate in postsecondary education and, therefore, in a better economy. The plan supports the principle that the cost of postsecondary education is a shared responsibility between students, their families, and government. It encourages Alberta parents to plan and save for their children's education from the earliest opportunity. Over time it will establish a culture of saving early and often for advanced education for future generations.

Mr. Speaker, the centennial education savings plan will be consistent with current federal regulations with respect to RESPs and the Canada education savings grant plan, so we're not doing anything any differently than what already exists. The plan will contribute an initial $500 to a registered education savings plan for every child born or adopted into an Alberta family in 2005 and subsequent years. The government will provide an additional contribution at ages eight, 11, and 14, with a matching requirement. If the beneficiary does not use the money on postsecondary studies at an eligible institution, the trustee will return any grant money to the province of Alberta. This is consistent with the rules under the Canada education savings grant and currently what happens under the federal plan.

Other provisions and regulations governing eligible investments and fees are also consistent with current RESPs and the Canada education savings grant. The federal government has agreed to administer this plan with a single application form and at very, very little or no cost to the province.

I want to thank the Minister of Learning for his support on this bill as well as his excellent staff, who became enthusiastic proponents and did a wonderful job of dealing with the many research requests. The successful negotiations with the federal government are a tribute to their professionalism and diligence. I want to thank the Treasury people who worked out all of the financial analysis, and I would urge everyone to vote in favour of this bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I guess it's not a real treat to stand in that I don't support the bill, and it probably doesn't come as a great surprise to most people in this House.

I agree with the preamble. I think everyone in the House would agree with that, that we need to recognize the benefit of postsecondary education. I think that there's no question that the government should be working to raise awareness for the benefits of postsecondary education among children and their parents, and certainly we should encourage parents to plan and save for their children and their postsecondary education. We should encourage people to plan for their education, for their retirement, for their old age, for their business hopes and dreams. It's certainly no secret that planning short term and long term is one of the keys to success. We should encourage them to do that, but we shouldn't do it for them.

I'm going to only speak to some of the principles that I feel are involved in the second stage of this bill, and one of them that I have a hard time with is the principle of fairness and the fairness of application. I'm going to talk about yesterday's students, students that aren't going to be born in the centennial year. They didn't have any choice of where, when, or how they were born. They're here. They have the same aspirations as centennial babies will have and as babies for many years to come. They'll have the same expenses for schools to live with, and I just don't think that you can say: well, all of a sudden, now we're going to put this money away for you, but because you were born yesterday, too bad. I don't think that's fair, and I don't think we should want to go there.

Like the Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne said, we've got kids going to schools that are in excess of 70 years old, and in fact the wind does blow in and these are deplorable. To go back to them and say, "We don't have the money; we haven't had the money for the 10 years that your school has been scheduled to be rebuilt; we haven't had that money and we don't have it now, but we have $20 million to put in the bank for something that might happen 20 years down the road," I can't do. I can't look the children and I can't look the parents in the eye and say: that's a priority with us, to let you stay there. So I have no problem saying that if everything were perfect in education now and all our bills were paid, then you can look at how we reimburse Albertans with their own money.

I also have a problem when we say that this has to go to the students who go to universities or colleges, full-time school. While they certainly do have an advantage in life and that's not in question, we also need the plumbers, the electricians. We need the policemen. We need the firemen. We need the farmers who don't go to college or school, who go to the school of hard knocks many times. We need everybody to be treated fairly, and it is their money we're dealing with here. It's not ours; it's theirs. So if we have this extra money, give it to them. Give it to every Albertan, and let them decide where their priorities are for their money. It's not our money.

There are many other reasons that I think we'll get to in committee about priorities that we have as Albertans, about whether this is what Albertans want, but I have to finish with going back to the principles that I and most people in this room signed on to when we ran for this party in 2001. I agreed with these principles then, and I do now.

The Alberta Progressive Conservatives believe in the following principles. This is from our web site, so I didn't get to make this part up.

We recognize that lifelong learning is central to a successful society. It is important that learning opportunities be accessible, affordable, and sustainable for all Albertans. We believe in enabling and encouraging Albertans to contribute to their fullest potential.

It doesn't say that we're going to take their money and put it in the bank for them. It says that we're going to provide schools and universities and the best system we can, and we do that. As it goes on, it says:

We respect the rights of the individual and are mindful of the responsibilities that accompany those rights. By accepting responsibility and acting on their own initiative, Albertans will achieve their full potential as contributors to prosperous communities.

That's what our principles as a party say. I believe we're falling away from that, and I don't agree with it. I'm certainly thankful that I'm in a party that allows us to disagree, and disagree I do.

Mr. Speaker, thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Learning.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak in favour of Bill 1, and I find myself in a little bit of an awkward situation in speaking against one of my colleagues who has just spoken about Bill 1, which is a government bill sponsored by the Premier.

Bill 1 is the type of bill that allows for future thinking. It's the type of bill that I ran for this job for. It's the type of bill that I believe all MLAs should support. It's the type of bill that plans for 18, 20 years down the road. It is not the type of bill that fixes potholes in the roads but instead looks and sees where that road is going and heads towards that destination.

What this does is that it allows kids to save for their education where their parents, for example, may or may not have saved for it. It opens up an account so that a $10 or $20 gift for a birthday can be deposited in that RESP account, Mr. Speaker, and that money will indeed grow, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont has alluded to. The potential that this has to grow for students to be able to go to postsecondary education is absolutely unbelievable. An investment of around $20 million per year has the potential to grow into around $6 billion.

What is even better about this bill is that if the $500 and subsequent $100 contributions are not utilized by the student to go to postsecondary education, they are clawed back and they go back into general revenue. They go back into the place where they can be used for health care or fixing roads or fixing potholes, things like that. Therefore, again I'll state that this bill is incredibly important when it comes to many for the education of their students.

Mr. Speaker, this does allow for apprentices to utilize this bill for postsecondary education: the plumbers, the electricians, anyone who goes to postsecondary education for a diploma.

Take a look at the employment rates for people who go on to postsecondary education, for those who finish high school, and for those who do not finish high school. Mr. Speaker, respectively, for those who did not finish high school, the unemployment rate is around 10 to 12 per cent. For those who finished high school with no postsecondary education, you're looking at a 7 to 8 per cent range, and for those who have a postsecondary diploma or postsecondary degree, you're all of a sudden down to 2 to 3 per cent on the unemployment rate. So there is little doubt – little doubt – that postsecondary education is extremely important, and there is little doubt that what we are doing here is planning for 18 to 20 years down the road when parents will be able to plan for their children's future.

Mr. Speaker, the $500 and subsequent $100 amounts are not going to be enough to pay for their tuition down the road. What this does is it allows the parents to put money into their savings plan to allow them to go to postsecondary education 18 to 20 years down the road. I would have loved for my parents to have started an RESP for me. I think it would have been great to enable myself to go to postsecondary education, but they did not. I know people now who have RESPs who have $8,000 and $10,000 and $15,000 in these RESPs, and they will enable those kids to go to university.

The other thing that must be remembered, Mr. Speaker, is that these are matched by a 20 per cent contribution from the federal government. That is a much better rate of return than anything else you are going to get, and it's because it is an RESP. I feel so strongly about this that I will actually give a federal Liberal credit for this. It was Prime Minister Paul Martin who brought this plan in many years ago, and I will say that it was the right thing to do at that time, and it is still the right thing to do.

This bill certainly builds on that. It allows every child born in Alberta from 2005 onwards to have an RESP started, to kick it off with $500. Mr. Speaker, could that $20 million be used to build half an overpass? Yeah, it probably could, but I think that our children's future, our children's postsecondary education future is much more significant and much more important than half an overpass.

With that, I would move to adjourn debate, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn the Assembly until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

[Motion carried; at 9:59 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, February 19, 2004 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/19
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Grant that we the members of our province's Legislature may fulfill our office with honesty and integrity. May our first concern be for the good of all of the people. Let us be guided by our deliberations this day. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed with great pleasure that I rise today to introduce to you and through you some very special members of our community who are working with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. I would ask them to rise as their names are called, and then perhaps we can salute them all at the end of my introduction. Mr. Bryan O'Donnell, chair of the board for CNIB; Mr. Bill McKeown, the executive director of CNIB; Ellie Shuster, director of communications for CNIB; Diane Bergeron, who is here with her daughter Summer Satre, and I think Diane has brought her other special friend, Polar. Is Polar with you? Where is Polar? There he is, Polar the dog. Diane worked with the city of Edmonton as a co-ordinator on the advisory board on Services to Persons with Disabilities, and she's a board member of CNIB. They are accompanied by a member of my staff, Mr. Andrew Turzansky, who has worked extensively on the revisions to the Blind Persons' Rights Act, which is before us for debate today, and they are here to witness that.

I might just add quickly, Mr. Speaker, that this was the group that also put together the first ever Vision awards, which occurred yesterday at the lovely Winspear Centre with the Edmonton Symphony and Ian Tyson and George Blondheim and all those superstars, and presented our Premier with the first ever Vision award.

Thank you for that, and welcome to the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of the Legislature three members of Alberta's law enforcement community. These three men are members of Cops for Cancer. Cops for Cancer started in Alberta in 1994 when Edmonton Police Service then Sergeant Gary Goulet became friends with a young boy suffering from cancer. Over the past 10 years Cops for Cancer has raised more than $15 million for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Yesterday I had the honour of participating in one of their fundraising events by riding with them as part of their cross-country Canada and back stationary bike ride set up at West Edmonton Mall. I would like to thank everyone who sponsored my ride. Donations are still coming in today, and I sincerely thank all of my colleagues and Legislature staff who were so thoughtful in contributing to this worthy cause.

I am very pleased to ask Edmonton Police Service Inspector John Ratcliff and EPS Staff Sergeant Kerry Nisbet and Staff Sergeant Gary Goulet to please stand and accept the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the House this afternoon two people whose company is responsible for some of the best ads on television. Ferg Devins and Jeff Gaulin of Molson Canada are with us today. In addition to being vice-president of corporate affairs, Ferg is also one of the very best impersonators that I've had the opportunity to be entertained by. I'd ask both Ferg and Jeff to rise and receive the acknowledgment of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

Mrs. Gordon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 18 young students in grade 6 from Clive school. With them today is teacher Mr. Robert MacKinnon, who's just the best and one of my all-time favourites; parent helpers Mr. Keith Knight, Mr. Jake Tolsma, Mrs. Monica Catellier, Mrs. Debbie Wagner, Mr. Dave Rainforth, Mrs. Colleen Rainforth, Mr. Scott Clark; bus driver Mrs. Deanne Rowley. Today is one of the students' 12th birthday. Happy birthday, Carmen. Would you please stand, and would the Assembly please award them the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly a constituent of mine, a young man we're very proud of, Dave Arcand. Dave has recently graduated with honours from the business administration program at NAIT and is looking forward to a career in finance. Dave is also getting married in September. Many of the members in this Assembly know Dave's mother, Deb Arcand, who is the legislative assistant to the hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane. Dave has risen. Would you please give him a warm welcome from this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. Hlady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly four guests: the first is Joe Fardell, who is the president of Tourism Calgary; George Morrison, the president of Leap Sports Incorporated and also the Alberta Classic golf tournament; Mike Stevens, the vice-president of the PGA tour, who was here yesterday to launch the Alberta Classic, being held at Redwood Meadows this year in August; and also the president of the Edmonton Golf Association, Pat Carrigan, who is touring them around here in the city today. I'd ask them all to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: I think that at this point it's probably appropriate for a point of trivia, seeing as we have golfers from across the country. Very few people know that the first golf course built in Canada was actually built right on the site of this building.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I always appreciate your wisdom. Almost always.

As I'm sure many MLAs have noticed, there have been people in the gallery, parents and other people connected to education, watching our debates closely and following progress on education issues. Today I'd like to introduce one of those people in the public gallery, Susan O'Neil. Susan is a parent with kids in the Edmonton public system. She is editor of Commission Watch and with Education Watch and as such will be watching us very carefully as we debate in the Legislature today. Please give her a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly two student leaders who are here to observe today's proceedings. They are Melanee Thomas, executive director of the Council of Alberta University Students, and Brett Bergie, provincial director of the Alberta College and Technical Institute Students' Executive Council. They are seated in the public gallery. I'll ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two postsecondary students. Melissa Stephen is a first-year social work student who is working in my constituency office at Edmonton-Highlands for the practicum portion of the social work program she is enrolled in at Grant MacEwan College. She is doing a very good job of handling the large volume of casework that comes to my office, and I'm very happy that she could join us today. Erin Lindon is a second-year student at Grant MacEwan in the correctional services program. She hopes to continue with her education following this program with a criminal justice degree, and her ultimate goal is to work with the RCMP. I'm very pleased that they could join us today, and I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Government Expense Claims

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier tried to justify his government's travel expenses by saying that it was necessary to promote and sell Alberta abroad. Well, I'm sure Albertans would like to know what this government is doing with their money in the province. My first question is to the Premier. What was the government selling when the Premier and the executive director of his southern Alberta office spent $750 of tax money for a meal at Caesar's restaurant in Calgary?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I don't know and the hon. member has not said when, and I don't know who might have been at that meeting, but obviously there was more than one, more than two, more than three, perhaps more than four, perhaps five, perhaps six, perhaps seven, perhaps eight people at that particular meeting.

Mr. Speaker, I can't tell you how frustrated I am with the Liberals, who have FOIPed, as they have the right to do, and have put literally dozens and dozens of public service employees to work at great expense. They have spent countless hours investigating these matters. Countless hours. I would guess that once the tab has been tallied – and I plan to table it in this Legislature – it far exceeds the expenses incurred by my office over the past three years, and I will table that.

I'm frustrated and I'm disappointed that the Liberals would not be honest enough. You alluded to honesty and integrity in your prayer today, Mr. Speaker, and it's something that is desperately lacking within the Liberal Party: honesty and integrity. I read the headline in the Edmonton Sun today that a glass of orange juice cost $27. That is not true, Mr. Speaker. It is not true, and they didn't go out of their way to say that that was not true.

As a matter of fact, what cost $27 Canadian was three jugs of orange juice. Three jugs of orange juice. At $12 that was roughly $27 Canadian, and that works out to approximately $2.70 a glass. That wasn't in the Edmonton Sun, and the Liberals did not go out of their way to explain the situation. They did not go out of their way. That to me speaks to the lack of honesty and the lack of integrity within that party.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday they tabled information relative to the amount spent on transportation in New York. I will have to give credit to some of the media outlets who phoned New York and said that at that price, my delegation and myself got a bargain, an absolute bargain. Again, this speaks to their lack of integrity and honesty, not standing up and telling the public what the cost of doing business in New York actually is.

They raised the matter of $1,100 spent on tips to hotel staff in Mexico City and others. Mr. Speaker, they lacked honesty and integrity when they failed to explain that this is not a discretionary expenditure. It is part of the way Mexican hotels and others bill customers. That fee covered the service costs of six people for four days and also included costs for meeting room use. They did not say that. They didn't go out of their way to explain that. That to me says that they are not honest and that they lack integrity.

The Speaker: The hon. member has been recognized.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Speaking of being frustrated and disappointed by a government, it's the citizens of this province who are on AISH and SFI. They have not had a raise.

Now, how does this Premier justify spending almost the same amount on a meal at Caesar's restaurant in Calgary as some Albertans on AISH receive from this government to live on for an entire month?

Mr. Klein: Again I speak to honesty and integrity, and this man, this person, lacks both tremendously, because he is implying that I spent personally $750 on a meal for me. That, Mr. Speaker, is dishonest, and he knows it.

Mr. MacDonald: I'm tempted to ask if there's tuna fish on the menu at Caesar's.

My next question, Mr. Speaker, is: why are no details provided by the Premier's office on the dinners and hotel expenses charged to taxpayers by members of Executive Council? Why not?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, Executive Council is granted certain privileges by virtue of the oaths we take as ministers, oaths, by the way, that are not required of the opposition, not that they would keep them anyway.

Mr. Speaker, in many cases there are sensitive meetings that take place between members of Executive Council and individuals. That is the reason that some business meetings, whether they're over dinner or otherwise, are kept secret and the names of the clients or guests are not disclosed.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, at a time when a thousand teachers are laid off in Alberta, when tuition fees soar, and when seniors are left in jeopardy, this Tory government found plenty of money for travel and communications. In 1998 annual reports show that this government spent an amazing $89 million for travel and communications. By last year that huge amount had soared an unbelievable 47 per cent to $131 million. To the Premier: why has this government's travel and communications spending soared 47 per cent since 1998 to a mind-boggling $131 million a year?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'll attempt to get that information for the hon. member. I understand that he has a request for a written answer to that particular question on the Order Paper, and I'm sure that he'll be provided with that information. In addition, I've agreed to appear at Public Accounts at a time that will be suitable to the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, who I understand is chair of the Public Accounts Committee. We'll try to arrange a time. Be glad to answer those questions, and I'm sure there are detailed explanations for all of the expenditures.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to point out to the hon. member that for the disabled alone I think we spend in excess of 1.7 billion – billion – dollars. Even this person can understand $1.7 billion for disabled services in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Can the Premier tell us if he himself is ultimately responsible for expense claims filed by staff in his office?

Mr. Klein: Am I responsible? I really don't know. I haven't given it any thought. But if he wants to know what I had for lunch today, I had a bowl of mushroom soup and an egg salad sandwich.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of openness can the Premier explain why his chief of staff spent over $1,500 of taxpayer money on hotel rooms in Edmonton when he lives in metro Edmonton?

Mr. Klein: I really don't know, but I'll ask him about that. I really don't know. If the hon. member will provide me with the documentation, I'll look into it. Perhaps – and I say perhaps – he had to secure those hotel rooms for out-of-town visitors, Mr. Speaker, visitors who had been invited to do business at our expense, various consultants. We have numerous people, literally hundreds of people, coming to Edmonton each and every day who do business, who require my office to give them help in securing transportation and securing accommodation, and we do that as a matter of courtesy.

Mr. Speaker, I guess these people don't understand, thank God, what government is all about and how government runs. If they look to their Liberal cousins in Ottawa, as an example, I would remind the Liberal Party that the total expenses they're talking about don't equal over three years the amount spent on one trip by the Governor General – one trip, $5.3 million – and that was sanctioned by their Liberal cousins in Ottawa, and they think it's okay.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier claimed that his government was open and transparent. However, when one looks at the record of this government, that claim rings hollow. My questions are to the Premier. Why has the Premier and his executive staff not appeared before the Public Accounts Committee in over eight years despite having been issued invitations to appear? Eight years.

Mr. Klein: Very interesting. I said that I would. It's not normal for Premiers to appear before public accounts committees. As a matter of fact, I was the first Premier to appear before the Public Accounts Committee in almost 30 years, Mr. Speaker. No other Premier in this country, as I understand it – as I understand it – appears before Public Accounts. Now, I have agreed to do that.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why is the Premier and his Executive Council provided special privileges to withhold information under the freedom of information act?

Mr. Smith: They signed off on the act.

Mr. Klein: On the FOIP Act.

Mr. Smith: Yes. They signed off on that.

Mr. Klein: Well, I'm advised by the hon. Minister of Energy that they signed off on the FOIP Act, which provides certain exemptions for members of Executive Council due to the sometimes sensitive nature of the discussions we have with our citizens.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Then to the Premier again: will the Premier bring in amendments to the freedom of information act to drop the special exemptions for Executive Council around travel details?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, we are as open and transparent as we possibly can be. We don't sneak around. We don't hire operatives like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview to find out what we're doing in London. If he wants to know or if the Liberals want to know, then get on a plane and go. Find out; don't sneak around.

Mr. Speaker, the Energy minister will be representing me in New York. He has issued this news release, and to me it's quite satisfactory because he'll be representing me in New York City. "The estimated cost of the trip for Minister Smith and his executive assistant is $9,500." Estimated cost. It could be $10,000; it could be $9,000. We don't know. The full itinerary is listed, what he's going to be doing. I'm sure that he doesn't know everyone who's going to be there, because I've attended these conferences before and usually there are 150 to 200, sometimes 250 people. But he will travel to New York; he will attend the East Coast Canadian Energy Conference. There will be presentations by companies with operations in Alberta. Minister Smith will be the keynote speaker at that meeting. There will be media availability. Now, if you think this is all wrong, you stand up and say so. You stand up and say so, that it's wrong.

On Thursday he will attend the FirstEnergy research trust overview. He will do an interview with Petroleum Intelligence Weekly. He will attend a presentation by Henry Groppe, who's a well-known analyst in the oil and gas business. He will attend the FirstEnergy research update on oil sands evolution. He will do another media availability. He will attend presentations by companies with operations in Alberta on Friday. Then he will depart the conference for Edmonton or Calgary.

What is wrong with that? If the opposition feels that there is something wrong with this mission, stand up and say so. Be honest. Show integrity. Stand up and say that they don't agree with these missions to sell Alberta. Stand up and say it.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I do want to supplement that. As a matter of fact, on the topic of yesterday and today, the trips to New York, the last time the Premier and I were in New York, while the Kyoto-loving Liberals were sucking lattes down in the United Nations, we were downtown defending Alberta's interest and the destruction of the Alberta economy through the Kyoto protocol that those guys caused. So, boy, we'll continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Cattle Prices

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. According to the most recent weekly survey done by the agriculture ministry, Alberta cattle prices are in free fall. In fact, cow-calf producers are only getting about half as much for their feeder calves as they were one year ago. With the news that the border for live cattle could remain slammed shut until next year, it's become pretty clear that this government's strategy of barbecues and pleading with their pals in the Bush administration just doesn't cut it. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Why is the government turning its back on rural Alberta by refusing to even consider getting a floor price for cattle in this province?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have had a lot of questions in this House over a period of many years, and I have never heard one that was as off base as this one. I would invite this hon. member to go out to rural Alberta, to get out of the city and go sit in an auction market, to go stand before 1,200 people and discuss this industry, to spend nine and a half months meeting almost daily with them, and ask them how they feel about this government's support to agriculture. I'll tell you that it'll be not this member that has stood up for agriculture. I think two questions in the last session. I have listened for two days to the opposition benches questioning trips on trade missions for this province of ours while these important issues sit out there.

Mr. Speaker, we have provided support programs that have carried this industry, that were designed by this industry in its totality. Every member of every organization in agriculture, in beef production, including processors and retailers and truckers, has been at a round-table designing those programs. If he doesn't believe it's worked, tell the industry that because they designed them. We supported them to the tune of $400 million, which is more than any province in Canada has provided and double what the federal government has provided to date.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that only cattle producers are being devastated while the profit margins of supermarkets and packing plants are on the rise, why is this government letting the cow-calf producers bear the brunt of this crisis? Why don't they share the pain at least?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, if we had time, I would give the hon. member a little lesson in market, but we don't have that kind of time in the House. It again displays his lack of knowledge of the industry. Through the programs that were provided last year that supported the chain of beef production, which is how it works, cow-calf producers received as good or better prices in the fall for their calves. No question; the evidence is there, and I can provide tapes from a sale one year ago to last fall. That is fact, and it's a simple matter. Pick it up on the web site. They're all there. Yes, you will find some feeder cattle today at half price, but generally, Mr. Speaker, 800-pound steers, if they're good cattle, are up to 65 cents. That is not satisfactory. It is not half. It's probably 25 cents off, 15 cents off what it should be.

Mr. Speaker, we do have in place, if we can convince the rest of the provinces to sign, a disaster assistance program called the Canada agriculture income stabilization program. If he could write to some of his NDP governments on either side of us, that would help, and then that support would be available to the producers of this province. We've signed.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, why is it that while cattle ranchers and feedlot owners are losing their land, losing their herds, all this minister can do is flip burgers and go on bended knee to Washington? [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier has been recognized.

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I must confess that I probably only flipped one or two burgers, and it was at a school in Edmonton where the teacher of that school had the foresight and wisdom to take his grade 4 class – and I wish he'd have invited the hon. member to attend – to do a study on BSE. He felt it was important that the students understood this issue thoroughly, to recognize this, and a special young lady in that school stylized the I Love Alberta Beef slogan by writing “still” – I Still Love Alberta Beef – on it. We did attend that school. I was proud to do that with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods and recognize that grade 4 students take an interest in the struggles that our beef industry are going through right now. So I did; I flipped a burger there. That's the extent of it.

What I have done and what the hon. member has not done is sit down with this industry on almost a daily basis to try to work our way through what is a very complex and difficult situation that is no fault of theirs, and we continue to do that. I do not have to, I think, defend my work with this industry to that hon. member. The industry will determine that.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development to supplement?

Mr. Norris: Mr. Speaker, I think it's very important, if the hon. members want to ask questions, that they at least get their questions and facts right. There are, indeed, trips to promote beef. They're in conjunction with the CBEF and BIC. The hon. Member for Wainwright has gone on one; the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert is going on one. But this particular minister of agriculture has led the nation in defending this industry, and I can tell you as minister of industry that they're very proud of what she has done. For him to comment that she's out flipping burgers is not only incorrect; it's wrong. I want to say in front of the House that the industry is incredibly proud of what this particular ministry has done.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood.

Aldersyde Interchange

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last weekend there was yet another fatal collision at the intersection of highways 2, 7, and 547 near Aldersyde in my constituency. Today my question is to the Minister of Transportation. My constituents want to know how many collisions have to occur at this dangerous intersection before the Department of Transportation takes the initiative and builds an interchange.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Aldersyde interchange is a priority for the department. Presently, to date all of the preliminary functional planning has been complete. The land acquisition is in progress. In fact, a fair amount of the parcels of land required to accommodate the interchange have been purchased, and we will be now issuing an RFP for the very detailed engineering plan to be put in effect at that particular location.

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My only supplemental question, then, is again to the Minister of Transportation. Recognizing the minister's comments that it takes time to build road infrastructure like that interchange, when can Albertans and my constituents expect to see construction at the intersection of highways 2, 7, and 547? When?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the interchange in question is not in the 2003-2006 capital plan. However, with Budget 2004, which will be announced soon, and with every budget we always update our capital plan, always go back to it, revise it, add another year to that three-year plan, and given this location, the traffic counts, and all the work that's been done to date, I'm looking forward to the capital plan being tabled in this House in the very near future.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Lieutenant Governor's Residence

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been discovered that next week the government is going to be tearing down the official residence of the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta and selling off one-third of the land. This residence has been significant in terms of architectural style as well as for the heads of state and other officials, including Princess Diana and Grant MacEwan, who have lived or been entertained there. The government has provided no concrete plan to rebuild this public asset. My questions are to the Premier. Is allowing an asset to deteriorate to the point where it will cost $400,000 to repair it the government's version of good stewardship?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, unlike the hon. member I've been in the home, and it was a nice home.

Ms Blakeman: How do you know?

Mr. Klein: If she has been in the home, then stand up and say so. Maybe she will do it when she, you know, gets up to question. If you've been in the house, I will apologize.

Ms Blakeman: Answer the question.

Mr. Klein: I'm going to answer the question. You haven't been in the house; have you?

I have been in the house, Mr. Speaker, and it was maintained as best as it possibly could be. We spent, I understand, about $25,000 a year on the bungalow, which is a considerable amount of money, but as that old song says, This Old House, you know, there are things that go wrong with a house: the heating systems, the wiring systems, the kinds of things that you can't see.

It was the opinion of the Department of Infrastructure that rather than spend $400,000 to renovate the home and completely overhaul it, it would be better to sell one of the lots at a very good price – because it is prime real estate – and develop the other two lots, and it seems to me that you can build a very, very nice home on two lots in Glenora, a very nice home indeed. I'm sure once the architects have the plans prepared, the hon. minister would be prepared to table those plans, and I can assure you that whatever is built there will be most appropriate for a head of state, the Lieutenant Governor, and anyone who might want to visit her or him in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why did the government not consult with Albertans and particularly with the neighbours in Glenora before deciding to demolish this historic building?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, relative to the process I'll have the hon. minister respond.

2:10

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I did tour the house on two occasions, and of course the hon. member has admitted that she did not. We also toured the house with Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor. If you've been in the house, you would quickly see that it's built in three sections. Even the dining room is not really conducive to having royalty live in it. So we, in fact, assessed the condition of the home in many areas, and the Premier has talked about the various things that were a problem. We discussed it with Her Honour, and she also agreed that the house needed to be replaced and not to try to just simply repair it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. To the Minister of Infrastructure then: as the people's steward for this Lieutenant Governor's residence, under what authority did the minister decide to destroy the building?

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, she said that we're responsible for it, so I would assume that that gives us the authority to manage the property the way that we see fit to spend money wisely, because they are Albertans' dollars.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Education Policy

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta students continue to be top achievers nationally and at the international level, and I know that everyone in this Assembly is proud of how well our students are doing. However, we must continue to maintain that momentum, and that doesn't happen easily. There must be a continuous plan for improvement. What I hear from teachers is that they want to be able to do their very best in teaching for all their students. What I hear from parents is that they want their children to learn to their potential. Teachers and parents believe that their children must be able to learn and succeed in a relatively pleasant environment. To the Minister of Learning: in the Learning department's planning what assistance will there be to ensure that every child, wherever they reside in the province, will learn to their potential?

The Speaker: Okay. Within the confines of the question period, please.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What the hon. member has just asked me is basically the essence of the Department of Learning. Our wish and our mandate is to ensure that every child succeeds so that every child can live to its full potential within the education system. I will say quite simply in one very short, succinct answer that that is exactly what we do in the Department of Learning.

Mr. Maskell: My second question is also to the same minister. Of the total Learning budget what percentage stays in the department and what kinds – and I say kinds – of support from the money retained is used to support schools and teachers and, as a result, students?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, in the K to 12 system we presently spend about $3.8 billion per year. Of that $3.8 billion roughly $72 million is kept within the department for such things as curriculum, such things as assessments, such things as school board and teacher supports. Again a succinct answer to the hon. member is that every dollar of that $72 million is aimed to support teachers and students.

Mr. Maskell: My final question to the same minister. The Learning Commission recognized that working with ESL students and early intervention with high-needs students must happen as early as possible. What is the Learning department doing to ensure that these students' needs are met?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, we do a lot when it comes to ESL, but in direct reference to the hon. member's question there were some interesting concepts raised in the Learning Commission about full-day kindergarten, about junior kindergarten, and we are currently looking at how we can best utilize those recommendations to ensure that the kids at an even younger age can do even better. ESL is incredibly important. We will be increasing our grants to ESL. Obviously, people in Alberta have to learn English if they are to succeed in the Alberta environment and the Alberta economy. Those two elements that the hon. member has mentioned are incredibly important to us, and it's something that the thousand people in my department work at continually to ensure that the best possible supports for ESL, the best possible supports for the teachers, the best possible supports for the students are out there and are looked at each and every day.

Municipal Financing

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, aside from implementing a few short-term financing measures, the minister's council on three Rs has failed to deliver long-term, stable financial solutions for municipalities. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: when is this council going to implement reliable, predictable, long-term funding for municipalities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to say that this minister's council is the only council of its kind in Canada, and I'm very proud of that initiative. Second of all, I want to say that the mayors of Edmonton and Calgary, our two biggest cities, but also every one of our 360 municipalities, are represented through the president of the AUMA as well as the president of the AAMD and C.

What I'm really particularly proud of is – one of the initiatives was ME First. It's a hundred million dollars that goes to municipalities interest-free in terms of promoting energy efficiency in the province. Second of all, we've been working very closely with the initiative of the issue of the police report that is coming out. It's going to be reflected in the budget when it's released in March. We've worked very closely with the Solicitor General because policing issues have been ones that have been identified by municipal leaders across this great province.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: will this government show its commitment to a new deal for municipalities by matching the funding provided by the federal government?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, the short answer is yes, but I would like to elaborate even further. The Prime Minister has appointed a representative, the former Premier of British Columbia, who was also a former city mayor, Mike Harcourt. The first province he's visited is the province of Alberta. We met with him last week here in the Legislature office in Edmonton. I'm really pleased to see that both the mayors of Edmonton and Calgary participated. One of the things he said, and I quote: we want to follow the example that Alberta has shown to other cities across all of Canada.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: given that the federal government has already formed a committee to work on a new deal for municipalities, will this ministry work with the feds to ensure that our municipalities are getting the best possible deal?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, let me elaborate, and I'll also ask the Minister of Transportation, responsible for the only deal of any province in Canada where the province of Alberta gives our cities, in fact, 5 cents a litre of the 9 cents that's collected by the provincial government. In actual fact, of the 9 cents that the province of Alberta collects, we contribute back to roads across Alberta something like 16 cents, so I'm very proud of the fact. This is the first initiative that we'd like to see the federal government follow in terms of helping a new deal for Alberta cities and also rural cities, because we have a subsequent meeting with the presidents of both the rural and urban associations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Gasoline Taxes

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that our Alberta government collects 9 cents per litre of gasoline and returns 5 cents to the municipalities of Calgary and Edmonton and also given that the federal government currently collects 10 cents per litre of gasoline, that translates to lots of dollars from Alberta, but none of this money is allocated and returned directly to our municipalities. They're now talking about increasing the gasoline tax in the name of the Kyoto agreement commitment. So reflecting the concerns from my constituents, my question today is to the minister of municipalities. What has the minister been doing to help Alberta cities convince the federal government to do the same as our Alberta government for our fast-growing Alberta municipalities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, of the 10 cents that Albertans pay to the federal government, the Minister of Transportation has informed us that the amount of money sent to the federal government over the last 10 years was $7 billion. What we said is: we do not need to create a bureaucracy. We have a system in place that works very, very well. So rather than creating another bureaucracy – and I want to say that I applaud the federal government and the Prime Minister for saying that they want to help municipalities. That’s positive, but why create another bureaucracy? Mr. Harcourt said that he would like to see a deal quickly and to follow the Alberta way of doing it. It’s my hope that that will benefit all motorists in Alberta and that that money can go directly. I know that mayors across this province want to put that money back into roads, and certainly I know that the Minister of Transportation would agree with that statement.

Mr. Cao: Well, my last supplemental question is, in fact, to the Minister of Transportation. What is the minister doing now to facilitate or expedite the federal transfer of gasoline sales tax to the pressing needs of the cities of Calgary and Edmonton?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We’re also privileged in the province of Alberta to have the president of the AAMD and C as a member of the committee that was put together by the Prime Minister to review some method, some process of providing all municipalities with some of the revenue that goes to Ottawa in the form of a gas tax, so we have a good strong voice at the table. He is there as a citizen of rural Canada, not in his official capacity, but he is bringing forward, of course, the Alberta position.

Next week we will be in Ottawa with our first meeting of the provincial ministers of transportation and actually meeting the federal minister for the first time. This will be a topic of discussion. There are certainly musings from Ottawa. The committee has been put together, but we want to see the money, and we also are very adamant, Mr. Speaker, that we feel that all dollars from the federal government in terms of gas tax have to flow through to the province, and then we will sit down with our municipalities and decide how then that money will go to every municipality in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, the Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

School Construction

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Schools in Devon are badly overcrowded. A new separate school was approved in 1999, and in 2000 a budget was established. The board planned to open the school in September of this year. My questions are to the Minister of Infrastructure. With a budget within approximately 5 per cent of the planned cost, why has the government not proceeded with this badly needed project?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, it would have been very helpful if the member would have told me what school it is that he’s talking about; I’m not sure. Certainly, within the city of Edmonton, in both the public and the separate boards, their utilization is still well below the 85 if you take it over the whole jurisdiction. There are some sectors that are somewhat higher, particularly in the separate board, and we, of course, have facilitated. As a matter of fact, since I was appointed Minister of Infrastructure, I have been present at the opening and/or the modernization of four separate schools and one public within the city of Edmonton, so over the last couple, three years.

I think that if we look at what has happened province-wide, in fact since the year 2000 we’ve spent some $1.1 billion on schools within the province, some 774 projects. So it’s not as though this government hasn’t been spending money on new schools and modernization within the province.

Dr. Massey: Thank you. I’m sorry, Mr. Speaker; I think the minister misunderstood. The school has been approved, and a budget of $4 million was established in 2000. So my question is: how can boards be expected to plan for student accommodation when four years after they have the approval for a building, they’re still not allowed to go to tender?

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, once again the member has not told me what school it is or what area. As I just indicated, just in schools alone we have some 774 projects, so if he comes to me and asks about one specific school, how am I supposed to know all 774 projects? I’m sorry, but I just don’t have that information right at my fingertips, especially when he does not even have the courtesy to tell me what the name of the school is.

Dr. Massey: Well, I’m sure there are a number of schools being built in Devon. It’s Evergreen Catholic separate regional.

My third question, then, is again to the minister. What does getting approval for a school mean if the school is never built?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, there’s a whole process that we go through, and the process starts off with the boards giving us their capital plan. They have to prioritize the plan. Then we take all of those from all of the jurisdictions within the province and prioritize them on a provincial basis. A school may get an approval but not with funding. Very often what happens after that process is that the next year or subsequent years the boards may very well have changed their capital plan and have raised another school to a priority. He’s suggesting that it was in the year 2000. We’ll try to research and find out exactly what has happened and give an answer, but it’s very, very interesting that he raises that here because I have met, as a matter of fact two weeks ago, with the separate board here in the city of Edmonton and they’ve never mentioned it, so I’m at a bit of a loss as to exactly what the problem is.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Health Care Funding and Revenue Generation

Dr. Pannu: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, after gouging Albertans on electricity, after forcing drivers to pay the highest car insurance in western Canada, after jacking up health premiums and 70 other user fees and taxes, apparently this government wants more. Apparently, it wants more out of the pockets of Albertans, for the Premier now says that the Graydon report, which called for user fees for health care, is still under active consideration. Apparently, this government now thinks that parents rushing children to the emergency room should have to worry about receiving a bill, as if any parent wants to think about that when their child is running a 104-degree temperature. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. On January 22 the minister ruled out accepting the Graydon report recommendations. Why?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that we have a good health care system. We have a good health care system in Canada, but the reality is – and Albertans and Canadians need to know this – that health care expenditures have risen between 8 and 10 per cent each year over the last 10 years and government revenues over the same period of time have only gone up 2 to 4 per cent a year. So that's the reason why a province like Nova Scotia now spends more than 50 per cent of its entire budget on one budget item, health care. They spend more on health care than everything else that they do put together.

Mr. Speaker, in this province we have the good fortune of resources that have assisted us, but the reality remains the same here. In 1993 roughly 24 per cent of our budget was spent on health care. That compares interestingly with 1971 when it was only about 10 per cent, and this year we'll spend about 36 per cent of our budget on health care, and in its current track we'll spend over 50 per cent within the medium-term future.

So, Mr. Speaker, we need to look at different ways of financing our health care system. We look for every efficiency that we can. We try our very best to pay for those things that make a difference to the health outcomes for individuals. We try our best not to waste our money. We try our very best to gear down our administrative costs, but we have to look at other jurisdictions around the world and ask: what is it that they're doing in their jurisdictions?

Now, let me say this, Mr. Speaker. In Canada we believe in values of sharing and caring as it relates to some of our social services, and one of our great social services in this country is medicare. We don't want to do anything to impair medicare, but unless we start looking at other ways of dealing with the ongoing costs and expenditures of our health care system, what will ultimately end up happening is that a duality in our health care system will accrue.

That means that there will be physicians who start to opt out of the Canada health system, and they will set up an entirely private system of health care. We will have at that point a two-tiered health care system, Mr. Speaker, something that we are very much committed to trying to avoid in the sense that our own provincial legislation adopts the principles of the Canada Health Act. But duality is inevitable, and it will be forced upon us by circumstances instead of by choice.

So, Mr. Speaker, we need to be open minded and looking at jurisdictions around the world, places that also have long traditions of social democracy and slightly left-of-centre perspectives when it comes to things like health care. We need to look at places like New Zealand. We need to look at Australia, we need to look at the U.K., we need to look at Sweden, and we need to look at France, all of which have elements of private and public delivery of health care service and all of which have elements where patients need to make a contribution to ensure that the health care system that they treasure is, in fact, sustainable.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On January 22 the minister gave reasons for not implementing the Graydon report, and they are as follows. He said that people in Alberta have not been clamouring for health care user fees, and therefore he wouldn't implement the Graydon report. What has changed from January 22 to today?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the whole issue of the Graydon report is not so much interesting from the point of view that it suggests that there is a single solution to this remorselessness of arithmetic of health care costs going up at 8 per cent and revenues going up by 4 per cent. The most important part of the Graydon report, in my opinion, is that it helps define the issue.

There are many Albertans who will talk about the issue in health care being one of access. But that's not the core issue, Mr. Speaker. The core issue is sustainability, and unless we come to grips with the fact, until Albertans and Canadians come to realize that something has got to give when you've got 8 per cent growth in expenditures and 4 per cent growth in revenues, we don't have a hope of ever dealing with the issues that precipitate from that, such as problems with access.

This, Mr. Speaker, is the reason why Mr. Romanow wonders out loud right now why a year after the Romanow report nobody has implemented his report. The reason is because Mr. Romanow, who I have a great deal of respect for, presented, frankly, a false picture of the choices that Canadians have. He suggested that your choice is between an American system that has 50 million uninsured Americans and tens of millions more underinsured or the Canadian system.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that if one looks at the World Health Organization's review of health care systems throughout the world, Canada is ranked somewhere around number 27. France is marked as number 1. I think that means that there are many choices along this continuum between the Canadian system and the American system that we should be responsible in looking at in order to determine: are there things that are being done in other jurisdictions in the world that can help make our health care system sustainable?

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the minister's flip-flop on this issue and given that the government is now actively considering the recommendations of the Graydon report, why won't the minister release the report and let Albertans have a say in the process?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we are going through that process right now. The hon. member doesn't know, having had no experience, how the process works for the release of reports. It goes through a process of going to our Agenda and Priorities Committee, it goes to our standing policy committees, it goes to our caucus, and it goes to our cabinet, all of which have the opportunity to vet it at each and every point before a report is released. That would be our intention, in fact, that if after going through that process, it's deemed that this report should be released, it will be.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona interjected at least six times in that last response. Is that really the way your students dealt with you in the classroom?

Thirty seconds from now we'll call on the first of the hon. members to participate in Members' Statements.

Well, hon. members, I can remember when I turned 40, so happy birthday to the hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

Alberta Winter Games

Mr. Friedel: I wish it was me.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the entire Peace country livened up to the sounds of excitement as several thousand young athletes, coaches, supervisors converged on the region for the 2004 Alberta Winter Games. For the first time in its history the games were hosted by multiple communities; in fact, 19 communities came together to sponsor and host the event. In spite of the logistical challenges of splitting the event venues among the communities, it worked out remarkably well, and all the reports that I heard were extremely positive.

On top of it all, the games coincided with the St. Isidore Winter Carnival, which is a major annual cultural event in the region. The two events gave our visitors an even broader perspective of the Peace country notwithstanding the added challenges to the volunteer pool.

It's hard for me to put into words the pride that I felt for the organizers when thousands of spectators converged, along with the athletes, for the spectacular opening event. Our Premier along with a number of my colleagues and the mayors, Reeves, and chiefs were there to show how proud we are of our province and our communities. I salute those who participated in the games and congratulate the winners of the various events.

The Peace country is renowned for its hospitality, but this one has to stand out as the mother of all co-operative events. It has opened the doors for other smaller communities to work together and host games of this stature in the future.

To all the organizers, the volunteers, the coaches and parents, and especially the athletes, we couldn't be prouder of you than we are right now. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Society for Treatment of Autism

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to bring to the attention of this House a growing problem for children and families in Alberta but also a message of hope. Autism is becoming one of the greatest threats to Canadian children today. It's now agreed that autism affects at least one in 300 children across Canada. Autism impairs communication and learning. Often children with autism don't understand the world around them, and there is nothing more crushing for a family than to receive the diagnosis of autism and to hear the words "there is no cure."

But there is hope. Early intensive treatment is remarkably effective in improving the lives of children with autism. This treatment can take children away from the path of institutionalization and reintegrate them with families and into schools. It is a miracle, but it needs our help.

In Calgary the Society for Treatment of Autism needs desperately to expand. A North American leader in autism treatment, the society needs the support of all Albertans to end waiting lists and provide treatment. Their dream of construction of a facility where all children with autism can receive treatment quickly and effectively is a dream shared by families across Alberta who have children with autism. Built on land they already own, opening in Alberta's centennial year of 2005, the new facility will create a critical mass of staff and expertise. It will allow the society to ensure that now and in the future children with autism never have to wait for much-needed treatment.

The society is working hard to raise private funds, but autism is a quiet affliction, one that does not generate headlines. For the families of children with autism there is no greater hope than for society to realize that they deserve help and that help makes a difference, and I call on this House today and on Albertans to lend a hand. We can't cure autism, but we can make a huge difference in the lives of hundreds of Albertans. Let's recognize the need, respond to that need, and give hope.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Government Travel Expenses

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, the people of Alberta expect this government to be responsible stewards of the public purse. However, this government provides very few details on its entertainment and travel expenses, and we believe Albertans deserve to know where their hard-earned tax dollars are going.

First, let's talk about the trips. Between the last election and January 2004 the government has released information on 122 out-of-province trips taken by ministers and MLAs. While the total reported cost of all trips was over a million dollars, the government did not publicly provide costs for 26 of those trips, so the actual total is probably considerably higher. The government also failed to provide itineraries for 79 of the trips. That means that taxpayers do not know specifically what business was conducted during these trips.

Now let's look at what those trips cost. When the Premier, the Minister of Economic Development, and the Minister of Energy went to New York in December 2002, taxpayers paid $8,320 for four days of car services, enough for over 250 trips from LaGuardia Airport to downtown Manhattan. During the same trip a senior staff member for Executive Council spent almost $6,000 in just four days on accommodation, food, and the mini-bar at the Sheraton Hotel. During the Team Canada mission to the U.K. and Ukraine in May 2002 the managing director of Alberta's trade office in London charged $15,720 to taxpayers, including $4,922 for accommodation, $4,511 for car service, and $1,451 on one lunch at the London Marriott Hotel, a lunch worth two weeks of an average Albertan's earnings.

Mr. Speaker, it's time this government came clean with Albertans and opened their books. This issue is not just about what the government spent but what they have not told us or refuse to tell us about what they spent.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Government Travel Expenses

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today many Albertans are questioning why the Premier and his entourage dumped taxpayers with an $8,320 bill for car service in New York City. Albertans want to know why they should have to foot such an outrageous bill.

The following are the government's top eight reasons why Albertans should pay $8,320 for them to ride around in luxury, according to their own document that we have obtained by a freedom of information and privacy request. Reason number one: it was holiday season in New York. Reason number two: at least five cabs to each event would have been required. Reason number three: travel times are longer in New York. Reason number four: they needed security when they were leaving the New York Yacht Club. Reason number five: briefing. Reason number six: the lines for taxis are too long. Reason number seven: meetings and dinners are too late at night. The number eight reason why the government is charging Albertans $8,320 for car service: they didn't want to go onto the street to capture taxis in New York City.

I would like to conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that a minimum-wage earner in Alberta would have to work 1,410 hours to make what the Premier and his entourage spent in four days on car services alone.

Thank you.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'd like to present a petition signed by a number of individuals. It looks like they're mostly living in Edmonton and St. Albert. They're asking the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to honour senior Albertans by "adopting the guidelines for rent increases pursuant to Section 14 of the Residential Tenancies Act" and "limit increases to no more than ten percent in any twelve month period" for long-term care.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, today I'll present a petition signed by approximately 150 people throughout Alberta who petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta "to support the establishment of Bighorn Country as a legislated protected area."

head: Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(2)(a) to give notice that on Monday I will move that written questions appearing on the Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

I'm also giving notice that on Monday I will move that motions for returns appearing on the Order Paper do also stand and retain their places.

head: Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004

Ms Graham: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon I request leave to introduce Bill 8, being the Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, will have the effect of modernizing the duty of care to be exercised by directors and officers of Alberta Blue Cross and the duties of the board as a whole, and it will also go a fair distance to create fair competition between Alberta Blue Cross and other private insurance companies in the area of private insurance. Under the amendments the Alberta Blue Cross Benefits Corporation will start paying a 2 per cent premium tax and a payment in lieu of federal and provincial tax on its private insurance programs. To be clear, these latter changes only affect private insurance programs offered by Blue Cross. They do not affect government-sponsored insurance programs.

[Motion carried; Bill 8 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 8, the Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, be moved under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Bill 9
Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use
Amendment Act, 2004

Ms Graham: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I also request leave to introduce Bill 9, being the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004.

The original act, the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act, was brought into force April 1, 2003, making it illegal for anyone under 18 to use or possess tobacco in a public place. Bill 9 will provide amendments that will clarify how the original act should be enforced to reduce tobacco use among youth and includes valid exemptions for tobacco use and possession by youth, such as allowing young sales clerks to sell tobacco in the workplace, permitting aboriginal youth the ceremonial use of tobacco, and allowing young people to be used in tobacco enforcement. There will also be amendments to provide a broader definition of public places where the act can be enforced, such as in school buildings, streets, shopping malls, and parks.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 9 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 9, Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004, be placed on the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

2:50
Bill 11
Alberta Personal Income Tax

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 11 will introduce amendments that will make technical and clarification changes to ensure that provincial legislation remains consistent with federal legislation, with current administration, and with other parts of the act.

Thank you very much.

[Motion carried; Bill 11 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004, be placed on the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Bill 201
Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access)

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004.

This bill will enable the creation of a new barrier-free design and access council as part of the Safety Codes Council, and it will also provide a greater opportunity for input regarding safety codes for persons with disabilities.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 201 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

Bill 202
Environmental Protection and Enhancement
(Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Masyk: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I rise and request leave to introduce a bill being Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004.

The purpose of Bill 202 is to reduce emissions of VOCs, or volatile organic compounds, during fuel storage and distribution by requiring all service stations, gasoline fuel cargo trucks, terminals to install stage 1 vapour recovery by the year of our Lord 2014.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 202 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got one document to table today. It's appropriate copies of the news release issued by the Minister of Health and Wellness dated January 22, 2004, in which the minister rejects the findings of the MLA Task Force on Health Care Funding and Revenue Generation because "most Albertans would not accept [the] recommendations."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one document as well to table, and it is the appropriate number of copies of the Weekly Livestock Market Review dated February 13, 2004. The review shows the distressing plummet of cattle prices in Alberta, with sales of livestock such as feeder heifers bringing in as little as 50 per cent of what they did a year ago.

head: Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 7(5) I would ask the Government House Leader to please share the projected government business for the week of February 23 to 26.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to respond. On Monday, February 23, in the afternoon we will have private members' business, Written Questions, and Motions for Returns, followed by Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders including Bill 201, Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004, and Bill 202, Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. In the evening under Motions Other than Government Motions we will deal with motions 501 and 502, thereafter under Government Bills and Orders addresses in reply to the Speech from the Throne and then second reading, perhaps Committee of the Whole as well depending on progress, on Bill 1, Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act; Bill 2, Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act; and Bill 4, Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004; and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

On Tuesday in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders

we will continue with addresses in reply to the Speech from the Throne, followed by second reading of Bill 5, the Family Support for Children With Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004, and Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004, then Committee of the Whole for bills 5 and 11 and otherwise as per the Order Paper. On Tuesday evening under Government Bills and Orders we will begin with second reading of Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004, followed by Committee of the Whole for bills 5, 11, and 6 and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

On Wednesday afternoon under Government Bills and Orders supplementary supply messages may be presented. Government motions may also be presented referring to Committee of Supply and the number of days required for Committee of Supply, followed by second reading of Bill 7, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 8, Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 9, Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004. Then Committee of the Whole will deal with bills 7, 8, and 9 and otherwise as per the Order Paper. On Wednesday evening under Government Bills and Orders, Committee of Supply, supplementary supply, day 1 of 1 is expected to occur, followed by second reading and possibly also Committee of the Whole for bills 7, 8, and 9 and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, February 26, in the afternoon we will deal with Government Bills and Orders, Introduction of Bills, Supplementary Supply Appropriation Act, second reading of bills 12 and 13, and third readings and otherwise as per the Order Paper. I should comment that we anticipate that bills 12 and 13, that I just alluded to for Thursday, will be introduced on February 24, two days earlier.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, you have received in the last several days the biographies of all the new pages, and I think they're quite energetic and quite enthusiastic, and they definitely will enforce the rule of no foreign objects in the Assembly until Orders of the Day is called.

Second Reading

Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a privilege to rise today to officially move this particular bill, Bill 4, the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004, at second reading.

I say that because it has been a long time coming, and I'm delighted that today we are joined by the guests I introduced earlier to you.

Mr. Speaker, in May of 2000 responsibility for the Blind Persons' Rights Act and its regulation, the guide dogs' qualification regulation, was transferred from Alberta Health and Wellness to my Ministry of Community Development. We are continuing on a journey of change with this Bill 4 that puts into place very important and much-needed changes to the Blind Persons' Rights Act. It closes the gap in our legislation and provides better protection for individual Albertans who are blind and require the use of a guide dog or a white cane.

One of these individuals is present here today with her dog. That is Diane Bergeron. Diane, as I indicated to the House earlier, is a special co-ordinator of the Advisory Board on Services for Persons with Disabilities and the City of Edmonton Youth Council. She also serves as a volunteer member of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, or CNIB, board. She has two children, and I'm so pleased that Summer, one of her children, was here today to be with her. She has a special two-year-old guide dog named Polar.

About two and a half years ago Diane and her children, accompanied by her guide dog of the day, were out buying groceries, Mr. Speaker. She called a taxi to take them home. Somewhere about 20 minutes later a cab pulled up in front of the doors, and as soon as the driver saw the dog beside Diane, the cab pulled away and left them standing there. Diane called the cab company, told the dispatcher what had happened. She was advised that the drivers could not be forced to pick them up even though there were three cabs from that company already sitting in that same parking lot. Obviously, she was upset that this would happen while she had her children with her particularly. I think her daughter still remembers seeing her crying in the store.

Diane is not alone in this particular situation, because we know that other Albertans are also telling us how they have been denied services in restaurants, denied access to shopping in local grocery stores, perhaps denied apartment accommodations and so on because of a no dog policy in those premises. Proposed amendments to the bill before us, the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004, are a step forward in creating an environment for Albertans that promotes a better understanding, promotes positive attitudes, attitudes that can contribute to the well-being of those who are blind.

I want to comment also on the stakeholder consultation that led up to the creation of these amendments. Changes and recommendations for change came from our stakeholders, the persons who will be served most by this particular set of amendments, and they also came from members of the general public. Many, many Albertans were consulted including a very public and open review process that strove to strike a balance in clarifying and strengthening the act as it pertains to the rights of blind persons.

The public review process that commenced in October of 2001 was in fact chaired by former Alberta Ombudsman Harley Johnson to address not only guide dogs but also assistive dogs that are trained for other purposes. These are dogs that are used by other disability groups such as persons who are deaf, hard of hearing, or suffer from seizures.

The final report from that chair was submitted in late 2001. Public feedback on the report through a standardized questionnaire was then initiated. It has always been my practice, Mr. Speaker, as you know, to release these reports to the public for another look, if you will, at what the actual recommendations look like.

We had many active discussions in that respect with Albertans who fed into the process and, quite obviously, with the persons with the CNIB. Included in that feedback from Albertans was the fact that guide dogs and other assistive dogs are very different in terms of need, in terms of requirement, certification, and scope and that these matters should be addressed separately. The feedback also identified that legislation concerning blind persons' rights should concentrate on the rights of those who are determined to be blind as well as the need to develop a better definition of blindness, a more medical and legal definition, if you like.

So we began looking at how we can bring into effect those important and necessary changes. Bill 4 is in response to what we heard, and it addresses the concerns raised by stakeholders, including changes to legislation affecting those individuals who rely upon the use of guide dogs. Individuals who rely upon assistive dogs for other purposes will continue to be protected as they already are by the Alberta Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Act.

Now, the amendments before us today clarify the existing Blind Persons' Rights Act, and they strengthen those areas that pertain to the rights of blind individuals. Quite specifically, Mr. Speaker, these amendments will do at least the following things. They will provide a more acceptable definition of blindness as determined by the medical profession. They will provide protection for certified dog trainers and for the dogs being trained. They will allow an identification card for the blind person guide dog team to be issued. They will provide ministerial authority for developing further regulations respecting qualifications for guide dogs. As well, they will establish higher maximum fines for violations of the act such as discrimination against a blind person accompanied by a guide dog or an individual purporting to be blind who is trying to garner benefits under the act.

For example, these fines will increase as follows. Discrimination against a blind person accompanied by a guide dog will increase threefold, from $1,000 to $3,000. An individual purporting to be blind to garner benefits under the act will see fines increased from $100 to $300, and with respect to abuse of white canes, individuals other than a blind person carrying a white cane in public places will see a penalty increasing from $25 to $250, a tenfold increase. These are very serious changes to a very serious issue within a very serious act.

Once the amending legislation is in place, we will also have mechanisms that will allow us to add other training facilities to the list of accredited facilities. You know, Mr. Speaker, as I was meeting with individuals from the blind community, I noted that there are about a dozen or so of these facilities across North America. There's only one in Canada, and it happens to be in Ottawa. I said to them, as I've said to others in the consultation process: why can't we have one of those facilities right here in Alberta? It would be another wonderful Alberta first, in this particular case specifically for the blind community. So we began looking at the possibility of doing that, and lo and behold I think we can and we will accomplish that. It will be a tremendously positive step forward in providing services to our blind community.

As I begin to wrap up, Mr. Speaker, I'll just add a few points. The amending legislation also will provide the minister of the day with the authority to make regulations respecting the qualifications for guide dogs, and this authority will expedite the process for making regulatory amendments such as adding additional training facilities to the accredited list, be they here in Alberta or elsewhere.

I recall one of my colleagues having said on several occasions that change is a journey, not a destination. Through the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004, we will continue to create an Alberta that builds on what we already have and ensures that all Albertans enjoy the highest possible quality of life with a particular focus on the most vulnerable members of our communities. By doing this, I'm confident that we will be creating a place with a very level playing field for Diane, for her family, and for all Albertans, a place that encourages a more effective delivery of programs for those who are disabled and that promotes positive attitudes while raising awareness of these important issues.

In this respect, I want to sincerely thank the CNIB and their representatives who are here with us today – Mr. O'Donnell, Mr. McKeown, Ms Shuster, and, of course, Diane – and also my own staff members who have been working so diligently on this. Andrew Turzansky, whom I introduced to you earlier, has been extremely helpful, and he's become a closer friend probably to the community and to the department for his leadership in this respect.

For their help, for their stewardship, and for the care and concern that the CNIB have shown and continue to show daily for blind, deaf-blind, and for all vision impaired individuals, they were certainly warmly received at an inaugural event in our community last evening. I think we had just under 1,000 people who came out to show support and respect for the CNIB and the many individuals that they serve. It was a particularly special night not only for the CNIB but also for our government because yesterday was the day that we actually had this bill introduced at first reading, and I was so privileged to do that.

At the same time, it was also the inauguration of what I hope will become a long-standing tradition, a fundraiser, as it were, with a sharp focus on not only raising funds but also raising awareness for issues pertaining to the blind community. In that respect, they provided the first ever Vision award to our Premier. I know that the Premier's work in this area goes back to at least 1980, if that is correct – I think it is – when he was mayor of Calgary, and we saw that in some of the film footage, Mr. Speaker, that was shown yesterday.

We also were shown what some of the issues are that blind individuals face on a daily basis, and we saw how much hope was given to people who have suddenly become blind or to the young children who are born blind. It was a tremendous message, and I'm so glad that so many of our colleagues from the Legislature were able to be there with us.

We've met many times with the CNIB. I think we will continue to meet many more times as we move this bill along and as we address these very important needs that reflect the needs of the blind persons' community and their guide dogs and the facilities that are needed to help ensure that that infrastructure remains solid and continues to be the best that our province can provide.

Thank you very much. I look forward to your support for this important Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am very pleased to be able to rise today and add my comments to the record in second reading for Bill 4, the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004. This has been a long time coming. I can remember that it was some time ago, I think actually at the end of my first term, that this issue first came up legislatively with a bill introduced by the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, if I remember correctly. I think we adjourned from the sitting before it got a full debate.

We've had a review, as the minister mentioned, launched in October, public reaction to the initial report, then a final report submitted to the minister by the end of December of 2001, and some additional questionnaires, the minister says. I wasn't aware of that particular consultation or go-round but certainly take his word for it.

I'm just going to go through the issues about why there's been a need for an update of this particular act. Essentially, what we've had is two acts that offered protection for people with a visual disability, and those are the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Act and then the Blind Persons' Rights Act. This was to make sure that people were not facing any kind of prohibition or discrimination around accommodation and facilities, tenancies, housing, employment, access to government programs and services. All of those are protections meant to be offered to various individuals.

The Blind Persons' Rights Act quite specifically was setting out to make sure that no one was impersonating a blind person, so there was mention of not using the white cane and quite a bit of detail around a white cane. I even noticed that the original wording talked about the white cane being painted over a certain percentage of its surface, which certainly does date it as now I think many of them, in fact, have a plastic covering or are made of some material that doesn't require painting.

A number of other things were in that bill. There was a definition of blindness, referring to someone registered as blind at the CNIB or who is receiving a pension as a result of blindness or an eye specialist has certified them to be according to a particular chart. It also went further to define "guide dog." That act has been problematic for some time for a number of reasons. The duplication in itself in that the blind persons are protected by both pieces of legislation can create some confusion, I think.

The enforcement of it. I think there have been problems with the police and the prosecutors being reluctant to act on complaints made under the Blind Persons' Rights Act because there are comparable sections available under the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Act. That shouldn't have been a reason for no action to be taken at all, but enforcement seemed to be a problem.

The timeliness of resolving complaints. Some cases were resolved very quickly, but others took a lot longer, and it seemed that the ones that came forward under the Blind Persons' Rights Act hardly ever got resolved at all, which became problematic.

I in particular heard about the issues raised under accreditation and training. We need to know that the guide dogs have been trained and there's a standardized training, and that also offers reassurance to people who are working with the dogs. What we had was that the owner of a training school had to apply to the government to be included on the list of qualified institutions, but then there was no follow-up to make sure that that school or that individual trainer met any kind of ongoing standards or upgrading or anything else. There was no monitoring or evaluation to make sure that everybody stayed current and that acceptable standards were upheld.

Those regulations have not been updated since 1986, and the list of training institutions was not maintained, so there was a great deal of consternation over that. In fact, I can think of one individual with a dog that I'm sure was not trained at an accredited training institution, and yet they are out there with that dog. You know, that causes worry for the public, for the individual, and for everyone else that's trying to uphold the use of service dogs like blind dogs.

I wasn't aware of this until I started doing the research, but there was also a provision in the act that said that the CNIB would issue identification cards for the individual and for their dog, and in fact the CNIB has never done that and didn't really want to do it, and thus you see in the amending act that the ministry will take that over.

Aside from the currency of the accreditation and training the second-largest complaint or number of complaints that I heard about the Blind Persons' Rights Act was that it was not taking into consideration all of the other kinds of assistance animals that had come into fairly common usage. Essentially, there are service dogs, signal dogs, and assistance dogs. Right now we only have legislation that protects people that are using guide dogs for the blind.

There are hearing ear dogs. There are seizure dogs. There are special highly trained protection dogs for people who have been stalked or are under imminent threat of attack, and the dog is always with them and will protect them. That's a difficult one for many business owners and people to deal with. Nonetheless, it's a dog for a very specific reason to assist people. We've assistance dogs like the ones you see that work with children with autism, for example, or with people with mobility problems. They help, you know, turn on lights and appliances and pick things up that people that are in wheelchairs may drop. So that's an assistance dog, and there's nothing in the legislation that allows people to have those dogs and to have the same protection as is offered to the guide dogs. So there is no question that there was a need for an update in this bill.

Okay. So we had the need. We went through all of the consultations, and what came out of the focus groups and the resultant feedback loops was that there is still a problem with restaurants. We heard a story from the minister about taxicabs, a number of providers of services not understanding and not recognizing the guide dogs, and that lack of public awareness is still the biggest barrier.

I've already talked about the issue about the other kinds of assistance and service and signal animals, and although the minister said that they would be protected under the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Act, in fact they're not protected in the same way that guide dogs are. There was a great desire to have those animals brought in under the act, and there certainly was a lot of discussion in the focus groups of that.

There is a real need for very clear training guidelines and upholding monitoring and evaluation of the trainers and the training institutions. There's a need to balance the rights of the dog handler or the person who is using the dog and their ability to control the animal in public. We need people to feel confident when they're in public with a dog that's being used as an assistance animal that that animal is clearly under the control of the person that's working with them.

The CNIB, whose main office is, in fact, in my constituency, developed a very strong position, and they put it forward to me at one point that they wanted to see this act, the Blind Persons' Rights Act, remain pretty much as it was, to not include additional kinds of service animals and, further, that they felt – and they did a good job of lobbying for it – that there should be some expansion and strengthening of the act to, you know, provide some additional assistance to students around Braille materials and classroom education in Braille. They had a very effective lobbying strategy to get that point of view across, and that was sort of balanced on the other side with those people that wanted to see the legislation expanded. So that's kind of the background and history of this.

I'm willing to support the act as brought forward by the Minister of Community Development, but I am disappointed that we are not looking at Bill 5 being, you know, the assistance animal act. Clearly, there's a need for that. There was a great deal of time and effort put in by people to say: we need this. If the choice by the government was not to include those animals under the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, to leave that as it is pretty much, then I think we should have seen the second piece of legislation come forward at the same time because we've waited.

I mean, 1980 I think is the originating act for the Blind Persons' Rights Act. We're now in 2004, so it took us 24 years to get a good amending act in front of us. I'm assuming that this is going to pass now. I don't want to have to wait 24 years to get an assistive or service animal act in front of the Legislature, and I think that if the minister were really committed to that, he should have brought it forward as a companion piece.

So that's my concern with what's happened in this process. I have no problem with the act as it's in front of us, but the process was not completed. There's a need for some sort of legislated protection against discrimination for people that use other kinds of service animals. We needed the same kinds of rules around monitoring and evaluation and registration of training facilities and of trainers for those other kinds of service and assistance animals, and we just don't have it. So we've got half the equation here.

Now, as I said, I'm more than happy to support the first half of the equation, but I really wanted to see the second half of the equation. All of the groundwork has been done, so I'm disappointed that the government didn't take the time when they had it to come forward with the rest of what we need here.

From all of that work – from the 24 years, from the consultation process that started in October of 2001, and here we are in February of 2004 so over two years – what we have are some fairly minor changes to the Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, essentially an update in the definition so that it's not quite so loosey-goosey and is looking for a medical definition. We've got fines for someone using a white cane who isn't visually impaired, fines and prohibitions for impersonating a blind person. It's including the protections and extending the protections and privileges to the trainers who are out on the street training or taking dogs that are being trained into cabs and places like that.

It includes, again, that standard clause, that the government always does and that I loathe and detest, about everything further is done by regulation behind closed doors with the minister with one exception, and that's the updating of the list of approved trainers. Finally, the minister is going to take over – well, I guess start, because there doesn't seem to have ever been anyone that actually issued the ID cards. So the minister would be responsible for issuing the ID cards. So all of that 24 years plus the consultation has resulted in five changes. As I say, I don't need to belabour the point. It's all there.

Oh, the one thing was that we've over the years, of course, heard from a number of individuals who felt very strongly about this. Just one that I'll highlight is Harry Lunscher, who's from Lethbridge. He was one of the ones that has written repeatedly to members of the Official Opposition caucus talking about his disappointment that this proposed act would only deal with sight assistance dogs and not with all service dogs, his point being that service dogs are used in support of lifestyles that go well beyond sight assistance. He and his wife use one. He's prone to falls and his wife is hearing impaired, so their dog T.J. helps them enjoy life to the fullest, and he doesn't get the same protection for T.J. that someone with a guide dog does.

He's been in touch with the Premier. He's been in touch with, I'm sure, many of my colleagues here in the House trying to lobby to have all service dogs included. Others went further and wanted it to be service animals because there are certain animals that are much more sensitive to be of assistance, like seizure animals. Certain ones are better at detecting the seizures coming. I've got a number of letters here from him. That's just one. He was writing at that point in June of 2001 in support of Bill 219, which was then the one brought forward by the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan in which he was hoping it would pass because that one was bringing forward an act that brought hearing ear dogs or assistance dogs for the deaf into the Blind Persons' Rights Act, and that was sort of the first go at this.

I just wanted to point out, you know, how important it is to a whole other section of people that we do address and offer protection to those that are using other kinds of service and assistance and signal animals, and I hope that before we leave this spring session we will see the government bring forward the companion act to this one. In the meantime I am happy to state my support in second reading in principle for Bill 4.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities I'm pleased to speaking in support of this bill. Bill 4 does a number of things. First of all, it clarifies guide dog certification and monitoring rules. It protects those who train these exceptional dogs. It strengthens the definition of blindness and helps prevent discrimination against those who use a guide dog.

I'm supportive of this bill also because it's one more step towards a barrier-free Alberta. It supports the spirit and the intent of the Alberta disability strategy that was developed by the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities. In it there's a call for full citizenship for persons with disabilities, and full citizenship means enabling persons with disabilities to be independent, to make choices, and to access opportunities to fully contribute to our society. The Premier's council believes that the lives of persons with disabilities can be improved if we break down those barriers, those barriers that prevent disabled individuals from contributing fully and participating. Bill 4 supports this belief in tangible ways, the way in which blind people and their guide dogs are perceived and treated.

Through my role as chair of the Premier's council I have the privilege to meet and know many people throughout the province with physical and mental disabilities. Almost to a person their frustrations in life are not connected to their disability but rather the limitations on their lifestyle that's imposed on them often by the opinions of others. These limitations are usually a result of preconceptions, assumptions, or just plain old lack of understanding and education.

I've been privileged in my time working with the council and being associated with the council members to learn a great deal about their issues. One example that stands out in my mind is the time I exited a building with one of our council members who was blind and accompanied by a Seeing Eye dog. We were coming up to a row of taxis waiting for customers and Shirley was a little bit ahead of me with her guide dog, Willie, and as she was walking along the first taxi driver sort of was there, and he indicated that he was waiting for somebody or he was in use. I don't remember exactly. I wasn't sure that he was actually waiting for a customer and had already committed to somebody.

Anyway, I ended up walking ahead and it appeared, I think, to the second driver in the second car that I was by myself. "Taxi, sir?" he says. I said, "Yeah. Great." So I gave him my little briefcase, or whatever it was, and he threw it in the trunk, and then I said, "Shirley, throw this in too." He nearly fell over because here was this other person accompanied by a dog, and I'm sure – I suspect, anyway – that Shirley would have been denied service if she had been alone and had been asking for cab service.

In another set of circumstances when Shirley and I took a cab to someplace else, the cab driver was not pleased in that circumstance either. Yet this dog, Willie, that Shirley has is one of the most obedient animals that I think anybody could ever see. It's an amazing dog. Shirley tells me that the many trips she's been on – for example, she goes across Canada to Newfoundland – Willie curls up under the seat on the plane. Shirley reports good service from the airlines. Willie will curl up under the seat and stay there for five or six hours without moving and then re-emerges from underneath, and people around are really surprised, you know, because Shirley would board first, that this dog was on the plane.

These are obedient dogs; they are well trained. These people face many challenges taking these dogs with them. Being in meetings with Shirley and seeing how she's always compelled to, you know, take Willie out during lunchtime so Willie can have a little break and get out there – she's got issues of dealing with dog droppings and disposing of those. Another big issue is pets. Whereas Willie is a well-behaved dog, if another dog comes along under poor control by its owner, runs up, starts barking and chasing Willie around, it's very difficult. Here we have a lady, unable to see anything and trying to control her dog, not knowing what's going on, and the other person not controlling their pet. A difficult situation.

It was interesting for me last night at the CNIB Vision awards, and many of you were there. There were many dogs around. There was a bunch of noise at one time when people were doing something with different instruments just as a kind of entertainment time and lots of racket. I'm sure that there was not a single dog bark heard in that whole facility from all those Seeing Eye dogs that were there. They are under control, they are trained, and they are a credit to the people who are engaged in that industry to take care of them.

Something else that we've observed lately that is quite a change as well is the increase in the number of dogs in training that we see around. I don't know what agencies are doing that here in Alberta, but I do see quite a few of those dogs. Quite a few of those dogs have little signs on them saying: I'm in training. Some other dogs that are qualified, certified Seeing Eye dogs have: I'm a working dog; do not pet.

When I first became acquainted with Shirley and her Seeing Eye dog, Willie, you know, you tend to reach down and pat it, and if you like dogs, you scratch it behind the ears and so on. Everybody does that. It's a typical reaction. Those dogs are working animals, and they aren't pets. They aren't to be treated that way. It's encouraging to see those little signs that they do have on there. It's an education for the rest of us. We need to be educated in so many ways about the needs of people with disabilities that we just don't understand. So that's been an interesting observation over the past few years, to see how that's been happening with those dogs.

I'm appreciative, too, of this bill for the increase in the penalties that are mentioned. They're significant penalties, and they cut both ways. I'm aware of a situation in another jurisdiction. I have been in meetings in this circumstance. There was a person using a dog who didn't really seem to need this. It was an assistive dog. Just recently a fellow told me about how this wasn't really a trained dog; it wasn't necessary. The person wasn't utilizing it, as I kind of suspected. He was commenting on how that inappropriate use destroyed both his credibility as an individual and also jeopardized the work of people like the CNIB who are promoting the use of legitimate guide dogs, well-trained and useful to people with vision difficulties.

Mr. Speaker, a barrier-free Alberta is certainly possible if we have the will and the commitment to make it happen, and Bill 4 helps us get one step closer to that goal. I'd encourage all members to support me in supporting this Bill 4, and at this time I'd just like to adjourn debate on Bill 4.

Consideration of Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Griffiths moved that an humble address be presented to Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To Her Honour the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank you, Your Honour, for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate February 18: Mr. McClelland]

Ms Haley: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne. The vision outlined within it comes at a truly momentous time as we approach our second century as a province. I would like to thank the Lieutenant Governor for so graciously beginning our session, and I am glad, as are all Albertans, that she is in good health in both body and spirit.

The Speech from the Throne covered many areas of great importance to Albertans. However, the area of greatest interest to me is the strategic plan. I appreciate that there are four distinct pillars to this plan; however, what I am most excited about in this speech is the part of the strategic plan that allows us to look forward on an economic basis. The plan is designed to set out a 20-year vision for Alberta, and that gives us a starting point to plan how we can continue to diversify our economy as we move further into the 21st century.

As a child growing up in the oil patch, I always knew how important the oil and gas industry was to our province's economic well-being. Moreover, I believe it will be of major importance for years to come. What I hope we can accomplish with the plan is to capitalize on the opportunities that allow us to further develop both our nonrenewable and our renewable resources as well as to pursue innovation- and knowledge-based sectors at a time that our economy is so strong. While our manufacturing sector is doing better and more jobs are being created in that area of our workforce, the real truth is that for too long now we have been shipping out our oil and gas, our live cattle, our grain and oilseed by the bushel, and our forest products with little or no value added to them, and value added is what I want to talk about today.

Almost a hundred years ago in Alberta no one could have imagined the massive changes that have occurred from cars and planes to electricity and running water, to plasma screen TVs, to towers that reach to the sky, let alone computers and the Internet. I mean, even 30 years ago people were lucky if they had a set of encyclopedias in their homes let alone the amazing information that we have access to today just by turning on a computer and surfing the web.

This second century that we are approaching will hold more changes than any of us can even begin to imagine. It is possible that a hundred years from now people could be living on other planets. Perhaps mundane issues like trying to build roads will no longer be quite so important. The sky is truly the limit, and Albertans with their go-to-it attitude will be major players in anything that is going to happen. But one thing is for sure: this is the time right now that we have to further develop our own unique industries in Alberta. We cannot sit back and say that things are just fine the way they are now. We do not have the luxury of taking anything for granted, particularly the surpluses that we have been so fortunate to achieve when oil and gas prices are high. This is precisely the time that we have to take advantage of our economic well-being to further diversify our economic base.

I would like to talk about the kinds of things that I think we can do even in the short term and where I think there are some issues that truly we need to deal with. We all know about and many of us have seen the petrochemical plants at Joffre and the magnitude of the multibillion dollar investments this industry created when they were able to strip certain gas components like ethane or butane, propane, and condensate from our own resources. It has allowed the private sector to make huge investments in our province, create great jobs, and further diversify our economy. The best part, Mr. Speaker, is that once these products were stripped out, we were still able to sell natural gas to heat homes in other parts of Canada or the United States.

However, several years ago the federal government's National Energy Board decided against allowing Alberta corporations to strip out by-products when they approved the construction of the Alliance pipeline. This allows the petrochemical industry in Chicago to strip those same products out of our gas, allowing American industry to grow and flourish while our local producers struggle to secure an adequate supply for their production needs. It is clear to me that part of the strategic plan is to have the federal government be more willing to help all provinces in Canada achieve all that they can and not hamper progress or be at cross-purposes with the various regions of this country. In fact, it is time to adopt a policy all over this country of recognizing and encouraging strength and diversity. Whether it is the situation like the National Energy Board created or like the feds are creating now by trying to leave Alberta out of the negotiations with our industries on the Kyoto protocol, these types of situations have to be resolved.

Another sector that could benefit from a better-defined value-added policy is the secondary manufacturers of forest products. At just one plant in Crossfield Palliser Lumber has created over 125 jobs and many value-added products that are sold not just here in Alberta but as far away as Texas. You have to admit, Mr. Speaker, that it beats just shipping logs out of our province.

We have a very young secondary manufacturing industry in Alberta, and we need to nurture it so that it can develop into a viable contributor to our economy. It makes so much sense that you have to wonder why these same companies are struggling to exist. Well, it turns out, Mr. Speaker, that in a province where 60 per cent of the land mass is covered with forest, these companies struggle to acquire the very fibre they need to run their businesses. Perhaps the first step in helping them to make this value-added sector viable is to indicate to the big forest product companies that it might be a good idea to leave some fibre inside the province so that the secondary manufacturers could utilize it. Possibly a way to encourage them would be to tie their contribution of fibre to their forest management agreements. You have to wonder, if there was just a little more processing going on here and less raw wood leaving our province, whether or not the softwood lumber issue would be a little less damaging than it is today.

Another obvious area that will benefit from a better value-added strategy is agriculture. In this area, I want to give credit where credit is due. Much has been done, but much more needs to be done. Many Albertans can understand the whole concept of value added much more easily when we look at some simple products. A loaf of bread in some specialty shops can sell for more than a whole bushel of wheat. A bottle of Canadian Club rye whisky sells for more than about 10 bushels of rye. And, of course, there is beer, everyone's favourite barley product, and for some strange reason it has a much higher value than a bushel of barley. Now, that, Mr. Speaker, is what value-added is all about.

Many consumers appreciate the ready-to-consume products that require little effort to prepare after a long day at work. The more of that that can be done in our own province, where the raw materials are, the more jobs can be created and the higher the value of those products being sold.

The government of Alberta has assisted value-added agriculture by funding organizations like AVAC. It is a research arm designed to assist in product research, development, and production possibilities. There are other groups and organizations throughout the province, but many of them face the same obstacles.

Once again, we have to look at the federal government together with the Canadian Wheat Board, as they seem to be at cross-purposes to our value-added strategy. The anomaly of the shipping and elevation charges on board-controlled wheat and grain means that you would be hard-pressed to find a pasta manufacturer inside

Alberta. In fact, in the very province where some of the world's best durum wheat is grown, it is not economically viable to make pasta. That is just one more of the ludicrous situations we find ourselves in because of the Wheat Board's antiquated and counterproductive rules. The good news for canola producers is that the Wheat Board doesn't control it, and that is why we have a successful canola-crushing industry in our province.

It is not rocket science; it is just common sense but an important area that must be dealt with so that our province can benefit from the spinoff value of our own products. Many of our producers have discovered the importance of growing niche crops like mustard seed, canary seed, lentils, peas, flax, or oats. All of these crops allow us to look at further adding value to our products. Being able to ship Alberta beef in boxes or to make pet food and suede coats creates jobs here at home rather than outside our province.

I can only hope and pray that our beef industry can survive this crazy situation that we find ourselves in because of one case of mad cow disease. Perhaps the challenge we will face when it does finally end will be to consider whether we really want to continue being reliant on shipping live cattle out of our province. Or do we want to further add value to that product as we redevelop our markets in what will no doubt be a very different cattle business than it is today?

As someone that farmed and ranched in Alberta, I have to say that one day our producers are going to have to look carefully at the wisdom of growing crops and raising cattle for an export market. We are all learning the hard way that commodity market trends are down, that it is getting more and more difficult all the time to even get close to breaking even on import costs let alone make enough money to keep a farm viable.

We must use all of our ingenuity to find ways to add value to our agriculture products if we want farming to even continue in Alberta. I know that many people in this industry are looking at the situation, and I am confident in them and in their ability to find the silver lining in this incredibly dark cloud. The people who stay in this industry are some of Alberta's finest residents, and I wish them all the very best as they go through these difficult days filled with even more difficult decisions.

Another element of the value-added strategy that I want to talk about is knowledge-based industries. The big question is: what can we do to encourage such companies to come here? It appears that the strategy most commonly utilized by other provinces and the United States was to come up with incentive programs for these industries. Alberta is not competitive in this sector. The result is that most of the research and development funding in Alberta comes from government sources. Further, Alberta, with the third-largest economy in Canada, has only 1.5 per cent of the venture capital. These are things that need to change drastically if we are to become not just competitive but a leader in this field.

When I look at value-added, I see that government has to assess very carefully where it is important to level the playing field and make Alberta a strong competitor, one that is capable of attracting corporate research and development and venture capital as well as technology commercialization. For too long now research that is finally at the point where one can commercialize it has been leaving our province. This needs to change so that as taxpayers we can see the world's best research culminate in innovative products and technologies developed and marketed right here at home.

Our ingenuity fund is helping to make it possible for Alberta to have some of the finest researchers anywhere in the world locate right here. However, our inability to capitalize on what they develop is leaving the glass half full. As we get deeper into things like nanotechnology, I hope that we will have found a way to keep the spinoff industries here, that that, in fact, Mr. Speaker, may well be the next oil and gas business for our province.

Film is an example of an industry that receives tax credits both federally and provincially in all parts of Canada, the United States, as well as Europe, New Zealand, and Australia. In order to have any film production done in Alberta at all, we had to come up with a program to assist this industry. The Alberta film development program has helped, and in fact many Alberta producers and crew members have moved back from other provinces to help re-establish our industry. Unfortunately, our program, the way it sits now, does not attract big productions over $10 million, nor do we have the ability to work with offshore and guest production on a direct basis. We do, however, work with our own Alberta-based producers, who are able to enter into co-production work and still access our program.

This past year in Alberta close to $100 million in production has been done, but that is a far cry from the $400 million or $500 million that should be done here if we were to achieve even 10 per cent of what is being done in Canada. Also, with a cap in place on our fund at $10 million in this past fiscal year, we find ourselves hemorrhaging production into other provinces, and there is not enough money in our fund to do all of the business that should be done here, so they go where the tax credits are.

As well, this winter we have lost Great North Productions out of Alberta, and the reason was simple: they could not assure their owners, Alliance Atlantis, that when they were ready to move into production, they would in fact be able to access our fund. This company was doing over $30 million worth of production in Alberta, and it is a real loss for Edmonton.

So once again I find myself looking forward to the budget because I hope that Treasury Board will recognize the importance of this industry to Alberta, to our communities, and particularly to our tourism sector. If you wonder at all about the logic of that, I leave you with this thought on film. The country of New Zealand has seen a $3.8 billion economic benefit thanks to a $200 million tax credit given to the producers of The Lord of the Rings.

Mr. Speaker, I'm absolutely delighted that my government has set out a 20-year strategic plan, and I know that as we move further down this road, there will be things that will need to be looked at including using our fiscal policy to ensure that we're competitive with other jurisdictions. We're a very young province – we're only 99 years old – competing with cultures that are thousands of years old. Even just in Canada alone we have had to do in less than a hundred years that which our eastern cousins have had over 300 years to accomplish. I do not see it as a disadvantage, but what I do see is that we have to take the time to look at the whole picture. We would not have the economic benefit of the tar sands and billions of dollars in investment they have created had we not had a government willing to find ways to assist that industry in the beginning.

As we take steps into the second century of our province's history, we must be bold. We must find ways to convince the federal government to work with us and not against us so that we may find ways to achieve our full potential. It is time to unleash innovation that focuses on becoming a world leader in research, development, and commercialization of new ideas. This applies to both our existing strengths in energy, agriculture, forestry as well as new businesses that create wealth by commercializing new technologies, creating new products, and adding value at home and for export abroad.

We must find the strength of will to look at our fiscal policies for ways to help our economy move past the hewers of wood and drawers of water attitudes that have plagued us for decades and instead allow us to fully capture our own economic diversity. I am excited about our future, Mr. Speaker. I think the 21st century truly belongs to us.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It was indeed a pleasure to hear Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor deliver the throne speech. As always Her Honour brought renewed warmth and grace to this Chamber. I would also like to add my voice to those of my colleagues in expressing my hope that Her Honour will remain in office for at least the duration of next year's centennial celebrations. She does tremendous credit to her office, and I very much appreciate her contribution to the entire province.

The content of the speech of course, Mr. Speaker, as we know, is determined by the government, and Tuesday's throne speech certainly lacked the vision that I had hoped to see for this province. It lacked commitment, and it lacked any sense that this government has a plan for Alberta beyond the next election. Indeed, this government's insistence on setting policy according to the election cycle clearly demonstrates that their priority is on their own political survival rather than the long-term quality of Albertans' lives.

Mr. Speaker, the 20-year plan that has been spoken of by the Premier among others is in my view the height of arrogance. To suggest that this government with its record can make a plan for 20 years into the future is a joke. As one commentator put it: "Who are they trying to kid? They can't even stick to a plan for one year."

Mr. Speaker, I could list file after file that this government has bungled. I could bemoan the damaged relations between this government and Alberta's teachers. I could scold the government for abandoning seniors and condemning postsecondary students to massive debt loads. I could speak at some length about why I believe that this is perhaps the worst government in this country. But last year the government caucus felt it necessary to reduce the time that members are allowed to speak on matters such as this, limiting thereby the amount of debate time in this Assembly. Of course, such restrictions are to be expected from a government that has used closure to choke off debate more than any other jurisdiction in Canada and which boasts the fewest sitting days of any Assembly in Canada other than Prince Edward Island.

Alberta is suffering under a democratic deficit that is becoming wider and wider. A recent study by the Parkland Institute entitled Trouble in Paradise? found that 60 per cent of Albertans believe that our democracy is unhealthy and that 79 per cent feel that big business has too much influence on government policy. This growing skepticism about democracy in Alberta is symptomatic of a core problem: we've had a single party in power for far too long.

This longevity has led in the worst cases to outright arrogance – and we've seen that just in the last couple of days, hon. members – and to a closed-door approach to policy-making. No wonder, then, that there's a growing disconnect between the priorities of Albertans and the priorities of this government. There is, of course, the old saw that practice makes perfect, but in this case the exception seems to prove the rule. In fact, for this government the longer they have to play at politics, the more their mistakes and the accumulated effects of years of mismanagement begin to catch up.

For example, Mr. Speaker, as I travel through Alberta, I hear from both rural and urban Albertans that something doesn't quite sit right about how the government has handled and is handling the whole question of BSE. We found one cow, and the answer of the government was: well, it's just one cow. Well, then they found a second cow, and that, I think, underlined the ineffectiveness of the government's response to that point. On one hand, the government claims that consumers can feel secure in the safety of their food supply, yet on the other hand they have done nothing to ramp up testing to meet even the standards in Europe.

Again the government claims to be fighting for our farmers, but it was this government that closed labs in Fairview, Airdrie, and Lethbridge, forcing farmers to use private labs at their own expense, and established full cost recovery programs for livestock inspection and branding services. It was this government that in 2001 amended the Agricultural Operation Practices Act to eliminate local communities' ability to interfere with the siting of massive intensive livestock operations. It is this government that has allowed rural infrastructure to crumble and decay, only offering some relief now that the election is nearly upon us.

Rural Albertans can be forgiven for feeling a little confused about this government's attitude towards our agricultural heritage. Judging by the lack of leadership that has been shown on this issue and the contradictory statements coming from the Premier, on the one hand, and the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development on the other, it seems that the government itself is confused about the future of rural Alberta.

Even worse, the longer this government is allowed to hold power the more devastating will be the cumulative effects of nearsighted privatization and lack of investment in our infrastructure.

Let me be clear, Mr. Speaker. This is a government that revels in nearsightedness and contradiction. Only a government that has overstayed its welcome could produce environment policies that indicate that the best way to reduce greenhouse gas emissions is to increase their production and in the water for life strategy indicate that the best way to conserve water is to allow more of it to be used. Perhaps someone should explain to the government that George Orwell's ominous predictions about doublespeak were meant as a warning, not as a business plan for Conservative cabinet members.

But if anything positive can be said about this government, it's this: they are clearly a united team. When the Learning minister forced the layoff of 1,000 teachers in Alberta while claiming school boards were receiving adequate funding, the team stood behind him. When a year later the Learning Commission noted that not only should those teachers not have been laid off but that funding should be provided for an additional 1,500 teaching positions, the team stood together and pretended that the minister had never claimed that funding was already inadequate.

As a team this government allowed insurance premiums to skyrocket way past the levels in other western provinces. Then as a team this government locked in rates that were 57 per cent higher than those a year before with no clear plan to bring those rates down.

Let's not forget, Mr. Speaker, about the highly specialized section of the government team, the so-called Edmonton caucus. The commitment and unity shown by the Edmonton caucus as they watched the Electoral Boundaries Commission eliminate an Edmonton riding, as they watched the Calgary school board receive funding that Edmonton school boards did not, and when they allowed discrimination in auto insurance rates for the misfortune of having registered your vehicle in Edmonton, it was breathtaking to be seen.

Now, when confronted by these messes of their own making, the government, led by the Premier, has a very simple strategy. It's called blame it on the feds. They have elevated the science of distraction and misdirection into an art form. We have a government that cries and complains about the $1 billion spent by the federal government on the gun registry, and justly so, I might add, Mr. Speaker. However, they conveniently ignore the $6 billion that has been drained from Alberta's economy by a bungled electricity deregulation agenda.

This government likes to gnash its teeth and to wail about the delay in the $2 billion promised to the provinces for health care funding while behind closed doors plans to privatize our medicare system are carefully put into place. The Premier and the Minister of Health and Wellness hope that if they focus enough attention on the federal government, then no one will notice as services are reduced, user fees are increased, and profit is slowly allowed to eat up more and more of our health care dollars.

Tuesday's throne speech did bless us with one bit of distraction not undertaken at the expense of the federal government: the government's promise to throw money at people who don't even exist yet. The Alberta centennial education savings plan is clearly an attempt to throw money at babies fortunate enough to be born during an election year. The plan does nothing to address the massive debt loads faced by today's postsecondary students. It does nothing to make higher education accessible to the thousands of Albertans who would like to continue their learning but simply cannot afford to do so. Rather than simply freezing tuition fees now, a move that could be paid for by ending the unnecessary subsidy to the horse racing industry, this government is planning to make education so expensive that families will have to spend 20 years in preparing for one child to attend university. Mr. Speaker, I said at the beginning of my comments that this is arguably the worst government in Canada.

To conclude I would like to tell this Assembly that I'm proud that New Democrats are not only a part of a growing tide of people who are ready to challenge this government and work hard to replace it but that we are leading the battle charge, Mr. Speaker, and we will continue to do so into and through the next provincial election.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I have a question for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, please. Now, would the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands in his speech elaborate on what was missing in the Speech from the Throne in regard to auto insurance? What would the hon. member like to see this government do to reduce auto insurance premiums?

Mr. Mason: Thank you, hon. member, for that question. I would like them to do what the Liberal caucus has done, and that is to adopt the New Democrat plan for public auto insurance. I might say that it shows great wisdom on the part of the Alberta Liberal caucus because across western Canada Alberta is the only province that doesn't have public auto insurance, and as a result we pay the highest rates.

Even under the government plan, such as it is, we will continue to pay higher rates for automobile insurance than under a public plan, and there are a number of important reasons for that. One is the efficiencies of combining the organization with the licensing, the licence plates, and the registration. There are great economies to be found there. Of course, any profits that are made are plowed right back into lower rates, and that's something that is impossible to achieve under the Conservative approach of letting private auto insurance companies charge to provide the service.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Minister of Learning, a question?

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just a very quick question, and that is quite simply: would the hon. member consider a 15 to 28 per cent return after taxes, after inflation a good deal?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker. The hon. minister has not given me enough information to answer the question.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Seeing that the hon. member would not bite on that one, I'll just say quite simply that the TD financial group this week came out with a report that said that college students received an after-tax, after-inflation return on their dollar spent of 15 to 28 per cent and university degrees were 12 to 20 per cent after taxes, after inflation, which on this side of the floor is an excellent return on the dollar.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I might just point out that that's the problem with having a Learning minister that thinks like a banker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Mr. Hutton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great honour for me to rise today and respond to the Speech from the Throne. The speech that was presented by Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor served to do more than just open the Fourth Session of the 25th Legislature. It was also a bold statement on the course of this province and the future of Alberta. I would like to say that after 34 and a half months of being an MLA in this Assembly, it is a great day to stand here and know that the government of Alberta is saying that education is the number one priority in this province. I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank Her Honour for her grace, humility, and dedication. She has served our province and our sovereign with the utmost distinction.

I find it very fitting that the speech Her Honour delivered on Tuesday was entitled Heading toward Alberta's Second Century: A Proud History, A Promising Future. Next year our province will celebrate its hundredth birthday. As well, we look back at the past century. We as Albertans have many things to be proud of. Thanks to the hard work and perseverance of numerous generations of Albertans we have been able to transform our vast prairie grasslands into successful large farming operations, expand our small pioneer settlements and villages into thriving urban communities, and transform a small subsistence-based economy into the best performing economy in the world.

I want to look back for a minute to 10 years ago. We were sitting in a province that was in deficit and debt, and with the leadership that was taken at that time, we are able to enjoy the throne speech that we heard yesterday from Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor. If it wasn't for the leadership of our Premier and some of the members that are sitting on the front bench today and many of the other members that have left this Assembly, we would not be able to afford to move the portfolios of learning, advanced education, and health care. It is that vision from 10, 11 years ago that has allowed us this throne speech that we enjoy today.

Related to the throne speech – it is directly to do with learning – I'd also like to acknowledge and thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark for the work that he has done on the Learning Commission.

Over the last decade we have been able to further increase our productivity levels creating an atmosphere both business-friendly and environmentally responsible. By increasing employment rates, reducing income tax, and ensuring that Albertans retain more of their hard-earned money, our province has become one of the best places for people to live and work. As we look towards the next century, the health and welfare of Albertans will undoubtedly continue to be the top priority of our government. However, while we currently have an effective and well-funded health care system in place, it has become apparent Canada-wide that this system is not sustainable unless we are prepared to initiate appropriate reforms and improvements.

I applaud Albertans for having the courage to seize the initiative in addressing these problems through new and innovative solutions. I am fully convinced that through continued health care reform we'll not only enhance the sustainability of the system, but we will also guarantee that every Albertan continues to enjoy access to affordable and quality care.

During her address on Tuesday, Mr. Speaker, Her Honour referred to the 20-year plan this government has developed to ensure that the next centennial is as successful and prosperous for Albertans as was the last one. The main components of this plan are made up of four key pillars that over the next 20 years will strengthen and expand as they will be crucial to the continued success of our urban and rural communities. The four pillars I am referring to include unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to work, live, and visit.

Of those four pillars, the one that has been of particular interest to me and my constituents in Edmonton-Glenora is, of course, learning and the future improvement and enhancement of our primary, secondary, and postsecondary education. I look forward to the jobs that the hon. ministers will be involved in moving forward: the Minister of Learning, the Minister of Infrastructure, the Minister of Human Resources and Employment, and the minister of aboriginal affairs.

Our present and future realities, Mr. Speaker, demand that we maintain a world-class education system in order for our economy and society to grow and prosper. We need to train and attract a skilled and educated labour force that will be able to meet the needs and demands of the future. By investing in Alberta's learning system and placing it as one of the four key pillars of our development strategy, we're not only ensuring that future generations of Albertans are provided with the tools and knowledge they require to realize the goals and aspirations, but we are making certain that Alberta in 2025 will be a well-educated workforce with a strong and vibrant economy.

In support of this vision I was heartened to hear that the government will be marking our centennial year by investing in Alberta's children in the form of the Alberta centennial education savings plan. I feel that the announced $500 contribution per child will not only help to encourage children to pursue higher learning but also create an incentive for parents to start planning and saving for their child's education as early as possible. Furthermore, by encouraging parents to start planning early, the centennial savings plan will help future students meet some of the costs associated with pursuing postsecondary education.

Another topic that I would quickly like to touch on, Mr. Speaker, relates to the issue of class sizes. Over the past year I've had the opportunity to speak to many of my constituents who approached me with genuine concerns regarding the sizes of children's classrooms at their local schools. This issue was raised in the Alberta Learning Commission report, and I am indeed thrilled that this government has taken steps to increase funding to those schools that exceed the average class size guidelines as recommended by the commission.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see that the government has chosen to deal with this issue by working with individual school boards as opposed to dictating to them what specific steps they need to take. I understand that school boards are reluctant to have the province mandate class sizes to them as this would not only infringe upon their autonomy and self-sufficiency but also severely limit their flexibility to respond to local needs.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, I am extremely encouraged by the fact that our schools and our learning institutions are continuously staffed by extremely committed teachers and instructors who provide our young ones with the superior curriculum and also promote parent involvement. All these factors combined give Alberta one of the best education systems in the world.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude by reiterating that we as Albertans have accomplished much in a relatively short period of time. We have developed a booming economy, established first-rate social services, and we have created a learning system that will steer our province towards a bright and prosperous future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was a privilege today to stand before you and respond to the Speech from the Throne.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

Mr. Masyk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this opportunity also to reply to the Speech from the Throne, and I also would like to lift up the MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark as an outstanding young man.

Mr. Speaker, Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor, Lois Hole, delivered her speech the other day with dignity and grace that embodies the office she holds. The content of her speech outlined a path for the government of this province that I'm proud to walk down. The speech sketched in our plan that would not only address the current concerns of Albertans but also prepare Alberta's continuing success long into the future. This plan includes all of the cornerstones upon which our province's current prosperity is built. We see elements that will ensure that our children will be privy to a fantastic education system both in grade school and beyond. Other elements discussed will ensure that Alberta will remain strong in the international trade community while nurturing research and innovation at home.

Mr. Speaker, I had the liberty to visit our Research Council on a couple of different occasions, and each and every time I'm absolutely surprised at the distances they reach and what they're doing with biogas and biomass and other concerns of our environment.

On the international scene, Mr. Speaker, Alberta is not only known for its natural resources that reside underground but the wealth and beauty that lies above-ground as well. Alberta is home to an astonishing diversity of terrain from the Rockies to the west and the hoodoos down south. We're privileged to enjoy this natural splendour. However, this natural beauty will not remain if both government and society do not act decisively to implement conservation measures that will protect our environment. It is the duty and privilege of every Albertan to do their part to ensure that their environment will be protected.

The government has recognized the need to take the initiative in environmental issues and to this end are developing a provincial water council. The council will work to ensure that Alberta's water supply remains fresh, clear, and readily available for generations to come, and from what I know of our minister in this department, it will be achieved.

This commitment to our environment will not stop at protecting Alberta waterways. In her speech the hon. Lieutenant Governor mentioned that some of our energies would be devoted to developing new technology that would help reduce greenhouse gas emissions and to investigating alternative sources further. We have to go farther to go further.

It is a stark reality that a good portion of our environmental contamination is a result of automobiles. Manufacturers have made great strides developing automobiles that are more fuel efficient, burn more cleanly, but there are still negative environmental impacts when dealing with vehicles fuelled by petroleum products.

These impacts result not only from burning fossil fuels but also from the transfer of the same fuels. In response to this alternative source of pollution I, myself, Mr. Speaker, with great wisdom am sponsoring a bill, Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004, that would help reduce the amount of pollution that results from transfer of both fuels from storage tanks into tankers and from these same trucks to service stations. My colleagues and myself, we don't only talk the talk, but we walk the walk, and that can be measured by supporting this bill and passing it. The installation of stage 1 vapour recovery systems into every storage facility, tanker truck, and service station storage tank would benefit our environment. This technology reduces the amount of gasoline vapours that are lost during fuel transfer.

Mr. Speaker, there are a variety of contaminants that are released into the environment during the transfer of fuel. Those include the formation of ground level ozones. While I'm talking about ground level ozones, I'd like to mention one of the ministries, Children's Services. As it's going into the ground level, these young future children of ours – mine, yours, everybody in this room, and all Albertans: why do they have to breathe that? They don't. By having healthy individuals, not only does it take in the Ministry of Learning to stretch their GPA to a higher level, it also takes in the Ministry of Environment, the ministry of health. The reason these costs are rising is because people are not healthier. I'd like to compliment the Minister of Learning for introducing physical education into the school, and coupled with that would be the air you breathe and dispensing these ground level ozones.

Mr. Speaker, benzene is another well-known carcinogen. The ground level ozone has a negative impact on health as well, and we know that it's linked to leukemia and various other diseases. That's not acceptable to this government, and there again, we can measure that by voting for this bill and passing it. By reducing the amount of emissions, we will not only be caring for the health of our environment, but by implementing such technology, we will be acting to prevent an environmental and personal health threat before the problem becomes insurmountable. I can honestly say that with my colleagues, as we talk in public or we talk in private, that is the number one foundation that we have built this government upon, and the encouragement of my colleagues is why I've taken the liberty to step forward.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to take this opportunity to reply again and to give my utmost thanks to everybody for doing their part to form a good government and to look at the underlying factors causing our population and our citizenry to live healthier. At the same time, the policy of our government is to make sure that when we bring something forward, it covers all ministries one way or another. For example, Bill 202. It's not what's said in the written word by Her Majesty's English, but it's what's not said as we look for the finite details and we bring forward our laws and our acts and our amending acts to make everything better.

On that note, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for this opportunity.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, did you want to rise to speak on this? Hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my great pleasure to rise today and respond to the Speech from the Throne delivered yesterday by our Lieutenant Governor, Her Honour the Honourable Lois Hole. With much grace and poise the Lieutenant Governor outlined the Alberta government's plan for the future to Albertans of all walks of life.

Before I address the important issues covered in the Speech from the Throne, I would like to express appreciation on behalf of my constituents for the dedication the Lieutenant Governor has shown in her position. She has captured the hearts of all Albertans through her passionate words and personal touches. This past year has not been an easy one for her, but her determination has been inspiring to all of us. It does not surprise me that Albertans have embraced this lady as their own and are very proud of her commitment to this province, its people, and the Queen.

Mr. Speaker, I'm proud to address the Assembly today on behalf of my constituents of Calgary-Fort. While there is much diversity among the people I represent in terms of age, ethnic ancestry, religion, and economic background, these Albertans have common traits and common goals. They are all proud to be living in the finest province in the world. They recognize the importance of family values, of helping their fellow man and making a difference in their communities. These are Albertans who want to contribute to the province's future and are ready for any challenge that may come their way. I am extremely proud to have the opportunity to represent such a proud, honest, and hard-working group of Albertans.

They are also very happy to hear about the Alberta government's vision for the future. As we reach the centennial year, it is important to look back and recognize the important people, initiatives, and events which have led us to this point in time. Our past deserves to be celebrated, and Albertans will have that opportunity over the next couple of years. We should be proud that we have led the country in debt reduction and are on the verge of becoming a debt-free province. We should be proud that our education system is among the best in the world and that other jurisdictions flock to Alberta to learn about our approach. We should be proud of the fact that we pay less tax than anywhere in the country.

From the beauty of our mountains and landscape to the cleanliness of our cities to the approach of our people, we can all be proud to say, "I'm from Alberta." We can even sing the Alberta song later next year. But as pointed out in the Speech from the Throne, it is also important to look towards Alberta's short- and long-term future. We need to set our goals and chase them with vigour, we need to continue to set standards as a province and exceed them, and we need to chart a course for the future by carefully outlining what is important to us as Albertans and instigating a plan that will allow us to reach our destination.

Albertans were very, very happy to hear about the province's 20-year plan for the future. Our four pillars – unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global market, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit – will provide support for this great province.

Today I would like to speak to some of the topics outlined in the Speech from the Throne and address the importance of each approach. I think we can all agree that we are extremely fortunate to live in a province that has such an abundance of natural resources. Oil and gas revenues have provided us with opportunities that other provinces could only dream of having. The advantage of having these resources gives us the opportunity to diversify our economy and make other sectors, like tourism, manufacturing, and the various service-oriented businesses in Alberta, stronger and more prosperous.

Unleashing innovation means researching our approaches and implementing action plans to benefit our energy industry, our communication and life sciences sectors, and areas like agriculture, environment, forestry, and water research. We have an opportunity to strengthen many different sectors across the province, and through this approach families will benefit through new jobs and business opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, with my global perspective I believe that we need to internationalize Alberta. Yes, just like any other free, successful, and lasting enterprises or jurisdictions, to grow we need to go beyond our borders. To me, we need to think global and act local, and we need to join the international exchange and trade.

Mr. Speaker, when we talk about our future as a province, we must talk about our youth. I am very encouraged by the direction that the Alberta government is taking in regard to education and the importance of giving our children every opportunity to succeed. This government has been a proponent of lifelong learning for years, but with some learning opportunities come future costs for families like university tuition and apprenticeship training.

In the spirit of Alberta's hundredth birthday the government's commitment to learning, the Alberta centennial education savings plan, has been announced. The initiative will help young families plan for their children's future. Beginning in 2005, every child born in Alberta will receive a $500 contribution to a registered education savings plan. Not only will this head start help to alleviate the anxiety a new parent may face when he or she ponders their child's educational future, but the program will maintain choice for the future students.

In addition to this important program, the Alberta government, as outlined in the throne speech, will maintain its commitment to Alberta's public schools and postsecondary system. By allocating substantial new funding to these areas, the goal of creating 2,000 new spots in Alberta universities and colleges is an admirable one. These funds will help shape our future, our children, into respectable, dynamic, well-rounded leaders of tomorrow.

As outlined in the throne speech, it is important that Alberta finds its place in the global market. Decisions made in other jurisdictions can have a profound effect on the health of Alberta's economy and people. We have seen the effect of the closure of the United States' border to Alberta cattle, tariffs slapped on Alberta exports like softwood lumber.

Alberta has worked and will continue to work hard to protect the province's interest when it comes to issues that affect its citizens. Alberta can be proud of the fact that their Premier wasted little time in travelling to the United States after a single case of BSE was discovered in the province and proud of the fact that consumers helped out the farmers by continuing to support the beef industry. It was an example of this government's commitment to maintaining an important seat at the international table.

It is very important to have healthy ties to our most important trading partner, the U.S.A. As outlined in the throne speech, setting up an Alberta office in Washington is an important step for fostering a good relationship with our neighbour to the south. Alberta cannot rely on entities like the federal government to convey important Alberta messages to a country like the United States. This is a responsibility the province must put on itself in order to create a healthy trading environment with countries all over the globe.

It is absolutely imperative for Alberta's economy to be strong internationally as the revenues generated help to pay for domestic service demands. Therefore, it is up to the Alberta government to continue its focus on economic development internationally. I believe we have the tools as a province to make this happen. As my riding certainly reflects, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has a diverse cultural heritage. It is an advantage in an international economy as it allows us to connect with other countries in a meaningful way and to capitalize on trading opportunities.

Now that I have addressed the first three pillars of the Alberta government's 20-year plan for the province, I would like to state the final pillar. Making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit provides the most insight into what Alberta's future should and can look like. Our communities should be strong and protected. Our children deserve to be healthy and safe. Disabled Albertans should not be discriminated against. Seniors should be able to live independently and with dignity. Albertans should have employment, and an aboriginal Albertan should be able to access programs dealing with all sorts of social issues and community-based care.

Mr. Speaker, this is an extensive vision for the future indeed, and in most cases it would be easy to deem this list too idealistic. But the fact that Alberta's government is able to quite readily provide a list of programs, plans if you will, that squarely addresses each of these issues bodes well for our future. The Round-table on Family Violence and Bullying, the Alberta disabilities strategy, the Alberta Works program, the health quality council of Alberta, and the centennial capital plan are just some of the initiatives that will help keep Alberta a healthy place for all Albertans.

Alberta's government must continue to develop its caring social policies and programs that are based on a hand up and not handouts and to do what it can to provide a decent standard of living for Alberta's poor families. It is important to implement initiatives that allow the working poor hope and a sense of security. Measures like the Alberta Works program, which will help low-income Albertans find meaningful jobs and provide income support, health, and child support benefits, is an important step towards solving this problem. Providing financial assistance to people fleeing family violence to help themselves re-establish a new household and make a fresh start is another important initiative.

We need to pay more attention to the working poor, Mr. Speaker. This is a condition where some of Alberta's hard-working families need help. Affordable and low-cost housing needs more focus and implementation. We must continue to monitor the progress we have made in these areas and implement measures to help our children, our working poor, and our low-income seniors.

I would like to take time, Mr. Speaker, to elaborate on an issue that I believe especially important. Alberta's seniors are very important to this province, and this government must continue to improve its senior-oriented programs. I was very pleased to hear in the Speech from the Throne that a plan will be created to help the province's health system, workplaces, and other institutions prepare for Alberta's aging population. This is an issue that will only become more important as years pass by.

While we are on the subject of seniors, I would like to take this opportunity to talk about a motion I will be putting forward this year. Motion 540 urges the government to implement a consistent income qualification threshold for all seniors' benefits and subsidy programs that would be indexed to the annual inflation rate or the market basket measure and include a graduated scale of benefits and subsidy programs for seniors with incomes above the qualifying threshold.

I believe this approach would help low-income seniors receive the help they need to live independently and with dignity and would address funding needs for Albertans living in areas with a higher cost of living.

Also under the pillar of making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit is a renewed commitment for Alberta's infrastructure. Extending the plan by an additional year will allow more projects to be completed. The growth of our province has put strains on our infrastructure, and we must be committed to maintaining it. My constituents have seen the pressure that has been put on Calgary's services, like transportation, schools, health services, affordable housing. This area must continue to be a priority of this government.

The throne speech has touched on the importance of all new government spending being carefully measured to ensure that programs and services don't jeopardize the financial security that Albertans have worked so hard to create for themselves. The events in Ottawa over the past two weeks dictate a need for government to be responsible for taxpayers' money.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. Any questions?

The hon. Minister of Learning.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. After that very good discourse on the Speech from the Throne I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

head: Government Bills and Orders

Bill 2
Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise today and speak in favour of Bill 2. I am pleased at this time to officially move at second reading the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act.

Mr. Speaker, I want to begin my comments by providing a little bit of background, perhaps some context to the importance of this bill as it relates to this history of this province and in particular Alberta's reputed rangelands. During the years immediately following 1905, when Alberta was just becoming a province, so to speak, agriculture was really the driving force behind the growth of our economy and our population, and I'm happy that it is still such an important driver. Grain and mixed farming tended to dominate in the central part of the province and also up in Peace River, where we just were last week, and grain farming and ranching tended to dominate the south. Looking back, however, the prairies of southern Alberta have seen major changes in a very short period of time.

That change is very well illustrated by a pioneer rancher named

Frederick Ings in his 1936 autobiography, Before the Fences, and I'd like to quote a brief passage.

On the trail, as far down as the cattle might have drifted, we passed through an absolutely unsettled land; no towns, no farms, no fences, just one big grass-covered range, such grass as we never see now. The buffalo had been gone for years, and what cattle there were wandered at will from Sheep River (just south of Calgary) almost to the border.

He further reflected:

Gradually, the range had been closed out. The great leases were cut up into farms and smaller ranches. The cattle were restricted in their wanderings by the home fence. Wheat took the place of cattle on the plains.

Ings was, of course, commenting on the passing of the open-range ranching era that was all but gone by the 1900s.

Now, today, despite droughts and concerns for BSE, agriculture remains a significant part of Alberta's economy, and ranchers still raise large herds in the foothills and in the south of our province. Today less than one-third of the natural prairie landscape remains, but some very large tracts of the continent's finest prairies anywhere are still found right here in southern Alberta. These natural prairie landscapes continue to support viable populations of many of the plants and animals native to southern Alberta. The ecological integrity of these remaining prairie landscapes is due in no small way to the excellent and outstanding stewardship of Alberta's ranching community.

There's great value to the heritage rangelands and to the protected areas that we are so privileged to enjoy in this province, and the ranching community and the environmental community share a common interest in preserving the environmental diversity of our prairie landscape. This common interest has evolved into the establishment of the heritage rangelands class of protected area in the Alberta parks and protected areas system within my ministry. Through our provincially protected areas we can ensure that our natural heritage remains vibrant and strong and protected not only for today but also for the second century and onward.

I was very pleased, Mr. Speaker, to note during some of the research that I was doing that the provincial government of Alberta many years ago decided to pass the Provincial Parks and Protected Areas Act. I believe that was back on March 21 of 1930. Now, a lot has obviously happened in the 74 or so years since that time including the enormous amount of work that went into and honouring our government's commitment in 1992 to the Alberta component of the World Wildlife Fund's endangered spaces program. So we have the Whaleback protected areas: Black Creek heritage rangeland and Bob Creek wild-land. These were designated under the special places program in May 1999. In fact, I believe it was our own Premier who made that announcement and indicated that these two new designations under the special places program were being established to create a nationally significant protected area in the Whaleback: Black Creek and Bob Creek.

Heritage rangelands, as we all know, contribute very significantly to the conservation of Alberta's natural grasslands while recognizing traditional land-use activities such as grazing. This classification will also allow limited opportunities for some outdoor recreation that is compatible with that preservation of natural values and grazing management.

So with the proclamation of Bill 24 last June, the Wilderness Areas, Ecological Reserves, and Natural Areas Amendment Act, 2000, the heritage rangeland designation formally became enshrined in legislation. Not only are the lands within heritage rangelands legislatively protected, but the cattle-ranching lifestyle, which is such a significant element of Alberta's history, is also legislatively protected.

At the same time, last June the Black Creek heritage rangeland in the Whaleback region of our province became Alberta's first heritage rangeland. The Alberta government has been working very hard with the municipal district of Ranchland, local ranchers, and other stakeholders to finalize requirements for the long-term management and protection of these unique areas, and we will be bringing that forward very soon. This goes back to at least 1999, Mr. Speaker, when local stakeholders, residents, and ranchers brought forward some concerns about this designation of the Whaleback because they felt that the designation of these protected areas would possibly significantly interfere with their livelihoods and with their way of life as well.

So out of all of this a number of commitments needed to be made to secure local support and comfort for the protected land designation process to proceed. One of these commitments was to maintain access into the recreational vehicle trails that exist in the Bob Creek wild-land, which the local community has been using for many, many years for their hunting and recreational and grazing purposes.

It is within this broader context, Mr. Speaker, that I outline the reasons that precipitated the bringing in of Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act, because it is another step in fulfilling our government's commitment to local stakeholders. This particular act will allow limited – and I want to stress that word “limited” – recreational vehicle access to continue through the Black Creek heritage rangeland on two already existing trails that have been there for many, many years in order to maintain access to the few existing designated off-highway vehicle trails in the Bob Creek wild-land, which is the adjacent park to the Black Creek heritage rangeland.

I need to indicate for the comfort of everyone that these two trails, where we will be allowing off-highway vehicles to travel, are 3.5 kilometres in total, taken together, and they are approximately 15 feet wide, so they're very small trails. They're already existing trails, and we're going to allow off-highway vehicle usage on those trails only through the heritage rangeland to get to the Bob Creek wild-land.

Alternative access was also explored, Mr. Speaker, around the entire rangeland, but the topography, the drainage patterns, the configuration of the rangeland, and so on virtually eliminated any other possible access points. So as you can see, there are no feasible alternatives for access into this area to the wild-land other than as provided for in this act. In fact, this act provides a specific exception without opening up the possibility of general recreational vehicle use in any of the heritage rangelands or in any other parts of this particular heritage rangeland.

So to be clear, we are not – and I want to stress that – opening up the entire heritage rangeland to OHV use. We are going to allow two existing trails that are very narrow and very short to carry the OHVs through the heritage rangeland into the Bob Creek wild-land. That is one reason why our legislation needs to come forward: because the people who were involved recognized how important it is to set aside areas for protection but at the same time to allow common sense to prevail. That's what's happening here so that that access can occur while protection can still also take place. So our legislation does not allow general recreational vehicle use in heritage rangelands, and I hope that has been made abundantly clear.

What Bill 2 does do is it provides a specific exception without opening up that possibility for general recreation that I mentioned, and more specifically it will also allow our parks staff access to manage recreational vehicle use on these trails through regulations. In fact, the Wilderness Areas, Ecological Reserves, Natural Areas and Heritage Rangelands Act also applies to these trails and governs any other matters respecting the trails.

Now, I want to just briefly reference the issue of other heritage rangelands. Mr. Speaker, there are six remaining heritage rangeland natural areas that will be re-established as heritage rangelands over a period of the next several years and as site-specific requirements at each location are addressed. They will include Beaverhill Lake heritage rangeland natural area near Tofield, which is just east of Edmonton; Killarney-Reflex Lakes near the Saskatchewan border by Chauvin; Onefour, which is close to the Montana border, halfway between Coutts and the Saskatchewan border; Ribstone Creek just southeast of Wainwright; Tolman Badlands just northwest of Drumheller; and, of course, Twin River, which is not far west of Milk River. As always, we will continue to work with the local stakeholders of these other heritage rangelands to finalize requirements for the long-term management and protection of these unique areas.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to simply add that our parks and protected areas, which number over 500 in this province, are a tremendous and great source of pride for me, for my staff, and for all Albertans. They help us to deepen our understanding of that precious relationship between human beings and our natural environmental setting.

We all have a role to play in the stewardship of our land and for the continued prosperity of our province, which is dependent on striking a balance between economic growth and environmental protection. That successful balance, however, can only be reached with all partners working together: the private sector, the public sector, all three levels of government. All of us together have to make a long-term commitment to protecting our natural heritage and to understanding its value and importance to each and every one of us as well as understanding what the local needs are, in this particular case to the farming and ranching communities in the Whaleback area.

My final thanks goes to all the people who inputted through the public consultation that occurred down in the southern part of the province and in particular to the Minister of Government Services, who happens to be the MLA for Livingstone-Macleod, who took it upon himself to organize a meeting last year which I, our Deputy Premier and Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, and our Minister of Sustainable Resource Development attended. The four of us went to a meeting with the ranching representatives. We had a pleasant couple of hours with them, aired all the issues, explained what our positions were, listened to what their positions were, and came out with the best possible solution under these particular circumstances.

So I would appreciate the support of members of this House for taking this bill forward and for the very unique circumstances that precipitate its need. This is a highly unique situation, Mr. Speaker, and I hope I've explained to everyone's satisfaction the need for it and the importance of having it go through.

My final comment is simply to say again that we are not opening up the entire heritage rangeland to recreational OHV use. That would not be the case. We are simply allowing OHVs, recreational vehicles, to travel through the heritage rangeland on two small existing trails so they can get to the Bob Creek wild-land, where that particular recreational activity can in fact occur.

So, with that, I'll take my spot and look forward to other speakers joining in this debate on Bill 2. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As MLA for that very special place known as the Whaleback, which contains the Black Creek heritage rangeland and the Bob Creek wild-land, I am pleased this afternoon to take a few moments here, before we adjourn, to speak to Bill 2.

As the Minister of Community Development has so wonderfully outlined, it's the whole issue of access that is the need for this bill. This particular bill is very unique to a very unique place, the Whaleback, and as the minister pointed out, it doesn't apply to every heritage rangeland. It only applies to Bob Creek wild-land and Black Creek heritage rangeland.

Just a brief history. The minister did a very good job in explaining what's happened over the past seven or eight years. During the period from 1995 to 2001 Alberta did commit itself to the special places program, which was a made-in-Alberta solution to meeting our commitment to the World Wildlife Fund's endangered spaces program. During this period Alberta established 81 new and 13 expanded protected areas, and when we consider the national parks in Alberta as our own protected areas, over 12 per cent of Alberta land is now protected. About 8 per cent of that is through the national parks and the balance, 4 per cent, provincially.

I have to say that I was very proud to be the chair of the Special Places Provincial Co-ordinating Committee from 1997 to 2001. Under the special places program it was recognized that Alberta has many unique landscapes that contribute to our identity and that capture our western heritage, and that includes our prairie grassland. We needed to ensure that they are protected and appropriately managed, which gave rise to the whole concept of something new called heritage rangeland, where such landscapes can be protected while allowing their traditions to continue.

An Hon. Member: We can still drill?

Mr. Coutts: You can still drill.

In recognition of this, the Wilderness Areas, Ecological Reserves, Natural Areas and Heritage Rangelands Act defined the parameters for establishing and protecting heritage rangelands, including the general prohibition on off-highway vehicles used in such areas as a means of assisting with their ongoing protection. Now, there are many dispositions that are permitted for such uses as grazing and trapping and the like.

This prohibition, however, has not yet come into effect and has had a unique situation affecting the Black Creek heritage rangeland, Alberta's first formally designated heritage rangeland. The Black Creek heritage rangeland is adjacent to the Bob Creek wild-land, and OHV use can be permitted on a limited basis on designated trails in wild-lands or wild-land provincial parks. However, access to the Bob Creek wild-land has traditionally been through the lands now designated as the Black Creek heritage rangeland, and no other feasible access is possible given the vegetation and the drainage patterns of the area. Ensuring ongoing access is a commitment that this government made when establishing those protected areas, and that was made to the local committee as well as the traditional users of the area.

We recognized that this unique situation had to be addressed before we proclaimed a general prohibition on OHV use in heritage rangelands. Without addressing this situation, we would have barred Albertans and producers from accessing an area where OHV use is permitted and failed to fulfill our commitment to the local residents. In addressing this unique situation, we are not opening up the Black Creek heritage rangeland for random recreational vehicle access. The minister made that very clear, and I would just like to confirm that. Instead, this bill will only apply to the two existing trails in the heritage rangeland, as the minister said, that have a total length of 3.5 kilometres.

Limiting recreational vehicle access to these two existing trails will ensure that heritage rangeland continues to be protected and that Albertans will continue, also, to have access to the Bob Creek wild-land, as they have traditionally done for years. Local ranchers and stakeholders are very supportive of this approach, which is responsive to this very unique situation.

Mr. Speaker, it's important that we continue to protect Alberta's special places and to consider the unique circumstances for which they provide. We've got ecological benefits which are done by maintaining essential ecological processes and by preserving diversity of species and the genetic variations that are within them. We have economic benefits by creating a climate of greater certainty for industry by establishing where they can and cannot operate and by balancing a healthy and sustainable environment with a vibrant and sustainable economy.

We have educational benefits by promoting a deeper understanding of the relationship between humanity and the ecosphere and by serving as outdoor classrooms for colleges, schools, universities, and organizations. We have recreational and health benefits by promoting recreation for the enjoyment of nature, physical fitness, and escape from the pressures of urban living and by providing opportunities for a distinctive range of outdoor recreation including hunting, fishing, equestrian, hiking, camping, boating, and other activities as well as the scientific benefits by providing natural research laboratories in which to gather and access information on how ecosystems function and how they respond to change.

It also gives us an opportunity for spiritual and cultural benefits by strengthening cultural identities and heritage values, by inspiring artists, poets, musicians, writers, and sculptors, and by ensuring the survival of species that symbolize our province such as bighorn sheep, the great horned owl, elk, and bull trout.

Mr. Speaker, this initiative will complete a very, very long process that was put in place under the special places program. Individuals from the community gave a lot of their time to making sure that it came to a successful conclusion, and I'm sure that there were times when I met with them that they had some doubts about the process, but all those doubts were taken away when the Deputy Premier, the minister of agriculture; the Minister of Community Development; the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development; and myself went down and met with them. They were satisfied with the consultation that we had with them that Saturday morning, and they agreed with this bill that was unique to their area.

This puts closure on it. It puts in place a management system that everyone can live with. So, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to speak in support of Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act, for it's fulfilling our commitment to the stakeholders that was made at the time that these protected areas, both Bob Creek wild-land and the Black Creek heritage rangeland, were established, and this will make sure that they are viable and managed well for years to come.

I encourage all my colleagues to support this legislation, and I want to thank the Minister of Community Development for his indulgence in this initiative, bringing it forward to this very successful conclusion. Without him listening to our concerns and without him sitting down and listening to me about the concerns of the stakeholders, this wouldn't have happened. So, Mr. Minister, I want to express my congratulations and thank you on behalf of my constituents.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have some questions for the speaker now.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29 with regard to five minutes applies to the third speaker and the speakers thereafter. I recognized you to speak. Did you want to speak, or did you just want to ask a question?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I'm sorry. I thought I was eligible to do that. I will then move that we adjourn debate on this bill.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been a very, very exciting opening to the spring session. I think we're all fully charged and ready to go for several more weeks and months. Given the hour of the day, I would now move that the House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; at 5:07 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, February 23, 2004

1:30 p.m.

Date: 2004/02/23

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Now, hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, with us today is Mr. Paul Lorieau. He'll lead us in the singing of our national anthem, and I would invite all to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Learning.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly the Deputy Minister-President and education and sports minister from Saxony, Germany, the hon. Professor Dr. Karl Mannsfeld. With him in the Speaker's gallery is a delegation representing a number of government departments in Saxony. Mrs. Maja Oelschlägel is in charge of international relations in the state Ministry for Education; Dr. Roger Mackeldey is with the office of the Minister-President and is responsible for international relations; Dr. Lutz Bryja is in charge of technological policy at the state Ministry of Economic Affairs and Labour; and Mr. Klaus Stapf is the vice-president of the Saxony Economic Development Corporation. Seated with the delegation in the gallery are Mr. Hans-Michael Schwandt, the consul general for Germany from Vancouver, and someone known to all of us, Mr. Fritz Koenig, the honorary consul for Germany in Edmonton.

Minister Mannsfeld and his delegation have the distinction of being the first Saxon government delegation to visit our province since Alberta and Saxony formalized our sister province relationship in the year 2002. Through this visit the delegation will be connecting with our government and other Alberta groups on a number of areas of mutual interest in the public and private sector. As an education minister Dr. Mannsfeld is especially interested in exploring our outstanding learning system and its best practices as well as examining some of our new initiatives that contribute to the success of learning institutions and students.

Although our education systems are different, there is much that we can learn from each other. Earlier today we signed a memorandum of understanding which will further our co-operation in the area of education and promote links between schools, students, and educators in Alberta and Saxony. I'd like to thank Minister Mannsfeld and his delegation for sharing their knowledge and experiences with us. I would ask Minister Mannsfeld and his delegation to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On your behalf I'd like to introduce through you 92 bright grade 6 students from the Westlock elementary school, which is located in your constituency of Barrhead-Westlock. They are accompanied this afternoon by teacher Dan McDonald and parent helpers Denise Houle, Emily Cyna, Marilyn Beer, Mary Dijong, Heather Clarkson, Kim Stonehouse, Julia Walker, Cathy Klemp, Sandy Hiebert, Francis Cloutier, Tina Gatzki, Corinne Calkins, Fleur Whitley, and Deb Debrule. They are seated in the gallery this afternoon. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmor.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you today to all the members of the Assembly His Worship the mayor of Breton, Darren Aldous. He is with us in the members' gallery today. Darren is also the vice-president for villages and summer villages on the AUMA, and he's also a member of the child and family services authority for region 9. So we're glad to have Darren with us. I would ask him to stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to rise and introduce three very special guests and an additional special friend from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind who are here today to witness the introduction of Bill 201 as presented by my colleague from Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. This bill deals with safety codes and with barrier-free design and access, and I know that they are keen to see what happens with this particular bill as it goes through the process.

I would ask that our special guests please rise and receive the recognition in the order I introduce them: Mr. Bill McKeown, the executive director of the CNIB in Alberta; Ellie Shuster, the communications director for CNIB; and a board member, Diane Bergeron, and I hope that Polar is with her as well. There he is. Hi, Polar. Please welcome our guests.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of students from the University of Calgary. They are a political science class which, I believe, met with you this morning. They'll be meeting with me this afternoon. I guess they're here for the lab portion of their class. So I'd ask if, as I call their names, the group could rise. Ably taught by Dr. Keith Archer, they are Ms Janine Giles, Mr. Shayne Kuzek, Mr. Robbie Schuett, Timothy Duncan, Pierre Chan, Thomas Stooke, Brad Verhulst, Kelly Morrison, Shannon Cheesman, and Ms Meng Yang. If they're in the gallery, I'd ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of the crowd, and if they're not, I know that they will receive it in absentia as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm just delighted today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly members of a very special group in my constituency. Today we have joining us in the public gallery 25 members of the Edmonton Jewish seniors' centre. This organization, which runs a day facility, has been in my constituency in the area of Oliver since the early '50s. They have a number of outings, like the one they're all on today, and they're accompanied by their team leaders, their group leaders, Joyce Galante and Rosemary Kitay. I would ask them all to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Dr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to this House a young lady that's been working in my office. We had one of our senior people go off for very serious surgery, and we have a young lady by the name of Sonia Ammar, that's been working in our office and has done an excellent job for us. She's been just a real pleasure to have in our office, and she is here today, being able for the first time in her history to observe the House in question period. I'd like Sonia to rise and receive the warm welcome from the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly today Shirley Barg, chair of the Council of Alberta University Students and president of Athabasca University Students' Union. Shirley and her colleagues on the council have been quite busy over the year. They undertook campaigns on Bill 43 and had some success in making changes in it. They also had campaigns on generation debt, drawing attention to student debt loads, and on tuition fees. I'll ask Shirley Barg – I believe she's sitting in the public gallery – to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure to rise and introduce some guests on behalf of the MLA for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert. There are 17 visitors from Alexander education centre. Are they in the public gallery? I'm not sure. Just to let you know, their teacher, Mrs. Sharon Fisher, is here. If everyone would join me in welcoming them.

Thank you very much.

Oral Question Period

Long-term Care Facilities

Ms Blakeman: According to the government's own Alberta Health Facilities Review Committee, at the Bethany Care Centre for seniors in Calgary

- Residents are suffering.
- Residents are left in bed after baths and bowel care . . .
- Meals are rushed.
- Meals are being forgotten . . .
- Staff have no time to read residents' charts.

That's just the tip of the iceberg. My questions are to the minister of health. How can these appalling conditions exist in this province?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, long-term care facilities are the homes of a number of seniors in the province of Alberta, some 14,000 of them. I want to assure the hon. member and all Albertans that we share their concerns that our seniors live in a place with dignity and with safety and are treated with respect.

Mr. Speaker, our regional health authorities and our facility operators are responsible for fulfilling their obligations under the Nursing Homes Act. All health regions as well as individual nursing home operators have a process put in place to receive and investigate complaints. When these issues arise, there is a place and a person where a complainant can raise such an issue. We are interested in investigating all such issues. The Health Facilities Review Committee does make recommendations to individual operators and to regional health authorities. The health facility operators and the regional health authorities are responsible for replying to those recommendations.

Mr. Speaker, again, by and large, long-term care facilities in this province have a very, very solid standard. There are complaints that arise from time to time, and we know that if the individual member here is aware of a complaint, she in fact does have an obligation under the Protection for Persons in Care Act to raise that issue with the appropriate person.

Ms Blakeman: I just did, and this is full of them.

To the same minister: given that Jennie Nelson was scalded in a care facility just two and a half months after your own government's report came out, what has the government done or, rather, not done to respond to this report?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the report that the hon. member is referring to by the Health Facilities Review Committee – I should give some background. The Health Facilities Review Committee does make regular unannounced visits to facilities throughout the province of Alberta on a regular basis. The recommendations that may arise from the review of a particular facility, in this case the Bethany facility in Calgary, would be appropriate to review with Bethany in Calgary and the Calgary health region. But it is not related to the situation which took place at the Jubilee and the unfortunate circumstances involving Jennie Nelson.

We have taken the appropriate steps to look also at the situation involving Jennie Nelson. We have expressed our personal condolences to the family of such an individual where a tragic circumstance occurred. But presently it's the subject matter of a fatality inquiry and, accordingly, our ability to speak further in any detail on this matter is restricted.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the same minister: given that this government is ultimately the funder, is the legislator, is the creator of this programming, why has the government allowed the staffing levels to get so low at Bethany that staff are telling residents that "they may not be able to get them up every day, or if [the residents] were up, they might have to stay up"?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, again, the regional health authorities and the facility operators are responsible for fulfilling the standards under our legislation. When reports are filed with certain recommendations, it is incumbent upon both the operators and the regional health authorities to answer to them. I should say that there is great co-operation from those groups. I'm not aware of any circumstance where recommendations under the Health Facilities Review Committee have been ignored. They've all been dealt with. I think that that is most appropriate.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Water Management

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today communities in southern Alberta are appealing a decision to divert water from the Red Deer River. Alberta Environment approved a diversion of well over 300,000 cubic metres of water annually from the Red Deer River.

Mr. Smith: Big deal.

Ms Carlson: This water will be used for injection into oil wells and will therefore be permanently removed from the water cycle. And it is a big deal, Mr. Minister of Energy.

My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Why did this ministry approve such an irresponsible use of Alberta's fresh water?

Dr. Taylor: Well, in the first place, Mr. Speaker, you could say it wasn't an irresponsible use. It's less than 1 per cent of the minimum monthly flow of the river.

As we move forward, we have very clearly an appropriate public appeal process. I believe we're the only province in the country where a director of the Department of Environment can make a decision and then that can be appealed through a semijudicial process called the Environmental Appeal Board. That appeal hearing is happening right now in Red Deer. It will go through the full hearing, the full public process. There will be interveners on both sides, and once that process is complete, then a final decision will be made.

Ms Carlson: Three hundred thousand cubic metres will support a small town for a year.

Given that central Alberta is growing rapidly and that Albertans are facing a water scarcity crisis, why would this ministry jeopardize the water needs of these communities?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, once again, nobody's jeopardizing the water needs of any community.

It points out another issue that we have happening at the same time. It's a committee that is made up of the energy industry; it's made up of environmental NGOs, the agriculture industry, the AAMD and C, the AUMA. I have asked them to come forward with a position paper on the water that is removed from the hydrological cycle. It's not just oil and gas industries. In fact, the oil and gas industry does a very good job on the whole of managing the water. I've asked for this committee – it's a consensus-based committee – to come forward with recommendations on what we should do: what should our policy be on businesses that remove water from the hydrological cycle? I expect to hear from that committee by the end of March.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, when will this ministry show its commitment to water conservation and focus on approving projects that use alternatives to fresh water for injection and just say no to allowing that to happen in this province forever? When will you do it?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're already moving very rapidly on water conservation issues. There's no doubt about that. As I've said, we have this industry/NGO/government committee meeting to take a look at this whole issue of water that is removed from the hydrological cycle, and it will report to me. I'm expecting their preliminary report by the end of March, and from there we will move forward with the plan.

Alberta Blue Cross

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, last week the chair of the Alberta Blue Cross Review Committee admitted that she went against the advice of her own committee when she recommended that Blue Cross lose its tax-exempt status. She also admitted that this decision was made after she was lobbied by private health insurers. Those revelations mean taxpayers' dollars and time were wasted on a review process that served the interests of private health corporations and not the interests of Albertans. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: will the minister admit that there are no controls to ensure that lobbying by powerful health care corporations is not unduly influencing the process of health reform?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. member that the answer to that question is: no, there is not any such undue influence. It's all a matter of representing the interests of Albertans as a whole. One might call it lobbying, but you might also call it listening to Albertans, and that is what this government does. It's important for us to develop policy in a manner where we canvass the opinions of Albertans throughout this province. Just because it's an opinion that may not be in accord with the hon. member who has raised this question doesn't mean that it isn't an important opinion to listen to, and we do that.

Dr. Taft: Can the minister explain how forcing a payment in lieu of taxes on Blue Cross serves the interest of Albertans when his own committee recommended against it?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we don't pick winners and losers. In this particular case, it's most appropriate that there be a level playing field for the provision of private insurance services. In this case, where Blue Cross provides insurance to private clients, it's most appropriate that the playing field be level.

Dr. Taft: Will the minister admit that this is going to increase the cost of Blue Cross services to small businesses, who are the main subscribers to these kinds of services?

Mr. Mar: There will be a marginal cost, Mr. Speaker, but the marginal cost is a relatively small amount. The fact of the matter is that the advantage that they had was a very, very marginal one.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Health Care Reform

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like a 19th century snake oil salesman, the Premier is headed to Vancouver to sell false and discredited cures for what ails Canada's health care system. Four weeks ago the health minister ruled out these snake oil remedies because they simply shift costs while doing nothing to improve the health care system. Now the health minister is falling in line behind his Premier. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. What evidence does the minister have that Albertans support the Premier's agenda of delisting user fees and withdrawing from the Canada Health Act, and will he table any such evidence, if it exists, in this Assembly?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we have listened carefully to this hon. member and other opposition members, and they seem to be of the view that the issue of health care is that there is not an issue with respect to sustainability. The allegation made by this hon. member is that, in fact, this crisis is manufactured by the government. Well, if that's the case, then we've managed to persuade every single Premier of every other province of the same crisis.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that if one looks at the Canadian Institute for Health Information reports – and I know that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview has done so – what you'll find in the report National Health Expenditures Trend is that Alberta's health care spending grew 8 and a half per cent every year on average since 1994-95. Even after adjusting for matters of growth and population, the spending still increased at 6.7 per cent.

This is the reason why, Mr. Speaker, the Premiers of Canada are gathering today, as we speak, to discuss issues of sustainability of health care. What we are advocating for is that we need some flexibility on the part of the federal government in its interpretation of the Canada Health Act to ensure that we can have meaningful reform within that act.

Mr. Speaker, I'll say this: of the 14 governments across Canada, the only one that doesn't get it is the federal government. The reason why they don't get it is that they're of the view that sustainability is simply about putting more money into the system. That's not the case. We need more flexibility, and we are a long ways from the 50-50 cost-sharing arrangement that was in place at the time that our current Canada Health Act came in.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister's answer is nothing more than disinformation, let me ask him this question now. Why is the government using doomsday scenarios to scare Albertans into accepting user fees while ignoring Nova Scotia Premier Hamm's call for the Romanow report to be implemented as the best blueprint for strengthening and modernizing medicare?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the reason why we'll consider all of these options is because, unlike the hon. leader of the third party, we're not ideologues.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the minister: why won't the minister admit that his rhetoric about patient participation in funding health care is code for user fees and delisting of health services, which won't save money but only gouge Albertans?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I've not travelled to a great number of places in the world, but one finds a great deal of information about health care systems from around the world within the comforts of one's own office. I can tell you in front of our honourable guests from Germany that I've looked at their system. I've looked at the French system. I've looked at the Swedish system. I've looked at the system of health care in the United Kingdom. I've looked at what's done in New Zealand. There are many countries in the world that have the same traditions of social democracy that Canada has, and they have long traditions of values of sharing and caring similar to Canadians. I don't hear them clamouring for a Canadian health care system.

We do have a good system, but, Mr. Speaker, again, the core issue is one of sustainability, and our government's mission in this area is to ensure that the health care system remains in place for the future of our children and our grandchildren. Now, if we want our health care system to go over 50 per cent of provincial government revenues – it's gone from 1993, 24 per cent; this year, about 36 per cent – we can do that. But we need to ask Albertans: is that the choice that Albertans want to make? On the assumption that the answer is no, we need to look at all the options, put them on the table before Albertans, and say: here are the possibilities. But we know with certainty that our system will collapse in its current course of expenditures.

Health Care Premiums

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I've received a number of calls recently from constituents saying that they're hearing that there may be an increase coming in health care premiums. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness: is the government planning to increase health care premiums?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, there are no plans at this time to increase health care premiums in the province of Alberta, although I do want to put this in perspective. Right now our health care system costs in the magnitude of $7.35 billion. In order to support that system, health care premiums have been a part of it, and this year approximately $913 million will be collected from health care premiums.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can I assure my constituents or give the government's assurance that health care premiums are not going to be increased?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, obviously I cannot assure the hon. member that health care premiums will stay the same forever, but I should reiterate that there are no current plans to increase health care premiums.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, there are no plans to remove premium subsidies for low-income Albertans, and I can share with the House that there are more than 250,000 nonseniors who currently have a subsidy for their health care premiums, that there are 200,000 seniors that receive partial subsidy assistance, and almost 180,000 seniors in the province that are fully subsidized and shielded from health care premiums.

Mr. Ouellette: My understanding of that is that the answer was no.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, again, can I assure the hon. member that health care premiums will remain the same into the long future? No, I can't make that assurance. Again, for the time being, there are no plans to increase premiums, nor are there any plans to remove any of the premium subsidies that benefit lower income Albertans.

Long-term Care Facilities

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is responsible for caring for our frail and elderly seniors, and they are not adequately managing or funding long-term care. In regard to Calgary's Bethany Care Centre the Alberta Health Facilities Review Committee was "extremely concerned about the significant impact recent staffing and budgetary reductions are having on staff's morale . . . [and] the residents themselves." My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why has this government allowed so many recreational programs to be cut that residents are “just sitting around with nothing to do”?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I first of all want to point out that we have come a long way from where the Canada Health Act has been. The Canada Health Act was about a funding arrangement from the federal government to provinces and territories relating to the services of physicians and hospitals, and one of the things that we go above and beyond the requirements for under the Canada Health Act is in the area of long-term care.

Now, we spend a great deal of money on long-term care, and when the hon. member talks about the role of the Health Facilities Review Committee, they are responsible for ensuring that there is quality care and that accommodation standards are maintained in health facilities. As I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, the committee does make regular unannounced visits to facilities throughout the province. Again, it is incumbent upon the individual facilities and the regional health authorities to look at the complaints that may be filed against such a facility.

We are working presently with regional health authorities and operators to strengthen and personalize the services in nursing homes, Mr. Speaker, and I think this is a very important point. There are 14,000, approximately, residents in long-term care. We should not be doing anything to unfairly besmirch the reputation of the almost 8,000 people who are nurses and care providers in our nursing homes that provide the care in those places where these seniors live. We are working on improving a number of programs.

As an example, we've developed a province-wide Alzheimer's training program that's being implemented so that caregivers can better understand the needs of their particular residents that they are responsible for looking after. We are developing quality indicators for monitoring and reporting of care. I know that the Minister of Seniors has worked hard on improving food services, giving wider choices of menus, eliminating service charges for things like incontinence products, and we are conducting a review of the contracts that regional health authorities have with long-term care operators and the number of hours of care that residents receive.

Mr. Speaker, these are all appropriate responses to some of the legitimate issues that have been raised in long-term care, predominantly in a very constructive way by the Alberta long-term care operators.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness: how does the minister expect the Health Facilities Review Committee to be responsible for ensuring that all of these good things happen when that committee does not have the power to enforce corrective action based on what it's finding? Where does the buck stop?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated to the hon. member in her opening question, the facility operators and the regional health authorities that have contracts with such operators are the ones that are responsible for the maintenance of these standards, and I cannot think of a single example where a report by the Health Facilities Review Committee has been ignored by the operators or by the regional health authorities. A copy of the report provided by the committee is provided to both the CEO of the regional health authority and the operators of the facilities and the Minister of Health and Wellness, and if there is an unsatisfactory resolution of the issue as raised by a complainant, then there is an appeal process by which it can be looked at again.

But, again, overall these 14,000 residents that are in our long-term care centres generally enjoy a very good standard of care, a safe standard of care, and it is important that they be dealt with in a manner that ensures the best quality of life that we can confer upon them.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. My final question, then, is to the Minister of Community Development. Can the minister put the minds of Alberta seniors at ease today by promising that penalties for failure to comply will soon be included in the Protection for Persons in Care Act?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, the PPIC Act that is being referenced is under review at the moment. We had a full public consultation on that, and we will be coming forward with a government response very, very shortly.

I would tell the hon. member, as she probably may or may not be aware, that the act already provides for very stiff penalties for failure to report abuse or alleged abuse in those particular institutions, and we're looking at strengthening the preventative side so that we don't have to get to where those allegations are going. People need to know that this is an educative piece of legislation and it is going to be focused much more on the prevention and care, and we will look after that in due course, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Broda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not easy having a loved one in a nursing home. That is why it is important to know that the family member or friend is getting the best possible care. I know that there have been some questions asked here today, and I'm going to ask a very similar question to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Will the minister use his authority to review Alberta's nursing homes to ensure that the health and safety of the residents are protected?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I indicated to this House earlier, we are looking at the contracts presently that establish the standards that will be applied between regional health authorities and long-term care operators. Included in that review will be a review of the number of hours of care per resident per day. I think that this is a legitimate issue that has been raised by the long-term care operators in a very, very constructive way, and they raise it in the context of it being about having to accommodate the fact that the acuity level of people in our long-term care centres has increased. So the resources would have been appropriate but for the fact that the acuity level of individuals that are residents in our long-term care centres has increased because of increased longevity.

With respect to individual complaints, Mr. Speaker, I've outlined the responsibilities of the long-term care operators and the regional health authorities to answer to questions and complaints that individuals may have, and we want to make sure that those parties fulfill their obligations under the Nursing Homes Act.

Mr. Speaker, I share the hon. member's concerns about making sure that we have seniors that are cared for with dignity and with respect. That is a primary goal of this overall program for our seniors in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Broda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question, my only supplemental, is to the same minister. What action is the minister taking to improve care in Alberta long-term care facilities? I know that he's mentioned increasing the number of hours. Is there going to be funding available for that?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, after such a review of issues like the number of hours of care per resident per day, obviously it follows that there would need to be a corresponding increase if it's determined that, in fact, the number of hours legitimately needs to be increased. We are again looking at a number of different issues, and I've outlined some that the Minister of Seniors has looked into with respect to establishing standards for provision of better food and elimination of charges for things like wander guards and incontinence products. I've indicated our willingness to move forward on training programs. The example that I gave was about Alzheimer's. I've indicated that we are developing quality indicators for monitoring and reporting of care.

We are taking very important steps, I think, Mr. Speaker, in learning from individual circumstances that may arise. For example, in the case of the unfortunate circumstances involving Jennie Nelson, the regional health authority is establishing appropriate care protocols for bathing individuals within long-term care centres throughout the Capital health region. I think it would be most appropriate to say that those learnings should be benefiting seniors throughout the province, not just those within the Capital Health region. We continue to encourage that kind of sharing of information.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Access to Information

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Government Services: why is it government policy to exclude the Premier's Executive Council from the access to information law in this province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If anyone should know about the provisions within the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, it should be the hon. member opposite because he sat on the committee that laboured over this for nine months and then signed off on that particular document. Then when amendments were brought into this House about the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, yes, maybe he entered into debate and didn't agree with some of those, but it was actually debated and passed in this House.

Mr. Speaker, just to make it very, very clear: ministers' expense records are not exempt under FOIP. Let's just make it clear here today that ministers' expenses are not exempt under FOIP, and neither are MLAs'. They are not exempt under FOIP when they do government business. The hon. member opposite knows that. The hon. member opposite has also put in a number of requests asking for great volumes – great volumes – of information that is being processed by information officers in every single, solitary department. The process is set up by the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, and we're abiding by that.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: when will the access to information law be changed so that the Premier and the Premier's staff are no longer exempt from the access to information law?

Mr. Coutts: Previously to the actual law being passed in this House last spring, the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act in this province was to be reviewed every three years. The committee that was looking after proposed changes to the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act suggested that it be reviewed after five years. That's when he'll have his time to do it, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. Nelson: Mr. Speaker, just to give the hon. member opposite some comfort level, because I do know that he is the chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, I would refer him to the Auditor General's report insofar as expenses go. If he refers to page 289 of the current Auditor General's report, he does say in his conclusions, "We did not find any evidence of inappropriate MLA expense reimbursement and we concluded that the systems in place would generally prevent inappropriate payments." I believe that the Auditor General does a thorough examination of those expenses for MLAs for all members within this Legislature.

One other thing that I found, Mr. Speaker, with the number of recommendations that clearly come from the Auditor General to our departments on an annual basis – at the very beginning of his introduction to this year's report he talks about progress with past recommendations, and he says: "We [clearly] ask ourselves – Is the government listening? Is the government making satisfactory progress in implementing our recommendations? The answer today is – Yes." So I hope that puts your mind to rest.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that the Premier stated that the Official Opposition put the government to great expense by submitting an access to information request regarding Executive Council expenses, can the minister tell us in this Assembly how much that request cost the government?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, the total number of requests that have come in under freedom of information and protection of privacy is about 2,457 in the year 2002-2003. Six per cent of those general inquiries come from elected officials. Six per cent. But that does not give any indication as to the volumes of information that were required or asked for in that 6 per cent. The average cost of every single, solitary FOIP request comes to $1,629, and the total fee for a FOIP request that has actually come into government is $44.05 per request. So actually the total direct cost of administering FOIP for 149 employees of this government is $7,947,000. Seven million, nine hundred and forty-seven thousand dollars.

Now, Mr. Speaker, they're saying that there's not enough information. We have a Privacy Commissioner in this province. That Privacy Commissioner administers provisions of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, and if they're not happy with the information that's going, they can appeal to the Privacy Commissioner. That's part of the act.

Mrs. Nelson: Again, Mr. Speaker, our Legislature has a process in place, which I hope will be helpful to the hon. member opposite. If he has questions with regard to specific information of reports, he can place a written question on the Order Paper, and it can be dealt with on a weekly basis within this House. That data can be provided to him.

I noticed last week, Mr. Speaker, that they were asking the Premier certain questions, and he asked them to send over the details of the information that they required. We have yet to receive that information.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Emergency Room Wait Times

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the minister of health. Emergency room physicians have made the case that some patients are waiting far too long in emergency rooms. The problem is particularly acute in the Capital and the Calgary regions. Unduly long waits result in undue pressure on both patients and staff, particularly nurses. My question: why are some individuals required to wait unduly long in emergency rooms to be attended?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to make one thing very clear at the outset in answering the hon. member's question, and that is this: no one who requires emergency medical attention will wait. Those individuals will be treated immediately.

Now, there are some reported wait times, Mr. Speaker, of up to 24 hours in emergency rooms, but that only occurs when an acute care bed is not available for a patient. This 24-hour time period is not the length of time that a patient waits to be seen by a health care provider in an emergency room; it is the time that they might be waiting for the availability of an acute care bed. I should add, Mr. Speaker, that individuals waiting in emergency rooms for an acute care bed will continue to receive the kind of high level care that they require, recognizing their condition.

We recognize the pressures on emergency rooms. Seasonal viruses, as an example, will place a great deal of stress on our capacity in emergency rooms. Mr. Speaker, population growth in the province, of course, is also adding some extra demands on our emergency rooms and our in-patient beds that may be available to service such individuals.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you. I would ask the minister: what is being done to increase the number of acute care beds in emergency rooms throughout the province?

2:20

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the regional health authorities, again, as the hon. member pointed out, particularly in Calgary and Edmonton, are feeling the pinch perhaps harder than others, and they are up to this challenge. They're working hard at trying to decrease wait times. As an example, the Capital health authority has added an additional 80 temporary beds to cover winter demands, again at a time when the flu or other seasonal viruses might be causing a greater demand on the system. In Calgary the health region has opened more beds and is using technology that is helping track patients according to priority, and I can say that with some success they've been able to reduce their wait times somewhat dramatically as a result of doing that.

Also, Mr. Speaker, there are real issues with respect to the number of people who are in our acute care facilities whose needs, in fact, amount to long-term care. Calgary, for example, will be opening 120 new long-term care beds in north Calgary, that will allow those seniors to move from acute care facilities into more appropriate health care facilities.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So what is being done to open up downstream beds to relieve pressure on acute care beds in emergency? Do we have new downstream beds coming on stream?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we continue to monitor that particular element with our regional health authorities. We are also working hard at encouraging Albertans to use Health Link Alberta. Health Link is giving Albertans 24-hours-a-day access to doctor-approved nurse-delivered advice. That is helping to alleviate some of the concerns that individuals might have about whether or not it's appropriate to go to emergency. Of course, if it is appropriate, such a nurse on Health Link will not hesitate to advise you to go. This service has provided a tremendous resource as a primary care initiative that is answering the calls of some 800,000 inquiries that are being made this year. Again, Mr. Speaker, it is expanding Albertans' access to primary care.

Also, Mr. Speaker, just having recently in January launched 10 new primary care projects – for example, the Alexandra seniors community care centre is providing primary care for seniors with complex social and health needs who are living in the inner city – we are moving on a number of different areas, Mr. Speaker, in primary care that are helping to alleviate the pressures that may be attendant upon our acute care facilities.

Highway Maintenance

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, this government's own 2003-2006 transportation business plan proves that they are allowing a decline in the quality of our highways in Alberta. Its own numbers indicate that overall quality of highways will deteriorate through to 2006. To the Minister of Transportation: why is this ministry allowing the physical condition and usability of our highways to deteriorate?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, along with building many new highways in the province of Alberta and, of course, four-laning a good stretch of those, we're also responsible for maintaining those that have been previously paved. If we go back in history about 20 years ago, a fair number of our highways were paved at that time, and the life expectancy is coming to an end for those highways. But I'm sure the hon. member will see us progress on that one particular measurement and will see some improvement next year.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister: why are only 78 per cent of our highways expected to meet basic required standards by 2006?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the measurement we use in determining the state of our highways is how comfortable you are riding on the road, how smooth your ride is. Although it's a matter of opinion how smooth this road is compared to another one, we've applied that same test measurement long enough now that we seem to have a trend, and people are saying: well, I don't know how much rougher this road is, but I've noticed that the maintenance, the smoothness, of this road isn't as good as it was once.

Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, the road is not as smooth as one would appreciate; however, engineering testing still determines that it's not appropriate to repave that road at that particular time. As I mentioned before, that is one of the measurements that we use in our department. We recognize that we have to move in that particular area, and we will.

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Infrastructure: does the government owe this overall decline in the quality of our highways to the increasing use of P3s to fund highway maintenance?

Mr. Stelmach: He asked the Minister of Infrastructure to speak about provincial highways.

Mr. Speaker, the only public/private partnership that we are working on at the moment is the southeast leg of the Edmonton ring road. We have just completed the request for qualifications. We expected about four companies to put forward their qualifications, and in fact we have received six. We are now evaluating those six proposals. We'll boil that down to three, and the next stage is a request for proposals. We'd like to see that completed early in spring and construction to start in fall.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Gaming Revenue

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, a couple of weeks ago an in-depth 200-page study on VLT gambling was released. I will table its conclusions at the appropriate time. The study's findings are very disturbing. It found that while only one in eight Albertans plays VLTs, of those that do 22 per cent are problem gamblers, and if you include those moderately addicted to VLTs, the number is 39 per cent. My questions are to the Minister of Gaming. Given the study's disturbing conclusion that a high proportion of gambling revenue comes from a relatively small number of people who have a gambling problem or who are at risk, will the minister agree to take definitive steps to reduce its dependence on this source of revenue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was about two weeks ago that a report was published on the Internet relative to VLTs, and, yes, it has some 200 pages. A large portion of the report deals with the history of VLTs in the province. A previous report was published in 2001 or 2002, namely the Canadian Problem Gambling Index report. That particular report related to an index that was established to determine the prevalence of problem gambling throughout the country, and in fact every jurisdiction in Canada that has gambling, to my knowledge, has had that problem gambling index applied to it.

The information in Alberta as of that time was that, generally, 1.3 per cent of the population were problem gamblers. In the VLT category some 5 to 6 per cent were problem gamblers. That particular report, Mr. Speaker, remains the best evidence that we have relative to the issue of problem gambling here today.

The report in question that the hon. member referred to has statistical limitations. Those limitations were pointed out at page 60 of the report by the authors. The reality, Mr. Speaker, is that as a result of those limitations, the information surrounding the 206 people who were interviewed for the new portion of the report is not applicable to the general public nor to the general gambling public.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since electronic gaming is clearly the most addictive form of gambling, will the government agree to cap the total number of electronic gaming machines, whether they be VLTs in bars or slot machines in casinos?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you are aware, we spend a lot of time canvassing Albertans with respect to the issue of gaming in this province. In 1998 there were plebiscites in some 37 communities, seven of which requested that the VLTs be removed, and in fact they now have been.

In the years 2000-2001 the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission canvassed Albertans and did a lot of other work relative to the issue of a gaming policy for casinos, VLTs, and other areas of gaming in the province for the next five years. As a result of that particular report, which was accepted by this government and which received comments like, "Wise new gaming rules" from the editorial boards of this province, we have maintained our cap on VLTs at 6,000, which was established in 1995. With respect to slot machines, which are found only in the casino environment, we have said that they will expand according to the wishes of municipalities. If there is an application for a new casino, then the community in which that is located will have an opportunity through its council to say whether they would like to see something like that go ahead or not or to be mum on the subject.

So, in short, we do have a policy capping VLTs at 6,000, and we have a very reasonable approach with respect to the potential expansion of slot machines.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I don't share the minister's definition of "reasonable."

Given that the report's finding is that Alberta is more heavily addicted to gambling revenue than any other province, will the minister admit that it is, in fact, this government that has the real problem?

Mr. Stevens: In 1998, Mr. Speaker, there was a gaming summit in Medicine Hat, and at that time Albertans from all over the province came together to talk about gambling and in particular to talk about what ought to be done with gambling proceeds. I think it's fair to say that Alberta has a very unique model – we call it the charitable gaming model – where our charities annually benefit to the tune of $350 million as a result of the way we handle that. But what's really important is that the people at that particular summit indicated that they wanted the money to go into the Alberta lottery fund, which it was doing and where it continues to be handled since that date. Also, it's important to note that we were directed to put that money into community and public initiatives, and that is what we have done since that time.

Mr. Speaker, you're aware that every year as part of the budget process, we have lottery estimates, where on a line-by-line basis the proceeds of the lottery funds are put before this Assembly, debated, and voted on.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of seven hon. members who want to participate in Recognitions today, but in the interim might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Friedel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was just brought to my attention that a couple of constituents from the Peace River area have joined us in the Assembly. I would like to recognize that Jim and Judy Ashton, who are not only constituents but long-time very good friends of mine, are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

University of Alberta

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the mantras of the University of Alberta is that they are constantly and actively engaged in recruiting and retaining the best and the brightest of researchers. Last week the University of Alberta was ranked number 1 in an international survey of postdoctoral students which was conducted by the British journal The Scientist. The survey asked more than 3,500 postdoctoral students from around the western world to rate their institutions.

When active participants who are immersed in a program being evaluated themselves credit the U of A as being the best place to work, I believe the U of A has every right to add this feather to its already colourful and distinguished academic hat. Researchers from around the world specifically recognized the fact that the University of Alberta supports and facilitates quality research and the proper environment in which new scientific and academic ground is broken.

Today I welcome the opportunity to once again recognize the University of Alberta, which has rightly received true recognition from its own postdoctoral students for their profound pursuit of whatsoever things are true.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Black History Month

Mr. Rathgeber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and recognize Black History Month in Alberta, which has been filled with concerts, seminars, a youth festival, and will feature an awards banquet on February 28. This tribute began in 1926 and was expanded in 1976 to a full month of celebration.

Earlier this month, Mr. Speaker, it was my great pleasure along with the Minister of Community Development to visit the new Marcus Garvey Centre for Unity, which is located in the Edmonton-Calder constituency, and to present them with a government of Alberta CFEP cheque toward this building project. The black community has contributed very significantly to Alberta and to Canada, and the Garvey centre will help facilitate even more achievements in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to express my congratulations and I'm sure the congratulations of all members of this House to our black organizations and particularly the Jamaican Association of Northern Alberta and the National Black Coalition of Canada, Alberta chapter, for their great work in this regard. I am very pleased that the new headquarters is in the Edmonton-Calder constituency.

CNIB Vision Award

Mr. Vandermeer: Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Alberta regarding their inaugural Vision award program, that occurred last week at the Winspear Centre. This spectacular event, which I attended with many of my colleagues, showcased the important work that the CNIB provides to 9,000 Albertans and their families at no cost.

Since 1918 the CNIB has charted many achievements for vision-impaired individuals such as the national digital library of talking books and assistive technology such as the Merlin computer, which enlarges images and actually talks to its users.

The Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004, introduced last week in this House by the Minister of Community Development, is one example of our government's commitment to those individuals.

Thank you to the CNIB, its partners and sponsors, and congratulations to our Premier on being the first recipient of the CNIB's new Vision award.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Canada and Alberta Business Friendly Jurisdictions

Mr. Hutton: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week a survey was released by KPMG that once again confirmed Canada's status as one of the most business friendly jurisdictions in the world. When the survey was released, it was revealed that out of 11 major industrialized countries throughout the globe, Canada offers the lowest business-related costs to 17 major industry sectors and maintains the lowest research and development tax dollars. The survey noted that Canada and Alberta enjoy significant labour cost advantages over other major economic powers like the United States.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I'm particularly pleased to say that of all the cities in western Canada and the United States, Edmonton offers the business sector the lowest start-up in operation costs, which is allowing the city not only to attract new businesses every day but to retain the existing ones as well.

At this point I would like to congratulate the governments of Canada and Alberta and thank all Canadians and Albertans for their hard work and commitment to making our country and province a better place.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Phil Rauch

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was hungry and you fed me; I was thirsty and you gave me drink; I was a stranger and you invited me in; I was naked and you clothed me; I was sick and you visited me; I was in prison and you came to me: these were the actions of Phil Rauch, a passionate believer in social justice, who died on Tuesday, February 17, 2004, at the age of 38 due to heart complications.

Phil worked tirelessly to address the needs of the most marginalized in our society. He took every opportunity to speak for those who could not speak for themselves. Phil is remembered for his outstanding commitment to the nonprofit sector. He was the founding member of the central Alberta addictions consortium and of the Safe Harbour Society. He was the vice-chair of the Residential Society of Red Deer, chair of the Helping Hands mobile outreach, and a member of the John Howard Society.

But more than this, Phil was a light in the darkness. Phil focused his energy on helping those with HIV, hepatitis, and addictions. He worked with the aboriginal community, prisoners, injection drug users, the gay and lesbian community, and the homeless. Phil gave strength and hope to those who needed help.

Phil, you changed the world. We thank you, and we will miss you. Your wife, Val Joa, and your two daughters, Alex and Kate, will always know that you were a true hero who worked tirelessly to address the needs of the less fortunate in our society.

2:40 U of A Golden Bears Hockey Team

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, this Saturday a remarkable record was set when the University of Alberta Golden Bears hockey team completed their 28-game season undefeated. No hockey team in the history of the Canada West Conference has ever done this. The Bears also set a conference record for the fewest goals in a 28-game schedule, letting in only 48 goals in an entire season.

As anyone knows who has seen the many banners hanging in Clare Drake Arena, the Golden Bears hockey team has an astonishing tradition of winning. Since the 1933-34 season the Golden Bears have won their divisional title an amazing 42 times and this year will be going for a record 11th national championship. Their current head coach, Rob Daum, has led the Bears to the playoffs eight straight seasons, and they have qualified for the CIS national championships every year since 1996-97.

Mr. Speaker, this year's undefeated season puts the Golden Bears hockey team in the rarified atmosphere of great athletic achievements. Not only have they been the top-ranked team in the country all season; they're also one of the finest university hockey teams in North America.

I invite all MLAs to join me in congratulating the achievements of this wonderful team.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Edmonton Firefighters

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When Edmonton calls on its firefighters and other emergency personnel, the city knows it can count on them to respond professionally and without hesitation even if that call comes in the middle of the night with temperatures of about minus 50 degrees Celsius with the wind chill and is the third major fire in less than a week, as happened in this city near the end of January. Firefighters not only fought the fires; they also battled frostbite, freezing equipment, and dangerous conditions.

Edmontonians are grateful that they and their families can sleep easy knowing that brave men and women are watching out for their safety. These heroes put their own safety second to the safety of the community they serve. Their dedication to protecting Edmontonians was in evidence yet again at the recent blazes in freezing temperatures.

While these emergency workers don't look for recognition, I think it's fitting that we recognize their bravery and dedication this afternoon.

Thank you.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I rise to table the appropriate number of copies of a congratulatory letter on behalf of the government of Alberta to Mr. Pierre Lueders, who this weekend at the 2004 world bobsleigh championship in Konigssee, Germany, won the gold medal for two-man bobsleigh. Congratulations to Pierre and to his teammate, Giulio Zardo. We're very proud of this duo.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: It should also be noted that Mr. Lueders is the brother-in-law of the hon. Minister of Economic Development.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have two documents to table today. The first document is a government of Alberta news release dated February 12, 2004, which claims to confirm that responsible gaming efforts are on the right track.

The second tabling is a report entitled VLT Gambling in Alberta: a Preliminary Analysis, which shows that the government has failed to prevent problem gambling and continues to profit at the expense of VLT users who are either moderately or severely addicted gamblers.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings this afternoon. The first tabling is a letter that I wrote as chairperson of the Public Accounts Committee to the hon. Premier, president of Executive Council. This letter is dated January 27, 2003, inviting the Premier to meet with the Public Accounts Committee in the spring sitting of the Third Session of the 25th Legislature.

The second tabling is also a letter that I wrote as chairman of the Public Accounts Committee to all hon. members of Executive Council. This letter is dated January 29, 2003, and I was seeking opinions on the committee's operations and how we can alleviate some of the scheduling issues.

The third tabling I have this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, is a poll conducted by CFCN last week in Calgary. Of 1,487 votes cast, 94 per cent were in favour of making all government travel expenses available to the public.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings this afternoon. The first batch are from Kim Condon, Susan Taniguchi, Suzanne MacDonald, Anita Ashmore, Leslie Olson, and Bev Robinson. They are all very concerned about how the negotiations went for nurses. Their bottom-line statement is they don't want legislation or arbitration; they want the government to negotiate in good faith. So that's a sampling of the letters that I've been getting from nurses and supporters of nurses from across this province.

Now, the second tabling is from Lori Nash with concerns about car insurance payments and the way these are regulated.

Mr. MacDonald: No.

Ms Carlson: Yes. That's who it's from, and that's what she's concerned about.

The third is from Andrea Robbins, who is also very concerned about insurance rates and, in fact, has a solution for the government that they may wish to take a look at.

The last tabling for today is from Annette Le Faive, who is very concerned about the proposed Evan-Thomas provincial park recreation area draft management plan and wants changes made to that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Written Questions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been served on Thursday, February 19, I will now move that written questions that appear on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

[Motion carried]

head: Motions for Returns

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also note that proper notice having been given on Thursday, February 19, I will now move that motions for returns on today's Order Paper also stand and retain their places.

Thank you.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, please proceed with introductions if you so wish.

(reversion)

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you for allowing reversion to Introduction of Guests. Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly in both galleries, and perhaps even some time later in your own, some members from the Canadian Paraplegic Association. We have Marlin Styner with his wife, Diane Gramlich, Betty MacIsaac, Larry Pempeit, Braden Hirsch, Margaret Conquest, who's a member of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities, Laurie Szymanski, Emily Lawson, Carmen Binder. Also accompanying them is Godfrey Huybregts, who has assisted us with some of these projects. Previously, as well, from the CNIB we had Ellie Shuster and Bill McKeown and Diane Bergeron, who were also introduced. If those folks would rise and be acknowledged or wave their hand and be acknowledged that way, would the members present please welcome them.

head: 2:50 Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 201
Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access)

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004.

In this time available I would like to talk about why Bill 201 is necessary based upon concerns expressed by people with disabilities and their families. I'd also like to identify the objectives of the bill and how those objectives are to be achieved, but first, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to offer an example which will illustrate the need for experts in barrier-free design and access to be part of the Safety Codes Council. It can also be an example to illustrate the changing technologies and the need for experts who keep abreast of these changes to have input into future code revisions.

Mr. Speaker, like many people in this Assembly I've walked in and out of the east ground-level doors hundreds or probably thousands of times in the last seven years, since I was first elected. That's where the wheelchair ramp is located and where persons in wheelchairs access this building. Like most people walking through those doors, sometimes I take the stairs and sometimes I just go down the ramp, but I never thought anything about the design or layout of that little ramp.

Well, about a month ago I was down at those east entrance doors with a person in a chair waiting for his DATS bus. I went outside to check for the bus, and he went to the top of the ramp to wait for me, and since it was minus 30 and the bus wasn't there, I returned and had occasion to observe this fellow at the top of the ramp. He seemed to be having a lot of difficulty, and I just dismissed his difficulty as some manoeuvring problems and power wheelchair idiosyncracies. Last week another person in a wheelchair made some comment about having difficulty negotiating the top of the ramp because the ramp wasn't built square with the door. Suddenly I realized why that other fellow was having those difficulties. In my present state, capable of walking on the ramp or taking the stairs, whichever I felt like, I was unaware of those challenges.

When the ramp was first constructed 20 years ago, no one used the kinds of power chairs that are used today. That's why we need to have experts in barrier-free design offering help to design those future safety code requirements for new construction and major renovations. Things change and the experts keep abreast of those changes.

Mr. Speaker, let's look at the background to Bill 201 and why this bill is necessary. Alberta has led the way in building safety and accessibility provisions that enable persons with disabilities to achieve independence by both contributing and sharing in the opportunities and responsibilities of our society. The number of persons with disabilities in Alberta, which for the purposes of this bill includes citizens having physical and sensory impairments, is increasing. The aging population trends that are foreseen to put pressure on public pensions, health care, et cetera, will also produce a significant increase in the number of persons with physical and sensory impairments as a result of aging.

In the not too distant future many of us will be using walkers, canes, or other mobility assists and may be wondering why after contributing and being active in our communities some places are suddenly inaccessible to us. Inaccessibility often prevents people with disabilities from contributing and fully participating in their communities.

While the codes and standards of the Safety Codes Act provide for the technical requirements of accessibility provisions, participation by the disabled community and experts in barrier-free design and access in the development of those standards and of the social policies around the application of those standards can be improved. There are provisions in the Alberta building code that allow for the relaxation of accessibility provisions of the code for buildings or installations. The process for approval of those relaxations is in need of improvement by including the opportunity for the input of a growing disabled community.

We've heard much from persons with disabilities. Persons with disabilities have talked about the advancing age of the population of the province and the corresponding need for more accessible and barrier-free spaces. Legislation that will encourage barrier-free design and construction will ensure that this increasing need will be met.

Persons with disabilities often feel that there is no forum where their voice can be added to the dialogue about matters of design and construction while the building industry and other stakeholders have ample opportunity to make comment on such issues. The Alberta disability strategy developed by the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities, after extensive consultation, states in recommendation 3 that "a commitment should be made to embrace the principles of universal accessibility."

What does this bill do? This bill does not, first of all, change any of the current technical requirements or any of the safety codes currently in force. What the bill does do is amend the Safety Codes Act to achieve four objectives: first, to establish the provision of barrier-free design and access standards as a recognized and meaningful purpose of the Safety Codes Act; secondly, to provide the proper voice in the appropriate forum for persons with disabilities to continue to effect change in the built environment; third, to establish fair and considered standards for the design and construction of things that are regulated by the act and are in respect of barrier-free design and access; and fourthly, to allow for the fair and reasonable application of barrier-free design and access construction requirements.

Well, how does the bill achieve these four objectives? First of all, the bill amends the Safety Codes Act to state that the act is, in 2(2.1), "to be applied in a manner consistent with the principles of barrier-free design and access." This statement is similar to recommendation 3 of the Alberta disability strategy and addresses the requests of persons with disabilities for better access.

The amendment to section 4 also addresses requests for better access. In 4(2) "the Minister shall, in accordance with this Act, coordinate and encourage the principles of barrier-free design and access for any thing, process or activity to which this Act applies." By stating that the minister recognizes and promotes the principles of barrier-free design and access, under the responsibilities section the act recognizes the importance of barrier-free design and access as a central component while expanding potential application to all activities governed by this act and its regulations.

Third, the act is amended to provide the proper voice in the appropriate forum for persons with disabilities concerning barrier-free design and accessibility issues. The proper forum for dealing with the building code and the related barrier-free design and accessibility provisions is the Safety Codes Council, which is established by the act to advise the minister. Specifically, in section 16(3) after "buildings" adding "barrier-free building design" and amending section 16(4) by adding "labour and persons with disabilities" instead of just "labour." Amending section 18 to include the clause "may promote the principles of barrier-free design and access for any thing, process or activity to which this Act applies." Section (f) to include "or barrier-free design and access" after "safety." Also, in clause (h) adding "safety standards and barrier-free design and access" after "safety standards" and in clause (i) adding "barrier-free design and access information" after "safety information."

These proposed amendments underline and expand upon the importance of barrier-free access and design as stated in the minister's responsibilities by mandating representation from persons with disabilities and the Safety Codes Council and explicitly including the promotion and acceptance of barrier-free design and access in the council's duties.

Lastly, it will give a stronger voice to the community of persons with disabilities in the development of codes and standards for barrier-free design and accessibility and to allow greater participation by persons with disabilities in the application of codes and standards for barrier-free design and access.

In section 65 the amendments enable the minister to carry out his or her responsibility for the promotion of barrier-free design and provide the minister with the power to establish clear and consistent regulations dealing with barrier-free design and access provisions, including an exemption process.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the amendments to the Safety Codes Act that comprise Bill 201 employ the existing enabling structure of this act to position Alberta's safety system for the future.

Thank you for your time, Mr. Speaker. I'll make some further comments at the conclusion.

3:00

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me the opportunity to speak to Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. I believe that from the standpoint of access for those with physical and sensory disabilities this bill represents movement in the absolute right direction and at somewhat minimal cost to all concerned. The bill asks for more representation of disabled Albertans on the Alberta Safety Codes Council so that any additions to old structures and any new structures be built in such a way that they are accessible to those who have physical and sensory disabilities and who, as examples, use wheelchairs to get around or white canes to guide them.

Mr. Speaker, this consideration does not represent a significant change in the way our laws currently look at the construction and future development of buildings. In the past we've considered buildings from a safety-first perspective, and we will continue to do this. I might add that the matter of access for the disabled is a safety-first consideration in my opinion. However, we have for some time also included consideration of the needs of disabled individuals. Section 3.8 of the Alberta building code addresses many of the concerns regarding barrier-free buildings as well as the exceptions to barrier-free requirements.

Some of those exceptions admittedly do include private homes, some apartment buildings, some group homes, shelters and halfway houses, industrial accommodations, and buildings not used on a daily basis. However, this bill asks that we take further appropriate action. It suggests that we take greater account of the need of those with mobility challenges when we design buildings, and it argues that the best way to do it is to change the safety codes of Alberta to include a representative for disabled people on Alberta's Safety Codes Council.

Mr. Speaker, my support for this bill is based upon my belief in and commitment to equity of opportunity to access buildings in Alberta.

Much work has already been done to allow this government to secure the rights provided for the disabled in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms reads as follows.

15(1) Every individual is equal before and under the law and has the right to the equal protection and equal benefit of the law without discrimination and, in particular . . . discrimination based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.

Section 15(2) reads:

Subsection (1) does not preclude any law, program or activity that has as its object the amelioration of conditions of disadvantaged individuals or groups including those that are disadvantaged because of race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.

Mr. Speaker, it is fairly clear to me that Bill 201 is one that speaks directly to section 15 of the Charter. It addresses the disadvantages that certain disabled people face when attempting to enter or move into buildings that are not set up in a manner which accommodates them. It is my view that when those with physical or sensory disadvantages face barriers to equality, the government does have a role to play in levelling the playing field. Providing access to publicly accessible buildings is one place where we can and should start.

One of the other reasons I support this bill is because it advocates a modest, noninterventionist mechanism for achieving its ends and represents a balance between the rights of disabled individuals and the responsibilities of others who must implement proposed changes. This bill does not propose massive government intervention into the lives of Albertans; it simply proposes that we have a voice of sound, logical reason that will provide barrier-free access for all Albertans regardless of our abilities or disabilities.

I would ask everyone in this Assembly to support this bill because

I believe it is a recognition of the dignity and the strengths that all Albertans in our unique fashion as individuals have a right to in accessing both public buildings and, indeed, those facilities that we all enjoy and in this cold climate in most circumstances need to have access to inside from out. So again I would urge everyone here in this Assembly to support it. It is based on sound principle. It's obvious that we should take action, and it is an appropriate manner in which to do so.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Mr. Hutton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure for me to rise today and join in the debate on Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. Also, I might add that it's a pleasure because that member has worked hard, I know, on the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities and has spent a lot of time with that constituency.

I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank the Deputy House Leader and Minister of Community Development for the work that he has done recently with regard to amalgamating and having an office for improved access for people with disabilities as we as a government spend I believe it's $1.7 billion a year on the disabled in 11 departments. This will bring a little more focus, and I know that the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan was instrumental in moving that forward as well.

With regard to Bill 201 I see equality legislation, and that is, after all, what we are dealing with. Equality for all citizens of Alberta, regardless of their abilities, is a fundamental right in this province, Mr. Speaker. The barrier that Alberta faces is that this equality does not always come easily for over half a million disabled individuals across this province. This number equates to every sixth Albertan who is affected by a disability and who, as a result, is sometimes denied full citizenship. These individuals have to face the reality of this inequality on a daily basis. What's worse is that they have to be reminded of their inequality every time they attempt to access a business, an office, or any type of public facility that does not provide the appropriate accessibility options.

Mr. Speaker, as Alberta prepares to enter its second century, I feel that Albertans need to be reminded that we live in a time and a place that allows every Albertan – I repeat: every Albertan – the possibility for full citizenship. Bill 201 is our chance to do just that. In Bill 201 we have the opportunity to set national standards that see citizens in Alberta enjoy a life that to them may seem less disabled.

Mr. Speaker, in December 2002 the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities released an Alberta disability strategy. The document provides a foundation for promoting full citizenship for those Albertans with disabilities. Before I continue discussing this strategy, I believe that it is important to define exactly what is meant by the term "full citizenship." The Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities defines the expression "full citizenship" as being treated fairly and without discrimination by individuals, companies, organizations and governments. It means having adequate supports to live a life of safety, security and dignity. It means having the chance to pursue educational and employment opportunities. And it means having the opportunity, choice and ability to participate in all aspects of Alberta society.

Mr. Speaker, that is a thorough definition of what Bill 201 deals with. It is, after all, asking the government to provide proper voice in an appropriate forum for the disabled community and in doing so embrace the principles of universal accessibility set out by the Alberta disability strategy.

Implementing the Alberta disability strategy increases the likelihood that the idea of full citizenship for all Albertans is possible. Of the eight recommendations made in the disability strategy, four of them deal directly with the goals of Bill 201. The first recommendation addresses Albertans' awareness of rights, needs, and aspirations of persons with disabilities and that it is necessary for Albertans to increase their awareness to successfully accomplish the goal. Mr. Speaker, Bill 201 would provide an appropriate forum, the Safety Codes Council, for the disabled community to voice its concerns and let all Albertans become better aware of the needs and aspirations of disabled Albertans when it comes to access. We cannot positively effect the rights of Alberta's disabled community if we don't listen.

The second recommendation of the Alberta disability strategy deals with the supports for daily living. The government of Alberta must ensure that the needs of persons with disabilities related to their daily living activities are met. Mr. Speaker, by amending the Safety Codes Act, the government would successfully address this goal. Currently, barriers for disabled and mobility-impaired Albertans are much too commonplace. Amending the act would allow Alberta's disabled community increased opportunities to actively be involved in decisions that affect their lives. In doing so, the government could ensure that the needs of persons with disabilities are met.

The third recommendation addresses the main point of Bill 201, which is the physical access of the disabled community to Alberta buildings. A commitment should be made to embrace the principles of universal accessibility as well as a process to be put in place to remove physical barriers from public spaces. In doing so, all Albertans could have the opportunity to fully participate in all community, employment, and business activities that are going along with the Alberta advantage. Mr. Speaker, although Bill 201 can be viewed as a broad stroke for promoting the full citizenship of all Albertans, its main objective is to break down the barriers that hinder Alberta's disabled population from accessing buildings and roadways. This legislation would overcome those obstacles and make Alberta more accessible.

The final recommendation that relates directly to Bill 201 is the sixth recommendation, which concerns learning. The government of Alberta should improve access for persons with disabilities to education by ensuring that all education facilities are physically accessible. Mr. Speaker, I don't think that a proper education should be available to only those Albertans who can access it without any impairment, and I am certain that this government feels the same way. The education of Albertans has always been the top priority of this government. Passing Bill 201 will reinforce that commitment thereby ensuring that all Albertans have the opportunity to learn and grow.

I don't think these recommendations are out of reach for this government. I believe that they are firmly in our grasp. The Department of Community Development is currently reviewing the Alberta disability strategy. I am confident that the response to these recommendations will be the same as mine was: complete support. After all, the real question we should be dealing with is: why aren't we already doing this? Bill 201 is a step in the direction of accepting these recommendations. It is conceivable that we can commit to providing full citizenship for every Albertan.

There are, however, critics of Bill 201 who will talk about the costs of implementation or talk about government getting into the business of business. Mr. Speaker, this legislation would likely lead to additional costs for Albertans who are building a new building or renovating an old one. However, these are also costs to those Albertans who are unable to access these buildings. Doing nothing now will only delay the inevitable. As Albertans age, changes will be necessary, and implementing them at a later date will in all likelihood not cost less but, rather, a great deal more.

Bill 201 is not asking the government to get involved in the business of business; rather, it is asking the government to get involved in the business of equality for Albertans in the disabled community. These costs are not costs; they are investments in a universally accessible Alberta. Mr. Speaker, by supporting Bill 201 the government will contribute to making Alberta communities barrier free and physically accessible. As a result, a steadily increasing number of Albertans will be able to access the building spaces, services, and programs they require. All Albertans will have the opportunity to fully participate in and provide leadership to public policy processes and to activities and associations that define their community.

I encourage all members of the Assembly to vote in favour of this legislation and, in doing so, vote in favour of Alberta's continued support in making over half a million Albertans with disabilities full citizens of this great province. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very happy to rise today and join debate on Bill 201, sponsored by the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. This is a very interesting piece of legislation that has the ability to affect a great many Albertans, and I think that we must discuss both the merits and the benefits of this legislation.

Last night I watched the documentary Bowling for Columbine. In one section of this documentary a young student from Columbine high school who had survived the massacre but had been shot and is now in a wheelchair had gone to the head office of K Mart in the United States to ask them to stop selling handgun ammunition in their stores. I was surprised and even a little shocked to see that there was no wheelchair access to the beautiful and massive building that was the national headquarters of K Mart. The young Columbine student had to be lifted by three men in order for him to enter the office building that was only accessible by a large exterior and interior staircase. I realized that I had taken for granted that all buildings in our modern world have wheelchair access and are barrier free. Bowling for Columbine, although an American documentary, made me realize that barrier-free access is a long way from being taken for granted.

I think it's worth stating again that Bill 201 will amend the Safety Codes Act so that the disabled in Alberta are not met with barriers when trying to access public buildings. It means that another group will be added to the Safety Codes Council to provide input into the decision-making process for safety codes in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take my time this afternoon to speak about the Safety Codes Council and how I think this bill is a good thing for Alberta. I hope that my arguments will provide some good information for the members present today.

In Alberta the Safety Codes Council is responsible for overseeing the Safety Codes Act. It is a not-for-profit, nongovernment organization, and its actions play a very vital role in all Albertans' lives whether they know it or not. The council covers nine very important disciplines, which are covered under the act. Those disciplines are amusement rides, boilers and pressure vessels, building, electrical, elevators, fire, gas, passenger ropeways, and plumbing. Each of those disciplines has its own council, the Amusement Rides Technical Council for example, and then each is part of a coordinating committee. This machinery makes up the Safety Codes Council, and each group provides input on the decisions and policy-making of the council.

The council also develops and administers a system to accredit municipalities, corporations, and agencies to carry out specific activities; develops and administers programs to train, certify, and designate safety codes officers; administers an appeal process for decisions made in accreditation and certification programs, orders, and written notices issued; promotes uniform safety standards; and it also provides support to its many industry partners. Now, that list is fairly extensive, but you can see how this council has the ability to affect every Albertan.

What I find somewhat discouraging about this council is that it has very little representation from a group that is becoming increasingly more visible in this province. This, however, is a situation that Bill 201 is looking to alleviate. Bill 201 would add another representative council to the Safety Codes Council, the barrier-free council. I believe that this would be a very unique addition to the Safety Codes Council because while the other groups represent purely technical and safety aspects, a barrier-free council would represent a good many Albertans and be able to provide the council with insight on how decisions will affect both the elderly and the disabled.

Now, one must look at the Safety Codes Council to understand why adding a barrier-free council would be a good decision. The Safety Codes Council mission is to work in partnership with industry, municipalities, labour, and government to "provide Albertans with quality public safety systems for structures, facilities and equipment and provide competency-based training for Safety Codes Officers."

If we back up a little and take a look at that, we see that its mission is to "provide Albertans with quality public safety systems." What is important is that the council provides for Albertans, all Albertans, and I think that most Albertans are represented on the council. However, a large group of Albertans is not represented, albeit through no fault of their own nor the council's. Rather, the issue of access to public buildings has really never been at the forefront of many issues in this province until now.

The disabled community in Alberta has stressed to many MLAs as well as MPs on the national scale that they feel they are being overlooked when many different decisions are being made about building structures and access. It could be as simple as having a curb cut on the street. Many of us overlook the fact that most sidewalks in Alberta are built so that if one is crossing the street, the curb of the sidewalk is cut down so that anything with wheels can leave or enter the sidewalk: things like a baby stroller or a shopping cart or a wheelchair, especially a wheelchair. This is something that I don't think many people really take notice of. A person pushing a baby stroller need only lift the front wheels and then the back to get it and the child up and onto the sidewalk, but what is a disabled person in a wheelchair supposed to do? Rarely do they have the arm strength to get themselves up and onto a sidewalk that has no cut-down. Common sense maybe but extremely important to the disabled community.

Nowadays there are many buildings that need to be accessed by the disabled community that are just too difficult. Granted, government buildings in very high traffic public places do have access for the disabled, but there are plenty of places such as restaurants that often don't have barrier-free access. Think about the places you've gone to eat in the past week or so. Did all of those places have a wheelchair ramp, or did the entrance to the eating establishment have a little step before the door, one that poses no problem for an able-bodied Albertan but one that is a great challenge for a young man in a wheelchair? This is the sort of thing that a barrier-free council could bring to the table if it were represented in the Safety Codes Council.

Of course, the barrier-free council would not only be specific to disabled people but also help another group of Albertans that may have been overlooked in this process as well, and that group, Mr. Speaker, is seniors. Alberta is a province that is aging. The baby boomers are getting to that age where they will soon need a cane or a walker or a wheelchair or a permanent IV drip. Do you think the senior is going to be impressed by having to drag their walker up some stairs to get into their favourite restaurant? I don't think so.

Seniors are extremely important to this province, yet in the Safety Codes Council there is no group through which they can let their concerns be known about rules and regulations that are specific to buildings, structures, and equipment. Again, this is no fault of the Safety Codes Council. The groups on that council are not really meant to think about those issues. It would be nice if all the concerns of Albertans could be heard, but those representing the Plumbing Technical Council are not going to be overly concerned about barrier-free access when discussing building permits. This is something that has been overlooked in the past, and now is as good a time as any to see that it's fixed.

I don't see why the members of this House would not support a move such as the one that Bill 201 provides. We place a large amount of importance on our seniors population, so much so that we have provided a ministry specifically dedicated to seniors' issues. Therefore, one can see how this bill fits right in line with the attitude of not only this government but of Albertans as a whole. Bill 201 provides this House with an opportunity to strengthen the Safety Codes Council. This council has done a remarkable job over the years, and it is now time that we improve the council in a small but very important way.

There are many in this province who are at a disadvantage in living their daily lives. There are those in wheelchairs, with walkers, with canes, without sight who should have their voices heard when policy is being made about quality public safety systems for structures, facilities, and equipment. One thing that all members should know is that I don't believe that this bill is that great a change. However, it is a significant change in that we will be giving a voice to those who currently do not have a voice on this committee. I think that adding one more representative group will not be an administrative nightmare or a change in the council's philosophy.

The Safety Codes Council has done remarkable work for this government and for the people of Alberta over the past year. As I close this afternoon, I would like to ask all hon. members, some of whom may be getting close to that age where they're going to have to start thinking about these issues, to support Bill 201.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with a great deal of pleasure that I rise today to speak to Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. The importance of designing buildings in a manner that does not discriminate against those with a disability is undisputable. For years mainstream building design has for the most part unintentionally reflected the lifestyle and abilities of the able-bodied person. However, in recent years we have become more cognizant of the needs of the disabled, and important strides have been made both by government and the private sector.

In the last 20 years I've seen more public and private buildings with wheelchair ramps, power doors, and handicapped parking spaces. Awareness of issues that the disabled face on a daily basis has improved, and the physical changes are noticeable. Businesses have recognized that barriers do little to improve the flow of customers who come through their doors. As Alberta's population ages, business owners have become aware of this fact and voluntarily make improvements in an effort to be more accommodating.

As much of the discussion on this bill will revolve around barriers like entrances and bathrooms, I would like to provide a different example that illustrates a business's attempt to make the theatre-going experience more enjoyable for those who face sight and sound barriers, so to speak. At the beginning of this decade, Mr. Speaker, Famous Players decided to invest a million dollars to outfit 50 theatres across the country with state-of-the-art hearing and sight-impaired technology. Infrared headsets provide visual description for the blind, and tinted plastic reflectors aimed at a scroll board from the back of the theatre provide captioning for deaf patrons. This is a classic example of a company not only recognizing the needs of a minority but also recognizing a business opportunity. By acting on an inclusive attitude, this company has expanded its market.

This mentality is likely to continue well into the future. We are an aging population, and with age comes difficulty climbing stairs, using washrooms, reading signage, et cetera. Between 2000 and 2016 it is expected that the number of Alberta seniors will rise from 10 to 14 per cent of Alberta's population, and 10 years after that, Mr. Speaker, it is expected that clearly 20 per cent of Albertans will be over 65.

This trend suggests a couple of different things. First, it means that barriers are becoming a challenge not only for a higher number of Albertans but a larger segment of the population.

Second, it reinforces the need to increase the emphasis that we place on the issue of barriers and how we can remove them from Alberta's buildings. However, just because a situation has been improved in recent history through changing attitudes of the private sector and added requirements found within the Alberta building code, it is not to say that there isn't room for improvement.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to focus my comments on two specific areas. First, I would like to talk about the mandatory representation the disabled community would be granted because of Bill 201 and the importance of including this crucial stakeholder when we make decisions about issues relating to the removal of physical barriers that are still present in many Alberta buildings. Secondly, I would like to address the need to be responsible in the pace we set to make Alberta a barrier-free society. While making significant grounds toward solving this issue is important, we would do much harm by trying to do too much at once. I would contend that Bill 201 is a responsible measure to make headway with this important issue.

On my first point, Bill 201 would mandate the Safety Codes Council to have representation from the disabled community, which through such representation would have a say in the principles of barrier-free design. Thus barrier-free design would become one of the Safety Codes Council's specific duties. Securely establishing a voice for the disabled through an official committee is an important first step to a more inclusive society. Adding representation for the disabled community to the Safety Codes Council is consistent with this government's history of consultation with Albertans on issues they face. It stands to reason that stakeholders can and do play an important role in solving problems they face.

In order to truly understand what difficulties disabled Albertans face and to seek out proper and timely solutions, it is imperative to include those who face the barriers on a daily basis. In this instance, Bill 201 builds on progress made in the past and sets a new precedent for the future not only in Alberta but for the rest of the country as well. If such a committee is established, it is necessary to involve the group in the decision-making process that surrounds the issues of relaxation.

Currently the Safety Codes Act allows for relaxations to be made by the director if an owner of a building can show that specific requirements are unnecessary or extraordinary circumstances prevent conformance. It is arguable that an able-bodied person may not be in the best position to determine whether requirements are necessary or not. Some activists suggest that exemptions occur too frequently. Therefore, it would be beneficial if those who face the barriers had some influence in the decision-making process.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that relaxation should be eliminated, and establishing a voice for those who face barriers does not mean an end to all relaxations. There are times when upgrades are unnecessary and could pose an economic burden on a business owner. Is there a need to install barrier-free showers at an outdoor soccer field where those using the facility would be able-bodied players and referees? Is it necessary to improve access to a police training facility to which the general public has no access? Should allowances be made if there isn't proper room to add a wheelchair ramp to the outside of a building? These are real circumstances that warranted relaxations in 2003.

It is important to continue to look at each individual circumstance with a degree of balance. At the same time, it's imperative that we continue to move in a forward direction on this issue. I believe that Bill 201 achieves both.

This brings me to my second point, Mr. Speaker. Bill 201 does not eliminate the use of relaxations. Instead, it provides a better mechanism to deal with the issue. This process of discretion is essential to making sure that we move at a reasonable pace in establishing a method to removing physical barriers faced by disabled Albertans. The issue of relaxations is more contentious in rural portions of our province, and in smaller communities stores are more likely to be family-owned. They are likely to be a main staple for a family, and in many cases they don't generate the amount of cash that big box stores in urban areas do. In some cases business owners would take a serious financial hit to install ramps . . . [Mr. Knight's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: Sorry to interrupt the hon. member.

An Hon. Member: He was going so well.

The Deputy Speaker: He was just on a roll there.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure and an honour to speak and make a few comments to Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. I must commend the member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan for not only sponsoring this bill but promoting it to all members of the Assembly. It's certainly a bill that I feel is long overdue.

Those of us that were present in the Assembly in 1997 had a very special moment when barriers were removed and we had the honour and the privilege of listening to Rick Hansen on his Man in Motion tour, the 10th anniversary. Also speaking was the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford at the time, Percy Wickman, who himself uses a wheelchair constantly. So for the Assembly to not pass this bill, to me, would be not what we are all about. I certainly, along with many other members that have already spoken, strongly urge all members to support this bill because it is a bill that is required.

On that particular occasion when Rick Hansen wanted to come and speak to the Assembly, what had to happen first of all was that we had to pass Motion 17 in this Assembly, which would allow an unelected member of the Assembly to pass the bar and come and speak to us. It was quite a day. Mr. Hansen was introduced in the Assembly by the minister of health at that particular time and, as well, there were some comments made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford at that time. I will never forget the words that he said, and I will quote what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford said at that time. He said:

Rick Hansen touched the world in three ways that come to mind quite readily. First of all, he leaves behind a legacy, the legacy of the 60 million plus dollars for research so that someday spinal cord injuries may be eliminated.

Secondly . . .

And I think this is what applies to this bill more than anything else.

. . . he single-handedly changed buildings to accessible buildings, and I experienced that in Thunder Bay, Ontario. After the election in 1989, when we were down there for a few days at my sister's place, she arranged for me to be interviewed at the local TV channel station. She had checked it out. It was accessible. When I went there, I couldn't believe it: an old CBC building, nice parking in front. I went inside and marvelled to the crew. I said: I can't believe how accessible this building is. They said: we had to do it; Rick Hansen made us. I said: what do you mean Rick Hansen made you? They said: we wanted him in the studio on the Rick Smith show, and he wouldn't come until we agreed to renovate the building to his specifications. I'm sure that was done dozens of times along the way.

And that is quite significant, because that is what we're here today to start debating in Bill 201. It's to make buildings accessible to people that have either physical or sensory disabilities.

Thirdly, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford at that time said was:

The third and the most important is the change in people's attitudes. Suddenly, being in a wheelchair, you could feel proud. People would look at you and say: God, he's one of those guys. There was something that changed people's attitudes. Suddenly, they realized we were equal, in some cases above being equal. It proved that with determination you can live out your wildest dreams. You've just got to have the guts to try.

Those were the words of Percy Wickman in this Assembly in 1997.

As well, one other thing that impressed me about the Man in Motion tour was that as Rick Hansen was wheeling those last few hundred yards to the finish line in Victoria, B.C., he was filled with elation, he was filled with many different feelings. He had wheeled through every country along the way in unimaginable conditions, heat and cold and wet, and as he came towards the finish line, there was a banner welcoming him home. As he went under that banner, he threw his head back, and on the back of the banner was printed: the end is just the beginning.

So as we look at a new chapter in legislation here in this province for those with physical and sensory disabilities, I think that this is a great start to legislation that will make accessibility to buildings in this province more available for all. I thank you very much for the opportunity to make these comments.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to be able to enter into this discussion on Bill 201, Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. One of the very most important people in my life, my father, was disabled. For the last 17 years of his life he was in a wheelchair. So one of the things I did as a young woman was build a ramp for him to be able to get around his house.

In 1991 when I built my own house, one of the key things in the design was making sure that the house was wheelchair accessible. So I designed the two main floor bedrooms so that they could be made into one master bedroom when I could no longer climb stairs or if I was in a wheelchair. All the doors are at least three feet wide so that wheelchairs can get through, and there's full access from the street right up into the house on ramps. Right now I'm adding a garage to my house and, again, I'm making it so that I can get from the garage all the way up the ramps into the house.

So I'm finding this bill very interesting. I look at section (2.1). I'd like to be able to read this:

This Act is to be applied in a manner consistent with the principles of barrier-free design and access to allow persons with physical and sensory disabilities to access and use buildings and facilities to which this Act applies.

Now, this act applies to all the buildings in Alberta. This act applies to every private residence in Alberta. So it applies to the Alberta building code regulations, which is all the private buildings in Alberta, all the private homes that are being built in Alberta. I realize that what this act does is put us in a position where there's going to be a lot of relaxations, but I'm sure that it is at least moving us into the position where people are encouraged to build all their buildings, all their homes to be wheelchair accessible.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler.

Mrs. Gordon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to join the debate on Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by my colleague from Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. I, too, hon. colleague, would like to praise you for the fine work you've done on the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities. I know first-hand that you're a good MLA, a very strong chairman, an avid advocate on behalf of those with disabilities, and a tremendous listener. One of the reasons I know that you're a tremendous listener is because you've brought this piece of legislation forward. This didn't come from you; this came from the people you've been working with and on behalf of for a number of years. So I'm sure they, too, would like to thank you.

May I remind everyone in this Assembly that no one - no one - chooses to be disabled. These things happen. They must deal with them, and as a society we must deal with them. I'm not going to be repetitious and repeat all the things that have been said thus far by the many, many speakers before me, but I will say that this legislation, if passed and proclaimed, would allow another voice to be heard at that table in the implementation of design and how those designs will affect the lives of many, many people. I ask that we as a group of politicians and legislators please consider what the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan is trying to do.

I think the importance of looking ahead has been brought up by a couple of speakers. We have an aging population. As baby boomers - and many of us in this room are considered baby boomers - approach the age of 65, the numbers will be great. If you think of those people that you know - friends, relatives, neighbours, co-workers, staff - that are 65, 70 requiring the use of canes, wheelchairs, walkers and sit down with them and ask them point-blank what barriers they face in their community in trying to achieve the lifestyle that they want and we would hope they would be able to use, I think you will find that there are many buildings that have done an excellent job. There are many buildings where through this type of legislation we could make sure that in the future when renovations come due or are going to happen, they will include some of these things that the disabled community need and want.

I believe one of the speakers before me talked about the changes to wheelchairs that have taken place over the years. Those changes will continue as new technology comes along to help those that need them, and those wheelchairs and the other devices necessary for the disabled will have to be taken into consideration as we move ahead with buildings and changes in that regard.

I would thank the member from the opposition that talked about the former member of this Legislature, a good man that I had known long before I ever came here, and that was the former Member for Edmonton-Rutherford and a good friend of mine, Mr. Percy Wickman. Every day Percy showed us what it took to come into this Assembly, to leave this Assembly, to drive home from this Assembly. If I'm not mistaken, I think that recently Percy was awarded the Order of Canada for his work on behalf of the disabled and those that are afflicted with handicaps of one sort or another. So thank you, Percy, for the work you did on their behalf.

Fellow colleagues, I would ask you to please give consideration to this important piece of legislation and the implications it will have for many, many people today and well into the future. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. As other members have said, the main goal of this bill is to amend the current Safety Codes Act. This amendment would expand the Safety Codes Council to include a representative from the disabled community in Alberta. The expanded Safety Codes Council would be able to provide experienced insights into existing regulations and the application of the Alberta building code. This would not only enhance access to buildings but also render them more user friendly to persons with restricted mobility.

When I have encountered someone in the past who needed a wheelchair to get around, I often thought how much energy and work it would require just to get where you were going. However, I never really thought about what being confined to a wheelchair would really mean. And, again, I'm not talking about the big things; I'm talking about the daily implications and how much more difficult it would be, like going shopping, taking your dog for a walk, or getting in and out of your car. But perhaps in a very small way I've gained a bit of insight that maybe some of my colleagues of the current crop haven't when it comes to understanding this bill because I've already had experience in dealing with issues concerning universal accessibility.

Several years ago I held the position of county reeve, and at that time we were dealing with the issue of renovating our county office. Part of that discussion was making it universally accessible to persons that faced mobility issues, and one of the specific items was looking at putting in an elevator. Well, I don't have to tell many people here that have been involved in municipal politics that one of the most controversial things you can do is renovate or build a new county building, but in those days adding extra dollars to the cost of doing that by putting in a lift even added to that controversy.

So in order to understand the obstacles that people with mobility issues faced, I borrowed a wheelchair for a day when I knew many of the council members were going to be down at the office, and I tried navigating my way around the building and invited several of my colleagues to take it for a spin to see how friendly our current building really was and to try some ramps at some other buildings. Well, needless to say, my experiences and my colleagues' experiences from that day helped ensure that when the building was renovated, regardless of the controversy, we did make it universally accessible and decided to install an elevator to assist those that use a wheelchair to have full access. It also helped the staff move big files on wheels from the top floor to the bottom floor and probably prevented a lot of injuries that could have happened in the course of trying to carry them down the stairs.

In a wheelchair an ill-placed set of stairs can be an insurmountable obstacle, and a hard-cut curve becomes an invitation for disaster. This is why creating a barrier-free technical council to be a separate entity would also be beneficial. The concerns and issues that it would raise would deal with more than just technical and safety issues. This body would be able to address everyday issues of utility and practicality. This is important because Alberta is committed to being open and accessible to all Albertans. The Alberta advantage applies to all Albertans, and we should take pride in knowing that all people are welcome here.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta along with Canada as a whole is home to a rapidly aging population. From 1971 to 2003 the number of Alberta seniors rose from roughly 120,000 to over 325,000. This is an increase of over 170 per cent in only three decades. Additionally, as a proportion of the whole population the population of seniors is rising. Currently seniors make up 10 per cent of the total population. This is projected to rise to 14 per cent 10 years from now, and after 20 years pass, they'll constitute roughly 20 per cent of Alberta's population. I will be in that number, as will many of my colleagues in this Chamber. This is a very large number of people.

Now, we're all aware that as we age, the chance of losing our mobility increases due to a variety of factors which could be just grouped together under the heading of old age. We'll no longer be able to move around as quickly or easily as we used to do. For some of us it will be severe enough that we'll need help to get around. Whether this help would come from a cane, a walker, a wheelchair, moving from place to place will no longer be as easy as it is now. This means that a higher portion of the population will have mobility issues, and the issue of universal access will even be more important than it is now, and it is important now.

Mr. Speaker, by acting now, we will avoid what could potentially become a very large problem in 10 to 15 years. This legislation takes a proactive approach in anticipating a real problem instead of having to scramble to deal with it once it's become a huge problem.

I realize that there are concerns with this bill, and most of these are cost related and whether we are placing undue burden upon certain Albertans. The truth of the matter is that Bill 201 does not change any existing building codes, nor does it change how renovations are dealt with, and it does not change the requirements that new buildings must meet right now. I cannot stress this point enough. There will be no new costs associated with this bill, and there will be no changes to the existing Alberta building code. What this bill does propose to do is create another seat on the Safety Codes Council so that concerns regarding barrier-free design issues will be properly addressed.

Mr. Speaker, the safety codes amendment act presents Alberta with an opportunity, the opportunity to ensure that our province is for all Albertans. By supporting this bill, we are supporting a greater voice for the disabled community in decisions that greatly affect them. By creating a barrier-free technical council, Alberta would become a leader among provinces in regard to issues that affect persons with impaired mobility. We would be showing other jurisdictions in Canada the way to ensure that all members of the community will be assured of being able to participate in that community.

Bill 201 is not proposing radical changes to the Alberta building code. What is being put forward here will not result in changing the requirements that new buildings must meet, nor would it alter how renovations are to be completed. Additionally, passing this bill will not mean that the private sector will end up paying out large sums in order to meet new requirements, nor will it be sanctioning the creation of an enormous bureaucracy in order to deal with a flood of new paperwork.

Mr. Speaker, passing Bill 201 will allow the Safety Codes Council to benefit from the input of those who live with disabilities day to day. It will create a forum where a wealth of new knowledge can be shared and utilized in ways that will help Alberta remain open and accessible to all Albertans. This will ensure that members of our community that confront the obstacle of living with impaired mobility on a daily basis will not be excluded from being involved in their community. Alberta is committed to achieving the highest standard of living for all Albertans, and this bill will help us reach that goal.

As I've already mentioned, we're dealing with a rapidly aging population both in raw numbers and as a percentage of the whole. By including persons with disabilities on the Safety Codes Council, we'll be able to better prepare for the coming challenges that we will all be faced with. The safety codes amendment act will deal with the issue of accessibility before it becomes a problem.

I fully support this bill and ask all my colleagues to do the same. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise this afternoon and join my colleagues in support of a discussion and debate on Bill 201, the Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. I really do commend the member for bringing this bill forward. I think it is a very important initiative not only today but in the future, as many members have already referred to.

Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the legislation has two primary objectives. First, it would aid in providing a voice to the disabled community. Bill 201 would require the Safety Codes Council to ensure that it has representation from those with disabilities. As the Safety Codes Act stands now, it necessitates representation from a variety of groups, including labour, business, and municipal governments. However, the disabled community is not included and does not get to offer its input into the decisions made surrounding safety and design issues.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that by including this group, we are giving these individuals a say in the decisions that ultimately affect their lives, and who better to make those decisions or give input into design plans that do increase accessibility than those who really face this challenge, realistically, every day. By implementing this change and giving representation to disabled individuals, we are taking yet another step in becoming a more inclusive society.

The second objective of this legislation is to increase access to buildings and roadways for those with limited mobility through the implementation of barrier-free designs. I would like to point out that this legislation would not be retroactive but would only apply to any new buildings or renovations to existing buildings.

Mr. Speaker, barrier-free designs can enhance daily living by maximizing independence. This can improve quality of life by allowing greater participation in regular activities and enabling individuals with disabilities to maintain safe and active lifestyles. How important that is. Barrier-free designs promote independence for those living with disabilities. For those who have limited mobility, the physical surroundings can either facilitate or restrict their independence. A barrier-free environment will allow people with limited mobility to live more self-sufficiently, as I said earlier and as others have said, and they will still be able to access buildings and participate in community activities.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 201, Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004, also takes a proactive approach. The issue of building and roadway access is not going to disappear. If anything, the need for barrier-free designs is only going to increase. By promoting the principles of these designs, we're looking to the future and possibly offsetting increased costs down the road. If we don't recognize the needs for alterations at an early stage, and especially now, the result may be a higher financial burden in the future.

Barrier-free designs assist not only those with disabilities but also the elderly. Demographics of this province are changing, as many members also have spoken about today. Alberta has one of the largest senior populations, and it's certainly projected to continue growing. Right now, Mr. Speaker, there are over 323,000 seniors living in the province. Since 1984 Alberta has received on average a net of 721 senior migrants per year. There are more seniors moving to Alberta than there are moving out. According to Statistics Canada since 1971 the province has experienced a 171 per cent increase in the number of Albertans over age 65. During that same time span our entire population has increased only 84 per cent, so that's 171 as opposed to 84 per cent. Therefore, those 65 and older are increasing at a much faster rate than all other age categories, thus illustrating that our population is indeed aging.

It is evident that seniors are increasing their presence in Alberta. By 2026 it is projected that there will be more than 700,000 seniors in the province or roughly 1 in 5 Albertans, and I know that I have seen some figures in the past that by 2030 or '35 it will be 1 in 4 seniors in Alberta. The number of seniors is definitely accelerating and will continue to as the baby boomers approach 65. Certainly, the aging population is going to characterize demographic trends in Alberta. I would also add: don't think only of the aging population and disinclude the disabled population, because to me it's all one and the same.

In previous years the majority of seniors were in the younger age categories. These are just examples of the aging population. Almost 33 per cent were between 65 and 69 years, and approximately 60 per cent were below age 75. But now, Mr. Speaker, we're seeing the numbers increase for seniors in those older groups. Seniors aged 80 and older make up now 25 per cent of seniors in 2001. This figure has increased from 21 per cent in 1971. This group is also expected to increase by 160 per cent by the year 2026.

Just as a personal note at this point, when I visit seniors' housing facilities, I certainly have noticed in the last five years, more so even in the last three, an increasing number of walkers and wheelchairs in these residences. I haven't been in a wheelchair, as the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills has recounted for us. I have not been in a wheelchair myself, but I certainly have watched my mother in the last year with her walker, first walking independently and now with a walker, and without that walker she would not be able to be mobile and to live independently and stay where she is at least for the time being.

The demographic shift is certainly going to have an impact, as I've said, today and tomorrow and very much so for the future. The baby boomers, again, are entering their 50s and 60s, and some have even chosen early retirement, and along with increasing life expectancy, which I think is something we should all really be thinking about, it makes it crucial for safety code councils to promote accessibility and address the needs of the elderly. Not only living longer or, as I said, increasing life expectancy, we want seniors and we are encouraging them to live healthier, more active lifestyles. So, again, it's important that design principles promote barrier-free ideals and aid in increasing accessibility of roadways and buildings.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is also about updating legislation and making building codes relevant to our current societal situation. The building code ensures safety but strictly deals with safety issues. The code presently does not account for any social concerns. Although the building code wasn't initially written to deal with social fairness, it should be considered now, and it's certainly time to adjust that to reflect society.

Buildings and roadways need to be accessible to everyone. It's not fair to exclude a portion of the population because it will cost money or be an inconvenience to business owners. In fact, increasingly, the disabled and the seniors population as they increase in numbers will drive more and more of the retail and business marketplace, and that's something that today's businesses should take heed of.

Mr. Speaker, barrier-free designs prevent discrimination against people with disabilities. Physical barriers should be acknowledged as a hindrance to a person's freedom. Barrier-free design should influence policies, design practices, and codes to access the building environment. As a member I must say again, as the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills said, that everyone should put themselves in the shoes of someone with limited mobility. He was saying that he imagined himself in a wheelchair; then he was in a wheelchair. I say: "How would you like to be disabled physically? How could you make yourself physically disabled and in a wheelchair?" That is the real trick. Then let's see how well we would do.

Think of just the amount of time it would take to get around and the difficulty of accessing roadways and buildings. You might not even be able to enter businesses or stores – I'm sure you wouldn't at the present time – that you visit on a regular basis. I acknowledge most of us here probably have never had to deal with this type of situation, and I know I haven't, and therefore I really don't fully understand these difficulties. If we haven't experienced them personally, maybe we know friends or relatives who have.

There is one person that I certainly knew for many years personally and still do. His name is Vance Milligan, and I think he's probably known very well. I see Vance fairly regularly. I worked at Bennett Jones for many years and admired Vance. He's a man that over the years has become a leader in the disabled community. I would like to just make note of Vance Milligan as someone that we can all admire, but without his support structure of people and accessibility he would not be who he is today.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to join the debate supporting Bill 201, Safety Codes (Barrier-free Design and Access) Amendment Act, 2004. The Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan has a great deal of knowledge regarding accessibility for disabled Albertans. I hope that this House can pass this legislation to make new and renovated buildings more accessible for more people.

I think the perception of the disabled is slowly changing. Stereotyping consistently portrays disabled Albertans as helpless and vulnerable. Increasingly, however, Albertans are realizing that this isn't the case in the majority of instances.

Unfortunately, we continue to see an alarming number of disabilities due to workplace injuries or traffic accidents. As tragic as this is, some of these people may understand some of the technical aspects of building and safety codes better than others. I would argue that this is an opportunity to turn a tragic event into an important opportunity. Advocates for the disabled have shown that overlooking or not paying attention to the requirements of the building codes can, no matter how unintentional, prevent disabled or elderly Albertans from living an otherwise normal life. Most able-bodied people cannot relate to these challenges. The greatest tool to open doors to any group is awareness.

Mr. Speaker, last year I had the privilege of joining a blindfolded luncheon with my constituent friend Wayne Turnbull, who is also visually impaired, at the CNIB in Calgary. I also met a few Albertans who lost visual ability and hearing ability as well, so this was a great learning experience for me and also conversation.

Mr. Speaker, many years ago I was a bit younger, and I showed off a bit to our children. I experienced a temporary minor disability due to my wrong gymnastic move. It turned out to be not showing how to do it but showing how not to do it. This experience taught me the need for accessibility at the workplace because I still had to work during this temporary disability.

I represent a large number of seniors in the Calgary-Fort constituency. As we all know, the numbers of seniors in our province will increase in the coming years, so I have a keen interest in this bill that improves safety and accessibility. This bill is moving in the right direction for the disabled in Alberta. My favourite proposed change for the Safety Codes Act is a new position for the disabled on the Safety Codes Council.

Initially, there may be some reaction on the part of a few members about the new position. After all, the Safety Codes Council is a very technical group. One may wonder how a disabled community would contribute to the technical side of building construction. To a large degree accessibility for the disabled is a social issue, and the Safety Codes Council isn't equipped with the tools or the mandate to address social issues. However, a seat at the table may benefit the disabled and move Alberta toward the goal of accessibility for all Albertans.

I think that this new voice will help more people gain access to buildings. This will provide an excellent opportunity to apply practical experiences from the disabled to technical requirements of the code. I understand that there is nothing in the bill that compels the council to listen to the views of the disabled. There is also nothing in the bill that provides a mechanism to stop or reduce the number of exemptions granted for new construction or renovation projects. After these considerations I still believe this new position will succeed. I understand that every part of the council works closely with one another. This will be a great asset for every disabled person because the issues are integrated among all aspects of building and safety codes.

Based on what I've heard from constituents, I think the focus of accessibility should be mainly directed to building architecture. I would like to see an award created that recognizes creative and innovative design that helps the disabled. The legitimacy of an award would be stronger if it were supported from within the Safety Codes Council. I think this award would be great exposure for the award winner. My hope is that this could also raise the bar for future designs. Improving access to buildings increases their market value, improves the public image of construction companies, and can increase the bottom line. Most companies would be encouraged to improve their image as a responsible corporate citizen.

As some members of the council may be concerned about the perceived cost increase in new construction and renovation projects, advocates for the disabled talked about physical barriers that impede their access. Raising awareness of the challenges facing the disabled is extremely important, and we should think carefully about the financial consequences of this bill.

For example, a low-grade ramp or curb cuts may not be expensive, but a conventional elevator can cost over $50,000 or even a hand-lift can cost up to $30,000. Some may say that smaller contractors would be unable to accommodate such changes. I am reminded of buildings in my area that have an elevator, and there are people who must walk down seven or eight steps to the actual elevator door. The point of the new position isn't to create a financial burden for contractors. The goal is to take existing measures and modify them to accommodate the disabled. Using the apartment building as an example, there is little need for an elevator if people are unable to get to it.

The voice for the disabled at the table of the Safety Codes Council would be beneficial to meaningful changes to the building codes. I would be interested in the selection process for sending disabled people to the council. Would it be a selection from disabled people or the advocate groups? Or would it be someone with a construction background who has suffered an accident at the workplace? Or would it be some sort of an election? I think these are important details to be considered in the bill. Anyhow, it's a position that creates a voice for the disabled and having the voice heard is important in our democratic system. There should be a way to ensure contributions from disabled Albertans in an effective and constructive manner.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk about relaxing requirements for facilities for the disabled. There are a number of people who believe that this exemption is granted too easily. The application allows some projects to override accessibility requirements because of a lack of need. Some argue that this is used as a loophole to save money rather than prevent frivolous renovations. I think certain cases should be looked at closely, and at the same time this application process should continue to have some prominence, play a role in it.

There may also be some concern regarding administration of this bill. How will this bill work once implemented? Larger renovation projects with big budgets can accommodate future changes to help the disabled. What about smaller projects with smaller budgets? Restricting the exemption clause could delay or even cancel smaller projects. Of course, this theory would depend upon the extent of changes and the financial impact.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, I like the idea of raising this bill, and I agree with the spirit behind this bill. I know that the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan has a great deal of insight regarding the challenges facing disabled Albertans. I share the concern with other members regarding the challenges facing Alberta's large and growing disabled community and seniors. I would like to think that future changes in the Safety Codes Act would moderate enough to please the disabled community without leaving contractors with a substantial financial burden.

I want to tell you of an instance that I heard. Somewhere in the U.S. there is a drive-through bank kiosk that was specified and built with Braille panels. I'm hoping the sponsor would shed some light on this detail, and I urge that members support the bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood.

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased first of all to commend the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan on his bill, and I want to take a little bit of a leaf from the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. I wish to speak on one provision and that being the inclusion to have some person with a disability on the committee as referenced in section 16 of the act.

A few years ago a gentleman and his wife came into my office, a rather narrow step up. High River is subject to periodic floods, so there was a ramp. They were able to get in. It was very awkward getting into my office, but they were able to do that. One of the things that he said was that these handicap bathrooms are really quite good, but my wife has MS, and I'm her caregiver. So we were in a brand new restaurant, and they said that they had handicap bathrooms. Well, yes, they do. They have some for ladies but not for men and some for men but not for ladies. So how does he take his wife into the handicap washroom? Naturally, she would rather go into the ladies than the men's, and so he has to get some lady, a waitress, to go and check and see if the bathroom was clear. Then he could take her in and get her organized and go out and wait a decent amount of time and get another lady to go in to see that there are no other ladies in there so that he may go in and help his wife out.

That indicates to me that sometimes we can do good things, but unless we walk in the moccasins or, in this case, like the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills actually try the wheelchair and then think of how they are going to be moving around and what condition they are that you move around in it – if they have a caregiver, very often a spouse, maybe a parent, they may not be of the same gender. Some of these washrooms are really well intended but don't work out so well under those special circumstances. So it's very good to have someone who has this situation confronting their life be on the council to advise the others, who can plan all kinds of things, but unless you actually live it, you don't know it. I think they will add a great amount to that board.

So I congratulate you and support the bill.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

Mr. Masyk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this opportunity also to share in the debate on Bill 201. The simple fact is that last year when I brought forward a motion with respect to wheelchair access for disabled people at gas stations, I also went down to a rehab hospital and got a wheelchair. I got into the wheelchair. It was the last snowstorm last spring. There was some ice built up at the island at the gas station, and unless I had, like my son puts it, Go Go Gadget arms, I really had a hard time reaching the spout. If it wasn't for the actual use of my legs where I could get out and get the spout off and put it in my truck, I wouldn't have been able to have really been doing it. The wheelchair I had had little grips on it, but I really couldn't get over the ice. It would spin, and I couldn't quite reach. I was about a foot short. I couldn't quite reach it, but that was the easy part.

Once I filled up my tank, I went around and tried to get between a car that had decided to pull up for the confectionary part of the gas station, but then I had to backtrack, go around from the other side. When I went up the ramp – this is very odd; I don't know who designs these things – I came into contact with a whole pile of windshield washer antifreeze and oil right on the path of the ramp, and – this was the strange part – the door opened towards me.

Here's another strange part, Mr. Speaker. The attendants were looking at me, standing there watching me. They really looked when I got out of my wheelchair to get around their cans and antifreeze and to get around the door that opened towards me. Talk about not being user-friendly. I went in and paid for my gas and I said: "What if I really couldn't get out of my chair? You guys were going to sit there" – you know, I had some choice words for them – "and just watch me?" They didn't have an answer.

So by bringing Bill 201 forward all it does is bring forward common sense that we misplace because we have our legs and we don't really have those barriers and these impediments in our everyday life to simply get around and buy things like gasoline, go to the supermarket. About 20 minutes of a wheelchair was enough for me, Mr. Speaker, to realize how important it is to do something for other people. Growing up, it was always taught in our household by my mom and dad that you always put other people forward. I guess it was our Christian background, you know, kind of designed everything around the Scriptures, around our livelihood, so one of it was to put everybody else ahead of yourself and do good for others, and it will be returned to you.

I didn't really understand what that meant completely until I was elected in 2001. Now I know what it means to put everybody else ahead of yourself, as an elected official, and it's not by choice; it's just how the nature of the job is. I wish everybody in the public would kind of know what it would be like to be an MLA. There's a misconception that you're on top of the food chain when really, the way I see it, you're at the bottom of the food chain because everybody's problem, every other issue, is your primary concern, being elected.

Even our own private members' bills, like whatever I bring forward or the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, if we can't bring that forward in the way we see it from our own eyes, then when we get our paycheque, return it. Return it to the Treasurer if we can't do our job by the way we see it to be done. I know he brought it forward. The hon. member walks – he doesn't use a wheelchair – but he probably knows somebody who goes through these barriers, just like I had a little taste of it filling up my simple little gas tank for 20 minutes of my whatever thousand hours or seconds of life that I have left, hopefully.

So when you encompass all these things and couple that with some feelings with respect to being the human beings that we are, with respect to being an elected official, with respect to taking taxpayers' money, and combining all that together with the net sum of doing the right thing, I would encourage everybody to vote in favour of this bill. Thus, at the end of the day and at nighttime when we go onto our pillow, we should be able to sleep.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you so much for this moment to speak on behalf of it. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just had a couple of comments that I wanted to share. I do want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood for just speaking from the heart.

I would like to compliment the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. I've had the privilege of working with him on a couple of committees, and he is a pretty quiet, well-respected good listener, as was previously indicated, to the point that when I first got an ear for the bill, I wasn't really excited about it. I had a lot of bad visions, and for the people that are here, I want to explain that.

I told the sponsor of the bill that our constituency office in a little tiny town in southern Alberta – although it's the cheapest in terms of rent of any of the ones in Alberta, what you pay for is what you get. This building is a tax recovery building that the village had, and it's two storeys. We let a group of elderly ladies who had a cat store occupy the lower part, and our constituency office is up a set of old rickety stairs on the second level. Well, I could just imagine that somebody, some puffy-chested low bureaucrat, was going to come in once the bill was passed and inform the town and myself that we had to put in an elevator.

This just didn't go along really well because in the time that I've been elected, I've only had three people come to the office that actually couldn't come up the stairs. Without a doubt, the first thing we did was go downstairs because there is a ground entrance. But, unfortunately, this building is probably 87 years old now, and the doorway is the original doorway, and it is not going to let anybody with a wheelchair in, let alone a huge person. So we just go downstairs or we go across the street to the café.

As I was going on to tell the Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan, to make matters worse, there's one bathroom in the constituency office. Guess where it is: under that rickety set of stairs. You have to kind of duck to get in there, and it's hard for anybody that's totally able, but for a guy like myself with one wonky eye, I can even hit the head on the bottom of the steps when I use the washroom. So it was that first reaction.

I think I'd also pointed out to the member at that time that there were a number of community organizations who had things like curling clubs in smaller communities, and a lot of them are truly volunteers in the truest sense of the word, and for somebody to have to come up with an elevator, whether it was $15,000 or $25,000, was going to be a formidable expense to some of our service clubs.

But after I got finished venting and relaying these things to the sponsor of the bill, he assured me that the intent was to get somebody from the handicapped part of the community to be a representative on the council to give input, which is a totally good thing. So it kind of switched my mind. I wanted to just have that on the record so that everyone knew it, because it wasn't that anyone would object to having reasonable access.

I've been on a small hospital board where we had to change the interior of a building we converted, as the very first hospital in the province, from an acute care to a long-term care hospital back in 1989. The Speaker and I were both involved in a later pilot project that saw many of the fruits of that discussion take place. What we even had to do in the hospital was actually take an older building and enlarge each and every room, each and every doorway, make provisions in all the bathrooms for handicapped access. It took time, and that took a lot of money, but we were able to do it without anyone telling us we had to do it. It just made sense. We wanted to work with the contractors and the government at the time, and it came about.

So my congratulations to the MLA for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan. I just wanted to put it on the record, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: No further speakers? Then I would call on the hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan on Bill 201.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the people who participated in the debate this afternoon. The comments have been greatly appreciated.

Mr. Speaker, we've heard many comments about the need to have barrier-free design and access experts have input into safety codes to improve access for persons with disabilities. In my initial comments I spoke about wheelchair access. There can be many hazards – and

I appreciated the comments from many of you – for persons with vision difficulties as well. There are many. One of them, for example, is what are called monumental stairs, which may be very long and zigzag across a plaza. They can appear to be a level walking surface to someone with vision problems. Another problem is hanging stairs or escalators, which can create a head-high obstacle. In that case, double railings need to be used to provide some kind of barrier.

In a book on design that accommodates the needs of persons with visual impairments, the authors emphasize that good architecture and design will empower and integrate all people. They provide three key design concepts. First, logical layout, layouts in which users can anticipate locations or facilities such as stairs located next to elevators or men's and women's restrooms being adjacent to one another to help all users solve way-finding problems.

Second is visibility. Environments in which key features such as handrails, stair nosings, and doors have high visual contrast with their surroundings are safer and more negotiable for all sighted persons, including those with low vision.

Third, good lighting. Good lighting enhances visibility of signs and architectural features and does not cause glare or heavy shadows. Although optimal lighting for individuals varies, in general persons with low vision are thought to need 50 to 100 per cent more light than persons with unimpaired vision.

Something of great interest, Mr. Speaker: persons who are 60 years of age need twice as much light as persons who are 40. I thought that was a significant difference for such a small age difference.

Mr. Friedel: Can we put a few more bulbs in here?

Mr. Lougheed: There's a request from one member present to add a few more bulbs to the Assembly, Mr. Speaker.

Objects that protrude into travel paths can endanger persons who have visual impairments as well, and those examples would be telephones and drinking fountains, which could actually be recessed into the wall instead of being stuck out into the hallway. Elevators, of course, pose many other problems.

I'd like to address one issue that was brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, and that was relating to what the building code applies to. The drafting of this private member's bill received a great deal of support and help from the people in Municipal Affairs, and I'd really like to thank them for their work on this. I'm advised by that department, who's responsible for the Safety Codes Council and ultimately the building code, that section 3.8 of the Alberta building code addresses all the matters of barrier-free design.

The concerns of the hon. member were that houses, our own homes, are subject to the same regulations as for commercial buildings. This section 3.8 addresses those matters of barrier-free designs, and the requirements of section 3.8 apply to all buildings except for houses, relocatable industrial accommodations, high-hazard industrial occupancies, and buildings not intended to be occupied on a daily or full-time basis. There are some other exemptions as well. It's a fairly long list.

The member is to be commended, and I think we should all take note of the possibility of ultimately needing barrier-free access in our own homes. Many groups are encouraging homeowners when they do build a new house to take into account barrier-free design.

Another term that's been used – and our friend Marlin in the gallery explained this to me when we were over at his place: barrier-free design so that he's able to easily get in and out from the street, from his driveway. When people build houses they're encouraged to make them visitable is the term that's used so that when friends come over to visit you that are in a chair, they can get in if it's a more visitable house. Not all parts of the house have to be accessible.

So, Mr. Speaker, I thank the people for their comments, and I would ask for all members' support of Bill 201.

Ms DeLong: Can I speak?

The Deputy Speaker: Is it a point of order, hon. member?

Ms DeLong: No.

The Deputy Speaker: You've already spoken on the bill, and when we have an hon. member close debate, that, in fact, does close the debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 201 read a second time]

Bill 202
Environmental Protection and Enhancement
(Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Masyk: Again, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you very much for this opportunity to engage in my promotion of Bill 202. It seems like some of the bills that I present are tough going. I have experience through that, and I don't mind going around the Horn in the wintertime for the third time. It's never going to be smooth; it's always going to be rough sailing.

Usually at the end of the speaking notes is where you ask for support, but I'm going to ask for support at the beginning of my speaking notes. That way everybody will be attentive to the content of them and park them in their minds so they can refer to them throughout the night and throughout the week.

On that note, Mr. Speaker, for time's sake, I would like to continue on with the notes that were prepared and amended by myself and researched. I'd like to start by bidding you good afternoon and rising to the pleasure today to introduce second reading of Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. Bill 202 was conceived to accomplish two things, not one but two. The first is to reduce emissions of volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, hydrocarbons such as benzene, during the transfer of gasoline fuel. The second is to ensure that Albertans and their environment remain healthy and strong.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to run a little tangent if I may on health. We heard lengthy debate during question period with respect to health, and I'm bringing forward part of the solution.

A step in this direction would be implementing stage 1 vapour recovery systems in all gasoline service stations and storage tanks, fuel cargo trucks, and terminals throughout the province. The requirements of this proposed legislation state that all new service station storage tanks, fuel cargo trucks, and terminals comply with stage 1 vapour recovery control requirements effective January 1, 2005. Mr. Speaker, what difference does it make? If it's going to be new, it might as well be good. Existing facilities would be required to meet stage 1 vapour control requirements effective January 1, 2014. It is also important to note that any new fuel transfer equipment installed at existing facilities would be required to meet stage 1 vapour control requirements effective January 1, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, to understand what Bill 202 is attempting to accomplish, it is necessary to understand what it is we are discussing, otherwise nobody will know. A stage 1 vapour recovery system is used in conjunction with fuel storage tanks, cargo trucks, and terminals and greatly reduces the amount of vapour released during fuel transfer. The system works in a vacuum, not an Electrolux but a vacuum. Vapours from the storage tank at service stations are vented into the cargo truck during fuel transfer. The vented fuel vapours are then recycled into a liquid at the terminal, and if they're vented off into the atmosphere, guess who's paying for them.

Mr. Speaker, without the assistance of stage 1 vapour recovery there are a number of emissions that are released into the environment, some of which are VOCs. These organic compounds evaporate readily into the air and have no colour, smell, or taste. This makes them dangerous, very dangerous to those who may be subjected to them on a regular basis, because individuals would be unaware that they are in contact with these compounds. To us as adults it may be one thing, but what about the child? What about the young people that are going to school?

VOCs can react with other pollutants from low level ozone and promote the formation of photochemical smog. Mr. Speaker, ground level ozone means just that: ground level, low level. Thus it's in the basements; it's in the ventilation systems in schools, maybe this very building. This can make the air harsh to breath as well as lead to headaches, eye irritation, coughs, chest discomfort. The result, of course, is much worse for those who already face respiratory disabilities such as asthma.

Ground level ozone doesn't only affect humans; it affects animals and plants as well. Many elements in the environment are dependent on each other. It is therefore necessary that we do what we can when we can. Leaving environmental issues until the problems stare us in the face can often lead to irreparable damage. It will then be up to future generations to remedy what we could prevent and discourage today. Mr. Speaker, are we a government of the future, or are we a government of today only? We can measure that by how we vote.

Mr. Speaker, fuel vapour not only contributes to low level ozone, but it also emits the hydrocarbon benzene, the most potent carcinogen found in the emission. Breathing high levels of benzene can cause drowsiness, dizziness, rapid heart rate, headaches, tremors, confusion, and unconsciousness. Did you guys all know that?

It is possible for benzene vapour emissions to contaminate our drinking water. The vapour can be absorbed by moisture in the air and contaminate water sources in the soil. And we know the pressures that we're facing on fresh water. We read it in the local rags.

Should an individual be exposed to benzene on a long-term basis of a year or more, this exposure would start to affect the blood. Benzene causes harmful effects on the bone marrow and can cause a decrease in red blood cells, leading to anemia. It also can lead to development of different forms of leukemia and lymphoma.

Mr. Speaker, the health risks that can be involved with fuel vapour emissions are an important reason for us to pass this bill. I believe that it is important that we do not put Albertans in a position where these types of health conditions are a possibility and an almost certainty. However, there may be some members who would argue that this level of vapour emission in Alberta does not constitute a mandatory stage 1 vapour recovery, but it can be the same members who think that its okay to have leukemia. And that's a valid point.

An Hon. Member: Nobody thinks that.

Mr. Masyk: Yeah. I retract it.

It is true that these compounds are emitted from a number of other sources such as forest fires, but last I can recall, I don't think you can legislate one out. We can't regulate all the sources. What we can do is this: regulate for fuel vapour emissions.

As health care providers and Albertan stewards of the environment, I find it important to raise this issue and do whatever possible to ensure that all Albertans have every opportunity to enjoy the cleanest air that we can provide. As well, as stewards of the environment it is important that we ensure that future generations will have an opportunity to enjoy it as we have.

Mr. Speaker, it is estimated that implementing stage 1 vapour recovery may cost – and this is just a guess – $25 million. You weigh that against health and the well-being of our young people as well as our seniors. It is suggested that at those costs it could be absorbed by gasoline companies and the stations. It may reflect into higher costs, but what's one-tenth of 1 per cent? We get it anyway.

If we look at the big picture, these costs serve a larger cause. The time frame for implementing these requirements is 10 years. That's a little under $3 million a year: maybe 2 and a half million a year. As technology moves forward and forges to another dimension, we could probably cut that by one-tenth. What's a dollar today in 10 years' time – with competition and greater technology, we know that it gets cheaper. We know that.

These gas stations replacing their steel tanks – they have an approximate lifespan of 17 years, so either way from today they're changing it, so at least they might as well put an upgraded system in. There's a good chance that a new tank will come with a stage 1 vapour recovery system already. This way, we'll just put icing on the cake and make sure that it happens.

What Bill 202 is asking is that we make a switch mandatory to ensure that this transfer of fuel in Alberta is as safe as possible for Albertans and for the environment and for our children and for our seniors. Some may view these costs as too much for return of emission reduction, but what about the price we pay for health care? What about the price we pay for the education of our young people? What about the price we pay for future Albertans if we don't protect the environment?

Alberta is growing at a rapid rate. People from other provinces and other countries want to share in the Alberta advantage that this government has fostered and created and cultivated. Mr. Speaker, everybody wants to share in the harvest, but we all have to put our best forward to contribute to the sowing. As population rises in our cities, so does the possibility for emissions becoming out of control.

In the Speech from the Throne the government committed to a 20-year plan. This plan is designed to ensure that Albertans remain strong and healthy so that future generations can enjoy the same prosperity that we have the luxury to experience. As stewards of the environment it is up to us to do what we can today to ensure that these opportunities are available to them tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, in closing I would like to reiterate what Bill 202 would accomplish. The purpose of this legislation is to reduce the level of volatile organic compound emissions into Alberta's air resulting in a healthy environment. I would encourage everybody to bring their best foot forward and support this bill as the good stewards they are.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly nice to see the member looking so green here today, and as his speech was progressing, I was wondering if I could now, then, also convince him to support us on Kyoto because it sounds like we're on the same wavelength.

I have to say that it's a surprise to see a bill like this, that's so green in nature, come forward from any member of the Legislature other than the Liberals, but it's a real pleasure to see it come forward from the Member for Edmonton-Norwood, and we certainly support this bill. It's a right step forward. It certainly will help to do many things: improve general health standards for people working in those areas and green up the environment. That's the step that we need to take. I'm a little worried that this member may not have the support of his own caucus on this bill, judging from some of the comments that I've heard, but I certainly hope that that's not true and that when you take a look at it and reflect on it, the cost of good health is never too much to pay. That's one of the primary reasons you should consider supporting this bill, in addition to all of the environmental factors.

So I urge everyone here today to speak in favour of this bill and support it when it comes to the end of second reading.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do rise to the challenge to speak to this bill, and indeed it is a pleasure and an honour to rise in this Assembly and join in this discussion and, I'm going to say, the debate surrounding Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Norwood.

Bill 202 would require all fuel cargo trucks, terminals, and service stations to implement stage 1 vapour recovery systems by the year 2014. It would also require that any new trucks or upgraded gas stations and terminals would have to install the systems after January 1, 2005. It's my understanding that these systems will reduce emissions of volatile organic compounds or VOCs. Stage 1 vapour recovery would capture the VOCs as well as carcinogenic hydrocarbons that are otherwise released into the air. The recovery system returns the vapours back into the truck's tank and then recycles them into liquid at the gasoline terminal.

Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge that VOCs and carcinogens present in the fuel vapour can have considerable impact on the health of our environment and our community. This vapour can produce serious health concerns if significant amounts are released into the air. I also understand the objectives of this bill, and I commend the Member for Edmonton-Norwood for his very good, strong intentions. I recognize that the member's interests inherently lie in protecting our environment and the health concerns of Albertans, and for that I applaud him. However, I do not feel that this legislation is the most appropriate manner in which to proceed in protecting our environment. Therefore, I must raise some concerns regarding the bill.

I do not believe there is anyone in this Assembly that can deny the importance of protecting our environment and certainly the health of Albertans. However, I believe we must make sound decisions that weigh the environmental impact and the economic cost. Choices should be made that best reflect Alberta's interests and will produce valuable environmental benefits. It appears that the environmental advantages are inconsequential when compared to the cost of installing this recovery system.

The implementation of stage 1 vapour recovery control in Alberta would cost approximately $25 million for equipment installation. There may also be additional costs for maintenance, updates, and operation. As a result this initiative may force many smaller gas stations out of business. The approximate cost per station ranges between $10,000 and $30,000 depending on the number of service bays. Therefore, the cost of retrofitting and bringing service stations in line with the proposed regulation may be too high a burden for some small businesses to bear. While some gas stations may be forced out of business, those who carry out the retrofitting requirements may be forced to raise fuel prices to compensate for their costs, which may translate into Albertans seeing higher prices at the pumps, and I, for one, don't want to see that.

Only 0.053 grams of fuel vapour is lost for every litre when fuelling up at a busy service station. This figure is dependent on temperature and is based on a measurement of 27 degrees Celsius. When the temperature decreases, evaporation decreases. As we are all aware, the temperature reaches the high 20s too few days of the year in this province.

I would also like to point out that VOC emissions from gasoline are minimal compared to other emission sources. In fact, these emissions equal less than 0.5 per cent of the VOC emission in the province. Let me repeat: a half of a per cent of the total VOC emissions.

I question that if this is such an important initiative to improve the environment and health of Albertans, then why haven't other jurisdictions enacted province-wide legislation to require the implementation of stage 1 vapour recovery systems? I view this province as a leader, and I acknowledge that we often embark on initiatives before other jurisdictions. However, the fact that other provinces are not even investigating this approach, to my knowledge, as province-wide legislation should raise some red flags.

Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge that certain regions such as the lower Fraser Valley in British Columbia and the southern Ontario corridor have instituted this measure, but action was taken in these areas because of imminent and eminent problems. Regions that have enforced the installation of stage 1 vapour recovery systems have difficulty with air quality and smog pollution. The air pollution was the main thrust behind the Windsor/Quebec corridor implementation. Major metropolitan areas in the United States also have regulations guiding stage 1 vapour recovery systems. However, these are due to smog and, of course, health concerns.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think we can compare New York, Los Angeles, Houston, Washington, and even Atlanta to cities or regions in Alberta. It appears that this measure is used in certain areas to address an air quality problem. Alberta doesn't have a problem, for the most part, with smog. Ironic that I should say that today, when we did have certainly a little bit of smog. The province's air quality index measures air quality 365 days of the year, and over the last year it recorded 354 good days, 11 fair days, zero poor days, and zero very poor days. This index measures air quality from nine different locations in the province.

I'd like to highlight some of the ways VOC and hydrocarbon emissions are currently being reduced, because there are measures that are underway. The province is already experiencing a reduction in emissions because all vehicles since 1998 have been installed with on-board refuelling vapour recovery equipment, which is actually part of stage 2 vapour recovery. Service stations have reduced fuel vapour pressure during the warmer months. This reduction will decrease the evaporation losses of gas vapours. Also, the fuel dispensing rate has been reduced at the pumps to restrict fuel spills and fuel spit back. In Alberta the utilization of bottom loading for gasoline products at terminals has limited VOCs and hydrocarbons during the filling process. The province has experienced a reduction in benzene concentration in gasoline to less than 1 per cent. Alberta's fuel distribution currently accounts for less than 0.1 per cent of the total provincial benzene emissions.

Mr. Speaker, on the surface this legislation makes sense, but a deeper examination unveils that the environmental payoffs don't seem to equal the implementation costs. This province doesn't legislate for the sake of passing laws. It does not believe in the process of implementing more restrictions on citizens and businesses. We pass laws that are grounded in sound principles and those that are in the best interests of all Albertans.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to emphasize once again that Bill 202 is rooted in protecting both the health of our environment and our community, and I applaud the Member for Edmonton-Norwood for proposing measures that attempt to protect Albertans. I support the premise and thrust of this legislation, but I feel that I cannot support this bill because I do not believe that the environmental benefits justify the costs. I encourage all members of the Assembly to carefully consider all arguments when voting on Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Dr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise and just take a few minutes to speak on this bill.

Once again, like the previous member, I applaud the member's intentions. Certainly, all of us wish to enjoy the healthy environment that we have in Alberta today and to continue to protect it and, where necessary and where important, improve the quality of that environment as we move forward. So the member's intentions are certainly – well, he wants to do what's right and what's good, so I congratulate him for that. However, Mr. Speaker, this bill is really not an appropriate way to do that.

The previous member, the Member for St. Albert, has made some very good arguments, in fact made most of the arguments I was going to make. She must have my notes, I think, or some such thing. Anyway, good arguments from the Member for St. Albert. But the point is, Mr. Speaker, that this bill will do little to improve or make any environmental impact. It just won't make much difference.

The issue again: one has to constantly balance economic benefits with environmental benefits. This bill would have very few, if any, environmental benefits because many of the things that this bill requires are already being done; for instance, as the previous member said, the installation of on-board refuelling vapour recovery equipment in all new vehicles. That's been required since 1998, Mr. Speaker, so we've already done that. Limiting the fuel dispensing rate: we've already done that.

Many of us as we stand outside in the winter, you know, when it's 40 below and we're filling with fuel at self-fuelling stations, are saying: why does this thing go so slow? Maybe we need to educate the people and say that one of the things that has happened is that the rate of fuel that you can put into your vehicles has been limited to exactly do what this bill wants: to reduce the number of VOCs that get into the environment. So that's been done. Reducing fuel vapour pressure during the summer period to lower evaporative losses of gasoline vapours. You know, all of these actions have been taken, so we are moving in the right direction. Things are happening, and to try and implement this bill probably isn't appropriate. There is a huge cost involved, as the Member for St. Albert has correctly pointed out. So at the current time, Mr. Speaker, I would ask all members of the House to vote against this bill.

I understand I'm supposed to adjourn debate on this bill at this time, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we've made some very good progress today. It's a good start to the week, and on that basis I would move that we now call it 5:30 and adjourn until 8 this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:04 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, February 23, 2004

8:00 p.m.

Date: 2004/02/23

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Please be seated.

Hon. members, before we proceed with the items of the agenda, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure this evening to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung three special visitors who are in the members' gallery. Mr. Aric Sarson and Ms Lisa McNutt are the parents of Aiden McNutt, a grade 4 student who attends Callingwood elementary school. Their concern for public education is what has brought them here this evening. I would ask them to please rise and have everyone join me in giving them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me tonight to introduce a friend and acquaintance of many in this Assembly from my constituency of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, a councillor from the county of Mountain View and a member of the board of directors of the Association of Municipal Districts and Counties. The Member for Little Bow specifically wants to say: hi, Pat. Would Pat James stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this evening and introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly 13 visitors from in and around the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar. There are 10 Pathfinders and three teachers/group leaders. The teachers/group leaders are Mrs. Jane Shacker, Miss Adrea Simmons, and Miss Sheila Oliver. All these guests of the Assembly are in the public gallery, and I would now ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a constituent of mine who has children at McKernan junior high school and who is here tonight because of her very strong interest in public education. I'd ask her to rise. She's in the gallery. Her name is Preet Sara, and I'd ask you all to give her a warm welcome.

Thank you.

head: Motions Other than Government Motions

Education Funding

501. Mr. Griffiths moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to eliminate the education portion of property taxes and fund education through general revenue thereby freeing up financial resources for municipalities to adequately provide required services.

Mr. Griffiths: Good evening and thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise tonight to introduce Motion 501, which calls for the elimination of the education portion of property taxes.

This motion has two chief intents, Mr. Speaker. The first intent is for the government to eliminate the use of property taxes to fund education and use general revenue as the source for funding education in recognition that all Albertans – all Albertans – share an equal, quality education regardless of where they live or the property tax base in their region. The second intent is to allow municipalities the sole discretion of setting property tax rates and collecting property taxes to service their property owners.

In the year 2003-2004 the education budget was about 25 per cent of the total spending of this government, Mr. Speaker, or over $5 billion. Of that, $3.8 billion is directly spent on kindergarten to grade 12. In 2003-2004 fully 36 per cent, or $1.327 billion, is funded through the education portion of property taxes.

It must be remembered that in 1994 the provincial government took over responsibility for education property taxation. My understanding is that the intent at that time was to eliminate the inequities across the province in property tax bases for funding education, Mr. Speaker. The question is: why should one Alberta student have access to every program imaginable, such as access to a state-of-the-art recording studio in their school, while other students wouldn't even have access necessarily to a qualified math teacher or science teacher because of funding limitations? The rate for the education portion of property tax has declined by 25 per cent since that time, which demonstrates the province's obvious intent to rely on general revenues rather than the education portion of property taxes to ensure full equity for education for Alberta students.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, there is a trend and an intent that's been evident over the last 10 years. This year has been unique. The government will receive $1.165 billion in revenue from the education portion of property taxes. That's a 5.8 per cent increase from last year. Now, that is not designed from a deliberate intent to increase the amount of money collected on the education portion, and it's not the result of a mill rate increase but, rather, an increase in the assessment base, growth in the province. So that amount, that total amount that has gone to pay for education, is the sole result of growth of the province. But the overall rate was frozen at 2002 levels, and that followed a 17 per cent cut in the year 2001. That built on a 10-year trend of lowering or freezing the education portion of property taxes and, generally, in many years the tax mill rate.

How can we afford to lose the $1.3 billion that will be lost if we do not collect the education portion of the property taxes, Mr. Speaker? That's the question that every single member of this Assembly is going to ask. There are a lot of options available. To begin with, we could stop sending conditional and unconditional grants and fuel tax rebates to municipalities. That amounts to $4.26 million which is returned to municipalities. So what we're talking about is $1.3 billion collected in property taxes from property owners based on the education portion of property taxes and $4.26 million returned to municipalities that they could have merely collected in the first place. That also allows for a $700 million growth area for municipalities to collect more property taxes.

Now, I'm not suggesting that that is the answer, the only answer, or the ultimate answer. The point is that there are other ideas. There are other adjustments that could be made in funding priorities, funding formulas for this government. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Municipal Affairs' council on roles, responsibilities, and resources, which was formed almost two years ago, is a good vehicle for discussing such solutions. My understanding is that they have suggested to phase out the collection of education property taxes but over a longer period, a 10-year period. I'm not saying that that's a worse idea or a better idea, but the point is that this council on the roles, responsibilities, and resources for municipalities is discussing options like this.

In fact, the notion of phasing out the collection of the education portion of property taxes over a 10-year period might be a very feasible idea since it would allow the province time to adjust the loss of revenue that would come from the education portion of property taxes, Mr. Speaker, and allow us to figure out ways to use money from general revenue or, while our economy grows and general revenue increases, to actually absorb those losses on the educational property tax side. But it would also allow municipalities tax room so that they can make up the resources necessary to provide services required of them: essential services, services that are necessary to be provided to their property owners.

Municipalities are not in the same form that they were 90 years ago. They're not the same type of government they were 90 years ago, Mr. Speaker. Municipalities have grown; they have matured. They're accountable to their taxpayers, they're accountable to their tax base, and they're very considerate of the decisions they make. The provincial government moving out of the education portion of property taxes and leaving it to the sole discretion of municipalities would allow the municipalities to be fully and unequivocally accountable to that tax base, to those property owners.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, municipalities are mature, and they need room to manage their affairs. We've heard a lot of municipalities sometimes complain, sometimes legitimately, sometimes not so, about the downloading of services that has occurred or that did occur 10 years ago when this government made the transition to becoming a much more responsible, fiscally accountable government. A lot of services were downloaded to the municipalities, and they didn't feel that they had the proper tax base to grow and develop to meet those responsibilities. We also have municipalities that we hear quite frequently now discussing, sometimes very convincingly, that the high-growth nature of this province, the high-growth areas in this province, cities like Fort McMurray, Red Deer, Edmonton, and Calgary, do not have the tax base or the room to grow their tax base.

Mr. Knight: Grande Prairie.

Mr. Griffiths: Grande Prairie. I'm sorry. I apologize. I should never have left out Grande Prairie. It's a very significant contributor to the provincial economy.

Those areas, those bright lights – the highway 2 corridor, Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge – those places sometimes have asserted that they don't have the tax base they need in order to build the infrastructure ahead of the growth in their economies in those jurisdictions. Allowing them extensive, almost one-third more room in the tax base would allow them to sometimes fill the gap, maybe not fully fill the gap but would give them the room to expand their tax base so that they could build that infrastructure ahead of their growing economies to meet the needs of their taxpayers.

Mr. Speaker, our tendency is to move away from dependency on property taxes to fund education. As I said before, we've seen 10 years of a tendency to rely more and more on general revenues to support education, a 25 per cent decline, in fact, in the last 25 years, strictly based on the principle that we believe that every child in this province should have equitable education funding, equitable education resources. The best way to achieve that is not to allow regions to rely on what their particular tax base might be. One city that has a strong industrial tax base has twice the revenue to rely on than a poorer jurisdiction that doesn't have the tax base to rely on. We believe that general revenue should fund education.

So, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to say thank you for the opportunity to speak to this motion, to move this motion, and I look forward to the interesting debate over the next 50 minutes. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise and address the motion that's been proposed by the hon. member. Thank you for bringing this forward and opening up the discussion. I think it's very worth while.

We have an interesting situation here. The member is right: what we are looking at here are two areas. It's around funding of education and its source of revenue, and it's around the municipalities' ability to raise funds to pay for the services for their constituents. Right now we have municipalities collecting a $25 or $27 million levy on property taxes for education purposes, and the rest of the cost of education is coming out of general revenue. The proposal here is to have all the cost of education come out of general revenue. It's certainly worth discussing.

I guess my concern here is that we're still talking about the same amount of money. So although we are requiring much more for education – in fact, the government's own Learning Commission is recommending that – that's not being addressed in this motion. It's just where the money would come from but not how much money would be coming. So, in effect, this motion would make the levy zero for school purposes and allow the municipalities more tax room.

Recommendation 94 of the Learning Commission also dealt with this but didn't go quite as far as what the member is proposing here. Recommendation 94 was to "allow school boards to requisition their local residents for up to 10% of the amount raised through provincial education property taxes." This is taking it much further.

My hon. friend from Edmonton-Gold Bar has just pointed out to me: "Examine and implement new sources for additional funds. Every child should have equitable access to education and an equitable opportunity to learn and succeed." On page 17 of the Learning Commission report it's talking about: "The primary source of funding should continue to be the provincial government, through a combination of general revenues and education property taxes." So the Learning Commission didn't go as far as the hon. member is proposing here. "At the same time, the Commission believes that school boards should have the opportunity to raise an additional, limited amount of funds from their residents," which is recommendation 94, that I referred to earlier. "This provides a direct link between school boards and their electorate and allows people in different communities to provide additional support to meet local needs and priorities."

I think that what I'm interested in here is that the government was not able to achieve what they set out to when they took over the complete collection of education property taxes. It used to be levied through the school boards locally. It was collected through the municipalities and went to the school boards. In '94 this provincial government decided to take it all and they would redistribute it equitably, or that was the plan. In fact, that didn't necessarily happen. I've even heard members in here in reaction to the throne speech and during debate on Bill 1 talking about how disadvantaged their schools were. So, obviously, there's still an inequity, and a great inequity, in the province. So the 1994 solution has not been successful.

One of the things that's been interesting to me is the relationship between the province and the cities, the federal government and the cities around funding and around power and autonomous decision-making. Right now we have a situation where if people do well – they earn more money or they get a raise – the province and the feds without having done a thing get more money because they're taxing on income tax. If someone gets a raise or they take a second job to help pay for things, they're paying income tax on that additional amount of money. The province hasn't done a thing. They haven't requisitioned more money. They haven't asked for more income tax or a higher percentage of income tax. They just sit there. They're collecting the same amount, but the amount the individual is earning has gone up, and therefore more money is going off to the federal and provincial governments. So without raising a finger, those two levels of government get more money.

The municipalities turn out to be the villain in this. They don't get that advantage at all and are stuck in the position with the downloading that the hon. member referred to and in some ways very significant. We've heard a lot about policing costs. Certainly, I've raised a number of times the issue of the cities paying for policing costs that by rights should be paid for by the government: transportation of prisoners, that sort of thing.

So the cities become the villain, the bad guy, because they're the ones that have to overtly raise their mill rate or raise their percentage of property taxes that they collect from individuals, and this is making municipalities rightfully cranky about this situation. They're always made the villain. They're always the last one in line. They're the one that everybody's giving a hard time to.

So we have a situation where those municipalities are not happy. They feel they're being downloaded upon. They don't get the advantage of the instant raise in income tax because somebody makes more, and we now have a situation where the federal government is starting to deal directly with the municipalities. Let's face it; we've got some cities that have a larger population than some provinces, and the cities are increasingly the economic drivers of the activity of any given province. So more and more the cities are becoming very important entities, and how does the province treat them? The province treats them as children. Well, constitutionally the cities fall under the power and control of the provinces, and the provinces are certainly taking advantage of that, particularly here in Alberta. So increasingly those cities, even though they're the economic drivers, even though they're the ones that are making everything happen to a large extent in the provinces, are treated like babies, like children by their very own provinces.

Now we have a situation where the federal government is starting to deal with the municipalities directly. I would venture to say that if the provinces don't start to create a new way, a new relationship with their municipalities, they will make themselves increasingly irrelevant. We will have the federal government; we will have the municipalities. Why bother with the province in between? What does it really do for it? It just takes money.

So just a little warning, a little something to watch for. I think there needs to be the creation of a new relationship between the province and the municipalities before the municipalities just take off and bypass the province entirely and deal straight with the feds. That's the end of it. We don't need a province.

I think this motion that's been proposed, Motion 501, is certainly worth engaging in debate. It's certainly worth further consideration. I think that the municipalities have been asking for a number of ways that they can be able to take up a bit more room in the amount of revenue they're able to raise through their levies without being made the villain once again, and this would allow that to happen.

I think the issues that are not addressed in this motion are the amount of funding that's required for education and whether, in fact, there would be an increase forthcoming if it came through general revenue. I think we have to address the inequity in how the municipalities are able to raise that additional money without being made the villains, and we have to address the relationship between the province and the municipalities. So at this point I'm willing to support further discussion of this motion, and thank you for the opportunity to address it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak to Motion 501, as presented by the hon. Member for Wainwright. As you've heard, this motion calls for the government to fund education spending out of the general revenue fund thereby ceding municipal tax room that's currently taken up by education taxes to a number of municipalities. The provincial government then funds education solely out of the general revenues, and the municipalities presumably have the opportunity to use the tax room to increase funding for priority areas and other services or else to cut taxes to a level that they feel could be used as part of the education funding. This feeds into a growing concern for many of our municipalities and counties throughout the province that they are unable to continue to provide these services because of a restricted ability.

After hearing the hon. Member for Wainwright discuss this motion, I'd like to put forward an amendment to the wording of the motion which would help to clarify the intended purpose. I have with me the appropriate number of copies of the amendment, and I would ask that they be distributed now. Do you want me to proceed, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker: Just wait for a few seconds, please.

You can proceed now.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the motion as amended would strike out the words "to eliminate" and substitute the words "to phase out" as well as strike out "and fund education through general revenue" and substitute "over a 10-year period, gradually supplementing the loss from alternative sources."

Mr. Speaker, Motion 501 urges this government to immediately "eliminate the education portion of property taxes and fund education through general revenue." The amended wording would call for the phasing out of the education portion of property taxes over a 10-year period, resulting in its elimination. Doing the same thing, just taking a little longer. While doing so, we would see a gradual supplement to the loss in funding from alternative sources. It's my opinion that the amendment would serve to clarify the intent and philosophy of the original motion by setting out a reasonable long-term plan to accomplish the same proposed goal. The motion as it stands currently calls for the government to absorb a large loss in education funding in a very short period of time. Phasing out the education portion of property taxes rather than directly eliminating it would help the government and municipalities ease through the transition at a manageable pace.

The Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties has recently asked that the government look at the idea proposed in Motion 501 so that we may have the opportunity to look at both its strengths and weaknesses. The AMD and C supports this motion largely because a number of municipalities and counties have for a long time felt as though they didn't have enough money to supply the services that their citizens demand. Further, when the provincial government takes a large chunk of money out of this property tax for education purposes, it further inhibits the ability of cities, towns, villages, counties, and MDs to supply those services and programs.

This is not a new position for these municipalities, Mr. Speaker. They've argued for quite some time that they do not get enough money, they do not have enough power, and they cannot do everything they want to do. They argue this largely because they feel that they have to take on more responsibilities if they do not receive enough funding from the province to offset the increase in expectations. It remains to be seen whether or not this is reason enough to pass Motion 501. However, the AMD and C certainly makes a strong case.

Mr. Speaker, while I support the motion in principle, I'm of the opinion that it needs to be fine-tuned to take special account of the taxes levied on farmlands, not farmhouses, on farmlands. The proposed amendment definitely adds to the opportunity to accomplish such a goal as it calls for a 10-year transition, allowing government the opportunity to react to transitional woes and ensure that Alberta's education system stays strong, that municipalities receive adequate funding, and that Albertans are taxed fairly.

As I mentioned, one area of concern for many Albertans is the taxes levied on farmlands. Since farmlands are a contributor to the education portion of property tax, they need to be discussed today as well as throughout the phasing out period. Let's make a very clear distinction, Mr. Speaker. My concern is that farm residences are currently being taxed in the same manner as property inside of Alberta's towns, cities, and villages; that is, all farm residences and urban residences are assessed on the same principle of fair market value. In addition, however, the surrounding three acres of a current farm residence are also assessed at fair market value.

Alongside Motion 501 what we need to discuss further as we continue with this policy is that the consideration of the fundamental difference between farmland and residential land is what I am talking about at this moment. We need to consider fairness and especially fairness towards our enterprising farmers and young agriculturists.

Today I'd like to compare our farmers to our oil and gas sector. We know that government offers tax incentives for the development of resources on land from which the oil and gas is pumped. We offer this break as an incentive to the economic development that comes from the money made on these resources and the jobs that are created in this industry. I certainly will not argue against these incentives. The oil and gas industry has meant great things for our province, and it finances much of the rest of the country as well. We always do well to ensure that the industry is profitable for our province and for those who do the work.

We're not just reducing taxes for the oil and gas industry either. We're taking steps to reduce taxes in the name of economic growth. For example, we're eliminating the 1.5 cents per litre, the Alberta aviation fuel tax, for eligible international passenger and cargo flights. The logic behind this is that we're going to make Alberta's major international airports in Calgary and Edmonton preferred destinations for international flights. More flights mean more importing and exporting plus more international tourism. It makes sense, Mr. Speaker, but again it's a case of where a certain sector of the economy benefits from well-placed relief. Again I ask: given the importance of agriculture to Alberta, why do we not provide the same long-term incentive to the agricultural sector?

Agriculture is of great importance to our province, ranking just behind oil and gas in terms of the amount of money that the province and Albertans earn from the industry. This government has always done well to recognize the efforts of our farmers – and make no doubt about it – through the financial support during the tough times that we've heard about for the past number of years, like drought or the current BSE border closure, but these are not rolled continually from one budget into another. Hopefully, they don't have to, but unfortunately Mother Nature predicts otherwise.

We always talk about the fact that the current federal government hamstringing our province's farmers by making them go through the onerous and socialist Canadian Wheat Board, so from time to time we have efforts to rid our farmers of the red tape of the Canadian Wheat Board. Through it all we continue to tax the land on the basis that all the land is a residence and, really, when we tax the total farm without paying mind to the financial and the economic importance of those farms to this province.

In 2003-2004 farms were taxed at a rate of $5.57 for a thousand dollars of assessed value of land. This is the very same rate at which residential property is taxed. Essentially, what I'm arguing here is that there need to be tax incentives to keep our farmers working in that industry like there is in the oil and gas exploration industry.

Some may argue that my suggestion amounts to picking and choosing winners. Well, we're already doing that to the extent that some benefit already in the province from the examples I outlined, Mr. Speaker, just previously. We've achieved industrial growth by providing tax incentives in the way of eliminating machinery and equipment taxes in our manufacturing sector. The logic behind that tax removal is that it reduces the costs of putting up these larger plants and thus gives employers the ability to pay workers more or to grow their industry or simply the tax advantage over another jurisdiction in Canada. In turn, this results in a more qualified or educated workforce in our oil and gas or manufacturing sector. Again, the logic is that the more we pay our employees, the better the employees we'll have in the end.

The same, I would wager, would go for agricultural land. Farms, like other industries, are becoming more and more specialized in that we need to have farmers who have received the necessary training and education as well. Places such as Olds College do an excellent job in imparting this type of training to our agricultural sector, and it's quite well recognized that those young farmers who get a head start on the technology surrounding farming, like they do at Olds, are now more likely to run a far more efficient and successful farm.

As a province we're now just starting to view farms as a place of business not just as a place of tradition.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, I believe the allocated time for you has run out.

Hon. Member for Wainwright, you just wanted to make very brief comments on the amendment?

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Little Bow for bringing forward the amendment. It's a friendly amendment, and I agree with it. The original wording tries to accomplish a lot of things over a short period of time while the amendment allows for greater transitions so the idea can be explored more. I encourage all members to support it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On the amendment as proposed by the hon. Member for Little Bow, the first thing that caught my attention about this amendment was the fine handwriting from the hon. member. Certainly, the education system that the hon. member enjoyed was excellent, because his penmanship is excellent, and in fact I would have to say it's even better than that that is practised by the hon. Member for St. Albert. This is very good indeed.

In regard to the amendment to Motion 501 one can't, I don't think, talk about the Wheat Board, and we talk about municipal finance, and then we talk about public education. That's a wide range of discussion, and it's a wide-ranging debate.

Certainly, municipalities are looking for sources of funding. They have been consistently told to do more with less. I think this motion and this amendment and the debate we're having this evening is excellent because I don't think there's a member of this House that doesn't recognize the extraordinary efforts that have been done by municipalities across this province to provide more and more services for less and less money. One would only have to look, if we were to leave this Assembly and go to the east on the MacDonald freeway, at the rebar poking out from the cement on the bridge, to know that municipalities all have significant funding difficulties.

Now, this amendment, Mr. Speaker, certainly would be in direct contradiction, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre said earlier, to the Learning Commission, and certainly I hope that all hon. members of this Assembly will give the Learning Commission a chance. If we're going to give students a chance to succeed, well, I think we have to give the commission and its many recommendations also that same chance. If we are to support the amendment to Motion 501, how exactly is that an endorsement of the Learning Commission? Certainly, the Learning Commission was interested in allowing school boards to requisition their local residents for up to 10 per cent of the amount raised through the provincial education property taxes.

I'm not going to go into this in detail, Mr. Speaker, but I would urge all members of this Assembly in their spare time to certainly have a look at that recommendation on page 150 and give the report a chance to be implemented and hopefully to be very successful.

In light of other hon. members who have expressed an interest in speaking to this motion, I will cede the floor to another colleague. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister for Children's Services on the amendment.

Ms Evans: On the amendment, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. Fundamentally, I agree with many of my colleagues in the House about the need for municipalities to have adequate access to revenues for providing services. I think that that is of no dispute. Those of us – and there are many in the House this evening – that have actually spent time in government service at the local level have contemplated all of the difficulties of balancing the budget with the growing demands of the constituency.

However, in both the amendment and the main motion it seems to me to be clear that we are addressing property taxation as if it had a more inherent right to be assigned to municipal services than to the services that parents provide for their children through school. If we, in fact, take the amendment or the main motion to its ultimate, we are making an assumption that the parents themselves should not subscribe at the local level to providing any dollars for the service of their children while they are entertaining school.

That's a position I could take as a municipal politician, but as a parent – as a parent – I'm very aware that he who pays the piper calls the tune, and I don't believe as a parent or as a grandparent that I want any government removed from my immediate contact, which frequently you feel if it's funding from a further source. I want to be able to talk to that school board about where those dollars come from and where they go in the education of my child and of my grandchildren. When we remove that right of the parent to direct some funding or assign some funding or contemplate how the funding is spent at the local level, we see education move even further away from the local authority.

If you take this amendment and the main motion to their logical conclusion, you could argue that school boards have absolutely no place in the delivery of education because there's absolutely no authority, then, or any funding that would be provided from the local level that would be subscribed to the local schools. So my view as a former school trustee would be that when we remove the responsibility for local funding of some descriptor or another, be it property taxes, user fees, or something that comes from the parents pocket at the local level, they have far less interest and incentive, far less authority and control, and it's their children that are going to those schools.

I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker; I cannot understand why this would be of agreement to anybody who is currently serving on a school board or who is currently sending a child to school. It seems to me that it will further antagonize that rift that occurs when people don't feel responsible for the dollars that are spent for a service they, themselves, are receiving.

So philosophically I cannot support either the amendment or the main motion, and I'm further concerned by the apparent interest of the members of the hon. opposition in pursuit of this motion. Scary.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not often that I rise to speak on a motion, but it's so well crafted and so carefully put together by the Member for Wainwright that I feel compelled to enter into debate.

Let's just review the education fees for a minute. Fundamental reforms that were put in from '92 to '96: achievement testing, charter schools, corporate pooling, parent advisory councils, consolidation of school boards. Those reforms have served education well, as we see. For example, the number 4 school in Alberta, St. Vincent De Paul, is located in Calgary-Varsity constituency. So what we've seen through education, Mr. Speaker, is a change in our positioning on it.

Now, let's also combine education with a sense of what's going on with this province, with this province that's growing at an unprecedented rate, where all the forecasters and marketplaces put Alberta in the forefront of economic growth. Let's just dream for a second and go back to Diane Francis's comment: Alberta has the chance of being the Switzerland of North America, the Hong Kong of North America. Why don't we eliminate property tax? Why don't we eliminate the education and property tax, and why don't we go one step further: why don't we eliminate income tax? That way we could be the only province in this dominion where you do not have an education tax, you do not have a personal income tax. That's about $6 billion, Mr. Speaker.

I've got to tell you that the stampede of people to come in here, spend their money – whether it be in rural Alberta, urban Alberta, small city Alberta, it doesn't matter. They would even come to Edmonton. That's how enthusiastic they would be. Yes. It's true. I can see opportunity at an absolute rush when you take a look at the fact that there would be no education tax, no provincial portion of education tax, and no personal income tax. So you say: okay; that's a $6 billion hole in the budget. Well, a little fiscal discipline is not always a bad thing.

But, secondly, there has always been talk about the introduction of a consumption tax in this province, ultimately designed to be the most fair component of taxation in the world. You don't want to pay tax? Don't buy anything. Just that simple. So, in fact, Mr. Speaker, you could still be competitive from a tax position, a consumption tax position, with the rest of Canada, and you would be a tax-free haven that would create thousands, hundreds of thousands of jobs, a better education system, an accountable education system, and for that reason I'm more than pleased to support the member's motion.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I just want to make an observation. This is a private member's motion; it's not a government motion. So just take that into consideration as you respond to the amendment that is before you.

The chair recognizes the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's quite evident to me that this is a private member's motion, or we wouldn't be hearing the contradictory and, in some cases, very strange comments from different ministers on this matter.

I did want to raise a question. Unfortunately, we don't have the question and answer portion when we're dealing with a motion. But I did want to ask the hon. Minister of Children's Services whether or not it was the type of tax that she felt distinguished the school board or the fact that the school board levied it – now, you've got a tax on property or you've got income tax, and most citizens pay both; even renters, for example, Mr. Speaker, pay property tax through their rent; it's collected by their landlord and remitted to the municipality – or whether or not it's the fact that the school board has some control currently over the property tax.

I'd remind the hon. minister that the school board no longer has that control given the so-called reforms of this government of several years ago that took away the right to levy property tax from school boards and centralized it in the hands of the provincial government. So school boards no longer have the capacity to set a mill rate, and the municipality no longer collects property tax on behalf of school boards but on behalf of the provincial government. It's that move, Mr. Speaker, of the provincial government into the jurisdiction of local government that I think sets the stage for the motion that we're discussing now. Since the provincial government now collects about half the property tax in Alberta and remits it to school boards according to its own formula, the old advantage, I guess, of local control, local accountability of school boards is gone.

So the question is: what should we apportion the property tax to? Property tax was originally envisaged, at least in my understanding, to provide services to property, and that is the property that municipalities deal with. So police, fire, and so on: those kinds of services that a municipality provides are those ones traditionally associated with a property tax. Notwithstanding the comments that have been made about the Learning Commission and some of the recommendations found in that, the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association has established some important policy with respect to this.

Now, it's clear that municipalities have struggled, not just in Alberta but across the country, to deliver the services that their citizens demand. I would remind members of the Assembly that they have always done that in a very fiscally responsible manner. They have never run deficits. They're not allowed to run deficits, and they've managed to provide a wide range of services in an efficient way, in a way that provincial governments and federal governments, including this provincial government, can only envy. But it is difficult, indeed, to meet the needs of a modern city based on a tax that is just simply intended to provide services to property, more so since half of that tax is taken up to provide for education.

So either the provincial government should clear out of the property tax collection – again, it's not the school boards that are collecting this; it's the provincial government. They should either clear out and give the full room to municipalities and fund education exclusively from income tax and other revenues of the province, or they ought to provide some form of revenue sharing to municipalities that would allow them to meet their needs.

As municipalities have developed and changed, the kinds of services they have to provide have become more expensive and more extensive. They are expected to provide recreational programs that go far beyond just the community rink or the soccer field at the local school. They have to provide mass transit; they have to deal with housing. They have to deal with all sorts of things, Mr. Speaker, that were not intended for the property tax, much less half the property tax as the situation is now.

So the province needs to do something. There's been a commitment by the federal government in part due to pressure from the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, ably led by Jack Layton, who was the president of that organization and is now the leader of the federal New Democrats and has developed a very, very strong municipal policy. Paul Martin, the Prime Minister and leader of the Liberal Party, has responded partly with a stronger position, and the hon. provincial Finance minister has rightly pointed out that the cheque is still in the mail and municipalities have yet to see it. So we will see.

The point is that the federal government at least is making noises about helping municipalities meet their financial obligations and their increased demands for services, and so should this provincial government. This motion, I think, goes a long way towards doing that. It's only one way to do it, but it is consistent with the principles established by the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association. They have said as their guiding principle number one that

Municipal Governments must have the fiscal capacity to fulfill their mandate through:

- primary access to the property tax base; and
- other stable long-term and progressive sources of revenue.

Mr. Speaker, it was with some excitement that I saw this motion and was prepared to support it, only to find that the Member for Little Bow's motion will completely emasculate the original motion. Keep in mind that motions are just recommendations to the government and do not require the government to carry them out. So you can be a little stronger in your motion because if the government has other needs it needs to balance, it doesn't have to follow it. To take away the guts of this motion by taking out the words "to eliminate" and substituting "to phase-out" and by striking out "and fund education through general revenue" and substitute "over a 10 year period, gradually supplementing the loss from alternative sources" is to turn this into a completely wimpy motion that says virtually nothing, that gives the government far more wiggle room than the government even needs in its wildest dreams.

So I'm not going to support the amendment, because I think it is an attempt to just rip the soul out of this motion and make sure that nothing really happens. I'm surprised that the mover of this motion has stood here and supported this amendment because it has the effect, quite frankly, of just completely neutering the motion and leaving it meaningless, Mr. Speaker. I would urge hon. members who do believe that we need to give a better deal to municipalities and who do feel that the way to do that is to get the provincial government out of the property tax business and leave the tax room for municipalities to oppose this amendment and then to support the main motion without the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, it is time that we had a new deal for municipalities. The federal government is making noises of going down this road. Municipalities have fought for this many, many years at both the federal and at the provincial level. It's time for the province of Alberta to get in the game, get with the program, and realize that municipalities provide more value per tax dollar than any other order of government and they need the tools to do the job, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Vandermeer: I just want to say because of the time constraints that we have this evening that I support this amendment, and I also support this Motion 501, and I'd like to call for the question on the amendment.

[Motion on amendment carried]

Mr. Klapstein: Like many of my colleagues I spent a good number of years in local government, both municipal and in education. I think the question is: is property tax a fair tax? I can accept the fact that property tax is probably fair for municipal purposes because generally it relates to services to property.

However, when you look at the education part of it, what is the fairness in the fact that it's the form of the wealth that attracts the tax? If I sell a piece of property and put the money in the bank, it does not get taxed for education, but if I have real estate property, it gets taxed for education. The next step is: it's a deemed value or deemed wealth. If a young couple starts out and pays 25 per cent down on a home, the very next day they're deemed to have a hundred per cent of the value of that house as their wealth, and they're asked to pay accordingly.

The other issue I have with property tax is that it's a tax that you expect people to pay whether or not they have income. If somebody once has some income in their hands and they're asked to give a portion of it in income tax or a consumption tax, that's far more fair than telling someone who's going broke that they have to find some money somewhere to pay for education.

We had classic examples of that in our own experience. The Nisku Business Park was virtually a ghost town in the early '80s. Companies were going broke, but we still said: pay your education tax. Farms, in like manner, were going broke, and we said: pay your education tax whether or not you have money. So I think it's far more fair to take money from people when they have it in their hands when it comes to education.

I guess I can go on and give other examples of how I feel that it's not a fair tax when it comes to the education portion of it. To make the argument that if it has anything to do with school boards – well, that changed in 1994, and since that day the government has collected the money and the government allocates the money. So it's not tied to whether or not there's an education tax on property at all.

So those are my comments on the matter for the moment.

The Acting Speaker: I regret that the allocated time for this portion of the business has now run out.

head: 9:00 Consideration of Her Honour
the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Griffiths moved that an humble address be presented to Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To Her Honour the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank you, Your Honour, for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate February 19: Dr. Oberg]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I count it an honour and a privilege to respond to the Lieutenant Governor's Speech from the Throne, entitled Heading toward Alberta's Second Century: A Proud History, A Promising Future.

As a recently appointed chair of the Alberta Research Council's board of directors, I was pleased to hear our government identify innovation as a key priority in the provincial throne speech. Unleashing innovation will be key to meeting our goals of improving Alberta's competitiveness in world markets and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. This evening I would like to address the innovation challenge before us and tell you how the Alberta Research Council has been responding.

Before I do that, let me share a definition of innovation. Part of the challenge we face in moving this agenda forward is to establish a common understanding.

Innovation encompasses the process of creating economic value from knowledge through the discovery, development, and deployment of ideas to produce new and improved products, processing, and services. There's no doubt that we've made significant progress to strengthen fundamental and discovery research. Our record in generating wealth from this knowledge investment, however, requires focused effort. Just how big is the challenge before us? The federal government is committed to doubling R and D growth expenditures from $21 billion to $49 billion by 2010 to move Canada from 15th to fifth place in terms of world R and D. To get Alberta to the same level, we would have to grow from $1.1 billion to $7 billion by 2010.

Our government through the Alberta Science and Research Authority, or ASRA, has been very proactive in addressing this challenge. They have spelled out a four-pillar strategy: life sciences; energy; ICT, or information and communications technology; and technology commercialization. Our increased investment in research through the Ministry of Innovation and Science has moved these strategies forward, but government investment in R and D is still largely focused on basic research. While very necessary, this is not sufficient to unleash the real value of innovation: jobs and wealth.

Successful innovation economies typically invest three to four times the level of fundamental research in industry-relevant applied research. Canada is about one-third that level and Alberta even less. Every successful innovation economy in the world also has intermediary organizations filling the gap between early-stage R and D and commercialization: doing contract work; assisting small and medium-sized enterprises, sometimes known as SMEs, with their R and D and technology needs; and performing research that supports the public interest.

The Alberta Research Council is just such an organization. Innovation is our business. As the first and largest provincial research organization in Canada ARC offers an unparalleled mechanism for this government to move its innovation agenda forward. For more than 80 years now we have worked to capture the value of investments in research to create wealth in the form of new products, processes, and services that enhance Alberta's competitiveness in world markets and ensure our economic prosperity. ARC continues to be instrumental in moving government innovation priorities forward.

I'd like to provide you with some examples this evening of how ARC activities support our aspirations as a government. The February 17 throne speech states that this government will focus on knowledge-based industries and technologies to expand the province's capacity for innovation. The Alberta Research Council is uniquely positioned to bridge the innovation gap between laboratory and marketplace. ARC creates wealth in the form of new products, processes, and services that enhance Alberta's competitiveness in world markets and ensure our ongoing economic prosperity. ARC acts as a strategic agent of ASRA, performing applied research and development focused on energy, life sciences and sustainable resource development, and technology commercialization.

The corporation supports provincial innovation strategies by assisting small and medium-sized enterprises, known as SMEs, with their R and D and technology needs and carrying out research that supports the public interest. Examples include, one, the development of new varieties of native plant species for use in reclamation and horticultural purposes. This work merited both Emerald and Alberta Chamber of Resources awards. The second example: an integrated manure utilization system, sometimes known as IMUS, being developed and demonstrated with Highland Feeders shows the promise of converting manure into energy. Third, the development with Tolko Industries Ltd. of a new container flooring product using Alberta aspen, currently being tested in Asia. A fourth example: a partnership to commercialize a vaccine to reduce the threat of E coli in cattle and ensure cleaner drinking water. Finally, the fifth example: research on blackleg disease in canola, which has an annual potential value of $180 million to the prairies' agricultural economy, generating $58 for Alberta agriculture producers for each $1 invested by ARC.

Now, adding value to our primary resource industries such as forestry and agriculture is key to Alberta's future competitiveness. This is a critical role for ARC in working with these industries. For instance, ARC's work with the oriented strandboard, known as OSB, industry has resulted in a globally recognized centre for excellence in engineered wood products.

The throne speech also talked about expanding on the work taking place through the Alberta energy innovation strategy to ensure that Alberta continues to lead the way in energy innovation and research. ARC's energy programs have an established track record of developing more efficient energy technologies and production processes to recover higher levels of Alberta's energy resources more efficiently and with reduced environmental impacts. In fact, third-party evaluation of the AACI, the Alberta Energy Research Institute/ARC core industry research program, a combined research program, showed a multiple of 12 to 1 on the government investment values, the direct economic impact of this program at close to $35 million per year, and credits its significant responsibility for creating $2.9 billion in annual economic output.

The energy industry often demands that unproven technologies be demonstrated in the field before they will risk significant capital or the natural resource itself. In addition to ARC's considerable energy R and D capabilities, the organization's focus includes deploying technologies through field demonstration and larger scale pilot projects. An example is the enhanced coal bed methane technology, which has undergone significant field testing in central Alberta over the past several years.

The throne speech suggests creating a life sciences institute to coordinate research taking place across the province in areas such as agriculture, environment, health, and water research. ARC has proposed development of a life sciences technology development centre to position Alberta as a visible and credible location for developing and commercializing life sciences technologies and products. The centre will provide specialized support to life science companies as they evolve from discovery and applied research through to product and process development, scale up, and market entry in an industrially oriented setting.

The Lieutenant Governor in the throne speech talked about the need for continuing focus on research and technology commercialization directed at providing opportunities for Alberta-grown innovative products and services to be developed. It is in this area of technology commercialization that ARC is really poised to make a significant contribution and, in fact, already stands far ahead of the pack in its ability to move the Alberta strategy forward and unleash innovation. Over the past five years ARC has generated a total of $12.1 million in revenues from commercialization, a 14-fold increase since turning its attention squarely on this area.

Much of Alberta Research Council's success is due to the strong networks and partnerships that have been built with industries, universities, and governments to capitalize on each organization's respective strengths and deliver the best results possible on our research investments. For example, ARC's work with universities and colleges supports collaborative research projects, commercialization activities, and university internship and co-op programs. Many of ARC's employees are adjunct professors at local universities, and they also provide scholarships to some of the brightest minds for graduate level work in science and technology. ARC is striving to become the go-to organization for Canadian universities seeking to commercialize their research.

9:10

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Lieutenant Governor in the throne speech committed to establishing a provincial water council this spring to manage water resources for future generations. ARC's integrated resource management program provides a science base, knowledge, and technological support to ensure the ongoing sustainability of Alberta's natural resource industries including water resources and water management strategies. ARC also supports more effective water use strategies through technology development for specific industry sectors. A recent example is the development of an industry-supported water management consortium to help heavy oil and oil sands operators identify and demonstrate more effective water management strategies.

Operating companies are increasingly expected to include water conservation, recycling, reuse, and discharge technology strategies as part of their licence approval process. Working with these companies, the ARC consortium will develop and prove new extraction technologies that reduce fresh water consumption as well as technologies to help capture and recycle process water for reuse in the surface extraction of bitumen from oil sands.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for the opportunity to tell you a little about the exciting changes taking place at the Alberta Research Council and how the organization supports this government's innovation agenda. In the short term that I've been associated with ARC, I have been impressed by the depth and breadth of the company's capacity and by their efforts to propose, enhance, and support provincial strategies. I believe the Alberta Research Council represents a natural competitive advantage for this province. All of us need to nurture and support that capacity to move our innovation agenda forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks for the opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne. At the outset of my comments I'd like to join my colleagues in thanking Her Honour for her dedication to Alberta and to the sovereign she so gracefully serves. It's always a pleasure when she attends us here in the Chamber, and last Tuesday was no different.

As I sat and listened to the speech, Mr. Speaker, I was struck by several things. Her Honour, of course, is a provincial representative for Her Majesty the Queen, and it is rumoured that Her Majesty will be visiting Alberta next year for our centennial celebration. I cannot help but think of the tremendous changes that have taken place since the Queen's great-grandfather, King Edward VII, was on the throne and oversaw the creation of our province.

At that time Alberta was a struggling outpost of a still young and inexperienced nation, a province that was striving to find itself among the tremendous resources it possessed. In less than 20 years Alberta and her people had already participated in the Great War and were slowly ebbing out of the boom of the '20s into the worst economic crisis this nation and this continent, for that matter, has ever seen. In another 20 years of this young province's history we went through yet another war that left our territory untouched but still managed to affect a whole generation of Albertans.

By 1965 Alberta's future would be changed by the discovery of rare and precious resources, transforming our economy and our government in the process. Over the course of the coming decades our province would strive and grapple with its blessings and curses of our abundant natural resources, which, of course, brings us to today, after a decade of dealing with excesses of the late 1980s and now ultimately positioned among all provinces and territories to shape the course of the 21st century for the better.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, when Her Majesty visits next year, she will find a vibrant, optimistic province, embodied by its past and ready for the future. The Queen will also no doubt find a province that's understanding of how quickly time flows and the need to outline a plan and strategy for the future, which brings me to the centrepiece of last Tuesday's throne speech and the outline of the 20-year plan that will help this province build on the many successes of the past 100 years and create even greater success in the century to come.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to focus my comments today on why this plan is so important to the future of Alberta and why it is a plan that moves beyond catchy phrases and generalities to reality and truly affects in a meaningful way Albertans from across this province.

Throughout the West Yellowhead constituency there are many challenges. The West Yellowhead constituency has coped with the loss of jobs due to the restructuring of many key industries like coal and forestry. It has not been easy, Mr. Speaker, as families struggle to main security and economic well-being, but in this atmosphere of difficult times the people of West Yellowhead turn to find new and innovative ways to make their communities better places. This is where the new plan becomes so important, for it is a plan that helps communities, industry, and individuals succeed. Part of that involves "unleashing innovation," the first pillar of the 20-year plan. Unleashing innovation involves adding value to the natural resources of our province. Instead of exporting our raw resources, it is time Albertans start exporting Alberta products.

In the Edson area two outfits, Talisman and Sundance, will be constructing cogeneration plants to help capture what once was a lost resource. Sundance Forest Industries Ltd., more specifically, is building a nine-megawatt cogeneration plant to help control their costs inside their forest product operations.

In the Edson, Hinton, and Grande Cache area it goes without saying that the forest industry is struggling to cope with the softwood lumber dispute. This is a serious situation, Mr. Speaker, and I will continue to encourage the government to resolve this most difficult issue. I cannot overstate the real importance of this matter to my constituents and, in particular, to the people of Edson, Hinton, and Grande Cache.

Yet, despite all this, innovation is still happening. In the Grande Cache area the constituents are trying to turn the closing of a sawmill into an opportunity by developing a new log-sort yard. To these people, Mr. Speaker, the government's commitment to a long-term, value-added plan is more than just words. It is the endorsement and encouragement of the valuable work that they are presently undertaking.

In the gas industry natural gas is located up and down the eastern slopes. The communities of Edson, Hinton, Grande Cache are doing well in this area. The pipeline to Grande Cache is helping this community, and we are seeing more and more exploration taking place.

Now, on coal. Cheviot, the replacement mine for the Cardinal River Coal mine, is looking very positive to come on stream later this year. In Grande Cache the Grande Cache Coal Company has received approval to operate number 7 underground, and they are planning to try and do the same thing with the number 8 surface mine and the prep plant, hoping to open this spring. And, Mr. Speaker, Milner Power of Calgary has purchased the H.R. Milner plant and is going to purchase coal from Luscar Ltd. in their Coal Valley operation to help run their coal-fired plant.

Mr. Speaker, unleashing innovation doesn't necessarily involve physical resources; unleashing innovation also involves unleashing human potential. I must applaud the government and the efforts of the departments of Economic Development, Sustainable Resource Development, Human Resources and Employment, and Municipal Affairs, in particular, for helping the people of Grande Cache to develop a plan to diversify their economy. The departments in a meeting on December 11 committed to help the town of Grande Cache, and while there are no easy answers at present, I'd like to sincerely thank those departments for their assistance and their commitment to the town. We are moving things along, and important progress is being made.

The government has also been crucial in helping Grande Cache and Jasper develop tourism industries. Workshops are being developed, and strategies are being developed to help the towns and areas attract visitors to this wonderfully historic and scenic area. In Jasper, for instance, plans are underway now to capitalize on the upcoming centennial year. Interested parties from around Jasper are co-ordinating their efforts under a single theme and structure – Jasper, Wonderful by Nature – to encourage that Jasper is well positioned to capture and expand their tourism potential.

On a larger scale, Mr. Speaker, communities throughout my constituency are striving to make the fourth pillar of the plan – "making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit" – a reality. The towns of Hinton, Jasper, and Edson have come together in a successful and totally co-operative bid to host the 2006 Alberta Winter Games. This spirit of co-operation is a credit to the remarkable people in the West Yellowhead constituency, and I cannot be more happy that their efforts were successful. I know that the games that will be hosted will be among the best ever.

That spirit of co-operation is also prevalent in other areas as well. Communities from around the West Yellowhead constituency have come together to help form the Grande Alberta Trail. The trail is a 1,200-kilometre circle tour of highway routes through a diverse collection of communities that profile spectacular attractions and adventures and activities.

Mr. Speaker, the other two pillars of the plan – "leading in learning” and “competing in a global marketplace” – are also prevalent in the West Yellowhead constituency. It is through education that this province will be able to adapt and create the new opportunities in industries that will be necessary for the next 100 years, as well as for the way in which our constituents deal with other people from around the world. In many aspects this 20-year plan is about people and helping them direct where the province will go, and it is to them and their interests that we must always be dedicated.

In 1997 during my maiden speech I pledged to take this opportunity to work with the government and to serve the interests of West Yellowhead constituents in a dependable, balanced, and open manner. I hope that I’ve done so in the best tradition of this Assembly. When it comes to the interests of the West Yellowhead constituency and the entire province for that matter, I firmly believe that the 20-year plan and the specifics that will follow in the course of the next several weeks and months is an important vision that will serve the best interests of all constituents of this great province. I look forward to working with the government and the people of West Yellowhead in making this vision a reality. I would like to thank the people of West Yellowhead for their kindness and support, and thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne.

At this time I’d like to adjourn debate.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 4
Blind Persons’ Rights Amendment Act, 2004

[Adjourned debate February 19: Mr. Lougheed]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This bill is one that’s led to a number of calls and meetings at our caucus office and our constituency office. It’s a bill that touches close to the heart of all human beings concerned with those who maybe go through life or face day-to-day life with a disability, in this case a bill that’s focused on the disability of blindness. I know that I myself have two relatives at least and a close friend who are legally blind. One actually was blind from early in childhood, and he grew up with that disability and has coped extremely well. The second became blind in middle age and as a result lost her job. She was a schoolteacher. She’s now on permanent disability insurance and has adapted extremely well with the help of the CNIB and with some other supports including a very supportive family. The third person, my aunt, actually went blind in her late 80s, and what’s particularly sad about that is that it’s really the only thing limiting her even now. She’s 94, I think, and other than her blindness she’s in extremely good health, but because of that disability she’s unable to travel or to do many of the things that she would like to do.

I’m sure all of us have experiences similar to what I’m describing. All of us have friends and relatives who have disabilities with their sight and will be following this bill very closely.

The object of this bill really is to update current legislation, and it does pretty well at that. I think it’s fair to say that we wish it went further and, in fact, brought in other kinds of disabilities so that people who are dependent, in this case, on service dogs to help them cope with their disability but may not be blind – they may be deaf; they may be prone to seizures; they may have other disabilities – have the same rights extended to them and their dogs that blind people benefit from and will have enhanced through this piece of legislation.

What we’re seeing in this legislation is a broadening of the definition of “blind person,” and I think that’s fine. That allows for some flexibility, and frankly in our rapidly changing medical world it’s wise to have legislation that’s adaptable. I also notice that the bill increases the penalties for those people who use a white cane in public and are not blind, which is a reasonable thing to do. It extends certain provisions to dog trainers, to people who train service dogs for blind people, again a reasonable thing to do. Generally, it ups the penalties for discriminatory practices as well as for people who may be faking blindness.

So these are all steps forward in the legislation. It’s a good start on this whole notion. As I say, though, I think it’s our view that, in fact, this bill would be substantially improved if it went further. If a disabled person needs a service dog to cope with day-to-day life but they’re not blind, why should they be penalized? Why shouldn’t they have the same rights as people who are blind? So there is a shortfall in this bill, and I’m not sure if, in fact, perhaps we should consider some amendments to this bill. I don’t know what the reception to those might be from the government caucus, the Tory caucus, or the New Democrat caucus, but certainly from the correspondence we’ve received, we maybe will consider amendments to take this bill and make it better by applying it more broadly.

Mr. Speaker, with those comments I think I will wrap up for now, and if this goes into committee perhaps next week, we might at that point be able to present some amendments. Thank you very much.

[Motion carried; Bill 4 read a second time]

9:30 Bill 1
Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

[Adjourned debate February 18: Dr. Oberg]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I’m pleased to have the opportunity to speak in second reading to Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act, this being the government’s flagship bill, introduced by the Premier.

I’m just profoundly disappointed that this is what the government chose as their flagship bill for this year. I don’t know how they can be proud of such an idea when it entrenches the concept of winners and losers. It entrenches inequity in the province. It’s not the best way to help our kids either now or in the future. It’s certainly not the best way to help our postsecondary students. Obviously, it’s generating some discussion, even out in public, from the government caucus itself based on my reading of the Hansard remarks of I think it was the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

This is a gimmick. You know, there’s an amount of money that’s set aside here, and given the number of demands upon the budget and requests for immediate funding to address gaps or lapses, shortfalls in the current K to 12 budget, it’s unconscionable. “You know, let’s set this money aside today. Let’s not use it for what we need today in the education system. Let’s set it aside for something in the future,” especially when it can’t even address and be fair and be equitable to those Albertans in the future.

I think that for many of us that have constituents who are struggling financially, perhaps even budgeting very close to the line if this is their first child and they’re not earning a lot of money – or perhaps it’s a third or fourth or fifth, and they’re being very careful with their finances. There are a number of constituents who will not have the wherewithal to be able to open the registered education savings plan with the required hundred dollars. So right there we have the government putting in . . . [interjection] Well, that's what the banks are asking for. I had the Minister of Justice telling me that that was the set-up the other day, so if you want to argue, argue with your own colleague.

We will not be able to offer this across the board to Albertans. This is an unfair situation. The government knows that going into it. This is their flagship bill, which is entrenching inequity, which is entrenching that children that are coming from families in strained financial circumstances stay there because they can't get the account open with the required amount of money. So the account doesn't exist, and the government is not going to put in the $500 now and whatever additional funds they were contemplating later on.

If the government was really concerned about education for our children, I think they could be investing that money in smaller class sizes. They could be funding the recommendations of the Learning Commission. We had the Learning Commission come forward with 95 recommendations, whatever it was. The government has said that they're accepting 84 of them, but then they don't have the money to fund them. So how is that accepting them? They're not. If they don't have the money to fund it and if it doesn't come out in the budget in a couple of months, then it was a very empty promise to follow through and accept those recommendations. So if you want to look for where to spend money to uphold education K to 12 now, fund the recommendations of the Learning Commission.

The government could eliminate school fees and use the money to cover the shortfall there if you eliminate those school fees. Every September I get phone calls from parents who are going: "How come I just had to write a cheque for $450 for two kids? How come I just had to write a cheque for $600 for three kids?" This is the level that parents are now paying school fees for everything from photocopying to lockers, and there's still a question about why that isn't a taxable benefit. You know, we pay taxes already for education, and we pay a levy through the education property tax to pay for education, and then parents are walking in the door in September and they're laying out more money. So I think that eventually that's going to get challenged through Revenue Canada.

If we wanted to make sure that we had children that were engaged and interested and motivated to partake in postsecondary education in the future, then start now by lowering tuition fees so that the current crop of students can get through education without such an enormous debt that they can't afford to have those future children, which is a high likelihood, I think.

I mean, if we're really concerned about Alberta's children, then let's be making sure that no Alberta child lives in poverty, if we're really serious about that. But we're not serious. We want a gimmick bill that the government can wave around and say: see how much we care. Well, I don't think the government does care. If they're not willing to follow through on their own Learning Commission recommendations, if they're not willing to ensure that no Alberta child lives in poverty, if the government is not willing to fund education adequately now, if the government is not willing to make university or postsecondary education tuition affordable for students, I don't think there is a commitment to children now. I've heard some very heartwarming stories of grandparents that are sitting members who started registered education savings programs for their children and now for their grandchildren, and that's a commendable idea, but what this government is proposing here just doesn't measure up to the heartfelt generosity of what I've heard in this House. That's not what's intended behind this bill.

You know, we have a situation currently in postsecondary education where for every dollar in tuition I think it was 10 years ago, when this government first came in, there was $10 in government funding into postsecondary education. What did we have in 2002? For every dollar of tuition the government is putting in $2.43.

Let's talk about individual funding of students. We have student loans assuming that middle-income families or lower income families will be financing students. Well, that doesn't necessarily happen. Students choose areas to go into that their parents or family are not supportive of. There are all kinds of reasons why the family is not able to fund the students, and that means that they're out. You know, because they're supposed to be coming from a so-called well-to-do family or middle-income family, if that family is not funding them, the students are not eligible to take advantage of the government-assisted programs. So they're going to the banks for loans, and we have students coming out of university with $20,000 to $40,000 debts on their shoulders. That's an immediate intergenerational transfer of debt, in my opinion, and this government has been very successful in doing it in less than a generation. They downloaded that debt directly onto the shoulders of the students we have in postsecondary educational institutions.

So do I find much commendable in this piece of legislation? No, I don't. Am I willing to support it? No, I'm not. I don't think the government is serious about it either. As I said, if they were serious about supporting children, there were a number of other things they could have done to support children.

Mr. MacDonald: You're not going to wait until you hear the Premier speak?

Ms Blakeman: I've heard the Premier speak on this, and it obviously didn't convince me that they were following through on any of this. If you're serious about following through with assisting any of our students that are in postsecondary educational institutions, NAIT or SAIT or any of the colleges or the Alberta College system or any of the universities, then that's about tuition, that's about availability of student loans. None of that's happening here. This is just a gimmick bill, and it's unfair. It is picking winners and losers, certainly amongst those that have the luck to be born into a family that can afford to open a registered education savings plan. What's fair about that? It's not. What's equitable about treatment of that child? It's not.

So there are just a number of deficiencies that are created by this bill and deficiencies that have not been addressed by this bill. It's very disappointing in the year 2004 that this is the best that the government can come up with. I mean, this government is a master of propaganda. This was the best propaganda bill that you could come up with? Please. You know, I'm sure that you could have done better if you could have tried a little harder. This is pretty poor.

Mr. MacDonald: What other examples of this propaganda?

Ms Blakeman: Well, you're better at that than I am. I'll let you take a go at that.

The idea that everybody is supposed to pay their own way, that all things come down to a user fee that is such a major tenet of this government's philosophy, does not understand that education is an investment. It's an investment in the future. It's why we all pay property tax, and everybody pays educational property tax understanding that that investment in the future is shared by all of us and for a good reason. We're a better society if we have an educated population. But this doesn't follow through on that because some children are able to take advantage of it and some aren't.

I have a little tickle of a worry at the back of my head that this is putting in position that in the future there will be no government funding or no government support for postsecondary education, and families will carry the full freight of the cost of sending their children to any kind of postsecondary institution. Is that the glimmer that we see in this bill? Is that what the government is setting up for us, that you better get started on this one because that's the only way that anyone is going to get any kind of higher education in this province? I sure hope not, and I hope that that's not what I'm going to see 20 years from now.

I'm just profoundly disappointed in this bill, and I'm not willing to support it in any way, shape, or form at this point. I appreciate the opportunity to speak against the bill in second reading. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Do we get a chance to comment or ask questions?

The Acting Speaker: Not on this speaker, but from here on.

Mr. Herard: Okay. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, the table officer is just correcting me that Standing Order 29 does apply here, so, yes, you can ask a question.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Well, it's more an expression of how disappointed I am that my MLA – when I live in Edmonton, she's my MLA – would speak so badly of this bill. It's just a few comments, Mr. Speaker.

She speaks of inequities. I had a constituent call me with similar concerns until we talked about the heritage savings trust fund. When it began to provide scholarships, Rutherford scholarships, there were similar comments made at that time, that it doesn't apply to last year and the year before and every other child in the province. But I think that if we look at it today, it has distributed hundreds of millions of dollars in scholarships, and I don't think everybody is complaining about it today as they did back then.

I think that the hon. member is confusing a couple of things. You know, there are always more and more and more things that you can spend on, and there's very little opportunity in government to invest, although we talk about investment. Invest in education. Invest in health care. Well, this is an investment. Now in terms of . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, brief comments.

Mr. Herard: Okay. One more quick one.

The hon. member is concerned that there may be a fairly significant segment of the population that may not be able to afford to get into this. Let me assure her that there are at least three plans being considered in regulation to assist those of lower income including and not the least of which one that was announced by Prime Minister Martin, who likes what we're doing so much that he is going to actually create one for low-income Canadians, so we're going to wait and see what he has in the budget with respect to his plan before we finalize ours. But rest assured, hon. member, that this is made for the inclusion of the poorest of the poor.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you. Always interesting to see members opposite become engaged in the debate, but I'm particularly interested in how that member responded to his colleague the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, who raised many of the same points that I did in underlining the inequity that is inherent in the bill: how he can't look his own constituents in the eye and agree that this is a fair bill because of the money that's lacking in the schools there and also pointing out that picking winners and losers because it's not dealing with some of the apprenticeship and other . . . [interjection] Well, the member is welcome to look under February 18 of Hansard, pages 44 and 45, if he's wondering exactly what the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster said. But that was certainly one of his concerns: picking winners and losers.

So obviously there's division, at least one dissenting opinion in the government caucus about the importance of Bill 1, and I'll remind you again that the flagship bill of the government has its own backbenchers disagreeing with it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. I rise to speak to this bill myself.

The Acting Speaker: You have been recognized to speak on the bill.

Dr. Taft: Thank you very much. That's what I'd like to do.

This bill is already memorable for the debate it stirred up within the government benches. I find that my reactions to it have shifted the more I've thought about it. The more I've thought about it, the more concerns I've got, and the more people I've spoken to, the more concerns I've got. Somebody I spoke to likened it to George Bush's mission to Mars in the idea that this is an announcement that grabs some headlines, but it's going to take decades before it pays off, and all the costs are going to be placed on future governments. I'm all in favour of long-term planning, but it should be good planning.

I think there are some serious, serious flaws in how this is going to be enacted. Most of those flaws have already been touched on here. One is the question of fairness, or unfairness, in this bill. The questions of fairness arise from several perspectives. One which has been mentioned before by people on all sides of this House is that suddenly choosing babies who were born in 2005 and leaving behind all the kids who were born before that is unfair. It's certainly not the fault of a baby born in 2004 that they happened to come along when they did and because of that won't get the money.

I think there are questions down the road of the fairness. Who's going to be eligible? Who's going to actually be able to undertake the initiative to apply for an RESP and qualify? I do think that we are going to see that the families who are already better educated and already have higher incomes have a much higher uptake of this program than those families who will need it the most. I'd be surprised, for example, if the uptake on this program by aboriginal Albertans is the same as it is for nonaboriginal Albertans. I'd be surprised if the uptake on this program by children born into families without postsecondary education is as high as the uptake of children born into families where there is postsecondary education. We will be, through this program, increasing disparity in this society, and I think that's a problem and it's fundamentally unfair. In fact, it's the exact opposite of what this kind of legislation should do.

This bill also raises questions about implementation, and the Member for Calgary-Egmont, who sponsored the bill, mentioned that regulations are in progress. Well, we don't know what those regulations are. As is typical of this government, we never see the regulations until after the legislation is in place.

But there are a lot of questions to be asked here. What happens to children who are born in 2005 and after, have the plan opened for them, and then tragically die? What will happen to that money? Or what happens to children born in Alberta who qualify, get the money, and then their families move to another province or another country? Or what happens to children whose families qualify for the money and then they decide not to attend postsecondary education? These are all serious, serious questions, and we have no idea how they're going to be answered. So I could feel more comfortable with this bill if there was a bit more detail, but as it is, I'm being asked to vote on something which just has too many unknowns around it.

So with those comments, Mr. Speaker, I will take my seat and watch the debate as it unfolds. I would like to give full credit to all members who stand up and express their views on this, no matter what those views happen to be.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a very brief question. I think that what the hon. member has to do is read up on how RESPs are currently structured in Canada, and you will find that what we are doing is following exactly the federal formulas and all of the safeguards that they've put into RESPs over the years. In fact, the federal government has agreed to administer this whole thing on a single application for both the provincial and federal plans, so the bonus there is that there's going to be very little if any administrative cost to the province. So really, I would suggest, hon. member, that all of the concerns that you raised with respect to what happens when a child moves from here to there are all answered under the current RESP rules that exist today, and I would just ask you to maybe look them up.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, did you want to comment?

Dr. Taft: No. That's fine.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act. Now, traditionally Bill 1 at the beginning of a session is a flagship piece of legislation. This has been quite traditional in our system across Canada, and many governments have made Bill 1 the focus of the image that they want to create, the focus of what they want to do, what is most important to them, how they want to be seen as a government. So going back many years, one example that comes to mind is when the Parti Québécois was first elected in the province of Quebec. Their Bill 1 was the language act because that was the thing that was most important to them, and we've seen many other examples across the country over time.

So Bill 1, I assume, is supposed to be a flagship piece of legislation for this provincial government. That's an interesting way to look at it, I think, Mr. Speaker, because it is a piece of legislation that contains within it such noble principles yet which fails so abysmally to provide any sense of equality or accessibility to education. It's as if this act is ignoring the entire rest of the government's policy with respect to education since the last election or even going back before that.

What we have, Mr. Speaker, is a government that has starved education. It has underfunded it, and it has allowed strife. It has allowed parents' groups, parents to go out and fund-raise for necessities, and it has allowed considerable inequity in the access to education.

Now, as we approach the election, Mr. Speaker, the government is attempting to rectify that, so we have seen the establishment of the Learning Commission. The recommendations of the Learning Commission have been, so far, generally accepted by the government, even including recommendations that indicate that those of us on this side and among parents' groups and educators who strongly claimed that education was being underfunded – in fact, those claims, which were ridiculed by the government and by the Minister of Learning, have been verified by the Learning Commission, and the government pretends that it never happened.

Mr. Speaker, what does the bill do? Well, the bill purports to help parents save for their children's education, and that by itself is probably a good thing. But what are they saving for? Well, they're saving for a postsecondary education that has become very much more expensive than it was just 10 years ago, and a big chunk of that has been because of the steady increase in tuition fees that the government has permitted – indeed, induced – postsecondary institutions to charge their students. Government policy is in favour of higher tuition for postsecondary education.

In fact, we had the Minister of Learning just the other night in here ask me a question in which he referred to a Toronto-Dominion Bank study that showed that tuition fees, if taken as an investment, produced a good return, as if earning 20 per cent on your tuition fees through your total earnings as an individual in the workplace was some kind of justification in a blanket way for policies that exclude many Albertans from the education that their taxes pay for. That way of looking at it, Mr. Speaker, is part of the problem. Quite frankly, if you look at it strictly as an economic investment, you don't see the full richness and value of pursuing a postsecondary education. It's a very, very one-dimensional view of education.

I just want to I guess indicate that having to save for costs that are too high is not necessarily a bad thing, but when those costs are far too high and when the same government that gives you the $500 to start saving is also producing a policy that charges you thousands and thousands of dollars for tuition, you know, you begin to wonder if the left hand knows what the right hand is doing or if the right hand knows what the other right hand is doing. So I don't understand it, quite frankly. I don't understand why we should be given money from our taxes to start saving for tuition fees that go to institutions that our taxes pay for so that they can charge enormous and unfair tuition fees.

Now, that doesn't speak to any of the points, I think, made by the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster in his interesting speech on this bill, and that is the unfairness of only children born in the centennial year and forward being eligible for this benefit. All of our taxes pay for this. We have kids today who are struggling to pay for their education.

I have a 16-year-old son, and he is hopefully going to be going to university. We established when he was born a savings plan for him so that we could afford the education, yet we, like thousands and thousands of other families who want the best for our children in this province, are ineligible to receive this. There are many more families who don't have a savings plan at all, so how will they benefit, Mr. Speaker?

You have to have a certain amount of surplus income to be able to save for your children's education. What about those families that don't? What about the many, many thousands of families in this province whose income is barely sufficient to meet their costs of living from month to month and who find it very difficult to save for postsecondary education, retirement, or any of those things?

So we have a bill that is supposed to be a flagship piece of legislation. Some of us a little more cynical might say that it's supposed to be an election goody bill. But you know what, Mr. Speaker? It's not even good at that because it excludes the majority of the people of this province, all of whom pay taxes towards education, many of whom are having trouble putting their kids through university or college and are ineligible to receive the benefits of this bill. So it's not even a good election goody bill. It's representative, in my view, of the bankruptcy of this government, the lack of vision for this province, the lack of foresight, the lack of an ability to actually come up with something meaningful for the people of this province as they prepare for the next election. It's a government that's exhausted its ideas.

You know, I don't mean to be terribly negative towards the government. It's had over a 30-year run. It had to run out of ideas sometime. It's a credit to this government that it's lasted as long as it has, but clearly, Mr. Speaker, it's a government that's tired, that's unimaginative, that's old, that's arrogant and thinks that this piece of legislation is actually something to be proud of.

Well, it's not. This is not a bill to be proud of. This is not something to go to the people with. This is not a flagship piece of legislation. This is a flawed, unfair, and discriminatory act that doesn't deal with the basic problem that the government itself has created in postsecondary education, and that is the high costs of a university or a college education that is unaffordable for many of the people of this province, I'd daresay almost a majority of the people of this province, who pay the taxes for those institutions. That's wrong, Mr. Speaker. The government should be ashamed of itself, and I'd ask them to withdraw this bill.

I move to adjourn debate on this, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I think we've had plenty of debate this evening, so I move that we adjourn this Assembly until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

[Motion carried; at 10:06 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, February 24, 2004 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/24
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome.

Let us pray. Grant us daily awareness of the precious gift of life which has been given to us. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we dedicate our lives anew to the service of our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Yankowsky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly 30 grades 5 and 6 students and their teacher, Miss Alana Manke, from Overlanders school, which is located in the constituency of Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. Along with the students and teacher are parents and helpers Mrs. Kim Militsala, Mrs. Rose Howitt, and Mrs. Anna Evenson. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I'd like them to rise at this time and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 20 students and two adults, their teacher and a parent, who have accompanied them. They are visiting the Legislature today from Sir George Simpson school in St. Albert. They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of my colleague from Edmonton-Riverview I would like to introduce a class that's here with us from St. Martin Catholic school. There are 19 students from the St. Martin Ukrainian bilingual program, and it's the only one-track Ukrainian bilingual program of its kind in western Canada. They are accompanied today by teacher Mrs. Natalie Harasymiw. I would ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly 23 visitors from McNally composite high school. This delegation comprises 20 students and three teachers/group leaders. They are Mrs. Tammy Tchir, Mr. Ian Crichton, and Ms Sue Noddings. These individuals are all in the public gallery, and as they rise to receive the warm and traditional welcome of the Assembly, I would like to note that also in the delegation is one Mr. Bryn Marsh. I had the opportunity of playing hockey with Mr. Marsh, and he's the individual with the Oilers shirt on. If you'd all please rise and receive the warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a parent. Gerry Russo has a child attending grade 1 at McKernan elementary/junior high. He's present in the members' gallery today because he is concerned about the lack of funding for public education and the quality of public education his child is receiving. I would ask Mr. Russo to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When I introduced the students from Sir George Simpson school, I neglected to name their teacher, Mrs. Carolyn Gabourie, who has for many years brought her students here to the Assembly, and Ms Susan Johnston, the parent who has accompanied them, who is also vitally interested in their children's education. So I wanted to acknowledge them as well.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my distinct pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly this afternoon two parents, Dr. Robert Wilson and Ms Preet Sara, who are members of a group called Education Watch. Dr. Robert Wilson has a child attending grade 2 at McKernan elementary/junior high school, and Ms Preet Sara has two children at the same school. These parents are concerned about the quality of education offered in this province. I'd like them to now rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have a long list of members who've indicated their interest in participating today, so might I ask for brevity in both the questions and the answers.

First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Utilities Consumer Advocate

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Bolger report on electricity deregulation is being treated with contempt by this government. The report clearly states that the government should "establish a consumer ombudsman – providing an independent, government-funded third party responsible for investigating consumer complaints and reporting regularly to Albertans." My first question is to the Minister of Government Services. How can the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate be independent when all its funding comes from the gas companies and the Balancing Pool and not the government, as stated in the Bolger report?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, ombudsman is an incorrect word. The actual term that we're using is "consumer advocate for electricity and natural gas," so let's make that correction right off the bat.

Mr. Speaker, the Bolger report did recommend that a consumer advocate be put in place; that has been done under our department. We presently have set up an office for handling complaints from consumers out there, and we handle complaints, everywhere from billing inaccuracies by companies – and it's being handled by the Department of Government Services under the ombudsman. That's the recommendation that was made, and that's what we're doing.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that a recent standing policy committee meeting confirmed that there's a $4.4 million budget for the utility watchdog, and that is to be paid for by gas companies and the Balancing Pool, how can this minister state that the Utilities Consumer Advocate is independent?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, this is staffed by the Deputy Minister of Government Services responsible for consumer advocacy, and it is for the consumers out there. It is the consumers' dollars that are actually going through the advocate's office to protect the consumers. So, yes, it should be close to government. It should be close to government, and that's what we're doing. We have to make it effective, and the best way to make it effective is to have them report directly to government.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that this government has handed the utilities consumer watchdog over to the industry – it's not even a short leash; it's a choke chain – what authority determined that the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate would be funded by industry? What authority allowed this to happen?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, it's very appropriate – very appropriate – that consumer and corporate affairs actually handles some of the consumer complaints that are out there, and that's exactly what we're doing with this particular office. We are independent. We are part of industry. We get input from industry. We also get input from the department people that we deal with in the Department of Energy. As well, we work with other consumer groups across this province to make sure that consumers are protected under this.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Long-term Care Facilities

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Staffing cuts at the Bethany Care Centre are to blame for a decline in the quality of care seniors are getting. That's according to the government's own Health Facilities Review Committee. The report also says that even more staff cuts are expected. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: is this minister going to stand by while more staff are laid off and the appalling conditions for seniors get worse?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to refer to a report that hon. members might recall, that was produced by Dr. Donna Wilson, a professor of nursing at the University of Alberta, as she released this report last fall. Dr. Wilson published her research that showed that residents of Alberta long-term care facilities have better health than seniors in the community resulting from the care that they receive. Now, overall, we'd have to say that the 14,000 residents in long-term care centres, some 201 facilities throughout the province, are well looked after.

What the hon. member here today in reference to the Bethany Care Centre has failed to mention is that the Health Facilities Review Committee does a number of unannounced visits to facilities throughout the province, and Bethany was one of the facilities that they attended, I believe, in July 2003. Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member refuses or neglects to say is that the committee, the Health Facilities Review Committee, made a number of recommendations to Bethany Care Centre, and in fact Bethany Care has made significant and positive changes over a period of time, over a number of years, but also in response to the report that was filed by the committee in the fall of last year.

Bethany Care has submitted their response to the committee's recommendations. They've reported progress on all of them. They did that in January of 2004. That response by the Bethany Care Centre is currently being reviewed by the Health Facilities Review Committee, but we have had good co-operation by a good facility trying to improve itself.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness: why did the government keep this damning report out of the hands of stakeholders, staff, and family members?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, I think it's important that we focus on what it is that we're trying to do, which is improve the facility, not politicize it.

Mr. Bonner: That was weak.

Ms Blakeman: Very weak.

My next question is to the Minister of Community Development. Why are the people most concerned about enforcement – that is, residents and their families – excluded from the committee that is reviewing the Protection for Persons in Care Act?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, when I appointed a specific committee of individuals to be part of this review, we considered all the other agencies and all the other stakeholders that are involved. If we were to have had representation from every single one of those groups, we would have had a committee of about 60. That clearly wouldn't have been a workable solution for anyone, so we did choose individuals who have great experience and have shown leadership in this field of protective care to join a committee led by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, augmented by two other MLAs: Edmonton-Norwood and the chair of the Seniors Advisory Council, Calgary-West, I believe it is. Together they have come forward with a report with recommendations. We are studying those recommendations as we speak, and I have met with many other individuals and groups, and so, too, has the chair of that committee. So we've got a pretty broad, rounded perspective, and we'll be moving forward with recommendations shortly.

Water Management

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Environment disagrees with local residents that the Red Deer River diversion is an irresponsible use of water, and he is turning a deaf ear to their arguments that he is putting their long-term access to water at risk. Nine local mayors are fighting a diversion, but the Minister of Energy says in this House, "Big deal." My question is to the Minister of Environment. When will your government admit that this is a big deal and acknowledge that the concerns of central Albertans about water scarcity are justified?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, I first need to correct an assumption she made in her editorializing in the preamble. She said that I disagreed with the communities and the nine mayors and so on. I have not said that I disagreed or agreed.

It's very clear that the issue is in front of the Environmental Appeal Board. We have a process to deal with it, and as I said yesterday in this House, I believe we're the only jurisdiction in Canada or the only province in Canada that has an open and transparent process, a semijudicial process, to deal with it. Any decision of any director in my department can be appealed, and that's what's happening here. A director made a decision. It is being appealed in the semijudicial process of the Environmental Appeal Board, where there's complete and public airing of the issues. That is happening as we speak, and 30 days or so from the conclusion of that hearing the Environmental Appeal Board will be making a recommendation to me.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, why didn't this minister delay a decision over the Red Deer River diversion project at least until his Watershed Planning and Advisory Council had made its recommendations? That's what the community wanted.

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have a process in place, and we have legislation we have to operate under. Our director granted a licence. Under the legislation that we have to operate under, anybody, a citizen – she could have if she'd been aware enough to do it – could have made an appeal of this director's decision, and that's what's happened. So we will act according to our legislation, and our legislation clearly outlines the process. It's a very public process, and it's ongoing.

Ms Carlson: This minister knows very well that that decision didn't have to be made when it was. Will the minister admit that his Water for Life strategy won't be worth the paper it's written on if the Red Deer River diversion goes ahead with no regard for the water needs of local communities?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly I won't admit that because it's totally irrelevant to what's happening. As well as having the EAB hearing going on, we have a committee made up of the environmental nongovernmental organizations, the oil producers, the gas producers, and the communities presently meeting, and they are going to give me recommendations by the end of March. One of the issues will be what their position is on oil field utilization of potable water. That is ongoing. The member knows it's ongoing, and as we move forward, we'll be making the appropriate decisions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Health Care Reform

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Tory government today revealed its grand scheme for saving medicare: selling booze to hospitalized patients. That ought to lift spirits a bit as patients recover from serious illness or injuries. The Premier has obviously learned some valuable lessons in his jet-setting travels around the world. First there were limousines and $27 a shot orange juice. Now we are going to turn sections of our hospitals into luxury centres for the well-heeled and profit centres for the private sector marketing these services. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. What studies did the government rely on in advising the Premier that making wine available to patients would aid in their hospital recovery?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I'm very happy to rise in the spirit of debate. I am not an expert on matters as they relate to alcohol since I don't drink, but if I had to listen to this all day, I might think about taking it up.

Mr. Speaker, the core issue here is one of sustainability of our health care system, and the core issue is that our health care expenditures are rising across Canada, not just in Alberta but across Canada, at roughly twice the rate of growth of government revenues, and that's the reason why it's not sustainable. In an effort to look for sustainability, we should be looking at health care systems around the world.

I should say, Mr. Speaker, that there's no person in the world that's probably completely satisfied with their health care system. If you go to the U.K., if you go to France, if you go to Sweden, if you go to Australia, if you go to New Zealand, there will of course be advantages and disadvantages of each and every one of those systems. There are pros and cons to each one of them.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is important for us to be open-minded, to not be ideologues and shut our minds to new ideas that may come from other jurisdictions. We need to strive to find solutions for the core issue of sustainability. I think that there are elements of the U.K. system that are very, very good. There are other parts of it that we would not want to adopt in this province. The same goes for the French system. The same goes for the Swedish health care system. All of them have advantages that we should be able to try and take advantage of, and we should be open-minded to those ideas.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's good to know that the minister is not entirely humourless.

My second question to him: has the government consulted with the medical and nursing professions about patient safety versus revenue-generating trade-offs when it comes to liquor sales in hospital rooms, and if not, why not?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's not so much the issue of health care that I find humorous as the manner in which this hon. member is trying to ask a question.

Again, to be clear to the hon. member, the issue of patient safety is a significant one, and I can give a great deal on the subject of patient safety, Mr. Speaker. In fact, when ministers of health met in this province in the year 2002, I asked the chief executive officer of the U.K. National Patient Safety Agency and his counterpart from Australia, Sir Liam Donaldson, to attend a one-day symposium where ministers of health from across Canada would learn about patient safety. Subsequent to that, the federal government saw fit to put $50 million into a Patient Safety Institute in their federal budget. The Minister of Health, as she then was, the Hon. Anne McLellan, saw fit to locate that Patient Safety Institute here in the city of Edmonton in the province of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, we take the issue of patient safety very, very seriously, and it ought not be politicized and trivialized, as the hon. member has tried to do here today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister has not consulted with the medical profession or the nursing profession, let me ask him the last question here. What makes the government think that turning hospitals into private profit centres where private companies can market services to captive consumers, namely patients, will do anything to make the public health care system more sustainable?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we are looking at all the options to make things sustainable, and again the core issue is that our health care costs are rising faster than our rates of revenue. As Premier Lord from the province of New Brunswick said: if the province of Alberta, one of the wealthiest provinces in all of Canada, is having difficulty with the issue of sustainability, imagine how difficult it is for the rest of us.

So, Mr. Speaker, there are some that think that this issue of sustainability of the health care system – I've heard the hon. member himself say this – is a cover for something else, that somehow we created this issue. All I can say again in response to that is that if we created an issue here with the government of Alberta with respect to health sustainability, then apparently we persuaded every single Premier of every other province of every other political stripe across Canada that health sustainability is an issue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

School Construction

Mr. Renner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Medicine Hat public school district No. 76 is currently reviewing its programs and facilities with a view to consolidating a number of existing school facilities and building new schools in communities that currently lack adequate schools. One of the criteria often quoted by the school board is the Alberta Infrastructure requirement of a system-wide 85 per cent occupancy factor before any new construction can be considered. It sounds reasonable until you ask: 85 per cent of what? My questions today are to the Minister of Infrastructure. Given that occupancy is based upon some kind of arbitrary formula that calculates the number of students per square metre, why does the formula not acknowledge the obvious differences between schools with respect to wide hallways or other common areas that restrict the amount of usable space within that facility?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the hon. member for that very good question. It's a problem that we identified some time back, and we have set up a committee that is about ready to report. It's a committee that involved 12 individuals. There were some staff from the Department of Infrastructure, but more importantly a number of school boards were represented on the committee and an individual from outside in the private sector.

Now, the problem that the member identified is one where in a lot of the older schools, because of the way they were constructed, the area turns out to be larger than what can actually be used for instructional space. So we're trying to get at that particular problem. I believe that the committee is looking at the possibility of a way where school boards could identify those facilities and have us take a second look at them in order that we could modify what we believe is the capacity of that particular school.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, apart from architectural differences, there are differences in use of facilities. For example, can the minister explain why the formula calculates that 4,000 students are required to occupy the Medicine Hat high school when much of that school was built to accommodate vocational and trade programs that require large labs and shops in addition to classroom facilities?

Mr. Lund: Certainly, the hon. member has identified another area where the current formula creates a problem. I can give him another example where it creates a problem. This is where we build what we call a core school. The idea of a core school is that you put the infrastructure in so that you can then add portables. When the portables are not there, you cannot get the utilization up to what we think is a required amount of 85 per cent to get good utilization of taxpayers' dollars. So that's another area that we need to look at and have the ability to not be rigid when we're applying that formula.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are just over 6,300 students in the entire district of Medicine Hat public. If they put 4,000 students into one school, it's two-thirds of the students in one school. Can the minister explain how these arbitrary and rigid guidelines can be met without significantly jeopardizing the quality of education in my constituency?

Mr. Lund: As I explained, Mr. Speaker, the committee is going to forward their report to me, hopefully, later this week. We will then be taking it through the process, and I can assure the hon. member that there will be modifications to what is currently there and the application of it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Government Services: given that ATCO Gas has stated recently to the EUB that they will be required to participate in the funding of Alberta's first Utilities Consumer Advocate, how much is ATCO Gas to pay for the yearly operations budget of the Utilities Consumer Advocate? Tell us how much.

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's one member of a very large industry that benefits from the consumer advocate and the job that it has to do not only for Albertans but also for the industry but, more importantly, for consumers across this province. It's absolutely impossible to go and look at one particular company's participation in that because it's run through a Power Pool. So it's impossible to answer that question at this time.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. If you want to talk about the Power Pool, we'll talk about the Balancing Pool, which is sort of a part of the Power Pool. How much is the Balancing Pool paying in operations costs to fund the Utilities Consumer Advocate?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, this hon. member is asking for specific questions that might be well served by a written question in this House. That kind of detail can be debated at that particular time.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: what authority determined that ATCO Gas would have to pay for the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate? What authority allowed the industry to be funding this, not the government?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, I reiterate my last answer, which is the same question that he gave in his first supplemental. That should be done in the form of a written question before this House so that we can debate the specifics of it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Foothills Medical Centre

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Several months ago the Calgary health region contracted an independent air quality expert to develop a plan that would address concerns about mould on hemodialysis unit 27 at the Foothills medical centre. Now the Calgary health region has announced its plans to redevelop the unit. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why has the region chosen to redevelop this particular unit?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, unit 27 at the Foothills hospital was first opened in 1976. When it was originally opened, it was intended to accommodate 23 hemodialysis units. It presently holds 42 such units. So the result is that this particular unit 27 is being overutilized, and the design is inappropriate by today's standards.

So the Calgary health region had made the decision to redevelop unit 27 into a state-of-the-art hemodialysis unit, and they've moved some of their hemodialysis units into the community where people can have better access to them. Of course, Mr. Speaker, demands on our health care system have changed dramatically since 1976, and I should note that this redevelopment will be a much better work environment for staff and will provide much greater comfort for patients seeking that service.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is also to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Nurses who have worked on unit 27 continue to complain about adverse health effects which they claim have been caused by poor air quality resulting from the presence of mould. Has the Calgary health region done anything to address these concerns?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, the executive medical director of the Calgary health region, who specializes in occupational health, has said that staff complaints are multifactorial and may include a number of different issues such as work environment, work practices, use of chemicals, functional space, and engineering design. The region continues to work in good faith with its employees and workplace health and safety to address these concerns in unit 27.

Again, Mr. Speaker, they're confident that the redevelopment of this unit will address many of these concerns. It's important to say that there are a number of units at the Foothills medical centre that have been redeveloped. To this point in time unit 27 is one such unit, and there are, I believe, five other units that will be redeveloped over time because, again, this facility is almost 40 years old.

Government Aircraft

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, the government's flight log for April 4, 2002, showed a heightened level of travel between Edmonton City Centre Airport and the Calgary International Airport. There were several municipal leaders, family members of MLAs, and other persons on board these government aircraft that day. Coincidentally, April 4, 2002, was also the Premier's dinner day in Calgary. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: did the government transport municipal leaders to the Premier's dinner, a partisan political event, on the taxpayer's dime?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, what makes this province of Alberta great is Alberta municipal leaders. We work very closely with them. To the hon. member: quite simply, we will use government hangars and government airplanes to in fact assist municipal leaders. In fact, just last weekend I visited Cold Lake and I also visited St. Paul. In that plane if there was any opportunity to allow municipal leaders – because there is only one taxpayer – to in fact enjoy that convenience of travelling with the government members, then absolutely, yes, to the question.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister and my final question, Mr. Speaker: did any of the passengers reimburse the government for the cost of their trip on the government plane to attend the Premier's dinner?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me be categorical. At no time will a government plane ever be used for political purposes, now, ever before, or ever into the future. Second of all, if it is for political purposes, they are charters, independent, with no cents to, in fact, the government or to the people of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Cull Cattle

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With the continued closure of Canadian borders to the export of cattle more than 30 months of age, Alberta producers are on the horns of a dilemma. Even if they could find a buyer for these older animals, they wouldn't get nearly as much for them because there aren't any markets that can take them. This has prompted some within the cattle industry to call for a mass slaughter of all the older or cull cattle. My questions are for the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Is there a need for a mass slaughter of cull cattle?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, let me make it perfectly clear, entirely clear, that I would never support a mass slaughter of cull cattle. First of all, cull is a word that the industry uses, and it means very simply in this case an animal that is no longer important to that breeding herd. It does not signify in any way a reduced value for the meat product in that animal.

I had the opportunity and was invited to address a conference on Friday held in Red Deer which had the Western Stock Growers', the Alberta Auction Market and agent buyers, the Alberta feeder council, and the Feeder Associations of Alberta in attendance. It was a full house, Mr. Speaker, and those four very responsible organizations debated this and other issues very carefully.

My message to them was simply this: the government would not support a mass slaughter, and neither would the industry. These people are too smart to do something like that. They don't need to do that. What this government has done since last summer is work with the industry to find a new home for this product, new capacity, because in fact, Mr. Speaker, prior to May 20 60 to 70 per cent of this product went directly to the United States for processing, whether it was in the dairy herds or the beef herds. So in Alberta we put up money to work with product development. We put the Leduc processing centre available to them, and in fact our industry is looking at this as a new opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, if there is to be a reduction in mature animals, it will be done by the industry in a responsible, orderly fashion.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could you tell me, then, what is currently being done to increase the use of mature animals in Alberta and in Canada and to help producers deal with the lower than usual price they are currently getting for their animals?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, we work with the beef industry round-table very closely on these issues, and as I indicated, we have put some dollars available to product development as well as our processing centre, which has a long history of success in development of product. So we're looking at how we can increase our consumption domestically.

We look at the challenges of using that product instead of using offshore product, and in fact the hon. member might recall that the federal government announced the suspension of all supplementary permits for offshore beef, and that was a very responsible decision made to ensure that we could use more of our own product. So we look at using this mature product in processed products here.

As for us helping producers with recouping the money that they would normally have gotten for that animal, I think we've responded in a very responsible fashion by putting the market cattle program and bull program in place and, finally, working with our other provinces, convincing the federal government to remove the slaughter component from there.

So today, Mr. Speaker, although these cattle are selling somewhere from 22 cents to 30 cents at the top in the marketplace, they will be paid a differential of that price and the normal prices of 50 cents, 55 cents, and they will also receive some feed support and market support from the federal government. So, indeed, the cow-calf producer is recouping not as much but a fair value for those animals, and that's eased the situation a great deal.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since 2001 students at Red Deer College have faced over a 24 per cent increase in tuition. Along with the increase students this year will have fewer program choices, and some two-year programs will be reduced to one-year diplomas. My questions are to the Minister of Learning. Why? Why do our postsecondary schools like Red Deer have to face this constant round of tuition increases and program cuts?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will not necessarily speak generically about Red Deer, but what I will do is speak about the system in general. The system in general has seen a considerable amount of money put into it. In the last two or three years it's had upwards of a 20 per cent increase in the amount of dollars that have been funded. Red Deer College, for example, just received a new capital component. They're also looking at developing some of their land on the actual campus, where they're going to be building a senior citizens' home. Red Deer College is doing very well in what they're doing and, in fact, have increased quite substantially the number of students that are attending Red Deer College.

Just when it comes to tuition, though, there's one point that I want to make, and that point was brought out by the TD Bank a couple of weeks ago. In essence, what it said is that a college diploma, which the hon. member is talking about, is worth about a 15 to 28 per cent a year after-tax, after-inflation increase on your dollars. So that's a wonderful way to spend your dollars, and I would certainly encourage people to go to Red Deer College. I would encourage them to go to the postsecondary system in general, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Massey: No wonder we're in trouble.

How can the minister possibly claim success when schools like Red Deer College, the U of A, and the U of C are in a state of constant financial turmoil?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, financial turmoil? The U of A has increased dramatically the number of students who've gone to it. The University of Alberta received last year between an 8 and 9 per cent increase in their budget, as did the University of Calgary, as did the postsecondary system in general. Those are huge increases when you take a look at what is happening across Canada. UBC, for example, has received zero per cent for the next three years. Try and run a university on zero per cent. Take a look across Canada and see how much money is being put into the postsecondary system and you will clearly see that we are head and shoulders above anyplace in Canada.

Dr. Massey: Again to the same minister: why has the government failed to replace a policy that leaves postsecondary schools in chronic crisis with a long-term funding plan that provides adequate resources? Why not a long-term plan?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, we are the only jurisdiction in Canada that right now has a three-year business plan, and a three-year business plan is something that we intend to keep. These people are assured of at least what is in the three-year business plan every year. British Columbia just received their three-year increases, and as I just mentioned, it was zero per cent over three years.

An Hon. Member: How much?

Dr. Oberg: Zero per cent over three years.

So, Mr. Speaker, I will reiterate the answer to my last question. The postsecondary system is alive and well and is one of the top postsecondary systems in the world.

Government Fleet Insurance

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, members of Executive Council, senior staff in the Premier's office, and thousands of other people driving government vehicles have their cars or SUVs insured by public insurance. This Tory government, which has categorically ruled out a public auto plan for the rest of us, uses a government owned, not-for-profit risk management and insurance fund to insure its own vehicle fleet. My question is to the Minister of Revenue. Why is public auto insurance good for the government's own vehicle fleet but bad for the rest of us?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to first clarify some inaccuracies in that preamble. We don't have a different way of insuring ourselves in the government than any other individual or company in Alberta. We do have a risk management insurance division, and we use a form of both private and self-insurance, and that's just like every individual, like every company. You have choices when you select your company and you buy insurance. You do select the amount of property damage you need for collision, and you select also how much liability you cover, the same choices that we make ourselves. So when we buy private insurance, which we do, for all of the risks of the province, property and liability, we assess how much it is that we should buy of third-party insurance and how much we should have in our own deductibles or self-insurance.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister knows that 90 per cent of government insurance is public insurance.

Why does the Premier get to be chauffeured around in a car insured through a public auto plan, but the rest of us are forced to pay the much higher premiums charged by the auto insurance industry?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, the response should not be in response to the debatable kind of nature of the question.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for clarifying that the question was not, probably, an adequate question to respond to. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: why doesn't the government ensure that Alberta families get the same sort of deal on their car insurance that the provincial government provides for itself through its system of publicly insuring its own vehicles?

Mr. Melchin: We take the same approach for insuring all of the assets, both property and liability, that every individual in this province takes. We use a combination of private insurance to ensure that costs beyond our exposure that we wouldn't want to take in risks are insured. Beyond that we self-insure. You for your own car are going to choose how much property and how much liability, and you're not going to take everything. You're going to choose that you will self-insure part of that risk yourself, just as the government.

Speaker's Ruling

Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, Beauchesne 428 says that a question must not "be ironical, rhetorical, offensive, or contain epithet, innuendo, satire, or ridicule."

The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Government Economic Policies

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's economy has been performing well despite many challenges like the trade disputes with the U.S. As government we're always promoting value-adding to our agriculture sector, expansion of our exciting nanotechnology opportunities, and a junior mining industry, just to name a few. My question is to the Minister of Economic Development. I understand that you're the lead minister dealing with value-added opportunities and so on. I've heard directly from junior mining companies that they can raise venture capital easier in every province in Canada than in Alberta. Why is this happening? Do we need to change some of the rules within government?

Mr. Norris: Well, of course, Mr. Speaker, that question could probably go to the government as a whole as a policy issue, but I will attempt to answer it from our perspective at Economic Development.

Mr. Speaker, we spend an awful lot of time talking about the spending ministries in this House, and we should, but without the revenue-generating ministries we wouldn't have the opportunity to have that discussion. So we as the Minister of Economic Development and the Minister of Revenue and others are vitally concerned to continue to find ways to increase revenue and industry in the province.

The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne has brought up an excellent point. Alberta does not operate in a vacuum, Mr. Speaker. It would be nice if we did because we have the best policies in the world. However, there are jurisdictions to the west and east of us who have different views on that. Alberta has chosen to have a low, broad-based income tax policy and does not get into tax credit as much as other jurisdictions. Having said that though, the Minister of Revenue, myself, and the Minister of Innovation and Science have all looked at this question very seriously because access to capital really does choke off economic development, and it's fundamental to the growth of this province. We have some of the best patents being developed at the University of Alberta, University of Calgary, NAIT, and SAIT, and then the access to capital dries up. They go off to Waltham, Massachusetts, or San Jose, California, to be developed, and we want to stop that.

So to answer the member's question, there have been a number of initiatives brought forward. The Minister of Revenue and myself and the Minister of Innovation and Science will be bringing forward documentation to look at how we can get more active in the venture capital game. I can't think of anything more important than that for the next 20 years in Alberta, because we are developing some of the best ideas in the world here, Mr. Speaker, and they're leaving to be developed, and that's just wrong.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you. Mr. Speaker, because we're talking about revenue, I'll ask my next question to the Revenue minister. Given that venture capital is so hard to raise in Alberta and given that our agriculture is so challenged at this time, why not take 2 or 3 per cent of our rainy-day fund, you know, the trust fund, and invest it, not grant it, with our Ag Financial Services to stimulate agriculture?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to clarify, to begin with, that the Alberta heritage savings trust fund is a tremendous vehicle but is not a rainy-day fund. We actually went through a survey a little over a year ago to make sure that we were clear about the reasons why we're saving. Albertans continuously do give us the feedback that they want this fund kept for the future, not taken for even whatever the problems potentially may be of any one particular moment.

Clearly, there are challenges in the agriculture community today, but I would say here's how it is benefiting the agriculture community today. This fund earns more than 2 and 3 per cent of its fund value this year – we'll be able to respond to those answers tomorrow as we release the third quarter – and that money goes back into the general revenues of the government. Those monies have been there to ensure that the problems with BSE have been resolved, that there have been funds to provide for the emergencies of the province. It's done very well in serving Albertans over its life.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that we can't access that fund, why not use flow-through shares like every other province is using in Canada to access funds?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to flow-through shares, clearly there are some vehicles with flow-through shares in the energy sector. But we have said that it still is a priority, as we look forward to improving the economic climate of this government, to reduce the corporate income tax rate. That still is our priority. We reduced it to 12 and a half per cent this year. In our forecast we showed that this next year it will be reduced again, and that'll be in our budget documents. That continues to be our priority. It's the best thing we could do to strengthen the economic activity of Alberta.

Speaker's Ruling

Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, Beauchesne 409(1) says: "It must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate."

Roadside Emissions Testing

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, this government talks about reducing greenhouse gas emissions, but they won't take any action. We need mandatory emissions testing on old cars like they do in Ontario and B.C. The average car in Alberta is twice as old as those in Ontario. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. When will this ministry demonstrate its commitment to reducing greenhouse gas emissions in Alberta and implement a program of roadside emissions testing?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, once again I must clarify a false assumption in her initial statement. She said we are not taking any action. We have taken more action than any jurisdiction in this country. We, for instance, have made a purchase of green power so that 90 per cent of the power that this government uses will be green power by 2005. It's the largest purchase of green power in the history of North America. [Dr. Taylor coughed] It chokes me up. I'm so moved by my own words.

Mr. Speaker, I can go through other examples. I will say that we will be releasing our climate change action plan and the actions that we have accomplished within the next couple of weeks. So I won't go into further details. They will be forthcoming.

Ms Carlson: It's hard for the minister to spit those stories out.

Here's my second question. Given that the Alberta Motor Association supports a program of roadside emissions testing with mandatory penalties, why won't this ministry implement a measure that actually has teeth?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, Climate Change Central is an agency at arm's length from government. It is funded some by government but mostly by the private sector, federal government – a number of agencies contribute to the funding. I must say that it's a very good organization, that it has its own board of directors that makes the decisions for Climate Change Central. Climate Change Central recently did a study on cars and roadside emissions testing, and as a result of their study they concluded that roadside emissions testing was not an effective way to control greenhouse gases. What I will do, because obviously the member has not read that study – I will be sure that Climate Change Central sends her a copy.

Ms Carlson: Then, Mr. Speaker, could the minister address why Ontario and B.C. have stated that roadside testing has proven to be very effective in reducing both the environmental hazard of greenhouse gas emissions and the health hazard of smog?

Dr. Taylor: Well, in the first place, Mr. Speaker, when she talks about smog, we have different situations in regard to smog in Alberta. We're not at risk of smog, as Toronto is or Vancouver is.

I can't tell you how Ontario and B.C. made their decisions. Obviously, they didn't do a study. Obviously, they didn't look at the best economic indicators and decide that they should do what's best for the environment and do what's best in terms of spending the dollars in the most effective way.

The Speaker: Hon. members, momentarily I'll introduce the first of a number of members to participate in Members' Statements, but might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford and then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of our colleague from Edmonton-Norwood – I don't know if they're in the galleries at this time, but if they are, may we recognize the presence of the Glenrose Start program and 10 visitors with the group leaders Laura Maddison, Millie Morgan, and Katy Costello. If these visitors are in the galleries now, we would ask them to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly six seniors who are visiting the Legislature today. They're here in support of the tabling of a document from a seniors' newsletter which outlines seniors' concerns. With us today are Bill and Val Osborne, Joan Abramason, Vivian Small, Ed Friesen, and Bob Long. They are seated in the public gallery. With your permission I would ask them to now stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

Snowmobile Rally for Breast Cancer Research

Mr. Broda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. WOW stands for Way Out

Women. Anna Choquet of Bonnyville, Jackie Pederson of Edmonton, and Gisele Hebert of High Prairie are just such women. They represent Team Alberta in this year's 2004 Polaris snowmobile relay. They picked up their keys and Polaris snow machines in Grande Prairie from Team British Columbia and snowmobiled approximately 1,000 kilometres to Cold Lake where they turned over their keys to Team Saskatchewan.

The purpose of the ride is to raise money for breast cancer research and to profile women in snowmobile sports. On January 6 I was fortunate to be able to join these fantastic women and ride with them from Waskatenau to Desjarlais Crossing, about 120 kilometres of groomed trails along Iron Horse Trail, Jack pines, and the banks of the North Saskatchewan River. The team then continued on to Two Hills and on to Cold Lake.

I would like to thank the village of Waskatenau, the town of Smoky Lake, and the county for their hospitality and generosity. However, this would not have happened if not for the efforts of the Smoky Lake Trail Twisters snowmobile club members Dan Kotylak, Darrell Ketsa, Delmar Huchulak, Dwayne and James Gorenjuk, and Smoky Lake town councillor Vern Billey and other riders.

Last year Team Alberta raised $24,000 for breast cancer research, and Team Alberta would like to surpass that amount. I offer all members of this Assembly a challenge to open up their wallets and donate to this worthwhile cause. Breast cancer not only affects women but men as well. I will be passing an envelope around.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan.

Alberta Winter Games

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to take this moment to recognize a tremendous accomplishment for Alberta and, more specifically, the Peace region. In 2002, the North Peace Games Society won the bid to host the 2004 Alberta Winter Games. The dream of hosting the most regional games ever was realized as 19 regional partners, including four aboriginal communities, came together and hosted this year's provincial Winter Games on February 12 to 15. Never before has a regional partnership of this magnitude hosted a provincial game. I am certain that the overwhelming success of this year's games will open opportunities for other small communities in Alberta to join together and take on projects usually reserved for larger centres.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to acknowledge the pioneering spirit and ingenuity of the North Peace Games Society. The accomplishment of these provincial games has once again proven that all of Alberta plays an instrumental role in maintaining and promoting the Alberta advantage.

As my colleague the MLA for Peace River indicated last week, I would also like to acknowledge the hard work and dedication of the 2,526 volunteers, 1,620 athletes, 432 coaches and chaperones, and 211 officials, without whom there could have been no games. They made the weekend exciting and very enjoyable for all those that had the opportunity to attend.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the communities of the Dunvegan and Peace River constituencies, who opened their doors to the rest of the province. The 19 communities involved came together as one and made this year's Winter Games an overwhelming success.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Grande Cache

Mr. Strang: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize and salute the citizens of Grande Cache. On February 20 I had the pleasure along with well over 60 people of attending the northern opportunities seminar hosted by the Northern Alberta Development Council. They had guest speakers from the oil and gas industry, value-added forestry opportunities, coal industry, West Yellowhead Community Futures Development Corporation, and a tourism panel.

Since the change in demographics in the industries of Grande Cache, the town and its citizens had come together to form the Grande Cache Community Forest Action Committee. Members of the committee soon found that they needed to expand their scope and involve other industries in this initiative. Now they're called the Community Initiatives Council of Grande Cache. The council and its members are looking into where the town could see what each business is doing and how they can capitalize on that to make the community much stronger.

Mr. Speaker, the number of people who came to the seminar last week just goes to show the great tenacity that this community has. They certainly lived up to their slogan, Grande Cache: A Natural High.

On behalf of all of the Members of the Legislative Assembly I would like to wish Grande Cache all the very best in all their endeavours.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Alberta Farmers

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to talk about a group of Albertans who have contributed so much to our province but who have suffered greatly over the past few years. I am speaking, of course, about Alberta farmers.

Alberta has a long, proud history of agriculture and agricultural producers. So many Albertans, including members of this Assembly, have known the life of tilling the soil, giving care and attention during calving season, and many other activities that make farm life so rewarding. Alberta agricultural producers have contributed and continue to contribute so much to our province and our country.

Sadly, however, the challenges of farming and ranching have become so difficult over the past few years. Years of drought, grasshoppers, and in the last year the diagnosis of one case of mad cow disease have hurt the great occupation of farming and the lifestyle of living on a farm. As I glance at this year's 2004 grasshopper projections, I worry for those Albertans who have committed themselves to the land. It is no secret that the concerns which face agricultural producers don't stop at the farm gate. Rural communities as a whole suffer when the farmers and the ranchers do.

Mr. Speaker, the government of Alberta needs to do more to make farming more sustainable. It needs to participate actively in developing a live test for BSE. It needs to put monopoly controls on mega slaughterhouses, like they do in the United States. It needs to ensure that ad hoc programs are not the response to farm income losses.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta agricultural producers are a strong and self-reliant lot. They have committed themselves to an honest and decent life. I urge all hon. members of this Assembly to continue their support for Alberta's farmers and ranchers, and I urge this government to invest in proactive solutions to the problems faced today by so many of Alberta's agricultural producers.

Thank you.

head: Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Financial Administration Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill 12, the Financial Administration Amendment Act, 2004.

This bill will streamline and clarify how government manages and invests funds, clarify the wording and definitions, and make other technical amendments for your consideration, sir.

[Motion carried; Bill 12 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 12 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development I'm pleased to move first reading of Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004.

Changes in the Forest Reserves Act will update the current legislation, that's not been revised since 1980. These adjustments will continue to provide Alberta's livestock industry with access to secure public rangeland for grazing in the Rocky Mountain forest reserve.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 13 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, the people of Red Deer are once again proving perfect hosts in hosting this year's Scott Tournament of Hearts, but my job today really is to table five copies of Alberta ingenuity fund's 2000 to 2003 triennial report. A copy of this document is being sent to all members of the Assembly from Alberta Ingenuity.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Dunford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to table six reports actually all dealing with radiation protection. The first is the 2002 report of the Alberta Dental Association and College radiation administration program; second, the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association radiation protection program 2002; thirdly, the College of Chiropractors of Alberta 2003 radiation health administrative organization; the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta 2002-2003 radiation health administrative organization; the University of Alberta 2002-2003 authorized radiation health administrative organization; and lastly, the University of Calgary 2002-2003 radiation health administration organization.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a seniors' newsletter signed by 59 seniors. The document outlines four requests: that the government "restore the seniors' exemption from paying health care premiums," that the government "restore the seniors' exemption from paying education tax on their homes," that the government "restore reasonable costs for long term care facilities," and that the government "restore medical and dental benefits."

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Lethbridge-East I would like to table the required number of copies of a letter from Dixie Lee-Smerck of Fort McMurray raising the question of removing principals from the Alberta Teachers' Association and questioning why it's even being considered.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Attorney General, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, I'd like to table three letters: one from Heather Gibson regarding the teachers' convention, one from Phil Lister regarding the Bighorn wilderness; and Patricia Worger regarding the Learning Commission.

Thank you.

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is the required number of copies of the Alberta Advisory Council on Electricity Report and Recommendations on Consumer Concerns. I believe this is the final report.

The second tabling I have is a very interesting tabling, and I would encourage all hon. members to have a look at this. It is from the New York Times dated Sunday, February 8, and it compares the costs of public versus private health care. I would urge all to read it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling today the appropriate number of copies of a letter from Mr. Dave Burkhart, a resident of St. Albert, addressed to the Premier. Mr. Burkhart is asking the Premier the following question: why should the Premier not consider the introduction of a public auto insurance system in Alberta that has enabled drivers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or British Columbia to pay lower auto insurance rates?

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader on a purported point of order.

Point of Order Abusive Language

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rose reluctantly earlier during question period today on a point of order with respect to the preamble to a question being put by the hon. third party leader. Perhaps I could shorten my presentation by saying that it was with respect to exactly the same reason for which you later admonished the hon. member's seatmate for the preamble to his question: under 23(h) and (j) making allegations and using abusive or insulting language and under Beauchesne's 428, the question must not "be ironical, rhetorical, offensive, or contain epithet, innuendo, satire, or ridicule."

It's perhaps unfortunate for me to raise the point of order with respect to this hon. member because I ought to have raised the same point of order on numerous times in the House over the last week when the members opposite were bringing forward in preambles to questions things which they know not to be true, trying to bring into ridicule and trivialize the whole process that we're doing here.

I'm speaking specifically now about the hon. member's preamble in which he talks about the Premier specifically, making allegations about the Premier jet-setting around the world and buying orange juice at $27 a shot. Now, I think it's common knowledge among most people in the House that a shot is one ounce. So just on the face of it the hon. member is telling a lie because he knows that the facts have been put on the floor of this House, that the orange juice in question was three jugs.

I don't want to belabour that point. The point that I wanted to make and I think the point of order which is important is that – the opposition has a job to do, and this hon. member has a job to do. I respect that job, and I think other members of this House respect that job. But they ought not put into the preambles of questions such ludicrous aspersions and such falsehoods when they know that the facts have been put on the floor of the House, the aspersions have been corrected and the continued use of these sorts of things to drag down not just the reputation of the minister or the Premier that they're addressing the question to but every single member of this House.

So I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that you rule that the hon. member was using abusive and insulting language, was making allegations, was being rhetorical and offensive in using satire or ridicule in the preamble to his question in an inappropriate manner and in so doing raise the stature of questions in this House in the future from all members opposite and from all members of the House.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, did you wish to participate?

Dr. Pannu: Yes, Mr. Speaker, with your permission. I do want to acknowledge that inadvertent though that reference was, it was based on erroneous factual information. Therefore, I regret making that reference to $27 a shot and, with your permission, withdraw that portion of my statement.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Well, there was a point of order. There was a legitimate point of order. It was raised by the Government House Leader, and it was also very honourable that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has basically dealt with that.

I asked hon. members for co-operation today, and I'm going to ask for it every day. Today we had 36 questions and answers, which is 10 per cent more than we had yesterday. This place is for all hon. members to participate, so if we have brevity and pointed questions, we should have brevity and pointed answers.

In the case of the question today from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona it was actually five sentences long. I could have said five long sentences, but I said five sentences long. So let's just get that old pencil sharpened tomorrow and reduce it to maybe three and forget about some of the exaggerations with respect to certain items. But the hon. member has withdrawn his erroneous statement about "$27 a shot orange juices," which is the quote.

So there was a point of order. It has been dealt with honourably.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Consideration of Her Honour
the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Griffiths moved that an humble address be presented to Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To Her Honour the Honourable Lois E. Hole, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank you, Your Honour, for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate February 23: Mr. Strang]

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, what an honour and privilege to speak today on the Speech from the Throne delivered by Her Honour at the start of this session and to highlight and profile for this Assembly the words surrounding the organization of a round-table on family violence in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, last October when our Premier announced the round-table on family violence, it was with the thought that there has to be a better way for us to find solutions to make Alberta communities safer and free of family violence and bullying. So the activities that are currently underway are activities that I dedicate, first of all, to the April 1999 shooting of Jason Lang, to the 2002 killing of Cole Harder, and to the most regrettable recent death of Alex Fekete, a three year old who told his daycare worker: I'm going to get killed'd. Then he and his mommy, Betty, were killed indeed.

Mr. Speaker, it's time for it to stop: family violence whether between a man and a woman, an elder and their son or daughter, a child and his mother; bullying whether it's on the playground, coming to school, or going from a community activity. It's time for us as Albertans to take up the championship and to respect one another sufficiently so that we eradicate the scourge of family violence and bullying.

It is, indeed, a pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to work with the ministries and the ministers of Justice, Community Development, the Solicitor General, the ministers of Learning, Human Resources and Employment, Health and Wellness, Finance, Seniors, Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development, and International and Intergovernmental Relations to together determine whether this government and the people of Alberta can make a success on the issue of family violence. Wouldn't it be wonderful if one year there were no deaths attributable to family violence? In 2002 there were more deaths attributable to family violence than deaths attributable to gang wars or gang fights. There were six that died.

Bullying, Mr. Speaker, has touched many more of us than we would like to believe. Sometimes the bully is, in fact, a victim himself. Sometimes the victim becomes a bully in another situation. There's a dynamic power and control issue that, in fact, affects everybody. It is well known that children who have adult supervision and who on playgrounds are exposed to a rigorous discipline of adult supervision and monitoring are less likely to perpetrate bullying of their playmates.

But, Mr. Speaker, the very fact that significant absenteeism occurs in our schools in this province every day is evidence that some children are fearful of going to school. They are fearful of the repercussions at the school. Yes, some may fear an exam, but others fear a peer, a playmate, somebody who has turned their back and worse yet laid their fist to them.

It's more imminently necessary for us to have a solution to family violence because last year there were 7 and a half per cent more women coming to shelters and almost 4 per cent more children, and shelters, Mr. Speaker, are not the answer. Shelters are not the solution to family violence. The solution starts with the growth and development of an individual both as a child and as a young and maturing adult to recognize that power and control, real power and control, mean that you don't have to hit anybody, that you don't have to abuse somebody, that you don't have to put somebody else down.

Mr. Speaker, there have been fears that this is only about something dealing with women. I assure you that it's not. When Hugh Campbell spoke about verbal abuse, he was speaking about verbal abuse that everybody and anybody could be subject to. When native women talk about men that have been abused, they are not talking men abused by their peer group but men who have, yes, also been abused by their spouses. There is no incidence of family violence that should be condoned. Research indicates that at least 4 per cent and even sometimes as high as 10 per cent of seniors in Canada are abused in some fashion: yes, financial abuse, and, yes, from time to time by intimidation.

We must ask ourselves: why is this happening? Why does Alberta have the highest rates of violence against women across the country? Why are deaths in our province attributed to spousal abuse increasing? Why are more women and children being admitted to shelters in Alberta? Why do as many as one in four Canadian children say that they have been bullied? We need to ask these questions, and we need to find the answers.

Mr. Speaker, four of the workshops have already begun. We have had several of these workshops in communities so far, like Fort McMurray – Grande Prairie will be held tomorrow – Bonnyville, and we will go throughout Alberta, and ultimately on May 7 there will be a round-table held in Calgary that will culminate in what we believe will be an action plan to change beliefs and attitudes toward family violence and bullying. We'll need to know then what services are necessary and how a collaborative, co-ordinated community response can be achieved.

Mr. Speaker, last June when I spoke in Prague on the subject of family violence and our new identities for victims of abuse and violence, I spoke to a group of people who at a meeting following my delivery suggested to me that if they could go anywhere in the world and find the place where the best template, the best community co-ordinated response was in addressing family violence, they would go to London, Ontario. What is it about London, Ontario, that makes it special?

Well, number one, it had the foresight and wisdom to have the right leadership. Dr. Peter Jaffe of London, Ontario, is an internationally recognized speaker on this subject dealing with every facet of violence in schools, in the community, in the home, anywhere that people are. He has encouraged us in Alberta to develop that kind of approach where we look at an action plan, not to take place as a snapshot in Alberta but to look at a three- to five-year action plan of changing the culture in every facet of community life.

In London, Ontario, one person in every public-sector endeavour is the champion of eradicating family violence. So the police have a policeman. The schools under the superintendent of schools have an assistant superintendent. Every single authority, health authority, community advisory committee for individual schools has someone who monitors and evaluates whether or not they're making a significant difference on programs of prevention, on programs to build the capacity of safety in their community. Mr. Speaker, one of the exciting things is that they're not afraid to talk about violence. The day that we were there an NFL coach was coming to talk to a men's Rotary club about the importance of eradicating family violence.

You know, our society is an interesting one, Mr. Speaker. The day that Janet Jackson lost half of her top during the Super Bowl halftime, I was expressing to friends: "What do you think about that? What should we think about that when we're watching that on television with our children?" One of the moms in that audience said: well, what do you think about the entire game when people are forcefully hitting one another?

Now, I happen to be a fan of sport. I'm a fan of rugby, football, and hockey, contact sports, when people know the rules and follow them and pay attention to those rules. I accept that because those that play that game accept that sport and act within the confines of that sport, but it does not mean that that type of behaviour outside that sporting arena is acceptable. It does not mean that behaviour that assaults one other person is ever acceptable, and we have to know when to play the game, how to play by the rules, and how to institute a society and a societal norm that will make bullying and violence unacceptable.

Mr. Speaker, focus groups have been organized so that if the regional round-tables do not capture all of the issues, we have different perspectives being provided by the faith community, immigrant women and children talking about the struggles they face, the gay and lesbian community, the men's community where they have felt they have not been listened to, where they've felt they haven't had a voice dealing with violence that has affected them. Information from every one of these perspectives will be presented at the May 7 round-table.

Discussion in Calgary will build on the good work that's already been done in Alberta and other provinces. Participants will create recommendations for a plan of action in Alberta: a new way of preventing and responding to family violence and bullying, a new co-ordinated approach at the local, regional, and provincial levels so we can one day eliminate family violence and bullying in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank every single solitary Member of this Legislative Assembly who's taken it upon themselves to submit names, to encourage people to come forward to participate in the round-tables, to participate by sending their views in on the web site, and I encourage them still further to look at the questionnaire that's coming on the web site this week and to fill in that questionnaire and provide us with their best ideas for solutions.

This is not an issue that can any longer be contained behind closed doors. Researchers say that family violence across Canada carries an annual price tag of $4.2 billion in social service costs, education costs, criminal justice costs, labour and employment losses, health and medical costs. Everybody is affected, and not the least of these, Mr. Speaker, are the retired and elderly that watch with faded and sad eyes as our society and our families are crumbling in certain crises.

The time has come for all of us to recognize that we have an important role to play in stopping family violence and bullying. We need to all speak up. We need to hear everyone's voice, and we must focus on solutions. We must all work together to create an environment in our great province where family violence and bullying are simply not tolerated, an environment where our children have compassion and respect for others, and an environment where they are not scared and not devastated by violence in their homes and communities.

I know that these goals can and will be achieved. The process has already begun, and I am confident that the lives of Alberta's children will be forever changed and improved by the new plan of action that will be formed at the Roundtable on Family Violence and Bullying.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege as well to rise this afternoon to offer a response to the Speech from the Throne that we heard last week from Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor. I'm almost tempted not to speak because of the powerful nature of the speech that we just heard, and I want to say to my colleague how profound her comments were and how important they are to the future of Alberta. Domestic violence, family violence, is a matter which must be brought out into the open and must be discussed, and the round-tables which are currently on are a very significant step forward.

I did also want to talk about the future of Alberta that we want to have and we want to capture and that we can capture if we can have the human capital of our children and our families developed in the manner of which my hon. colleague spoke so eloquently.

So I do want to speak about the Speech from the Throne that was delivered by Her Honour with the grace and dignity that only she can bring to the task, a grace and dignity in which she offered a message of hope and promise for every Albertan. The speech that I heard spoke to renewed commitment to a better Alberta for our children, our children's children, and, yes, for ourselves. The Speech from the Throne sets the stage for an exciting journey not only for government but for all partners in our community, ensuring that Alberta continues to be the best place to live, work, and visit.

I am personally very excited by the government's direction and in particular our 20-year vision and plan. In many ways it speaks to my own very heartfelt beliefs about what is best for our province and how we can go about ensuring that those good things can continue to happen. If I may, I'd like to take a few moments to share some of my own reasons as to why it's so important for us to embrace this vision of our future and make and execute our plans and take that leap of faith into the next two decades.

The opposition may say that we're being unrealistic looking that far down the road. How can we possibly look 20 years hence? They may say that we ought to be dealing with the potholes of today, but frankly I think it's quite the opposite. We must plan for that seemingly distant future. Why? Because that is our children's future, and our children are the promise of everything that Alberta can be.

As many of my colleagues know, I'm a strong advocate of strategic planning in government. I believe that the past year has been one of the most exciting opportunities that we've had for elected colleagues and appointed officials to participate in the most important process of business planning and strategic planning. In fact, the government of Alberta has been a pioneer in planning. It was the first government in Canada to implement three-year business plans and has been a leader in establishing visible measures of success ever since.

In recent years we've refined our approach to accountability and, even further, are now focusing more strategically on the outcomes for Albertans. There is no question that over the last decade this planned approach to government has worked very well. Thanks to sound strategic thinking and a co-ordinated approach to business we have eliminated the deficit, reduced the debt to a mere fraction of what it once was. Alberta is in an enviable position. As a result of our commitment to hard work and foresight and self-reliance we have some exciting options available to us.

As the throne speech outlined, we're taking the long view in our planning. Over the next 20 years we'll continue to build our communities and foster growth with the same hard work, hope, and optimism that built this province over the last 100 years.

The throne speech outlined four key areas, pillars, that will be crucial to Alberta's continued success: unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. These are all specific areas for action, but they're by no means mutually exclusive. Any action we take in one area will indubitably affect another. That is the nature of the interconnected, pluralistic, modern society that is Alberta.

In the spirit of the time I have available, I don't intend to talk at length about all four pillars, but I'd like to focus my comments on two in particular: leading in learning and unleashing innovation. What better way to ensure a positive and fruitful future for our children than through learning? As the Greek biographer Diogenes said back in the third century, "The foundation of every state is the education of its youth." The same holds true today. Learning is about much more than the acquisition of skills and knowledge. It instills pride and confidence. Learning helps young people achieve their full potential and take on whatever challenges life throws their way. Education lays the foundation not only for future learning but for a life rich with and open to all kinds of opportunity.

The throne speech introduced a truly great initiative. The Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act will help to mark Alberta's 100th birthday with a new program that encourages parents to think about and save for their child's future education, and I hope to speak to that bill in debate in the House, so I won't say more about it here.

I'm also pleased that the throne speech spoke about our young people who are already in the learning system. The increased funding for kindergarten to grade 12 will give our children every possible advantage, and a new community-focused funding framework will enable each school board to more effectively respond to local needs and issues. This fits very well into my view of how we should work in our own communities to address community concerns.

The throne speech also announced new funding for the postsecondary learning system. Thanks to this injection of support we'll have an enhanced apprenticeship system. We'll see new spaces in high-demand programs and greater availability of degree-granting programs. The Campus Alberta quality council is a particularly exciting development, ensuring that the quality of new degree programs will help build an even finer system of adult learning.

That the throne speech talked about education in such detail and at such length speaks to a priority that this government places on learning. We see with great clarity that the future of Alberta and Alberta's children lies in having the best learning system in the world.

Our future health, wealth, and dare I say happiness also lies, however, in innovation. As reiterated in the throne speech, we must unleash innovation in order to continue growing as a province and compete in a changing, increasingly global marketplace. Without a doubt, our children will play a huge role in unleashing the power of innovation. As the future workers, citizens, and leaders of Alberta they hold the key to our creative potential. However, we must also act in the present. We must not only discover the entirely new but also find ways to make the most of what we already have.

As business guru Peter Drucker has said, "Innovation is the specific instrument of entrepreneurship." It is "the act that endows resources with a new capacity to create wealth." I think that when Mr. Drucker was talking about resources, he meant all of our resources, including human, natural, social, and other resources. Here in Alberta we're privileged to have an abundance of many. Let's take that abundance and continue to turn it to our advantage.

The throne speech talks about finding new ways to add value to our resources. There are countless opportunities, be they in the more traditional areas of strength like oil and gas or the emerging sectors such as agrifoods. I ask: why would we ship our raw materials before we've had the opportunity to create jobs for people in Alberta? I say: let's keep the money; let's keep the jobs in Alberta for Albertans; let's not be afraid to find new ways to make the most of the great gifts that our land has provided to us. This doesn't mean abandoning our traditions or ignoring the value of things that have worked well and brought us economic reward. What it does mean is being aware of some of the great opportunities that still lie right below our noses.

Innovation has brought us some remarkable inventions and developments, especially in information and communication technology. Where would we be without VCRs to tape hockey games or favourite television shows? How would we get all those wonderful junk e-mails without the great wonder of the ICT world and the Internet?

Seriously, Mr. Speaker, it's innovations exactly like the Internet that have allowed us to unleash our creative powers and reach new heights in innovation. How else could we market Alberta simultaneously to hundreds of countries around the world? We can give literally millions of potential investors, customers, and visitors detailed information about all the opportunities that our province has to offer. We can sell our technical expertise and know-how to any variety of customers globally.

Closer to home ICT has enabled us to develop exciting innovations in education like the LearnAlberta web site, a digital learning environment for Alberta's teachers, students, and parents. Clearly, innovation doesn't have to be about inventing an entirely new product or gizmo. It doesn't have to be about the most amazing thing since sliced bread or about the Internet. Sure, here in Alberta we have plenty of those examples. Just think of the islet transplant program at the University of Alberta and you know what I mean by amazing.

Innovation can simply mean a better process or approach. Our government's three-year business plans are the product of innovative thinking. They may not be thrilling or amazing in and of themselves, but they have led to some thrilling and amazing results. There are endless opportunities for innovation in all parts of our economy and all parts of our society. They lie not only in our traditional areas of wealth generation but in newer areas as well.

The life sciences sector embraces everything from forestry and agriculture to health and water research and bioenergy. Many of these sectors also have, in fact, a long history in Alberta. For example, the forest industry has long been a foundation of Alberta's economy. So has agriculture. How many of our ancestors, the founding fathers and mothers of the province of Alberta, were farmers? But what is new and innovative is how things are being done. Thanks to groundbreaking research and truly creative thinking some of the most exciting innovations we're seeing today are coming from these sectors.

Forestry has evolved from a commodity-producing industry to a highly diversified economic sector that exports a variety of value-added products around the world. New technologies have played an important role in that diversification by enabling the automation of manufacturing processes and, indeed, in new products.

3:10

The agriculture sector, the true life part of our economy, is continuing to branch out into exciting new areas of research and food and agricultural product processing. These industries are growing and thriving thanks to the spirit of innovation. They are pursuing new knowledge, ideas, and markets with the firm belief that we can compete in a changing world. Mr. Speaker, that's why I was delighted to hear the throne speech refer to a new life sciences institute that will co-ordinate research in these sectors. What better way to ensure that the innovative power of Albertans can be successfully unleashed? What better way to continue our evolution towards a knowledge economy than to support the creation of new knowledge?

Which brings me back to my original comments about education and learning. Education and learning are the foundations for all of this. Whether it's the scientist investigating the potential of nanotechnology in fighting diseases or the entrepreneur looking at new business processes or the child learning how to read and write for the very first time, learning is ultimately the key to our future success as a province. Yes, it can be difficult to keep an eye on the long term while we're busy fixing potholes or reacting to the latest crisis. Learning is a lifelong process, and I think we can learn to be an even better Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, as the throne speech showed us, we can learn to be a better Alberta by taking the long view, by looking ahead to the next generation, by having the courage to face the future with optimism and hope. Alberta is already a great place to live, work, and visit. It is a land of opportunity that competes successfully in many areas of the world stage. It is a province where we embrace innovation and know that learning is paramount. Thanks to our strong convictions, a formidable work ethic, uncompromising values, and self-reliance we've done exceptionally well over the last 99 years and especially well over the last 10.

Thanks to our very recent efforts we now have in place a 20-year plan for the future of Alberta and the future of our children. It's a plan to guide government, business, educational institutions, communities, service providers, and all partners and, most importantly, everyday Albertans. It's a tool to help us all understand where we are going and what we have to do in order to get there.

Twenty years? The throne speech is talking about two decades. How can we possibly think that far ahead? It's easy. We look to the horizon. We take our inspiration from the generations of Albertans who have gone before us and, may I add, a truly inspirational Albertan among us now, Her Honour the Lieutenant Governor. We take that leap of faith. We shoot for the stars. We look to the heavens for guidance and inspiration while sowing the seeds of success with our feet firmly planted on the ground.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I take it that the hon. Government House Leader adjourned the debate with the words at the conclusion of his debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 5
Family Support for Children with Disabilities
Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North on behalf of the hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to begin debate on Bill 5, the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004. The act outlines five minor amendments to the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act brought forward during the spring session in 2003. The amendments address minor issues that were identified while regulations were being developed for implementation of the new act.

As you know, this legislation is the first of its kind in Canada because it provides separate and distinct legislation to cover services for children with disabilities. The first amendment is to the definition of disability. This amendment will clarify and broaden the definition. Currently, disability is defined as a chronic developmental, physical, sensory, mental, or neurological impairment other than a condition or impairment that is primarily a medically treatable illness. The proposed change is to clarify that a medically treatable illness means a condition for which the primary need is for medical care or health services to treat or manage the condition. However, when that medical condition significantly limits the child's functioning in daily life, then the child would be eligible for services. An example might be where a child has cancer and is undergoing treatment. The child's functioning in daily living might require additional supports and services.

Another amendment includes changing the phrase "therapeutic services" to "child-focused services." The word "therapeutic" is more commonly associated with health-related services, which is not the intent of this act. "Child-focused services" more accurately describes the kinds of supports and services that will concentrate on a child's individually assessed needs.

A new addition will require that the director appointed under the act and the appeal panel consider a family's specific circumstances as set out in regulations when making decisions that affect services to be provided. The amendment provides candour respecting the factors that are to be considered when the director and a family negotiate the levels and kinds of services to be provided.

Another new addition to the act will stipulate a residency requirement for children and families receiving services under the act. To be eligible for supports and services under the act, the director must be satisfied that a child has Canadian citizenship or permanent residency within the meaning of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act (Canada) and ordinarily resides in Alberta. This includes refugees because they can apply to become permanent residents.

A further new addition to the act will provide that a parent under the age of 18 may enter into a valid contractual agreement regarding supports for their disabled child. This amendment ensures that young parents have access to the same supports and services.

These are the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act amendments proposed in Bill 5.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North participated in second reading. Unfortunately, the hon. member has not moved the motion for second reading, which would be helpful. As 20 minutes is allocated, I will recognize the hon. Member for Red Deer-North again to perhaps exercise that motion.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move second reading of Bill 5.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to make a few comments on Bill 5, the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004. I think that as the Member for Red Deer-North has indicated, the proposed changes to the act are minor although not insignificant, especially with respect to the first amendment, which has to do with the definition. We had some discussion about definition when Bill 23 was before the House and had raised some questions at that time in terms of the narrowness of the definition and so are pleased that what we have before us is a broadening of the definition and the youngsters that can now be included as part of the act.

For those who are not working with the act on a daily basis, I think it can still be somewhat unclear as to exactly who the definition applies to. The speaker from Red Deer-North gave us an example of a youngster with cancer as being someone who would be included under a chronic condition that "significantly limits a child's ability to function in normal daily living." The way the definition is written, it almost requires an accompanying list of examples so that it is clear to parents exactly where their youngsters fit into the act. I'm assuming that "disability" means, for instance, cerebral palsy, that those are ones that we intended originally to have included under the act. I have questions, then, about youngsters with autism. Are they, too, included under the first part of the act?

As I said, it does raise some questions. In trying to make that distinction between those that are getting medical care yet it's a condition that's chronic and the other youngsters, I'm not sure that it still is as clear as it potentially could be, Mr. Speaker.

The other changes. It was really around the definitions of "disability" that we had some concerns raised by some groups that were interested in the legislation the last time, Mr. Speaker. The concern then was that it medicalized disabilities and re-established a medical model of dealing with disabilities, and I think that the intent and the impact of what happens when this bill is passed will allay those fears, that there will not be that same concern. But I'm still worried that when a parent reads this act, there are going to be some questions in their minds about which children are eligible.

Another comment, Mr. Speaker – and it's more of a question, I suspect – is about the notion of residency and the qualifications of what is a resident of Alberta and how this affects, for instance, youngsters from the Northwest Territories, those jurisdictions that have youngsters that receive services in the province at this time. Does it in any way affect any of those agreements? Is service to those children still going to be available?

I think that other than those two concerns, still some concern about the clarity of the definition and concerns about residency, the other changes are minor. I think there's some benefit to changing the term to "child-focused services" and removing "therapeutic services."

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, if I recognize the hon. Minister of Children's Services, this now closes the debate on second reading of this bill. Are there any other additional members who wish to participate at second reading? There being none, then the hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to respond to the questions that have arisen from the Leader of the Opposition in this way. "Child-focused," in light of the protocol that has been signed between Children's Services and the health minister and the Learning minister, incidentally, will help in the following way. If a child is sick, acutely ill with cancer or with any other disabling circumstance, then they are treated under the health model, under the therapeutic model, but when at such time they are no longer acutely ill but considered chronically ill, then they will move to the Children's Services supports for their lifestyle on an everyday living basis.

So the circumstances will be that the child doesn't have an overlap in care but has the appropriate health care where Health and Wellness is the dominant provider, and then when Children's Services would retain the respite capacity assistance for counselling and therapy, those kinds of ongoing circumstances that would help children with disabilities, that's when Children's Services will be involved. The fear of having it too confined to the therapeutic model is why, as you have properly noted, the broader, child-focused model. We have spent an extensive period of time, in fact extended that time to the end of February, so that we can consult with not a few parents but all of the parents. All of the parents, through either their association or through focus groups or through regional discussions, have been contacted asking them for their comments and feedback on it.

Now, here's what I expect at the end of the day. Prior to proclamation we have to do a proper assessment to make sure that we are looking after each child. There are many children that receive smaller amounts on a monthly basis in support to the families that I would call respite or some babysitting assistance, sometimes some transport assistance for particular situations, but by and large their amounts of reimbursement for handicapped services are small. On an annual basis they would probably equate to between $6,000 and $8,000. That is by far the bulk of the children that will be served by this legislation.

Then there is another group that I would define as certainly needing more supports, certainly needing a greater level of support on a consistent basis, and with every one of those groups and those in that group – there may be probably about 1,500 of those children – I think it's imminently reasonable for those parents to expect that we would look at their circumstance on an individual basis, see whether the supports were sufficient to enable that child to achieve to his or her full potential, and make sure that whether it's an occupational therapist or counsellor, speech pathologist, they have the supports that were required for their own unique, special disability.

We have probably in the neighbourhood of 300 to 400 that would be severely complex cases, that would really require some intensive review. Now, for those children, while there will probably not be very much change at all that might happen with them, some might receive a little more service. It's not intended that people would receive less service under this legislation but child-appropriate services and provision for those services.

One in the area of the hon. member representing St. Paul, for example, was a child that was coming back and forth to Edmonton, and because they hadn't received the proper rejection by the school authority, they weren't eligible for certain supports from Children's Services. Well, we changed that. There's no reason to punish parents because they deserve something but haven't followed the process or don't have an understanding of the process. That to me is not the way to administer a program.

So this piece of legislation, along with an implementation plan, we are making very specific in two ways. One, to support the parent and the child. That is a given. Second, to support the culture within that children's authority so that the people that are performing the assessments of children that need supports have an understanding, a compassion, as comprehensive understanding of the medical needs as they should have in order to make a proper assessment, and extra supports to make that assessment workable for the child. I would say to all members of this House that if you find out that that isn't being done in any situation, well, I will be very pleased to make sure that it is done, because I think we're making it eminently clear that those people need to have that support.

Mr. Speaker, if I may for just a minute. These are God's children, and whether we chose to have a child with a disability or not, they deserve every bit the same opportunity that any other child does in Alberta. I am proud that this legislation and the support by this Assembly, by everyone, is going to enable us to get that in the future.

On the matter, finally, of the immigrant child this will not affect those coming out of the Northwest Territories. Our agreements will stand; our supports will stand. This will simply mean that people can't shop for Alberta because they suddenly realize in another state, another country that this is the best place if you have a child with some kind of disability to land and to get those services. We want those families to be resident, to be contributing members of society in Alberta, to understand that their child, then, will qualify but certainly not just to ferry themselves across the border for services by what used to be handicapped children services and now will be resources for children with disabilities.

So I can assure this Assembly at the close of second reading that the intent of these amendments is to clarify; the intent of these amendments is to be inclusive, of making sure the children receive the proper supports for their medical condition; and the intent of these amendments is to be sure that they serve Alberta children and Alberta children only unless there is an agreement that has been accepted by the government of Alberta either through Health and Wellness or through Children's Services to serve those children that we have so many of in the Northwest Territories and beyond.

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, rather unique. We now have a question and answer/comment period under Standing Order 29(2)(a), should there be questions you wish to direct, in this case, to the last speaker, being the Minister of Children's Services.

[Motion carried; Bill 5 read a second time]

Bill 11 Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to move second reading of Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004.

The Alberta Personal Income Tax Act gives the province the authority to collect personal income taxes in Alberta. These amendments will make some technical changes to the provincial act so that it stays consistent with federal legislation and will make some clarifications that ensure that the act reads the way it is administered and meets our policy goals. There are three aspects that I wish to address in particular: the wording used to calculate the tax liability of nonresidents in section 6(5); the administration of the foreign tax credit, particularly as it is affected by the federal Income Tax Act; and thirdly, changes needed to reflect changes made to the Alberta Corporate Tax Act, as there are some references that cross over between the two pieces of legislation.

Calculating the tax liability. The Personal Income Tax Act in section 6(5) calculates the tax liability for nonresidents. The term "taxable income earned in Canada" is defined earlier in section 5. We need to clarify in section 6(5) that the tax liability of nonresidents should be based on the term in section 5. So the same wording should be used in both sections. Section 5 uses the words “individual’s taxable income earned in Canada.” Section 6(5) reads: “the individual’s taxable income for the year earned in Canada.” It needs to be amended to ensure that the defined term “taxable income earned in Canada” is not separated by the words “for the year.” So the new provision would read as follows: “the individual’s taxable income earned in Canada for the year.”

The foreign tax credit in section 23 will be amended in a number of ways including: to parallel federal amendments and legislation to ensure that the credit is not denied unintentionally when an individual pays tax in more than one foreign jurisdiction, to prevent the credit from being unintentionally reduced by business income taxes paid to the federal government, and to ensure that individuals are not disqualified from the credit due to death.

The first issue to address relates to calculating foreign tax credits when an individual pays tax in more than one jurisdiction. Under section 126 of the federal act an individual is required to calculate a separate foreign tax credit for each country. However, some of Alberta’s legislation treats all the foreign countries as a single group. As a result, the nonbusiness income tax paid to one particular country is reduced by the total of all federal foreign tax credits that have been claimed under the federal act for all countries. This has an effect of reducing the provincial foreign tax credit and causing a person to pay higher taxes than they should be paying under the intent of the policy.

The proposed changes ensure that Alberta’s foreign tax credit, like the federal credit, is calculated on a country-by-country basis so that the provincial foreign tax credit for a particular country is not reduced by the foreign tax credits claimed for other countries. Changing our legislation in the way proposed ensures that an individual who is due a foreign tax credit receives it.

The second issue to address under the foreign tax credits will ensure that an individual’s Alberta foreign tax credit deals only with nonbusiness income taxes as was originally intended. Under the present wording of the Alberta act, businesses’ income taxes included in the calculation of an individual’s special foreign tax credit will reduce the amount of an individual’s Alberta foreign tax credit. Given that the provincial credit does not include taxes paid on business income, reducing our credit by the portion of the federal special foreign tax credit that relates to business income unduly penalizes Albertans.

These changes would ensure that an individual’s Alberta foreign tax credit for a year is worded in such a manner that any business income taxes included in the calculation of an individual’s special foreign tax credit do not affect the calculation of an individual’s Alberta foreign tax credit. This will ensure that an individual’s Alberta foreign tax credit deals only with nonbusiness income taxes as was initially intended.

Finally, the current wording around a foreign tax credit may unintentionally deny the credit in the event of an individual’s death. You know the old saying that only two things in life are certain: death and taxes. I admit that this is the odd part of the law, but from the point of view of the tax collector you’re not officially dead until your last tax return is filed. It’s a fact of life.

Suppose that Bob Jones, an Alberta entrepreneur, earns nonbusiness income in United States and pays $300 tax on this income to the federal and state governments in the United States. Bob also pays federal and provincial tax on this income in Canada. To remove this double taxation, the government of Canada and Alberta provide foreign tax credits. Assume that if Bob lived till December 31, he would qualify for a federal tax credit of $250 and a provincial credit of $50. Under the current wording in the provincial act an individual must be a resident of Alberta on December 31 to qualify for the provincial credit. The way the act reads now, if Bob died on December 30 of the year, he would not be a resident of Alberta on December 31. He would receive his federal credit, but he would be denied his $50 provincial credit. This amendment ensures that Bob will receive the provincial credit. I should mention that the act has been administered as though this change were already in effect, so there have been no denials of credit that we are aware of.

Changes to the corporate tax calculations made under the Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2003, Bill 41 of last session, will need to be reflected in the Personal Income Tax Act. Currently, the Alberta royalty rebate in the Personal Income Tax Act is based on the royalty deduction in the Corporate Tax Act. In particular, the personal act directly references the definition of attributed Canadian royalty income in the Corporate Tax Act. The royalty tax deduction was amended to replace the attributed royalty income definition with the new pooling type concept.

Further, the act unintentionally denies the rebate to nonresidential individuals. Due to the changes in the Corporate Tax Act the methods of calculating the royalty rebate in the personal act is unclear as the act references concepts that no longer exist in the corporate act. Consequently, amendments are required to reflect the changes made in the Corporate Tax Act. These changes will ensure that nonresident individuals are not intentionally denied the tax credit.

Mr. Speaker, the changes proposed in this amendment act will serve to clarify aspects of the Personal Income Tax Act and will ensure that tax credits are not denied to individuals unfairly. I urge all members of this Assembly to support Bill 11.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I’m happy to have an opportunity to speak to Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004. It’s such a good example of how this government has participated in sloppy legislation over the years. If they had done their work properly in 2000 and gone through their reviews . . . [interjection] It’s very true. You can get up and debate this if you want to.

Had they compared it to the federal legislation at the time, had they even just had a grammar check on their computer systems, they would have seen that they needed to make some necessary changes at that time. We don’t need to be coming back here four years later to close loopholes that should have never been put in place in the first place. It’s a matter of taking all those great numbers of people that you have in the departments over there and having them take a look at the legislation closely. Time after time we come into this Legislature and waste our time by having to clean up sloppy legislation, and this is just another example of that.

We will support this bill because it’s very necessary, but I can’t, in principle, not speak to the problems that are in this bill for no other reason than that someone didn’t do their job.

So that’s all I have to say on this piece of legislation.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wasn’t intending to participate in debate, but I can’t let those comments go by without indicating that in Alberta and particularly within this government we have some of the finest draftspeople and legislative planners that there are. They happen to be resident in the Department of Justice, and the staff is led by Peter Pagano, an incredibly talented group of people who work very, very hard for the people of Alberta in drafting legislation.

I've had the opportunity of chairing Leg. Review over the years, and now it's chaired by the Deputy Government House Leader. I still attend it, and I'm constantly amazed at the ability of the people in legislative drafting to be able to do the intricate work and the detailed work that they do. I don't think it's appropriate to malign their work in the manner that was done just now in this House.

In fact, federal tax legislation changes almost yearly, and it is a constant of every provincial government in this country to constantly work to align provincial tax statutes with federal tax statutes. There is no sin in that. There is no sin in the timing. There is no sin in the question of whether or not we are bringing an act forward now to align with the federal act.

It is entirely inappropriate, Mr. Speaker, to malign the good work of the people who work for this province in a very, very strong and ethical manner, a very competent manner in drafting legislation.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for five minutes should it be requested by any hon. member.

There being none, we can proceed with the continuation of the debate.

There being none, I call on the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul to close the debate.

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that I believe that the legislation that is being proposed is to have increased clarity and to parallel current administration and ensure consistency with federal legislation, and I think that's what this does. So with that, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 11 read a second time]

Bill 3 Architects Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to move second reading of Bill 3, the Architects Amendment Act, 2004.

I'd like to acknowledge the significant contribution of the architect profession in the development of the proposed amendments. Representatives from the Alberta Association of Architects worked closely with the staff of Alberta Human Resources and Employment to identify these amendments, that improve the Architects Act.

The proposed Architects Amendment Act was developed to allow licensed interior designers and members of the Association of Professional Engineers, Geologists and Geophysicists of Alberta, or APEGGA, as most of us know it by, to have a restricted scope of practice within this province's architectural profession. The Alberta Association of Architects supports the amendments proposed in this bill. In addition, stakeholders from government, private industry, other professional associations, and academic institutions all support the proposed amendments. These amendments ensure that licensed interior designers and those APEGGA members who perform such restricted architectural services adhere to the high standards of professional practice and safeguard the interest of all Albertans.

The proposed Architects Amendment Act has eight sections, which are as follows. Section 1 provides the authority to amend the Architects Act. Section 2 includes definitions for persons who are either a licensed interior designer or a restricted practitioner in the act. Section 3 authorizes licensed interior designers to perform specific architectural services as defined in the Architects Act supporting regulations. Section 4 amends the council membership provision by adding that a licensed interior designer shall be elected to serve on the association's governing council. Section 5 establishes regulation-making powers in defining the practice of interior design and specifying the registration, continuing education, and professional conduct requirements for licensed interior designers. Section 6 provides for persons who are restricted practitioners to be included in the association's register of members. Section 7 establishes the registration, certification, and licence renewal requirements of APEGGA members who are authorized to become restricted practitioners. Section 8 specifies that this act comes into force upon receiving royal assent.

So, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the amended Architects Act establishes clear registration, certification, and accountability requirements for licensed interior designers and other restricted practitioners providing specific architectural services to Albertans. I would ask for the support of this Assembly in passing this act.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to make a few comments about Bill 3, the Architects Amendment Act, 2004. The substance of the bill deals, as the mover has indicated, with the profession of interior design, and I think it's a long overdue move to have this section of the act amended and for the inclusion of interior designers to be here.

If you look at the profession and the responsibility that they hold with respect to improving the quality of life and the responsibility that they take on with respect to designing spaces that protect the health of citizens and the public, and that they have a responsibility with respect to safety and, as I said, the welfare of the public, it's a rather large responsibility, and it's appropriate that they would be governed and conduct their affairs as many other professions in this province do.

They conduct a wide range of services, and rather than the view of the current television craze of the Designer Guys and the others that we sometimes get from television, I think they provide a very serious and much-needed service to the province.

They, as I said, have the responsibility in terms of preparing drawings and specifications for interior construction, the selection of materials and finishes, the space planning of furniture and equipment. They have to collaborate with other professionals with respect to mechanical, electrical, and load-bearing design. They have to be aware of regulations that affect the environment of the building, and they have to be deeply involved in trying to evaluate and solve environmental and space problems.

So they have an important responsibility, and as I said, it's appropriate that they will now be under the act and that the provisions for the governance of their profession are included in the bill before us this afternoon.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also support this particular bill. It certainly is something that the Association of Architects has been asking for, and we've been seeing some requests from the interior designers associated with this association to also have this legislation brought forward.

It's good to have the rules outlined in terms of what they can and cannot do, and it's also very good now for interior designers to be a part of the council. One can now be elected to be a member, so that brings a perspective that will represent all of those people who are members of the Alberta Association of Architects.

We have not received a single complaint from anyone, either architects or interior designers, on this particular bill, and it will receive support.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

Anybody else wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills to close debate.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have nothing to add except to thank the previous speakers for their support of the bill and hope that all the other members would support this.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a second time]

Bill 2

Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

[Adjourned debate February 19: Mr. Mason]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to respond to Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. We heard some eloquent speeches from the Minister of Community Development and the Minister of Government Services on this bill Thursday last. They spent a great deal of time talking about and congratulating themselves on what a great job they'd done in the area of protecting the land. Inasmuch as the land is protected, it was a great job. So I would like to congratulate them on having created a nationally significant protected area in the Whaleback and designating the Black Creek as heritage rangeland and also the other piece of rangeland that's adjacent and somewhat inserted into the Black Creek heritage rangeland, which is the Bob Creek wild-land.

Good work was done on that. They worked on this for a number of years starting in 1999 to get these areas designated under the special places program. Since then, they've put a management plan in place, which was also a very good thing. It states that the primary goal of the Wildland and the Heritage Rangeland is as follows: To preserve the natural heritage (i.e., soil, flora, fauna, landscape features, and natural/ecological processes) of the two protected areas in perpetuity. Other provincial protected area program goals (i.e., heritage appreciation, outdoor recreation, heritage tourism) are [very much] of secondary importance.

And that's as stated in the government's own documentation with respect to these particular protected areas. "The heritage appreciation and outdoor recreational goals may be met" – not must be met; may be met – "but only to the extent that their attainment does not conflict with or impinge on the preservation goal."

So that's where we see a problem come in with this particular bill, because what Bill 2 does is propose to allow off-highway vehicle access on designated trails through one particular protected area, which is the Black Creek heritage rangeland. They're saying that that's necessary because as the Minister of Community Development, who's responsible for this, stated in his comments, they virtually eliminated any other possible access points, so they need to be able to allow these off-highway vehicles into this protected area.

Well, that's a real problem for us because it sets a couple of precedents that we didn't want to see occur. First of all, this area was supposed to be protected and protected for a good reason. It's ecologically sensitive, and the flora and fauna in the region will be greatly disturbed by off-highway vehicle access.

They need to find a different solution to this problem. This is not the right way to go about this. If they have to allow those off-highway vehicles in this area, then there have to be different ways for them to get in there. They can't go through this protected area. It was protected for specific reasons, and this government protected so little land in this province in this kind of a capacity, so much less than what we actually need in order to preserve the natural beauty of the region and the ecological integrity, which is at least equally important.

Protective legislation is originally brought into place as more than a convenience. It's brought in for specific reasons, which the government clearly outlined at the time, and they shouldn't be overruled whenever it's the most convenient way to allow access.

So we don't like this particular bill. We know that off-highway vehicles have a very detrimental effect on wildlife habitat. It disturbs them. It increases water, air, and noise pollution in the area and certainly has been known to cause significant soil and stream erosion.

There has to be significant policing put in place if this is even to be considered, and I don't think that the government is prepared to put people on those trails to ensure that the people stay on them as they're supposed to. Anyone who has travelled in the backcountry, particularly where there is OHV access, knows that it doesn't take many bad players to completely destroy an area. I've seen so many hillsides completely wrecked by people coming off the trails and going up and down the hills. The habitat is destroyed in the first place, initially, and then over the long term because what those trails do with those tire treads is create stream beds that cause a great deal of erosion when there's either rain or snow.

We have received many, many letters of concern about this particular bill, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to read a little bit of background from the Alberta Wilderness Association, who put out an action alert on this particular bill to its membership to give them an outline of what's happening. They talk about the proposed changes to the area allowing access into this newly protected area, and that's what the real problem is. We fought so hard to get these areas protected, and the Whaleback was shrunk and shrunk and shrunk, and the actual significantly protected areas were greatly reduced from what the original expectations were, and then just a few short years later we're seeing off-highway vehicle access going to be allowed even though it's currently banned. So this is a real problem.

What we're talking about here is this area having been protected was over 20,000 hectares from the Bob Creek wild-land area, which is where the off-highway vehicle access is allowed. It's surrounded on two sides by the Black Creek heritage rangeland, which is a much smaller area. It's one-third of the size. This specific region is the most extensive, least disturbed, and least fragmented montane landscape in Alberta, so it's really a unique piece of land. It's been extremely important for bears, wolverines, lynx and is one of the most crucial wintering areas in the province for elk and moose. So to keep this protected is very important.

Last year when the draft management plan for the two protected areas was produced, the plan stated that the primary goal was as I read, and this is what the Alberta Wilderness Association was sharing with their membership. So now in direct opposition to that prime protection we are getting proposals for OHV trails. While the government members talked about this only being 3.5 kilometres of trail, that's very significant in an area this size and in an area that's this crucial to wildlife and the habitat itself. So they're asking for action against this bill from their members.

I have received a great many letters and phone calls on this issue, three more today, just this morning before coming in here. We definitely are not supporting this, and I would hope that the Minister of Community Development would share the concerns that he's hearing from people. One of the letters that came was from Christyann Olson from Calgary, who was very alarmed to find the legislation being proposed allowing this vehicle access through the Whaleback. She states that it's very disappointing to realize that the management planning process hasn't been officially completed yet and the government is "surging forward eroding the intent of the process and the desire of the public of Alberta." She also wants full protection in the Whaleback because of the reasons that I have previously cited.

I would hope that members would reconsider their position on this particular bill. It's not enough just to go to the off-road vehicle users when taking a look at whether or not new trails should be put through highly sensitive and well-protected areas, changing how the area is, in fact, protected. There needs to be extensive consultation with those whose primary concern is to keep the area protected and viable into the future, and that wasn't done here.

So, Mr. Speaker, we will not be supporting this bill, and as the days go on, we'll be tabling more letters from people who have concerns about it.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

Anybody else wish to speak? The hon. interim leader.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to voice my concern about the bill before us, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. The rangeland is the only rangeland set aside in the province. The Black Creek area is unique, an area of about 20,000 acres. It runs adjacent to the Whaleback ridge, an area that's been of great concern across the province in terms of what happens to the area. It's already traversed from north to south by a power line right-of-way, so in terms of having it a truly preserved area, it already has incursions with respect to a right-of-way for power.

I think it's unfortunate that we would have the bill before us. The fight in the province to have land set aside has been a long and hard one, fought by a number of groups and individuals. They've been successful, but I think we have to keep in perspective that protected areas make up less than 9 per cent of provincial Crown land that is set aside for nonmotorized access, Mr. Speaker. If you look at the grandeur of this province and the possibilities, something less than 9 per cent of the Crown land is a very small portion of the land that has been set aside. To think that once having set aside an area like this, we can't then protect it from off-highway vehicles just somehow or other doesn't seem to fit, that for a small population that would actually traverse the area, we would be willing to sacrifice the principles that underlie the preservation of wilderness land. It seems somehow, again, so very, very inappropriate.

I think the proponents of the bill have indicated that it's not a long trail, but any incursion violates what the understanding was when this area was put in place by this province and has to be resisted. The scale is much different, but I can't help but look south of the border and to the great debate that's going on in Yellowstone over the use of snowmobiles in that park. Although, as I said, the scale is not the same, it may be an omen in terms of what is to come with respect to wilderness areas in this province. I think that the province has done well in terms of the kind of progress that we've made, and for this kind of bill to come before us to attempt to modify or to reverse that progress is, I think, as I've indicated, Mr. Speaker, very, very unfortunate.

If you look back at the preservation goals, one of the important goals was that any kind of activity does not conflict with or impinge upon the goal of preservation, and this proposal before us certainly does just that. It impinges upon that preservation goal. I hope that the Assembly will take a long, hard look at the bill and do the right thing by the area by turning this bill back.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to add my comments to Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. Like the previous speakers from our caucus, this is a bill that I can't support.

Certainly, one of the reasons that we cannot support this bill is because of the very sensitive nature of the Black Creek heritage rangeland. Now, this is situated on the eastern slopes of the Rockies, and we all are aware that over the past few decades there have been quite a few climatic changes in our weather, and certainly on the eastern slopes we don't get the rainfall we once got. We certainly do, if we look at this particular year, get the possibility of a huge snowpack, which is roughly twice the size that we've had in previous years, as I understand.

If we do put off-road vehicles into the Black Creek heritage rangeland and they damage those sensitive areas and the grasslands in that area, then certainly we are going to expose that particular section of our province to erosion. Certainly, when we look at the snowpack, for example, of this year, a quick thaw and a huge runoff would certainly cause extensive damage due to erosion. By allowing off-road vehicles to use the Black Creek heritage rangeland to access the Bob Creek wild-land, then we are putting a very sensitive area under even greater stress.

So I think we have to go back and we have to look at the goals to preserve these sensitive areas, and we realize that the goal is to preserve the natural heritage, and that includes the flora, the fauna, the soils, the landscape features, and whatever. Certainly, one of the reasons that people wish to use this is the very nature of the fact that access to the area is limited. We also have a very sparse population there. When we look at enforcement of off-road vehicles using the approved route, it would be virtually impossible, and it would not take long with the equipment that is available to people today to do extensive damage to the Black Creek heritage rangeland. Also, the opportunity for this damage to repair itself is limited, and certainly we could, with the examples I gave earlier, see extensive damage to the natural ecological process that does occur in this protected area.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I certainly would urge all members of the Assembly to vote against this bill. It is not a bill that is going to preserve the 9 per cent of provincial Crown land that is set aside for nonmotorized access. I certainly cannot agree with the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmor, that made the comment that we have lots of land. Well, we don't have a lot of land when we look at land such as the Black Creek heritage rangeland, that is very sensitive.

I think, as well, that when we look at the rangeland that is in this particular section of the province, it is home to elk and moose populations, and certainly any destruction of their food chain will diminish the numbers of those large, beautiful mammals that grace our province.

Again, I thank you for the opportunity to make some comments on Bill 2, and I look forward to further debate on this. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Government House Leader to close the debate on behalf of the Minister of Community Development?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for second reading carried]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll call the committee to order.

Bill 5
Family Support for Children with Disabilities
Amendment Act, 2004

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, interim leader as well.

Dr. Massey: Yes. Just a couple of comments, Mr. Chairman. First, to thank the minister for the explanation about the definition under section 2(c). I think that was a useful clarification as was the information with respect to nonresident children. I don't think that we need to labour the discussion this afternoon. We'll be supporting Bill 5.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have a question for the minister on the bill. It's in section 2, where you're redefining disability in the current act to not include a condition that is primarily medical unless it is a chronic condition. Who determines that, and is there an appeal process? We've dealt with some situations in our constituency office that would be, if not borderline, at least something that could be considered potentially not to be chronic.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. This is an excellent point raised by the hon. member opposite. Who is in determination of that? Parents frequently feel like they are the ones that are best able to assess the disability. But, in fact, there would be a different assessment perhaps required for every child. Although that sounds like a fairly strong statement and an unachievable objective, it would depend on whether it was a doctor and perhaps some occupational therapists, some other type of specialist, a speech pathologist, and so on. So the definition, we believe, will enable us to use a multidisciplinary team when that is appropriate, to use the assessments of more than one individual, and to provide an opportunity, which I think is most important, for the parents to be involved in defining that assessment for the objective of bringing forward a program. In other words, you can't have a clinical assessment without the view of the parent, the observations of the parent, and the observations of other people.

4:30

I think what's become most difficult with the severe cases, probably some which the hon. member opposite is talking about – and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud has similarly raised some of those types of cases for me. What I understand is that when there are multiple disabilities that affect a child, what Children's Services has to be satisfied with at the end of the day under this legislation is that the family is given supports appropriate to the disabilities and appropriate to the symptoms of those disabilities so that the family has some assurance that the wellness of the child as much as possible is being achieved. I think this broadens the definition in a way that the families wanted so it's not so clinical to fit into one clinical definition, such as cerebral palsy or autism, or the other. It gives it a broader focus, and it broadens, in my view, the assessment tools that can be available.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Chairman, I like what the minister has to say. It's been the primary concern of parents that I've been involved with that it's a yes/no kind of decision decided by someone at the top. If the intent is to go to building more of a panel of caregivers and those who've been directly responsible for the child, I would very much support that as a way of deciding for these children. I'm not saying that the parent has to be involved at every step of the discussion, but they have to have some input and then more than one person analyzing the data and being a part of the decision-making process.

I still hope that there's an appeal process. I would expect that at the very least we could appeal directly to you if the situation arose, but it seems to me that I'm pretty satisfied with this bill, and I'll be supporting it.

Ms Evans: Well, I could just make one observation. One of the things that has been problematic for many of the parents with children requiring support is that they've had to go right through the child welfare appeal process. They have spoken to me through the consultations and said: "Why can't we have an administrative appeal process where there's a resolution to the situation without putting them through unnecessary legal and emotional constraints? Sometimes the child has a lapse in delivery of care during this period." I agree wholeheartedly, so we will also be looking at that so that where people have a concern, ultimately, obviously, the Child Welfare Appeal Panel is there, but we should be able to resolve most of those concerns up front within the department resources as well as the director of child welfare.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I also have a question that's similar to the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie's, and that's with regard to children with disabilities that may be considered chronic and not permanent. For example, I have a situation in my constituency. I recently sent a letter to the minister. I have a mother of a very young child in my constituency who has a very chronic disability. They're basically one hundred per cent disabled, but there is possibly a cure 10 or 12 years down the road. So the mother was concerned that perhaps with some of these changes this child would be cut off, and as I read the bill, I don't think that this child would be cut off. I know that in the discussion guide it seemed to talk about a permanent disability versus a chronic disability, so I'm wondering if once again the minister would just clarify that.

The other question that I have, Mr. Chairman, for the minister is: is there any kind of a grandfathering clause for those families who are currently receiving support for a child who may be affected by this definition change?

Ms Evans: Mr. Chairman, I think that through the process of looking at the legislation there may be some concerns that have been raised by parents who haven't had an opportunity to talk to someone in Children's Services or somebody above the definition of their caregiver or their social worker. There's not an intent to use this new legislation to be more restrictive for parents in receiving services, and for anybody that might feel that that has come forward, no, that's certainly not the intent.

I think that what you have to recognize and what so often hasn't been recognized in the past is that when you have a disability – and let's take a disability like cerebral palsy – you're not going to grow out of it. You might change; circumstances might change. There might be some clinical redefinition of your own particular capacity to deal with what you've got, but too often in the past, in the way of making sure that we were being accountable in the service delivery for children with disabilities, there were frequent assessments and there were certain sunset periods for re-evaluation, and parents have found this sometimes to the point of ridiculous; you know, in six months you will have another assessment and so on. So when something is chronic and has been defined medically to be chronic – well, it's chronic in terms of a health definition – it becomes a permanent disability in terms of the Children's Services definition. It becomes something where we will be, I think, compelled and rightfully so to provide supports for the delivery of services that are age appropriate for that child.

I very much appreciate when members do come forward with some of these circumstances, as other hon. members have done in the past, where parents might have some temerity because of this flux of decision-making to come forward. We will be in Red Deer later this month actually doing another parental review of the terms of the new legislation, going through the discussion guide, but the most important thing we'll be doing, Mr. Chairman, is going and sitting with those parents with, hopefully, a compassionate ear to see: have we got the right program in place, is this being able to help that parent with this disability, and are we making a positive difference?

I thank the hon. member for his question.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I welcome the opportunity to rise and ask a question of the minister and make some comments. Not too many years ago this minister stood up in this House and made a commitment to all members that if they did have difficulties with a situation involving children to certainly give her a call and she would personally look into it. On the occasions that I have done that, you and your department have done a marvellous job, and I thank you very much for that.

One of the cases that I did talk to the minister about was a family with children with multiple disabilities. In fact, one of the children had died from one of their disabilities. I had a call from the father again last week, and we've been talking. We talked again today. He has a struggle because it is a huge, huge responsibility for him and his wife to take care of handicapped children, children with many disabilities. Along with that struggle, he also is having troubles at the end of the month when he submits receipts for these children that have been cleared for a number of months and then all of a sudden he's denied again, so he has to go back and fight the same battle over and over.

Now, then, in this particular case he did go back. Everything is now taken care of, but he's tired. He's very tired of having to go through the same process over and over. So his question to me today was: you know, I fear the end of the month. Is there any way that we can get consistency in a case so that someone who is in his position and clearly has children with identifiable multiple disabilities does not have to fight the system month in and month out, doesn't have to worry about whether things are going to be approved or not approved? This is what his question was of me today. I told him we'd have an opportunity to talk to you today and that I would get back to him, so if you have any comments, I'm sure he'd be more than welcome to hear them.

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Chairman, if you've ever lived for a week on five baked potatoes and half a loaf of bread and tried to make sure you have enough money for your kids, you understand the absolute ridiculousness of having to wait for a government cheque to cover the costs of a child who has a handicap. So I will give my word to the member opposite that if I can find out who that is, we will make sure that we do something to make sure that these processes change, because that is not the intent. That is not what should happen, and if that does happen, I think we have to know about it. Our practice should not be to punish people or put them through the wringer and make them worry about the end of the month and whether or not they can pay that respite caregiver for their child. I thank you for bringing that forward, and I fully understand the problem and will get it solved.

[The clauses of Bill 5 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 11
Alberta Personal Income Tax
Amendment Act, 2004

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say that the amendments that were brought forward in second reading and now in Committee of the Whole will just make technical changes to the provincial legislation so that it stays consistent with federal legislation. There are also technical changes for clarification purposes and changes to ensure consistency with the current administration.

I think that's all I need to say, Mr. Chairman.

[The clauses of Bill 11 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report bills 5 and 11.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Ms Graham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following: bills 5 and 11. That's the report.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I would move that we adjourn until 8 tonight.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:46 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, February 24, 2004 8:00 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/24
 [The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good evening. Please be seated. Before proceeding with the Routine, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour this evening to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 10 members of Toastmasters International who are seated in the members' gallery. I'd like to acknowledge each of them by name and ask them to stand as I call their names. They are Gordon King, Judy Dunn, Kevin Wenger, Barb Williams, David Paré, Ron Chapman, Peter Kossowan, Sharon Ferguson, and Tina and Wiggert Hessels. As I said, they are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask everyone to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, my guests haven't arrived so if I can just wait a bit and then introduce them.
 Thank you.

The Speaker: Okay.
 The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly someone who is becoming very well known here in this Assembly, and that's Melanie Shapiro. She's here this evening along with two other people from Windsor Park school: the school council chair, Linda Telgarsky, and a parent, Scott Delinger. They are here because they're concerned about the quality of and funding for public education offered to their children. I'd ask them to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 1 Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

[Adjourned debate February 23: Mr. Mason]

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to make some comments at second reading with respect to Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act. It's a bill that I'm reluctant not to support. I'm reluctant for a couple of reasons. One, I think anything that will bring some additional resources into the cash-starved postsecondary system at least must be looked at critically, and I guess at another time and place I would have supported it. I think anything that will help overburdened students who are facing great tuition increases – we've seen the case of Red Deer College where since 2001 tuition there will have increased 24 per cent by this September – and anything that would offer some relief to their parents and guardians who are trying to finance postsecondary education I suppose we should support.

We are in second reading, obligated to look at the principles that seem to rest under the bills that are before us, and one of the principles that seems to have been important in the drafting of Bill 1 is the need to encourage more high school graduates to go on to gain postsecondary qualifications of some kind. I think that's an admirable principle to have in place, but it seems to me that before we get too carried away with that principle, we have an obligation to make sure that the students we now have in high school finish that high school education, and our record with respect to that in this province, Mr. Speaker, is not going to be envied. There are a large number of students, a high percentage, 30 per cent plus, who never do finish high school, so any thought of them immediately going on to a postsecondary education and being able to take advantage of the provisions of Bill 1 I think is fairly remote.

Part of the problem, of course, is that we and our high schools have failed to really establish the kinds of standards that we want met and, secondly, to have one to put those standards in place, to adequately fund those high schools. I look at other jurisdictions and how they have approached the whole problem of high school completion, and it differs dramatically from the kinds of things that we're doing. I look at states like Oregon, Maryland, and Wyoming, and they have taken steps, very deliberate steps, to increase the number of students that complete high school and are thus eligible for postsecondary education programs.

The programs they have put in place have not been inexpensive. The Oregon model, which would have as a standard 90 per cent of their 12th grade students being able to accept a suitable standard on a reading test, has required that they put into place summer programs for students, that they hire students for high schools, that they hire additional teachers, that they work and put more resources into professional development, that they reduce the number of class sizes, but it's all in this effort to have high school students complete their programs. The state of Wyoming, south of us, has in place as their adequacy that every high school student must be eligible for a postsecondary program on completion of high school. So that would be a vocational program, an extended education program of some kind, a technical or university or college program. They have to leave high school qualified for that. As I said, we have a long way to go.

So as important as it is that we encourage more high school graduates to go on, as Bill 1 would purport to do, the prior program is to make sure that those high school students get out of high school so that they're eligible for some of the provisions that are found in Bill 1.

Another principle that I would think we would want to follow in any legislation that we propose in this province is that it needs to be fair to all Alberta students. In the year 2005 there will be 40,000, I guess the estimate is, babies born who will be centennial babies and eligible for the Alberta centennial education savings plan. That leave a whole lot of Alberta students who have been born in the last 20 years who are not eligible, and this seems to violate the principle of an act being fair to all Alberta students and treating all Albertans the same way. For a number of students and for their parents, for the pre-2005 babies, centennial year is going to, I suspect, be known as the year that they were left out, that there were provisions made for students born in 2005 that they were not eligible for. So in terms of a test of fairness to all Alberta students it seems to me that Bill 1 misses the mark.

We had discussed an amendment, Mr. Speaker, that would have made it retroactive to 1982 and thus made it fair so that all Albertans would have access to it. Of course, given the provisions of that bill, that amendment was impossible for us to make, but I still think it is the kind of consideration that the government should give in terms of truly celebrating the centennial of the province, by making sure that whatever is done is fair and that all Alberta students are treated equally under the law.

The third principle that I think is important is that whatever is enacted needs to be open to all Albertans, and if you look at the history of registered education savings plans in the province, those plans are accessed primarily by parents and families that have middle-income or upper-income salaries. People who are barely getting by, who are at the lower end of the socioeconomic scale, do not access these kinds of programs and for very good reasons. They don't have the kind of money that's needed to put away for the future of their children. Again, it seems to be a bill that is designed and targeted at a certain economic group in the province while excluding another economic group. So, again, I would suggest that in terms of fairness, Mr. Speaker, the bill has some shortcomings.

I have fears that by making this proposal, there may be an attempt to substitute an action like we see in Bill 1 for properly funding postsecondary education in the province, that the more of the burden that can be shifted to parents and to students, the less obligation the government feels to properly finance and plan for the financing of those institutions. If you look at the history, Mr. Speaker, of the last 20 years of financing postsecondary education in this province, there's been a massive withdrawal of provincial government funds from the system. The president of the University of Alberta gave some figures that they reported to the public recently and indicated that 20 years ago a dollar that students put in in terms of tuition was matched by $10 from the government and today for every dollar that a student puts in, that's now matched by only $2.34, so a massive withdrawal of support for postsecondary programs.

I would really fear that by putting something like this in place, the message to parents is that you are going to pay more and more of the freight, so you better start getting ready for it now, and I don't think that is the role or the proper stance for a government that purports to support education the way that this government does. So, again, the fear that this not become a substitute for properly funding postsecondary schools and shifting more and more of the load to parents.

I looked at the Hansard, and I was disturbed. I guess I've heard it twice in the last little while now that today's problems are being described as potholes in the road. I heard it again earlier this afternoon, and I don't believe that the problems surrounding the financing of postsecondary education today can be called just a pothole, Mr. Speaker. I think it's a major rupture in the highway.

Mr. Speaker, I think the bill would have been looked on much more friendly had there been some attempt to put in place a long-term plan, and I know the provincial government shouldn't have to do this on its own. There's an obligation from the federal government to be involved, and it's not a problem that's peculiar to Alberta. Across this country provinces are all facing similar difficulties with funding postsecondary education, yet none of us seems to have come to grips with putting in place a long-term plan that would see adequate resources in place so that we don't have a yearly outrage with the kinds of tuitions that have to be levied against students and the kinds of cuts that are having to be made at institutions because they don't have adequate resources to carry on the programs and to accommodate the students that appear at their door. So, again, this would be much more palatable were there such a plan in place.

In the preamble the government states that "it recognizes the benefits of post-secondary education," and that being true, Mr. Speaker, I wonder with the kind of emphasis we've heard from the ministry with respect to the individual benefits that students derive from having attended a postsecondary program if there might not be some more emphasis in terms of how the total community benefits from having students enrolled in postsecondary and being successful in postsecondary programs. It goes back almost to the kind of argument we often get in our constituency office by some people who insist that they shouldn't have to pay one or another of the taxes in the province, that you can treat democracy as a bit of a cafeteria and pick and choose those services that you want to pay for, but that's not true.

If the government truly did recognize the benefits of a postsecondary education, I think that they would be trying to underline not just the individual benefits for the students that complete those programs but how we as a total community benefit from that in terms of qualified health personnel, engineers to build our highways, nurses, teachers, qualified people in almost every profession, and that we're all the benefactors. To single out the students and try to somehow or other construe the situation so that students should be held accountable for financing education on their own I think misses the point of what it means to have an educated citizenry.

So I think, Mr. Speaker, that those are my major concerns as we look at Bill 1. I'm pleased that the government would look to education as a way of marking the centennial. It's an investment in the future, but I think that also we have an obligation to make sure that if the government is going to make that investment, it's done fairly and that it's done to the benefit of all students in this province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) now provides for a five-minute question and comment period if individual members would like to participate. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've always had a great deal of respect for the hon. member that just spoke. He always brings some thought to what he says, and I want to thank him for that, because it's not just a bunch of political rhetoric that we've been hearing from some other members.

One of the areas that he seems to be concerned with – and I'll be very brief on these comments – is that there may be some exclusions or targeting at the middle and upper classes. I must say yet again that there are essentially a number of ways in which we can make sure that even the most disadvantaged people in this province can qualify for this. However, we do have to wait to see what the Prime Minister will do with respect to what he's announced, which is providing a grant for low-income children to be able to get into RESPs. So I can just assure you that there is no targeting to the middle or upper class, and I thank you for your comments.

Mrs. O'Neill: Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak to the bill.

The Speaker: Well, we're still under the Standing Order provision, so I'll have to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona first, but I noticed the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member mentioned early in his comments that we need to be sure that all Alberta students complete high school, and I think that that's a very reasonable and achievable goal. However, some of the numbers that he quoted are historical numbers. I had a question, and I wondered if the hon. member could elaborate a bit on whether or not it's been a rather common practice for a reasonable number of young students to leave grade 10 or 11 to take up trades where they're qualified to enter at that level. Also, are there or have there been a reasonable number of returning students that upgrade in conjunction with their trade's entry so that, in fact, they are completing and getting a postsecondary education but perhaps not in the manner to which the member alluded?

Dr. Massey: I guess that the first point I would make, Mr. Speaker, is that I believe a high school education is now the minimum standard that we should expect from young people in the province. I can remember the time when leaving school at 10th grade and even at eighth grade in this province was acceptable. That bar has been moved up for a number of years, and in my mind we should be getting everyone to an acceptable level of high school graduation.

What the member indicates in terms of students leaving and going out and working or gaining a trade – I think that, yes, it has been a practice. I am not privy to those numbers. But having said that, I would still feel more comfortable with our goal of getting every student through high school with a diploma and then to set them into the workplace.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others? I had recognized the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to the most important bill for this session, Bill 1, Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act, introduced by the Premier of the province of Alberta.

The discussion of the bill must be put in the context of the challenges that public education both at the K to grade 12 level and beyond has faced on the watch of this Premier and his government. We have seen over the last 10, 12 years, Mr. Speaker, the underfunding of education in this province grow more severe, creating absolutely huge problems at the classroom level from kindergarten all the way up to grade 12. It's during this same period that we have seen the tuition fees in the postsecondary sector skyrocket.

Student debt burdens have become crushingly heavy for most of our students. Furthermore, many students who graduated from high school over the last several years now have to ask themselves if postsecondary education is accessible to them, not in terms of whether or not there are enough spaces in our institutes and colleges or universities but because of the amount of money that it costs every year thanks to the unending rise in the tuition fees and other associated costs of going on to postsecondary education. Many of those students, the high school students and graduates, have been turned away because of the fear of the debt loads, the enormous costs, the unbearable costs from their point of view, to go to school.

So that is the context, Mr. Speaker. It's also, I think, worth reminding ourselves that the crisis in our education system, caused by chronic and continued underfunding and the government's deliberate policy to not only allow but, in fact, encourage annual increases in the tuition fee rates across this province, has caused enormous, enormous problems and hardships. We had the spectacle of one of the largest teachers' strikes in this province less than two years ago, leading to the bill which returned them to work and imposed an arbitration settlement on them. It was the act of this Legislature, an act that was initiated by this government, which resulted in the arbitration award. Yet the government at the end of the day decided to walk away from accepting the consequences of the arbitration award that was mandated by its own legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that's receiving a great deal of attention across the province. I notice that even tonight there are concerned citizens, parents, students, and others who are sitting in the members' gallery and perhaps a few in the public gallery who are here to watch us debate the so-called flagship bill of this government. They also know that this is perhaps the kind of bill that one would only see in the final stages of the election cycle that's upon us now. Now the government is beginning to worry about the fallout of its three years of policies, which have meant, as I said, a great deal of hardship and denial of opportunity and accessibility for close to 50 per cent of the population of young men and women in this province who have to look at the bill associated with going to school every year before they make a decision. In many cases, unfortunately, they have made the decision to forgo the opportunity to go to postsecondary institutions because they have concluded that they can't afford the cost of going to school.

There have been campaigns run by college students, technical institute students, university students over the last year to convince this government that it's about time to put a halt to its regressive policies of substantial tuition increases every year, where postsecondary institutions, because of the manner in which they are funded year after year, are told – and there are clear signals that they read in the government's policy – that they must raise at least 30 per cent of their operating revenues from tuition fees and associated user fees that are the experience of students in postsecondary institutions from year to year, from month to month.

So there is public interest, a great deal of public interest, in this bill, because the hope was that at least during this year, the year before the centennial year of the province begins, the new century that the province will be entering, this government will take a bold step forward and first of all realize that its own policies have created huge barriers to open opportunity for all in this province. Therefore, they were expecting that this government as a matter of contrition and generosity would start the new century of this province with a clear statement that it's going to freeze the tuition fees because they're already beginning to discourage lots of young men and women who are Albertans, whose families have paid taxes in this province and continue to pay taxes, from moving forward.

We know that the next century, Mr. Speaker, in this province and in this country and in the world in which we live is going to be the century of those jurisdictions, those provinces, those societies, those communities which invest generously in creating opportunities for people who are going to transform our society into a creative society. By denying that opportunity, either inadvertently or deliberately – and the latter is the case in the case of this government's policies – to people to become more creative by taking advantage, to the best of their ability, of the opportunities that postsecondary education experience provides, regardless of whether it's in the arts, whether it's in the field of culture, whether it's in the field of sciences or humanities, that experience is absolutely essential to the production of a substantial proportion of our society's people who have the special creative ability on which the successful societies of the future, of the next century in this province, and other places are going to have to depend in order to remain prosperous, in order to flourish.

So, Mr. Speaker, Bill 1 is seen for what it is by people, including among them some who are sitting on the government side of the benches, as no more than an opportunistic move to do no more than make a symbolic gesture to give the appearance and to create the perception that this government cares about postsecondary education for young people.

This particular bill, Mr. Speaker, if passed by this Legislature, will begin to put some money in the registered educational plans of those students who have the good fortune of having families who have the economic capacity and the foresight to start some sort of registered education plans for their children, but only those who will be fortunate to be born next year and born only to families which will have that capacity to start the registered plans will be able to provide this advantage. Remember, we are talking about $500 next year and $300 over the next several years that a child who is born next year would get.

In the meantime, tuition fees at our universities increase by at least $250 to $275 a year. The so-called advantage that this bill creates, even for those who will be born only during the year 2005 and after, is an illusory advantage. The tuition fees by the time the advantages of this particular bill will begin to flow to the students will be – one will have to wait for close to 20 years. Eighteen years from next year, Mr. Speaker, is the first time that the provisions of this bill will in any way influence or help or assist students who want to seek postsecondary education in this province.

What happens to those who were born on December 31 of this year? What happens to those who are born on January 1, 2006, or the ones who were born a year ago? What happens to those thousands who are in kindergarten classes this year, who started school this year and will be ready to go to postsecondary schools 12 years from now? Why are they being excluded?

This bill is extremely discriminatory, Mr. Speaker: discrimination based on age, discrimination based inadvertently on family income and family capacity. We know that close to 45 to 50 per cent of the families in Canada and in Alberta I'm sure too do not start registered educational savings plans for their children. The reason is very simple. Why don't they do it? Because they cannot afford it.

So what happens to that 45 to 50 per cent of the families with children who are either in school this year or were born last year and the year before? As the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster said, he is going to talk about the children who were born before 2005, and there are lots of them. To exclude them from any consideration shows how opportunistic this bill is, how flawed this bill is.

Mr. Speaker, it's a bill that also I think draws attention to the indifference with which this government, this Premier and his cabinet and his colleagues in the caucus, have dealt with the complaints, the requests, the pressure that comes from parents, that comes from students to make changes in their commitment to continued underfunding of our educational institutions. If a government that's using our taxpayers' money decides to underfund and withhold money from our institutions and then requires our students to pay more as they want to go to school and then turns around and for children starting next year says, "We're going to give you a little bit of money, the advantages of which will be cancelled in two year's time by the increase in tuition fees," I think it's making a statement which doesn't deserve our support. This is a bill that needs to be defeated; this is a bill that needs to be withdrawn, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) goes into effect. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is a member of the opposition, and we understand that there is a valid role to play in opposition in opposing if for no other reason than that the member is in opposition. But I would ask the member opposite to reflect on Bill 1 and the capacity that Bill 1 has to inculcate a sense within families that postsecondary education is an important element of life and of family responsibility. Is it not appropriate, whenever we can as a government and as a people, to look beyond the horizon?

It would have been nice if 18 years ago those of us in the Legislature had recognized this as a potential need, and the people entering university today could benefit from it. But would it not, Mr. Speaker, be appropriate that 18 years from now citizens of Alberta will look back and say: "My goodness. Am I ever glad that that Legislature had the foresight and the vision to look beyond the horizon to do what was right for future generations of Albertans?"

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Speaker, looking beyond the horizon is a matter of political will. In this province to wait for 18 years before delivering any benefits to anybody in fact makes a big statement about the lack of capacity to look beyond the horizon. To look beyond the horizon next year, in my view, would be an act of courage on the part of the government, and that would be, I think, demonstrated if this government said, "Starting next year we're going to freeze the tuition fees in this province," and that's where, I think, the horizon lies, not 18 years from now. It's next year, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'm wondering if the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona understands the inherent contradiction in the argument that he put forward with respect to this bill when he says that it was brought forward as an election ploy and talks about it being an election ploy and then says that it won't actually have effect for 18 years.

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Speaker, this government sort of relies on its ability to create illusions – to create illusions – and I never underestimate the capacity of this government to be able to do that. It spent $4.2 billion just three years ago to create a similar illusion. It became very generous, opened the purse strings, won the election, came back into the Legislature; within weeks after the election was done and over with, it began talking about fiscal constraints again. It began to draw attention to the fact that we are at a very serious risk of running into fiscal problems.

So, Mr. Speaker, there's no contradiction as far as I'm concerned. It is an attempt to create an illusion that this government is now changing its mind, that it's changed its heart, that in fact it is committed to funding public education adequately.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's no illusion in giving each and every child born in Alberta $800 towards their postsecondary education.

My question for the hon. member is this: if he thinks it would be better to take this proposal off the table and not give the children any money towards their postsecondary education, then why doesn't he stand up and say that?

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Speaker, I stand up for freezing of the tuition fees starting with this budget, this year. I ask the member to consider the alternative, not to engage in empty rhetoric but in fact pay attention to the alternative proposal that I put on the table, and that is to freeze tuition fees for everyone. That will give a great deal of hope to children already in school, young people already in universities and colleges, and parents who are planning to have a family.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, are you participating?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Somewhat.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you. Well, Mr. Speaker, speaking of empty rhetoric, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in the course of his comments indicated that health care, among others, was chronically underfunded. At present, health care is funded to the tune of 36 per cent of the budget expenditures. It's been going up at more than twice . . .

The Speaker: I regretfully interrupt the hon. member to say that time has now expired on this segment.

Before I call on the hon. Member for St. Albert, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Speaker: Well, the hon. Solicitor General first, to be followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, to be followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to stand up and introduce three gentlemen who have given their heart and soul over the last few days working very, very hard. I understand that members of the Assembly have had the opportunity to meet these gentlemen and be prodded and needled by them, and they've done a really good job. Mr. Speaker, I know that this is an initiative that you've put forward from your office, and I thank you for that. I'd like to introduce to you, if I may, please, Gary Payne from the Calgary fire department, Dennis Tario from EMS Calgary, and Dennis Rabel from the Calgary fire department. I'll ask everybody here to give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Through you to members of the Assembly. I understand that in the members' gallery tonight is a lady by the name of Anita Sherman, who has two children at McKernan elementary junior high school. She's here as part of Education Watch, and her duty here tonight is to observe the affairs of the Legislature as it relates to education. Through her we want to acknowledge not just Education Watch, but the Whitemud Coalition and others who have done great service from a citizen perspective in education and do so on a continuing basis. We would ask all members to give them the traditional welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sitting with us today in the members' gallery are two friends of mine, an employee of Economic Development Edmonton, Mr. Chris O'Brien, and his sister visiting us from British Columbia, Ms O'Brien. I would like both of them to rise and accept the usual warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

Second Reading

Bill 1
Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to stand here this evening in this Assembly and speak to the merits and the strength of Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act.

I'm going to speak to it as the representative, of course, of the community and the constituency of St. Albert, but first I'd like to profile for the Assembly a number of characteristics of my community. Contrary to the provincial average I would point out the fact that in St. Albert more than 80 per cent of our high school students complete their high school certification. That's a very nice number. We want to make it a hundred per cent.

Indeed, a good portion of those students who do graduate, the incredible number of them, go on to postsecondary education. So to speak to the benefits of postsecondary education, as is the first item in the preamble of this bill, I know that my community and those young high school students who work so hard to accomplish so much in high school by attaining a number of Rutherford scholarships, by earning a number of Jason Lang scholarships, by receiving a number of Louise McKinney scholarships, by being the recipients of a number of bursaries that they apply for, and by being attendees and active students in a number of our technical and community college institutions as well do see the value of a postsecondary education.

It was not so long ago that a high school certificate was considered sufficient to enter into the adult world of independence. It was truly appreciated as a ticket, if you will, to be able to gain and to work at a job that required that level of education. But that's no longer true. In fact, if you read some studies, you will find that it's not only one degree or one postsecondary certificate, but it's two and perhaps three that are the tickets that are encouraging people in the workforce these days to move ahead. When I speak to the benefits of postsecondary education, I must say that I'm very pleased that on the whole my community embraces the idea of a postsecondary education and its value in particular, of course.

I'm going to speak a little bit to the bias that I have. I am not a science major. I'm not an engineer, nor would I dare say even that my strength was in the study of math and science. But I do feel that there is a great deal to be gained by individuals who go to a postsecondary institution, take courses of a liberal arts nature, and learn further to hone their skills of critical thinking, of creative expression, and their ability to think beyond the traditional patterns or the skills that are required to practice certain professions. I do believe in this idea, this appreciation of postsecondary education, in whichever form it is.

I'd like to pay tribute to those who are engaged as apprentices, learning in particular and working alongside very skilled tradesfolk in our province. Indeed, they contribute not only to the economy and to the progress in this province and in this country, but they also contribute to the quality of life, to the strength of our communities, and to, I would say also, the volunteer aspect that so generously builds our communities either through the school communities or through any of the other activities that we engage in.

When the bill highlights as its first preamble “whereas the Government of Alberta recognizes the benefits of post-secondary education,” it leads into the second whereas of the bill that says that the Alberta government also “wishes to raise awareness of the benefits of post-secondary education among children and their parents.” This raising of awareness of the value of it is exactly the reason why Bill 1 is so important to me and to this government. It is to raise the awareness among our families that this is a wonderful investment in the minds of their children, a wonderful investment in the economy of this province, and a truly wonderful investment in the quality of individuals whom we wish to lead this province right through this second century of our membership in the great nation of Canada.

Raising awareness also asks for a buy-in, and that buy-in is that the parents will establish an educational savings plan to which the people of Alberta will contribute along with the immediate beneficiaries, being the family of the children born in the second century of this province. That buy-in engages all of us in participating and engaging in building the future as we envision it to be or as we envision its potential to be. So that’s why I think this bill is a call – a clarion call, I’d even say – to those families who will become participants. In the case of my family when our children started earning a little bit of money, they were able to add into their education savings plan, and they were able to participate in what they would ultimately enjoy, and that is a postsecondary education and all that that brings with it.

Many years ago and perhaps many lifetimes ago, I taught a very dead language called Latin, and one of the pieces of poetry that I had the students memorize included that phrase “carpe diem.” Why I had them memorize that particular ode was simply: it expressed the willingness of the author, certainly the instruction or the exhortation of the poet to other people, to seize the opportunity of the day. I think that’s exactly what Bill 1 exhorts the people of Alberta to do, and that is to seize the opportunity to invest wisely, appropriately, and broadly in the future of this wonderful province.

Contrary to what other people like to think that I think, I will tell you what I think, and that is that this bill is genuinely directed to assist Albertans in planning for the future, and it’s doing it with our most precious resource, our young children, and building for their future and their children’s future. I commend the sentiments that have driven this bill to become an issue of debate, and ultimately I trust it will become an act and a statute of this province. It does not only dictate from the government to the people; it also asks the people to be involved in enacting the true spirit and intention of this bill, which is investing in our young people for the future.

Something else has been mentioned here tonight. In fact, it was mentioned too often that this is not a fair bill, so I’d like to speak to the fairness of this bill as I see it. Many years ago when I was younger, when I was griping about my brother getting something and I didn’t get it because he was older and I was younger, my mother said to me: you better remember that life isn’t fair. And it isn’t fair in many ways. It’s our responsibility to infuse so much of what we do with a sense of equity of opportunity.

So for those who dismiss it as not being fair in their minds, I would say that then they should take that to its logical conclusion and say that it isn’t fair that some of us grew up without the advantages of medicare, that it isn’t fair that some of the people in this land grew up without having a postsecondary education institution to go to. This whole question of fairness needs to be analyzed in the context in which we address issues today. Quite frankly, I’m tired of this diatribe about this bill not looking after and not fairly treating children born before January 1, 2005. It just, indeed, is not applicable when we analyze the strength of this particular bill.

If there is any group of citizens whom this bill does address, I’m going to say that it is what some people feel is the forgotten group, the middle class. It addresses and asks the middle class, if you want to classify people, which I think is not fair and not right, but if you want to do that – this bill gives people who value education, who want to invest in it, the opportunity to do so for their children who will be born and will be learning in the next century of this province.

So I do feel that, yes, it does require the families and, I’m going to say, when they get a little bit older, the young people themselves to participate and be partners with the government in this investment. We will all benefit through that, but it does mean that they’re going to have to identify their priorities. For many of us, putting aside some money to contribute to the cost of postsecondary education is a very high priority within our family budgets.

This bill I choose to laud for its raising of awareness and for its responsiveness to the fact that the province, the people of Alberta, will be contributing to the depth and the breadth of knowledge and education of those citizens who will build this province for the next century.

So, Mr. Speaker, Bill 1 gives us the opportunity to be there when possibly some of us didn’t have that opportunity. It gives us the opportunity now to look to the future and not cry over spilled milk or the so-called unfairness of other circumstances that people might have found themselves in.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. But, hon. member, you’ve already participated, according to my notes.

Ms Blakeman: Are we not on Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

The Speaker: Oh, yes, we certainly are. Standing Order 29(2)(a). Please proceed. Absolutely.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you so much. My question to the Member for St. Albert, given her comments on Bill 1, is: how does she reconcile the comments that are made by her colleague the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster that we heard in this Assembly the other day on exactly the same bill giving very much the opposite argument? How does she reconcile that from within her own caucus?

Mrs. O’Neill: Mr. Speaker, I speak for myself. As I said here when I rose, I am speaking as a representative of the people of the constituency of St. Albert and representing them. They are a very astute group of citizens, let me tell you, and I will continue to speak on their behalf.

The Speaker: There’s still time for 29(2)(a). Additional participants? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs on the Standing Order 29 provision?

Mr. Lukaszuk: No.

The Speaker: No further?

Then I’ll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs to continue with the debate on Bill 1.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the activities that I partake in as a member of this Assembly that I particularly enjoy and find utmost intrinsically rewarding is participating in the University of Alberta convocations, and I make a point of always attending as many convocations as I possibly can. What one notices when one sits on the stage looking at all the smiling faces of graduates walking by is that the group of graduates is getting older and older and represents all walks of life. There are really no trends any more to who graduates. No longer are they only young men and women who graduate from the University of Alberta, but we have, indeed, individuals who have returned to learning some time later in their lives. What it shows is that postsecondary education right now in this province is not something that you do right after you get out of high school, but very often many of us go on and acquire some life experiences and then return to postsecondary education. That is a fact of life, and that Albertans can enjoy this is a good thing.

Now, if one were to follow the train of thought that seems to be arising on the opposition benches, one would imagine that they would be proposing, as a matter of fact, never mind imagining, that we now make this bill retroactive and somehow retroactively apply the monies, the dollars, which are being now afforded to the children who will be born in 2005 to anyone and everyone who convocates from the University of Alberta, who can be perhaps 50, 60, or even 70 years old. I think any rational thinker would imagine that that is simply ludicrous. You can't go retroactively 50, 60, 70 years, but what you can do is make learning for the people who will be entering the University of Alberta more affordable and more accessible into the future. Indeed, if monies were not an object and if monies were not a finite number that this government has to deal with, we could make it retroactive to any time in history and simply give everybody $800 and perhaps even the accrued interest that the children will enjoy in the future. Simply, that is not logical, and I hope that that's not what the opposition is proposing.

As someone who has had the privilege of obtaining postsecondary education and as someone who has funded his own education in the past, I can tell you that I would have been very appreciative to know that my government has invested in my future and has had the foresight, 18 years prior to my enrolment into school, to put some dollars aside so that I can not only enjoy the principal of the dollars but also the accrued interest to make my studies that much more accessible and easier into the future. Unfortunately, when I and many of my peers entered university, all the members of this Assembly, the governments of the past didn't have that foresight. This government does, and I believe 18 years from now when young adults are entering the U of A or the U of C or any technical institution in this province, they will be quite glad to know that this government right now has had that foresight and invested today's dollars into tomorrow's future, because let's face it. Our economy and the whole future of Alberta is based on learning, and it is based on knowledge.

I see a lot of skeptical faces across the floor, and I know that they're more than eager to criticize this bill. Somehow I have a feeling that most of them will be voting in favour of this bill when the vote drops, but I stand to be corrected. Perhaps it will be an interesting exercise to review the Hansard less than a month from now.

One thing that is missing, Mr. Speaker, is even though the members from both of the opposition parties are so eager to criticize this bill – they say: lack of foresight, unfair, it's not equal. I know that the NDP feels that everybody should be equally poor. I'm not sure about the Liberals, but they definitely believe in this intrinsic value of equality. Whether it's good or bad, it has to be equal. I have yet to hear one comment that would be constructive and tell us, if they were the government, which, granted, probably won't happen, will never happen, what they would do. What amendments would they bring to this bill to make it more fair, more palatable, and even better for Albertans and the young adults of the future? I haven't heard one thing. All I heard is that it is not fair, and if it's not fair, say how you would correct it.

Indeed, any legislation that has passed through any Legislature may have some intrinsic unfairness, and our role as legislators is to minimize that unfairness to any degree that's possible. It would be absolutely Utopian to feel that we can pass legislation in this House that is patently fair and can stand any test of fairness and then satisfy any Albertan no matter what walk of life they may come from or whenever they have been born.

So I challenge the opposition that if they honestly feel that this piece of legislation is so patently unfair, either (a) come up with constructive criticism or (b) stand up, go on the record and say that we oppose this and we don't want Alberta's children born after January 1, 2005, to receive the $800 from this province. Perhaps the opposition will do so.

I thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: To speak, Mr. Speaker, not for questions.

The Speaker: We still have provisions, though, for the questions and comments sector.

Then the hon. Government House Leader. Oh, sorry. Does the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry have a question?

Mr. Bonner: No. I was going to speak.

The Speaker: No. We've already recognized the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that I'm an incredibly fortunate individual to be here today, to be an Albertan, to be a Canadian, to have the opportunity to speak my mind on any subject that I'd like to speak my mind on at virtually any time, to have the freedom to participate in debate, and all of that comes because I was extremely fortunate to be born to parents who believed in education.

In 1936 a young lady of 24 years of age left Edmonton and journeyed north by train to Peace River and then got on a boat and went down the Peace River to the hamlet of Fort Vermilion to teach school. When I think of what my mother went through as a young lady and think about the advantages and the privileges that we have today and think about the things that we consider to be hardships today, I just can't imagine it. She did go up there in 1936 to teach in a one-room schoolhouse, to teach children from many backgrounds, most of them First Nations, or aboriginal, native as they were called then, because Fort Vermilion was essentially a native community, and farm families as well in the Peace River district. Up there she met my dad, who had also left Edmonton as a young person to take a job with the Hudson's Bay Company, where he served for 45 years buying fur and running stores in communities and posts all over northern Canada, northern Ontario, places like Pikangikum and Sioux Lookout and Pickle Crow and Osnaburgh House, Fort Vermilion, Hazelton in northern B.C.

During the 45 years that he served in those small communities – and in many of those small communities my mother taught school – they raised seven children. I'm the youngest of those seven children. Every one of those seven children has a postsecondary education, and whether it was from the U of A or from NAIT or SAIT, we have that postsecondary education because our parents cared vitally about education and believed vitally that the most important thing they could give their children and the most important thing they could do was to ensure that their children had a good education. I have that belief from them and, in fact, that belief in the necessity for a good education for all citizens, particularly a good liberal arts education, but then the ability to move on was something that we needed to have as a fundamental to our society and our community.

So I am absolutely delighted that in our strategic plan as it's going to be unfolded we put such an emphasis on leading in learning and that vital component of education in our system and how that leading in learning is used in unleashing innovation. I think it's important because it builds on that concept that Albertans have always had of self-reliance, of taking care of your family and contributing to your community and that value that many of our parents – not just my own because I don't think my parents were unique in this – placed on ensuring that their children were well-educated and had that opportunity for the future because, Mr. Speaker, education lays the foundation for the future, not only for future jobs but also for a life rich with and open to all kinds of opportunity.

When the throne speech introduced what I consider to be a truly great initiative, the Alberta centennial education savings plan, which is now the subject of Bill 1, to mark Alberta's 100th birthday with a new program that encourages parents to save for their children's future education, I think that that was a fundamental, far-sighted step in the right direction to encourage all Albertans to have that opportunity that I've had, that opportunity to be the best you can be, to contribute in the best way you possibly can.

This legislation, Mr. Speaker, will encourage parents to set up educational savings plans for their children, RESPs, and in return government will invest $500 at birth and three payments of $100 over the years to encourage that continuing saving towards education, that continuing commitment towards education, that continuing understanding that education is fundamentally one of the most important things that we as parents – because I am a parent now – can deliver for our children and can do to make sure that our children succeed.

The government's contribution to the RESP is clearly not going to cover all of a child's tuition. Tuitions go up. Costs go up. That's not the intention. The intention isn't to cover all the costs of an education, but it does provide a foundation, Mr. Speaker, a starting point upon which parents and children can build over the years. More importantly, because it starts at the child's birth, it encourages people to think strategically and to work towards the long-term goal of having that most important postsecondary education.

As we move from a carbon-based economy, from a commodity-based economy to a knowledge-based economy, the gap between those who have and those who do not have is going to get wider and wider. The only way we can narrow that gap, the only way we can ensure that there is fairness in society, the only way we can ensure that everyone has an opportunity to succeed and be the best they can be, is to ensure that every child has the opportunity to get a good, solid education and to have that opportunity to go to a postsecondary institution of their choice, whether it's technical or at a university, in the trades, whatever path they choose to have that opportunity to get that education so that they can not only have a job but a good-paying job, and the statistics show that people who graduate from postsecondary education have a far higher rate of employment and higher incomes than those that don't.

But it's not just about getting a job. It's not just about having that success on the economic side. It's the opportunity to have that life that's rich and open to all kinds of opportunity, that ability for Albertans to really seize any opportunity that's available to them.

So we have some who would criticize that dream, would criticize that concept that Bill 1 and the centennial education savings plan – which provides an impetus for parents to help develop, help start as soon as a child is born the concept that that child should have every opportunity to succeed. And they say that that process is unfair.

I listened to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, and like my colleague before me who commented, I like to listen when the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods speaks because there are usually some nubs of wisdom in what he says, and I believe that he's a very thoughtful contributor to debate in this House. He commented about making sure that children have the opportunity to move from high school to university. I think that Bill 1 does speak to that in the future. One of the things that we need to try and do is raise that level of encouragement for all our children in this province to move from high school into a postsecondary education of some sort so that they can be a participant in that knowledge-based economy and so that they can be successful in the future.

I think Bill 1 does speak to that kind of a dream. It doesn't create that dream in 2005 for a child that's already in school, but it does point that direction. It does make that a part of every family's life that wants to participate in it. That's not only a benefit to the children who have the educational savings plan in place, but it's also a benefit to the other children in the family when the family has that focus on education.

One of the comments that's been made – I think the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods made it, and I think the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona also indicated that not everybody has an RESP. That's true. That's another very good reason to have this bill, because this bill will encourage every family to consider opening an RESP.

I hope that every family will get a package with their birth certificate that says, "Fill in this form, and get to your local bank or institution," or wherever else they may go. "Here's where you can go. Here's how you can do it. Here's how you sign your child up. Make your modest deposit," whether it's a dollar to open it or $100. Quite frankly, I hope there's a program so that if you can't afford the dollar, you can get the dollar, because it's that important that each family open an RESP and consider starting to save for their children's education and start to put that importance on education.

The low rate of contribution to RESPs is absolutely abysmal given that the federal government in its wisdom has agreed to contribute 20 per cent of a contribution each year up to a maximum of $400. We should be encouraging more people to take advantage of that. Now, not everybody can. Not everybody can donate $2,000 to an RESP every year and achieve that $400. But we should have that opportunity for people to open their RESPs, to get the $500 contribution from the government, to make that start and to make it a focus.

There were other comments about it not being fair to all Alberta students because some students won't be able to use this because they were born before 2005. Well, Mr. Speaker, there are all sorts of programs available now that are not available to all students. The Rutherford scholarships were mentioned. They're available to students who achieve 80 per cent averages. That's a good program. I don't think anybody here would suggest that we cancel the Rutherford scholarships program because it's not available to all students. It's an excellent way of encouraging academics and encouraging students to achieve through grades 10, 11, and 12, and it provides a sum of money which will assist those students at university.

There are northern bursaries if you live in northern Alberta. I came from Fort Vermilion to go to university years ago. I didn't take advantage of a northern bursary. I wish I could have. I had to pay off my student loan over 10 years, and pay it off I did. The best investment I ever made in my life. Northern bursaries are available to students from northern Alberta to come to a university or postsecondary and make a commitment to go back to their community and contribute for a few years. That's not available to everybody, just those in northern Alberta.

Student loans. I spent seven years, Mr. Speaker, on the Students Finance Board, one of the most productive times that I've had in terms of my feeling that I was making a contribution towards students getting an education. The informal motto of the Students Finance Board, at least when I was there, was that finances ought not be a barrier to a student getting a good education. In Alberta finances have not been a barrier to a student getting an education. In fact, there's a remission program attached to our student loans, so if you get a student loan, you're likely to get 50 per cent of it remitted. In other words, you don't have to pay that back. Well, if that's not a contribution by the government on behalf of the people of Alberta to certain students, not all students but certain students, I don't know what is, and certainly in most cases it's far higher than $500.

So to suggest that we ought not start a new program because it would be unfair, when we've got all sorts of other programs that people take advantage of, doesn't make sense, Mr. Speaker. In fact, you have to start good ideas sometime, and now is the time for us to start, in the year of the province's centennial, with this wonderful idea, which was first brought forward by the Member for Calgary-Egmont to encourage self-reliance, to encourage families to save for education. To encourage the concept that families are responsible with their children for a portion of the costs of education is very important. And it is a portion of the costs, because there's a real balance.

The community does benefit when somebody gets a good education. I think that's another message that the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods put on the table, that there is a benefit to the community in everybody getting a good education. An engineer not only benefits himself by earning a good income, but he benefits the community by using his talents in contributing to the community. You could say the same of every profession, of any person even with just a liberal arts education, that there's a benefit to society. So there's an obligation for society to . . .

Mr. Lukaszuk: A small "I" liberal education.

Mr. Hancock: A small "I" liberal education.

There is a benefit to society in people having a good education and having the ability to take advantage of opportunities and help to make this province of ours even greater, to unleash innovation, to be a part of building the future, and there's an advantage to the individual in terms of the income, in terms of the ability to get a job, particularly with postgraduate degrees or degrees in law or medicine or engineering or those areas where you end up with a better education or a better income than average. There's clearly a benefit to the individual, and so there's a cost sharing. So it comes back to the concept that in the spirit of self-reliance and in the way in which our . . .

I'll just end there, Mr. Speaker, because my time is up, by saying that you can't emphasize too much the value of education, the value of developing the human capital in this province, and this program is one of those which I think is far-sighted and will do that better than many others we've seen.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in for five minutes. Comments? Questions?

Do I now recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry?

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise this evening to speak to Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act. Like so many pieces of legislation that we do debate in this House, there are many different ways we can view it. This is certainly one of those bills where we can view it from many, many different angles.

When we talk about the benefits of postsecondary education, that has been a commitment that has been made to Albertans since 1905 when we formed the first government under Premier Rutherford. He felt that education was so important that he also named himself minister of education and minister of finance. He saw the benefits of a strong public education system and how it would help the people of Alberta and their neighbours.

In Bill 1 we have set aside in the neighbourhood of $20 million for the 40,000 children who are going to be born in 2005. We talk about the fairness of setting this amount aside for these future students. I've had the opportunity to teach in St. Albert, and it was a delight to teach there. The quality of student from an academic standpoint was amazing, and it was a pleasure to work with those students. I've also had the opportunity to teach in Edmonton in a different situation, in a purely blue-collar neighbourhood, and again it was exceptional.

When we start looking at students across this province, we also have to start looking at high school completion rates. If we look at the results we get from student achievement and the results from Alberta Learning on student achievement tests, it certainly shows that we have a great disparity in students who complete their high school education. So to think that these dollars that are going to be set aside are going to be available equally to all students is not correct. It is great, but it is not correct that it is available to all students.

When we also look at commitment to education, many of us in this Assembly that did attend postsecondary education benefited from student tuition fees that were incredible. But just 10 years ago, when my oldest daughter started university, by the time she completed her four-year degree in four years, her student tuition had doubled. That was not a commitment to education at that particular time.

I think we see what we have done with students over the past decade by allowing costs of university to increase, with great results. I have an article here from the Edmonton Journal dated Saturday, July 5, 2003. It goes on to state: A Statistics Canada study which reveals Alberta has the lowest number of students who attend postsecondary institutions right out of high school shows the province needs to do a better job of educating its own, says a top University of Alberta official. Now, certainly we can argue either way, again, that this bill will not help or that this bill will help. But the one thing is that we have a problem in this province, Mr. Speaker. If this bill does raise the awareness amongst the parents and students of this province of the importance of a postsecondary education, then certainly that is one of the good points of this particular bill.

As well, we have to look back at what happened prior to 1993. We had the Liberal government in this province, we had the UFA government, we had Social Credit, and we even had Conservative governments that up until 1993 paid a tremendous amount of money into our public education system. Those were the statistics that were brought to the front by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. Twenty years ago for every dollar that a student put in out of their own pocket, the province contributed $10, whereas today for every dollar a student contributes, the government only supplies $2.34. So, yes, we have seen tremendous changes in the amount of commitment to Alberta postsecondary students in the last decade.

We do have those students in the province who have a much higher debt load when they do graduate. It is not uncommon now for students to have a debt load of $20,000, and if you're one of those unfortunate students who has to leave home in order to study and seek room and board in a residence or whatever, that debt load is even going to be more.

One of the things the hon. Member for St. Albert brought up that I like was that certainly we are trying to raise awareness and that education is a tremendous investment. But if this government is truly saying that, then why did this government with its actions not fund an arbitrated settlement to teachers? Why, if this government is so committed to education, did we see the layoff of a thousand teachers? These are a thousand teachers of whom the majority would have been educated right here in Alberta. They went ahead and they got their education, and then they were told: sorry; there's no room in the inn because we will not fund an arbitrated settlement.

So we cannot speak out of both sides of our mouth, Mr. Speaker. We cannot say that we're going to raise the level of awareness of a postsecondary education and then on the other hand lay those people off. So what we do need here is a long-term commitment to our postsecondary institutions to properly fund them in order to keep down costs for students, and certainly that would assist all students who are attending a postsecondary institution.

Now, as well, we were offered a challenge here earlier: how could we make this bill better? Well, there are a number of interesting things that are happening in the province right now, and certainly one of them is what is happening with Edmonton public. The best way that we can track high school completion rates for students in the province is certainly by looking at results from Alberta Learning. We looked at those over a five-year period, and in doing so, Mr. Speaker, we can look at the systemic changes and see what is happening with student achievement.

What happened when Angus McBeath became superintendent of Edmonton public schools? He indicated at that time that his goal was to raise student achievement. So what he did was he centralized the whole aspect of student achievement in Edmonton public schools. One of the cornerstones they did was that they were going to make certain that every student was identified as to what grade level they were reading at, and their goal was to get every student reading at that grade level. One of the reasons they did that was because they knew from their statistics that students who entered high school and could not read at a grade 10 level have a 99 per cent chance of not completing high school.

So this is definitely one of the ways that we can improve this bill, and that is certainly to make student achievement in the lower grades one of our priorities and certainly to build the cornerstones so that we can improve the high school completion rate for our students.

Now, what also happened in Edmonton public – and again it's a great change from what they've had – is that over the past three years their completion rate in high school has gone from 62 to 69 per cent. That's 7 per cent in three short years. That is phenomenal in a school board of that particular size. They're also looking, Mr. Speaker, at having a high school completion rate of 75 per cent by the year 2005. So, again, that is another 6 per cent in a very short period of time, and I have no doubt that they will do it. When we see results like this, that are directly tied to student achievement, then certainly this is one of the areas that Bill 1 could focus on so that we bring all students along when we work.

As well, when I was on holidays, I came across an article in the Arizona Sun, and this article was dealing with teachers. The title of the article is Let the Best Teach the Rest. What they did at the Rodel exemplary teacher academy was they identified characteristics in very successful teachers which made them better than the rest, and those were quite simple. One was a passionate belief system. Another quality that excellent teachers had was motivation and student engagement. A third was that they would focus on subject matter. Another quality that excellent teachers had was effective classroom management strategies. A fifth one was positive communication and leadership. They found in their studies that successful teachers shared all of these.

They wanted to take this one step further, so what they did was this. Over the next three years they took 10 of these teachers and each one of them is going to be assigned six teachers, so at the end of three years we'll have 60 more teachers who have had the benefit of being mentored by these excellent teachers. So if we wish to do something for all students in this province, then certainly one of the ways we can do it is by establishing a mentorship program in our school systems here in the province so that all students will get the benefit of those excellent teachers.

There were a few of us that attended the state Legislatures conference in Chicago a few years ago, and one of the key topics that was discussed at that particular convention was: how do they improve the education system in American schools and particularly in American schools in their large cities? They have the opposite problem in their large schools. Teachers do not want to go into the inner core of large American cities to teach school. They want to get out into the suburbs, where many of the problems that they'd encounter in the inner city they would not encounter with suburbs. What they found in that particular situation, Mr. Speaker, was that if they wished to improve student achievement, the cheapest and most effective way to do that was to increase the quality of the teachers going in there. They were able to do that through professional development. So those are definitely things that we could do in this province. Those are things that we could be spending our money on that would benefit all students in this province.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, it's great. I wish my students had had some more money when they were attending university. It would have helped them out. From that aspect this is certainly a good bill. Some people are going to get some money. On bringing awareness, yes, it does bring awareness to the needs of postsecondary education. It also brings awareness to the fact that the sooner families start to save for the postsecondary education of their children, the better off we are. But the bill falls so far short of the many good things that we could be doing in this province to benefit all students.

So I'm going to reserve how I will vote on this bill. It certainly isn't all bad, and it's certainly not all good. Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry makes some points that certainly there is always room for improvement and certainly there is room for improvement in Alberta in learning, particularly in participation rates and graduation rates, and we're working on that. But it was interesting that yesterday the Legislature was honoured by the presence of the minister of education from the state of Saxony in Germany. They were here to witness our education system, which has been in many instances considered to be not among the best but the best in the world, which is a great credit to everyone associated with education and the learning system: Alberta Learning, the teachers, the students, parents, even legislators with the foresight to do what has been done to make education in Alberta so important, and in particular the Edmonton public school board.

It was interesting in the comments that the Member for Edmonton-Glengarry made that tuition was a major deterrent for postsecondary education when, in fact, Ireland found that not to be the case when tuition fees were completely eliminated, and it was determined after the fact that the single most important indicator of whether or not a child would go to postsecondary education was the family experience that the child grew up in. So would not this bill and the sense that from the moment of birth each child in Alberta and each family in Alberta will be inculcated with the sense that education and postsecondary education is a vital part of the foundation of life – is that not an extension of Alberta's Promise, which is already so manifestly delivered in education but even greater for the future?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bonner: That's an interesting point that the hon. member has brought up. Certainly, it's one of those points that, again, depends where you do live in this province. When I grew up in Jasper, it was a railroad town. We had great emphasis on education by people in that town. They knew the benefits of it. Yet we had a situation where we could leave high school at the end of grade 12, go start working for the railroad, and make $10,000 more per year than the principal of the high school was making. So to try and impress upon some people the benefits of continuing in a postsecondary education was rather difficult.

I would suspect that if we were to go up to Fort McMurray today, where wages are extremely high, where work is available, it is much more difficult to motivate students in that particular situation to attend a postsecondary institution than to go to work and make some big dollars.

I also think that particularly for students who have to leave home, to travel from a small community to a big city to live in residence or to seek room and board somewhere, it is also intimidating to a degree for many students. So I think there are many factors why students would not attend postsecondary institutions.

As I said in the debate, this brings awareness. If it does encourage students to think more about a postsecondary education, then certainly it's done its job.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a second time]

Bill 6

Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today to move second reading of Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act builds on Alberta's success at helping people move from income support into the workforce. It is the legislative authority for Alberta Works, which will provide more co-ordinated access to employment and training services, income support, health benefits, and child support services. The goal is to help people become self-reliant, help employers meet their needs for a skilled workforce, and help individuals and families meet their basic needs. Alberta Works implements the main recommendation of the MLA Committee to Review Low-Income Programs to move on integrated systems of income and employment supports.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 6 amends the Income and Employment Supports Act to make it easier for government to help low-income parents get the child support they should be receiving from the noncustodial parent. The child support services program assists parents to obtain child support agreements or court orders which are enforced by the maintenance enforcement program. Extended family, employer, landlords, or other third parties may be asked to provide a phone number or address so the noncustodial parent can be contacted to discuss child support.

In the past some people have been reluctant to provide this information for fear of their names being disclosed. Mr. Speaker, Bill 6 allows government to protect the privacy of third parties in such circumstances and helps ensure parents meet their responsibility to support their children to the best of their ability. This approach is consistent with other government programs that rely on third-party information to carry out their mandate.

Also, Mr. Speaker, Bill 6 makes minor wording changes to the Income and Employment Supports Act. To name a few, section 12 adds that employment and training benefits may be provided for a person with disabilities. This change clarifies that the department can provide such assistance either directly to the person or indirectly through the employer or school.

Section 24, Mr. Speaker, provides that the department will notify the training provider when the department imposes an administrative penalty.

Section 43(1)(a) clarifies that appeals may be either relative to eligibility or relative to the amount or value of assistance.

Section 49(2), Mr. Speaker, includes two changes. The first clarifies that three conditions in the act are additional situations in which personal information can be disclosed, and the second ensures that the minister's power of authorization for disclosure must be exercised for an identified purposes.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, section 49(5) allows the department to refuse to disclose the source of information when investigating a child support case.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, Bill 6 makes minor wording changes to the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act and makes it easier for the child support services program to carry out its mandate.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I move to adjourn the debate on this bill. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 9:48 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, February 25, 2004 1:30 p.m.
Date: 2004/02/25
[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

Mr. Jonson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly His Excellency Otto Ditz, ambassador of the Republic of Austria. Mr. Ditz is accompanied by Mr. Nikolaus Demiantschuk, our consul general from Calgary. Over the past five years Alberta's exports to Austria have averaged almost $21 million per year. In the same period of time we have imported approximately $76 million worth of products from Austria. However, our relationship with Austria goes far beyond strictly trade. The Austrian government has played an important role in establishing the Wirth Institute for Austrian and Central European Studies. This institute focuses on social sciences, the humanities, and the arts, and links postsecondary institutions in Austria with those here in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, this is the ambassador's first visit to Alberta, and I would ask that our honoured guests please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Klein: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly four prominent members of Alberta's business community whom I had the pleasure of having lunch with today: Robert Rosen of City Lumber; Dave Snyder of Sterling Cranes; Dr. Eric Newell, retired chair and CEO of Syncrude Canada Ltd.; and Dwayne Hunka of Waiward Steel Fabricators Ltd.

Our lunch was an auction item at the Canadian Diabetes Association's fifth annual Flame of Hope golf tournament, and it was a truly worthy cause. Over 100,000 Albertans currently have diabetes, and it affects thousands more of their friends and family. I was pleased to support such an important cause, and it was more than a pleasure to dine with these gentlemen, although we dined on sandwiches. I'd like to thank each of these men for their generosity and for their excellent company and their spirited conversation today and ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my great privilege to ask Blake Robert, William McBeath, and Dennis Laurie to please stand. As these three gentlemen are recognized, the Liberal and the New Democrat colleagues will take heart because this represents the past, the present, and the future of the presidents of the PC Youth in Alberta. It's our great pleasure to welcome them here today and to thank them for their efforts on behalf of all Albertans.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today and introduce to you and to the members assembled 35 people from Fort Saskatchewan: the students from Our Lady of the Angels school represented here and their teacher, Ms Shauna Sabourin, assistant Mrs. Carolina Mayner, and parents Troy and Teresa Gates. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly eight members of the Emmanuel Home along with their group leader. The Emmanuel Home is a great place to live in your retirement years, and I know that full well because my wife's opa lived there for around 28 years. Currently, they are planning for a major expansion to their seniors' complex and have already fund-raised the amount of $2.4 million. Congratulations and best wishes with that project. I'd ask that my guests rise as I mention their names: Mrs. Ann Helder, Mrs. Doris Nelson, Mrs. Gerrie Vandenberg, Mr. Ulbe Sandstra, Mrs. Dortha Roess, Mr. Henry Noppers, Rev. Jacob Binnema, Mrs. Hilda Binnema. They are also accompanied by their group leader, Denise DeVries. I'd ask that we give them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmor.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you five constituents of mine from the Yeoford area. They are Maureen and Bob Webster, and with them are three lovely young ladies: Natasha, Danielle, and Esther Schmale. They have toured the Legislature today. I took them out for lunch, and now they're going to enjoy question period. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've got two introductions. For the first introduction it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 24 visitors from Garneau school in my constituency. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mr. Brad Glenn, and parents Ms Beverly Wilson and Mrs. Brenda Richardson. Garneau school is a landmark in the history of teacher education in this province. The Faculty of Education at the University of Alberta started its work from the building in which this school is located. I think my guests are perhaps seated in the members' gallery. Assuming that they are around, I'll ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Ms Jette Badre. Ms Badre is the chair of Parents of Kids Experiencing Diabetes, a member of the Mill Woods South East Community Health Council, and a member of the advisory committee for the Edmonton student health initiative partnership. As a parent and an engaged citizen she is here today to watch the proceedings of the Assembly. She is seated in the public gallery, and I'll ask her to now rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you a number of individuals who are seated in the public gallery. They are some of the men and women who are members of the Communications, Energy and Paperworkers Union local 1900. They are Dave Malka, Terry Dekker, Adrian Pearce, Peter Hill, Shane Blyan, Dave Valentine, Darren Scott, Phil DesRoches, Chris Peterson. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, today we have 17 members who have identified their desire to participate, so may I make my plea once again: brevity in questions, brevity in answers.

We'll proceed with the first Official Opposition main question from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Electricity Deregulation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Liberal opposition released a report that the government is too embarrassed to release itself. The report of the Premier's Advisory Council on Electricity is so sugar-coated. The Consumers' Association of Canada in Alberta withdrew its unqualified support for the report. The government's own MLAs on the committee continue to express doubts about whether electricity deregulation is working for consumers, and even some distinguished Albertans are continuing now to speak out about the reasons why the government deregulated the electricity marketplace in the first case. Now, my first question is to the Premier. Why is the government telling Albertans that we needed more generation when electricity expert John Davies said, and I quote, that there was ample electricity before deregulation?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, John Davies, I guess, is entitled to his opinion, but according to all the experts at that time and, indeed, the evidence that has come to light lately, there was a shortage of electricity in this province, and it was due to deregulation that more electricity generation has been brought on stream.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: why is the Premier telling Albertans that we are short of power when Herman Schwenk, the past president of the Alberta rural electrification association, said, and I quote, that the only reason we were running short of generation by 1997-98 was because the government decided to deregulate the industry?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, again, the gentleman, of course, is entitled to his opinion, and he expressed an opinion. The simple fact is that this province was facing a shortage of power, and the government was not about to go into the generating business. We had to make it possible and feasible for the private sector to bring on more generation. That, indeed, has happened to the point now where we have, I believe, about 3,000 megawatts of power that is deemed to be surplus to our needs, and that has come about due to deregulation.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: what will it take for the Premier to come clean with all Albertans who have been burdened month after month with high-cost electricity and admit to these consumers that electricity deregulation has been a total and dismal public policy failure?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, deregulation has not – has not – been a total and dismal failure. It has been a success. With or without deregulation there could have occurred some problems with billing, and those problems became evident on the consumer or the retail side. It had nothing to do with generation and bringing more power on stream. That component of deregulation was highly successful indeed, notwithstanding what some people have offered as their opinions. The report of the advisory committee deals with the retail side, deals with the consumer side, and makes recommendations to fix the problem, and indeed action has already been taken by both the Department of Government Services and the Department of Energy to address this issue.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today's budget update showed that this government has billions of dollars in surplus funds, yet we have seniors stranded in understaffed nursing homes, children in overcrowded classrooms, and municipalities closing basic facilities for the public. Under this government Alberta is a have province with have-not services. To the Premier: given the multibillion-dollar surplus, what excuse does he offer to the little children who sit in schools hungry because there is no school lunch program?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, that comment is totally unfounded, is absolutely unfair, and is simply not true. You know, while the opposition is sitting over there twiddling their thumbs and basically counting pennies and talking about a $2.70 glass of orange juice, we're counting the billions of dollars of new infrastructure in this province. Since the year 2000-2001 this government has funded 774 new or renovated schools totalling $1.1 billion, more than 60 new or renovated health facilities totalling more than $1 billion, 38 new or renovated colleges and universities totalling more than $500 million. Speaking of seniors, as the hon. member was speaking, we have funded 121 separate upgrades to seniors' lodges totalling $65 million.

You know, their focus, as usual, is on the negative. I would like to remind them that we're focused on the 5,000 kilometres of highway this government has paved and the $3 billion spent on roads in the last five years, needed infrastructure to sustain economic growth and prosperity. We're focused on the world-class student achievement results across the province and praise our school districts, the praise that they are receiving from jurisdictions across the world. I met with the Deputy Minister of Education from Saxony today, who admitted that they have a lot to learn from our school system and our achievement tests and the results that we obtain. We're focused on the 85 per cent of Albertans who rate the quality of their health care services as good.

The Speaker: I think we're going to go with brevity. The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Too bad he's not answering his own telephone.

Given the multibillion-dollar surplus, what excuse does the Premier offer the stroke victim who sits 10 hours in the Foothills emergency room without seeing a doctor?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, again, the Liberals will search high and low and mainly low to find something wrong in this province. Not everything is going to be perfect 100 per cent of the time. That's why we operate on about a 70 per cent success rate. You know, if we have a 70 per cent approval rating, that is pretty good. There are going to be 30 per cent of those who believe in the Liberals or the NDs or other, no matter how well we do.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to concentrate again on those things that are positive, like the practical health reforms that make a difference to patients, like electronic health records, new physician funding models, an on-line wait list registry, and around-the-clock access to over-the-phone health advice when he's speaking about health services. We're focused on the record number of MRI scans, heart surgeries, and joint replacements being performed in this province and the 600 doctors and 1,500 nurses who have moved here to Alberta in the last three years.

Dr. Taft: Again to the Premier: given the multibillion-dollar surplus, what excuse does he offer vulnerable seniors who, according to his government's own report, sit unattended in nursing homes because of staff cuts?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, he is again focusing on the negative – focusing on the negative. I would focus on the $225 million in seniors' programs funded by this government annually, providing some services for nearly 60 per cent of seniors in Alberta who are in the low-income bracket. These are the kinds of things this side of the House, the government side of the House, is focused on. The opposition, well, of course, they're focused on trying to manufacture bad news in whatever way they can. And Albertans are not buying it.

1:50 Utilities Consumer Advocate

Mr. MacDonald: Speaking of bad news from this government, Alberta electricity consumers are going to get more of it, unfortunately. One of the top recommendations in the report from the Premier's Advisory Council on Electricity is to create an independent, government-funded consumer ombudsman. My first question is to the Premier. Why is the Premier allowing the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate to be fully funded by the gas companies and the Balancing Pool?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I don't have the precise answer to that. I will have the Minister of Government Services provide a response.

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, this is an exact duplicate of the question that was presented yesterday in this House, and I have advised this House that, yes, the Bolger commission set up the idea of an advocate's office. That recommendation has been approved by government, and our department, responsible for consumer protection, has set up the advocate's position under the auspices of a deputy minister. It is important to make sure that government is close to this issue because Albertans have to have an open door, an open portal, to provide us with the information that Albertans are seeking when they want to know exactly how the energy restructuring has been done and what their rights are and how it is progressing to this point in time. The advocate's office does that for Albertans.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Government Services. Given that the minister has had 24 hours to consult with the Public Affairs Bureau regarding this matter, I will ask again: how can this government call the Utilities Consumer Advocate independent when his paycheque and his office expenses are being signed by the utility companies?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, the department of consumer services under Government Services is funded by the taxpayers of the province of Alberta. The advocate's office is also funded by the taxpayers of the province of Alberta through their utility payments, through the Balancing Pool, and indirectly back. [interjections] They don't like this, but it's a better direct access to government than through the other means. There was actually no access to government other than through MLAs, and we heard MLAs respond through the Bolger report that the advocate's position be put in place to be that avenue to government, and that's what we did.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, this time to the Premier. Given that this is a clear case of payola, who in the government decision-making process made the decision? Who in cabinet made the decision that the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate should be fully funded by industry?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to have the hon. Minister of Government Services supplement, but I will take very strong exception to the suggestion that this is payola. Payola is the thing that their Liberal cousins in Ottawa are accustomed to with the sponsorship program scam that is going on, that they seem to endorse and have thrown up smoke screens to cover up by, you know, focusing on $2.70 glasses of orange juice here in the province of Alberta.

Relative to the question minus the suggestion that there is payola, I'll have the hon. minister respond.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the Premier. The Alberta Energy and Utilities Board funds interveners. That is their responsibility when they look after the public interest in this province, and thank goodness we have an independent body that can do that. Thank goodness we have the industry that supports that EUB in helping to make those decisions.

Mr. Speaker, in terms of how the government is involved in this and the authority by which we as government, through the utilities advocate's office – the funding through the Balancing Pool is permitted under section 148 of the Electric Utilities Act, which was amended in this House in the year 2003. That amendment was provided for the development of the retail market in this province. Our department, through the advocate's office, is to help with that development of the retail market and to inform customers and consumers, small businesses, and farmers exactly how they can access this system properly.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar: after being recognized by the chair to ask the question, it might be appropriate then to listen to the answer instead of heckling.

The hon. leader of the third party.

Health Care Reform

Dr. Pannu: Thank you. During the past week the Premier has been peddling old wine in new bottles, Mr. Speaker. Instead of Hotel de Health, the Premier is promoting Hotel de Wealth. Allowing patients who can afford it to buy a better level of care in hospitals is a two-tiered health care system. My questions are to the Premier. While all Premiers agree that managing health care costs is a challenge, why does the Premier stand alone in advocating ill-advised user-pay schemes that lead to two-tier health care in this province?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, indeed, perhaps Alberta stands alone, as it has on a number of issues, issues that have made this province very unique but, on the other hand, very prosperous and the envy of other provinces in Canada, because we've had the courage to think differently and to do things differently. Yes, I have said – and I will say publicly – that if all else fails and we can't reach consensus relative to meaningful reform to achieve sustainability in health care, then we will consider going it on our own.

But having said that, we will abide by the fundamental principles espoused by his late departed friend Tommy Douglas – well, I don't know if they were friends, but the late departed Tommy Douglas – who basically said that no one should lose their dignity and their home and their livelihood because of illness or sickness. That's what medicare was all about. [interjections] Well, it was. It was. It was brought about so that people who were sick or injured wouldn't lose their homes and their businesses because of illness or injury. That's why it was brought about.

The system has grown to be all things for all people for all causes, and we have to address that. Indeed, every Premier – every Premier – and every territorial leader has said that health care costs are driving their jurisdictions into bankruptcy, and it was unanimous in the letter to the Prime Minister that unless something is done to achieve sustainability, the health care system as we know it today will not be here 10 years down the road. Now, you may think differently, but I'll tell you that your friend in Saskatchewan, Mr. Calvert, your friend in Manitoba, Mr. Doer, agree – agree – with me on this point.

The Speaker: Do I take it, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, that you rose on a point of order?

Mr. Mason: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Okay.
The hon. leader.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary question to the Premier: why is this Premier out of step with his fellow Premiers, including Conservatives like the Premier of Nova Scotia, who are urging the federal government to implement the blueprint for health care sustainability contained in the Romanow report?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I am not out of step with the other Premiers. I agree with the other Premiers that that portion of the Romanow report should be adopted; that is, there should be more federal funding. But that is only one piece of the puzzle. That is a small piece of the puzzle. We need to look in a meaningful way at things we can do that won't undermine public health as it relates to those who are truly sick and injured in society but, at the same time, will give the regional health authorities and others the opportunity to generate revenue.

Now, relative to the wine situation, let's get it on the record and let's get it straight. A reporter from the Edmonton Journal, Kelly Cryderman, asked me about a situation in terms of sustainability, and I related to her a situation that was passed on to me by a person in Calgary. That person said that he travelled to Birmingham, England, where he wanted to get a hip replacement using the Birmingham hip, which I understand is the latest in technology.

He mentioned to me that he rented a room in association with the hospital. There were 10 rooms, five of them, by the way, occupied by Albertans – 10 rooms, five occupied by Albertans – and these rooms were like hotel rooms, but they were attached to the hospital.

Yes, those people who could afford it paid to have those luxury rooms, and yes he could order wine to his room because it was operated like a hotel, but the public hospital was still in place, was still doing hip surgeries. The doctors there contracted to do a certain amount of procedures under the national health system in Britain.

We have never looked at the system in Britain; we have never looked at the system in France; we have never looked at the system in Sweden: all of them social democratic countries. We have never looked in detail at those systems where they do have a mix of public and private. We have to ask ourselves: why are we number 27 in the world? Why are we not number one?

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Granted that this Premier keeps interesting company, why won't he level with regular Albertans and admit that the flexibility he seeks in interpreting the principles of the Canada Health Act is code for introducing health care user fees?

Mr. Klein: No, it's not code for introducing health care user fees, although user fees may be part of the answer. May be. You know, user fees is a sexy 15-second sound bite, but it may be a multitude of things including closing the Romanow gap, including looking at ways to allow regional health authorities to be more flexible, including recommendations contained in the Graydon report talking about deductibles and to some extent user fees. All of these things need to be looked at, and we need to look at them because the health care system that he cherishes so much will not be there. It will collapse totally and completely.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Mature Cattle Marketing and Processing

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The partially lifted borders were excellent news for our cattle industry, although news reports today say that Montana is asking for a seven-year ban on live cattle exports, which is nonsense, and restrictions imposed by other countries limited the beef that could be exported to cattle less than 30 months of age. This has meant an overabundance of cattle more than 30 months of age with no other market than the domestic one. My first question is for the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. What is being done to help deal with the overabundance of mature beef in Alberta?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I don't believe that Montana is asking for a seven-year ban. There are a few people in Montana that have mentioned that. I spent some time with the Director of Agriculture for Montana in Washington earlier this week, and there was no suggestion of that. In fact, what all the directors of Agriculture across the U.S. and the ministers in Canada are searching for is a way to resume normal trade.

Mr. Speaker, when we were faced with the issue of BSE in our country, we quickly came to a conclusion with the industry that there were some things that we were going to have to do differently, and one was the handling of mature cattle. In spite of our being successful in having the border opened for boneless beef under 30 months in seven months, not seven years, we have a supply of mature cattle and bulls. Prior to May 20 about 60 to 70 per cent of those animals went live into the U.S. and into Mexico to be processed. So we realized that we were going to have to deal with this on a long-term basis in our country.

So the government of Alberta being visionary, working with the industry some months ago, put three programs in place to deal with this issue. We realized that we had to have capacity to kill these animals, which we don't have today. We realized we had to have a home for the product within our country, which we don't have today, so we put three programs in place. The $4 million beef product development program, which looks for new ways to use that material and, in addition, a $25 million loan program with Ag Financial Services Corporation to help processors process that in our province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is for the same minister. Given that many farmers and ranchers are asking me how they can process and sell their own beef, what is your department doing to make it easier for small producers to develop value-added opportunities on their farms?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have something in this province that's the envy of many provinces in Canada and, in fact, many places in the world.

Mr. Mar: It's our Premier.

Mrs. McClellan: It's our Premier – you're right – and the vision of this Premier.

We have in this province the Leduc processing centre, and I've often said that this is probably the best kept secret in our province, but, Mr. Speaker, it is becoming far better known, and many members would remember that we introduced, also, an incubator addition to that project.

What we have done with the programs that we have for funding, which are modest but are what our processors told us they needed to change their plants to handle more of this product, is put the Leduc processing centre at their disposal and also purchase some additional equipment that would be needed there to develop that product. That's what our producers told us: we need help with product development. Obviously, each one who wants to do this can't go out and purchase the equipment on a trial basis. So that is occurring, Mr. Speaker, as we speak.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's good news.

My final question is for the same minister. Is your department considering changing any regulations to make it easier for producers to develop value-added opportunities on their farms?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the experience with BSE has taught us one thing, it's the importance of having good food safety rules and regulations in place, the importance of having good livestock transportation rules and regulations in place, and having regulations in place that allow us to identify animals and/or, indeed, product readily. So as has been our practice, we sit with the producers. We'll talk about regulations that they might see that are inhibiting them from moving ahead, but we will not reduce regulations that in any way compromise the quality and the safety of the food products we produce.

Government Aircraft

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, yesterday we seemed to have some confusion about whether or not the government uses its planes to fly persons not in government to partisan political events. When I asked if municipal leaders were flown in a government plane to a partisan political event, the Minister of Municipal Affairs replied: "Absolutely, yes, to the question." When I asked if the persons in question paid the cost of their trips, he answered: "At no time will a government plane ever be used for political purposes." This is a great contradiction. To the Premier: will the Premier help his minister out by confirming that the government does transport people to partisan political events such as a Premier's dinner?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, we're very careful about that. As a matter of fact, I know that those who attend Premier's dinners, whether it be in Calgary, Edmonton, Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, or Red Deer, are transported on chartered planes. Now, it may be that a minister or officials of the government have government business in that particular city and might have taken the plane down earlier to attend to that particular business, but in no case are any members of government allowed to take government planes to Premier's dinners or to other fundraising dinners.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, since the operation of the aircraft is in Infrastructure, I would like to supplement. I think that what is going on in here and what happened yesterday is actually very, very distasteful. From Hansard on page 117 just let me read a little of what the hon. member asked yesterday.

There were several municipal leaders, family members of MLAs, and other persons on board these government aircraft that day. Coincidentally, April 4, 2002, was also the Premier's dinner day in Calgary.

And then:

To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: did the government transport municipal leaders to the Premier's dinner, a partisan political event, on the taxpayer's [expense]?

Well, I happen to have in my hands right here – and I will file it later, at the appropriate time – the manifest from that day. It reads that the plane left Edmonton at 8:15 in the morning. There was one MLA and four other individuals aboard that aircraft. They were going to Calgary for a Roles, Responsibilities and Resources meeting sponsored by the Minister of Municipal Affairs. At 1 p.m. the plane left Calgary and came back to Edmonton, and on that plane there were the five people that went down in the morning plus two municipal leaders.

For the member to suggest that there were family members aboard the plane, that there were municipal people going to the Premier's dinner in Calgary that evening – you should be ashamed of yourself for making those kinds of accusations. They are absolutely false, and you should apologize to the people of Alberta for trying to make the people believe that, in fact, this is happening, because it is not happening.

Mr. Bonner: Again to the Premier. [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry has the floor.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Premier: can the Premier explain why on October 1, 2002, the government plane transported to and from Edmonton and Calgary six members of the Getty family?

Mr. Hancock: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I have no idea, nor am I compelled to answer any questions relative to the activities of the former Premier.*

Mr. Bonner: To the Premier: will the Premier tell us if any persons transported on government planes have reimbursed their costs for their trips?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, there was a time when we used the government airplane to attend things like the Western Premiers' Conference and other events where we have charged members of the media and members of the business community, the trade mission to Houston where we used the Dash 8.

Transport Canada has since ruled that you can't do that. Now, that was unbeknownst to me, so there was nothing untoward about doing that at that particular time. So, yes, indeed, there have been charge-backs. We're looking at that policy now. Much to my chagrin and my disappointment, apparently it can't be done. I think it's a courtesy, to say the least, and it's a convenience for members of the media and others who might want to travel to these conferences to go on the government plane if there's room, providing they pay. We usually charge what they would pay on the lowest cost excursion. Basically, it's the cost of fuel.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, under the terms of our licence, we are not allowed to charge for trips. So, as the Premier has indicated, that procedure has stopped.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Federal Health Care Funding

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the first ministers' meeting in January the Prime Minister finally followed through on his predecessor's commitment for an additional $2 billion to health care. Alberta's share of that money is approximately $200 million. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell this House if he has had any indication yet from the federal government and the federal Minister of Health that it will annualize the one-time commitment to health care?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, across Canada health care costs have gone up at roughly twice the rate of the rate of growth of government revenues, and that's the reason why at yesterday's news conference from the Council of the Federation our premier and premiers from across Canada unanimously urged the federal government to annualize the $2 billion that was announced by Prime Minister Chretien and repromised a number of times since then.

Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member indicated, Alberta's share of that money is $200 million. Let's put that in perspective: that will only pay for about 10 days of health care in this province. Now, every dollar of that is welcome, and I know that regional health authorities will put it to good use, but to this point not Alberta nor any other province of Canada has had any hint at all that the federal government is planning on annualizing that funding, which is much needed.

Mrs. O'Neill: Well, my supplemental to the same minister then: has the federal government given any indication that it plans to pay more of its fair share of health costs?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, a bit of history on medicare in this country. When it started out as a provincial/federal partnership with Tommy Douglas introducing a universal hospital insurance system in Saskatchewan, the federal grants for that were 50 per cent. So it was a 50-50 cost-sharing arrangement. Now, that model stayed in place until 1977 when a Liberal Prime Minister replaced it with block funding for health and postsecondary education. That is what eventually turned into the Canada health and social transfer in 1996.

Right now nationally the federal government contributes just 16 cents on the provincial health care dollar. All provinces across Canada are demanding that the federal government move to the 25 per cent recommended by the federal government's own royal commission. So far, Mr. Speaker, there has been no federal intention expressed of doing so.

Water Management

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, the government's ministers can't seem to agree on the Red Deer River diversion. The Minister of Energy seems to think it's no big deal, while the Minister of Environment isn't so sure. Yesterday that minister said he is not even sure whether he disagrees or agrees with the appeal. To the Premier: is the Red Deer River diversion, where fresh water will be taken out of the water cycle forever, a big deal, or isn't it?

Mr. Klein: Well, Mr. Speaker, if you'll permit me, I would like to answer that question, but something's been playing on my mind relative to a question asked by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry. It alluded to the former Premier and his family using the plane. I wasn't paying that close attention. It was in 2002. Indeed, Mr. and Mrs. Getty were on a plane as well as members of his former staff, and that was to transport him for the dedication of the Getty wild-land park. Just to have that clarified.*

Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member's question: is it of importance to me? Yes, it is. It's of extreme importance to me. It's of extreme importance to, I believe, both members representing Red Deer and the hon. Member for Lacombe-Stettler and the hon. Member for Ponoka-Rimbey, probably the hon. members for Rocky Mountain House and Drumheller-Chinook as well. The reason it's important is that some of the communities surrounding Red Deer are running short of water. Aquifers are drying up, and a diversion is deemed to be one way in which these communities can be assured of a secure supply of water for the future. Where that process is right now, I really don't know, but I am very keen on this particular project.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, then why would the approval for the diversion be given before the Water for Life plan has been completed? That seems to indicate to the communities in those areas that their concerns over long-term access to water are unfounded and going to be ignored. You can't just let companies take water out of the life cycle.

Mr. Klein: I think we're talking about two issues here. One is the sustainability of supply for communities, potable water, and the other is the whole issue of water being used in oil field development, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the hon. member can clarify for me the point that she is trying to make because I, quite simply, don't get it.

Dr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to point out that I believe the member opposite is once again recycling a question. Although as Minister of Environment I like recycling, I don't necessarily like recycled questions. She's recycling the question she asked yesterday, which I assume is dealing with the Environmental Appeal Board hearing that is going on as we speak. That has to do with the Capstone request to divert water out of the river for the Capstone Energy company. I assume that is what she is speaking towards.

What I believe the Premier was referring to was – if you remember last session, I believe, we passed an interbasin transfer act that would allow Red Deer to supply water to all those various communities that the Premier was referring to. But I believe the member was referring to the Energy hearing that's going on. As I said quite clearly yesterday, there's a process. I will have a recommendation from that hearing within 30 days or thereabouts, and we'll make a decision at that time.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, my final question is to the Minister of Environment. Does this government believe that using fresh water for injection is a sustainable use of water? Please don't recycle your "I don't know" answer.

Dr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out when the member asked that question yesterday, we have a committee that is made up of the environmental groups; it's made up of the energy industry, the gas and oil producers; it's made up of the Alberta municipal districts and counties; it's made up of the AUMA. We have this group that is currently meeting, and they expect to have their initial recommendations back to me by the end of March or in that time frame, and they will be making recommendations on utilization of water that removes it from the hydrological cycle. That's what the committee is designed to do, and that's what we're waiting for recommendations on.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Education Agreement with Saxony

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, February 23 an agreement was signed between Alberta Learning and the German state of Saxony's Ministry of Education and Sports. The free state of Saxony in Germany also has an agreement of co-operation with the province of Alberta. Besides government agreements we have agreements between Lindsay Thurber high school in Red Deer and Harry Ainlay high in Edmonton that are twinned with high schools in Hesse, Germany. Could the Minister of Learning please explain how the agreement between Alberta Learning and the Saxon Ministry of Education and Sports will benefit the students and teachers of Alberta and why the Saxon ministry has chosen Alberta Learning to partner with?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just to start off on that question, I feel very strongly that any time we can sign agreements with countries across the globe, students in Alberta benefit. We benefit by sharing experiences. We benefit by sharing education systems.

This particular MOU, in specific, signed in five areas, basically. The first one was an educator exchange, which enables us to have teachers go back and forth between Saxony, Germany, and Alberta.

The second one was school partnership, which will be adding more to the twinning arrangements that the hon. member just asked about. Again, I feel that this is an incredibly good use of these agreements, where we can get students in our province of Alberta talking to and having good dialogue with students in other parts of the world.

The third thing will be information on education-related issues. Quite simply, Mr. Speaker, this is an agreement that allows us to talk about education, to talk about what each of our partners is doing.

The fourth thing will be the foreign language assistance program. Mr. Speaker, as I've said in this House many times, in the year 2006

we will be making second languages very, very important to our system. The German language will be one of them, and we will be counting on sharing expertise with areas such as Saxony in order to do this.

Mr. Speaker, the last thing that we signed was about teacher in-service training opportunities. Quite simply, this agreement entails that when there are in-service opportunities for either Saxony teachers here or for our teachers in Saxony, Germany, we will make those opportunities available and communicate to Saxony on this.

Mr. Speaker, again I'll reiterate that any of these agreements that we sign with foreign countries, with foreign states, truly add to the educational experience for our students.

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, my last question to the Minister of Learning: what areas of best practices in Alberta Learning were the delegation from Saxony most interested in?

Dr. Oberg: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, the reason that Saxony came over here is our rankings in the OECD. As everyone in this Assembly and everyone in Alberta should know – and many people do – we finished number one on the exams in the OECD in the year 2000. What this has done is given us truly a world-wide reputation for our learning system. Quite simply, what Saxony, Germany, wanted to do was come over and see exactly what we were doing in curriculum development, in technology, in teacher in-servicing and teacher professional development, essentially the whole elements of our learning system.

Mr. Speaker, through to the hon. member, they also had an opportunity to tour the Nanotechnology Institute at the University of Alberta as well as see several of our great projects at the University of Calgary. So in a space of about three or four days they saw an excellent cross-section of what we're doing in Alberta for education.

The Speaker: Hon. members, just a comment about question period today. It seems that the Speaker should never ask for brevity in questions and brevity in answers. Every time I do that we get less productivity, so I'm going to learn and never say that again.

My apologies to the eight members who could not participate today, but nine did participate with questions and answers.

head:

Recognitions

The Speaker: In 30 seconds I'll call on the first of several members. The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Alberta Union of Provincial Employees

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Positive employer/employee relationships are something that every organization should constantly strive for. The government of Alberta is no exception. One way to maintain a positive working relationship is through face-to-face contact between front-line workers who apply public policy and MLAs who develop the policy.

This Monday I was pleased to participate in an educational seminar sponsored by AUPE, the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. The purpose of this seminar was to assist union representatives to develop positive working relationships with government officials and legislators. I found the meeting to be enlightening and encouraging not because we agreed on every issue, because quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, we may never agree on every issue, but because we were developing a process so issues can be presented in a meaningful discussion that respects both the deliverer and the developer of public policy.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the AUPE leadership and members for presenting me with a union hat and sweater after my presentation. As promised, I was pleased to model both on my way into question period this afternoon.

I ask all members to join me in congratulating AUPE on this positive training initiative.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Dr. Gary McPherson

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to acknowledge an Albertan well known to this Assembly. Her Excellency the Right Honourable Adrienne Clarkson, Governor General of Canada, presented the insignia of membership to the Order of Canada to Dr. Gary McPherson, Friday, February 20, 2004, at Rideau Hall in Ottawa. The Order of Canada is our country's highest honour for lifetime achievement.

I've had the privilege of knowing Gary for many years. He is a man of incredible strength of character and is a testament to the human spirit. For nearly 35 years Gary lived in a long-term care facility after childhood polio left him quadriplegic. His mind and his heart more than make up for his physical challenges.

Gary broke from the bonds of institutional living to become a voice of social change that has inspired others. He is a community activist, an administrator, and a role model for us all. As many of you know, Gary was the first chair of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities. He remains active in our community to this day, providing strong, articulate leadership to the Alberta Paraplegic Association, the Rick Hansen Centre, and the Steadward Centre.

Behind every successful man is, of course, a happy and stable home. For that, we recognize Valerie Kamitomo, his lovely wife and mother to their children, Keiko, 14, and Jamie, 13.

Dr. McPherson is a remarkable Albertan embodying the values we hold dear, independent of mind, caring, and committed to building a just society for all.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Kim Evanochko

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise today to formally extend my congratulations to a very special young lady, Kim Evanochko, from the community of Forest Lawn in the constituency of Calgary-East.

Mr. Speaker, Kim has competed for some time in speed skating and earned the right to represent Alberta at the Special Olympics Canada Winter Games in Prince Edward Island. Today I'm very pleased to recognize Kim's very exciting finishes; namely, two first-place finishes, two second-place, and one third-place finish.

Truly, all participating athletes are to be commended. I especially want to applaud Kim's Olympic spirit and her contribution to Alberta pride.

I ask that my hon. colleagues join me in recognizing Kim Evanochko, athlete and Albertan extraordinaire.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Greater Edmonton Teachers' Convention

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I recognize the teachers attending the greater Edmonton teachers' convention. This has been a trying year for many of those teachers. Many are worried about the recommendations of the Learning Commission that may seriously rupture their professional association. The convention is an opportunity for them to set the problems of crowded classrooms, fewer resources, and colleagues who are no longer with them aside.

Renewing the Spirit is appropriately the theme of this convention. For many, given the trials of the past year, the theme will have special meaning. But renew their spirit they will. They'll explore new ideas, share successes with each other, and be inspired by internationally rated speakers. The topics range from a keynote speech on school bullying to a smorgasbord of panels, demonstrations, lectures, and debates that will help make them better teachers when they return to their classrooms. There are literally hundreds of topics to choose from spread over some of the best venues in this city.

We wish them well as they go about becoming better professionals. Our children will be the benefactors.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Pierre Lueders and Giulio Zardo

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pride that I rise today to recognize Pierre Lueders, an outstanding Albertan who recently won a gold medal in the 2004 World Cup two-man bobsleigh championship in Germany. His achievement on the world stage is a testimony to his athletic ability, determination, and commitment to excellence that serves as a powerful example to young, aspiring athletes throughout Canada and around the world. Like all athletes he has worked long and hard to reach such an exceptional level of success and, in doing so, has brought pride and honour to our capital city, our province, and our country.

Pierre and his teammate and brakeman, Giulio Zardo, are recognized as one of the best teams in the world. Their recent success builds on Alberta's rich tradition of excellence and demonstrates that effort and dedication have their rewards.

I know that all members of this Assembly are extremely proud of Pierre and will join me in extending our congratulations and best wishes to him and his teammate on winning a gold medal. I should add, Mr. Speaker, that Pierre is the brother-in-law of our Minister of Economic Development.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Dr. Robert Lampard

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, on August 2, 2003, Dr. Robert Lampard of Red Deer and his son Geoffrey led a group of Rotarians with little or no mountaineering experience to the peak of Mount Davidson on the first documented climb of this 2,909 metre high mountain located on the eastern slopes of the Rockies near Devil's Head north of Lake Minnewanka. Mount Davidson was named after James Wheeler Davidson, an explorer, a community leader, and a Rotarian who chartered 32 Rotary clubs from Banff to Bangkok and from Athens to Auckland from 1920 to 1931.

At noon on that historic day the group of Rotarians, that included Davidson's grandson Tom Abramson, convened the highest organized Rotary meeting ever held in North America. They built a cairn, buried a time capsule, and toasted Davidson with champagne.

Davidson was a remarkable man and Rotarian, who had a mountain named in his honour. Dr. Robert Lampard of Red Deer is also a remarkable man and Rotarian, who made sure that the world would not forget the generous and energetic contributions of a man who lived by the Rotarian ideals of making new friends and service above self.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Communications, Energy and Paperworkers Union

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize members of the Communications, Energy and Paperworkers Union, local 1900, some of whom I introduced earlier, who recently achieved a first collective agreement with Craig Media and A-Channel Edmonton. These union members – broadcasters, reporters, camera operators, and technicians – refused to give up even as the warm fall days turned into bitterly cold weeks and then into months during this long and difficult strike. My colleague and I from Edmonton-Strathcona along with many other Edmontonians were privileged from time to time to walk the picket line with them.

The members of CEP local 1900 are going back to work March 1 having ratified a first collective agreement with their employer. I send them our congratulations and our best wishes and our sincere hope that they can now start to reap the benefits of their employment that they so deserve.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: 2:40 Tabling Returns and Reports

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I'm tabling today a report required under the Universities Act. The report on university animal facilities for 2003 covers inspections of facilities at the three Alberta universities that use animals in research and education, these being the universities of Alberta, Calgary, and Lethbridge. The report does conclude that the animals are being cared for appropriately.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister for Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table with the Assembly today five copies of a recently printed report of the Endangered Species Conservation Committee, which is chaired, of course, by my colleague the Member for West Yellowhead. The committee reports to me on the progress of their efforts on behalf of Alberta's species at risk. The 11-member committee represents the academic community and organizations of land-use managers, resource users, conservation groups, and government departments. The biannual report covers the period of June 2000 to June 2002 and sets the stage for ongoing activities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of the Alberta government aircraft passenger manifest, and these are for the date of Thursday, April 4, 2002. The first flight on this manifest is the King Air. The department is Infrastructure, from Edmonton city centre to Calgary.

The Speaker: Hon. member, we just table and move on.

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, I think this will help clarify one of the issues brought up earlier on the floor.

The Speaker: Right now we're in Tablings. Is the hon. member finished?

The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Lund: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I want to table answers to Written Question 15 from last session and the manifest that I referred to earlier that clearly was the basis of the question from the hon. member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I table the appropriate number of copies of a speech given by Christien Gauld. It was a very touching speech about the effects of cutbacks in speech therapy on her child.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling this afternoon, and that is a letter to the editor of the Eckville Echo, and it is signed by Herman Schwenk from Coronation, past president, Alberta Rural Electrification Association, and this is in regard to electricity deregulation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got one tabling today. It's appropriate copies of a letter from Mr. Tim Belec dated February 25, 2004. He's a resident of Westeros, and the letter is addressed to the Premier. He urges the Premier to seek a mandate before opening up our hospital wards to "silver-trayed room service to foreign 'customers'."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'm not sure if there's a full moon out today or not, but we've three points of order. So the first from the hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I hope by that reference that you weren't suggesting already that I was crazy.

Mr. Speaker, today in this House we reached, in my view, a new low, and I'm going to speak to the first of the new lows in my first point of order and then my second point of order presumably after Edmonton-Highlands has put his point of order.

The first point of order I raised was with respect to the third question put today, in this case by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. I don't have the Blues, but during the process of putting his question, he used the term "payola." I would refer members to the Standing Orders of this House – 23(1), where a member "introduces any matter in debate which offends the practices and precedents of the Assembly," and 23(i), imputing "false or unavowed motives" would apply – but more particularly to Beauchesne's 493(3) and (4).

(3) The Speaker has traditionally protected from attack a group of individuals commonly referred to as "those of high official station".

The extent of this group has never been defined. Over the years it has covered senior public servants, ranking officers of the armed services, [et cetera].

(4) The Speaker has cautioned Members to exercise great care in making statements about persons who are outside the House and unable to reply.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when one uses the term “payola,” I think there’s a fairly clear understanding that one is suggesting impropriety and more than suggesting impropriety, but let’s go to the Oxford dictionary definition: “bribery in return for the unofficial promotion of a product in the media.” I don’t think it’s necessary for anyone on this side of the House to understand what the term means, but the people on the other side appear not to have a very good education; therefore, the Oxford definition of bribery: “dishonestly persuade (someone) to act in one’s favour by a payment or other inducement.”

Mr. Speaker, that is probably the most heinous thing that one can say of another person in government and public service, and in this case there can be no doubt as to whom the member on the other side was referring in his question. He was talking clearly about the public’s advocate, the deputy minister level employee of the government who has been named as the Utilities Consumer Advocate.

Basically, the gist of the question today, the questions that have been raised earlier in the House – and I don’t for a moment raise any concern about opposition members or any member of the House questioning how monies are applied to any particular project, who ought to be paying, who ought not to be paying. But to go so far as to suggest that there’s payola, bribery, dishonesty with respect to a public official goes way beyond the pale, and that hon. member ought to stand in his place and state that he had no intention to impugn the integrity of senior public servants in this province and to acknowledge that by saying that there’s payola involved, he’s taking it above the normal propriety of this House in which the opposition has the right, indeed the obligation, to question the way in which government operates and went far beyond that. He should withdraw the comments which clearly impugn the integrity of the utilities commissioner of this province.

The Speaker: Hon. Opposition House Leader, are you participating on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar?

Ms Blakeman: Yes. In my inaugural response as a House leader to the point of order raised I will be arguing in defence of the questions from the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. In looking at the question that was asked, there was no clear reference with the use of the word “payola,” unlike what is being argued by the hon. House leader on the other side. He was questioning why the government had chosen to make other funding arrangements than what were clearly outlined in the government’s own policy. The question of the use of the word “payola,” which is an informal bribe to get special treatment, especially to promote a commercial product – in the question asked by the member, he’s not making reference. He said, “Given that this is a clear case of payola.” He does not attribute it to any given individual or entity at all.

Now, the House leader also raised but didn’t argue the point of offending the practices of the House under 23(1), and he also raised Beauchesne 493(3) and (4), which is referring to “those of high official station,” and in fact that has not been determined. “The Speaker has traditionally protected from attack a group of individuals commonly referred to as ‘those of high official station.’ ” It’s never been defined, but it gives suggestions of “senior public servants, ranking officers of the armed services, diplomatic representatives in Canada, a Minister who was not a Member of either House.”

Well, we’re here talking about independent businesspeople. [interjection] Yes, we’re talking about who pays the utility commission, and the people that are involved in that I don’t think are covered under any of the groups that I have just named: “of the armed services, diplomatic representatives in Canada, a Minister who was not a Member of either House.” So I dispute that point from the member.

This is the job of the Official Opposition: to raise questions with the government and to call them to account. That is what this member has tried to do in bringing forward a situation in which the government appears to have contravened its own policy, and the member was questioning why. So I would argue that none of the citations brought forward by the House leader have in fact been contravened.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Additional participation?

Well, there may be some members in the House who actually are young enough not to know the origin of the word “payola,” so just for edification I will advise them that there was a time in North America when disc jockeys were playing music and record companies wanted to promote music and the artists on the records. Somehow it seems that payments were made under the table to the disc jockeys to play the records. So it was a bribe, and it was exposed. As I recall, the American Congress, in fact, had massive hearings at one time, and a lot of very reputable people who had started careers in the record business quickly found their careers brought to an end.

In this case the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar raised the first question: “Why is the Premier allowing the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate to be fully funded by the gas companies and the Balancing Pool?” Okay. A straightforward question.

In the second question the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar then goes further: “How can this government call the Utilities Consumer Advocate independent when his paycheque and his office expenses are being signed by the utility companies?” So there was a progression down the line.

Then in the third question the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar basically agrees with the position he wants to take by saying:

Given that this is a clear case of payola, who in the government decision-making process made the decision, who in cabinet made the decision that the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate should be fully funded by industry?

There’s a progression in the three questions that almost leads to the conclusion that there was bribery taking place. That is, in the chair’s view, totally, totally odious, and I’m not so sure that the language in the past is such that – everything has to do with the context of the question.

The word “payola” was used once in the Canadian House of Commons, and it was used in a speech given by the Member for Calgary West on September 28, 1998, but it was used in this context: “We have to end the whole practice of some would say payola, patronage, kickbacks or backroom dealing. Anyway we want to phrase it, it is wrong and we should end these types of things.” There was no intervention and there was no interjection in the Canadian House of Commons at the time.

Today it seems, though, that there’s an innuendo with respect to this. No one has been named with respect to this, and I say that no one has been named, so that means it’s a technical determination that there was not an allegation made against a particular member. But there’s absolutely no doubt in the chair’s mind that it wasn’t required. The phrase was not required in the question. It added nothing to the question.

The chair understands that there is a dynamic in the question period, but the chair also knows that if all members of this House respected the rules that are found with respect to questions in the book that we use, Beauchesne, and also the guidance provided by the chair prior to the beginning of each session, we would never have these kinds of interventions. We would never have these kinds of statements with respect to a question period.

The word in this case added absolutely nothing to the contents of the question. It provided an innuendo that perhaps will hurt someone outside of this House. Hopefully, that will not be the case. Words such as this are not necessary to any of the quality in this Assembly. One may be enthusiastic in the question, but the use of words which may cause harm to others adds nothing and adds nothing to the dignity of the person raising the question. The chair also has to note that the Premier did respond and said that he would use this term in speaking of the federal Liberals.

I think we're just on the edge here today of whether or not this is a point of order. There's nothing that added to the quality of the context. There is nothing that added to the importance or the impact of the question. It was a rightful interjection for the Government House Leader to raise the point of order. It was a rightful opportunity to have a review of this. I just wish people would ask questions according to the rules of the House, and maybe the answers would come back, too, according to the rules of the House. This is not a good example to give to anyone who visits this Assembly. I feel sad about that.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, you had a point of order?

Point of Order Addressing the Chair

Mr. Mason: I did indeed, Mr. Speaker, and if I may cite from Beauchesne's 168 and from Erskine May, chapter 18, on page 371: "A Member must address the Speaker and not direct his speech to the House or to any party on either side of the House." I don't have the Blues in front of me, but today during question period in response to the question from my colleague the leader of the New Democrat opposition . . . [interjections] If I can make my point without interruption. The Premier leaned over and in a very belligerent and aggressive fashion, pointing his finger at my colleague, repeatedly addressed him directly and not through the Speaker, calling him "you." He repeated that several times. I would just like to bring to the House's attention that as per your ruling it is, in fact, a requirement that even in response to questions it's important to go through the chair and not personally address any members of this Assembly.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I think it's always a matter of the rules of the House that one addresses the Assembly through the chair. It is difficult when you're asked a question and you're responding to a question raised by a member. You tend to look at the member and you tend to address the answer to the member because that's what's considered polite in normal society, but we recognize that in this House we address matters through the chair. I will make sure that all members of Executive Council are aware that that is the practice, procedure, and process in the future.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'm going to bring this one quickly to a head. There was absolutely no doubt at all in the chair's mind that the hon. the Premier did turn his back to the chair and did focus his attention in the direction of the members of the New Democrat caucus, who should not have been interjecting when the Premier was speaking.

Now, there is a basic protection the chair can give to all members. There is a reason why members speak through the chair, and there is a reason why members are asked to direct their comments to the chair. It's not because the chair has an ego that needs to be, you know, enhanced. That's not the reason. It's done so that the chair can be in a position to protect the member and the members. If the member is not facing the chair and if something 'slurrious', spurious may be used by way of language, I guess, with words being omitted or body movements or something like this, if the chair doesn't see it, the chair cannot intervene to protect anyone. That's the reason, and it's a basic reason.

In this case there's absolutely no doubt at all that the Premier did turn around, and he did look and I think as he was saying – I'm not sure that it was belligerent, though, when you read the words: "Now, you may think differently, but I'll tell you, your friend in Saskatchewan, Mr. Calvert, your friend in Manitoba, Mr. Doer, agrees – agrees with me – on this point." There's a lot of friendship talk in here. If it's belligerent, I'm sorry about that, but I could not see that.

So, Government House Leader, if you would convey to all your colleagues, again, the reason for this. Please use all the words used by the chair in conveying the message. It would be kind of important.

The hon. Government House Leader on a point of order.

Point of Order Improper Inferences

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will use all the words and assure him that it wasn't with respect to vanity that you require to be addressed.

But, in all seriousness, there has been a series of questions raised in this House in the last few days and, in particular, one raised today by the Member for Edmonton-Glengarry which offend the practices of the House. Particularly, I would point you to House of Commons Procedure and Practice page 438 under Written Questions where it says:

While oral questions are posed without notice on matters deemed to be of an urgent nature, written questions are placed after notice on the Order Paper with the intent of seeking from the Ministry detailed, lengthy or technical information relating to "public affairs."

I would submit, Mr. Speaker, as well, Beauchesne's 409(7) on page 121: "A question must adhere to the proprieties of the House, in terms of inferences, imputing motives or casting aspersions upon persons within the House or out of it." And 23(h) and (l) as well, as I've referred to earlier.

Essentially, my point, Mr. Speaker, is that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry has on at least two occasions raised specific questions in the House with respect to a specific date some years prior to this with respect to a specific manifest and who might be on it. It would be both courteous and parliamentary of that member to either put that type of a question in the form of a written question or provide notice to the minister that he's raising the question with the intent of the question if, in fact, he intends to do something other than cast aspersions on the minister.

It is the Minister of Infrastructure who's responsible for who flies on government planes at what time. It's the Minister of Infrastructure who has the obligation to ensure that the government planes are used in an appropriate manner. By raising questions in the House – and again I don't for a moment want to deny the opposition or anyone else in this House the right to ask about the appropriate use of government planes or the appropriate use of government money and the people's money or any of that. It's not about not being held accountable. It's about how you're held accountable in the manner which is not simply a drive-by smearing but is an appropriate question for accountability.

When you ask a question of a detailed nature on a manifest on a specific date at a specific time as to who was on the plane, knowing full well that no one – the Minister of Infrastructure, despite his brilliance, cannot possibly know who was on what plane on what day for what purpose, so by asking the question in that manner in the House, the motive of the member asking the question is obviously to create an innuendo of some improper purpose. If it was for any other reason that he asked the question, he would have either given notice to the minister so that the minister could be in a position to know who was on the plane at that time and be prepared to be accountable for it, or he would have put it in Written Questions, where matters of a technical nature are properly determined.

It is totally inappropriate and offends the propriety of this House to use this House to smear the character of other members and to bring the character of all members into disrepute by suggesting that there's a process of using government planes or government money, the people's money, inappropriately. Government must be held accountable. Government must be open and honest. We relish the opportunity to be open and honest, to be the most open government in terms of providing accountability for public funds anywhere. But raising questions in that manner has only one purpose, Mr. Speaker, and that's to smear, to drag down the reputation of the member who's responsible for determining who rides on government planes at what time and for what purpose. There could be no other reason for asking the question in that manner, and the member should rise in his place and apologize.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you for the opportunity to respond to the issues brought forward by the hon. House leader. As I stated before, it's the job of the Official Opposition to ask questions of the government and hold them to account, and in fact, Mr. Speaker, that's exactly what happened today.

The Government House Leader very quickly named a number of citations. I missed the first two – I'm sorry – but I did catch 23(h) and (l) regarding casting aspersions, and I would like to come back to that. He spent a great deal of time also talking about how the level of detail that was asked for was more appropriate for a written question, and then somehow tried to hook that to the fact that it was a smear in that it had been asked as a question in question period rather than as a written question. The logic of that is escaping me.

I will address the actual questions that were asked. What's interesting in this is that the ministers were very well prepared today because there was a question that was asked yesterday. The Member for Edmonton-Glengarry very carefully laid out in the preamble the misunderstanding or possible misunderstanding that had happened in the exchange yesterday and offered an opportunity for the government to clarify, because in fact on the face of it there was a discrepancy in what the minister questioned yesterday had answered.

The questions were very straightforward to the Premier: would he help his minister out by confirming that the government does transport people to partisan political events? So the opportunity for the government to answer the question. There were no names mentioned there. I don't know how anyone could be smeared by it. There were no names mentioned.

In the second question, the Premier is asked again about a specific date. Now, according to the information that we were able to obtain, there were some seven flights on the day in question, and in fact the Minister of Infrastructure was very well prepared because he had the aircraft request from Alberta Infrastructure with him. So he was very prepared for this particular series of questions. When there was a question about transportation of a particular group of people – and the question asked was very straightforward; there was no innuendo.

It was just why on this particular date the government plane was used to transport a particular group of individuals who were not sitting government members. According to the information we have, that's a perfectly reasonable question.

The final question in the series: whether the persons that were transported – again, no names were mentioned there in the third question – reimbursed costs, and that in fact was answered.

There was no casting of aspersions upon any individuals, named or unnamed, here. There were straight-out questions to seek information from the government. A set of circumstances presented themselves, and the opposition questioned the government on that set of circumstances to allow the government to answer why that situation occurred.

The second issue raised by the Government House Leader is that somehow the government was unprepared for this, and it was not fair or was going against the practices of the House to be asking a question that required a level of detail the minister couldn't be expected to have. In fact, the Minister of Infrastructure was very prepared to answer that, and the original question to the Minister of Municipal Affairs was asked because on the passenger manifest that was the department under question. So the question was appropriately directed the first time, and in fact the minister responsible in this case was very aware of the situation and was prepared to answer the question, as was evidenced.

So we do not have aspersions cast here. We have no practices that offended the House. The opposition was seeking information and is perfectly entitled to do that. The question named names where appropriate and didn't where it wasn't appropriate. I don't see how there is a successful point of order in what the Government House Leader has presented.

I look forward to your response.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure on this point of order.

Mr. Lund: Yes, on this point of order, Mr. Speaker. I'm having trouble even believing that someone would stand up and make some of the comments that we just heard. Clearly – clearly – yesterday the member said: "There were several municipal leaders." The fact is that coming from Calgary to Edmonton, the mayor of Edmonton and the mayor of Leduc were the two people from a municipality. "Family members of MLAs": there was no family member of any MLA. As a matter of fact, there was only one MLA. They had the manifest, and they had the names of all the individuals that were on that manifest. "Other persons": yes, there were other persons on it.

Also, to suggest and question: were these people going down to the Premier's dinner? Well, the fact is that the plane, when I look at the log, left Calgary at five minutes after 1 o'clock. The Premier's dinner did not start till the evening, and in fact all of the people – all of the people – that flew down to Calgary on the aircraft in the morning came back on the aircraft and left Calgary at . . . [interjection] But there's only one flight that was with Municipal Affairs, and you asked the question of Municipal Affairs, so there's no question, Mr. Speaker, about the intent of what they were up to.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, do you want to participate?

Mr. Bonner: No. That's fine.

The Speaker: The hon. government whip, please.

Ms Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the point of order today, just on the specific narrow band of that, the issue on the point of order was actually on the October 2002 – the innuendo was that we were flying former Premier Getty and his family around for no specific purpose.

I wanted to just address from my perspective, sitting and listening to the questions since last week when we came back into this spring session, that many of the questions are designed on the basis of implying in some way, passing innuendo or casting aspersions or making people who take the time to listen to this or read a headline, that somehow members of my government – ministers, MLAs – are doing something wrong. Mr. Speaker, what I find totally and wholly unacceptable about what's happened since the session began is that whether anybody's been guilty of anything, the innuendo is out there.

In the world that we live in where so many people enter the world of politics with all the best of intentions, nothing but the right reasons for wanting to be here, it takes about four seconds before somebody's questioning whether you have any integrity. These types of things that we do to ourselves in here are just horrendous to me. There are many issues in an over $20 billion budget in 24 different departments: in health, in education, on roads. There are great questions, and the opposition have every right to ask them. But when they drop down into these depths, they make everybody feel like, "My God, what are we doing? We must have done something wrong."

You're always putting into question our integrity in here. When you do that, hon. members, you do it to yourselves as well, and I think it's really sad. It's so out of character for what Alberta stands for. I just hope that one day this kind of thing can stop, that we can get back onto issues that matter. They have their philosophical point of view; we have ours. But when you tear us all down like this, you've hurt the whole, and there's no merit in it. There's no value to it. It is not what Albertans expect of us. Frankly, it just horrifies me, and I want it to stop.

The Speaker: Let me quote from Alberta Hansard, Tuesday afternoon, February 24, 2004, page 117. This is the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me be categorical. At no time will a government plane ever be used for political purposes, now, ever before, or ever into the future.

That's in Hansard. That was said here yesterday.

Okay. I respect any hon. member's right to stand in this House and say what they want to say, providing it's within the rules. So today the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry started off with a preamble saying that there was some confusion about whether or not the government uses its planes to fly persons not in government to partisan political events, and the last statement in the question was:

To the Premier: will the Premier help his minister out by confirming that the government does transport people to partisan political events such as the Premier's dinner?

Now, I just finished reading what I read in Hansard on page 117. Okay. It seems to me it was clarified, but the hon. member is right to raise a question. So the Premier responded.

The next question from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry:

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Premier: can the Premier explain why on October 1, 2002, the government plane transported to and from Edmonton and Calgary six members of the Getty family?

Now, as I'd indicated in a previous point of order today, there seems to be an extension from one question to the next. Clearly, our rules make comment about innuendo. If I were to read this: does the government "transport people to partisan political events such as the Premier's dinner?" there's an answer given. So the next one is: what about "six members of the Getty family?" Well, I guess I'm just sitting here saying: whoa, does he mean that six members of the Getty family went to a partisan political event such as the Premier's dinner? That would be the connection I'd make. That's what I make. All I do for a living these days is listen – that's my sole reason for being – and I think there was an innuendo. Once again, I know the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, and I know he's better than that.

So it's not a good day. We've had an explanation of this. You know, this is – what? – day 6. It was clarified to me that there's not a full moon out today, but I heard the plea from the government whip, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View, about pulling people down: everybody goes down. I think this is a place of honour. We've had this building here for 99 years in the province of Alberta, and I think we're supposed to be here to talk about policy and alternative policies, and we start talking about personalities and stuff like that. Maybe there's another place in the world for it, but it's never been a part of the tradition of Alberta that I'm aware of.

Orders of the Day

head:

Transmittal of Estimates

Mrs. Nelson: Mr. Speaker, I have received a certain message from Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, which I now transmit to you.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Lieutenant Governor transmits supplementary estimates of certain sums required for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2004, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

Please be seated.

Mrs. Nelson: Mr. Speaker, prior to moving a number of motions relevant to the supplementary estimates, I wish to advise that this morning I provided the government's 2003-2004 quarterly budget report for the third quarter to all MLAs. We have also made this report public as required by section 9 of the Government Accountability Act. I am now tabling this quarterly budget report as the amended consolidated fiscal plan. This revised plan is required by section 8 of the same act whenever a subsequent set of estimates is tabled during the fiscal year.

I am also tabling the third-quarter activity report for 2003-2004. This document describes the major achievements of our government during the recent period.

Mr. Speaker, I also now wish to table the 2003-2004 supplementary estimates, No. 2. These supplementary estimates will provide additional spending authority to nine departments of the government. When passed, these estimates will authorize an increase of $114,322,000 in voted operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases and $6,350,000 in voted capital investment.

Mr. Speaker, section 8 of the Government Accountability Act requires that the government table a new and amended consolidated fiscal plan when there is another set of estimates. Having just tabled the amended fiscal plan as the quarterly budget report for the third quarter, I have complied with that requirement.

Government Motions

8. Mrs. Nelson moved:

Be it resolved that the message of Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, the 2003-04 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply.

The Speaker: It's a debatable motion.

[Government Motion 8 carried]

9. Mrs. Nelson moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 58(9) the number of days that Committee of Supply will be called to consider the 2003-04 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund shall be one day.

[Government Motion 9 carried]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 7

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Jonson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure this afternoon to rise to speak to second reading of Bill 7, the Alberta Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. The government of Alberta has long been committed to Senate reform. We have led the charge in pursuing meaningful change through a triple-E Senate, one that is equal, elected, and effective.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta was successful in having Stan Waters, the first Senate nominee elected under the Senatorial Selection Act, appointed to the Senate by then Prime Minister Brian Mulroney back in 1990. Since that time, the Premier has continued to seek the support of other Premiers and the Prime Minister to achieve meaningful Senate reform.

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Senatorial Selection Act is due to expire on December 31, 2004. It was originally expected to be a transitional measure while the provinces and the federal government worked toward an agreement on a triple-E Senate or on overall Senate reform. Now with Bill 7 I am proposing that the act be extended out to December 31, 2010. It has already been extended twice before, once in 1994 and in 1998. I would like to extend the act so that a mechanism remains in place to elect Alberta's Senate nominees should we decide to do so. Extending the act does not commit Alberta to holding further elections for Alberta's Senate nominees. However, it does keep the election mechanism in place so that we would not have to start all over again from the ground up with new legislation allowing Albertans to vote for their Senate nominees.

Mr. Speaker, as we saw with the past Prime Minister, there seems to be little inclination on the part of the current Prime Minister to appoint either of Alberta's elected Senate nominees to the upper Chamber. With two Alberta Senators reaching mandatory retirement age this year, three of Alberta's six Senate seats could be empty.

Alberta will continue to press for Senate reform with other provinces and the federal government. We need to modernize Canada's democratic foundations and ensure that the voices of the provinces are adequately reflected in our parliamentary institutions. Therefore, I encourage all members to vote in favour of Bill 7, the Alberta Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise this afternoon and speak to Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. Certainly, we understand the reasoning behind the extension of this act, but by way of history the concept of a triple-E Senate, which was elected, effective, equal, gained prominence during the 1980s as it was adopted as policy by the government of Alberta at that time. By way of history again, on March 10, 1987, the Alberta Liberals introduced Motion 210 calling for triple-E Senate reform.

During the Meech Lake constitutional discussions it was agreed that the Prime Minister would appoint Senators from a list provided by the provincial governments until real Senate reform occurred. After Meech Lake failed, Prime Minister Mulroney agreed to fill vacancies from provincial lists. In response Alberta passed the Senatorial Selection Act in 1989 because the government believed that the only fair way to choose a candidate for the list was through a province-wide election. The Alberta Liberals voted against the Senatorial Selection Act at that time. In 1989 an Alberta Senate seat became vacant, and an election was held, won by Reformer Stan Waters. The Prime Minister grudgingly appointed him to the Senate.

Amendments were introduced to the Senatorial Selection Act in 1998. Those amendments made it possible for a government to hold elections for a Senate nominee even when no vacancy currently exists. It also established that a person would remain a Senate nominee until they are appointed by the Prime Minister, resign as a nominee, or until their term as nominee expires. Lastly, the bill allowed the provincial cabinet by regulation to determine the duties and functions of Senate nominees, established mechanisms to assess their performance and accountability.

So this is some of the history. In October of 1998 Bert Brown and Ted Morton were elected, with, I might add, a very, very low voter turnout. I did want to provide some background as to where we as Liberals, the Official Opposition, stand on a triple-E Senate. I look forward to hearing comments from other members of the Assembly, and I do thank you for this opportunity to speak to Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak briefly to Bill 7, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. This bill seeks to extend the life of the existing legislation to the year 2010, as I understand it.

Mr. Speaker, the bill speaks to an issue that's broader than just fixing the problem with the Senate. I think Canadians in general would like us all – Canadian citizens, Canadian governments, Canadian political parties, and others – to certainly seek to modernize, bring up to date all our electoral systems, whether they pertain to the election of members to the House of Commons, a House such as ours, the Legislative Assembly of a province, or the manner in which a Senate at the federal level is constituted.

3:30

The general interest, which is reflected to a degree in the bill but, certainly, widely expressed by all kinds of organizations and some political parties including federal NDP and provincial New Democrats, with respect to the need to broadly update and modernize our electoral system I think is appropriate. So the general idea in the bill is something that I have no quarrel with, but to tinker with little pieces one piece at a time I don't think serves well the interests that Canadians in general and Albertans in particular have in the need to modernize our electoral system and the manner in which we constitute our various decision-making bodies at the federal and provincial levels.

I think it's appropriate, perhaps, at this stage, Mr. Speaker, to raise the question of, in fact, increasing regional and provincial representation at all levels including the House of Commons and making that representation not only regionally more representative but also representative in terms of the strength of different political parties that take part in the body politic of Canada both provincially and federally.

Proportional representation has certainly been proposed as one important next step that needs to be taken. Fair Vote Canada, a nonpartisan organization, has been campaigning and working at bringing forward the proposition to move our electoral system from one that's the first past the post type in which the winner takes all model is operational. It doesn't provide representation based on the number of votes, the strength of support expressed electorally that different parties enjoy during our election processes. Western Canada, for example, would be much stronger in terms of representation in the House of Commons if the proportional representation model appropriate to Canadian conditions were adopted here.

So the way to strengthen the voice of provinces and regions at the federal level, in my view, would be much better served if we in this province and across this great country seriously engage Canadians and Albertans in debate with respect to how to improve upon and change our electoral system in order to make all our institutions, including federal institutions, more representative both of political support as expressed through elections and regional representation as indicated in the number of votes and the pattern of support that can be established through democratic, free, and open elections.

So while I understand the spirit behind this proposed legislation, to extend an existing legislation which narrowly focuses on the Senate and the Senate alone, I think it's a bill that's now behind the times. It reflects the debates of the '80s and the '90s. We are into the next new century. We'll be stepping into a new century for this province next year, and I think it's about time for this province to play a leading role in seeking a broad-based change and reform in the electoral system so that both we as Albertans and also we as part of western Canada can find our voices appropriately represented and reflected in federal bodies both at the House of Commons level and perhaps the Senate level.

One question that needs to be raised and debated, I think, is about the present sort of role of the Senate as a body that doesn't really reflect any democratic values or commitments in the way it gets appointed. It hasn't really served to broaden democratic participation or democratic sorts of commitments on the part of ordinary citizens to the electoral process because the Senate, in particular, denies the role to Canadians in having any ability to determine who sits in the Senate.

Merely for one province to continue to bring forward legislation which, in my view, is perhaps left behind by the changing times suggests that we need a more broad-based, more pan-Canadian effort to mobilize support for effective reform that will democratize the institutions that we take pride in and that provide us the democratic means to set the course of our nation, of our province, and of communities across this country.

So, Mr. Speaker, I have serious reservations about the utility of Bill 7 and what it proposes to do. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in.

Mr. McClelland: On debate?

The Speaker: No. We have the five-minute comment and question section. Any members wishing to participate?

There being none, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This is a particularly important opportunity to speak to the Senate of Canada. I speak to the Senate of Canada today because I think that vested with the Senate is the capacity to achieve balance in the country, which is sadly lacking, but if it were there, it would effectively remove many of the irritants which have over many decades, since at least 1914 or 1915, resulted in what is known as western alienation and in our case particularly alienation here.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Now, it's interesting that the Senate didn't happen overnight. The Senate was a reflection of the British parliamentary system in the House of Lords. As members would know, the House of Lords is an appointed body, and it was appointed without number, so in the Confederation debates that took place in 1864, the first question that came to be debated was the number. It was decided that there would be a limited number of Senators, and initially it was for Upper/Lower Canada or for the provinces that made up Confederation. But there would be a finite number, unlike with the British House of Lords, which could, in essence, be an infinite number.

The second consideration that took place even at that time in the 1860s was: would this body be elective or would it be appointed, and if appointed, how so? The concern was that if the upper House was to be a reflection of that which already existed, all that would happen is that it would end up being a mimic of the lower House. It was determined at the time that the lower House should have an effective check and balance that would not have members sitting based on the same volition as the lower House. Thereby, they would not have to be elected. Thereby, they would not have to appeal to voters for the same reasons. They could therefore potentially have a longer range vision, a longer view. What had happened, even in Upper and Lower Canada, was that the upper House ended up being a reflection of the lower House because the members were appointed by the politicians in the lower House.

So it was determined then that in Canada's first Senate the members of the upper House would be appointed by the Crown, and that's the essential difference in what has happened in the intervening years. The notion of the Senate being appointed by the Crown in 1867 meant that the allegiance of those in the upper House would be to the people of Canada with the longer range view and would, in fact, represent the provinces. The initial Senate was to represent the provinces in the upper House with a longer range vision.

Well, as members know, that is not what has evolved. That's not what's happened. That's not the case today. The upper House does not reflect the provinces. The upper House reflects people appointed from the provinces but whose allegiance is not to the province. It's to the federal government; it's to the central government. In Quebec Senators are elected representing various geographic regions, and they have a specific geographic region to represent. In the rest of Canada that's not the case.

The net result is that our upper House does not reflect the values that were envisioned for the upper House in 1867, nor does it reflect the values that are necessary today. Because it does not reflect the values, which is to be a representative of the regions or the provinces, we end up with legislation that is of interest to the heavily weighted population centres as represented in the House of Commons but without the check and balance of the regions.

Let me give you an example. The famous gun registry is a piece of legislation that came as a direct result of an incident that took place in Montreal. It was the massacre at l'école Polytechnique, a disaster and a terrible thing. That raised the awareness of gun violence and, of course, gun violence and violence in general that we see on TV every day. A person by the name of Wendy Cukier in Toronto took up the cudgels, and she made it a political ambition, essentially, to have firearms removed from Canada as much as could possibly be achieved. The federal government of the day took this up as a very popular measure, and it was and is very popular in downtown Montreal, downtown Toronto, and in many urban centres across the country.

The difficulty is that Canada geographically is vast and diverse, and what may well be good for downtown Toronto and downtown Montreal is not necessarily appropriate in other regions of the country, either in Atlantic Canada or in the west or even in the north of Ontario.

So we need to have far more flexibility in our federation. We need to have a certain ambivalence within our Legislatures that provides for treating different geographic regions of the country and different interests differently because one size does not fit all in a country as broad and diverse as our country. That's why the Senate is so absolutely crucial to the future of our country. If we are not able to achieve balance in the country, we are not ever going to rid ourselves of the sense that there are those who are underrepresented or not represented, which results in a sense of not being part of the equation when matters of national importance are considered.

It's not going to be easy for us to continue to drive the agenda for a reformed Senate, and in fact it may not be a triple-E Senate that we eventually arrive at. Ted Morton, one of Alberta's Senators in waiting, has been circulating a paper which calls for a proportionally equal Senate, which, in his opinion, is better for Alberta and better for Canada and certainly would be a far easier sell to the other Premiers.

Now, through the Council of the Federation, in which our Premier will definitely and does have a leadership role, we do have now a unique opportunity to drive the agenda for Senate reform. In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, if we are to have a united Canada a hundred years from today as we are at the cusp of going into our hundredth anniversary of being a member of the Canadian family and Confederation, it will be because we have the courage to drive the agenda for Senate reform which will result in balance in the country even when no one else will listen, especially when no one else will listen. Because we have the opportunity, we also have the obligation to do so. If we do not, then I fear that a hundred years from today someone would be standing in this place, and we will not be addressing the Canada, the future that we could have if we do address it.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would encourage all members of this Legislature and indeed all Albertans to get behind this, to say that we will not rest until we have representation in the centre of governance, in the centre, that is equal to what we contribute to this country generally, faithfully as proud Canadians, but there is definitely a limit to our patience as being taken for granted.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29? Hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry, you are rising to ask a question?

Mr. Bonner: Yes. Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford certainly has had a distinguished career not only at the provincial level but also at the federal level. Under the current rules for gaining entrance into the Senate, hon. members in this country are approached by the Prime Minister and asked if they would certainly consider taking a seat in the Senate, and they have the option of then saying: yes or no. My question to the hon. member would be: if under the current rules he was approached by the Prime Minister of this country, would he accept an appointment to the Senate?

Mr. McClelland: Well, that's a fair question. I would love to be appointed to the Senate by the province of Alberta. I would love to be elected by the people of Alberta to represent the people of Alberta in the Senate of Canada. I can think of no greater honour. If that were to come, I would feel as honoured as every other person in this room. But given my background, given what I have said here today, given the aspirations of Alberta, given how important having Senators representing the province and not the political party or the Prime Minister of the day is, I think my duty to Canada supercedes that. I would with great regret have to say no.

If I ran and were elected by the people of Alberta and were put on a list and the Premier of the province of Alberta submitted that list to the Prime Minister, when in fact that list should be given to the Governor General and the Governor General should make the appointment, not the Prime Minister, then I would be most honoured to serve our country and our province in the Senate. That is the only condition.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. 3:50

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and participate in the debate this afternoon on Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. I think that if there were an election and for some reason or other the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford were in that election, I would probably vote for him. I don't know if that's an endorsement he'd like to go too far with, but I would because I think he would represent this province and its people with distinction.

Now, certainly, we are in changing times in this country, and this whole issue of an elected Senate is an important issue. I find it ironic that at the same time as we're beating the drum here in this province for an elected Senate, we can't have elected regional health authorities. But we have talked about that in this Assembly before, and I won't say anything more in regard to that matter. [interjection] Now, some hon. member across the way has said, "Good," and I think it is odd that we can talk about democratic renewal in Alberta, but we can exclude this whole idea of having democratically elected regional health authorities.

There certainly are many issues to be discussed around citizen empowerment, legislative reform at the province level, electoral reform, election financing reform, and transparency in government that, in my view, go along with reform of the federal Senate. They all fit together in the same debate.

We heard a very good speech from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford on exactly the role of the Senate in the country. One of the things that I don't think has been discussed at length is the change that's occurred in this country as a result of the late Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his government bringing the Constitution home, so to speak. But there have been significant changes in the last 20, 25 years in this country. The Senate has not changed with those times. That's a fact. Are there regional disparities? There certainly are. There certainly are whenever you look at the west, Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritimes.

Are there reasons for western alienation because of the lack of senatorial appointments from Alberta? There certainly are.

When one considers what the original role of the Senate was, to be this chamber of sober second thought on legislation, well, it is my view that with the constitutional changes that were implemented in the last generation, the judiciary has taken over a lot of that role of sober second thought on legislative proposals. Legislative assemblies, the federal House of Commons: it seems to be almost routine to have the judiciary look at legislation from time to time to see if it is compliant with the Charter. That is why I say that there's such a change, and there has been a change in how the Senate works because some of the job, I think, that the Fathers of Confederation thought that the Senate should do has now been taken over by the judiciary.

That is one fact that I think has not come forward in the debate. It is the view of this hon. member that there has been a significant change, and that has not been reflected in the Senate. How do we change the Senate? That's a good question. It needs to be changed. It certainly does, and I support that. But is this the answer? I'm not so sure.

I don't think it is proper to look at the appointed Senators and say that they are not doing a very good job. I used to have a sort of really suspicious attitude towards the Senate, but I had the pleasure and the honour of going to a south side banquet hotel, the south side of Edmonton, and participated in an evening where many people from across this province had come to Edmonton and gathered to toast their success. Many of them were adults who had learned to read. One of the promoters of adult literacy in this country, one of the greatest promoters, is Senator Joyce Fairbairn. Now, I don't know if I'm allowed to say the Senator's name in this Assembly or the Senator from Lethbridge, but I would apologize to the House and to the Senator if I have said something wrong.

This Senator has gone out of her way to help Albertans who have for one reason or another failed to learn to read, and that one evening convinced me that there is a role for the Senate in this country. That is one member doing many, many good deeds. Senator Doug Roche from the city of Edmonton here: he's an independent member of the Senate, and he has many, many good views to present not only to Canadians but to international audiences in regard to international peace and homelessness.

We can't dismiss these people. They do very, very good work on behalf of not only this province but the entire country. In this debate I would urge all hon. members: please do not forget that.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to urge all members of this Assembly whenever we're discussing senatorial reform that we also should talk about democratic reform as well in this province and in this Legislative Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29 for questions?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I listened very carefully to the hon. member's comments, and while he described the situation somewhat, I want to make absolutely sure that people recognize that when we talk about senatorial reform, we are not saying for one moment that the people that are there are the problem. The problem is the structure, the way it's structured and the way that people get there. So that's the problem. I wanted to make sure that that was on the table.

Listening to the hon. member, I wasn't able to really understand and know whether he believes that allowing the judiciary to be the so-called sober second thought is acceptable and that's the way it should be and also whether, in fact, the structure of the Senate is the way it should be. So I would like to know the answers to those two questions. Is the judiciary to have the appropriate authority to overrule the elected people? Is that what the hon. member wants? Secondly, does he really want the Senate not to be elected?

Mr. MacDonald: Certainly, Mr. Speaker, it's up to individual respective parliaments whether they want to seek advice and guidance from the judiciary. It's not the other way around. So if there's no reason or if legislative assemblies or the House of Commons is not interested in seeking advice from the judicial branch of government, well, then, that's fine. They don't have to do it. It's not any case of judicial activism. It's just how we have over the last number of years had to have clarifications on the Charter. That's it.

As far as an elected Senate, a triple-E Senate, certainly I could live with a triple-E Senate. This side of the House has always been strong believers in a triple-E Senate and Senate reform, but we do not believe that this Senatorial Selection Act is the way forward. This is grandstanding. This is political posturing.

Thank you.

4:00

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. Asking a question?

Mr. McClelland: Thank you. I, too, echo the comments of the Minister of Infrastructure. It's not about the people that are in the Senate, many of whom are remarkable individuals and deserve to be there and do a wonderful job. It's the checks and balances.

The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar brought in the notion of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court, as members know, is essentially appointed by the Prime Minister. We have the phenomenon that the Prime Minister of the country could in fact be directly elected by the membership of a political party. So the leader of the party, who could become the Prime Minister, would not have a connection to the party or the militants but would have direct power outside of the Parliament. As it stands now, the Prime Minister appoints the Senate. So we have the judiciary. We have the Senate. There are no checks and balances in the Canadian system, which further concentrates power in the office of the Prime Minister, which may in fact lead to some of the problems we see today nationally.

I wonder if the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar could answer that and say whether we would not be better as a country if the federation had provinces capable of offsetting the power vested in the centre.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, that's a very good question, Mr. Speaker, and the simple answer to that is that not only at the federal level do we have an extreme concentration of power by leaders. That also happens at the provincial levels as well. Perhaps in all this debate – and I don't see that anywhere – we should look at having term limits. If the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford were, for instance, to be Prime Minister of this country or to be a Premier of this province, perhaps eight years is enough. Maybe we should look at term limits for leaders of this country and the provinces so that there is not this concentration of power in one or more offices.

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is still dancing around the question that we're asking and trying to get him to commit to, but I want to also suggest to the member that under our current Premier if anybody thinks that all the power is invested in the office of the Premier, then certainly they don't know the inner way that our government works because all members have the opportunity . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. minister, regrettably the five minutes that's allocated for this portion has run out.

Anybody else who wishes to participate in the debate may do so now.

The hon. Minister for International and Intergovernmental Relations to close debate.

Mr. Jonson: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I'd like to commend those people that have engaged in the debate because it is, in the view of the government of Alberta, a very, very important topic, particularly in these times when the whole position or place of the province is undergoing a review under the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford's capable chairmanship.

It's also a time in which across the country, both at the provincial and federal levels, there's interest in parliamentary reform and in government reform. The bill, of course, as members of this Assembly have already rightly pointed out, is a very basic, mundane bill, I suppose you could say, but an important one, extending the timelines for legislation we've had in place for a number of years, and was something that was established to provide a framework for moving ahead on Senate reform.

We acknowledge the various suggestions, recommendations, and comments that have been made in favour of Senate reform and there being, of course, a great deal more to bring about true Senate reform which would be operational in this country, but right now, Mr. Speaker, we are simply extending this legislation to keep in place the mechanism that would allow us to become involved in the selection of Senate representatives for Alberta. This is not the end of the government's interest in Senate reform by any means. It is merely keeping in place one measure which we think is necessary for the overall work on Senate reform and improving the overall governance of our country federally on into the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 7 read a second time]

Bill 8

Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Ms Graham: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon it is my pleasure to move for second reading Bill 8, the Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004.

The proposed changes contained in this bill are based on the final report of a committee that I chaired in 2002 which reviewed Alberta Blue Cross, and it had a name, the Alberta Blue Cross Review Committee. It was a report to the minister, and I think it has now been distributed but not by the minister. It was a report internal to government. It had one external consultant working with the committee, and departments which were represented on the committee were Alberta Health and Wellness, Alberta Finance, and Alberta Revenue, and I was the sole MLA participating in the review.

Prior to describing the amendments proposed by this bill, I would like to just briefly give a backdrop to this review. Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons the review was called for was concerns which had been expressed that the private health insurance plans of Alberta Blue Cross might be subsidized by surpluses that had been generated through the operation of Alberta Blue Cross's Alberta government plans, and it was argued that this subsidization, if it existed, provided an unfair advantage to Alberta Blue Cross which other insurance companies operating in the province which were selling products similar to Alberta Blue Cross in the realm of private health insurance plans only did not enjoy.

The basis for these concerns was basically twofold; firstly, that Alberta Blue Cross is exempt from the payment of the 2 per cent premium tax under the Alberta Corporate Tax Act, which is the case. All other insurance companies in the province must pay this tax on their accident and sickness insurance premiums that they receive during the tax year. Mr. Speaker, the products where private insurers and Alberta Blue Cross would be competing are those programs which are called subscription rate programs, which provide supplementary health benefits for small employer groups, for individual plans, and also for travel insurance plans. So it was the recommendation of the committee that this advantage be removed because it was found to in fact be an advantage operating to the benefit of Alberta Blue Cross not enjoyed by private insurance companies.

The second basis for concern was that as Alberta Blue Cross is a not-for-profit entity, it is exempt from the payment of federal and provincial income taxes, and this means that Alberta Blue Cross can reinvest its entire surplus in any given year as it sees fit, whereas a taxable company in the same business can only work with its surplus net of tax to reinvest.

4:10

Now, it was the committee's recommendation that, in fact, Alberta Blue Cross retain its tax-exempt status for other reasons, those other reasons being that as Alberta Blue Cross is a legislated entity, it does have legislated mandates, one of which is to participate in programs – to initiate them, own them – that benefit the health of Albertans, and in fact Blue Cross does participate in programs such as the tobacco reduction program and others of that nature, which do represent a cost to it which private insurers don't have to be concerned about. However, it was the decision of this government to go with the option of removing that tax-exempt status and requiring Alberta Blue Cross to in effect pay tax through the payment in lieu of tax program.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the backdrop to this bill, and what the amendments in this bill do is level the playing field between Alberta Blue Cross and other private providers only on private insurance programs, which represent roughly 15 per cent of Alberta Blue Cross's customers.

Just to summarize then, the main amendments of the bill have the effect of removing the tax-exempt status of Alberta Blue Cross and establishing the payment in lieu of tax program for it in recognition of federal and provincial income taxes and, secondly, requiring Alberta Blue Cross to commence paying a premium tax of 2 per cent, but I reiterate that this is just on its private insurance programs. It is hoped that the concerns that have been raised about the corporation enjoying a competitive advantage will now be adequately addressed.

At the same time, this bill also provides amendments which protect the government-sponsored Alberta Blue Cross programs for the benefit of Albertans, and it does this by clarifying the definition of the scope of the Alberta Blue Cross plan so that in the future the Alberta Blue Cross Benefits Corporation, which operates the Blue Cross plan, is not in any position to expand its operations or its products into types of insurance which would expose the corporation to significant risk, and it does this by defining the plan basically as it stands now. So the status quo is maintained, and new insurance products cannot be readily added to its inventory that might put its subscribers at risk.

Mr. Speaker, there are also amendments contained in this bill which address corporate governance standards. The act establishing the ABC Benefits Corporation was basically silent on the duties of care for directors and officers and the duties of the board. This has been addressed in the bill by establishing such duties, which are consistent with those found in our own Alberta Business Corporations Act, and these amendments should give assurance to Albertans that the corporate governance is up to date and in accordance with our current standards.

Before taking my seat, Mr. Speaker, I would like to recommend the report to anyone who wants to learn more about Alberta Blue Cross. It is certainly an impressive organization which does its job in administering government-sponsored programs very well. It also provides other good services to Albertans by engaging in activities which support the Alberta government regarding health care issues and policy issues, and I would like to reiterate yet again that this bill and its amendments, which relate to the payment of income tax and premium tax, relate to a narrow portion of the business of Alberta Blue Cross, as I mentioned, 15 per cent of its customers.

The other 85 per cent of Alberta Blue Cross business is administrative services only business with respect to prepaid supplementary health plans and services. This, Mr. Speaker, consists in the main of the Alberta Health and Wellness sponsored supplemental health care coverage for seniors, widows, and nongroup members and also the Alberta Human Resources and Employment sponsored programs, being the child health benefit and income support programs. These are administered by Alberta Blue Cross on a cash flow basis for the government of Alberta, which pays an administrative fee by agreement for that service provided by Blue Cross.

These are my comments on second reading, Mr. Speaker, and I look forward to any debate that may be forthcoming.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can assure the hon. member that there will be debate forthcoming.

This is a bill that the opposition will strongly oppose. We've already had a number of calls on this. In fact, I had an urgent call yesterday from a representative of a major group who was quite unhappy with this whole trend represented through this bill.

I listened to the comments from the previous speaker, and I appreciate her candour, and I'm sure we'll go back and forth on this one. There are a number of concerns that we would raise with this bill, and maybe through the course of debate the concerns will be allayed, but I'm not expecting that to happen. I'll keep my mind open.

One of the principles that is at work through this bill is the notion of levelling the playing field so that all providers of health insurance are on an equal footing. The problem I have with the way this process is going is that the playing field is being levelled in the direction of getting more expensive rather than less expensive. In other words, we're taking the lowest cost provider, and we're adding to its expenses to level the playing field. We're doing that through forcing Alberta Blue Cross to make a payment in lieu of taxes and also to pay the premium tax.

I guess I just cannot understand why we would do that. Why would we artificially add to the cost of an insurance company rather than celebrate it? Why not be delighted that we have a lower cost, homegrown, Alberta-based insurance provider serving not only seniors and all kinds of other people but serving many small businesses. We should be celebrating and strengthening that low cost service rather than artificially adding to its costs.

One of the things that I realize is going on here is that we're taking, as I say, a homegrown, Alberta-based major organization that's very successful, and we're giving it a disadvantage so that its main competitors, which are big international insurance corporations, will have a benefit. Where's the Alberta advantage in this? It's certainly not to Albertans. It's not to Blue Cross. It's not to their subscribers. It's to the big multinational insurance industry, which seems to have enormous sway over this government.

Indeed, it has such sway that I can't help thinking of another issue that's brought to the surface by this, which is the need for a lobbyist registry. It has become evident – and I will stand to be corrected, but I have not heard any of that correction so far – that the chair of this committee overruled the committee members and, in fact, required these changes to be made, changed the committee members' consensus recommendations that Blue Cross not be penalized, and brought in the recommendation that Blue Cross be penalized because she was lobbied by the insurance industry.

If that's the case – and I've not seen anything to contradict that; in fact, that's been reported and published and repeated, and as far as I know, there are no denials – it's just shocking. It's just shocking that we are prepared to not only go against a homegrown Alberta organization like Blue Cross, not only add to the cost of the small businesses that rely on Blue Cross for the services, but in fact overrule the members of a committee advising the government just to please the multinational insurance companies. What's happened to this government? Who are they in touch with any more? It's remarkable. So this is yet another example, I think, very much of the need for some kind of lobbyist registry. We need to know who's talking to MLAs and who's influencing them because clearly they're wielding a lot of influence despite due process.

This bill also illustrates yet again the failure of for-profit health care delivery corporations to be competitive. I mean, if the myth had some truth in it, that for-profit health care corporations were the most efficient, effective organizations around, they wouldn't need this bill. They'd be able to beat that clumsy, old, nonprofit Blue Cross hands down. Why would they need this benefit?

Well, the fact is that the idea that the private, for-profit industry is always more efficient is, in fact, nonsense. Sometimes they are. Many times they are. Many times market forces work but not always and especially not in health care. This bill simply confirms that premise, and I'm afraid we're going to see this same premise played out over and over and over again as we see more and more private providers brought into the health care system or, indeed, into other P3 systems. We will either see public standards lowered, whether it's in the provision of insurance or the building of highways or the construction of public buildings, where we're seeing trends toward lower standards, or else we will see costs escalated, which we're seeing played out here.

So this is a bill with nothing – nothing – in it of benefit to Albertans. What's the benefit in this to Albertans? Let me ask you that. Let me put it to you that way. Who's going to benefit? Is it the so-called Martha and Henry people of this province who this government's so happy to refer to? No. It's the big shareholders of the multinational insurance companies who will benefit at the expense of Albertans. This is a shameful piece of legislation as far as I can see.

It goes from there to other problems. The legislation, as I understand it, will limit the product lines that Blue Cross will be able to offer. Why would it do that? Well, the previous speaker said it's to limit the risk that Blue Cross will take. I suspect that it's to limit competition in the marketplace.

Again, what we're doing by this is sidelining one of the most effective, credible, trusted providers of health care insurance in this province to open up the market from here on through eternity to big multinational insurance companies. If they're so darn effective and if Blue Cross is going to be saddled with a payment in lieu of taxes in the premium payment, why not let them go head-to-head? Why are we so frightened of competition on this basis that we have to keep Blue Cross leashed? It's a sad commentary on the state of mind of this government.

So, Mr. Speaker, you can tell that I'm going to be opposing this piece of legislation, and I think we all will be. I might as well warn government members now that we'll be calling for a standing vote on this because we'll want all small businesses in this province who are going to be facing higher costs to know who stands on what side of this issue. [interjections]

So, Mr. Speaker, I'm getting lots of heckling. We'll obviously stir up debate. I look forward to engaging in that debate. I will take my seat.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Standing Order 29(2)?

Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the hon. Member for . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, the question period begins with the third speaker and thereafter, so it doesn't apply to the second speaker.

Rev. Abbott: I'm sorry.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else wish to speak on the bill?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed to close debate.

Ms Graham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I expected that there would be more debate forthcoming.

I would just like to say this in response to the comments made by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview when he asked us why we would be doing what we are doing to level the playing field by requiring Alberta Blue Cross to pay the premium tax and to pay income tax on its private insurance. Basically, why we are doing that is that, well, firstly, our government does not believe that we should be in the business of competing with private business wherever possible. But Alberta Blue Cross has evolved over many years and has gotten into the provision of private insurance programs.

So rather than saying, "you're out of that" and "you can't provide that," we're basically freezing the situation with the status quo. But we are saying that where you compete with private business, you will be on the same level and you will not, government-linked agency, have special benefits that will give you a leg up on companies operating in this province. That's our philosophy. I think it's the correct one. That in a nutshell is why we are doing what we are doing.

In the other remark that was made by the member, he gives me credit for single-handedly changing the recommendations of this committee report. I think he forgets that this was a report to the minister, that this is a government bill, and that, certainly, anything that we do is a decision by caucus and it's certainly not the decision of one backbencher from Calgary-Lougheed. So I think you give me much more power than I had. I could see the arguments on either side of the issue, and there were certain people on the committee that felt that there were good reasons for retaining this tax exemption status. I happen to be one who believes that this is the proper way to go, and I think obviously the majority of our caucus does as well. That's why we're doing what we're doing.

With that, then, I'd call for the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 8 read a second time]

Bill 9
Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use
Amendment Act, 2004

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Ms Graham: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I'm also pleased this afternoon to move second reading of Bill 9, the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004.

Prior to talking about the principles of this bill, I'd also like to talk a bit about its background. Members will no doubt remember that in 2002 this government launched a strategy to reduce tobacco use by all Albertans. A major focus of the strategy was to prevent young people from starting to use tobacco in the first place.

In that context, Mr. Speaker, in April 2003 the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act was proclaimed, which has as its aim to protect young people from the health risks of tobacco. This act was the result of the work of the Member from Wetaskiwin-Camrose, who introduced this as a private member's bill and who has been through his work as former chair of AADAC a very dedicated proponent of antismoking strategies in this province.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, this law made it illegal for anyone under the age of 18 to use or possess tobacco in a public place, and under the act police officers have the authority to issue violation tickets to offenders with a fine of $100 or to seize tobacco products from any minor found using or in possession of tobacco products. But since the act was proclaimed last spring, it has become evident that greater clarity is required in this law to ensure that the act is not applied where and when it wasn't intended and to also make it easier to enforce in court.

So the amendments in Bill 9 and the purpose of Bill 9 are to accomplish three main things: to allow for regulations to be developed to define necessary exemptions for youth to possess or use tobacco in very limited circumstances and for limited purposes, a second purpose is to provide a broader definition of a public place where the act can be enforced, and the third purpose is to establish evidentiary rules for use in prosecuting infractions in court, including the use of certain inferences and the use of certificates of analysis.

Mr. Speaker, the need for exemptions for use or possession of tobacco by minors are these. Aboriginal youth who participate in the ceremonial use of tobacco will be permitted to do so. This affects a very limited number of youth and for very sacred and culturally sensitive purposes for which it has been deemed suitable to exempt this particular use. As well, exemptions will allow young sales clerks to sell tobacco in the workplace without defying the law. If they are under the age of 18 and working in the local Mac's store, they will be able to in fact sell these products without being in contravention of the law. As well, these changes will allow minors to participate in routine sting operations used by Health Canada to test retailer compliance with federal law that makes it illegal to sell tobacco products to minors. So for these very limited purposes these exemptions are seen as being useful and necessary.

As well, Bill 9 will expand the definition of a public place to include a vehicle which is in a place or building deemed to be a public place and also to include other places or buildings which are so designated in regulation.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 9 is needed to help strengthen a law that has been designed to help protect our young people from the health risks of tobacco, and it will also advance our progress in our tobacco reduction strategy by supporting reduced use of tobacco by youth. I do hope all members see their way clear to support these amendments.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [interjection] I'm glad everyone's so excited to hear from me again.

Actually, this bill is in many ways commendable in its spirit, and I have many times encouraged the government and congratulated the government for some of their work on tobacco reduction. I'm sure we all realize the dangers of tobacco use. It's an unusual product in that there's no way to use it safely. Even when you use it according to directions, it's bad for your health. That sets it apart from all kinds of other products that are dangerous when they're overused but are quite safe when they're used in moderation. Of course, the health hazards of tobacco from cancer, which we all know about, heart disease, many, many other problems are well known. So any effort that this government makes to reduce tobacco use is to be commended, and we commend the thrust of this legislation.

That being said, it may be time to actually carry this somewhat further. Alberta, if I'm correct, is unusual in not having comprehensive tobacco control legislation. Most other provinces, I believe, do. In fact, it may be the case that all other provinces do. What we're seeing here in Alberta, while some of it's commendable like the very substantial increases in tobacco taxes last year, is a piecemeal approach. That's what we're seeing Alberta, a piecemeal approach to this problem and then piecemeal corrections and piecemeal shifts.

In the fall there was actually a bill that I spoke strongly against which gave the cigar industry in Alberta a tax break. Well, that's completely the wrong direction to go. That's a significant step backwards. I wouldn't have thought that the cigar industry in Alberta was large enough to mount an effective campaign to get its tax reduced, but I guess it is or that certainly they were able to push the right buttons. So that was a step backwards in the fall.

We had a big step forward a year ago in the spring, and this is something of a step forward too, I think, but as I say, it's all piecemeal, and what we could really benefit from in this province would be comprehensive tobacco control legislation. In fact, there's a kind of irony here in that tobacco is not an Alberta-based industry at all. I'm not aware – maybe the minister of agriculture can correct me – that there's any tobacco grown in this province. We have an out-of-province industry and in many ways an out-of-country industry that we're allowing to come in and claim thousands of lives a year, so I would certainly encourage a stronger stance on this.

The idea in this bill of broadening the definition of a public place for the purposes of enforcement is, I think, a good idea. That's the way to go, and we'll continue to go in that way. Some of the exemptions that are being brought in to the bans on who can possess tobacco and at what age I don't see as a step forward at all. I think we need to stay tough on those kinds of issues. Providing exemptions for people under the age of 18 to possess tobacco because they might work in a convenience store where it's sold doesn't sustain our pressure on containing tobacco use, and I think we need to sustain and increase that pressure.

There's also, of course, the problem with every law, and that is: how is it going to be enforced? This bill will only be as good as the enforcement behind it. We already know, of course, that our police forces, which struggle so much for funding, are overworked, and they're not going to be seeing this as a top priority. We may see some other kinds of enforcement that, in fact, may be facilitated by this bill. Having underage people pose and go in and try to buy tobacco and if they succeed, they'll be able to blow the whistle on the retailer: that's been used in the past, and that sort of thing is effective. But are we going to see the resources for that continued and expanded? If there was one thing we could do genuinely to help the sustainability of our health care system, it would be to reduce tobacco use.

There are many other comments we'll be making on this bill. A lot of it will come once the legislation is in committee. I would, however, make one final point here, which is the value of education in reducing tobacco use as opposed to the value of punishment. I'm certainly not afraid of there being punishment when people break the law or do things they shouldn't be doing, but in this particular case I think we need to remember that education is the best way to go about reducing this problem and catching children and young adults before they get hooked on tobacco. Strong public awareness programs, strong prevention programs, strong education programs are crucial, and the more we have to punish, the more it's a sign that our prevention programs have failed. So while punishment will need to be there and we don't want to lose that, we also want to encourage AADAC or the department of health or whoever else is prepared to do it to spend effort on education and prevention.

Again, if we had comprehensive tobacco control legislation, we could address all of those things at once. We could address issues of pricing and issues of supply, issues of education, issues of punishment, issues of control, and so on all in a single, comprehensive tobacco control bill. We're not going to see that, and that's disappointing, but maybe we can bring in some amendments and improve this bill. Maybe we'll try that.

So I appreciate the rapt attention of the other MLAs on this particular discussion and look forward to other debates. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this opportunity to briefly speak to Bill 9, the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004, and also to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed for bringing forth this bill, which is an amendment to the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act.

Keeping our kids tobacco-free is at the heart of the government's tobacco reduction strategy, which we've been developing over the last probably two or three years. The key to a healthy future generation lies in educating our young people about making good choices in life and taking responsibility for their health.

Mr. Speaker, it would be ideal if no one used tobacco. Every year 3,400 Albertans die from tobacco-related illnesses. Tobacco use is also estimated to cost this province almost $1 billion in lost productivity each year. Our tobacco reduction strategy, which I guess we all know is managed by AADAC, aims to reduce the smoking rate by as much as a third over the next 10 years. Getting that message to teens and adolescents is critical in how successful we will be.

Aside from raising awareness about the health dangers of tobacco, stronger action is required to prevent children from starting to use tobacco. Mr. Speaker, proclaiming the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act in April of 2003 was part of our work to do just that. This law is central to Alberta's tobacco reduction strategy and deliberately targets young people. It sets a clear expectation for children and youth in regard to tobacco use. Statistics show that if young people do not start smoking before they are 20, they are unlikely or, certainly, less likely to start at all. By making smoking illegal for young people, the act is helping to make tobacco less normal and less acceptable as a choice for young people.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 9 provides the amendments required to make the law a stronger tool in reaching a tobacco-free generation. Our focus is getting people to not use tobacco, and the best place to start is with our children. I believe this amendment strengthens our legislation. Once again, I would like to thank the Member for Calgary-Lougheed for bringing forward Bill 9 before the House today. I would certainly suggest and ask that this House support Bill 9 to ensure that this law can be effectively enforced.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do welcome the opportunity to speak to Bill 9, the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004. I would like to commend the Member for Calgary-Lougheed for bringing this forward. I think that we don't have to go any further than to look at recent settlements in the United States, billion-dollar settlements against tobacco companies, to realize the huge impact that they do have on the health of our society.

I also agree with all other members that have spoken who indicated that what we do need is comprehensive tobacco control legislation in this province. Certainly, one of the areas that I look at in making that statement is that if we compare the smoking rates in Alberta according to the Canadian tobacco use monitoring survey, we see that the rates from 2002 to 2003 overall have dropped 2 per cent, from 23 per cent to 21 per cent. In the age group of 15 to 19, which would be most affected by this particular piece of legislation, we had a reduction of 4 per cent, from 20 to 16 per cent. However, in the age group which would not be affected by this legislation, that rate has increased from 27 per cent in 2002 to 36 per cent in 2003. So I see that while, certainly, a very good place to start is with minors, we also have to make a concerted effort in the age groups 20 to 24 and 25 to 44, where we are getting increases in the rates of smoking among people in our society.

Now, the other thing that always struck me as odd was driving by the high schools in my constituency. High schools and junior highs and whatever have a no-smoking policy in their schools now so that anybody wishing to smoke, teacher or student or janitorial staff or any of the staff, cannot smoke inside the facility. So it was quite odd to see teachers out on the sidewalk smoking with the students. I think that this is a great piece of legislation that is aimed at a particular group and at that group that would be in those high schools, but again it doesn't say anything for the example that we are setting amongst adults with these youth.

I think we can even take this one step further. If, in fact, we are truly looking at enforcing a reduction in tobacco use in this province and we want to lead by example, then certainly one of the places we can start is right here in this building, where members are allowed to smoke. I would certainly like to see the Legislature Building of Alberta a smoke-free facility. When we look at the money that was spent in our cafeteria alone, downstairs, to separate smokers from nonsmokers, then certainly a good place for us to start is right here.

Mr. Speaker, if we are bringing in legislation of this nature, then certainly for it to be effective, there must be some type of strong enforcement; otherwise, the act itself is meaningless. I also agree with other members who have spoken here who said that this tends to be a punitive piece of legislation which is aimed at the youth of our province and certainly that an aggressive prevention and education policy would be far more effective.

We had a visitor in this Assembly a year and a half ago, I believe. I forget the exact date. Barb Tarbox had certainly made a plea to all the youth in Canada and done such a magnificent job in promoting nonsmoking and in promoting the effects of smoking and how it can not only impact your own life but impact those loved ones around you.

Certainly, Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that I agree with. I think it's got us moving in the right direction. I think there are so many more things that we could also do. I would urge all members of the Assembly to vote for this bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to speak to community support for Bill 9, the Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004. We have already heard that Bill 9 will help to provide new efficiencies in how we can prevent tobacco use by children. These amendments will allow for new regulations to provide reasonable exclusions to tobacco use and possession by youth and better define public places where the law can be enforced.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to remind this House that Alberta was the first province in Canada to introduce legislation that makes it illegal for youth to use or possess tobacco. The Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act was introduced in response to society's growing concern about the increasing rate of children smoking in Alberta. In Alberta 85 per cent of smokers began smoking before they reached their 16th birthday.

I know that when I've talked to my colleagues around the House, I tend to be the exception in that I'm one of the few people who have never had to quit smoking. I never started smoking, so I've never had to quit smoking, but I have watched my friends and colleagues go through the horrible withdrawal symptoms of actually having to quit. So anything that we can do to cut it off early in terms of people not having to go through that horrible process of having to quit.

By making smoking illegal for young people, the act is helping to decrease the chances that children will try tobacco, become addicted, and become lifelong smokers.

Mr. Speaker, these amendments have wide support. Members of the Aboriginal Tobacco Use Steering Committee were consulted and suggested changes that will help to reduce recreational tobacco use in the aboriginal community. Bill 9 also reflects discussions with Alberta Justice, the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission, and the Alberta police chiefs.

Mr. Speaker, there is support for Bill 9. I now ask this House to support Bill 9 to prevent tobacco use by children and reduce the smoking rate in Alberta.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. Any questions? Anybody else wishing to participate in the debate?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed to close debate.

Ms Graham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have no further comments at this time and would ask you to call the question, please.

[Motion carried; Bill 9 read a second time]

Bill 6

Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004

[Adjourned debate February 24: Mr. Lukaszuk]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it's a pleasure to speak to this bill. The bill was moved yesterday in this Chamber, and it is bringing an overdue amendment which will definitely make the work of this government much easier and much more effective when enforcing child maintenance orders which are presently on the books and which very often are quite difficult to enforce.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that there is one member in this Assembly who in his or her constituency work has not received a number of phone calls from custodial parents indicating that somewhere out there, hopefully in the province of Alberta, is the noncustodial parent against whom a maintenance order has been granted by one level of court or another; however, the custodial parent is having great difficulty enforcing that particular order and collecting on the order for the benefit of the children simply because individuals are either difficult to locate or perhaps their employment activities are not known to the custodial parent.

The child maintenance enforcement program in this province, I would argue, is very effective, and it's doing all that it can to assist those parents, particularly through the assistance of the Human Resources and Employment department with their low-income programs. A great degree of assistance is offered to a custodial parent in their ability to collect on maintenance orders. However, the system is not perfect, but it is aiming at improving itself. Bill 6, indeed, is one large step in that direction.

Mr. Speaker, what Bill 6 will allow the department to do in their effort to assist custodial parents is to be able to avail itself with information on noncustodial parents and their whereabouts and their employment activities by way of either contacting friends, family members, or those who happen to know the noncustodial parent or by way of collecting information by simply receiving reports about the noncustodial parent and not having to release information to the noncustodial parent of who it was that informed the department of his or her whereabouts. This is a magnificent tool because, as you can appreciate, in the real world outside of this building, even though many Albertans may believe that it is not only a legal responsibility but a moral responsibility for every noncustodial parent to pay maintenance for his or her children, when it comes to actually reporting that individual to a government department or to the custodial parent, there is some hesitation, because if that information is then released to the noncustodial parent, relationships may suffer and personal repercussions between individuals may take place. Well, this bill addresses amending that and will ensure the security of information for those who are courageous enough to come forward or who co-operate in an investigation effort.

The benefits, Mr. Speaker, are immeasurable. Number one, there are many low-income families in Alberta, as you know, who simply need those dollars, who need the assistance for raising their children. Obviously, the court orders have been ordered by judges, are deemed to be just, yet the enforcement of them very often is so difficult, and the dollars are so badly needed in those families. So, Mr. Speaker, anything that we can do in assisting those single parents in collecting those dollars for the children is, I imagine, much appreciated by the single parents.

Perhaps equally importantly is that many of those single parents who are not now in position to obtain the dollars that they so badly need are unfortunately forced to rely on taxpayers' assistance through our variety of low-income benefits. Indeed, it is our responsibility as government to take care of those who can't take care of themselves, and very often we do. As you know, a very large portion of our previously known SFI – supports for independence, now Alberta Works – recipients are single parents, primarily, unfortunately, single moms who do need those dollars. Now, by being able to collect the duly ordered child maintenance, the cost of supporting those individuals who are now receiving government benefits will be offset by the amount of dollars that are being collected. So not only is there a benefit to the parents, there is also a benefit to all of Alberta's taxpayers because simply they will be burdened by a lesser cost of providing low-income benefits.

Lastly and, I would argue, perhaps most importantly, the benefit is not only financial, but it's a benefit of justice. There is an inherent responsibility on any adult who is a parent to support his or her children, whether they are in a marriage or outside of a marriage, and I don't think anyone is absolved of that responsibility simply by the dissolution of a marriage. Therefore, this bill will allow our government and the Department of Human Resources and Employment to enforce that responsibility and to remind those out there who don't believe that they are required to pay child maintenance payment of that responsibility that has been placed upon them by the courts.

So I would urge all members of this Assembly to support this bill and to assist those who are right now awaiting receipt of those dollars, to support this government and all the single parents out there who are seeking that particular support.

Thank you.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Minister of Learning, are you rising?

Dr. Oberg: I am, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn until 8 o'clock this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:05 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, February 25, 2004 8:00 p.m.
 Date: 2004/02/25
 head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

The Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Before we begin, just a reminder to all members that this is less formal, and for those that may be observing, this is less formal. It does allow for members to talk quietly between themselves and only one member standing and speaking at a time.

Tonight it's Committee of Supply in which we will be going over financial estimates, and there's allowance in this particular session to go back and forth between ministers and people who are questioning. Before we begin our debate and discussion on supplementary estimates for the year, I wonder if we might have the committee's approval for a brief Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie has been standing for a long time. Are you wishing to introduce guests?

Ms Carlson: Yes, sir.

The Chair: Well, then, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On behalf of my colleague from Edmonton-Riverview I would like to introduce the 24 Parkallen Cub group that is joining us here this evening. They are accompanied by group leaders Steve Pentyluik, Doug Jacula, Brent Irving, Tania Kajner, and parents Irene Henderson, Charles Davison, Devon Pinchal, Suzanne Olenik, Rick Poole, Rick Mogg, and Andy Brooks. So I would ask if all of the members of the 24 Parkallen Cub group would please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Colleagues, I'm not sure if the guest that I am introducing is here as yet, but if I may, I'll introduce her for the record. Her name is Anita Sherman, and she represents Education Watch, which is a group of concerned parents. In this case, Anita Sherman has two children attending McKernan elementary junior high school, but she is from one of many citizen groups including the Whitemud Coalition, the west end coalition that are citizens very actively engaged in education issues. We'd ask Anita to stand if she is here and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. Masyk: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's an honour and a privilege today to introduce a guest who is a friend of mine and a constituent of Lesser Slave Lake. It's too bad that the Minister of Seniors isn't here. [interjection] I'll tell you why; I'll tell you why. His name is Ron McCue. Ron had a tire shop, Ron's tire and mobile repair, and when seniors would come in, he would sell tires at cost and install them and balance them for free. We need more citizens like that in the world. I would ask Ron to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Tonight I'd like to introduce some guests who are watching the Legislature very carefully because of their concern over education and classroom sizes and related issues. One of them is Luisa Su. She's a parent of three children in grades 1, 2, and 6 at McKernan elementary junior high school. Cathy Wrightson is a parent with a child in grade 2 at McKernan. They are here as part of the parent watch group, who, as I say, are watching carefully the proceedings here as they relate to education. I'd ask them to rise and receive our warm welcome.

head: Supplementary Estimates 2003-04
 General Revenue Fund, No. 2

Human Resources and Employment

The Chair: We'll start off with the Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Dunford: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I want to direct everyone's attention if I can to page 23 of the 2003-04 Supplementary Estimates (No. 2), General Revenue Fund. You will notice there that we are asking for an additional budget of $28,680,000.

Now, this is split up into two main areas. First, we're asking for $14.68 million to help families with their basic needs through what has been called the supports for independence program, which, as many of you will already know and understand, we're moving to a program called Alberta Works. In any event, this is to help low-income Albertans that are faced with increasing drug costs and with some utility disconnections, and we help to reconnect the utilities.

Then, there's an additional $14 million that has been provided for hands-on career assistance, for enrollment costs for academic upgrading and for short-term skills training. This is of paramount importance to us because, of course, we still have ongoing demand here in the province for not only skilled workers but also demand generally. While there are some excellent opportunities now within Alberta for some of our aboriginal folks and also many of the disabled that are amongst us, we still know that more and more people if they are to find themselves in the workforce are going to need some help to get there.

Now, at one time in the history of family and social services and the welfare reforms that took place throughout the '90s, in many cases as the number of people on welfare diminished, it actually provided us with the kinds of dollars that we needed to move into skills training. In other words, for many, many years we were able to finance ourselves within that particular area. As a matter of fact, it wasn't uncommon to see family and social services, as it was called prior to 1999 and then Human Resources and Employment subsequent to 1999, actually lapse dollars. We believe that throughout these years ministers have been fiscally responsible, and of course we maintain that we are continuing along the fiscal conservative basis.

But times have changed. What we're finding is that we have a situation where the welfare rolls are growing in actual number although they're staying steady when we look at a ratio of percentage of a working population. We've been able to reduce that ratio to approximately 2.1 per cent of Albertans that are on our caseloads.

It's 2.1 per cent of the total of the working population. Now, there's no other jurisdiction in Canada that even comes close to that, and of course we have such a hot demand for additional workers here in this province that we've been able to maintain that at a steady level. But, of course, hidden in that percentage, as the working population has actually increased, even though our percentage remains stable, the actual numbers have in fact increased. Now, I can't tell you all of the reasons for that, but some intuitively would be that as workers move to this province, they are in fact bringing family members with them, and some of these family members, of course, need our assistance and will be entitled to it.

As many people are aware, the social services ministers, so-called, right across the country made an agreement some time ago, two, three, four years ago. I don't remember the exact date when we signed the documents, but we wanted to have mobility for people in Canada, and of course that meant that we wanted to allow people that were in need but also might even be disabled to be able to move across this country and not have gaps in assistance where they needed it.

So we still continue to encourage people to come to Alberta because we need them. Our population just simply is not large enough at the current time to supply the labour demand that we have in this province, and I believe that things are going to change. I don't whether it's for the better or for the worse. As recently as two weeks ago at a seminar in Calgary when we were discussing labour demand, the skills deficit, the federal government representative – I forget now the gentleman's name, but he was an assistant deputy minister in the new Human Resources and Skills Development department of the federal government – put an astonishing overhead up for us to have a look at, and it indicated that in the federal government's planning, after the year 2011 100 per cent of the new jobs created in Canada will have to be filled by immigrants.

Now, they're not even playing around any more with large percentages, you know, like, maybe it's 73. Or is it 87? Or, wow, it's going to be 92. They're talking about 100 per cent. So we have a situation now in Alberta where if all of that additional demand is to be filled by immigrants, they would be extrapolating from what we currently see in terms of: well, here is a generally accepted level of people to be on assistance; here is a generally accepted level of people that won't be able to work.

My message here tonight is that that's simply not acceptable. How do we possibly expect to fill all of these jobs through immigration? Now, the Minister of Learning and myself will continue to work with the federal government, under the Minister of Learning's direction, trying to find more flexibility as it comes to changes within the immigration system as it's dealt with in Canada but specifically to Alberta. It raises other concerns.

Right now we have a labour mobility concept here in this country that Premiers like to talk about, that ministers like to talk about, but it's not happening in the seamless way in which it should. As a matter of fact, as recently as July of 2001 there was an obligation on the part of all of the ministers in Canada from each province and, of course, the federal minister responsible. We were to report to our Premiers and to our Prime Minister by July 1 of 2001 that we had accomplished the goal of labour mobility within our borders in Canada, that we would all have been able to have sat down, looked at the labour mobility agreement, and would have said to our bosses that we had accomplished that goal. Well, ladies and gentlemen, we failed. On July 1 of 2001 the ministers responsible in Canada were not able to make that statement to their bosses, that we had in fact accomplished that. We still have not accomplished that.

The good news is that from an Alberta perspective if we're not at a hundred per cent, we're fairly close. We in Alberta for years have led the charge in this particular area of trying to provide mobility into this province. The government has faced some criticism in previous years because there was always the concern: well, somebody coming from somewhere else in Canada is going to get this job while my son or daughter won't be able to fill that position. That simply did not prove to be true because, again, the demand stayed so strong. Well, we need to keep moving in that direction, removing whatever barrier there might be in order that a worker, not just a skilled worker, will be able to come to this province and be able to fit into our system.

It raises a concern about productivity. If, in fact, a hundred per cent is going to have to be filled from immigration, why aren't we getting into a debate about current productivity? We're starting to hear about it from the oil sands – that's where it started – where there is a concern that's been expressed about projects to be developed and designed, where there's a concern about cost overrun and there's a concern about timeliness of that project. Now, we know from statistics that are provided to us that Alberta has the highest productivity rate of any jurisdiction in Canada, but, ladies and gentlemen of this Legislature, it's simply not good enough. The productivity rate in Canada itself is too low a standard, and the fact that Alberta might be leading in low standards is simply not good enough.

Now, I'm here to say tonight that the next big thing that we're going to be concerned about as issues in this vaunted room, that we've all earned our way to be here and to talk about these issues, is workers' productivity in this province. We've been dealing with the health care issue. It's a big thing, but we have been dealing with it and will continue to deal with it. We all hear the Premier as he tries to move that agenda along, and he needs to be successful in that.

8:20

The next big thing to health care, of course, was education, and again through the leadership of the current minister and the information that we now have from the Learning Commission in terms of the next big thing, education is being dealt with. So we're now at the next big thing, and I believe that it's going to be in the area of productivity, and it's certainly going to be the area in terms of skills deficit and, of course, then, in just the inability for employers to find the people that they need when they need them. That is why it is so critical to see an additional $14 million go into our budget on the skills training side.

We are faced with resistance of being able to self-finance any more by being able to do something dramatic to our welfare roles. Now, we haven't given up on it, and we'll continue to work on that, and I'll come back in the time that's allowed me to spend a few minutes on that. But, basically, we're in a situation now of where we have to take people from where they are if they're unemployed, and you know what folks? I don't know if there's a reason for any Albertan to be unemployed, but if they are underemployed, then we have to look at what we are going to do with that person, and we've got to move them into the kind of skill sets that they can then move into the workplace.

So we're going to see within Human Resources and Employment a transition on how we look at skills because we're really not going to be training for training's sake any more, just so we get them off of the welfare roles, you know, put them in training so our numbers look better on the welfare side. Can't do that any more. Won't do that any more. What we're going to have to do is we're going to have to see the standards set higher for who qualifies for training and the kinds of training that they will actually be seeking. We're going to have to move from pre-employment training into a more integrated training system so that people can then start moving directly into the workforce.

Ladies and gentlemen, we're going to have to have an attitude change about getting people ready for the workforce. Thus far we've been content to train, train, train and then provide the employer with that perfect little person that can then go in and start becoming productive within a very short period of time. I'm here to say tonight that we can no longer afford the luxury of paying for all of that particular time. I'm here tonight to say that we have to start moving people into the workforce before they are ready for the workforce, because the only way you get work ready is at work, and that is the kind of situation that we're going to be looking for. Now, that will ease the pressure on budgets as we move forward, but we're not there yet, and we're in this transition time of getting there. That's where we need the support tonight, of course, for $14 million, but we need your support in the future because we have to reform the system. Once again we have a situation in Alberta where we're doing good, but it's just simply not good enough.

Now, getting back to the situation that we have in requiring $14.68 million to help people that need assistance, this is a situation where if a person is unable to work, this government has made a commitment and we will continue with that commitment to provide them with the support that they need.

Ladies and gentlemen, we're all familiar with the AISH program, and the AISH program will remain. The AISH program has a mandatory review coming up, but it will remain.

But on the other side of things, in the supports for independence system, which is the old term – the Alberta Works system is the new term – we're going to have to carefully analyze everyone that we have in that situation. When I say everyone, I mean that, and I'm talking about 28,000 people as we stand here tonight. We're going to have to examine every one of those people and make the assessment about expected to work or not expected to work because we cannot afford to carry people on our files that otherwise would be expected to work. The workforce, the work market out there needs these people, and we need to be able to supply them. In order to do that, we need the money for skills, and I hope you will support our initiative here tonight.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Before I call on the Interim Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, I wonder: just so that we agree where we're going, we'll have a minister speak and then some questions and answers, and then we'll go to the next minister. Is that the way you want to do it, or do you want to go through all of the ministers and then ask questions? Back and forth. Okay.

The hon. Interim Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I listened with interest to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. He made a couple of comments early on that I would really appreciate some further explanation. One, he indicated that there's money in this request for utility reconnections. My question I guess is really sort of very low level but an operational one in terms of how that works.

Our constituency office – and I'm sure we're not alone – has been inundated with requests from people for relief from utility disconnections, and we've been drawing upon funds like the CFRN Good Neighbour fund and other resources to try to help those people over the hump, so I was interested that there would be this money in the budget. How does it differ from the sort of one-time relief that's available for social assistance recipients if they find themselves in difficulty? I know that we've been able to appeal to the department and get relief for some people, but can the minister explain how this fits into the program? Is it something we should be alerting our staffs at the constituency level to be aware of? I really would appreciate some comment from the minister.

Mr. Dunford: Yes, I'd be glad to. Again, we're in a bit of a transition on this one as well, but let's talk about what's in place tonight. If a person in Alberta has received a disconnect notice, then they are invited to contact our office. What we will do is an assessment, so whether we assist or not is really based on need. If they're a low-income Albertan or otherwise could even qualify for assistance but for whatever reason have chosen not to but they would have ordinarily fit into that category, then we will reconnect their utility. We'll pick up the cost.

Now, what has happened to us over time is that our costs have gone from $1.5 million to – $5.3 million is the number that I have in mind. When we saw that increase, I became concerned that maybe something was going on with the utility companies, so I have had the three utility companies in my office or I've been in their office, and we've discussed it. We now have members of our staff that work with a committee inside the utility company to keep our eye on the situation to make sure that we and taxpayers' money are not being taken advantage of. There's information that we might have based on not individual clients necessarily but perhaps some kind of experience that we have that might forewarn the utility company so they can start to take maybe remedial action earlier so that it doesn't get to the disconnect notice. Then thanks to members like the Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne and others, we are looking at, of course, load limiters for a way in which there would always be enough heat for a stove, for a furnace, and for a fridge.

The Chair: The hon. interim leader.

Dr. Massey: Thank you very much. I think that's useful and welcome information, Mr. Chairman, because even though it's a small number of Albertans that are involved, given the kind of temperatures we've had this winter, it's been a source of concern.

The other question – and the minister talked about a mandatory review of the AISH program coming up – is the whole issue of rates for people who are receiving assistance and what might happen to those rates. I guess I would like some comment in terms of what those recipients can expect, and I say it within the context of having been contacted recently by a group of AISH recipients who were really concerned about the financial plight that they find themselves in and asking if I thought there was any use in them making representation to the government. I promised at that time that I would ask when the opportunity arose in terms of those rates how the government sees them being adjusted if they see them being adjusted.

Mr. Dunford: This is one of the areas of some controversy or difficulty that we have currently, and I suppose it's not surprising that with the broad mandate Human Resources and Employment has, we might find at least one issue amongst all that we do.

I don't want to deal with the actual question about rates at this point, but I want to talk a little bit about what a person can do if they're on AISH and they find themselves simply unable to meet their obligations. We have tried as best we can to be as compassionate and caring on this issue as that allows us within the sort of mandates that we operate with. Quite often what happens, even though it might be temporary, is that we'll actually move an AISH person off AISH for a temporary period onto our support programs. The thing about AISH is that it's a generous program in the sense of how people can qualify to become eligible for AISH, but once you're in the AISH program, it's very rigid about what it is, you know, that you can avail yourself of. So I think we've used a very open approach and have moved people back and forth based on their actual situation in order to help.

A review of the act has to start taking place in 2004, so later this summer or early fall we'll get started on that. Of course, issues that will have to be dealt with at that time are, obviously, the monthly rate but also whether or not we can still sustain the kind of asset availability that we currently provide. Well, again, I know that we don't always compare ourselves with other jurisdictions – I guess we do when it helps us – but in the case of AISH we are so far ahead of the rest of the country on this that you sometimes have to worry if, you know, maybe we haven't gone too far. But that's just going to upset a lot of people. I don't want to suggest for a moment that any of that asset limit is going to change, but that has to be looked at. This House will have to decide whether or not to carry on with it.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was listening to the minister with a great deal of attention, and maybe I can start with the comments that he made just a moment ago on the AISH program. I just want to share with the minister my constituency office experience. We get lots of calls from AISH recipients. There are two kinds of issues that come to my attention. One is, of course, the interest that recipients have in seeing the review that the minister just suggested may not start until perhaps September, October. Is that right? [interjection] Yeah. So that, I think, would be a matter of concern to my constituents.

I have a fairly large number of people who are on the AISH program who are my constituents. I do meet with them at least once or twice a year at their request, and they are concerned about the financial difficulty that they have with the current amount of money that they get. So the news to them that the review will look at the rates is obviously welcome to them, but the delay in when the review is going to start would be a matter of concern. I wonder if the minister can expedite that review, move it forward. At least that will give them some idea that the government is receiving their concerns through us, through people like me, and is willing to expedite the review. So that's one question.

The second question. As the minister said, his ministry tries to be very compassionate and responsive to special cases where there may be financial difficulties and tries to move people back and forth between the two programs, supports for independence and AISH. In the last meeting that I had with a fairly large number of AISH recipients in my constituency – I wish I could remember the details – my attention was drawn to the fact that once they move to the supports for independence program, it's very difficult for them to move back to AISH, which seems to be their preference. I don't know what's the basis of it. Are you aware of some of these difficulties? If you would shed some light on it and how they can be addressed.

So those are my first two questions.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dunford: Thank you. On the timing of the review I'm trying to be realistic. If we were to start it, you know, in the late spring or in the summer months, I'm just not sure how convenient that will be for people, so in my own head I have a September date.

I might point out, though, that I think the review should look at a long-term situation as to how the rates would be dealt with. Again, the actual $855 a month is more a matter of budget than it is of that particular review. Well, let me say it this way. While they're not mutually exclusive – you know, one doesn't have to wait for another one – that doesn't mean that anything is going to happen to the rates either. The $855 is a budgetary issue, whereas the overall aspect of AISH and all of its parameters is what really would be reviewed, and I hope that what would be reviewed in the overall parameters is some kind of way in which there might be adjustments to the rates.

8:40

On the moving back and forth, I'm actually unaware that there would be any difficulty, because the way the thing is supposed to work is that the AISH person goes onto SFI until their temporary situation is completed, and then they go back onto AISH. We've actually provided a situation where you could be off AISH for as much as two years and not have to go through all the rigamarole of re-enrolment, which is one good thing. But the other thing, why they prefer to be on AISH instead of SFI, comes down to the simple fact that when you're on SFI, you're on a program of last resort, so you get examined on a constant, constant basis by our caseworkers. When you're on AISH, we leave you alone for a year, and I think that's the difference.

The Chair: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you have a further question, or are we ready to go to the next minister?

Dr. Pannu: A question for the minister.

The Chair: Okay. Go ahead, hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Chairman, the minister's explanation was very helpful. He did make a reference when talking about the review of the AISH rates to considering some sort of adjustment to it. Is there any consideration likely to be given to linking at least the AISH amounts, $855, as you mentioned, Minister, to this cost of living allowance? That's one thing, the minimum that the recipients, my constituents, certainly are asking for. To be realistic, you know, if costs go up, some consideration has to be given to adjusting the rates in order for these Albertans to be able to live within the means provided to them. If $855 is a reasonable amount and there has been no change in it over the last five years – I think it was five years ago that the last changes were made.

Mr. Dunford: In '99.

Dr. Pannu: In '99. They certainly are complaining to me that just in the interest of reasonableness, of fairness some inflationary adjustment needs to be made so that it reflects changes in the cost of living.

If I may add another question to it as we go on. I notice in the supplementary estimates $14.68 million for supports for independence "to address caseload and cost-per-case increases." If you would please explain something about this. I have difficulty understanding what these things refer to and why these increases both in per case cost and the number of cases. Is it in part because the switch from AISH to SFI is more frequent now than it was before, or are there some other reasons for it?

Mr. Dunford: On the cost per case, prescription drugs are eating our lunch. It's just that simple.

Chair's Ruling Decorum

The Chair: Hon. members, I'm sorry to interrupt your lively conversations. It's just beginning to increase to a level now that we can no longer hear the members who are supposed to be debating. I wonder if we could just bring it down a few notches, and let's hear the hon. minister answer the questions from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Debate Continued

Mr. Dunford: Well, just in case nobody could hear that, the increased cost of prescription drugs is eating our lunch. We have been unable in the last while to meet our targets, and that's one of the reasons why we're here again tonight seeking a supplementary estimate.

We now spend something in the order of $170 million a year on the medical card that we provide to our clients, and the overwhelming majority of that is in prescription drugs. So this is something that we need help with, yet we know and understand that in many cases the prescription drug has allowed the person to continue to be able to look after themselves to some extent and perhaps even in other cases allowed them to stay in the training that we have them in and perhaps then even get into the workforce. But there shouldn't be anybody – there shouldn't be anybody – in this House tonight and, as a matter of fact, there shouldn't be anybody in Alberta that is not serious about health reform because this is getting out of hand.

In terms of adjusting the rates – now, I can't say never. I can't say that I've never used cost of living as a way to increase this area because as a matter of fact I have in the sense that when we went back and reinstated increases to the MLA pension plan, that you and I don't have but our predecessors had, we did use 60 per cent of the cost of living, which would be consistent with pension plans. But if this House chose to tie AISH rates to cost of living, I'd actually be disappointed. I don't like it as a measure. It doesn't measure anybody. It is some nonexistent Canadian out there that experiences these costs.

I think there are other indexes that, if we were to tie it to something, would be better. I think market-basket measurement is going to be something that we can look at in the future because it will calculate costs, then, as they relate to our communities. MLA salaries are tied to an average weekly wage index, and to me that might make more sense. One of the questions that would need to be asked is: if there's to be some sort of orderly change to the rate, how is it done? We would need to do that.

Now, the reason that the rates haven't changed in five years is – I talked about prescription drugs eating our lunch; the other thing that's been eating our lunch is the increase in the AISH caseload. We now spend $360 million, I think it is, within that AISH file, and we've been experiencing 7 per cent increases up until the last year of 6 per cent. We simply haven't been able to find the funds to provide the increase because we've been trying to keep up with the caseload. It doesn't make any sense to me. I don't understand why when we have population increases of 1 and a half per cent we have 7 per cent increases in AISH. It doesn't make sense. Something's going on. We need to find that out.

The Chair: Hon. members, I wonder if we might have unanimous consent to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Redwater.

Mr. Broda: Thank you, Chair. It's my pleasure to rise tonight and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly the mayor of Thorhild. I noticed that Vivian Prodaniuk is in the members' gallery to observe the session tonight. I'd ask her to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

8:50

The Chair: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Yes, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to also introduce a guest in the members' gallery tonight, and that is the mayor of Breton, His Worship Darren Aldous. I'd ask Darren to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Supplementary Estimates 2003-04

The Chair: Okay. Are we ready to go to another minister? The next minister on my list appears to be the minister that we've been talking a little bit about, the Minister of Health and Wellness.

Health and Wellness

Mr. Mar: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise and speak to the supplementary estimates for Health and Wellness for the 2003-2004 fiscal year. These estimates add up to a total of just $12.5 million split roughly equally between operating expenses and equipment and inventory purchases.

The third-quarter forecast shows that my department is $28 million over budget. This is true, but my department has managed its budget extremely well. We're managing to pay for all of the additional $22 million allocated to health regions to offset higher operations and maintenance costs. We also found all but $2 million out of $14 million in higher than expected prescription drug costs.

In all, Mr. Chairman, the supplementary estimates represent less than two-tenths of 1 per cent of my overall budget. We will get about half of this money, $6.35 million, back from Canada Health Infoway in the near future. This does not represent an additional cost to the province. These funds will enhance and implement the pharmaceutical information network, which is linked to the electronic health record. Access to a patient's prescription history helps doctors and pharmacists avoid ineffective drugs and prevent adverse reactions. This has great potential to improve the effectiveness and quality of care and will reduce wasted prescriptions.

My department is allocating $453 million this fiscal year to Blue Cross to cover prescriptions and other extended health services for Albertans not covered under an employer group plan. Most nongroup benefits, 97 per cent, or $440 million, are for prescriptions, and most of those are for seniors. Drug costs under Alberta Blue Cross are going up an average of 17 per cent a year. This fiscal year my department needed about $14 million extra to meet this growing drug cost. We can cover all but $2.2 million of the increase from funds that have already been allocated to us.

These supplementary estimates, Mr. Chairman, show $4 million to reduce the human risk of West Nile virus. The first and best protection continues to be personal steps that people can take to eliminate their properties as mosquito breeding sites and protect themselves against being bitten. This year we will also assist municipalities in targeting the larvae of the one mosquito species most capable of transmitting the virus to humans. Provincial public health officers will provide details when we announce the full plan next week.

In the meantime, Mr. Chairman, I ask members of the House to vote and approve this and all expenditures in these supplementary estimates.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have a handful of questions on this. I consistently hear reports of very, very substantial deficits from the RHAs, something in the range of – I can't remember the exact number – $60 million for each of Capital and Calgary health regions and smaller amounts for the other health regions. How is the minister expecting to cover those since they're not covered in this estimate?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mar: Thank you, sir. We have examined the plans of all the regional health authorities, and we are satisfied that they will make it through this fiscal year with this additional amount of money that will be allocated to them plus money that we have reallocated from other elements of the Department of Health and Wellness budget. Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, there are some regional health authorities that have accumulated surpluses that will be applied towards their current operating expenditures.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. I hear ongoing concerns about the very long delays in the approvals of the RHA budgets and business plans, depending on how you're looking at them. Indeed, my information is that even as recently – perhaps it may be still the case today – as a few weeks ago the RHA budgets for this current year had not actually been, as it were, signed off by the minister. That's of very close relevance to this debate because we're debating supplementing those, so perhaps the minister can enlighten the Assembly on the process through which the RHA budgets are signed off on a year-to-year basis.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Chairman, we are working hard at trying to develop multiyear contracts with the regional health authorities. Part of that challenge, of course, is the ability for us to get information out as soon as possible on how much a regional health authority might be looking at getting in the upcoming year. So because we're making the transition to multiyear contracts as opposed to year by year, that is the reason why the current fiscal year's budgets haven't been signed off yet.

The Chair: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, are you ready? Okay.

Dr. Taft: No, no. I've got plenty of questions.

That makes it more difficult, really, to support these supplementary estimates because it feels like we're adding on to an as yet undefined amount, but be that as it may.

The minister did mention West Nile protection, promotion, and prevention programs. There's a substantial amount allocated here for that.

Another concern similar to West Nile, in fact potentially a much more serious concern, is around SARS. I do believe that some of the RHAs have undertaken extensive preparations and training of their staff and even preparation of facilities in case there is even a single case of SARS reported in, say, Edmonton or in Calgary. Was that preparation entirely financed out of previously approved revenue, or is it in here somewhere? Does the minister have any idea how much that has cost? Is it more or less, for example, than what's been spent on West Nile preparation?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Chairman, we have taken significant steps to deal with issues of infectious disease particularly as we know that there will be at some point a pandemic influenza, so our planning for infectious diseases like SARS has been part of really an overall picture of dealing with infectious diseases like pandemic influenza. We do allocate money for public health. It is out of that allocation of money that we have been working on the development of plans by regional health authorities and by the province. The plans for West Nile virus are quite a bit different because it's not an infectious disease like SARS or like the flu but really is something that is transmitted by in this case mosquitoes.

The Chair: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, are you wishing to ask a question? Go ahead.

Dr. Pannu: Yes. Mr. Chairman, thank you. A question to the minister – I think the Member for Edmonton-Riverview raised that question – with respect to the alleged deficits in two major RHAs, Capital and Calgary, to the tune of $60 million each. The minister said that those monies are likely to be found within the budgets of each of the RHAs or within the overall budget of the department. I wasn't quite able to understand where those monies are to be found, if those budget figures are, indeed, more or less right in the judgment of the minister. There's the first question.

9:00

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mar: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. What is happening is that throughout the province there are regional health authorities, some of which do not have accumulated surpluses that they can apply to their current deficits. Some of those regional health authorities will find sources of money from our supplementary estimate. Others will be able to do it by accessing accumulated surpluses. So the solution for each regional health authority to making sure that it is able to deal with its deficit by the end of this fiscal year will differ from region to region.

The Chair: The hon. third party leader.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My next question to the minister has to do with the $2.167 million being requested as part of the supplementary estimates for the nongroup health benefits program. What does this term refer to and if you would, please, give some information?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Chairman, as I indicated to the committee, most nongroup benefits, some 97 per cent of it, or $440 million, are for prescriptions. What we found is that drug costs under the Alberta Blue Cross plan were going up an average of 17 per cent a year, so this fiscal year we needed 14 million extra dollars to meet the growing drug costs. We have found monies from other elements of our budget to cover for all but $2.2 million. So the $2.2 million that is being asked for are monies that will apply to the drug program under Blue Cross, and as I indicated, most of that is for the benefit of seniors.

Dr. Pannu: Two questions on this 17 per cent increase to the Alberta Blue Cross drug costs. Is this consistent with the overall increase of the cost of health care, and if not, what is driving this particular high level of increase in drug costs?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Chairman, that is a good question but one which is a very complicated one to answer, but I'll do my best. The 17 per cent increase in drugs is driven by two things predominantly. It is a function of the growing volume of people requiring drugs but also a function of the growing cost of new drugs that are coming onto the market. The overall costs of health care are not increasing at 17 per cent. It would be more in the range of 8 to 10 per cent across Canada.

Other elements that are higher cost are things like new technologies that are becoming available, and that's very analogous to the growing costs of drugs. Also, there is an issue with respect to our aging population. Even if our population were to stay static in its number, generally speaking as people age they use, consume, more health care dollars and resources, and that is also one of the areas that's driving your overall cost of health care, but 17 per cent increases for drugs are not indicative of all the costs going up in the health care system.

Learning

The Chair: I'll call on the hon. Minister of Learning.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I rise today to discuss the supplementary estimates for Learning. The supplementary estimate is $14,600,000, which will fund the following things that I will list. There is also some statutory funding to the tune of around $4.6 million.

I'll start with the statutory funding first, as I believe it is excellent news. On the statutory side $1.1 million are for the Alberta heritage scholarships, which is due quite simply to a higher than anticipated number of students becoming eligible for these awards. This is nothing but good news in that our students are achieving more and are eligible for more of the awards.

There's also 3 and a half million dollars for the provision of the future cost of student loans due to a higher than anticipated number of students becoming eligible for financial assistance. Again, Mr. Chairman, it's an extra 3 and a half million dollars that goes into the postsecondary system through student loans.

We have $500,000 in the nonstatutory voting amount for equipment and inventory for the development of a new apprenticeship, trade, and occupation management system. This will enable us to be much more effective on the apprenticeship side. Already we're the number one system in the world, and this will continue it to be even that much better.

There's also, Mr. Chairman, $5 million for private schools supports; $600,000 of this is from the increasing number of grade 12s returning to high school for upgrading, and $4.4 million of this is for early childhood services. This goes to the private kindergarten providers for an increased number of children with severe disabilities and potentially higher costs per child.

The last, $10.2 million for public and separate schools support; $5.6 million dollars results from an increasing number of grade 12s that are returning to high school for upgrading. What we are seeing is a considerable number of these students coming back to high school for either upgrading their marks, upgrading courses, all in all returning to school. This is more than we had anticipated. We have $1.3 million for providing learning programs to students in provincial institutions. What happens with this is there were some new institutions opened, and quite simply under the law we are forced to provide education to them, and that is costing us an extra $1.3

million. Mr. Chairman, $3.3 million for early childhood services PUF funding, which represents an increase in the number of children with severe disabilities as well as higher costs per child.

This is good news for the Department of Learning in that there's a little over $20 million that is being put into Learning with these estimates, Mr. Chairman, and it's all going to the children and the learners in this province.

I'd be more than happy to take any questions.

The Chair: The hon. Interim Leader.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I noticed in the estimates that there is a line that refers to "higher costs per child," and I wonder how that is determined. I guess to give it some context, if you look at what happened to the public schools with their reduction of a thousand teachers, it seems to me that they could have claimed that the arbitrated teachers' settlement resulted in much higher costs per child. There wasn't relief for them, yet there seems to be relief here on the basis of costs per-child increases. I wonder if we could find why the difference.

[Mr. Lougheed in the chair]

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The higher costs per child are in kindergarten where we have expanded the mild and moderate. We have expanded the ESL as well in kindergarten, and again this is very good news for those kids that do have learning disabilities in kindergarten and are identified early.

Dr. Massey: Well, I guess I'm still having difficulty with it, Mr. Chairman. What triggers a request from one area that results in additional monies being handed to the operators? What would have happened that these higher costs would be covered in these estimates?

Dr. Oberg: Quite simply, Mr. Chairman, there are more children that are identified. There are more services that are being provided to these children and subsequently the higher cost per child as well as the increased number. I do not have the breakdown between the actual increase in the number of severe disabilities versus the cost per child, but again it's from bringing more children into being funded at the kindergarten level compared to what it used to be.

The Acting Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. A question to the minister. In the supplementary estimates there are $3.3 million for early childhood services program unit funding in the public system, and parallel to that is $4.4 million for early childhood services program unit funding for private schools and private operators. The size of the private segment of the education system relative to the public segment is much, much smaller, yet the amount being requested is nearly 25 to 30 per cent more for that much smaller sector. Would the minister try to explain this?

Dr. Oberg: One thing we have to remember is that the comparison between private schools and public schools is not the same ratio in kindergarten. In kindergarten we have a high number of private providers, private schools who just give kindergarten, and there's a much higher ratio of the private to the public in that rate.

The other issue that has occurred is that we have seen more children with severe disabilities. More of the PUF funding in that particular sector is going to private kindergartens, and subsequently that realizes why there is the $4.4 million for them. When we typically think of private schools, we're running at about 5 to 6 per cent of the students who are in grades 1 to 12. For kindergarten we're up around 40 per cent of the number of students actually in private kindergarten.

Dr. Pannu: A sort of supplementary to my question to the minister: would the minister have an estimate in terms of the number of ECS students in the private sector and the number in the public sector that's under reference here?

Dr. Oberg: I believe it's about 40 per cent in the private and around 60 per cent in the public, but I certainly will undertake to get that exact number for the hon. member.

The Acting Chair: Thank you.

Dr. Pannu: Then if the ECS segment in the public schools is 60 per cent and in the private sector it's 40 per cent why a 25 per cent more increase sought for the private sector?

The Acting Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Because we are seeing an inordinately increased number of kids with severe disabilities in the private sector. This is all done on a per-student basis, and what we're seeing is a rise there as opposed to the public system.

The Acting Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. There is virtually nothing in here for postsecondary learning apart from the $500,000 in equipment and inventory purchases for apprenticeship and trade programs, at least if I'm reading this correctly.

Dr. Oberg: It's $4.6 million on the statutory side.

Dr. Taft: Okay. Can you elaborate a bit on the $4.6 million?

The Acting Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. What we see is on the statutory programs, which are monies that have to be put out purely by the number of students. We have a $1.1 million increase in the Alberta heritage scholarships. This is due purely to the fact that there are more students qualifying. We also have 3 and a half million dollars for the provision of future costs of student loans issued – this is what the people are telling us – because there are more people becoming eligible for financial assistance. So, again, this 3 and a half million dollars is put into the student loan program in anticipation of the costs according to our actuaries.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. I appreciate that clarification. I was actually questioning about funds going directly to postsecondary institutions as opposed to the students, and my question would be to the minister. In preparing these supplementary estimates, did any of the postsecondary institutions, or universities or colleges or technical schools, request extra funding of the minister?

The Acting Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. The postsecondaries always ask for extra funding. What I will say is that in the last supplementary estimates they received an extra $30 million purely for postsecondary on the operations and maintenance side, and they also received I believe it was $45 million from the access funding side. So in the previous two supplementary estimates that have come forward, they've actually received about an extra $70 million to $75 million. Therefore, this time when supplementary estimates come forward, it has been kept to the K to 12 system.

The Acting Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My next question to the minister is with respect to the acquisition of an investment risk management system. There's $875,000 requested to provide funding for the acquisition – that would be on page 48. I believe it's from your department; it may not be. My pages might have got mixed up. Sorry, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chair: Hon. minister, do you have a response?

Dr. Oberg: No, Mr. Chairman. That's actually the Department of Revenue.

The Acting Chair: Thank you.

The Interim Leader of the Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you. Just a couple of questions, Mr. Chairman. At budget time I asked a detailed set of questions and still haven't received responses to a number of those – this was the last budget – and I wondered what had happened to those. I still would appreciate having that information as we prepare for the next budget.

The other question I have is with respect to determining public school funding and private school funding. What is the basis – and I guess this goes back to some of those questions that I asked – for determining a per-pupil allocation?

The Acting Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. The present funding formula is determined with a base amount per student with additive amounts afterwards. There are additive amounts, for example, in special needs. There are additive amounts in ESL. There are additive amounts also in sparsity and distance, which is not directly tied to a student, but it is tied to the funding of the student. There are additive amounts on transportation. So, in essence, what happens in the funding formula as it exists today, keeping in mind that the funding formula will be changed come September 1, there's a base amount per student with plus and plus and plus added on top for each different one of the variables that the student qualifies for.

Dr. Massey: Well, I guess, then, that begs the question: how is that basic amount determined? How do you decide this is what it's going to cost a school or a school district to educate a youngster?

Dr. Oberg: There are two ways, Mr. Chairman. First of all, we determine the amount that is needed, and secondly, it is based on historical amounts. So what happens is the increases are built onto the base funding. What then happens is the additive amounts, the variables that are added in, tend to be more based on the need, so the actual base amount has the built-in increase. The other variables tend to have a variable amount of increase. For example, what you've seen is that the amounts for severely disabled children go up significantly higher than the actual base amount per child. That's gone up around 9 or 10 per cent. We've seen huge increases in that.

To put it bluntly, it's based on historical amount. The historical amount was done with the needs of the child in place. The variable amount is much more responsive to the individual child and the individual school jurisdiction.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Chairman, I have one question for this minister. I heard his comments to the Member for Edmonton-Riverview about postsecondary funding with some interest. We repeatedly hear the president of the U of A talking about how funding from the province to postsecondary institutes has dropped, how in 1982 for every dollar a student put in in tuition fees, the province put in $10, and how now in 2002 that has dropped from students putting in $1 to the province putting in $2.3. So that seems to be significant. We don't see that addressed here in this supplementary supply. Can you give us any good news about what's happening in the upcoming budget, and why didn't you consider funding it here?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Chair, as you well know, I cannot talk about what is in the upcoming budget. What I will say, though, is there was an agreement made from this government about eight or nine years ago, at which time a number was put forward about the percentage of what would be reasonable for a student to pay for their own education. At that time that number was stated to be 30 per cent. For the University of Alberta, which the hon. member asked me about, the present cost is about 24 per cent. So for every dollar that a student puts into his own education, there is another $3 that is put in place by other sources, and I fully recognize when I say that that the other sources do include more than just the government funding. There are research funds, accumulation on their deposits, interest on their deposits, things like that.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, Minister.

The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My question to the minister is, I guess, prompted by the question asked by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview earlier with respect to there being no supplementary funds being requested for postsecondary institutions. I was reading some document from the University of Alberta a few weeks ago, I think, in which reference was made to utility costs alone going up during this year beyond the estimated amount by about $27 million. Now, that's a huge cost, and I'm surprised that there's no indication here that either the request was made from the university – I've given one example; there are other institutions, I suppose, that are similarly affected – or that in terms of asking for more funds there's no response to that request from the university.

Dr. Oberg: The universities and colleges put forward a request back in about May, as the hon. member said. There was $30 million that was delivered to them in estimates in the last sitting that we had. They received $30 million extra in O and M at about the end of July, so that covered them off. In actual fact they may have had some increases since that time, but they have not been vocal about any other increases. So they did receive an extra $30 million on top of what they had.

The Acting Chair: No further questions of the Minister of Learning?

Then we'll call upon the Government House Leader.

Seniors

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm prepared to put forward the estimates on behalf of the Minister of Seniors with respect to supplementary supply for the Department of Seniors.

As is disclosed in the supplementary estimates that were tabled, those supplementary estimates fall into three areas: the sum of $4.5 million, which was provided to assist an increased number of low-income seniors with the costs of long-term care accommodation fees; the sum of $900,000 to support additional year-round and seasonal beds in homeless shelters; and $5.5 million for increased provincial funding under the Canada/Alberta affordable housing agreement.

The seniors' benefits addition will come as no surprise to members in the House. The seniors' benefits program is an income-based program that provides cash benefits to low-income seniors. In general, single seniors with an annual income of $18,850 or less and senior couples with a combined annual income of $28,740 or less are eligible for a cash benefit. The yearly maximums for seniors who qualify are generally $2,820 for single seniors and $4,200 for senior couples.

When long-term care rates were increased in August 2003, of course that also impacted low-income seniors who were in long-term care. At that time the government of Alberta determined that low-income seniors on Alberta seniors' benefits who were residing in long-term care facilities should receive more assistance, obviously, to offset the impact of the rate increase. So to do this, the Ministry of Seniors implemented a supplementary accommodation benefit which allows qualifying low-income seniors to receive assistance over and above the yearly maximums that I've just mentioned to pay for the long-term care costs. The maximum amount per senior is $4,455 per benefit year.

A supplementary estimate, the members will recall, was approved in the second quarter for $17.3 million to pay the costs of the supplementary accommodation benefit, but since then some changes have occurred. Additional seniors have qualified to receive assistance with the higher fees. There's been a change in the makeup of long-term care facilities so that there's a larger proportion of seniors in long-term care facilities who now qualify for benefits. In the summer of 2003 48 per cent of seniors living in long-term care were eligible for supplementary benefits. That percentage is now almost 57 per cent. So the $4.5 million supplementary estimate that's being requested of the Legislature today is to pay for that additional supplementary accommodation benefit for seniors in long-term care facilities.

The homeless shelters' $0.9 million was needed to fund an additional 100 year-round beds and 200 seasonal shelter beds in Calgary. To meet the level of demand in Calgary, the Ministry of Seniors has been operating Sunalta Shelter, which provides for an additional 100 year-round beds. The Mustard Seed church had operated the Sunalta Shelter as a temporary winter emergency shelter in Calgary over the past two years.

The supplementary funding will also help to pay costs incurred by the Calgary Drop-in Centre for 200 additional beds over the winter months. In addition to those projects receiving the funding, the Ministry of Seniors has funded the Westgate Hotel project and the Knight Inn project in Calgary as well to provide additional temporary beds.

The remainder of the supplementary estimates, $5.5 million, which again is in the area of housing services, is to complete the Canada/Alberta affordable housing agreement. Members will recall that the Canada/Alberta affordable housing agreement provides access to up to $67.12 million in federal contributions to be matched by the province to help increase the supply of low-cost housing in high-growth communities.

Under the agreement the federal government is prepared to provide up to $20.5 million to Alberta in 2003-2004. The 2003-2004 budget originally provided only $15 million, which is $5.5 million below the amount necessary to fully match the federal contribution. With this supplementary estimate the Ministry of Seniors will be able to fully match the federal contribution for 2003-2004, which will result in an additional $11 million being provided to communities to meet the need for affordable housing. Since signing the agreement, more than $40.2 million has been allocated to 21 projects for the construction of 1,005 affordable housing units.

So, Mr. Chairman, that's the rationale for the $10.9 million which is being requested by the Ministry of Seniors.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, Minister. Are you prepared to respond to questions on the Minister of Seniors' behalf?

Mr. Hancock: I'll respond to the questions, Mr. Chairman, that I can respond to and undertake to get answers to the rest.

The Acting Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks. I appreciate that gesture from this minister.

The first questions I have are around the allocation for homeless shelters. We are all aware of the number of homeless people on the streets of not just Edmonton and Calgary but of the smaller cities in Alberta as well. Many of these people are there as a result of mental health problems. Many of them are there because they can't have supported housing where they could live and get a minimum bit of support so that they don't end up in crisis and in hospital and on the streets. So my question – and perhaps this minister may well be able to answer because of his role in Justice – would be: are we seeing anything in here that's going to address some of the long-term causes of homelessness, or are we simply seeing treatment of the symptoms?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, of course with respect to the Ministry of Seniors specifically, obviously this budget would address the symptoms. It deals with making provision for low-cost housing and provision for homeless shelters.

The issue with respect to why people are homeless would be provided for mainly within the context of other government departments. In many cases, as the member well knows, there are issues with respect to mental health. There are other issues that impact people which I won't go into in detail here, not being an expert in it.

Clearly, what we're talking about here is providing shelters for the people who are homeless, and the leading-edge agreement with the federal government with respect to providing funds to support affordable housing is, again, to deal with those people who are in that situation, not to deal with the other side of the equation, which is also very important, and that is to ensure that people don't get into that position.

Dr. Taft: The point of my question was that we might not end up needing these supplementary estimates if we could get at the underlying cause of homelessness, so that's how it relates to this.

Mr. Hancock: Well, the hon. member may well be right. We wouldn't need these estimates if we didn't have the problem. As he well knows, however, those problems are not solvable overnight, so you have to deal with the acute care side of the equation now while you're dealing with trying to solve the problem on the other side of the table. You can't abandon these people who are in need on a cold winter night because you want to cure the problem. That's one of the key struggles the government always has: to put resources into the preventative side and into the program side, which would resolve some of these issues. Obviously, we need to deal with the acute care side, and that's what's being asked for here.

Dr. Taft: Certainly I wouldn't want the minister to interpret my comments as suggesting that we cut out these kinds of responses to the immediate needs, but it seems to me that this occurs year after year after year. Frankly, we've known for a long time that many people who are homeless are homeless because of mental health problems, and we haven't addressed their care, so let's get on with addressing that.

My next questions are around the 4 and a half million dollars "to assist an increased number of low-income senior citizens with the costs of long-term care accommodation fees," which went up very significantly I think it was the 1st of August. At the same time that those fees went up, we're hearing increasing reports and seeing increasing evidence of decline in standards of care in nursing homes so that we have seniors who feel like they're paying more and getting less.

So let me frame it this way. This 4 and a half million dollars that's going in to offset the costs of the increased fees for low-income seniors will flow through the bank accounts of those seniors to the nursing homes. Does this minister have any thoughts or knowledge of what impact we might see on improving standards of care as a result of increases in revenues going to the nursing homes such as this 4 and a half million dollar increase?

The Acting Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Well, as the member will know, having read carefully the Broda report, the issue of making sure that there are sufficient beds in long-term care is certainly one which the Ministry of Seniors, responsible for housing, is acutely aware of and has been working hard on. One of the reasons for the increase in the long-term care rates was to have that payment for the housing portion of the care so that the operators would have sufficient funds to keep the standard of care and the level of care in the facilities strong and as well, of course, to make sure that other facilities would be available so that more beds would be available so that many other good things could happen. First of all, those seniors who are in need of long-term care and needed that type of accommodation would have it available, and people who should be in long-term care as opposed to acute care beds would have the opportunity to move there and thus free up acute care beds for the acute care system in health.

So there were many benefits which were intended by increasing the fees which were payable by people in long-term care for their housing. That's a good theory, but obviously there are people in long-term care who are low-income and who are being subsidized, so the Seniors budget had to be increased to cover off that portion of those people's fees. That's what we're looking for here, to keep those people whole and make sure that that increase did not impact unduly on people who couldn't afford to pay.

But, yes, of course the whole concept of making the long-term care charges match the costs of providing the housing portion is so that it doesn't eat into the cost of providing the care. The operators can make sure that that care is provided for. If the money isn't there, they can't provide the care, so you have to make sure that it's there, and these dollars will go directly to doing that.

The Acting Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On the $900,000 for the homeless, the additional funds that are being asked for here, would the minister have – you may not have because you're not directly responsible for that portfolio – a breakdown in terms of which communities received what amounts from this? As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview drew to the attention of the House, the problem of homelessness is not just the problem of Calgary or Edmonton, but Red Deer, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Grande Prairie, and so on and so forth all have that problem now.

I'm particularly interested in this question because in my constituency there has been some neighbourhood dispute about whether or not a particular church should provide temporary shelter to the homeless. I'm interested in knowing what portion of the funds from this $900,000 has come to Edmonton and perhaps some of that money to the area that I represent to provide for the facilities that are badly needed by the homeless in the area.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, to the best of my knowledge and subject to correction the information that I have available here is that the $900,000 went entirely to Calgary from this supplementary estimate. That's not to say that there weren't other dollars in the budget that went to other homeless projects around the province. But this particular supplementary estimate was dedicated, as I indicated, to running the Sunalta Shelter in Calgary, which the ministry was operating, and the supplementary estimate was needed to pay some costs incurred by the Calgary Drop-in Centre for 200 additional beds there. I think the other projects that I listed, the Westgate Hotel project and the Knight Inn, were not part because the information that I have is that those were in addition to these. So the $900,000 as I understand it – and I will certainly get correct information if I'm wrong – went specifically to the Sunalta project and the CDIC project in Calgary.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Now, I'm well aware of the Inn from the Cold project in Strathcona. My church as well as other churches have been participating in that project. It's a very good indication of how the community can come together and provide support for those in need. It's unfortunate that there was a problem in getting that project up and running on a timely basis, partially due, as the member indicated, to the concerns that were expressed in the community. I have nothing but respect for the people from all the churches involved who were dedicated to getting that particular society together and up and running and providing that type of accommodation, primarily directed to young people in the Old Strathcona area but I don't think restricted to them.

I have had occasion to speak to the minister with respect to that project and with respect to the problems they were having getting up and running, but I have to indicate that this supplemental estimate deals specifically with those two projects that I mentioned in Calgary.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Now I turn to the $4.5 million "to assist an increased number of low-income senior citizens with the costs of long-term care accommodation fees." Clearly, this request is related to the increase in the rate that resulted from changes in the government's own policy with respect to that. From the seniors' advocates we hear day in and day out, increasingly, their growing concerns about the quality of care at the same time as the Minister of Seniors is coming back to this House to ask for more money to pay for those facilities that provide that care. So that's a concern I want to register.

I don't know if any of this money – it doesn't look like it – is being used to monitor the quality of care in conjunction with the increase in fees, which in part were justified in order to guarantee and perhaps improve upon the quality of care received by seniors in long-term care facilities.

Now, the questions that I have about it. I know that there are three types of providers, I guess. There are private, nonprofit providers of long-term care; there are public facilities that provide that care, run by RHAs I would suppose; and there are private, for-profit. So there are three categories that I know of. Would the minister have any idea about what portion of this $4.5 million is going to each of the three categories of providers, and what are the numbers of seniors receiving this assistance for each of these three types of residences run by three different categories of providers?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, the first portion of the member's comments were clearly a comment which I'm sure the Minister of Seniors will be pleased to read and get that input from.

With respect to the specifics about the three types of housing and how many seniors are in each type and what percentage of them in each type get the benefit of this supplemental assistance and more particularly this supplementary estimate, obviously I don't have those numbers at hand. To the extent that they are available, I'll see that the member gets them.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. While we are talking about numbers, perhaps I should also put in a request, then, and the Minister of Seniors will perhaps respond to it later on. What has been the increase both in terms of absolute numbers and the percentage increase of seniors requiring this assistance since the increase anywhere from 38 to 50 per cent on a monthly basis in the rates that the seniors have to pay for long-term care? Two numbers: absolute numbers of seniors who now require special assistance to pay for their facilities and, secondly, what percentage increase has taken place as a result of changing this policy.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't have the absolute numbers of seniors available, but as I indicated earlier, during the summer of 2003 48 per cent of seniors living in long-term care facilities were eligible for supplementary benefits. There has been a shift in the demographics. There have been higher income seniors who have chosen to avail themselves of other accommodation. Once the prices, I guess, were comparable, they chose a different form of housing. So there have been higher income seniors leaving long-term care facilities and normally replaced by others who are lower income level.

So there has been a shift in the demographics. My understanding is that right now about 57 per cent of seniors in long-term care are receiving supplementary assistance benefits, and that's expected to increase to about 60 per cent by the year-end. There has been a shift, there has been a change, but my information suggests that that change has not been so much that the people who weren't before are now on supplementary assistance benefits, but rather there's been a change in the demographics. In fact, spaces have been made available for more lower income seniors, who then require the supplementary assistance benefit, and the higher income seniors are moving out to other types of accommodation.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I, also, have some questions on seniors. I wasn't completely satisfied with the answers I just heard from the hon. minister on how they intend to help seniors, particularly with long-term care fees and the problems they're having with increased power bills and insurance costs. I don't feel that seniors are more satisfied than they were at this time last year, and I want to know how come that isn't addressed in these supplementary estimates. I also want to know what the government's long-term plans are, because I don't see them addressed here, in terms of providing affordable housing for seniors.

We're seeing more and more that seniors are falling through the cracks, that many of them cannot sustain their own homes or rental homes with the costs that are accruing out there when you see the substantial increases in living costs, whether it's their power bills, their rents going up, being able to own and operate a car, which in this province it is virtually impossible to function without. The public transportation system is so poor and the cities are so spread out. So they see all these mounting costs; they see additional fees having to be paid for prescription drugs.

All of this adds up on a monthly bill that's unaffordable for them, and the only place they can cut back on is their housing. So if there is no affordable housing available for them, which we are finding increasingly is the case, then where are they supposed to go? How come the government isn't picking up their own phones and listening to these problems? We're hearing them in our constituency offices day in and day out, not seniors who are upset or mad but seniors who are desperate and who have no place to go. So I wonder why that hasn't been addressed anywhere in these supplementary estimates.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is debating beyond the provisions of the supplementary estimates and trying to tie it back to supplementary estimates by saying: why isn't it in here? The hon. member well knows that a budget might be expected sometime within the next month or so. She heard the Speech from the Throne in which there was a clear commitment to the seniors of this province, an indication that the government does understand that seniors who are living on the margin, seniors who've retired on a fixed income and are facing increasing costs, as everybody is – increasing costs with respect to utilities, with respect to groceries, with respect to all the costs of living do make it difficult for seniors who've retired on fixed incomes.

My own parents are living in their own home and have the same issues as other seniors around the province, and that is that it's increasingly more and more difficult to meet the rising costs that happen in society, the ongoing costs that increase on a year-to-year basis.

This government is not turning a blind eye to that. In fact this government has put in place the Alberta seniors' benefits in an attempt to make sure that there was a program in place so that seniors on a low income could have a place to go for extra funding when they needed it. When the government allowed the rates for long-term care to go up so that more long-term care spaces could be available, they also recognized that there would need to be some money in the budget to cover those that require assistance from the government to assist with that increased cost. That's why there was an additional $17.3 million in the last supplementary estimates, and we're now looking at $4.5 million in these estimates.

The Minister of Seniors is a strong advocate for seniors in this province, and the government will continue to ensure that those seniors who are living on the margin, who are having a hard time making ends meet in houses that perhaps might need repairs, in houses that are increasingly difficult to heat through rising utility costs, seniors who have to meet their medical bills – the Minister of Seniors is working very hard to make sure that the programs are there and that they go to the people who need them.

So the issue is: at what level of income do seniors need assistance, and how can we have programs that are designed to be delivered so that those seniors get assistance? It's very much a part of this government's agenda, as was spoken to in the Speech from the Throne, but that's a subject for discussion when the main estimates are before the House.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the comments here. Seeing that we're getting towards the end of the discussion, I just need to put my concern on record that we've only had about eight hours since we were provided with the information in these supplementary estimates, and it does make it very difficult for us to carry on an informed debate. We don't have an opportunity to check with any of the stakeholders on the appropriateness of this legislation. It's over $100 million in this case. So I would just like it to be on the record that this is a very, very serious constraint on our ability to debate this bill.

Thank you.

Innovation and Science

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. It's my pleasure tonight to represent the Minister of Alberta Innovation and Science. Mr. Chairman, hon. members, tonight on behalf of the minister I'm bringing forward the supplementary estimates for the ministry's budget regarding Imagis. For those of you who may not already know, Imagis is the acronym for the Alberta Government Integrated Management Information System. It is the corporate system that supports the government of Alberta's financial, purchasing, human resources, and payroll businesses. A project to implement Imagis was initiated in 1995-96 to replace multiple old systems that could not meet the changing business imperatives.

Now, what does Imagis do? Imagis provides the ability to meet the Alberta government's financial obligations to vendors, customers, and employees. It enables all ministries within the government of Alberta to comply with the requirements of generally accepted accounting principles. Last year Imagis processed approximately 1.9 million invoices. Can you imagine? One point nine million invoices. It sounds like something that my wife and I have to deal with when we go out shopping – 1.9 million invoices through accounts payable, 500,000 payroll cheques, 250,000 time sheets. How many time sheets? Two hundred and fifty thousand and 42,000 T4s and T4As. Through an automated employee self-service component approximately 20,000 employees receive the confirmation of their pay, eliminating the need of duplication to print and mail 200,000 pay advices. This, I believe, is a very important initiative. Seventy-five thousand expense claims were processed. The automated electronic payment system eliminates the manual handling of 1.2 million paper vendor invoices. So, Mr. Chairman, that is quite important.

Upgrades to the Imagis system are required approximately every three years to keep the system current and take advantage of the enhancements and new features. The upgrade undertaken in '03-04 involved changing the system to fully web-enabled technology and significant changes to some of the financial and human resource functions.

Finally, as a result of the complications involved, increased costs were incurred. I think we can all relate to that in our own homes in terms of an estimate we get versus what it really actually costs. In addition, Imagis experienced increased operational costs for such things as hardware requirements and software licensing fees, another common phenomenon across Canada. To cover the increased operating and upgrading expenses, a supplementary estimate of $1.55 million is required.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, thank you again for the opportunity to present tonight. Should there be any questions, it would be my pleasure to ask the Minister of Innovation and Science and his staff to respond to them directly.

Thank you.

Dr. Massey: I wanted to ask a question. Has the government examined and responded to the Auditor General's criticisms in his last report where he indicated that the government hasn't formalized or implemented "an effective accountability framework for IMAGIS"? One would assume that before more money was put into the program, that accountability program would be in place, and I think there was a further recommendation from the Auditor General that the work be done within the individual ministries to make sure that the money was being well spent. I guess it's that concern, that the Auditor General's caveats be addressed before we put more money into it.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I can't say. This morning I appeared in front of Public Accounts, and some of the hon. members across the way and on this side were at Public Accounts. The Auditor General was there, and he talked about the importance of accountability. I was very proud to say that the accountability within the ministries that are presenting to Public Accounts – I'm not aware at this point if, in fact, Innovation and Science is presenting to the Public Accounts, where a similar type of question, I would assume, would be asked as well. But I will say this. I understand the minister's perspective. Actually, not the Auditor General's criticisms but the Auditor General's recommendations I know are clearly taken very seriously by this government and are acted on, as I indicated to the Public Accounts Committee this morning.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In light of what the Auditor General has recommended, the question of accountability I think is something that we need to take seriously. So in that spirit, looking at the request for a little more than $1.5 million related to a budget of $12.1 million that was approved by this Assembly earlier, it's a rather large increase being asked, more than 13 per cent.

The information technology is not something new. It has been around for many years, extensively used by this government and its offices as well as businesses and other institutions all over the place. Why is it that the budgeted amount is so far out of line with what was in fact being spent and because of which now a certain per cent increase is being requested by way of this particular request for supplementary estimates?

Mr. Boutilier: I appreciate the hon. member's comments. I think we can all appreciate either in our lives, in our homes, or in institutions that, clearly, software licences and fees are something from an accountability perspective that we have no control over because it's an external market that we're dealing with. But I can assure you from an accountability perspective that every single cent that is being invested in this new technology – Alberta is viewed as a leader, and we want to ensure that we get the best value in terms of what we're providing relative to this.

Again, I will take the hon. member's comments that he has mentioned and share them with my hon. colleague the Minister of Innovation and Science, and I thank him for his comments.

Infrastructure

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm here this evening before the committee requesting and showing that we need an additional $35 million to fulfill the Natural Gas Price Protection Act. The original budget was for $180,600,000. Of course, it covers five months: November, December, January, February, and March. What happened? In November and December there was no payment, but we were figuring on a first of the year payment, and it turned out that in January there was a $2.50 payment, then in February $1.50, and we know there's another $1.50 coming in March. Our calculations tell us that we will need about $215 million for this whole program, which requires the addition of the $35 million.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Chairman, I just can't resist asking the minister what the justification is for such a poorly funded kind of system, where people have to get rebates and we just can't provide fair and reasonable pricing when it comes to natural gas.

Mr. Lund: Well, I'm so pleased that the hon. member would find time to ask me a question. I remember having to stand in the House almost daily and answer questions from the hon. member, but with her aspirations to leave this place and go to bigger and better things, I really appreciate that she give me one more opportunity to answer one of her questions.

Mr. Chairman, the fact is that gas is priced on the market, and I think it would be a huge mistake if, in fact, we said that we were going to interfere – I don't know what the number would be, where the level would be – on a monthly basis with that level. I think the gas price protection act certainly offers the level of protection to the consumer that is necessary for those heavy-use months. When we don't know exactly what the price is going to be, we don't know how many gigajoules are going to be used, we make the best estimate that we possibly can, and I really, really believe that we've now come to the point where we know that we're going to need about $215.6 million in order to fulfill the requirements under the act.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My question to the minister, of course, is whether or not the same rebate program will be kept in place for next winter, if he knows anything about it, or whether, in fact, since the election might be called by the time we are into this month next year, he thinks that the rebate might even be made more generous and the program might be made sweeter for Albertans by then?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Chairman, under the act this present formula is in place for three years, and the level of funding, of course, is graduated. Depending on the price of gas, it can go all the way from $1.50 to $3.25. It can even go higher than that if the price of gas to the consumer goes over $12 a gigajoule. That's the protection we have, that the consumer will never pay above a certain level. As a matter of fact, it's really interesting because for March we know that the price is going to be considerably below anything that the consumer has paid through November, December, January, or February – in March. So that's the benefit of this great program that the government put in place, and it's there for three years.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Chairman, I don't have any more questions for this minister, but I just wanted to put my one question on the record for the Minister of Revenue, and that's in terms of the investment risk management system that they're spending the $875,000 on. Could you tell us why you think you need one, and do you expect to have any anticipated expenses?

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much to the hon. member for the question. The reason for this request of $875,000 is to provide funding for an investment risk management system. The total cost of the system is $1.26 million, half of which will be recovered through charge-backs to external investment clients as the asset is amortized naturally over the next five years.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to point out that Alberta Revenue will be lapsing a similar amount of operating dollars that we're now requesting be added to the Revenue capital budget. Now, these operating savings cannot be directly transferred to capital because they have associated recovered revenue. But as a capital expense the revenue will be recovered from investment clients over a five-year period as the asset is amortized rather than in the year of the expense for operating funds. Now, this is why a supplementary estimate is required tonight.

I would also like to conclude by saying, just as a reminder to the hon. members in this Assembly, that Alberta Revenue manages approximately $38 billion in investments on behalf of Albertans. Now, that's $38 billion. I'm going to say that slower. Do you know how many zeroes are in 38 billion? It is quite substantial. So this includes the heritage trust fund as well as the endowment funds like the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research, the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Science and Engineering Research, and the Alberta heritage scholarship fund as well as various other public-sector pension plans.

Now, the request will provide an investment risk management system giving the Department of Revenue a highly sophisticated tool which will evaluate investment opportunities and risks.

I thank the hon. member for the question.

The Chair: The chair hesitates to interrupt the hon. minister, but pursuant to Standing Order 58(4) and Government Motion 9 agreed to earlier this afternoon, I must now put the following questions with respect to the 2003-04 supplementary estimates, No. 2, for the general revenue fund for the year ending March 31.

head: Vote on Supplementary Estimates
General Revenue Fund

Agreed to:

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development
Operating Expense	$1,750,000
Health and Wellness
Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$6,167,000

Capital Investment	$6,350,000
Human Resources and Employment Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$28,680,000
Infrastructure Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$35,000,000
Innovation and Science Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$1,550,000
Learning Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$14,600,000
Revenue Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$875,000
Seniors Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$10,900,000
Sustainable Resource Development Operating Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases	$14,800,000

10:10

The Chair: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll move that we rise and report, but I just wanted to put on the record as I do that – the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview indicated for the record that the opposition only had eight hours to look at these estimates before Committee of Supply. Just for the record I'm not aware of any request from the hon. members to schedule the Committee of Supply at a different time than was proposed. Always open to working with members of the House with respect to scheduling and when things might come forward and always had a good working relationship with the retiring House leader on the other side. Always open to requests for scheduling at more appropriate times if it's possible.

Having said that for the record, I would move that the committee rise and report the estimates that have been voted in Committee of Supply.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions and reports as follows. All resolutions relating to the 2003-2004 supplementary estimates, No. 2, have been approved.

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development: operating expense, $1,750,000.

Health and Wellness: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $6,167,000; capital investment, $6,350,000.

Human Resources and Employment: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $28,680,000.

Infrastructure: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $35,000,000.

Innovation and Science: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $1,550,000.

Learning: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $14,600,000.

Revenue: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $875,000.

Seniors: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $10,900,000.

Sustainable Resource Development: operating expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $14,800,000.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a list of those resolutions voted upon by the Committee of Supply pursuant to Standing Orders.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? Carried.

Mr. Hancock: Seeing the enthusiasm of my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10:15 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, February 26, 2004

1:30 p.m.

Date: 2004/02/26

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. Woloshyn: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased and honoured to introduce a group of 17 grade 6 students from Seba Beach school. They are here on the normal visits to the Legislature. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mr. Dave Hardman. I'd ask them all to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Dunford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have today in the members' gallery members of our ministry, all from the Human Resources and Employment department. As I announce their names, I would ask them to stand, and then I would hope that you would join me in providing a warm welcome to all of them. First is Shannon Marchand, Darren Campbell, Cathy Clement, Percy Cummins, Cynthia Bourque, John Vellacott, Alice Leung, and Tina Dragon. They're here investigating what it is that we do over here in this building. So let's give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Revenue.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Along with my colleague it's a pleasure of mine to introduce 11 guests from Alberta Revenue who are visiting with us here today to also observe the proceedings of the Legislature and come to know better this part of the policy-making within our administration. All are members of the investment administration division, and I'd like them to stand as their names are read. Donna Kowal, Ivan Kupchenko, James DuBarry, Bev Campbell, Merceinthe Campbell, Doreen Chandra, Rene Schmied, Juliana Nash, Frank Marr, Yueyang Qiu, and Louise Shepherd. If we could all give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

Ms Haley: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure for me to be able to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a group of individuals from my constituency. You know, I don't often have visitors from my constituency, so it's really neat to have them here. The Airdrie Koinonia Christian school tries every year to send a group of students up to Edmonton when we are in session so that they can observe the Legislature and do a tour. This year it's a group of grade 10 students, and they are accompanied by Mr. Dean Hughes. It's just a small group; there are 14 students and Mr. Hughes with them. They managed to survive on the icy roads this morning, and I hope that they'll all be safe going back home. Would you please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With a great deal of pleasure I want to introduce two ladies that are visiting our Legislature today. Actually, one is a temporary resident of the constituency of our Economic Development minister, and the other one is visiting all the way from Poland. Their names are Teresa Chipiuk and Ms Monika Grzybowska. I would ask them to rise and accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Rathgeber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly a pleasure for me to rise and introduce to you and through you 16 adult students from the Yellowhead Tribal College located in the Edmonton-Calder constituency. They're from the adult upgrading program and the university/college transfer program along with their instructor, Linda Anderson. We met previous to the proceedings today, and they had good questions regarding health care and regarding student financing, so I'm sure that they will find their visit here today instructive and very valuable. They are in the public gallery. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Yankowsky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you unto this Assembly four constituents. This is a mother and her three daughters. The mother was here earlier in the week with a school class and indicated that she would like to come back and bring her daughters to watch the proceedings of the House, so they are here today. Kim Militsala and her daughters Aleia, Tara, and Tennille are here, seated in the public gallery. I would like them to stand at this time and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm just delighted today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two constituents and a special guest of theirs. Seated in the public gallery we have John and Bettie Zyp, who are constituents, and with them today is Jonas Coyes, and that's their grandson. He's in grade 4, and he's very interested in the political process. So I would ask them to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Through you to members of the Assembly it's my pleasure to introduce Mr. Michael Ivey. Michael is a grade 11 student at Harry Ainlay high school, and he is here spending the day at the Legislature on a job shadow. I happen to have the privilege of having Michael shadow me today. I would ask him to rise and accept the warm welcome of the members of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly three people that are near and dear to me. I'd like to ask them to stand as I call out their names. The first one is my lovely wife, Trish; my fine eldest son, William; and for the time being my youngest son, Samuel. I know you're sitting there wondering where my daughter is. Currently, her French class is in Quebec on a student exchange program.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Electricity Deregulation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has blown $8 billion on trying to make electricity deregulation work. Now the Premier admits that he doesn't know, quote, if prices will ever go down. This is no comfort to consumers in this province. To the Premier: why has this Premier blown $8 billion on an electricity deregulation scheme that will never, never work to benefit consumers?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, only the Liberals say it will never, never work. The Liberal critics say that the deregulation has caused higher power bills and that the increased generation brought about since deregulation would have happened anyway. That is nonsense. The fact is that Alberta has gained over 3,000 megawatts of new power generation, a 30 per cent increase to Alberta's energy supply, and those who say that new generation would have come about anyway are wrong.

Mr. Speaker, relative to rate increases, certainly on the retail side, the consumer side, a lot of work has been done to protect the consumer from sloppy billing, from gouging, improper pricing of electricity. Relative to the price of electricity or natural gas or oil or any commodity, there is the general increase in the rate of inflation. The price of gas, the price of electricity, the price of oil, the price of everything in other provinces is going up, as is the price of health care, by the way. Everything is going up. Their salaries go up. Our salaries go up. The salaries of the public service employees go up. Everything goes up.

1:40

Mr. Speaker, we try to achieve stabilization as much as we possibly can, but we have no control over prices going up related to the normal rate of inflation. I would remind the hon. member that if a power company wishes to have a rate increase, they have to go through the process, the process of the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board. If they're concerned about prices going up, they can intervene, which they never do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: when did the Premier realize that electricity prices will never go down as a result of electricity deregulation?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I don't know, but I do know that in tracking the rate of inflation, things go up. Commodity prices go down from time to time, but incrementally and over the years they go up. The price of wheat, the price of barley, the price of oil, the price of gas, the price of electricity: they go up. It's called the normal rate of inflation. From time to time they do come down, but incrementally they go up. God, I can remember when the price of oil went down to – what? – about $8 a barrel. Now it's up to in excess of $30 a barrel. So things do come down, but incrementally and over the course of history . . . Instead of spending millions of taxpayers' dollars FOIPing to find out whether we spent $2.70, he should maybe do some research in the incremental increases in power prices, gas prices, oil prices, wheat prices, barley prices.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. There's a lot of inflation in this House.

Is Dr. West's first job with this government to correct bad public policy and to once and for all unplug electricity deregulation? Is that his first job?

Mr. Klein: No. Dr. West's first job is to make sure that the policies of the government are fulfilled. Dr. West is not involved in policy development. I can understand their concern about Dr. West being the chief of staff.

Mrs. Nelson: Snap you like a twig.

Mr. Klein: Oh, absolutely. So when they launch these frivolous requests, spending millions of taxpayers' dollars to determine whether we spent $2.70 on a glass of orange juice, Steve West will make sure that, indeed, any requests for information are legitimate, and he will keep their feet to the fire. Mr. Speaker, I suspect we will see their rear ends pucker.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier has turned the Public Affairs Bureau into the marketing wing of the electricity industry. Despite the fact that electricity deregulation is an $8 billion waste of money, the Public Affairs Bureau still plans to spend $3 million trying to sell this to Alberta consumers. To the Premier: why has the Premier turned his Public Affairs Bureau into the marketing arm of the electricity industry?

Mr. Klein: I don't think that that is true, Mr. Speaker. Well, I don't think – it is not true. It's not the marketing arm. As a matter of fact, I've listened to many commercials by many power-generating companies and power-distributing companies advertising rates and advertising the ability of people to contract with their particular company and advertising the wonderful service that they're prepared to offer. The Public Affairs Bureau had nothing to do with that.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the Premier: why is the Premier committing $3 million to trying to sell a defective product, electricity deregulation, when even he doesn't have any confidence that it works?

Mr. Klein: Oh, Mr. Speaker, that is not true. That is a big fib. I have lots of confidence in energy deregulation. I have lots of confidence in a program that brought about 3,000 additional megawatts of power to this province and prevented brownouts and blackouts. I have great confidence in the Bolger committee report, of which two representatives were from this government caucus, to deal with the retail and the consumer side. So I don't believe that energy deregulation has failed at all. I think it has been a monumental success and, indeed, is a model for those that want to deregulate – is a model – in North America.

Mr. Speaker, would this hon. member like us to go to a state-owned system where they have accumulated millions, billions of dollars worth of public debt? Is that what they want? I think that's what they want, because that is quite consistent with Liberal thinking.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I want the Premier to visit liberalopposition.com and see what a real electricity policy looks like.

This is to the Premier. Who in the government ordered ATCO Gas to hand over close to half a million dollars to the government of Alberta to pay for this propaganda campaign?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I have no idea if that statement is true. You know, we have learned in this Legislature that any statement coming from the Liberal opposition is embellished, is exaggerated, and when it's investigated, it turns out to be so far from the truth as to be absolutely ridiculous.

Mr. Bonner: What are you doing?

Mr. Klein: Well, Mr. Speaker, this hon. member, I think the Member for Edmonton-Glengarry if I recognize his chirping, is a good example, a very, very good example. He brings out this information relative to the use of government aircraft. He is totally and absolutely off base, but he creates through innuendo, vicious innuendo, an implication that something wrong has taken place when, indeed, nothing wrong or improper took place. And he refused to apologize.

Southeast Calgary Hospital

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, this week alone I've received two shocking letters about appalling conditions at the Foothills hospital. While this Premier talks about providing wine and room service at health care's version of Hotel Ritz, ordinary Albertans are being made to wait eight hours in emergency with stroke symptoms and are even resorting to lying on the floor in emergency rooms. To the Premier: how does the Premier explain his government's failure to construct a new hospital in Calgary despite the fact that he personally identified this as a priority five years ago?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, first of all, this allegation, again, is wrong – wrong. His nose is growing. To stand up and say that is wrong. Indeed, the Calgary regional health authority is now proceeding with conceptual plans for a hospital in the south. Money has been committed for revamping of the trauma centre and emergency room at Foothills hospital. A children's hospital is well under construction right now, as we speak. The centre for expertise for bone and joint surgery is well underway. The Alberta foundation for medical research is well funded and is generating good research projects. So what the hon. member says, that we are not committed, is wrong, absolutely wrong. Yes, there may be problems. There are always going to be problems. That's why we are addressing as Premiers the whole issue of achieving sustainability in the health care system.

When the hon. member talks about wine in hospitals, Mr. Speaker, put it in context. I alluded to a person who visited Birmingham, England, where he has operatives, by the way, in England or the U.K. anyway, a person who related to me a story about going there to have the Birmingham hip installed and taking advantage of some rooms attached to the hospital that were luxury rooms that generated money, that generated money for the national health system, for the public system, generated big dollars. At least half the people occupying those luxury rooms were from Alberta, believe it or not. You know, you have to ask yourself why. This fellow said that, yes, he could order wine. Well, big deal. Now, if the Edmonton Journal wants to make a big deal out of it and if this hon. member wants to make a big deal out of it, so let it be, but the average Albertan understands what I'm talking about. It's talking about thinking differently and doing things differently.

Dr. Taft: Will the Premier confirm that this five-year delay has facilitated his government's discussions with private developers interested in constructing, operating, and maintaining this new southeast Calgary hospital, including a hotel facility?

Mr. Klein: That very well may be, and if indeed the Calgary regional health authority is talking to private developers to enter into a P3 and if indeed there could be a hotel component with that hospital, great. Get at it.

Dr. Taft: So his agenda is revealed.

Is the Premier bringing back Steve West, his former quarterback of privatization, to privatize the health care system in this province?

Mr. Klein: No. But, you know, I can say that one of the reasons Steve West is coming back is to pound some common sense into the Liberals.

The Speaker: Third party opposition question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Electricity Deregulation

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Back when he was the Minister of Energy, Steve West gave a speech to the Calgary Chamber of Commerce about electricity deregulation. He said, and I quote: you can't give people power too cheaply. He said that he was very confident that we can lower the cost to the consumer. Yesterday the Premier admitted that there was nothing his government could do about the fact that power bills have gone through the roof. My question is to the Premier. If deregulation can't deliver cheaper power, then why keep it?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, he does not tell the truth again. I never said – never ever, ever said – and he should stand up and apologize because I never said that there is nothing this government can do to stop prices from going through the roof. I never, ever said that, and he knows it. Stand up and apologize and state what I said for the record. I said that there is nothing that this government can do to stop normal price increases.

As I said in this House, things go up. The price of wheat goes up. The price of barley goes up. The price of oil goes up. The price of gas goes up, the price of houses, the price of cars, everything. This member attended university for many, many years. All he needs to do is go back, look at a simple chart and see that the price of virtually everything has gone up. Will he do that? If not, I'll provide him with the information on any commodity.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that electricity prices in Alberta have doubled since deregulation and are now considerably higher than in other provinces in this country, will the Premier stand up and apologize for misleading this House?

Mr. Klein: Well, Mr. Speaker, that is not true, and I won't apologize. That is not true. Stand up and tell the truth. They are not higher than in any other province. I had a document that was given to me yesterday showing that power prices are very comparable to those paid in other provinces.

Mr. Speaker, you know, I would like to produce my own power bill. I think it was something like $29. I mean, that is not an outrageous power bill.

I don't know what your power bill is. What is your power bill for your house? You know, I would challenge the hon. member to table his power bill in the House. I would challenge him to table his power bill from, say, 10 years ago, and I would like him to track the general rate of inflation. Will you do that? Will the hon. member stand up and commit to doing that? Mr. Speaker, there's a challenge. You will see that his bill, except for some spikes during the difficult times in deregulation, has gone up, but generally it has tracked the rate of inflation.

At least now he has the security of supply. Would the hon. member like to stand up and say to this House, "I would rather risk brownouts or blackouts than pay a little bit more on my electricity bill"? Is that what he's saying?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that I've already tabled power bills that are much higher than they used to be from dozens and dozens of Albertans, will the Premier admit that he has not been able to produce one power bill that shows that power prices have come down since deregulation was brought in?

Mr. Klein: I would like to table for the perusal of the members four copies of this document. It shows residential bill comparisons, consumption based on 600 kilowatts. It's based on ATCO energy rates, based on December 29 to January 27 flow-through rates. It talks about the rates in Edmonton, Whitecourt, Calgary, and Grande Prairie, Mr. Speaker, and nothing on this chart indicates to me that anything – anything at all – is unreasonable.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Identity Theft

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Identity theft has become one of the fastest growing crimes in North America with at least 50 million Americans victimized. The problem is as serious in Canada, happening without our realizing it through the use of credit cards, by submitting personal information over e-mail, at ATM machines, and by hacking into databases. My question is to the Minister of Government Services. Does your department have information on the magnitude of this crime in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First of all, identity theft or anyone attempting to assume somebody else's identity is a crime not only in Alberta but in North America. These crimes are committed by unscrupulous people who have absolutely no conscience. They have devious minds, and they will do anything to lie and cheat and misrepresent themselves to secure your credit card, your debit card, your driver's licence, your passport, your social insurance number. They will use those documents to assume your identity so that they can break into your bank account and do anything to secure your property. This is a North American problem, but in Alberta in the last three years the number has risen from 640 instances to over 1,000 instances, and the total loss has risen from just under half a million dollars to $1.2 million in this province alone.

I've created in my department a new investigation team, and that's done in co-operation with the police and court investigation units to look at the instances here in Alberta. Presently we have 100 files on identity theft that we're going over at this particular time.

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Maskell: Thank you. Is your department developing a plan – and I guess you've partially answered – or a program to inform Albertans about the risks of identity theft and about what actions can be taken to minimize those risks?

Mr. Coutts: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. In addition to the investigative team that we have in place to look at what's presently happening, we are embarking on an education program for Albertans. We have an identity theft tipsheet that is available, and it can be found on our web site in Government Services.

We also have helped other consumer protection divisions in various governments across Canada set up a national identity theft kit. This theft kit will help anyone who's been a victim of identity theft clear their name with one standard form that they can go down and have a checklist on how to correct their credit rating across Canada. We also use this form to notify banks and retailers and credit card users about how their identity has been misrepresented.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, we have just recently come up with a brand new driver's licence, which is more secure and tamper proof, and that is a big deterrent to identity theft in Alberta. But, most importantly, consumers should keep their documents safe. They should shred all documents that have any account numbers on them, and they should make sure that their credit cards and debit cards are kept safe as well as their passports and social insurance numbers. That's the biggest deterrent to identity theft.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Edmonton Remand Centre

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Built for less than 300, the Edmonton Remand Centre now houses over 700 people. Medieval living conditions are resulting in judges ordering 3 for 1 credit for time served at the remand centre when sentencing convicted criminals. This government's policies increasingly result in criminals spending less time in jail. My questions are to the Solicitor General. Why is this government allowing conditions to deteriorate so badly at the Edmonton Remand Centre that criminals gain by not having to serve their full time behind bars?

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd first like to mention that the hon. member has mentioned a case in regard to somebody that was given some time off due to serving time in our remand centre. That was an exception in that particular case. Unfortunately, I can't go into the details on that.

Mr. Speaker, in regard to our remand centre I have to tell you that we don't have any control over the people who comes into our remand centres. We can't hang a no vacancy sign on a remand centre when people are sentenced to the remand centre. We treat all our prisoners with dignity and grace, and we provide them what they need while they're serving time in our jails.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. The minister is responsible, however.

Given that the Fort Saskatchewan Correctional Centre has one and often two units sitting empty, why is the minister not housing low-risk detainees there to reduce overcrowding at the remand and not just the weekend people.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, people who are usually sentenced to remand aren't people that can go into a low-risk area.

Ms Blakeman: You've got empty units there.

Again to the same minister: given that smoking is not allowed in most workplaces or in public institutions, why is the Solicitor General continuing to allow inmates to smoke throughout the remand centre, affecting the health of other inmates and especially the staff?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has a good point. Smoking is allowed in our remand centres in certain areas, and we are well aware of some of the things that are happening within our remand centres in regard to smoking. We have been monitoring what was happening in Nova Scotia when they made their facilities a nonsmoking environment, and I would ask the member to stay tuned because it's going to be happening in our area also.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Agricultural Small Business Assistance

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first question is to the Minister of Finance. BSE has not only had a devastating impact on Alberta producers, but it's also put many agricultural manufacturing businesses at risk. At the same time, Alberta Treasury Branch is calling in loans on some of these businesses. These same businesses are being courted by American jurisdictions to relocate to various locations in the U.S.A., complete with the offer of venture capital to get them established. If we lose these businesses, they won't be back, and that's unacceptable. To the Minister of Finance: given that Alberta Treasury Branch was originally born to address these very kinds of issues back in 1938, can the minister tell me if there are any advantages for small business to still deal with the ATB over other financial institutions?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Nelson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills is correct. The ATB has a long history of providing sound financial services to its clients. In fact, this year the Canadian Federation of Independent Business ranked ATB Financial number one across the country for service to small business in 2003.

All that being said, I can say that ATB has been servicing the financial needs, of course, for 65 years within the province, and today almost two out of four farm families do their banking with ATB Financial. Let's be very clear; ATB understands agriculture and small businesses within Alberta and continues to grow strong local business while helping customers with their success. One thing that is very, very obvious in this province is that ATB is located in the vast majority of small communities within the province and has been there with those communities from day one and services them very, very well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister tell me what other financing options are available for these small businesses that are at risk to get them past this BSE crisis?

Mrs. Nelson: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've had this tremendous tragedy and disaster hit this province. I understand that the financial institutions within the province have tried very, very hard to deal with the disaster that has hit our agriculture community once again.

Insofar as ATB Financial is concerned, they have been very proactive in working with their customers throughout the province and, in fact, have been trying to mitigate some of the impact on their customers on a one-to-one basis by seeing what best suits them. I can say that ATB has clearly recognized, even in their most recent annual report, their focus on the BSE issue as it pertains to Alberta customers this year, and they are trying to work on situations where they could help them through the crisis and stay with these communities. In fact, I can tell you from the annual report I just went through that it's very obvious that ATB is there for Alberta rural communities without question.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, and I'd like to thank the Minister of Finance for that answer.

My next question is to the Minister of Economic Development and tourism. What's your department doing to prevent what could soon become an exodus of Alberta businesses?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Norris: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I also want to thank the hon. member for taking time to share his constituency with me the other day and some of the problems that are being faced. There are a number of programs that are ongoing right now that are of great importance to, certainly, rural Alberta and all of Alberta, especially faced with the BSE crisis. One of them, of course, is our value-added strategy that looks at turning commodities into more profitable high-end products within the very constituencies they're taken from. The other is our rural development strategy, which the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake and the hon. Member for Wainwright co-chaired, and I'm working on that with the hon. minister of agriculture.

I would like to say to the hon. member that it's because of efforts like his that those problems have been brought to light to the Ministry of Economic Development and other ministries, and we do recognize the importance of them. It's been very tough in rural Alberta to deal with these, but hopefully these strategies we're working on will help combat this in the future.

To his original question about the exodus of businesses, we take that very, very seriously, and we do not want to see one business leave the province of Alberta. In fact, we believe that the more businesses come, the greater the tax base pie, the better for all of Alberta. The evidence is that in most industries the growth rate is very significant. With this particular industry we're monitoring it very closely, and we'll be bringing forward programs, as I said, through the rural development strategy and the value-added strategy to help combat the commodity price, which is really at the heart of this crisis.

Again, I want to thank the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills and all rural members who have brought that to our attention. Thank you.

Water Management

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, communities around the province are watching the Red Deer River diversion hearing with grave concern. This hearing sets a precedent for how fresh water will be used in this province, and so far it looks like this government supports promoting development at the expense of sustainability. My first question to the Minister of Environment. Mr. Minister, you waffled all week on this answer. Will you just say no to using fresh water for oil field injections?

Dr. Taylor: I don't even like waffles, Mr. Speaker. We haven't waffled. I've said very clearly what process is happening. We've got a semijudicial process that's happening. It's in the public. It's the Environmental Appeal Board, which has its own legislation. It's a public body conducting a public hearing. They will make a recommendation to me within about 30 days of the conclusion of the hearing as to what their recommendation is in regard to the Capstone Energy application for a water licence.

Once again I repeat: as far as I know, we're the only province that has a public hearing process like this, where if a member of the public does not agree with a decision that one of my environmental directors makes, they can appeal that through the Environmental Appeal Board in a public process. Mr. Speaker, not even the NDP provinces in this country offer that.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: why would this government allow companies to even apply to use freshwater injection when the government-appointed committee is in the process of making recommendations on water use in this province?

Dr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have legislation which allows a certain procedure to follow for a water licence. Capstone Energy has followed a procedure. An irrigation district or an irrigation farmer or a golf course will follow a process to apply for a water licence, and that's exactly what has happened in this case. We have under legislation a process to apply, and that's open to the member if she'd like to apply for a water licence as well.

Ms Carlson: This minister has the authority to freeze that process.

Will he confirm that the real reason they are allowing these applications to go forward is because development is more important to this province, this government than sustainability?

Dr. Taylor: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, people of Alberta appreciate the strong and healthy economy we've got, but they also appreciate the strong and healthy environment we have, and we will continue to protect the environment as a government, and we do have a wonderful environment in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

[The sound system emitted a prolonged, high-pitched squeal]

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for clearing my sinuses.

The Speaker: Hon. member, there are switching problems in this building. It's caused the lights to flicker now and then and perhaps the sound system, and it's simply due to the age of the infrastructure. So please be patient and proceed.

Correctional Services

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's hard to compete with that squeak.

There have been many questions and speculations about correctional services in Alberta, including suggestions that the remand centre may be overcrowded, coming from those who are very sympathetic towards prisoners, but also that correctional officers may be in danger and that offenders serving their sentences in the community are not adequately monitored. The minister received a report a year ago dealing with such issues. My question today is to the Solicitor General. When is the correctional review report being released?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would like to thank the hon. member for bringing up that question. I'd also like to thank the members who have served on that committee.

Mr. Speaker, the member is correct. I have had that report in my office for the last year, and I will not apologize for that. What I will say is that that report contained many, many, many very, very good recommendations, some of them very controversial. Some of them we have monitored over the last year to make sure that we are making the right decision. I'd be pleased to tell the hon. member that with this report there were budget implications, and that report will be released after the budget, because we'll have some good news then.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental: what is the minister's response to allegations that the Edmonton Remand Centre is overcrowded, not in relationship to the comfort of prisoners but the safety of employees there?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, any time you have people held within a remand centre or a correctional facility, you always have to worry about the correctional officers who serve this province. All of the correctional officers in this province do a good job. They're well trained. It would be insane for me not to have to worry about them in regard to their health and their safety, but they're well trained. They deal with the conditions that they have to deal with. Like I indicated to the member across the way, I can't put a "no vacancy" sign on my remand centre. We deal with the prisoners the way they should be dealt with, with dignity, and I always worry about the safety of our corrections officers. But, again, they're very well trained.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last supplemental: considering that more and more offenders are now serving conditional sentences in the community, what is the department doing to ascertain that members of our community are safe and those prisoners are adequately supervised?

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, another good question, one that is dear to my heart and dear to the Justice minister. For the last three and a half years the Justice minister and I have been going to federal/provincial/territorial meetings and advocating how we feel about conditional sentencing in this province. I think Albertans would be appalled if they knew the number of conditional sentences that we're dealing with in this province.

I want to especially express my thanks to the probation officers in this province that deal with conditional sentencing. We closely monitor our offenders that are in the community serving conditional sentences. Mr. Speaker, one of the things I'm looking at and that I hope to announce after the budget, again, is some surveillance monitoring. I know that's something that the hon. member would like us to proceed with, and we will.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the leader of the third party.

School Closures

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Twenty-five years ago planners for the Calgary board of education recommended closing 31 schools. The plan, of course, wasn't acted upon, but former MLA Tom Sindlinger attributed the chaos of closures to the lack of a long-term plan to address the disposition of schools with declining enrolments. My questions are to the Minister of Learning. What direction is given to the Department of Infrastructure with respect to closing out programs or closing schools?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There is a very definitive process that has to occur any time a school or a school program is closed. If a junior high is closed, there has to be a consultation and subsequent decision made, all within the school year. If a high school is closed, the same thing. In elementary if three consecutive grades are closed, there has to be the process that takes place. There's a very strict consultation process that has to occur with the community. It has to be done within the school year and within certain time frames.

Mr. Speaker, there have been some criticisms of this process, and realistically I think it's valid criticism. I think that what it does is it does not necessarily allow some of the school boards to plan long term. One of the things that we're looking at very seriously is to enable the school boards to be able to put out long-term plans about what they are going to do with specific schools and specific locations as it applies to new schools and the closing down of older schools.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Massey: Thank you. Again to the same minister: why are we still saddled with a policy that links new school construction with school closures and results in neighbourhoods being pitted against neighbourhoods?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, there is nothing in the school closure policy that relates to new schools. What is in the new school policy, so to speak, is an occupancy clause, which states that there has to be so much occupancy, and I would invite the Minister of Infrastructure to comment on that. But there is no direct link.

Keeping that in mind, though, Mr. Speaker, I still feel and I'm a strong proponent that the whole idea of school closures and, subsequently, new schools should be done on a longer term plan so that it does not pit community against community, school against school for closure and/or new schools. I think that that will be a step in the right direction, and we are moving in that direction.

The Speaker: The hon. minister to supplement.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I think it's important to recognize that we do have to have some way of dealing with the excess space today within the province of Alberta. If you added up all of the excess space, there are probably somewhere around a hundred schools, if you could put it all in one location, that are excess to the system. So to talk about building new schools when you've got all the excess space makes it very, very difficult, and quite frankly to operate all of that space would not be a wise use of taxpayers' dollars.

With the process that the hon. Minister of Learning described, with being allowed to do planning over the longer term, that is exactly what we are very anxious to get into so that we don't pit communities. After all, this is more about students than it is communities.

The Speaker: The hon. leader?

The hon. leader of the third party.

Health Care Reform

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Premier seems to be taking a page out of the Pentagon playbook and engaging in his own shock-and-awe campaign against public health care. By threatening to pull out of the Canada Health Act and openly advocating health care user fees, the Premier is launching a shock-and-awe campaign against the wallets of Albertans. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why is it that the government's concept of sustainability boils down to nothing more than imposing deductibles and user fees, thereby shifting the burden of funding health care onto the patients and their families?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that this hon. member has heard a single thing that I've said since we commenced this session and we've been answering questions in question period. The core issue is this, and I've said it a number of times in this Assembly. The core issue of sustainability is that our health care system is growing at roughly twice the rate of the rate of growth of government revenues. That's not just in Alberta; that is across Canada. It's not just the province of Alberta that is talking about the issue of sustainability and its solutions. It is also the NDP Premiers of Saskatchewan and Manitoba. So if he would caucus with those Premiers, perhaps that would help him out in understanding what this problem is all about.

Mr. Speaker, we as a government are striving to protect the basic principles of the Canada Health Act. What we do is seek to ensure that Albertans will have the service when they need it, not only now but also in the future. In order to do so, we're prepared to look at all the options. We are not ideologues, as the hon. member appears to be. We are open minded to different options throughout the country, throughout the world, in an effort to ensure that when Albertans are sick, they'll get the service that they need when they need it, in a timely way, in the most effective and efficient way possible. We'll stop at no length to make sure that we find every possible solution to make our health care system work. Full stop.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can this very open-minded minister please explain how shifting costs of health care onto patients, their families, and employers does anything to make the health care system less costly or more sustainable?

Mr. Mar: We again want to focus on the core issue, and we'll look at all of the solutions. We're not proposing anything yet as a government – we're not proposing anything yet as a government, Mr. Speaker – but we are saying that we'll look at: how does the Swedish health care system work, how does the French system work, and how does the system work in New Zealand? What we'll find is that there are mixed delivery systems involving the private and public sectors. Some of them are successful; some of them are not. We need to evaluate each one. As I've said before, if we're prepared to recruit physicians from other parts of the world, we should be prepared to recruit the solutions that help achieve sustainability in our health care system.

Mr. Speaker, it's absolutely critical that we deal with this, because again the hon. member would be well advised to listen to the words of NDP Premiers and NDP governments. My colleagues Minister Nilson in Saskatchewan and Minister Chomiak in Manitoba recognize the core problem in health care, and they are also prepared to say that the system as we understand it today will not survive the decade, and if we don't do something, the principles of the Canada Health Act by the end of the decade will certainly be in jeopardy because we didn't do something. His solution is to just keep it the same. By default we'll end up with a two-tiered system under his proposal.

Dr. Pannu: My final supplementary to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: if his government is so concerned about curbing rising health care costs, will he reverse the proposed changes to Alberta Blue Cross, changes which he himself admits will drive up medical and dental benefit costs for hundreds of thousands of Albertans, and if not, why not? Keep an open mind on this.

The Speaker: Hon. minister, if that's part of the debate that we have on the Blue Cross bill before the Assembly, it has to be noted that it is only the Assembly that can deal with a bill. Now, I'm not sure, so I'll be guided by the minister's response in this question.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, it would be within the ambit of the bill, but I can assure you that the purpose of that bill being put forward is to ensure that there's a level playing field for private-sector insurance.

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, Albertans and Canadians understand the importance of our health care system. Lately there's been a lot of talk about delisting services and opting out of the Canada Health Act. This has many Albertans concerned. My question to the Minister of Health and Wellness: is Alberta opting out of the Canada Health Act?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the Premier has made his point very clear on this. What we need is more flexibility from the federal government on how the Canada Health Act is interpreted. Opting out is a very last resort. But this Premier, the Premier of Alberta, and all of the Premiers across Canada have agreed that the Canadian health care system is in urgent need of reform. In some provinces health care costs are approaching and, in fact, exceeding 50 per cent of their overall budgets, leaving less and less money for other important public priorities. Imagine what it would be like to spend more on one portfolio, in health care, than on everything else that this government does put together. That is not the direction that we want to go.

With respect to the principles of the Canada Health Act, Mr. Speaker, this government supports those principles under the Canada Health Act in spirit and, in fact, in law. This is the only province in Canada, that I'm aware of, that has enshrined the principles of the Canada Health Act in its own provincial legislation, the Health Care Protection Act.

Mr. Ouellette: My next question to the same minister: can the minister tell us if the government will be delisting services as a way to reform our health care system?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, I just want to reiterate that we are absolutely committed as a government to the spirit and intent of medicare, that no one will face personal hardship because of a health crisis that they might have. Basic health care is basic to public health care.

Mr. Speaker, over the last 40 years the province of Alberta has continually added to services that go well beyond that which is required under the Canada Health Act. As an example, Alberta is recognized as a leader in a number of these different areas, but keep in mind that roughly $2.3 billion that we spend out of our $7.3 billion budget is for non Canada Health Act services.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are working hard at improving the sustainability of our health care system to protect the principles of the Canada Health Act, but again our future public health care system must continue to provide services but do so in a way that is sustainable to the pocketbooks of Alberta taxpayers.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

Mr. Ouellette: Okay.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds I'll call upon the first of several members to participate, but in the interim might we revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: 2:30

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly representatives of various Alberta paramedic services, the Alberta Fire Fighters Association, and the Alberta Federation of Police Associations. These representatives are here because Alberta's front-line police officers, firefighters, paramedics, and other emergency personnel are routinely at risk of exposure to the blood and bodily fluids of people they come into contact with as first responders to emergency incidents. They are here today to observe the introduction and first reading of Bill 204, the Blood Samples Act, by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Among these dedicated professionals I'd like to acknowledge three persons who have experienced the trauma of blood exposure during the course of their duties. They are Constable Ray McKenzie of the Calgary Police Service and constables Mark Bloxham and Andrew Hoglund of the Edmonton Police Service. I'd ask them and all the other emergency service representatives to please rise and accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Silver Skate Festival

Mr. Vandermeer: Mr. Speaker, this weekend the Dutch Canadian Club once again combined its efforts with the Children's Ability Fund to host the 12th annual Silver Skate Festival at Hawrelak park in Edmonton. This popular event began as an idea of its originator, Mr. Rikke Dootjes, honorary consul for the Netherlands in Edmonton, who wanted to organize a recreational skating party on Alberta's Family Day weekend. It has grown into a wonderful weekend of recreational skating, friendly speed skating competitions, snowshoeing, little-sledge hockey, snow sculptures, a display of theatre on ice, and a showcase for young figure skaters in our province.

At the same time, the Silver Skate Festival raises money for the Children's Ability Fund, a nonprofit organization that provides power chairs, power walkers, lifts, ramps, voice synthesizers, hearing devices, and adaptive computer equipment for disabled individuals. This festival also showcases the importance of ice-skating to people of Dutch ancestry as portrayed in the famous storybook Hans Brinker or the Silver Skates.

On behalf of myself and the Minister of Community Development, who attended and launched this year's Silver Skate Festival, I extend congratulations and thanks to our Dutch community; to Carol Russ and the Children's Ability Fund; to all the event sponsors; to founding sponsor Sid Braaksma, owner of Northgate Industries; to the National Ice Theatre of Canada; and to all the participants and volunteers for a job very well done.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Peter Elzinga

Mr. Hutton: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the tremendous contribution to Alberta made by Peter Elzinga, who today announced his impending retirement from his current post as chief of staff in the office of the Premier.

All members of our caucus have benefited from Peter's wisdom, good advice, and sound counsel. He has provided valuable insights for how we as MLAs can serve our constituents and this Legislature. By word and by deed he has been an example for us on how to conduct oneself in public life. The benefits of his contributions have been felt by all of our caucus, whether we have served for three years or for 30, Mr. Speaker.

I know that the hon. Premier would be the first to agree that Peter has also made tremendous contributions to the work of the Premier's office and to helping the Premier manage his demanding schedule and responsibilities. Above all, for the Premier, for all the members of our caucus, and for all who had the opportunity to work with Peter, he has been a true, true friend. He has been there to help many of us through personal matters, times of doubt, and on occasions when a warm thought, a firm handshake, and a kind word were needed.

For all those reasons Peter will be missed by everyone who came in contact with him during his six productive years with the Premier's office. Of course, those six years as chief of staff were just one chapter in Peter's distinguished career. In three decades of public service, whether serving in Edmonton or in Ottawa, Peter has built a lifetime of contributions to his community and his province. I am certain, Mr. Speaker, that there are many more chapters to be written as Peter moves on to new horizons.

First, though, as many know, Peter plans to undergo a medical procedure to donate a kidney to a dear friend in need. That is a true friend. While that is a remarkable and telling example of the type of compassionate and giving person that Peter is, it is only one example. People who know Peter also know that it has been a lifetime of compassion and giving.

On behalf of my caucus colleagues and certainly on behalf of our Premier I extend many thanks to Peter Elzinga and best wishes to Pat, to him, and his family for good health and continued happiness. Thank you, my friend, and God bless.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Edmonton Public School Board

Mr. Bonner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to recognize the many accolades that Edmonton public schools is receiving from across Canada and the United States for its innovative education model. The Globe and Mail called Edmonton schools "a textbook case of success."

Edmonton public responded to a desire by communities to have local control over school resources in order to meet local needs by introducing school-based budgeting, which allows principals and parents to decide how resources would best be used in their own schools. As a result, its principals control 92 per cent of their budgets, which is far more than the average North American principal.

The success of Edmonton public school based budgeting is also recognized in a book called Making Schools Work, in which the author, UCLA management professor William G. Ouchi, argues that successful school districts give principals the freedom to control their own budgets.

In addition to school-based budgeting, Edmonton public has proven itself as responsive to a changing educational climate in other ways. Competition from private schools in the late 1970s encouraged the school division to decide that it wanted to offer school programs that were just as good as private institutions. This plan entailed allowing students to attend any school in a district and offering dynamic arts and athletic programs. The division also invited independent schools to join the school board.

Edmonton public schools is recognized across the continent as a leader in education, and school systems in Seattle, New York City, and British Columbia are now adopting the Edmonton model.

C.D. Howe Institute president and CEO Jack M. Mintz wrote in the Globe and Mail on February 6, "Canadians and their governments should be debating how best to spread Edmonton's success to other schools."

We have a wonderful example of innovation and success in education right here in Alberta. Educators across North America have recognized Edmonton public's efforts and are trying their best to emulate its success with high student achievement scores for kids from all socioeconomic backgrounds. I'd like to take this opportunity to congratulate Edmonton public schools on its commitment to excellence.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Public Health Care System

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While pretending to float suggestions about much-needed health care reform, the Premier has been laying the groundwork for a serious and ideologically based attack on public health care. While the per capita spending on health care has not increased significantly, all we hear from the Premier are doomsday scenarios. This doomsday rhetoric would be a little more believable if it weren't based on distorted statistics and if the government hadn't just presented a bill that will increase health care costs by forcing the Blue Cross to make payments in lieu of corporate taxes. This legislation, which contradicts any efforts at cost-cutting, can only be understood as a gift to their friends in the private insurance industry, a gift that will be paid for by the hundreds of thousands of Albertans who depend on Blue Cross for supplementary health care coverage at affordable cost.

There is no doubt the reform to the public health care system is necessary. Our Premier, however, has fallen out of step with the rest of the Premiers of this country, who are calling for the implementation of the Romanow report. Instead of taking seriously recommendations of the Romanow commission, the Premier has chosen to pursue wine sales and expensive hotel rooms. These suggestions would be laughable if they weren't so clearly part of a well-planned and ongoing attack on medicare. Rather than listen to the advice of groups such as the Friends of Medicare and the Romanow commission, the Premier has surrounded himself with health care hatchet-men and yes-men who will support his flights of fancy about health innovation. Clearly, Mr. Speaker, this government represents a clear and present threat to the future of public health care in Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Statements by the Speaker

Ladies & Gents of the Legislature 2004 Swimsuit Calendar

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move on to the next item in the Routine, let me just advise that the Legislative Assembly Office has been nominated for a 2003 United Way Spirit award for its Ladies & Gents of the Legislature 2004 Swimsuit Calendar. The awards of distinction will take place tonight.

Several members of this Assembly were models in this particular project, and as all the members will know, the calendar featured volunteers dressed in period bathing costumes dating from around the time the Legislature Building was opened. The Legislative Assembly by way of its United Way campaign this year raised $15,166.

Special thanks to Carole Knowles and Michelle Grove, who did all the work with respect to this project.

Calendar of Special Events

The Speaker: As this is the last day in February that we'll be sitting, I think it's also important that we recognize certain events as we leave February. As an example, the year 2004 is the International Year to Commemorate the Struggle against Slavery and Its Abolition, and it's also the International Year for Rice.

Now, February was Black History Month, as already commented on by a particular member. It's also Heart Month, Potato Month, and Junior Achievement Month.

February 1 to 7 was International Development Week. February 1 to 7 was White Cane Week; that has been commemorated. February 1 to 7 was Eating Disorder Awareness Week and also Burn Awareness Week. February 6 to 8 was Ski for Heart. February 9 to 16 was Take it to Heart Week. February 13 to 21 was Cops for Cancer Stationary Bike Ride and also the Heart Fund Campaign during that week. February 15 was National Flag of Canada Day. February 15 to 22 was Scout-Guide Week.

February 16 was Family Day in the province of Alberta and Heritage Day in other parts of Canada. February 16 to 22 was Heritage Week. February 16 to 22 was also Brotherhood/Sisterhood Week, and it also was Random Acts of Kindness Week. February 21 was International Mother Language Day. February 21 was Cops for Cancer Auction and Dance celebrations. February 22 was Thinking Day for Scouts Canada. February 22 to 28 was Freedom to Read Week, and it was also Antibiotic Awareness Week. All members will want to know that February 28 is the SPCA's International Spay Day, and February 28 to March 7 will be National Engineering Week. And the hon. Minister for Human Resources and Employment is having a birthday this month.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004

Mrs. Nelson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 14, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004. This being a money bill, Her Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Bill 203

Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004

Ms Graham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Calgary-West I am requesting leave to introduce a bill this afternoon, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, this bill amends the Domestic Relations Act and the Family Law Act to provide that a written agreement between spouses or common-law partners not to divide their unadjusted pensionable earnings under the Canada Pension Plan Act will be enforceable.

[Motion carried; Bill 203 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton–Castle Downs.

Bill 204
Blood Samples Act

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill 204, the Blood Samples Act.

The goal of Bill 204, Mr. Speaker, is to protect police officers, firefighters, correctional officers, front-line emergency workers, good Samaritans, and health care workers who in the course of their work exchange bodily fluids with someone who may have a communicable disease.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would create a process to allow a qualified medical practitioner to take a mandatory blood sample from someone who refuses to comply voluntarily. The blood sample may only be used for the purpose of the act and cannot be used in a criminal proceeding. The bill will also include provisions protecting the privacy of the test subject.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 204 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton–Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your permission I would like to table five copies of an Alberta Finance document which shows that health care spending has actually dropped as a percentage of Alberta GDP since the early '90s.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Dunford: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to table Motion for Return 14, the financial audit of the Alberta Career Computer Center Inc. Last spring Alberta Human Resources and Employment was requested to submit a copy of the financial audit of the Alberta Career Computer Center Inc., and today I'm pleased to table eight copies of those portions of the report which was prepared in early 2003 by Doug Courts, chartered accountant, Jervis Afanasiff & Redinger, for HRE as deemed subject to disclosure under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton–Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. First is the appropriate number of copies of a letter I referred to in question period from Kathy Briant, whose 80-year-old mother waited eight hours in the emergency room in the Foothills without seeing a doctor and had to leave.

The second is the appropriate number of copies of an e-mail from Moneca Blackwell, who was also at the emergency room at the Foothills and who was with a friend acutely ill who ended up lying on the floor because there were no gurneys or beds available.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton–Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling this afternoon. It's a letter that I received from the hon. Minister of Energy on July 21, 2003, and it's in regard to the Alberta royalty tax credit.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton–Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today, both on the Learning Commission. The first is from Dan Friedt, who comments that he's concerned about recommendation 78 of the Alberta Learning Commission to establish a new council of education executives. He believes that removing administrators from active membership will cause great problems and does not approve of supporting it.

2:50

The second letter is from a constituent, Delia McCrae, who also is reacting to recommendation 78 from the Learning Commission, believing it disadvantages everyone; also concerned about recommendation 75, that eliminating the board of reference puts "teachers in a . . . vulnerable position"; and recommendation 81, noting that "working conditions are of paramount importance" and teachers should be involved in discussions on that.

Thank you very much.

Speaker's Ruling
Tablings

The Speaker: Hon. members, let me just make a comment with respect to the tabling of e-mails again. How does an hon. member know that what might be in an e-mail or even a letter to them is true? How does one know that? When an hon. member stands up in this House and quotes either something from a letter that they have received or has provided an editorial comment with respect to it, how does that hon. member know that what he or she is saying is the truth? There's a code in this House that is extremely important. When an hon. member says something in this House, this hon. member must know for sure. I provide that as a caution.

I made comments last year about the tablings and the reports and how this is dealt with in all other jurisdictions, virtually, in the Commonwealth, that the only documents that are tabled are official reports required by statutes essentially to do it. We've allowed a great latitude in this Assembly. I want to provide again caution, because there will be a point in time when an hon. member will be challenged under a point of privilege by another hon. member, and that will have very serious repercussions.

Mr. Mason: May I ask a question as a point of clarification?

The Speaker: Absolutely. Under Standing Orders that's permitted.

Mr. Mason: Yes. I wonder about tabling documents which are referred to in the asking of questions. Is that something that's appropriate?

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, we've talked about that before, and then the three House leaders have had discussions with respect to this matter in the past. At one point in time there was a section in the Routine that provided for tablings of returns and reports prior to the question period. Then, as a result of the consultation among the three House leaders, the determination was that the Routine should be changed and that Tabling Returns and Reports should come after that. So there's always a subjective point during, particularly, the question period when an hon. member refers to a document. At times in the past I've said: "Look; well, hon. member, okay. If it's really important at that point in time, table it. Go ahead and do it." But the preferred approach is to wait until this section in the Routine called Tabling Returns and Reports comes about.

There's a dilemma, though, with that. If an hon. member refers to a document that hasn't been tabled, there could be almost an hour from the time, one hour ago in the question period, when a document has been referred to, and it may be of particular impact or importance to another member or minister, and it won't be one hour until that particular document is circulated to all members. So, in essence, you've got a kind of a vacuum of knowledge. If a particular hon. member would then say, "Well, okay; this is such an important issue that I want to deal with it," but we prohibit that document from being provided to that hon. member, I think there is perhaps a disservice to the performance of the House.

The preferred mechanism, of course, would be that if an hon. member were to know that he or she is going to refer to a document in the question period, as a courtesy provide a copy of that to the person that they may be directing the question to prior to the question period. Today we had a different situation. We had one where an hon. member referring to a question would not have known what the question would be but had in his possession a certain document and during the response said that he would table the document.

I've given you all the whole expanse of the options. The preferred one: if an hon. member is to raise a question, out of courtesy provide a copy of that particular document to the person that he chooses to raise a question. If a person responding to a question has a document they want to table during the question period, the preferred mechanism is to await Tabling Returns and Reports, although there would be some exceptions to that.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk on behalf of the hon. Mr. Cardinal, Minister of Sustainable Resource Development: the Surface Rights Board and Land Compensation Board annual report, 2003.

head: Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Subject to Standing Order 7(5) I would ask the Government House Leader to please share projected government business for the week of March 1 to 4, 2004. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, subject to progress today I would expect that on Monday, March 1, at 9 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders for second reading bills 6 and 13 and in committee bills 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, and 9. Bill 6 is the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 13, Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004; and in committee Bill 2, Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act; Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act; Bill 3, Architects Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 4, Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 7, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 8, Blue Cross Statutes Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 9, Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Amendment Act, 2004; and as per the Order Paper.

On Tuesday afternoon, March 2, under Government Bills and Orders for second reading Bill 12, the Financial Administration Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004; Bill 14, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004. In committee bills 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, and 9 and in third reading bills 2, 5, and 11 and as per the Order Paper. At 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders the same list in committee: bills 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, and 9, and third reading of bills 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, and 9 and as per the Order Paper.

It's anticipated that a notice should go on the Order Paper this afternoon or Monday that there will be three additional bills at least available to the House: the Fiscal Responsibility Amendment Act, 2004; the Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2004; and the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2004. In the event that they are placed on notice and introduced for first reading on Monday or Tuesday, then we might anticipate second reading of those bills on Wednesday in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders together with committee on bills 12, 13, and 14 and third readings on bills 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 11 and as per the Order Paper. In the evening at 8 under Government Bills and Orders the same bills and as per the Order Paper.

Thursday afternoon as per the Order Paper.

Bill 6

Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004

[Adjourned debate February 25: Mr. Hancock]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to bring forward comments on Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004. I just had a couple of questions on this act. There's not a lot in it here, and I wanted to go back and read the remarks from the mover of the bill. He's now spoken in two parts: when he first introduced the bill and then I think again yesterday. I haven't read his comments from yesterday, so I'm sorry if I repeat questions that you have already answered.

The bill is saying that it will assist parents to obtain child support agreements or court orders. My question is: would the parents or one of the parents have to be on an assistance program through the government like AISH or supports for independence in order to be eligible to have the government assist them to seek and obtain child support agreements or court orders? What's happened in the past is that the maintenance enforcement staff were available to go to court to pursue only subrogated amounts – in other words, amounts that had accrued or were accruing while the individual that had the order was in fact receiving government benefits – because the government viewed that as money that they were eligible to recover. If they were providing supports to a single parent and that single parent was eligible to receive maintenance payments, then the government felt that those maintenance payments should in fact be coming directly to the government to pay them back for having doled out money through the assistance program. That's not clear from what I'm reading in the news release and what I heard the member say when he introduced the bill. As I say, I don't know if he followed up again with it yesterday. So that was one of the questions that I had around this bill.

The first section of it is really around a whole section, changing it from the minister's direction to "the Director, which appears to be just a straight housekeeping change, which is fine, changes a few comments around "eligibility or continuing eligibility for, or the amount or value of." It's just a minor wording change there.

The larger piece is around getting information from people who may know where a creditor parent, the noncustodial parent, could be, where their location is, one presumes so that papers could then be served to seek the money from them. So this is to protect individuals who may be able to give that information like a landlord or a neighbour or a friend or an employer and, further, that the information about who gave them the information would not then be released to anyone else. That makes a certain amount of sense. They're protecting their source, in other words.

Now, I did hear the sponsoring Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs talk about the Alberta Works program that was mentioned in the throne speech when he first commenced his comments on second reading of this bill, and I'm not sure why he was looking to do that because I don't particularly see any reference to that in this bill. So is he foreshadowing something to come, or is he pulling out something in this bill that I have not seen?

The whole issue of pursuing noncustodial parents for maintenance agreements or support agreements is a difficult one, and we've all commented in this House about how difficult it is for our constituency office staff and, indeed, for all of the elected members to deal with this issue. For me it always comes back to: this is money that's ordered by the court for the children. So all other arguments that go on between the custodial and noncustodial parents really should not come into play here. If we're talking about court-ordered payments for children, then that's the focus that we have to keep on this. The money is for the maintenance of those kids so that they have a reasonable place to live, their electricity bill, however high, is paid, they have clothing, and, further, they can participate fully in their society, their school fees can be paid, they can participate in school activities and extracurricular activities like the rest of the kids that are around them. They shouldn't be in a worse position.

We have court orders set up to facilitate this, so when we have someone who decides not to pay for their children, we should pursue them with great vigour. We should be fair, and that's not to say that we should be taking money that isn't due, but if there's a court order that says X amount of money is to be paid for the maintenance of this child, I look to the government to pursue this with as much vigour as they can.

So this act appears to be facilitating that in that they are seeking funds on behalf of the children. My concern here is: are we just looking for money that would be in fact coming back to the government, or are they willing to pursue this on behalf of court orders where the monies would not necessarily be subrogated or in fact on behalf of parents who are not involved in a benefit program that's flowing from the government at all?

At this point I can't see any other reason for objecting in principle in second reading to this act, but I've learned to be very cautious in giving my support to bills put forward by the government until I get all the answers to my questions and I'm reassured that there's nothing unanticipated here. So I look forward to the sponsoring member being able to answer my questions either here in the House or, certainly, by note if he wishes to do that.

Thank you for the opportunity to raise the issues in second reading.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in for five minutes should hon. members wish to participate in questions or comments.

There being none, the chair would recognize the next speaker who would like to participate, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to make a few comments on this bill. Any time we do anything with maintenance enforcement, it's of particular concern to my constituency and a number of the people who regularly have to access our constituency services in order to deal with issues around the maintenance enforcement program.

At first glance it looks like this is an additional improvement to this particular piece of legislation. The problem of noncustodial parents skipping out on their payments and then taking a variety of evasive actions to be able to not pay what they've been demanded to pay by the courts is a real common problem. They leave the country; they leave the province; they change their names; they work for cash; they put all of their assets into a new partner's name. They do all kinds of things. They have all of their assets in their company and pay themselves out a bare minimum wage so that they can have their payments reduced over time. They go in arrears for years and years or months and months and then go back to court and get those arrears reduced in amount. So we've seen every conceivable kind of evasive action taken by noncustodial parents in the past on support payments.

So this looks like it's a step in the right direction in terms of giving anonymity to people who are disclosing information about the whereabouts of a person who can't be found. That's a good start, but it's just a tip of the iceberg on where we need to go on this issue, Mr. Speaker. Everyone in this country needs to value children, and we need to ensure that the support is in place for them to be able to be taken care of to the best ability of both parents, whether they're custodial or not, whether they're married or not. So I strongly encourage this government to take action on an ongoing basis to try to solve this outstanding problem that has been a tremendous problem over the course of my career in this Legislature.

So I will be supporting this bill, but I'm looking forward to seeing much more aggressive action than just this. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The chair is prepared to recognize additional speakers.

[Motion carried; Bill 6 read a second time]

3:10

Bill 13

Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004.

Mr. Speaker, the last major review of this legislation occurred back in 1980. We are amending the legislation by updating the language and streamlining the legislation to meet the changes that have occurred out in the field – for instance, there'll be some wording changes to be consistent with the Public Lands Act – and also reducing overlap in the legislation by deleting parts of the act that are already covered under other legislation.

We have proposed adjustments that reflect organizational and operational changes that have occurred in the department since the last review. This bill also proposes to transfer the authority to develop regulations governing livestock grazing and other related activities from the Lieutenant Governor in Council to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. This adjustment will allow the department to update the legislation in a more timely manner. As you are aware, noxious weeds and restricted weeds are a problem that can have a significant impact on the environment and other land users. Changes to this legislation will enable the department to address the need for control and destruction of restricted and noxious weeds through regulations.

Mr. Speaker, other changes to this act deal with the amount that can be assessed for offences and adds new provisions for administrative penalties. One change is an increase in the maximum amount that can be assessed for offences under the act. The fee being charged to do with an offence under this act has been set at $5,000 per day. This is consistent with assessments for offences under other acts such as the Public Lands Act. The change will also allow for better enforcement of the act and provide for a better deterrent.

Within that change we're also proposing that the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development have the authority to assess administrative penalties for minor violations of the act and regulations. A maximum of $5,000 per day will be set for this purpose under the act. This change is being proposed to ensure compliance and speed up processing of minor violations. These changes will also ensure uniformity when dealing with contraventions and a deterrent, ensuring consistency with other legislation such as the Public Lands Act.

So as you can see, Mr. Speaker, these amendments will update the legislation, making it more relevant to what's happening out in the field in Alberta today, and I hope everyone supports these proposed changes.

With that, I would move adjournment of debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

The Chair: Good afternoon. I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 2

Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

The Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise on this occasion to make some additional comments during the committee stage of debate on Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. I guess that in particular I would begin my comments by responding to some of the comments that were made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie during the debate on February 24 on page 131. She made some very good points, and there were a couple that I thought perhaps needed correction and/or clarification, from my point of view.

I'll begin with the statement she made that references the management plan for the Whaleback area in general. I'm sure she probably meant to say "draft management plan" when she was quoting, but she didn't, so people looking at this are calling me and saying: "There is already a management plan put in place? Is that what you've already done?" I've said to them: "No. We haven't in fact put the management plan in place yet. What we have done is arrived at a draft management plan that has gone out for public input." People had until I think January 31 of this year to in fact put forward their comments. So I'm taking it, hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, that that's what you had intended to say, because it just got left out inadvertently here.

The second point I wanted to make is with respect to the comment she made regarding access points in other possible locations. Mr. Chairman, the Whaleback area is not only unique, as you yourself know very, very well, but it is also quite mountainous in many parts. In other parts, of course, it's got that beautiful, lush vegetation and grassland and wild-land appearance. But in terms of access points into the Bob Creek wild-land, which in this case is the western portion of the Whaleback ridge, there really were no other feasible alternative access points that could easily be used to get into the Bob Creek wild-land.

The reason that is important to know is because the Bob Creek wild-land is an area where we do allow on already designated trails certain types of activities to occur. For example, off-highway vehicles would be allowed in that classification of a wild-land, but with no available or designated access points to get into the Bob Creek wild-land, we occasionally see people trying to get into the wild-land through all kinds of other self-made roads, if you like.

In this particular case what we have are two existing trails that have been in that area for many, many decades used primarily by the farmers and ranchers. Many of those that live there have grazing permits or grazing leases in either the Bob Creek wild-land or in the Black Creek heritage rangeland. So as a result of having those two existing trails there already, what this bill will do is restrict the public's access into the Bob Creek wild-land to those two pre-existing trails only. That, Mr. Chairman, is a good thing because it will take away a lot of the random driving that is occurring right now in other places surrounding Bob Creek wild-land, and that will help protect the area even more.

I want to emphasize again that we're talking about a trail here that emanates from Bob Creek staging area, which already exists, and another one which goes up through to the Camp Creek staging area, which we are creating. Now, a staging area is simply a place where people can gather and get ready to go out and do whatever their business is, hunting or fishing or a limited amount of backcountry camping, that kind of thing. That's what a staging area more or less is all about.

Those two trails together comprise 3.5 kilometres, and in fact I think one of them is approximately eight feet wide, and the other one is probably about 10 feet wide. They're more like ruts in the road that have been there for many, many years, so we're not fancying things up here and allowing total random access into the heritage rangeland. In fact, we are restricting it to the general public through those two trails only. So that's very important to note.

Now, to come back to the point that I started with here, which is the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie's second point, "They virtually eliminated any other possible access points." Well, we didn't eliminate any access points, hon. member. As you probably know, there is a small access point off White Creek, which is way up on the west and toward the north end. Unfortunately, that is a difficult one to get to if you are a farmer or a rancher living down in the southeast corner. Then there is another small access point possible up in the north-northeast quadrant, but that one is little known and little used and extremely difficult to get to because you'd have to go down the riverbed or something close to that to in fact access it. So it isn't that we eliminated any access points; it's that we didn't create any others. But we did eliminate the possibility of using other ones or designating other ones, and that's an important point to remember.

Now, the other point here that came up during the discussion was the hon. member saying: "They need to find a different solution to this problem. This is not the right way to go about this." In fact, I need to inform the House, Mr. Chairman, that this is the best way to go about it under the circumstances. I've indicated before that we have very, very unique circumstances in this case, and I just want to refresh members' memories on this.

The uniqueness of it is a couple of things. First of all, in order for us to have been able to accomplish the protected area designation back in 1999, we needed to work with the local stakeholders and, in particular, with the ranchers and farmers whose livelihood depends on access into both the Black Creek heritage rangeland and into what is now called the Bob Creed wild-land. Their livelihood depends on it, and they agreed with the designation of a special place in both these cases provided that the government of Alberta didn't shut off their access to either of the two areas, because, as I mentioned before, they rely on it for access to their grazing and permit leaseholds, whichever might be the case. They also rely on it for hunting and for fishing purposes, which is a food source that is very important to them and to others.

So that is one uniqueness of why we have to go about doing this very carefully and cautiously, and it took quite some time to get to this compromise arrangement, if you like. In fact, it is the only way that we could see going about the business that we needed to go about while also respecting the rights of access, particularly for the farmers and ranchers living in that area.

Of course, there are many recreationalists who like to hunt and fish as well, so we wanted to ensure that we also allowed them some access into the Bob Creek wild-land, where those two activities are allowed, but we didn't want to just open it up randomly. So we designated two special existing trails for that very purpose, and I can assure you that with additional attention and with good signage and with proper monitoring, which we fully intend to do, we're hoping to not only preserve that very pristine, natural area the way it is, but we will also further enhance it.

Just a couple of other quick points here, Mr. Chair. There is a comment here: "Protective legislation is originally brought into place as more than a convenience." The quote goes on: "It's brought in for specific reasons, which the government clearly outlined at the time, and they shouldn't be overruled whenever it's the most convenient way to allow access." I would hope that the hon. member would reconsider that comment. We are providing an exception – that is correct; that is exactly what this bill does – but it will be restricted to the two trails indicated, and it will be restricted to this particular heritage rangeland, the Black Creek heritage rangeland, which, as members of the House know, is the first officially designated heritage rangeland in this new class that came into being formally last year.

So it's not so much a question of overruling it as it is a question of trying to do what's right and to do what common sense would dictate we should do to take into consideration the important points raised by the local area persons, who have proven over decades themselves and through their families over many generations that they, in fact, are among the best stewards you could ever possibly hope to have. Our farmers and our ranchers depend on the land. They know how to care for it and how to look after it.

This has been arrived at after some meetings and phone calls and letters and more meetings and so on, in particular with the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, who is the MLA for the area, myself, the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, the Member for Athabasca-Wabasca, the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, and many local area ranchers. We had a meeting right in Cowley, in their library as it were, and arrived at what needed to be done.

I think I have a minute or two left. I'll just let someone else take the floor in a minute.

On the comment here about significant policing needing to be put in place, well, it's impossible, as everyone knows, to put police people in place on a 24-hour basis, but I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that with the signage and the postings that I indicated earlier and with the provisions for penalties that will be adopted through the regulations that will flow out from this particular act once it comes into law, we will do everything we can to ensure that that area is not only protected but that it is better protected than is currently the case under the circumstances before us. Again, we will be relying a lot, also, on the local area people to help us with some of that monitoring. So I want to give that assurance to the member and to the House.

I'll come back, perhaps, and comment a little further. I believe that probably someone from across the way has a few comments to make. If there are any questions, I'd be happy to address them.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I was listening with great interest to the hon. Minister of Community Development in regard to Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. I have a few questions at this time, and perhaps in committee the hon. minister would be kind enough to respond to my questions.

Certainly, we know that less than 9 per cent of provincial Crown land is set aside for nonmotorized access, and we see that we are opening this up in a fashion with off-highway vehicles. Now, my first question – and I believe I already know the answer to this, but I'm going to get it on the record. Snowmobiles are certainly included in that definition of off-highway vehicles. Correct?

Mr. Zwodzesky: The definitions are in the Traffic Safety Act.

Mr. MacDonald: The definitions are in the Traffic Safety Act? Perhaps when I cede the floor to the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, I'll have a look at that act.

How much random driving is going on there now? How has that been monitored, or how has that been calculated? The minister referenced that in his comments, and I would just like to know if there's going to be an increase in the access from these random rides, if you could call them that.

3:30

My next question, Mr. Chairman, is: how many hectares of land are open for grazing leases in this Black Creek heritage rangeland? Is it all for grazing? What percentage of this land is set aside for grazing leases?

If this bill were to become law, could commercial enterprises or tourist enterprises organize rides in this area? Could they use this? Is there a licensing system in place, or could anyone just set up a commercial operation similar to what we do with horses on trail rides? Could their be quad rides, or could there be possibly in winter snowmobile rides through these areas? If this is true, how would the adjacent landowners feel about that?

Those are my questions at this time, Mr. Chairman, and I would like to express my gratitude for the opportunity to ask them. Thank you.

The Chair: Hon. minister, I wondered if you wanted to take a few questions from different people and then answer two or three people at one time. I have I think four on my list right now. So the next speaker is the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by Edmonton-Highlands, followed by Airdrie-Rocky View.

Mr. Marz: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to rise and speak on this particular bill. As the minister responsible knows, the development of trails is a very sensitive issue in many areas of the province, especially with adjacent landowners, and my constituency has been, I guess, a bit of a flashpoint for some of these. I've received correspondence from concerned adjacent landowners throughout the province, and I continue to do that. I continue to bring those issues forward, and perhaps that's why I continue to get them.

But I didn't get any correspondence yet at all on this particular bill, and in listening to the comments of hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, who's the MLA for the area, I assumed that there was not a lot of opposition, if any, to this particular thing and that there was an adequate amount of consultation done. Looking at the background of the news releases that were sent out, it would indicate that there was quite a bit of consultation done with stakeholders and particularly the municipal district of Ranchland. I think it's probably the right approach to try to protect a greater area by restricting this type of use to a confined area and making sure that that use is done in a proper and responsible way.

One of the concerns I have – looking at the map that was put out in the news release, there is an area that goes on nonpublic land through the municipal district of Ranchland, and I know that the minister has repeatedly stated that no trails would be developed in the province without approval of the municipalities that they're located in. It was my understanding that that approval would be in the form of a development permit that would be applied for through the municipality, and then they would approve it through that process, and that would be the final say, yes or no, whether or not that trail developed.

So my question to the minister is: has that process taken place through a development permit process for that area that goes through the municipal district of Ranchland? If it hasn't, perhaps he could explain what the difference would be in this particular trail as opposed to other trails that may develop in the province under Alberta Trailnet or Trans Canada Trail.

So those are basically my concerns and questions, and I'd be happy to hear the answers to those. Thank you.

The Chair: Okay. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I want to take this opportunity to express my tremendous appreciation of these natural areas that have been preserved. I had the opportunity last summer to visit the Whaleback area. It is absolutely one of the most beautiful and wonderful parts of this province, and we should spare no effort to ensure that it is not despoiled through development or overuse or any other means. So I have a lot of concern about the direction here. I listened very carefully to the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod when he spoke about this when the bill was introduced at second reading.

I guess that my questions to the minister are similar to my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar's. Having allowed these two trails to accommodate vehicles, how will the government keep those vehicles on the trails? We certainly have heard from wildlife officers from the provincial government, and they can't even afford the gas, in some cases, Mr. Chairman, to do their job, so deeply has the government cut this area. So the real question is: in practicality, how do you keep the vehicles on the trail? If we accept for the moment the minister's assertion and the member's assertion that it's okay as long as the vehicles stick to the trails, then how do we keep them there?

The second question is: how do we ensure that there's not a significant increase of people using the trails for recreational purposes to go four-wheeling as opposed to engaging in traditional economic activities that take place on these lands? How will the government monitor that? How will the government make sure that the use doesn't increase beyond what it is now or beyond a reasonable limit on its use?

So, Mr. Chairman, those are the primary questions. The real thing as far as I'm concerned is not what the government says it intends. I'm sure that the government, you know, is sincere in its desire to do this, but if they don't place the resources in place, if they don't plan, if they don't monitor, and if they don't have the will to take action if damage to this area occurs because of increased use, then it's all for naught. I would really like some clear and concrete answers about how the government plans to enforce the intentions that they have set out in bringing this act forward.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View, and then maybe we'll hear from the minister and get others that may wish to speak.

Ms Haley: I'll be very brief. Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to ask a couple of small questions and perhaps just make a comment on this bill.

First off, I want to say right up front that I truly appreciate the fact that the ministers that were involved in this – and I know that there were at least four of you that went down to my colleague's constituency. These same people were calling me asking for assistance on this issue, and the fact that we were able to sit down with them and negotiate to come up with an arrangement that is not just suitable to the province of Alberta as a whole under the heritage rangeland act but also to deal with people who actually have to live there, earn a living there, and make this work – I wanted to thank you and congratulate you on that, Minister, but I also wanted to ask if maybe when you do get up to answer questions you might explain what the impact on other rangelands in our province might be?

I also wanted to just mention that unlike some of the hon. members in this Chamber I'm one of those people that is a little bit concerned about how much land we are truly designating. I believe we're up to 12 per cent of our province now, and I hope that we're being very careful about what we are designating because people in Alberta also want to use and see and visit some of these areas as well. I just want to caution the minister on this side. On the protection side I totally concur with the concept of preserving, just as long as people can still access.

Thank you, Minister, for all the work you've done on this, and I look forward to your response.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Chairman, thank you very much. Just in response to some of the questions asked – and if I don't get to all the answers because I couldn't write fast enough, then we'll provide them later in writing to the members.

[Mr. Klapstein in the chair]

The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was asking about snowmobiles, and are they allowed or not allowed and so on. I'm talking now for recreational purposes. Snowmobiles are not allowed in a heritage rangeland, but under certain circumstances they might be allowed in a wild-land park area.

The definition that he's looking for is in the Traffic Safety Act, and I just don't have a copy of it right here. As I recall from when I did read through that definition, it's quite lengthy, and it includes, typically, four-wheel drive vehicles, trikes, mountain bikes, some all-terrain vehicles, and I think there was a reference to snow vehicle, but I'm not sure if in that particular instance it applies to a snowmobile because there are other types of snow vehicles. It could be that that snow vehicle does include a snowmobile in this case, but you would have to look at the Traffic Safety Act. If I had a copy of it here right now, I'd be able to answer that question more accurately.

The other question he asked was with respect to random traffic through the area and will it be increased or not. I believe the Member for Edmonton-Highlands asked the same question. No, I'm hoping that we won't see an increase. Perhaps, on the other hand, we will see an increase, but it will be restricted to those two areas, the two trails that are already in existence. So we'll be controlling the traffic better. If maybe that's the comfort he's looking for, then that's what he might take away from this answer.

As for the number of hectares that are open for grazing in the Bob Creek wild-land and/or in the Black Creek heritage rangeland, I'm sorry; I do not have that specific number of hectares or acres handy here, but we'll provide it to him in writing later.

Then he asked a question to do with tourism operations being set up, and that certainly is not the intention of the act. It's not something that we're looking at allowing to happen. But I have to say that where the Black Creek heritage rangeland boundary meets the Bob Creek wild-land boundary, where those two boundaries come together, there will be two staging areas, which are typically small but nonetheless larger areas than the trail, where groups can gather for purposes of getting organized about their particular activity. But it is not our intention to turn that into a commercial venture.

I do need to comment, however, that if there are existing commercial ventures, which is where you might say these grazing permits come into being, then those are being allowed to continue in the heritage rangeland and also in the Bob Creek wild-land. Other commercial endeavours at this stage are not contemplated. In fact, no one has even asked about the possibility of them occurring. So if there's more on that, I'm sure the member will let me know.

The Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills asked about trails in relation to the Recreation Corridors Legislative Review, which the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul along with the Member for West Yellowhead and the Member for Calgary-Currie have undertaken over the last while. They created a report, sent it in to me, and I sent it back out to the public for review. In that RCLR report it is very clear that insofar as trails that are or wish to be connected or hooked in with the Alberta Trailnet system or with the Trans Canada Trail system, those kinds of trails would need specific support first from whichever municipality they are in, provided that the municipality, of course, has jurisdiction over the land in question. Nonetheless, I have said very clearly that the issue of municipalities having the first right of approval is the first step with regard to the recreation corridors report that I've just referenced.

The trails that we are talking about here today under Bill 2 are a different set of trails or a different type of trail if you like. These are already-existing trails that have been there for a very long time. We're simply saying that the usage of those trails will be allowed to continue, but traffic on them is being curtailed somewhat, limited if you like, so as to not deviate off the trails, and they're only being used to access other trails in the Bob Creek wild-land. So we're really talking about two separate issues.

In specific response to his question about Ranchland county, in fact, I put it into the news release that I issued on February 18, because we are very grateful to the municipal district of Ranchland for all the help, assistance, advice, and suggestions that they gave. I've met with them a couple of times at least, as well as with local stakeholders, to finalize the requirements that we're needing for our long-term management planning process. So the local municipality or county has in fact been involved.

The Member for Edmonton-Highlands was asking about how the government will keep off-highway vehicles off the trails or words to that effect. I think I answered that when I first spoke at the beginning of the afternoon on this bill. We will do everything we can with very visible signage. We'll do everything we can by reinforcing the bill and what the signs stand for, by ensuring that there are adequate penalties in place for lawbreakers. We will definitely be monitoring and patrolling that area, albeit we won't be able to do it 24 hours a day, but we will be stepping up our monitoring. We'll also be working with the local stakeholders, the farmers and ranchers in that area, as I indicated. I think he asked some additional questions, and I'll have to review Hansard to see what they were.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View had asked about the impact of this legislation on other heritage rangelands. It's a very good question because the Black Creek heritage rangeland is our first heritage rangeland. I anticipate that there will be at least six others across the province, one of them, in fact, just east of Edmonton here near Beaverhill or close to there, another one east of Chauvin, another one in the Drumheller area, another one closer to the Saskatchewan border on the east side, and I think there's another one just toward the Coutts/Montana border in the deep south.

But this particular bill today is specific to the Black Creek heritage rangeland only. There are two existing trails, and we're saying: let's limit the usage to those two trails only so that people will have the access that they require into the Bob Creek wild-land. So this particular legislation will not impact the other heritage rangelands, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Well, this has been a very interesting discussion. I've tried to read the previous comments in Hansard. I've listened to the minister's responses today, and I think what I might do is just speak a little bit more generically around the issues being raised here.

If we take a step back, there was the special places project, which was to identify and designate certain special kinds of environment and landscape in Alberta and protect it so that it continued to exist for future generations. At the time there was a great deal of, in some places, amusement that ranged to flat-out derision, I think, from some sectors because there seemed to be all kinds of exceptions that were built into this. You know, we would protect this area, but in some places I think there was even oil and gas exploration that was allowed to go on in it, so there was some question about how serious people actually were about the protection of this.

Nonetheless, the project went through, we got the designated spaces, and in some cases I think they're quite vigorously protected. I know that my colleague from Edmonton-Ellerslie was actually reading out a quote about what was and was not allowed to happen in a certain area, a management plan that said "heritage appreciation and outdoor recreational goals may be met . . . but only to the extent that their attainment does not conflict with or impinge on the preservation goal." So that was a very strong statement.

Okay; we've got these special places. They're not supposed to have things go on in them that is going to affect or ruin the reasons for them being a special place, so in a lot of cases off-highway vehicles are restricted from going in there. Now we have a situation where in order to get access to one particular recreational area, one of these protected areas is going to have to be used as the right-of-way, in effect, to get through there.

I'm a snowmobiler, and my concern when I hear the issues being raised here is: well, if we actually had some good trails that were, you know, easily accessible, that had good staging areas, that had the kind of time and thought and resources put into them that we see in places like British Columbia, for example, or Montana and Wyoming—Yellowstone park is another one I'm thinking of—where they really put a lot of effort into making the trails well marked and groomed and they're maintained, people want to go there, and they're happy to spend their money.

I've said before that snowmobiling is not a poor person's activity. I mean, for these machines I think the low end now starts at about $7,500, and you go up from there. So it's not cheap to get into this business. By the time you get the suit and the boots and the helmet and the electric face shield which warms up and doesn't frost over, you've laid down a lot of cash. Then you're going to stay in a hotel; you're going to buy gas; you're going to buy food. You know, there's money to be had here. This is a tourism growth industry; let's put it that way.

So I think people in Alberta, those that are snowmobilers, are of course always looking for a place to ride, and they would prefer, frankly, to ride in a place that had a staging area, that had marked trails, that had groomed trails. It's a much more pleasant experience than trying to crash your way through the bush getting hung up on, you know, dead logs and stuff and ripping your track to shreds. That's not fun, and frankly it's expensive. Tracks are very expensive to repair. So we would rather be in a place that accommodated us and was inviting to our activities.

The problem is this province has not really invested in that. There are a couple of areas just outside of Calgary, and they never really developed far enough to be a full-day's activity. You know, there are—I'm casting back in my memory here—Sibbald Creek and a couple of other ones. They were, like, five k loops or something, and, I mean, sorry, but you can do that in 20 minutes. So it wasn't exactly a full-day's activity. I know that Whitecourt has worked hard to develop their trail system. They've got some warm-up shacks. They do have marked trails. I don't know if there's an attempt to groom them. I haven't been out there in a long time. Although they're now talking about putting up the world's largest snowmobile as a monument somehow, so they must feel that it's a worthwhile endeavour in that area.

So what I'm trying to say here is that snowmobilers want to go to a place where they're welcome. They don't particularly want to be in areas that they're not wanted in. If we were provided with other places to go, then we wouldn't need to be going into ecologically sensitive areas like this.

There are consequences to choices that you make. Had the government decided to make the kind of investment in off-highway vehicle recreation in the past years, we perhaps would not be facing what we're facing now. I realize that even inside of the off-highway vehicle definition, there's greater and lesser impact upon the environment by the various vehicles that are captured there. I know that some are frankly more damaging to the environment than others, and there may need to be restrictions even inside of that subclass to deal with that.

Those places I have been that went through ecologically sensitive areas—and I'm thinking of Yellowstone park—where the trails pass through an area where they did not want the machines getting off of the path were literally policed. I'm thinking of one area just as you were coming into the little town, and there was a police officer that used to sit out there on a machine at the peak times of day. It was made very clear: you were not to go off the trail. There was signage, there were fences, and there was a police officer there. That's what they did to underline, to make sure that everybody understood, that you were not to go off the trail there.

So when my colleague from Edmonton-Ellerslie talks about the need for policing and the minister is saying, "You know, that's not really possible," I think we have to understand what we're talking about here. If you really mean that, you've got to put the resources into saying: okay; yeah, we mean that we do not want people going off of this trail. You're going to have to put the resources into that to make sure that that's what happens.

Most people are law abiding. They will do what they are asked to do, but you need clear signage, and you've got to have a backup system to that signage. If the signage comes down for some reason, legally or illegally, you've got to have a backup there. Because how much damage can be done in a weekend or a week or a month before that signage gets fixed? If you really mean it, put the fence up. Well, now you're running a fence through an ecological area.

You know, you've created a series of difficulties here that I don't know if you've anticipated. I haven't heard that discussion be fleshed out in the Chamber. I, frankly, just find it a little odd that we have these protected places and then we allow activities in them that we know are not what was originally anticipated as an activity in a protected area.

You know, as a snowmobiler if I had a choice of going to a place where I was treading on ecologically sensitive ground, to create a euphemism there, versus one where I was welcomed with open arms, where there were, as I said, the trails, the grooming, the warm-up sheds, all of those things, I would probably choose to go to the place where there was more accommodation for me. I mean, I'm aware of all of this. I'm out in the woods. I know what happens when these trails get that kind of wear and tear. I've been there. I pack my garbage out. I'm careful about what I leave behind. I've been there. I know what can happen to these areas, and there are just some areas where it is not suitable to have those kinds of machines. I would say—and somebody, I'm sure, will argue against me here—that because the snowmobiles are operating on the snow, there's less damage done. From what I've seen, there's more damage done by some other kinds of off-highway vehicles.

I think that if you're at the point about arguing that minutia, then we probably shouldn't be in the area at all, and that's part of my concern here. I understand that the minister is saying: well, there are certain landowners that agreed, and now they feel their deal has not been upheld, and therefore this has to be done to accommodate them. I don't fault the landowners there at all. You know, if that's what they thought was going to happen and they gave an okay to a certain plan or scheme and said, "Okay; it can happen as long as I've still got access," well, who on earth was saying that this was going to happen, that it was possible? Who designed this scheme knowing that it's unimplementable and that we were going to come to this point in time where we now have to have access through a protected area to get to a recreation site? Somebody wasn't thinking far enough ahead on this one.

Even though I'm one of those recreational off-highway vehicle users who probably could get access to this site now and given my 35-year long harangue that the Alberta government has not given snowmobilers enough places to go—we've been cut off the eastern slopes; we've been cut off other kinds of places—I find it a little odd that I'm now standing here saying: okay; cut me off from another area. But I have a larger responsibility here both as an MLA and also as an Albertan when we look ahead to how much of our province is going to be left pristine for other generations, and I think there are serious questions about what the government is proposing through this bill.

I think that this was not well thought out in the first place. We're now having to have a patch put through in the form of this bill to deal with mistakes that were made with earlier agreements. I am not at this point in favour of what's being suggested in the bill. I wish that I didn't have to say that, but I just think that there have been a lot of mistakes here, and two wrongs are not going to make a right.

So thanks for the opportunity to address the issues that I've raised here. I haven't really given the minister any particular questions to answer; rather, I've made some observations, but I think this whole thing is problematic.

Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Highwood.

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to make a few comments and ask a couple of questions. First of all, the Whaleback area is one of the oldest agricultural disposition lands in Alberta. Some of the early ranches in the late 1870s and the early 1880s were formed in that area. It's been continuously grazed by cattle primarily but also by horses ever since the buffalo disappeared in the late 1870s. As one wilderness association said when they discovered the Whaleback – it's been there all along and used as cow-grazing land – it's pristine, and to me that really just speaks loudly for the stewardship of those many generations of ranching families that have made sure that it stayed that way.

I concur with my colleague from Edmonton-Centre, who said that this area probably isn't suited to snowmobiles. I would suggest that she's absolutely right. The area, if you think of it, as ranchland meant that because of the wonderful grasses that grow there, and we could go on a long time about those. The snow, when it comes, gets taken away quite quickly by the Chinooks, so the animals were able to graze naturally and still do, which means there isn't very much snow. If you're a snowmobiler and no snow, well, then, there's no snowmobiling.

I have a little bit of a concern about the trails. Access for the ranchers and maybe some hunters, if they're light footprints, is really not a big issue. I have a set of photographs – and I'm cognizant of the rules of the House that I can't bring them in here and show you – that will show you in an area just a little farther north what unrestrained four-wheel drives, quads, and motorbikes can do to a grazing area, destroying the grass in the area. A wonderful one where there's a trail all marked out – it's got a little bit of gravel, but the four-wheelers don't want to do that. They go on either side of it, so there are multi-trails. So anybody that wants to see those, just check with me and I'll show them to you. I have a whole set of them in my office.

A couple of questions then. First of all, does the MD, as in the MD of Ranchland, have the right to refuse a development permit for either a trail or for some commercial development that might be put on Crown land because they have the municipal responsibility?

Secondly, these access trails that let you get from one area that you can travel on to another area that you can travel on – we all know that if there's a fire danger, the whole area will be interdicted. But if there does happen to be snowmobiles and there's a lack of snow, would we eliminate them? Again, with the lack of snow there's a great danger for grass fires. One of the biggest grass fires I've ever seen in my life, other than the Granum fire, was one that was set in December by a cigarette out a window. Of course, these catalytic converters on your exhaust system are famous for starting grass fires. So the question is: can these trails be shut down and access denied to all except those who need to be there?

Mr. Chairman, at this time I'd like to adjourn debate. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Chair, I would move that the committee now rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Klapstein: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports progress on Bill 2.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? The motion is carried.
The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, you know, we were having such an excellent debate on heritage rangeland and Mother Nature, so I thought I would just pop outside and take a look at how Mother Nature was doing. We have had a lot of intense fog in the last two days in this area, and I notice that it is snowing and blowing and raining all at the same time, and there are still foggy conditions. In the Edmonton area alone yesterday we had two deaths that occurred as a result of a vehicle accident, unfortunately, and that's a tragic circumstance. I wouldn't want to see that happen today, and I know that all members of the House are very busy with commitments they have to be at and homes they have to reach. So that having been said, I would move that the House now stand adjourned until Monday at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; at 4:10 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, March 1, 2004

1:30 p.m.

Date: 2004/03/01

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon and welcome back. At the conclusion of the prayer we'll have the singing of our national anthem, so please remain standing.

Let us pray. As we begin our deliberations in the Legislature today, we ask to be surrounded with the insight we need to do our best for the benefit of our province and its people and for the benefit of our country. Today we also pray for those who have been taken and those who have suffered as innocent victims of violence. Amen.

Now, hon. members, our national anthem today will be led by Mr. Paul Lorieau, and if you'd participate in the language of your choice, that would be most acceptable.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mrs. McClellan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a very accomplished young lady, Miss Danielle Schnurer, who is with us today in your gallery. Danielle is the 2003 4-H Premier's award recipient. This is the highest honour that the Alberta 4-H program bestows upon a member, and it recognizes young Albertans that demonstrate strong project management, leadership, and communication skills plus dedication to their community. Award winners are selected based on their 4-H and community involvement and performance at Alberta 4-H selections. Most importantly, they are selected by their peers as well as representatives from Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, the 4-H branch, our industry sponsors, the 4-H Council, and the 4-H Foundation.

Mr. Speaker, during Danielle's year as the 4-H Premier's award recipient she serves as a travelling 4-H ambassador, promoting the 4-H program and rural youth through the province. Danielle truly demonstrates the 4-H motto of Learn to Do by Doing, and she is the best commercial we will ever get for the 4-H program. I have had the honour of being present at a number of occasions where Danielle spoke, and she truly has benefited from the 4-H program and the public speaking opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, I think we're all strong supporters of the 4-H program. It's simply part and parcel of community life. But behind every young 4-H member there is a family who contributes time to their success, and today Danielle has a number of her family with her. I would like Danielle's family to rise as I introduce them: her parents, Brian and Daphne Schnurer, her sisters Jamie and Chelsea, her brother Bryant. Also, we have two of our 4-H reps with us, Vanessa and Mark. I would ask that all members give these very special guests a very warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a member of the Alberta government's International Governance Advisory Committee I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a delegation from our sister province in South Africa, Mpumalanga. They are in your gallery, and I'd ask them to rise as I call their names: Mr. Thulani Mdakane, Mr. Richard Mkhathshwa, Ms Shirley Sikosana, Mr. Andrew Dlamini, Mr. Tenane Charles Makola, and Ms Thandiswa Nyati. They are accompanied today by Aimee Charest and Aniko Parnell, director of the international governance office. Would you please give them the welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 23 grade 6 students from Meadowlark elementary school. These students are in the Mandarin Chinese program at Meadowlark school, one of my favourite schools. I can tell you that these are some of the brightest lights I've seen in a while. Would you please give them the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly a close personal friend of mine and a strong supporter of yours, Mr. Ernie Sillito, who is sitting in the members' gallery. I'd like Ernie to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am rising today to welcome Carol Carbol. Carol is a licensed practical nurse who is here because she is very concerned about the future of public health care in Alberta. She's particularly concerned about the use of P3s to build hospitals and about the impact on patient safety of moving nurses from site to site. She will be watching our proceedings closely. I ask everyone to give her a warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to other members of the Assembly Mike Gladstone. Mike is a proud product of the University of Calgary, having graduated in political science with a focus on international relations and foreign policy. He's here visiting the Legislature today because he has a very keen interest in politics. Starting in high school and going to university, Mike has participated in all levels of politics – federal, provincial – and among other things has been the youth president of the Alberta PC Association executive. Mike, I would ask that you stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Government Expense Claims

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, today the Alberta Liberal opposition sent Premier Klein a letter calling for a detailed explanation of Executive Council expenses and also demanding that Alberta pass rules on expense claims that equal or surpass those of Ontario. My first question is to the Premier. How long before we get answers to these questions, Mr. Premier?

1:40

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I received the letter about 15 minutes ago, which is typical of Liberal tactics: first, hold a news conference, release the letter to the media, and then say, "Oh, we'll give the letter to the Premier as well."

The letter contains 23 questions. Here are the questions.

- What are the rules and guidelines governing the approval of expenses for members and staff of Executive Council? Can we have a copy of those rules?
- Who is responsible for approving expenses for the Office of the Premier, including staff expenses and credit card statements?
- What role, if any, does the Premier play in controlling expenses in the Office of the Premier?
- Who is responsible for the Premier's travel plans and for publicly circulating those travel plans?
- What are the rules and guidelines for publicly circulating the Premier's travel plans?
- What are the rules and guidelines for publicly circulating the travel plans of members of cabinet and government MLAs?

We're up to about $5,000 or $6,000 right now in staff time to examine this, and we're only at item 6.

The Speaker: Perhaps, hon. Premier, the letter could be tabled. We do have other sections called Written Questions, Motions for Returns on the Order Paper as well.

The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'm happy to table it later.

Again to the Premier: could the Premier narrow that timeline a little bit and perhaps answer whether he could give us answers by the end of the week?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I would ask the opposition party to do as you have suggested, and that is to put it on the Order Paper as motions for returns or written questions. They are more appropriately put there than they are in this Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: given that Alberta seeks to be better than every other province . . . [some applause] I'm glad you're up to the challenge. Given that Alberta seeks to be better than every other province, why aren't our rules on expenses as stringent as those passed by your Conservative cousins in Ontario way back in July 2003?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I have no idea what the rules are in Ontario.

Ms Blakeman: We gave them to you.

Mr. Klein: I still have no idea. Mr. Speaker, I'm going to make this quite clear: I don't pay much attention to what the Liberals give us, because, you know, it is so convoluted sometimes and so misinterpreted as to not be believable.

Relative to this province leading, I would remind the hon. member that we are number one in economic growth, we are number one in employment rates, we are number one in low taxes, we are number one in debt reduction, we are number one in business competitiveness, we are number one in salary growth, we are number one in student achievement, and we're the only province in Canada right now not running a deficit.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Auditor General's Powers

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. The Premier says that the Auditor General is okay with his expenses, but the Auditor General doesn't even have the authority to review and make public any investigation into Executive Council's spending. My question is to the Premier. Will the government introduce legislation to give Alberta's Auditor General the same powers as the federal Auditor General?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I think that the Auditor General has tremendous latitude to examine and investigate anything he wants. In addition, there is the Ethics Commissioner, and I've indicated to the Ethics Commissioner to come in and examine our procedures. If he finds anything wrong with those procedures, we'll move to strengthen and to correct any deficiencies in the procedures we may have.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why won't this government bring in legislation authorizing Alberta's Auditor General to investigate any potential abuse of taxpayers' money?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, as far as I know, the Auditor General has every latitude to investigate abuse of taxpayers' dollars including, you know, abuse by any member of government, all government officials, members of the opposition, anyone who handles a taxpayer's dollar.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. He needs to read the legislation.

Again to the Premier: will this government bring in legislation authorizing the Auditor General to publish separate reports on his investigations? Right now he can only do one report. Let's have it all.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, it's my understanding that if the Auditor General is requested to examine a particular issue, he can report on that issue. That, I believe, has been done before, where we have asked the Auditor General – I'm trying to recall the case. It was when Mr. Valentine was the Auditor General, and he was asked specifically to investigate a particular issue and issue a report on that matter. I believe it was an issue involving myself, an issue related to Multi-Corp. He conducted an examination and issued a report on that . . .

Ms Blakeman: That was the Ethics Commissioner, not the Auditor General.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, will you tell her to quit chirping and listen to the answer?

Mr. Speaker, if I recall, the Auditor General did a report, a very thorough report, issued his report in this Legislature. So I see no reason to raise the issue of the Auditor General being able to investigate certain and specific matters, because it has been done in the past, and I don't see why it can't be done in the future.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Deregulation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dr. West, the former Minister of Energy, produced and directed a scheme which certainly could be made into a horror film, the disaster of electricity deregulation. Last week the Premier announced that the Eight Billion Dollar Man is back in town. My first question is to the Premier. Given that electricity deregulation has failed and Albertans are tired of this government's false promises of savings, when will the government admit that $8 billion spent on electricity deregulation is enough and you're simply going to do the right thing, and that's unplug deregulation of electricity?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad that the hon. Minister of Energy is here because he can supplement my answer.

It is wrong, false, untrue, inaccurate, a misrepresentation to say that deregulation has failed. His assertion that this is an $8 billion boondoggle – I don't know where he gets that figure, but it's not a boondoggle at all. It has been a success.

Mr. Speaker, as an example of the misinformation and misrepresentation of the facts, I allude to a situation in Calgary on Thursday where there were brownouts or blackouts imposed by the electric system. The Liberals were immediate to say that this was caused by deregulation and had to withdraw their press release when they found out from the power company that it had nothing to do with deregulation whatsoever. This is a small example of the steps they will go to to misrepresent and not tell the truth about deregulation.

Mr. MacDonald: Talk about misrepresentation: the power blackout was on Friday, not Thursday.

Speaker's Ruling Oral Question Period Practices

The Speaker: I'm going to read this again. Beauchesne 409 with respect to oral questions: "It must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate." So let's proceed with the question.

Deregulation (continued)

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: is it now government policy to deregulate public health care with, again, the false promise of savings to Alberta now that the Eight Million Dollar Man is back in town?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I apologize. If he says that it was Friday, it was Friday, but we still didn't issue a press release saying that it was due to deregulation, like they did. That was real misrepresentation.

He also said that Dr. Steve West is now the Eight Million Dollar Man. He has been devalued from $8 billion to $8 million.

Mr. Speaker, the answer to the question, quite simply, is no. This is a serious issue, much more serious than many, if not most, if not all of the issues the Liberals raise, and that is the issue of health care sustainability and what we need to do as Canadians – because all provinces are faced with this difficulty – to bring health care costs in line and to get them under control and to bring about sustainability. That's what it's all about. It's not about following the model of electricity; it's about Alberta taking the lead. When other provinces talk about it and say, "Simply throw more money at the situation," we are saying, "Let's find new and different and more imaginative and innovative ways of doing things." Nothing wrong with that.

I can see the Liberals thinking there is something wrong with it because it involves thinking outside the box. It involves something more than being narrow-minded or myopic. It involves really imaginative thinking, something that is so strange and so foreign to them that all they can do is get up and criticize.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: is it now government policy to deregulate the Alberta civil service with the false promise of savings to Albertans now that the Eight Billion Dollar Man is back in town?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, he went from Eight Billion Dollar to Eight Million Dollar. Now, he's back to Eight Billion Dollar.

Mr. Speaker, it's the government's policy to deregulate where it makes sense to deregulate. If he's talking about deregulation of the public service, in some areas it has happened already. It has happened relative to liquor stores. Certainly, they were taken out of government control and management and privatized. Does he want us to go back to a government-run system?

It was done relative to the franchising of registries, Mr. Speaker: much cheaper, much more efficient. Instead of going to the motor vehicles branch, taking an afternoon off work, and lining up only to be told that they have the wrong documentation, to come back tomorrow, they can actually walk down the block, go to their local registry office, be called by their first name, be served a cup of coffee, get their driver's licence, get their licence plates. Nothing wrong with that.

The Liberals think it's wrong, of course, because it doesn't involve huge bureaucracy. So if we have an opportunity to break down bureaucracy and to privatize and to deregulate and if it makes a lot of sense, we will do it, Mr. Speaker, if it makes sense. That's something they don't understand.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Meat Packing Industry

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Approximately $800 million of Canadian and Alberta taxpayers' dollars have been spent so far on programs to address the BSE crisis. According to a beef industry report that I will be tabling today, while cattle producers are going under, meat packers are making a killing by lowering the price they pay for cattle about the amount of the government subsidy and increasing their margin by selling beef at pre-BSE prices to supermarkets. My questions are to the minister of agriculture and rural development. Will the government hold an independent inquiry into the waste of $800 million which seems to have ended up in the pockets of U.S. meat packers rather than cattle producers, and if not, why not?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I think I have addressed this issue in the House before, but I will again. One thing that this minister will do rather than flinging around wild accusations is be sure of the facts before I do make statements like this. I think that would be responsible. If the hon. member would be more current with the issue, he would know that about two weeks ago I did ask for a carcass evaluation and asked my staff to prepare that because I really don't appreciate in a time of distress in this industry that we have these types of accusations being flung around.

Some months ago it was the big fat feedlots that were being accused of taking all of the profit. Then in the fall it was that cow-calf were getting very high prices for their calves. Now it's the packer issue. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the beef industry, the cattle industry in this province and across Canada is under great duress. What we need are solutions to move us through this, and that's what this government is doing with the industry at the table.

Mr. Speaker, this minister will not make those types of accusations without facts. When I receive those facts, I will be very happy to share them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, sweeping it under the carpet is not going to do it, and that's exactly what the minister is doing by refusing to call an inquiry. Why is the government sweeping under the carpet the findings of a beef industry report which concluded that meat packing companies have "simply discounted the price they were prepared to pay for the cattle by the amount of the government support payment"? Why won't she have an inquiry?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, I could discount that very quickly, and so could the hon. member if he chose to go back and look at what beef prices were prior to any intervention in the industry. I can assure him that prices for the industry improved greatly. If he understood the packing industry at all, he would understand that they suffered great losses the first weeks of the BSE issue, after May 20, operating at about 27 or 28 per cent efficiency.

Now, I don't expect him to have that broad understanding of the industry, but I do think that at a time when this industry is under siege, is suffering great duress, we all have a responsibility to have the facts in front of us and not to be divisive in this industry. The only way that we will work our way through this very serious issue is if we all work together. Mr. Speaker, that is what this minister is going to do.

I can assure the hon. member that at all of the many, many meetings we've had, every part of this industry from the trucking industry, to packers large and small, to cow-calf producers, to feedlot operators, to the grocery retailers, the Canadian grocers' institute, has been at the same table in the same room and addressed all of these issues, not picked them apart one shot here, one shot there. That is totally irresponsible.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, could the minister please tell the House why, if this program has spent $400 million of Alberta taxpayers' money and an equal amount of federal dollars, packers' margins have increased by 200 per cent over the same period?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, I wish the federal government had contributed equally to this program; the cost to Alberta would have been considerably less. I'm still hopeful in my discussions with the federal minister that they will come to the table and help this industry through. This industry contributes a very great deal to the economy of this province and, in fact, provinces across Canada.

If the hon. member is suggesting that the investment that this government made of $400 million has not assisted the industry, then I suggest that he get out of his desk in this office and go out and visit with the industry and find out how it really is working. I would have suggested that he attend that meeting, Mr. Speaker, where this paper was discussed. I was invited to that. I spoke at the meeting. I answered questions. I spent all day with them. I'm not sure whether the hon. member was invited and couldn't come, but you cannot take a piece of paper and solve the complex issues around this.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this is too important an issue to try and pick sides, pit one part of the industry against the other. The only way we will solve this issue is if this industry works together, and that's what we're going to do: work with them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Community Programs

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government encourages effective community programs and community groups have responded with their grassroots initiatives and reflecting the requests from my senior constituents – as an example, I want to focus on a particular program in my constituency called mow/snow, that has been effective in its purpose to keep seniors aging in place, in their home, and providing a hand-up work experience for Albertans in social need – my question today is to the hon. Minister of Seniors. What is the government doing to preserve community programs such as the mow and snow program to help seniors who are in need?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Woloshyn: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to point out that the Ministry of Seniors does not have a grant program that would be specific to mow and snow as a program. However, our responsibility towards seniors is to ensure that the folks who do need help receive help, and we, in fact, do that. The special-needs assistance program will support seniors who are eligible and who have a requirement for some yard maintenance, as it is in clearing sidewalks or whatever. Also, for other people who have mobility problems, we have things such as the home adaptation program.

I would like to say that I'd like to commend the people, the volunteers in the member's constituency, for such a program and would hopefully like to see it continue. Like I say, we do our level best to look after the seniors who are eligible for our support.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Given that the ACE program provided some seed funding for just such a community program for grass cutting and snow removal for seniors in need, I want to ask you a question. What are you doing to preserve such a cost-effective program?

Mr. Dunford: Mr. Speaker, the program that was referred to was developed in 1993, and as we know, there has been substantial change in the Alberta situation since that time. In 1993, to use round numbers, I guess, there were something like 90,000 people that were on our welfare rolls. Ninety thousand. What we've been able to do in the intervening time is cut that by two-thirds. We're under 30,000, but we're not going to, you know, get into the exact numbers.

In any case, I think that, clearly, one could see that the type of skill training that's required in today's terms would be significantly different than what we were required to do 10 years ago. Really, what we've done with our skills investment program is we've removed, actually, the ACE program as one of our key components in our skills training situation. We've informed all of the community organizations that we've worked with in the past that at the end of this March that program will cease to exist.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental question is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Given that the mow and snow program for the seniors in my community had 90 clients in the summer of 2003, now that the ACE program has been cancelled, when is the new program to come into place to continue that effective community program to help people?

Mr. Dunford: Well, as I've indicated, of course, all of the programs that were in existence have come under review, and many have been revised. In this particular case, ACE, we've eliminated that program.

Now, we still have training-on-the-job programs that are available. So we have department officials that will work with community organizations, I'm sure some of which are in the hon. member's constituency, to work on aspects, then, of a mow and snow kind of program to see what we're able to do with that, because we don't want to eliminate the opportunity for people who are on our rolls but who are looking for self-reliance and independence to move into the workforce.

We're willing to work with these groups and will continue to do so. In many cases some of the tasks that would be involved in a mow and snow program might just fit the kind of framework in which a person might start out in trying to become self-reliant. So we'll look at it.

Ophthalmology Services in Calgary

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, in 2002 the Minister of Health and Wellness designated the Calgary health region as an area with an emergency need for ophthalmology services. This allowed for two ophthalmologists from South America to be brought to Calgary under section 5 of the special register of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: what is the minister's justification for approving this designation under section 5?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, there were two physicians involved in the particular situation that the hon. member is referring to. Dr. Maria Castro is a pediatric ophthalmologist. Her husband, Dr. Alberto Castro, is also an ophthalmologist. If a health region is trying to recruit such a physician to their region and they are unable to find such an individual within Canada, then a part 5 designation is signed off by the minister of health, which will allow them to recruit from elsewhere.

Now, pediatric ophthalmology is quite a high-demand specialty, Mr. Speaker, and Dr. Maria Castro indicated that she would be prepared to come from Colombia if we could also find a position for her husband to practise in Calgary. Dr. Alberto Castro practises in the area of vitreo-retinal surgery.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Maria Castro does practise in the area of pediatric ophthalmology. She's employed by both the University of Calgary and the Calgary health region. Dr. Alberto Castro, her husband, provides in-patient service at the Rockyview hospital and also outpatient services at the Holy Cross facility.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Can the minister, then, confirm that the request to import these two specialists originated with the chief of ophthalmology for the Calgary health region?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I don't have a specific recollection. I don't have the files of these individuals before me, but the request does come through the health region. Who may have signed off the request for that is not within my recollection. If the hon. member would like to send me a letter outlining his question for further specificity, I would be happy to respond to him accordingly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question: what action is this minister prepared to take if it's proven that there were specialists already available when he approved the emergency need in Calgary? Will he reverse his decision?

2:10

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, there are, as I indicated, reasons why we recruit physicians from other jurisdictions. We look to continue to support the good kinds of services that Albertans have come to expect. I can say that quite a number of part 5 designations have been approved since 1995. On average about 50 such requests a year are made by health regions that I have signed off on during my time as minister of health. Fifty requests a year. I take it at face value that if the regional health authority feels that it needs such physicians to be recruited from elsewhere, they in fact know what their needs are. At a time when Albertans are talking about the importance of access to the health care system, I should think that it would be most appropriate that we continue to recruit specialists that we require in this province from wherever they might be.

I should note, Mr. Speaker, that the College of Physicians and Surgeons is also involved in this process, that they do have an important role in acknowledging the credentials of such physicians to indicate that they, in fact, have the appropriate training to practise within Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Health Care Services for Out-of-province Patients

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first question is to the minister of health. Health care delivery and the quality of service available in Alberta are the envy of all provinces despite the financial challenges all provinces face. I understand that this has resulted in out-of-province Canadians accessing health care in Alberta, as Albertans may also access health care in other provinces. My question: what is the service and fiscal effect on our Alberta health care system of out-of-province users?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, one of the principles under the Canada Health Act is portability. Alberta is a recognized leader in health care delivery in Canada, and accordingly Alberta hospitals provided 130,000 services to other Canadians. This makes Alberta the largest provider of services to out-of-province Canadians.

People come here from the provinces of Saskatchewan, British Columbia, the territories, and Manitoba as well for services that sometimes are available in those provinces but sometimes are specialized here in Alberta. For example, our organ and tissue transplantation programs, our cancer programs, our adult and pediatric cardiac care, bum treatment, diabetes treatments are only a few of the areas where Alberta provides services to non-Alberta residents.

Mr. Speaker, the rates at which we bill back to those other provinces are set through an interprovincial committee. Previous to last July there was a much wider gap between what it actually costs us to provide those services and what we actually billed back. That gap has closed somewhat, but we still subsidize approximately $20 million a year in services to non-Alberta residents. That's the best estimate that we can come up with. Still, we billed approximately $90 million worth of services to the health care insurance plans of other provinces. We will continue to provide those services to other Canadians in need of those services because we do support the principle of portability within the Canada Health Act, sir.

Mr. McClelland: The minister's response has generated another question. To the minister of health: would it be possible, then, to pick up the $20 million difference from the federal government to keep our health authorities whole?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, not to discount the importance of $20 million, let us say this. It is a significant amount of money, to be certain, but to put it into context, $20 million is what we pay to run our health care system for a single day in this province. So in the whole scheme of things, the total value of budgets of regional health authorities would be something in the magnitude of about $4.2 billion. To argue with the federal government over an additional $20 million – it's not really a material amount. I'd rather be fighting over $20 billion.

Mr. McClelland: My final question, Mr. Speaker, is to the Minister of Seniors. Alberta is also benefiting from the in-migration of seniors. Could the minister tell the House what the impact of net in-migration of seniors to Alberta is?

Mr. Woloshyn: Mr. Speaker, I don't have dollar figures on that, but the member is correct. We receive more seniors coming in than leaving the province. A couple of things. For seniors to sign on to a program, say the seniors' benefits program, they must be resident in Alberta for at least three months, and we haven't had any indication that there are very many of those people. With respect to other seniors they are very welcome here because when they come, they bring with them their assets. They invest in housing. They invest in a lot of things. Also, equally as important is that in Alberta and in Canada, indeed, the greatest proportion of any population that volunteers is the seniors population. So to measure the actual benefit to the province would be very difficult, but certainly these people are more than welcome here.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Utilities Consumer Advocate

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Wednesday the Minister of Government Services admitted that the electricity industry through the Balancing Pool is paying for the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate under section 148 of the Electric Utilities Act. My first question is to the Minister of Energy. How can the Utilities Consumer Advocate be independent, working on behalf of consumers before regulatory hearings, when the electricity industry is cutting his paycheck?

Mr. Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, once again the member has got it wrong, so we are more than pleased to correct the information for him. The structure of the utilities advocate is such that that individual is paid from the Balancing Pool. That is an arm's-length organization from industry, and it reflects the interests of the folks in the rate base. So for him to intimate that it's actually going to be influenced by the utility providers is nothing more than his usual brand of hogwash.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Energy: when did the minister make a ministerial order dictating that the gas companies would also fund the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate?

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, that sounds like an interesting question for a written return, but he has also been one that has used the word "utilities" interchangeably with the word "electricity." So, in fact, with the creation of the Utilities Consumer Advocate, the individual who will watch on behalf of all Albertans' consumer interests, that will also include natural gas.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Energy: how much money precisely is being paid by the Balancing Pool to fund the consumer advocate?

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, the member who asked the question knows full well that the consumer advocate budgeting falls under the Minister of Government Services. I believe he asked that question last week in the House, and I'm sure that if the minister wants to supplement today, he will.

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, just to make it very, very clear, yes, as we said in this House last week, the Balancing Pool does look after this. The consumer advocate is set up to help consumers in this province have a one-window approach when they have problems with their electricity bills or when they want to get information about electricity and the restructuring of electricity. As well, if they have inquiries about natural gas, they are also calling in to our advocate's office, and we're providing them with the proper information. We inform consumers to help them empower themselves.

One other thing the consumer advocate is looking at doing is making representations in front of the EUB on behalf of all small businesses, residential and farm customers. As a matter of fact, if at the end of this year we don't expend all the dollars that are needed for that, that have come forward, flowing through to us, those dollars will go back to the Balancing Pool, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

2:20 Agricultural Income Stabilization Program

Mr. McFarland: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. As you're aware, Madam Minister, many changes have been made to the systems that are in place for the agriculture industry over the first year, and while the Canadian agricultural stabilization program is supposed to be the answer to ad hoc programs, have you got any assurances that the program is going to be responsive and timely in responding to our producers who are in desperate need?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member would know, Alberta has been a full participant in the ag policy framework document, and of course the Canada agricultural income stabilization program is one part of the safety net chapter of that program. When that program was designed, it was designed to look after any small and large changes in income. However, while it was designed to cover small and large losses, it was not designed to cover equity losses such as we have experienced through this current BSE issue.

Because we work so closely with our industry, we realized that there would have to be some changes made to that program, and it isn't just in this program with the extreme low prices in the hog industry, again an issue, and, in fact, in the grain industry, Mr. Speaker. If you were to experience four or five repetitive years of drought, for example, it would not deal with that, so it became very apparent that we had to deal with negative margins. That was done. This program covers 60 per cent of negative margins.

Also, we would have to deal with the caps. The caps were set at $975,000. It sounded like a reasonable amount for average losses for any production, but when you get into losses such as we've experienced in an industry as large as the beef industry and, in fact, the pork industry – and in fact it could be the grain industry – those caps had to change. So they were renegotiated nation-wide to $3 million. Three million dollar caps do not answer the needs in Alberta, so in Alberta, in fact, we'll go to $5 million caps in this program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While people are anticipating these changes taking effect, what is the actual holdup that prevents these changes being made in the program and put into effect?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, to get an amendment to the original agreement – in December we finally got the signatures to the ag policy framework, but the agreement has to be amended. An agreement to be amended requires the same formula as it does to get a national program; that is, 50 per cent of the production and seven provinces. We have three provinces that have signed on to the program: Prince Edward Island, Ontario, and Alberta. Quebec has taken this through their cabinet, and we understand that they will be adjusting their program. But we still need three provinces to sign the agreement. Our understanding is that they're dealing with it with their cabinets, but for some provinces it is very difficult given their budgets, and they are requesting that the federal government assist them.

Mr. McFarland: A final question to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: although these changes may take effect immediately, how can we let the producers know in a timely fashion so they can access any of these changes that the provinces and the federal government, hopefully, sign on to?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, one thing, Mr. Speaker, that we did negotiate successfully was an opportunity with a bilateral agreement with the federal government that we could do some advance payments under what would be called an interim case program. That process is occurring.

We had 30 to 40 formal producer regional meetings to describe the case program. We are having more meetings now to discuss the enhancements, and any member of the Legislature that is getting these types of questions that wants to have a meeting should let us know, because these programs are very complex, and our staff would be happy to go out and sit down with producers and go through the program.

We've tried to keep them informed through media, through newsletters and that type of information, but probably the best communicators are in this building. I would encourage all of our members that serve that population to get the answers because, Mr. Speaker, this is the program that is anticipated to remove the need for ad hoc programs out of agriculture. It's what this government wants, and it is definitely what the industry wants.

Private/Public Partnerships

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, the government web site lists highway 407 in Ontario as an example of a successful P3 project. Meanwhile, back in Ontario the private operators of the now controversial highway 407 are gouging commuters with toll rate hikes that have exceeded 200 per cent over the last five years. The government of Ontario is now involved in a dispute with the consortium that owns highway 407 over high toll rates and poor customer service. To the Minister of Infrastructure: given that highway 407 is listed as a success story on this government's web site, is this the standard that this government sets for its P3 projects?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister of Transportation may know more about the highway that the member is referring to. I don't know the details of that particular project. But I will say that from all the indications that we have of any of the P3s that have been here in Alberta, including what looks like it's going to be a very successful one with the Calgary courthouse, we're very, very hopeful and are sure that we will be able to show that it is a great deal for Albertans.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: given that this government is looking to a P3 to extend the southeast leg of Anthony Henday Drive, what guarantee can the minister give commuters that the private operators will not implement tolls?

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thought I explained it to the member once before when he started asking me questions that are not on this department. If he cares, I can do it more slowly. The infrastructure that is horizontal – that means that it's out this way – is in Transportation. The infrastructure that is built vertically is in Infrastructure. So perhaps he could address the highways to the Minister of Transportation because that's where it's properly housed.

Mr. Bonner: Well, Mr. Speaker, we will try the Minister of Transportation. Will the minister provide the documentation outlining how it calculated the estimated cost of $300,000,000 as a public project for Anthony Henday Drive versus the $220,000,000 it would cost a 30-year P3 project?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm not quite sure what numbers the hon. member is using, but what we've essentially done is gone to the request for qualifications. This is trying to find those companies world-wide that are willing to bring business to Alberta and qualify in terms of the background and the necessary expertise to proceed with this project. As I mentioned in the House last week, there were six companies, marriages of various companies that put together six proposals. We are going to boil those down to three, and then the next step is the request for proposal. What will happen then is those three companies will bring forward their proposals on how they want to build this leg of southeast Anthony Henday Drive and also how they will finance it and manage and maintain it for the next 30 years.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 30 seconds from now I'll call upon the first of seven hon. members to participate in Recognitions.

Recognitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Raylee Edwards

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to recognize the accomplishments of an outstanding Alberta cowgirl, Ms Raylee Edwards. Raylee attended her first Canadian Finals Rodeo when she was nine years old, and in this, her first attempt in rodeo, she unfortunately missed winning the Canadian ladies' barrel racing championship when she knocked down her third barrel in the final go-round.

Coming from a winning rodeo family, Raylee could not help but follow the riding trails of her mother, Mary Lynn, the 1980 ladies' barrel racing champion, and her father, Oscar, the 1981 Canadian calfroping champion. Ride after ride, competition after competition she continued to hone her skills to perfection, becoming the best in her sport.

While holding the record for the youngest competitor at the CFR, 16 years after Raylee's first big trip to the Canadian Finals she finally scored the big ride. Raylee Edwards became the 2003 Canadian ladies' barrel racing champion, continuing a winning family tradition, a title of which she and her family can forever and truly be proud.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Sarah and Jessica Gregg

Mr. Hutton: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure this afternoon to rise and recognize the accomplishments of two very exceptional young athletes from the city of champions. Last month Sarah and Jessica Gregg competed in the North American long-track speed skating championships in Minnesota and brought home a combined total of eight medals from the event. Jessica won two gold, two silver, while her younger sister, Sarah, won the overall championship for her age group and equalled her older sister's medal count.

Winning medals and championships seems to run in the Gregg family, Mr. Speaker. Their father, Dr. Randy Gregg, is a former Oiler defenceman who played with two Canadian Olympic hockey teams while their mother, Kathy Gregg, is a former medal winner in Olympic speed skating. She also coaches her daughters in speed skating. Their daughters' wonderful achievement is not only a testament to hard work and dedication to their sport but to the quality of the Edmonton Speed Skating Association program.

On behalf of this Assembly I would like to congratulate Sarah and Jessica on their superb accomplishment and wish them all the best in their future competitions.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Arctic Winter Games

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today as a northern Albertan to recognize the city of Fort McMurray and the entire regional municipality of Wood Buffalo, who are hosting over 1,500 young athletes from all across the world's circumpolar region for the 2004 Arctic Winter Games. Athletes from northern Alberta, the Northwest Territories, Yukon, Nunavut, Quebec, Alaska, Greenland, Russia, and Scandinavia are competing in the events to celebrate our northern cultures and promote active lifestyles through sport.

About 5,000 local volunteers have combined their time to make these games a success and to help their communities benefit from hosting these prestigious events. Volunteers are part of a province-wide network of people who are absolutely vital to the formula that makes our province the best place to live, work, and visit.

On behalf of our Premier, who officially opened the Arctic Winter Games this past weekend along with several MLA colleagues, I invite all members of this Assembly to join me in congratulating the people of Wood Buffalo for their dedication in hosting these games.

Edmonton Opera Week

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to recognize a first today, or, rather, 40 years of firsts; that is, first-rate opera in Edmonton. The city of Edmonton has declared this week, March 1 to 7, Edmonton Opera Week to recognize and celebrate 40 years of production from Edmonton Opera.

March 2 will see the mayor of Edmonton make the official proclamation at noon at city hall before an audience of current and original cast members of Madama Butterfly. Madama Butterfly was the first-ever production, opening in October 1963 at the Jubilee Auditorium, playing to a sold-out audience. The anniversary version opens this weekend.

My congratulations to the board; the volunteers; artistic director, Brian Deedrick; general manager, Mary Phillips-Rickey; staff; technicians; and production staff; and, of course, the artists who bring us such joy.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Elbow Park Elementary School

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased in this Assembly to extend hearty congratulations to Elbow Park elementary school. You have accomplished the very rare, a public school taking top spot in this year's provincial school review by the Fraser Institute.

As a grandma I frequently visit this small, inner-city Calgary school and truly enjoy its special environment, one that exemplifies what I call LCC behaviours – leadership, commitment, and caring – by administration and teachers and parents. The students truly benefit, working hard in this caring, supportive, and challenging environment to become the best they can be as individuals and as learners.

Elbow Park, with your approach you have led the way for others. Success is not just about class size or socioeconomics. Students, administration, teachers, and parents, I encourage you to be truly proud of this achievement and the recognition you so well deserve. Congratulations.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

David Gillies

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to recognize a special person. For years this person sat long hours in this Chamber, perhaps more attentive than some of us, at the same time studying at university. In the Chamber this person took the only seat that has control on the speaking of all members. It's not the Speaker's seat. It's not the Premier's seat. It's higher than those. Just look up and see. All of us can see up there.

After university study this person decided to join the Clerk's office. Later this person decided to join the government's team to assist the Government House Leader. This person is Mr. David Gillies.

David was born to Mr. Fred Gillies and Mrs. Jean Stock. David has two brothers, Darcy Gillies and Jordy Gillies, and one sister, Lisa Mackowetzky. David is married to Lorraine Chay, and their family includes Dr. Reid Wiest, living in Calgary with his wife, Beth, and their young son, Thane, and John Wiest, living in High River with his wife, Andrea, and their young son, Hunter David.

David Gillies is a hard-working person very dedicated to the democratic system. Through his work this legislative agenda sails smoothly through the parliamentary process.

May I ask all members to join me to recognize and thank David for his dedication and his work to keep our parliamentary democratic system strong to serve the interests of Albertans.

U of A Pandas Hockey Team

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, across Canada and around much of the world interest in women's ice hockey is surging, and the University of Alberta Pandas are helping lead the way. On February 28, 2004, the Pandas once again claimed the Canada West championship.

The accomplishments of the Pandas' ice hockey team are amazing. This weekend was their sixth Canada West championship in the last seven years. They won every one of the 20 games they played in the regular season. Including playoffs, they have now won 32 consecutive games.

In six seasons the Pandas have won three CIS national championships. Not surprisingly, head coach, Howie Draper, has won several coach of the year awards. The Pandas will head to the national championships, hosted by McGill from March 12 to 14, as the number one seed.

I invite all MLAs to join me in wishing the Pandas success at the national championships and congratulating the achievements of this wonderful team.

Calendar of Special Events

The Speaker: Hon. members, since this is the first day of March, let me just draw to the attention of all hon. members that March is the following: Help Fight Liver Disease Month, National Kidney Health Month, National Nutrition Month, National Epilepsy Month, Learning Disabilities Month, Red Cross Month, Kidney Foundation Door-to-door Campaign Month, Canadian Liver Foundation Spring for Daisies Campaign.

February 28 to March 7 is National Engineering Week. March and April together are Hop for Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada months. March 1 to April 30 is Easter Seal Mail Campaign.

March 1 to March 5 is the National Social Work Week. March 1 to March 7 is Pharmacists Awareness Week. March 1 to March 17 is Give a Buck for Luck Shamrock Campaign for the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada. March 3 to March 6 is Canadian Music Week. March 5 is the World Day of Prayer. March 5 to 21 is Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie. March 7 to 13 is International Women's Week. March 7 to 13 is also National Dental Assistants Recognition Week. March 8 is International Women's Day. March 8 is also the United Nations Day for Women's Rights and International Peace. March 8 is also Commonwealth Day. March 12 to March 19 is Canadian Agricultural Safety Week. March 12 to 29 is also Asthma and Allergies Door-to-Door Campaign. March 14 to March 20 is National Farm Safety Week; March 17, St. Patrick's Day; March 19, St. Joseph's Day; March 20, Journée internationale de la francophonie; March 21, International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. March 21 is World Poetry Day. March 21 to March 28 is the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples Struggling against Racism and Racial Discrimination. March 21 to March 28 is also Social Work Week. March 22 is the World Day for Water. March 22 to March 27 is Daffodil Days for the Canadian Cancer Society. March 23 is World Meteorological Day. March 24 is World Tuberculosis Day. March 27 is World Theatre Day.

I thought all hon. members would like to be brought up.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Bill 206

Alberta Wheat and Barley Test Market Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Hlady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce Bill 206, the Alberta Wheat and Barley Test Market Amendment Act, 2004.

This bill will provide for the automatic establishment of a 10-year Alberta test market for wheat and barley if the governments of Alberta and Canada do not reach an agreement for the establishment of a 10-year test market by a date set by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. This bill will provide all free-enterprising and hard-working Alberta farmers the opportunity to sell their wheat and barley outside the control of the Canada Wheat Board. It will provide them with a ray of economic hope and a level playing field with farmers in Ontario, who already have a choice. Mr. Speaker, it will allow the added-value economy due to wheat and barley to be re-established and encouraged to grow in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise and table on behalf of my hon. colleague for Edmonton-Highlands one document titled Consolidated Beef Industry Action Plan: Actions for Industry if Borders Remain Closed. This report claims that Alberta packers have seen . . .

The Speaker: It's okay, hon. member; we just table it these days.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings. The first is a letter from the Interim Leader of the Official Opposition to the Premier, and this is recommending the implementation of a stricter new policy on expenses.

The second tabling is on the rules that were implemented by Premier Ernie Eves in Ontario.

Thank you.

Bill 202
Environmental Protection and Enhancement
(Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004

[Adjourned debate February 23: Dr. Taylor]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Lord: Thank you and good afternoon, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to be able to join the debate on Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. As we have heard previously during this debate, Bill 202 would, if passed and proclaimed, require gas stations, fuel trucks, and petrochemical terminals to be equipped with stage 1 vapour recovery systems by 2014. This would be done in order to reduce emissions of volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, which are a factor in low-level ozone, as well as carcinogenic hydrocarbons, which are known to cause cancer and other serious illnesses in addition to fouling up the air we breathe.

I have given this issue a good deal of thought, and before I tell you what my conclusion is, I'd like to take a few moments to explain the reasons why I arrived at the conclusion that I did. One of the most pressing issues of our time, Mr. Speaker, is the quality of our environment. In recent years this Legislature has grappled with a variety of measures to enhance Alberta's environment, ranging from how to safeguard our clean water supply to how to handle chemical spills and how to preserve and improve air quality. We do this not just because Albertans want us to protect the environment but because it is the right thing to do.

Doing the right thing when it comes to the environment, however, is certainly not always as straightforward and simple as it might seem. There are always many competing and also beneficial interests to consider out there along with various players, who each have their own set of issues and concerns. Sometimes you may even get a short-term gain in one area but only if accompanied by the expense of a long-term pain somewhere else. In other situations a little short-term pain in one area might actually be a good thing because it may result in a larger overall gain further down the road. So all decisions involve trade-offs, and when making such decisions, we always have to be mindful of our province's economic growth and health.

We are very fortunate in this regard, Mr. Speaker, because in the course of the last 10 or 12 years the Alberta economy has not only recovered from being burdened by significant debts and budget deficits, but also the province has gained both a national and an international reputation as one of Canada's economic powerhouses. We can be very proud of the fact that in spite of many upheavals to the world economy Alberta has weathered a number of economic storms, and the state of our economy remains strong. We are in a position that is the envy of every other Canadian jurisdiction.

Being in such a position clearly puts us in a better position to be able to do a lot more in other areas, such as protecting our environment, from what would otherwise have been the case. In other words, a strong oil and gas industry and thriving overall economy actually puts us in a much better financial position to work on things like improving our environment compared to what our position would have been with a weak industry and a weak economy.

It has taken much time and effort, however, to get to our current position of strength, and it also took a great deal of sacrifice on the part of Albertans to get here. It is thanks to Albertans' willingness to sacrifice and Albertans' hard work that we are able to enjoy such a high standard of living today. For this reason, Mr. Speaker, it is vital that the policies we set and follow are those which will not harm or in any way reverse the economic progress we have made since the early 1990s.

Of course, on the other hand, we must always take the necessary steps and precautions to ensure that we do as little damage to the environment as possible when creating this economic growth and that if any damage does have to occur, we use the economic gains that have been created to later mitigate or restore what was damaged back to its original or perhaps even an improved state.

Throughout the world society has come a long way and has made significant progress in recognizing the impact of our actions and policies on the environment over the years. There was a time here, and not too long ago at that, and still is, in fact, in many places in the world when the environment was given little, if any, thought, and much needless damage was being done. Factories were able to spew toxic emissions into the air or water, mining operations were carried out without regard for what would happen once operations ceased, and in general we human beings did not pay much attention to the well-being of the thousands of other species occupying the planet.

By the middle of the 20th century, however, a collective consciousness concerning the environment was well underway across the world. We have come to realize the importance of preserving rain forests and water systems. We know also that finding alternative sources of fuel makes for both good policy and for a healthier environment. Win/win situations between economic development and the environment are possible more often than many people may realize.

There is no doubt that environmental awareness is growing and is becoming one of our most important political issues. Both here at home and elsewhere in our country and around the world laws and regulations have been enacted to preserve and safeguard the environment. We are, in other words, trying to find ways to improve our standard of living, and we now recognize that this standard includes improving the quality of our environment.

Some may still ask why. Why do we need to preserve the environment, and why should we care? Well, as simple as it is to ask these questions, they're not so simple to answer. Of course, there are some responses that are obvious and straightforward. We need to preserve the environment because others will come after us: our children. Also, it is a well-known fact that a good environment is healthy for us in many ways. Green hospitals, where you go to reduce stress, is how some people refer to our natural park systems and the great special places that we have created through Alberta, a program that I personally have been excited to have played a small role in as chair of Alberta parks and special places. The bottom line is that we should care about the environment simply because it is the right thing to do.

Perhaps the right question to ask is not why we should care about the environment, because I am sure that we all care about the environment, but rather: how should we go about caring for it? Developing policies willy-nilly out of the air based on bad facts is not good government. Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, it's not even a matter of bad facts but, rather, a lack of facts, and therefore jumping to conclusions, that has the danger of inspiring draconian laws and legislation that simply may not do quite what they were intended to do and may even be counterintuitively counterproductive. So we must be careful to ensure that we do not pass any bad or unnecessary legislation that may have large, negative, unintended consequences.

So we must ask questions of the proposed bill before us. Are the volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, that the stage 1 vapour recovery systems aim to harness a problem? It would seem that, yes, they do pose several problems for us. It has been established that they contribute to the formation of smog and, as a result, affect the quality of the air that we breathe.

As well, fuel vapours contain hydrocarbons, which are known carcinogens. Benzene and other hydrocarbons can cause among other things several different forms of leukemia and other blood disorders and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, the kind of cancer that hockey great Mario Lemieux battled and successfully overcame in 1993.

Quite clearly, Mr. Speaker, the VOCs and hydrocarbons do present a problem. There can be no question about that. So what should or could be done about this, and at what costs and trade-offs to other important considerations should we examine?

Well, for starters it is clear that a lot is already being done to deal with this problem, so no one should feel that it is being ignored by any means. In our own province, for instance, most new gas stations built by Petro-Canada since 1997 were built using stage 1 vapour recovery plumbing. Moreover, all major automobile manufacturers furnish the cars they build with a vapour absorption system in order to reduce the amount of vapours that escapes during a refuelling.

These are but two examples that show that efforts are already well underway to curtail the VOC and hydrocarbon emissions. What is perhaps even more important is that they show examples of how responsible businesses have already taken it upon themselves to address this issue, which is perceived by many people to be a very real problem.

This government has always believed that business performance will be optimized when the government takes a hands-off approach and leaves the private sector alone. As a government we are often hesitant to step in and tell businesses what they can or cannot do, and in my view this is as it should be except perhaps in special circumstances.

In spite of the lack of legislation in this area we are already seeing the private sector taking steps to address this issue, which has become a cause for concern. Unfortunately, not all businesses always behave so responsibly. Not at all. We all know that with some frequency government reluctantly must step in to regulate or enforce legislation in order that particular business conduct not be allowed to adversely affect Albertans and our environment. We often agree that an irresponsible business should not be able to profit at the expense of other businesses or the environment when the other companies are showing more responsibility. So sometimes we are called upon to level the playing field.

The facts are that petrochemical refineries in Alberta must be approved, regulated, and certified under the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act. However, stage 1 vapour recovery has never been legislated in Alberta. Perhaps one reason why is that smog has never really been an issue in Alberta. During 2000-2003 the air quality index showed Alberta as having 97 per cent good days, and the rest, 11 days, were all fair. So we don't yet have a big problem in this area, and much has already been done about what problem we do have. However, I worry about that level playing field I spoke of, and I worry about responsible companies not being rewarded for having already acted and less responsible companies being rewarded for not acting.

Thus, Mr. Speaker, I will support the bill before us on that basis. I'd like to congratulate my colleague from Edmonton-Norwood for both his intent and his initiative in bringing this bill forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. I should say at the very outset that I will support this bill in principle.

The bill is a good attempt in the right direction to seek and put in place measures to help control vapours which pollute the environment and also have negative health effects. So not only is the issue controlling emissions that will help us control the amount of smog in and around our communities, but also if the vapour control equipment is put in place, then that helps in a preventive way with respect to the relative health of Albertans. So the bill has this intent, and it deserves the support of this House.

I have a concern, Mr. Speaker, about the length of time that the bill allows for enforcement of the measures proposed in this bill for the installation of vapour control equipment. The bill allows 10 years, starting January 2005 to the end of the year 2014, for operators, companies, businesses to comply with the requirements of this bill. That to me is an unacceptably long period of time. The enforcement and compliance with the provisions of the bill can be and should be required to be in place to be completed in the next three to five years. I think that would be a long enough time.

To allow for 10 years for this compliance to happen, for the enforcement of the provisions of this bill, is to ignore the concerns of communities, neighbourhoods which are directly affected and affected on a daily basis by the release of these gasoline vapours and is not acceptable. These households, these neighbourhoods are daily affected by the negative consequences and by the threat that the release of these vapours into the atmosphere poses to their health and safety. So 10 years is much too long a period, but as I said, having expressed the reservation, the concern about the provision of the bill with respect to the 10-year period in which equipment is to be installed, I am happy to support Bill 202 and congratulate the Member for Edmonton-Norwood for having brought it forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Rocky View.

Ms Haley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to get up and address Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004.

I appreciate the sincerity with which the hon. member has brought forward this bill, but with the most honest and sincere intentions on my own part I'm unfortunately going to have to vote against this bill.

No one in this Assembly wants to harm the environment, and despite what the hon. opposition on that side of the House believes to be the exclusive domain of an opposition member, to defend the environment, my hon. colleagues and myself on this side of the aisle believe that in Alberta we need to balance the interests of Albertans with those of our surrounding environment, which means that you have to have a sustainable environment and economically viable as well. We all live here, we all must share our province, and we all care about it in ways such that none of us would ever do anything that would in any way hurt our province. Period. End of statement.

But the protection of the environment requires more consideration than interest groups and overly redundant bills. It requires, as our Minister of Environment has shown on countless occasions, a thoughtful and considerate approach. Bill 202 simply does not meet those requirements.

3:00

Mr. Bonner: That's not much support.

Ms Haley: Well, one is better than none, hon. member.

I could not agree more with the Member for Edmonton-Norwood that "leaving environmental issues until the problems stare us in the face can often lead to irreparable damage." In light of that, Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Department of Environment, in conjunction with other partners, has taken key steps to address the issue of volatile organic compound emissions.

I would like to note that the following measures have been taken to help reduce the specific source of VOC emissions. Since 1998 all new vehicles are required to install on-board refuelling vapour recovery equipment that is aimed at reducing VOC emissions. The fuel dispensing rate during vehicle refuelling has been limited to help limit fuel spills and fuel spit back. During summer months fuel vapour pressure is reduced to help lower losses of gasoline vapours. Bottom loading of gasoline products at all terminals in Alberta is utilized, which helps to reduce VOCs during filling operations. Benzene concentrations in gasoline have been reduced to less than 1 per cent by volume since 1999.

In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Council of Ministers of the Environment is working to establish a national framework to provide a plan and a strategy to set facility emission caps. It is expected that substantial reductions in air pollutant emissions will be achieved at Canada's refineries, including the three in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, it's quite a substantial list of initiatives to address a situation that accounts for less than 0.5 per cent of all VOC emissions in the province. While it should be strongly noted that the majority of emissions are from natural sources such as forest fires and vegetation, I think that the government should be congratulated for addressing the situation in such a thorough way.

Furthermore, while I readily admit that I am not an expert in chemistry, it is my understanding that atmospheric reactions that produce ozone are more sensitive to nitrogen oxide than VOCs. In other words, VOC reductions have only a small effect on ozone formation. Because the gasoline distribution sector contributes less than 0.5 per cent of the VOCs, the implementation of stage 1 controls will make little difference to ozone levels in Alberta.

So with the government already taking action on this matter and it appearing that there is no substantive benefit to the environment because of this bill, perhaps there must be another reason that we should be considering Bill 202. I note from some of the comments of other hon. members that there could be some health issues involved with this bill. The central premise of these concerns seems to be centred on the dangerous nature of the chemicals involved in gasoline and the effects that VOCs might have in their interaction with other gases.

One of those chemicals is benzene, and though there can be no doubt that benzene is a dangerous chemical causing a host of symptoms and problems for those individuals exposed to large quantities of that substance, I wish to note once again that benzene concentrations in gasoline account for less than 1 per cent by volume. Furthermore, fuel distribution in Alberta now accounts for less than 0.1 per cent of total provincial benzene emissions.

I think it goes without saying, Mr. Speaker, that individual Albertans use common sense when filling their cars and are not subjecting themselves to these chemicals en masse. It also goes without saying that part of the reason that gas stations are so open in their construction is to allow fresh air to dilute and remove any vapours that may occur during this process. It's like a car garage; it is simply common sense that you do not leave the car running with the door closed.

I wish to note how strongly I object to any allusions to how by not passing this bill, people may develop cancer or that by not supporting this bill, somehow members would be supporting endangering people's lives. What utter rubbish. I strongly disapprove of suggestions like that, and to use inflammatory comments like that in this Chamber is just ludicrous.

Albertans need not stay up nights worrying that they are going to be exposed to the serious consequences of massive exposure to benzene simply by filling up their vehicles. I hardly think that those who should be protected, like children, are being routinely exposed to situations where high quantities of gasoline are being transferred, like refilling of a gas station by a refuelling truck. Suggesting otherwise suggests a serious lack of thoughtfulness and consideration of reality.

Concerns have also been raised in this debate that the emissions of VOCs contribute to low-level ozone problems and photochemical smog. There can be no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that when a massive forest fire happens, chemicals are released into the air that can have far-ranging effects. There are times throughout the year where health alerts are issued because the smoke and chemicals in the air are troublesome for those people with respiratory problems. Others during this time face common problems such as headaches, eye irritations, coughs, and other discomforts. To my knowledge no health alert has ever been issued for these sorts of situations occurring because of a transfer of gasoline.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, with there being no major health benefits or environmental merit to this bill, I fail to see any reason why members of this House should be supportive of implementing this proposed law, especially in light of the fact that industry is already moving on this issue without the assistance of government, implementing controls and standards that are further reducing these compounds.

I received a letter, as I'm sure most members of this Chamber did, from the Canadian Petroleum Products Institute. While they cover some of the areas that I've also mentioned, one of the comments that they did make was that when we estimate what it would cost in order to do this, a number of $25 million is sort of bounced around as being possible for vapour recovery or vapour barriers. They also point out that the proclamation date on this bill is next January. You might want to keep that in mind because once you proclaim a bill, it actually becomes the law and that $25 million needs to be spent now, in the next year or two. There are a lot of very small businesses out there, and this would cripple them.

Mr. Speaker, I can't emphasize strongly enough: I really sincerely hope that we defeat this bill. Thank you for the opportunity to speak to it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to speak in favour of Bill 202, sponsored by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood. I think that this bill has a lot of good intentions, and I think it's one that we should all carefully consider.

Our environment is our most precious resource, and I think we should work a little harder to protect it. That is one of the reasons why I respect this idea of Bill 202. The entire purpose of this bill is to reduce harmful gas vapour emissions that escape into our atmosphere, which can cause health concerns.

Mr. Speaker, reducing harmful emissions from escaping gas vapours may seem like a trivial thing to do, but it is something that can cause a lot of different problems. First of all, it is widely known that escaping vapours can contribute to smog problems.

Now, I don't know if any of the members have risen in the morning here in Edmonton and seen the smog that has settled over the city. I live on the 20th floor of a high-rise on the river edge overlooking the north part of the city. Every day there's a heavy layer of yellow-brown smog hanging over the city. [interjections] Well, it is that that has me worried, including that one across the way.

Smog can contribute to many different health problems. It can affect the way people live because they have to figure out how they can best breathe. I think that says a lot about our society, when we have to worry about whether it is safe to breathe outside or not.

Now, I'm not saying that pollution in Alberta has come to that. In fact, it's not even close. That smog I mentioned earlier is usually burned off and gone before lunch. But in other cities you can really see how pollution has affected the people of the city. I am a frequent traveller to Asia, particularly China, and people routinely walk around with masks over their faces. Of course, some are trying to avoid diseases, but for the most part they are trying to live through the thick pollution that has become part of their daily lives. In fact, I'm usually quite amused by western visitors there who are out jogging in the morning in that very thick smog.

This is why I think we should support Bill 202, not because our air is thick with pollutants that will harm our lungs but because it will prevent that from occurring. I think that the members present today should look at this bill as a proactive measure. I look at this bill as our government tackling a problem before it becomes a more serious problem for Albertans. Look at it as a first step in eliminating some of the contributing factors to smog in this province.

Stage 1 vapour control devices are not uncommon. Many different companies have voluntarily put this recovery system on their equipment to do their part for their environment. As well, there are a few other jurisdictions throughout North America that have legislated something similar to what Bill 202 is asking for today. One of these jurisdictions is the U.S. I would like to point out to members that nearly every single major metropolitan area in the U.S. has stage 1 vapour recovery legislation or regulations due to the increase in smog problems in American cities. However, if you look at this in the same light as something I said earlier, they were legislated as a reaction to the smog and health problems, not to prevent them.

As well, if one should look at some of the other provinces in Canada, one would see that B.C. and Ontario have some sort of legislation to deal with smog. In British Columbia the government legislated it so that every service station, bulk plant, cargo truck, and terminal in lower mainland B.C. was equipped with stage 1 vapour recovery systems. This action was taken in 1995. The same sort of thing happened in Ontario in 1996. The Ontario government passed legislation requiring that all service stations, bulk plants, cargo trucks, and terminals be equipped with stage 1 vapour recovery systems in the southern Ontario corridor.

But, again, the problem with B.C. and Ontario is that they legislated this action because of the large pollution problem that was being experienced in both areas. In B.C. they were having all sorts of problems with pollution in the lower Fraser Valley area, so as a reaction they equipped everything they could with recovery systems that helped reduce the pollution. In Ontario it was the same thing. The Windsor/Quebec corridor had horrible pollution problems, so as a reaction to the problems, the government had to legislate systems that would be a solution to an increasing problem.

Mr. Speaker, there's nothing wrong with a government being a reactionary machine. However, when it comes to the environment, sometimes being reactionary is doing something when it's too late. It is up to us to take a step forward and begin tackling future problems head-on because I have no doubt in my mind that this province is going to grow like it has in the past five years and pollution is going to become a significant problem. I like the fact that the Member for Edmonton-Norwood has decided to be proactive and address this problem. This is our opportunity to do something now and be a leader while doing it.

I mentioned Ontario and B.C., but what I failed to mention is that the legislation they have passed only deals with certain areas within the province; it does not encompass the entire land. That is what is different about Bill 202: it encompasses the entire province. It makes sure that all entities that need this type of recovery system get it. Bill 202 makes us a leader in this country.

So it is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I will close my remarks. Bill 202 is a proactive solution to a problem that is growing. I urge all hon. members to join me in support of Bill 202. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to contribute to the debate surrounding Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. I commend the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood for bringing this bill forward on behalf of his constituents.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta is blessed with an abundance of natural beauty and pristine wild-land habitats. Albertans enjoy this beauty on a daily basis and understand that sound environmental practices are essential to preserve this landscape. As representatives of Albertans, it is our right and our duty to ensure that proper legislation is in place to protect the awesome natural spaces in our province.

The government has not taken this responsibility lightly. Indeed, good environmental stewardship has been a cornerstone of our government for the past decade. Our government has equipped our park wardens, police officers, transportation constables, and other agencies with the tools that they need to ensure the preservation of our environment. These acts and regulations govern practices concerning everything from the handling and disposal of pesticides to the requirements that must be met for an oil pipeline to be built.

Mr. Speaker, I can well remember my days in the oil patch jeeping pipes and taping them to ensure a permanent seal. Being from oil country, we know and apply environmental regulations on a daily basis. Government strategies outlined in the throne speech show our government's continued dedication to good environmental practices and to planning for the future. The creation of a water council and expanded research into alternative energy sources speak louder than words that the Alberta government takes its commitment to the environment seriously.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood is sponsoring legislation that would add to these measures that are currently in place to protect the health of our environment. As we have heard from other members, Bill 202 aims to tackle the problem of gasoline vapours that escape from tanker trucks and storage tanks during the refuelling process. These vapours do contain harmful hydrocarbons such as benzene and other contaminants such as volatile organic compounds, or VOCs. As I have previously mentioned, preserving the health of the environment has been of the utmost importance to our government.

Another issue that is of the highest priority is preserving the health of Albertans. This year alone our province will spend in excess of $7 billion providing health care to Albertans. No one can doubt how important health is to the government or to Albertans. This is why it is so important to recognize the essence of Bill 202. Benzene, one of the chemicals found in fuel vapours, is a known carcinogen, and VOCs cause the formation of ground level ozone. Both of these chemicals are detrimental to Albertans' health. By limiting the amount of these chemicals being released into the air, the health risks that Albertans are exposed to would be reduced. We're not talking about harmless vapours here; this is serious stuff.

Mr. Speaker, other jurisdictions have taken steps to pass legislation similar to Bill 202. The Windsor to Quebec City corridor in eastern Canada and the Fraser Valley in British Columbia have both enacted legislation concerning the use of stage 1 vapour recovery systems. Now, anyone that has visited these areas is aware of the level of pollution present and the regularity with which smog will form.

I know we don't have those same pollution levels here, but Bill 202 attempts to deal with the issue of airborne pollutants in Alberta before they reach a level that is insurmountable. The ambient air quality in Alberta is good the majority of the time. The Environmental Protection and Enhancement Amendment Act will help our air quality remain at the high level that it is today.

As with most problems, the longer you ignore it, the more difficult it becomes to deal with. The other jurisdictions that have passed this legislation have realized that the hard way. The problems that they experienced with smog and air pollutants have fully matured, and they are now fighting a much larger problem. Bill 202 could deal with the problem of airborne contaminants from fuel vapour entering the atmosphere while it is still in its infant stage. We can learn from the delays of other areas so that we are not caught in the same situation.

Mr. Speaker, there have been concerns raised about the financial burden that this bill will bring to certain Albertans, and I am concerned too. I understand that the total cost of implementing the measures suggested by Bill 202 has been estimated at $25 million. To put this into perspective, it costs just over $20 million to keep our health care system running for one day. Now, this being a leap year, it was a particularly expensive year for health care. A one-time expense of $25 million in that light does not seem too high to help protect the health of the environment and ourselves, and there's a possibility that we could find some innovative ways to phase this in or to possibly call on the federal government to help.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank you for the opportunity to share my thoughts on this matter, and I'm anxious to hear other comments as this debate continues. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to speak to Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. First, I would like to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood for bringing forward this bill. It is an attempt to improve the long-term health of our environment and, of course, of our citizens.

I agree with the goal of the bill, which is to reduce emissions of volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, as well as carcinogenic hydrocarbons – and if you can't pronounce it, it just can't be good – which occur in part when we fill the tanks of our vehicles. There is little doubt in my mind that government needs to be cognizant of the environmental damage and serious health concerns that are associated with such pollutants. Benzene is the most potent carcinogen found in fuel vapour and is a danger to human health. It is released into the air during the refuelling process of the underground or above-ground storage tanks at gas stations.

At many locations in the United States and the lower mainland of British Columbia and even southern Ontario legislation has been created to require all service stations to be equipped with stage 1 vapour recovery systems to combat smog and air quality problems. Obviously, this approach has been part of a solution in other jurisdictions as well.

The member's attempt to take a proactive approach towards this issue is admirable, rather than implementing such a regulation, like these other jurisdictions did, after the problem occurred. However, Mr. Speaker, I cannot lend my support to this bill.

Requiring all gasoline service stations, fuel cargo trucks, and terminals to install stage 1 vapour recovery systems by 2014 comes with a huge economic price tag. I do not believe that the costs that would be associated with this mandatory switch reflect appropriately the amount of environmental improvement we would see in the province of Alberta. There are other ways of dealing with this problem, avenues that the Alberta government has already undertaken. We would be better served by placing our resources and efforts behind more proven methods of reducing emissions into the air.

I also cannot support Bill 202 because legislation is not warranted in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, the United States, Ontario, and even British Columbia were forced into implementing this measure for reasons of geographic location. They have been deemed, in quotations, ozone nonattainment areas and have a history of producing incidences of smog formation during the summer months. According to the Department of Environment's annual report for 2002-2003, the air quality index report in Alberta was good 97 per cent of the time. This is partly because Alberta's physical location and characteristics do not substantially contribute to the problem of smog formation.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I believe that most gas stations will undergo these changes without legislation as they replace their tanks in the future. In Alberta since 1997 most new gas stations have been constructed with a vapour recovery system. This makes up 27 per cent of the total number of tanks already. In this time frame we saw a significant improvement in the percentage of gas tanks that include stage 1 vapour recovery components.

The industry has already recognized its responsibility to improve the equipment it uses for its respective businesses. Petro-Canada, for example, uses tank equipment with vapour recovery technology when replacing all old tanks. This trend suggests that future improvements in this area will be made without government intervention.

It is also important to note, Mr. Speaker, that only a very small percentage of VOC emissions result from the gasoline distribution sector. In fact, this portion of the industry is only responsible for half a per cent of the estimated VOC emissions in the province. The majority of the emissions are produced by naturally occurring phenomena such as forest fires and vegetation. The fact that the transfer of fuel is such a minuscule portion of VOC emissions coupled with the fact that the changes contained in Bill 202 are destined to occur regardless leads me to believe that Bill 202 is simply unnecessary legislation.

To illustrate this point further, according to Environment Canada, 753 tonnes of VOC emissions are produced in Alberta each year from dry cleaning. This is nearly 8 per cent of the amount produced by fuel marketing, as it is estimated at 9,678 tonnes. Is it necessary to take action on something as innocuous as the dry cleaning industry? I suggest not. Proscribed burns in the province account for 5,808 tonnes of Alberta's VOC emissions, or over one-half of the amount produced by fuel marketing. Do we need to change these procedures? To put this in perspective even further, forest fires dwarf all other categories when it comes to VOC emissions, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to take this opportunity today to talk about some of the initiatives currently being undertaken by the provincial and federal governments surrounding this issue. I believe that these initiatives better address the problem of VOC emissions as well as carcinogenic hydrocarbons. The Canadian Council of Ministers of the Environment is attempting to provide a methodology and framework to reduce VOC emissions that occur in Canada's refineries. The National Framework for Petroleum Refinery Emission Reductions will expand on Alberta's success in making our air cleaner.

It is also a good example of directing efforts where the most good can be done. For example, in 1995, Mr. Speaker, the total industrial and mobile industrial emission of benzene and ambient benzene in the province was 11,962 tonnes. Following the initiatives outlined in the ratified Canada-wide standards created by the Canadian Council of Ministers of the Environment, the Alberta government focused on reducing emissions in three different sectors: natural gas hydrators, petroleum refineries, and chemical manufacturing plants. Overall emissions from industry and mobile sources in Alberta have been reduced by 50 per cent during this time period as well.

Closer to the gas station question emissions are being reduced in many different ways. The rate at which fuel is dispensed through a gas pump has limited fuel spills and fuel spit back. During the hotter months fuel vapour pressure is reduced to lower the loss of gasoline vapours. The number of above-ground storage tanks in Alberta has been reduced. Bottom loading of gasoline at all terminals in Alberta reduces fuel vapours during filling operations, and the reduction of benzene concentration in gasoline to less than 1 per cent means that fuel distribution in Alberta now accounts for less than 0.1 per cent of total provincial benzene emissions. It is important to add, Mr. Speaker, that vehicles built after 1998 require on-board stage 2 vapour recovery.

Much effort has gone towards resolving the problem of releasing VOC emissions and carcinogenic hydrocarbons at fuelling stations. In addition to the fact that VOC reductions have only a small effect on ozone formation and that the gasoline distribution sector contributes less than 0.4 per cent of VOCs, making stage 1 vapour recovery mandatory seems like overkill.

Mr. Speaker, I have already outlined that the industry is slowly moving towards a stage 1 vapour recovery system on its own. As new gas stations are built, this technology is being implemented anyhow. As old tanks are being replaced, this technology is being implemented as well. To put a timeline on some small business owners to make these upgrades is simply unfair. Independent gas stations may be seriously put back when they receive a $10,000 to $30,000 bill for having their service station retrofitted.

Implementation of stage 1 vapour recovery controls in Alberta would cost in excess of $25 million. That cost would be initially placed on businesses but would eventually be placed onto consumers as well. Industry is already moving in this direction, and legislation would only hurt Albertans.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

In the end, Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 would have little impact on the environment, especially when it comes to the air we breathe as Albertans. The burden that business owners within the gasoline distribution industry would have to bear far outweighs the positive effect of Bill 202 and the effect that it could produce. Therefore, I cannot give my support to this particular initiative.

I would like to conclude by saying that the intentions of this bill are honourable, and I believe that when it comes to our environment, it is important to have these discussions, especially at the government level, but at this point I would urge all members of this Assembly to not support this particular bill.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mr. Ouellette: Good afternoon, and thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and join the debate on Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood. As co vice-chair of Climate Change Central I find it important that I rise this afternoon and discuss Bill 202 and its relation to the strategic plans and goals outlined through Climate Change Central.

What is being proposed through Bill 202 is part of what Climate Change Central is already working towards at a sustainable pace for all parties involved. The government of Alberta recognized back in 1998 that global climate change is a serious problem and responded by forming Canada's first committee concerned specifically with taking action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Climate Change Central is a unique public/private partnership that promotes the development of innovative responses to global climate change and its impacts. Climate Change Central builds links and relationships between businesses, governments, and other stakeholders in Alberta interested in pursuing greenhouse gas reduction initiatives.

Climate change is one of the key environmental and economic challenges for Canada and the world in the new millennium, and Albertans have proven themselves leaders in developing creative solutions to climate change. Climate Change Central is born of this leadership. Through accomplishing the goals and following our established strategic plans, we will ensure that innovative solutions continue to accelerate Alberta's environmental economic opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta as an acknowledged world leader has achieved zero net greenhouse gas emissions while enhancing the province's economic performance, quality of life, and ability to adapt to climate change effects. As we have heard throughout the debate concerning Bill 202, volatile organic compounds are emitted from a number of sources, and the proposed legislation would only target 0.5 per cent of those emissions.

Climate Change Central is taking a much broader, vaster look at Alberta's environment, and we are attacking the threats to Albertans and the safety of their environment on a much larger scale than is proposed in this legislation. I commend the hon. member for bringing this issue to the attention of the Assembly and all Albertans, but I believe that provincial policies that are already in place are far more effective at accomplishing these goals than the regulation proposed in Bill 202. One of the main reasons for this is because Climate Change Central is a private/public partnership, which means it is a co-ordinated, collaborative partnership amongst Albertans and with world-wide stakeholders.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is also important to acknowledge that much of Alberta's industry is dependent on the province's natural resources, and we have to keep this in mind as we tackle these issues. It is necessary that a balance remains and that all parties affected are consulted, resulting in a consensus on how to effect the most positive change while maintaining a strong economy.

The strategic plan provided by Climate Change Central is a road map for transforming our mandate into reality. I encourage all members not to support Bill 202, not because we aren't concerned with the environment but because the proposed targets are already part of a larger plan through Climate Change Central, one that takes into account the well-being of all Albertans, the environment, as well as the province's economic performance.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and good afternoon. I welcome the opportunity to join debate on Bill 202, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement (Vapour Control Equipment) Amendment Act, 2004. As we've heard previously, Bill 202 would, if passed and proclaimed, require gas stations, fuel trucks, and petrochemical terminals to be equipped with stage 1 vapour recovery systems by 2014.

There's no question that one of the most pressing issues of our time is the environment, and in recent years this Legislature has grappled with a variety of measures to enhance Alberta's environment ranging from safeguards surrounding our clean water supply to how to handle all chemicals and how to preserve and improve air quality. We do this not just because Albertans want us to protect the environment but because it's the right thing to do. However, doing the right thing is not as simple as it seems sometimes. The key is to balance the benefits against all of the associated costs of the environmental initiative.

On one hand, we have to be mindful of our province's economic growth and health. It's a well-known fact, Mr. Speaker, that in the course of the last 10 or 12 years the Alberta economy has not only recovered from being burdened by significant debt and deficits, but also the province has gained both a national and international reputation as Canada's economic powerhouse, all the while developing and ensuring that Alberta's industries and businesses work and grow under some of the most stringent and responsible environmental legislation in the world. For this reason it is vital that the policies we set and follow are those which will not harm or even reverse the progress we have made since the early 1990s: solid growth and sound environmental policy.

On the other hand, we must always take the necessary steps and precautions to make sure that we do as little damage to the environment as possible and that if that damage occurs, we can restore it to its original state. I will, Mr. Speaker, admit that sometimes the restoration appears to do more damage than the problem.

We have come quite a way and made significant progress in recognizing the impact our actions and policies have on the environment. There was a time not too long ago when very little thought was given to the environment, and as a result of this, tremendous damage has been done to many facets of our environment. At the time I think we thought that humans were the only important species on the planet. By the middle of the 20th century, however, a collective consciousness concerning the environment was well underway. We learned about DDT, lead, sulphur dioxide and other airborne particles, and the ozone. We realized the importance of preserving the rain forest, and we know that finding alternative sources of fuel makes for good policy and a healthier environment.

Thus, much like the proverbial stone that doesn't gather any moss, there was little stopping the environmental awareness that was gaining ground. Both here at home and elsewhere in our country and around the world laws and regulations have been enacted to preserve and safeguard the environment. We are, in other words, trying to find ways to maintain our standard of living and improve the quality of our environment. We owe it to future generations to leave the Earth in at least as good a shape as we found it, particularly because we don't own the environment; we're merely its stewards for the time that we are here.

So, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the right question to ask is not why we should care about the environment but how. Developing policies and passing laws that may or may not have the desired impact is tantamount to bad governance and a breach of public trust. Bad facts make bad laws. No matter how well intended the initiative might otherwise be, sometimes it's not even a matter of bad facts making bad laws but the lack of facts that result in laws that may not quite do what they were intended to do, and so it is, in my opinion, with Bill 202. I have no concerns at all about the hon. member's intentions. To the contrary, I know that the spirit in which he introduced the bill is commendable.

Quite clearly, Mr. Speaker, the VOCs and hydrocarbons may present a problem, but that is not the question. There can, however, be a question about whether Bill 202 would contribute significantly towards reducing the presence of these emissions. Based on the available research, I do not believe that Bill 202 would yield outcomes where a net reduction of these pollutants would be achieved at a responsible price. It's simply a question of balance.

This government has always believed that business performance will be optimized when the government takes a collective and constructive approach, when there is a legal and regulatory framework established over the years by successive governments on the federal, the provincial, and the civic levels. We should continue to work carefully and responsibly with all stakeholders when developing legislation. Aside from the fact that petrochemical refineries in Alberta must be approved, regulated, and certified under the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act, stage 1 vapour recovery has never been legislated in Alberta.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, while I very much appreciate the hon. member's intentions and applaud him for drawing attention to the issue of the VOCs by introducing Bill 202, I fail to see that the bill would provide additional remedies to an already recognized problem. I believe that the cost to Alberta citizens that would be associated with the bill would far surpass any benefit, the amount of which could most definitely be put to better use. For these reasons I cannot support Bill 202.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further speakers, I would call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Norwood to close debate.

Mr. Masyk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, holy smoke, I've sure got a lot of whining to do to convince a lot of people that this is the right thing to do. I should start by saying that anybody who is not supporting it is not breaking the law, because the Canadian Constitution says that we have the right to be wrong. So to those who don't wish to support the bill, you're all right within your scope of competence.

I might have to remind hon. members of the difference between CO<sub>2</sub> and benzene. Benzene is C<sub>6</sub>H<sub>6</sub>, which is one carbon atom for one hydrogen atom, so it's like a snake chasing its tail. It goes around and around. Mr. Speaker, at the same time, when Climate Change Central was mentioned by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, it does not reflect the poisons here on ground level. Climate change has no relationship whatsoever with benzene. Benzene is a poison that poisons the very fabric of our society.

Even the Ministry of Children's Services has amended the name from fetal alcohol syndrome to fetal alcohol spectrum, and I could see another amendment by talking to that department that it should be fetal volatile organic compounds spectrum because children are being affected, they're finding out, by these compounds that are in gasoline.

Yeah, maybe we should throw a cape over industry and weigh that against health, but at the same time when we're called to be stewards of the environment and stewards of the taxpayer and do a cross-ministry analysis when we bring a bill forward, then when these are all weighed out – and I've just proclaimed myself as an expert in this field, so when an expert brings forward evidence saying that this is what needs to be done, that should be weighed out. Well, Mr. Speaker, by being an expert in this field and over members who are not experts, I have to enlighten them that passing Bill 202 is the right thing.

Mr. Speaker, I have to really commend all the members who spoke in favour of it and also the ones that spoke against it, because we're getting value out of our debates, and it puts the pressure back on me to reiterate to the ones that spoke against it to try and educate them. I don't have a chalkboard or a chunk of chalk on me to go through what's needed, and maybe I erred in this area, thinking that wisdom would prevail, but the emphasis is on me, ultimately, to get this bill passed.

I have it in my hand. It says "bill" because it's not passed yet, but it's pretty skinny, and I'm not asking for too much. At the same time it's cheap. It's only $20 million. It's expensive on one side, Mr. Speaker, because it's going to save lives. It's going to change the quality of lives, and it means that we're going to move into the next century. When fossil fuels become obsolete or at one point where you can't give them away, then how are we going to introduce nuclear energy? At some point in the centuries to come we're going to have to face nuclear energy. So if you can't face and correct things as you're using a product today, how in the world are you going to go into the future?

Mr. Speaker, on that note I'd like to ask all hon. members on all sides to support this bill and at the same time not to mix up, from the minister, who's shaking his head at me, the difference between CO<sub>2</sub> and benzene. We're not trying to change the climate temperatures. We're trying to make the ground-level ozone down here on Earth – as a matter of fact, on A-Channel on Wednesday it was ground-level ozone, the smog in the air, that contributed to the fog, which was actually smog, and it rhymes. That's what it was.

So as the population is growing, at that rate in 2014 it's not going to be the same amount of people here today. We're not going to have the same amount of gas stations. The reason I took the liberty to extend it to 2014 is out of the kindness of my heart. When people are going to replace the gas stations, it's going to be, coincidentally, the same time that the bill is going to engage. Now, it doesn't get any better than that.

An Hon. Member: It doesn't really?

Mr. Masyk: No, not really.

These tanks have a shelf life, so after starting the shelf life – that's why the timing is essential.

So, Mr. Speaker, I look around at all my colleagues that are elected to do the right thing and be good stewards and vote in favour of this bill. Thank you very much.

[Motion for second reading of Bill 202 lost]

Bill 203

Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise in the Assembly today to sponsor and begin the discussion and debate for Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004. At this time I would like to thank the Member for Calgary-Lougheed for introducing Bill 203 on my behalf last Thursday, February 26, 2004. I would also like to thank Andrea Hennig, researcher, for her diligence and interest in the development of Bill 203 and to all individual researchers involved in developing speaking notes for second reading today.

The intent of Bill 203 is to give Albertans the informed and mutually agreed choice whether to split their Canada pension plan benefits following relationship breakdown of marital or common-law spouses. Bill 203 amends both the Domestic Relations Act and the Family Law Act in order to allow for spousal agreements, agreements made between married or common-law partners upon divorce or separation, which would waive the right to or interest in any future division of a pension entitlement under the Canada pension plan.

Mr. Speaker, in introducing and discussing Bill 203, it is very important to provide some background information on Canadian pension plan credit splitting. The CPP began some 38 years ago, in 1966, as a compulsory contributory program that would provide benefits in the event of retirement, disability, or death of a contributor. The CPP records your contributions over the years as pension credits. When you apply for a benefit, the CPP uses these credits to determine your entitlement. Generally, the more credits you have built up, the higher your benefits or the larger your CPP cheque each month.

CPP benefits can be divided between spouses when a marriage or relationship dissolves. Any pension credits that were accumulated during the relationship will be equally divided if an application is filed to the CPP by an ex-spouse. This division pertains regardless if one or both parties pay into the CPP and does not account for differences in contributions paid into the pension plan. The credits are added together and then equally split between parties. It is this division that is referred to as credit splitting. Mr. Speaker, I would like to stress that the credit split only pertains to those credits built up during the time span that the couple was together.

According to CPP legislation amendments made in 1987, the credit splitting provision became mandatory. However, automatic splitting of CPP benefits is not occurring, and the correct documentation still needs to be received by the federal minister responsible for the CPP Act in order for ex-spouses or separated couples to split their credits. To date there have been no mechanisms employed to trigger this automatic split. Furthermore, the CPP does not disclose a projected time frame or limit or an implementation process for when the automatic split will occur.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 is based on the premise that divorcing spouses and separating partners are in the best position to make decisions about the division of their assets, investments, and pensions, including CPP credits. Traditionally most aspects of the division of family property between spouses on marriage breakdown are subject to an agreement. The resulting spousal agreements or contracts are a practical and preferred way of giving choice and allowing divorcing parties to resolve their differences. Bill 203 offers a similar approach with regard to CPP benefits rather than the current state of uncertainty and possible future surprises to an ex-spouse.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

In reality, the decision to split CPP credits does not have to be mutual. It can be dependent on the choice or decision of one party and does not have to consider the other's wishes. Only one of the ex-spouses needs to apply for the split. The consent of the other individual is not mandatory. The division will occur regardless if the other party objects. He or she has no mechanism in which to stop or negotiate this process. In many cases the application is filed by one party with the other individual completely unaware of the filing. It is first brought to his or her attention when he or she receives a notice in the mail explaining that his or her next CPP cheque will be divided and a portion of the benefits will be given to the ex-spouse.

Mr. Speaker, it should also be noted that there is no time limit to restrict former spouses or partners from applying for the benefit. The divorce or separation may have been settled 15 years or more previously, but if the application is filed, it will be granted. Bill 203 acknowledges that in marital or common-law relationships both spouses share in building assets and entitlements, including CPP credits. The bill recognizes the financial protection mechanism of the CPP credit-splitting program, but it also values the importance of flexibility for spouses to choose which assets or investments are most beneficial to each party when settling divorce or separation proceedings.

It is important to stress that Bill 203 is not about favouring one party over another. It does not devalue the importance of the spouse, male or female, who works inside the home to contribute to the family. Rather, this legislation simply allows couples to mutually agree on whether to split or not to split their CPP benefit during divorce negotiations and finalizing of the agreement, depending on which is in their own best interest.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that spousal agreements revolving around or that include splitting CPP benefits already take place in the province, and as a general practice separation and divorce agreements include a general waiver signed by both parties against any future claims, but a major problem lies in the validity of these waivers. Since Alberta does not have provincial opt-out legislation in place, the waiver and the agreement become void. Therefore, if an ex-spouse discovers that he or she can apply to receive a CPP benefit regardless of the terms of an existing spousal agreement or waiver, it will be granted.

In some cases spouses will even intentionally enter into spousal agreements knowing that they can later apply for credit splitting. They will have initially negotiated to give up CPP benefits in exchange for other equity or assets, but once the divorce agreement is finalized, they will then at any time in the future submit the application to receive half of the combined total of the CPP entitlement.

Mr. Speaker, another problem exists with mutually agreed divorce agreements or contracts. If the Canada pension plan should take steps to ensure the mandatory splitting of CPP credits as currently legislated, the CPP will override the actual intentions of the signing parties. All waivers could be void regardless of the parties' original wishes as stated in the agreement. Bill 203 remedies the problem of void waivers in spousal agreements. This bill provides the legislation necessary for these agreements to remain legitimate. In other words, if an automatic mechanism were to be implemented by the CPP, the agreements made by divorced or separated couples would continue to be honoured.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that some members may feel that the CPP is under federal jurisdiction and that, therefore, we shouldn't get involved. However, section 55.2 of the CPP legislation allows for provinces to opt out of the credit-splitting program if certain criteria are met. One of the provisions of section 55.2 states that spousal agreements must be allowed by provincial law. Bill 203 would provide the necessary provincial legislation to opt out and give permanent legitimacy to spousal agreements.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I would like to stress that Bill 203 is about giving Albertans clear and informed choice. It allows couples to come to a mutually agreed decision on how to best divide all of their assets rather than the federal government choosing for them at some future date. With Bill 203 in place Albertans can choose in the spousal agreement to opt out of the program or decide to split their CPP benefit, whichever they determine is in their best interests. Either way, this legislation would deal with CPP benefits up front through mutual agreement and at the time of divorce settlement.

I look forward to the discussion by my hon. colleagues on this matter. I encourage all members of this House to support Bill 203, Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, and therefore I move second reading of this bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me the opportunity to speak to Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004. I will support this bill, and I encourage each of my colleagues to do so as well.

My reasons for supporting this partly stem from the fact that I consider myself a conservative thinker. This bill places decision-making in the hands of the two individuals who choose to make a contract and, thus, takes the government out of the nuts and bolts of decision-making and places it in its proper context as a facilitator and enforcer of just contracts.

Before I get into that in a little more detail, I'd like to talk a little bit about the idea of divorce as well as the idea of placing something that is considered a social benefit inside the parameters of a divorce settlement. Divorces are not pretty. They aren't planned, and it is always a tragedy when a relationship breaks down, especially when families are involved, Mr. Speaker. But whatever the reasons for divorce they are rarely our business as a government.

So while I would agree that this government ought to make legislation that makes things easier on families, I cannot agree with those people who would suggest that we should not pass this bill because it makes divorce easier or legitimates divorce. Divorce is legitimate, and in many cases it ought to be made easy. An individual or couple has that choice, and when that choice is made, the government ought to be there to maintain a consistent system and set of rules within which the divorce proceedings take place. That is one definite benefit of Bill 203.

Furthermore, some will suggest that we shouldn't pass this bill because it takes a social benefit intended to be shared by a couple, a Canada pension plan security, and separates it within the negotiations that are part and parcel of divorce proceedings. A part of that argument is sound, and it is clear that the sponsor of the bill believes so as well. After all, the bill has as a sort of default position that Canada pension plan benefits earned during the years of marriage shall be split evenly, but importantly, Mr. Speaker, unless both sides agree to a different arrangement.

That's a good starting point because it does two things. It first affirms the value of a social program like the Canada pension plan, and second, it places agreement as the centrepiece of any change in the status quo. So if there is no agreed-upon separation of Canada pension plan benefits, the status quo remains.

However, there is a part of this argument against this bill that is somewhat suspect, especially here in Alberta. If it is argued that Canada pension plan benefits should not be split because they are part of an overall social program, then is it also the case that we ought to let overall state considerations trump an agreement between individuals even in cases when no other people or persons than the two of them making the agreement are affected?

Nobody other than the two divorcees are affected if Canada pension plan benefits are split. Nobody else's benefits are taken away from them with this bill. In fact, more people are harmed by the poor management of the Canada plan than by this bill. Because of that poor management, more and more working Canadians are being forced to pay higher and higher premiums to keep the bankrupt plan alive. If we are forcing Canadians to pay more, shouldn't we do what we can to let them do what they like with their benefits?

I would also argue, Mr. Speaker, that reopening old wounds is not beneficial to a newly separated individual trying to make the past go behind them. It is difficult enough to go through these procedures of divorce and the tragedy of a separation, then reopen that wound as a surprise, as my hon. colleague mentioned, down the road.

The Canada pension plan is not a state freebie. Somebody pays for it. In fact, every working Canadian pays for it, not only for the purpose of helping out the less fortunate but also for the purpose of saving for their own retirement and for the retirement of their spouse. I'm not the sort of person who says that working Canadians shouldn't be contributing towards the well-being of seniors, but I am the sort that believes each Canadian should have the opportunity to do with their own benefits as they see fit, and each family or divorced family should have the opportunity to do with their benefits as they have agreed. After all, at some point after paying in for years and years, shouldn't the average Canadian have the right to say, "That benefit is mine"? Shouldn't the average family be able to say that that benefit is theirs?

Those who argue that this bill might put grandmothers on the street do so to confuse the issue. There is a social component to the Canada pension plan, but there is also an individual component, and we would do well to remember that. In our province we value the goal of individual self-reliance. Part of being self-reliant is being trusted by the government to make legal decisions and agreements with the heavy hand of the state becoming involved only when the agreements that are based upon law are separated or if one person dupes another person into an agreement that holds no legal standing.

In fact, Bill 203 is tackling such an inequity. Right now many lawyers believe that couples can split Canada pension plan benefits in whichever manner they choose. Many of these same lawyers only learn afterwards that such agreements are not backed up by law and so are not entirely legitimate. It's in cases like this that the government ought to become involved and change the rules so that they are consistent and can be applied consistently.

We have, as the sponsor has noted, two choices available to us. We could outlaw any splitting of Canada pension plan benefits, or we could make legal and consistent rules governing the splitting of benefits, which Bill 203 asks us to do. By choosing an avenue under which the government makes legal and consistent rules regarding the splitting of Canada pension plan benefits in divorce proceedings, Bill 203 puts government in its rightful place as the facilitator of a consistent environment in which individuals make decisions and agreements.

Further, government is one more move away from being a tool of social engineers. That's actually the major reason I support this bill. It is in keeping with this government's ethic of promoting individual responsibility. Our government has promoted self-reliance as a key piece of our policy for quite some time now. It is the engine behind our touting the lowest taxes in Canada, it is something that we measure in relation to the standard of living, and it is the basis on which we promote a government that allows choice, entrepreneurship, and the ability to make a good life for oneself in whatever field is chosen. It should also be considered when we look at legislation like Bill 203.

What we are doing in Bill 203 is noting that within a divorce proceeding various different things are up for negotiation: investments, alimony, assets such as houses and cars not to mention cottages and boats, and the appropriate child support level as well as other bargaining items that are brought into play. It may seem cold to speak of bargaining items, but let's not lose sight of what is going on within a divorce proceeding. Each partner is attempting to secure a good outcome for themselves from the proceedings, and it is true that not every divorce proceeding goes off without a hitch. While it may not be the best arrangement – it would be better, I suppose, if we were proceeding with amicable relationships – it is ultimately up to the two parties involved to choose the assets that will be divided. As pension benefits are considered assets, then they should be well within the scope of assets to be divided and agreed upon.

In that light, Mr. Speaker, I urge all members of the House to join me in supporting Bill 203.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and speak to Bill 203. This is a bill that I feel is necessary and one that should be supported mostly for the common-sense principles that it is based upon. This is a very simple piece of legislation. It is one which does not bring much confusion to an issue that on the surface seems to need a solution.

Currently in Alberta when a divorce occurs, spouses sit down and divide everything. It is not a fun time, I am sure. It is something that must happen and it is necessary for fairness on all sides. However, during divorce proceedings sometimes things get overlooked, and that is where this bill tries to bring some simplicity to the situation.

Right now it is conceivable for partners to agree to something during a divorce proceeding, and then one of the parties involved can renege on that agreement. This is seen in the splitting of Canada pension plan benefits. In Alberta it is mandatory for CPP to be split upon divorce, either by an agreement by two parties or by application of one of the ex-partners. That being said, it may be mandatory, but the automatic splitting of CPP credits is not occurring.

What is interesting to note is that it can happen to those involved in a divorce who may decide not to split up the pension credits that were accrued during a marriage. Here is an example. Let's say Mr. and Mrs. Smith, for whatever reason, after 10 years of marriage decide to get a divorce. In the proceedings it is decided between the two parties that Mrs. Smith would keep her full CPP benefits and that they will not split them because Mr. Smith gets the boat, the car, and the dog. It is agreed that Mrs. Smith gets to keep the full pension because she was the primary breadwinner, made the contributions to the plan, and Mr. Smith doesn't want the CPP benefits anyway.

Well, then, 20 years later Mr. Smith decides, upon discovering that he should right any wrong that may or may not have occurred to him, that he should have gotten half of the CPP benefits. So Mr. Smith makes an application 20 years after the fact to obtain half of Mrs. Smith's CPP credits. Mr. Speaker, he will get half of the CPP benefit accumulated during the marriage because that is the way the law is set up in this province at this time. It is completely unfair because these two parties had already agreed not to split the CPP benefits, yet one party has an entire lifetime to change his or her mind. Granted, the party will only receive what has accrued during the marriage, but again one can come back and claim what had been settled previously.

A funny thing about this is that at the federal level there is a mechanism in the CPP legislation that allows the provinces to opt out of CPP credit splitting, and what is required for it to happen is for the province to pass the pertinent legislation, which is what we are looking to do here today.

Bill 203 is an excellent idea because it gives spouses or ex-spouses, as it were, the ability to make the agreements binding instead of just having to trust that one party won't decide to apply for the split. One of the main objectives of this bill, which I think is very good, is that it requires CPP issues to be dealt with at the time of divorce, not 20 years later but at the time when the house, kids, dog, boat, and finances are all being divvied up.

This is all about flexibility, Mr. Speaker. It gives spouses the ability to agree between themselves what they want to do with all of their assets including their Canada pension plan benefits. You can see how this just makes common sense. With all the confusion that surrounds divorce, this bill sets down the rules for division so that every person involved – lawyers, spouses, representatives, and family members – all know and understand what is happening. Unfortunately, that is something that just doesn't occur today as the rules and laws are a bit confusing. At the very least this bill clears that part up.

Mr. Speaker, again, this is a simple piece of legislation. It doesn't really intrude into the lives of Albertans. We aren't sticking our fingers where they don't belong either. We have to remember that federal legislation allows this to happen as long as we pass our own law. Now is the time for us to pass that law. I can't really figure out what kept us from doing this for so long.

It is unfortunate as well to note that Alberta won't even be leading Canada in this regard as there are a few jurisdictions in this country that have legislated similar laws and have had very few, if any, problems with them. British Columbia, Saskatchewan, and Quebec with the Quebec pension plan have all taken strides to ensure that couples going through a divorce have the option not to split their benefits. Manitoba is currently going through a trial process to see if such legislation is beneficial to their province. In all cases there have been very few problems with the decision that the policy-makers have made in this regard.

This bill is just a very simple procedure that should get full and unanimous support from all sides of this House. I think that giving the choice to people whether or not they wish to do something is better than forcing them to do it, which is the way it is currently legislated. The CPP has legislated the mandatory split, meaning you have to split it. Keep in mind that I am not an advocate for divorce, but I do realize that divorces have happened and will happen, and when it does happen, each ex-spouse must be treated equally and fairly.

Mr. Speaker, as I conclude today, I hope that all the hon. members will realize why this bill should be passed, and I hope that it gets unanimous support of this Assembly. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Maskell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise today and join the debate on Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the hon. Member for Calgary-West. What this bill brings to mind as I read through it is choice, the choice for Albertans to decide whether or not to split their Canada pension plan credits upon a divorce or separation.

Currently, as we have heard, those Albertans that contributed to CPP are allowed to split their accrued pensionable earnings or credits. Effective January 1, 1987, amendments were passed concerning credit-splitting provisions which made credit splitting mandatory for divorces or legal annulments occurring on or after the amendment date. Credit splitting was also expanded to include separations of legally married or common-law spouses.

Mr. Speaker, the word "mandatory" seems like a fairly strict and strong word. One would assume that this type of language would imply that credit splitting is not an option and that it must be adhered to. This, however, is not necessarily the case. One of the problems with CPP credit splitting that needs to be discussed deals with documentation. Because credit splitting has become mandatory, neither spouse in a divorce situation should be required to submit an application. As I see it, that would take the mandatory out of the process.

However, it is necessary for the spouse requesting the division of pension credits to provide the required information and documentation to the federal minister responsible for the CPP. This is a main point of confusion for me, and it begs the question: what is the difference between submitting an application and submitting the required information and documentation? Isn't it feasible to assume that by submitting the required information and documentation, one would be applying for CPP credit splitting? As I see it, Mr. Speaker, should a couple not want to participate in the so-called mandatory credit splitting, then they would simply not submit the required information and documentation. In essence, they would not apply, although apparently submitting relevant information and documentation is completely different from the application process.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the scenario sounds as convoluted to you as it does to me, but it does prove a good point, being that the CPP credit-splitting process as it is needs to be clarified and simplified. Bill 203 would do just that. It would put the credit-splitting process in the hands of the spouses involved, so they could decide their own financial future and not have to jump through the current maze of federal hoops.

To continue on with this scenario, a couple has come to a mutual agreement to not participate in the splitting of pension credits, and a number of years pass. One may think that after a while the window of opportunity to participate in credit splitting would be shut. This is not the case whatsoever. Should one of the spouses decide 15 or 20 years after the divorce or annulment has taken place that they would like a piece of the credit-splitting pie, they are more than welcome to it. All that is necessary is that they submit the proper information and documentation.

Mr. Speaker, if a couple signs an agreement on or after June 4, 1986, even if it says that they specifically gave up their right to split CPP pension credits, in most cases the CPP, as a third party to the agreement, is not bound to its provisions, and the Canada pension plan can still split the pension credits. The reason this can take place is because Alberta has not instituted provincial legislation. This is a serious predicament that can have substantial consequences for Albertans. The possible scenarios that could be hypothesized are endless, and few of them end with favourable results for both parties. What Bill 203 is suggesting is that we give Alberta's divorced and annulled couples the opportunity to make their own decisions on CPP credit splitting that are legal and can be upheld.

Mr. Speaker, what is being proposed, as I mentioned earlier, is a choice, one that appears to be present through the smoke and mirrors of federal legislation but, in reality, is only an illusion. There are exceptions to the federal CPP regulations. The federal legislation allows each province to enact its own legislation permitting the spouse to agree that the pension under the Canada pension plan will not be divided. Therefore, those critics that believe we may be stepping on federal toes by passing Bill 203 are incorrect. The federal legislation has opened a door for each province to accomplish what is proposed here today. I believe we should take full advantage of this opportunity.

Some provinces have already seized this opportunity and implemented legislation which allows couples specifically to agree not to split Canada pension plan credits. Currently this is the case in Saskatchewan, Quebec, and British Columbia. Therefore, if an agreement is signed in one of those provinces, the Canada pension plan cannot circumvent the federal legislation and split the credits anyway, a fine idea, if I do so say myself.

British Columbia produced a working paper late in 1990 concerning the division of pensions on marriage breakdown. Many points were made that I would like to share with the Assembly today. A point that favours this type of legislation is that of rights, and it can be said that a person who has rights is usually entitled to choose between asserting them or declining to do so. Again, we are reminded of choice and how important it is that all Albertans are provided that right, as they should be. This choice can involve some type of compensation or flexibility. Depending on the case, one spouse may wish to use the pension credits as a bargaining chip in the divorce settlement. This, of course, would be a binding agreement between the couple and the decisions they made concerning CPP credits at the time of the settlement.

A case in British Columbia provides a perfect example of the federal smoke-and-mirrors show. One of the spouses in the marriage was not aware that a waiver of rights under the Canada pension plan was ineffective. The other spouse, however, fully aware of the loophole, agreed to forgo those rights in exchange for other property and then applied for the Canada pension plan benefits at a later date. It was held up in court that under the circumstances the spouse was prohibited from applying for a division of the pension benefits. Thankfully, the court upheld the mutual agreement within the credit-splitting waiver, but this may not always be the case. I find it extremely important that Albertans unaware of such situations need to be protected from the harm that could result.

Mr. Speaker, the argument can also be raised concerning the valuable court time that has been used to bring resolution to such disputes. Valuable time and resources would not be required if the waiver was legally solid and undeniably enforceable within the courts instead of leaving the decision to the discretion of the judge. Bill 203 would take away these uncertainties, and the end result would be confidence and legitimacy in the decisions made between spouses at the time of their divorce. These decisions would then be upheld and respected by both parties, if not on a moral level then legally.

Mr. Speaker, a point that I believe cannot be stressed enough is the necessity just to protect spouses. It is evident through the example that there is a possibility that one spouse may be financially victimized by the other. Spouses should be afforded the choice of how their rights are to be affected by marriage breakdown. Bill 203 would allow for that choice by permitting a waiver of the right to a division of credits under the Canada pension plan.

Mr. Speaker, not only would we be protecting Albertans who could one day fall victim to the loopholes in the federal legislation, but we would be allowing Albertans the opportunity to take control of their finances during a divorce settlement.

I encourage all members to vote in favour of Bill 203, and I look forward to further debate on this issue. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to share my thoughts on Bill 203. We have before us a piece of legislation that deals with a very complicated and delicate issue, the aftermath of a failed long-term relationship. When two people commit to one another for a significant period of time, not only do emotions become entangled, but so do finances. People will spend years living and working together: buying a home, furnishing that home, investing their money for the future or in a business, and so on. When this relationship fails, there comes the unpleasant task of dividing the assets between the partners.

This division of assets can come in many ways, either through selling all of the mutually owned items and splitting the proceeds or by merely dividing possessions or by any combination of these strategies. In this process partners will decide what will best help them in their future lives. They are the ones deciding how to divide their possessions because no one knows better what these people need than themselves. They managed their finances while they were together, and when they separate, they will direct the course of their finances on their own.

Mr. Speaker, in Alberta there exists legislation to ensure that marital assets are divided, but this does not exactly say how these assets are to be divided. It does not say that every asset and possession is to be split down the middle because it values the importance of personal responsibility and choice. Indeed, dividing assets in this manner could be extremely inefficient due to a multitude of circumstances. This is why the exact way in which the assets will be separated is left up to those involved, because they are in the best position to decide what will be most beneficial to them.

Governments allow those involved to make these choices with respect to every other asset when dealing with a divorce except in the case of the Canada pension plan. In this instance the federal government tells couples that they cannot decide how to separate their CPP credits. The couple must split the credits, regardless of any decision the couple has reached on their own. I feel that this is not the best way to deal with the division of a marital asset and that the people involved in these situations should be afforded the power to choose how they manage their own financial situation.

Mr. Speaker, as I see it, there are three main reasons why we should support Bill 203. The first and most important reason I've already mentioned: Albertans should be given the power to determine their own financial goals and needs instead of having the federal government choose for them. Secondly, the social climate in which mandatory credit splitting was introduced has greatly changed, and we need to take into account the fact that many more families are choosing to have both parents work outside the home. Finally, we need to implement a system that leaves no room for ambiguity. Under the present system people are uncertain as to the power that a prenuptial or divorce agreement has in regard to a spouse's CPP credits.

Additionally, while credit splitting is theoretically mandatory, in practice one of the partners must apply for the credits to be split. If neither of the parties involved applies for the credits to be split, then nothing happens. Most often the credits are not split because of the public's lack of knowledge about the program. Many people simply don't know that credit splitting is possible. Due to this, quite often the credit splitting happens long after the divorce has been settled when one of the parties realizes that this is a possibility. By passing Bill 203, we can end that ambiguity for Albertans. This will allow people to deal with all matters at the time of divorce clearly and without the possibility of future changes.

Mandatory credit splitting came about in 1987 in an attempt to ensure that a spouse who had chosen to work in the home would be assured of some level of retirement income. While I appreciate the intent of mandatory credit splitting, I would say that the circumstances have changed considerably since mandatory splitting was legislated. In particular, the makeup of the workforce in Canada has changed, and there are a larger number of families where both spouses are part of the workforce.

According to Stats Canada dual-income families have been on the rise for the past four decades and are now as common as single-income families were in the '60s. That is to say that over 60 per cent of the census population is part of a dual-income family. Therefore, both family members are earning a wage outside the home, and both are contributing to the Canada pension plan, thereby ensuring a retirement income for both partners in the event that the marriage fails. Additionally, there is almost equal workforce participation on the part of both men and women.

In the past there was a greater trend to have one parent, usually the mother, work in the home. In this situation that parent would not be contributing to the CPP and, therefore, would not be accruing credits for retirement. This is simply no longer the case. Even if this remained a concern, this legislation does not forbid CPP credit splitting. It merely affords partners a choice as to whether they would like to split the credits or not. If they choose to split the credits, there is no reason that they would not be able to do so.

Bill 203 will allow Albertans to choose for themselves how they would like to manage their marital assets instead of having their CPP contributions controlled solely by the federal government. As I have stated before, this piece of legislation is about allowing partners to decide how to split their assets in the event of their relationship falling apart. It may be far more beneficial for one partner to not split the CPP credits and, instead, take an asset that will provide immediate help for that person to become independent. On the other hand, there is nothing stopping the person from splitting the CPP credits if they see that benefit as being the most beneficial path for them to take.

Mr. Speaker, when the CPP Act was amended in 1987, the federal government provided a way for provincial governments to opt out of mandatory credit splitting if they chose to do so. Why would the federal government allow for that provision if they did not see that there might be a problem with mandatory credit splitting? The CPP Act allows for provinces to alter the program in order to deal with problems that could be caused by its inflexibility.

Another revision that was made in 1987 was the length of time during which you could apply for CPP credit splitting. Previously the time limit to split credits was 36 months. Currently there is no time limit. It is possible to apply for credit splitting 10 or 15 years after the divorce. This can leave those who are involved in the divorce uncertain about their finances for years to come. For example, if a couple were to mutually decide to not split their credits, they would agree to this in the divorce proceedings. However, as it stands, there's nothing stopping one of the parties from applying for the credit splitting the next day or the next year or 10 years down the road, even after agreeing to not split the credits.

These agreements cannot be enforced unless the provincial government has passed opting-out legislation. The federal government does not recognize contracts concerning CPP credit splitting until this happens. What both partners thought was a legally binding contract and entered into in good faith means nothing unless there is provincial legislation in place to support this. There are currently people in Alberta that are realizing this the hard way when they receive a letter from the Canada pension plan saying that their ex-spouse has applied for and been automatically granted a splitting of CPP credits regardless of how long ago the divorce was or whether there was a signed agreement or not.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that under the current legislation it is not possible for people to do as they choose with their own assets. They are entering into contracts in good faith that turn out to be completely invalid. This lack of clarity needs to be stopped, and we have before us the tool to end this ambiguity. Albertans deserve the right to decide how they will manage their finances. In no other area are there restrictions regarding how Albertans choose to divide marital assets, only when dealing with the Canada pension plan. This is a pension like any other, and the two people involved should be allowed to choose how they want to divide all of their assets, not just most of them.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I ask for all of your support for Bill 203. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Redwater.

Mr. Broda: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to offer some of my thoughts on Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by my colleague from Calgary-West. My overall impression of Bill 203 is very positive. I believe that despite some of the concerns that have been raised with regard to this piece of legislation, Bill 203 has much merit and will allow this Assembly to remedy some of the current problems and issues associated with splitting CPP pension credits.

The federal CPP legislation stipulates that when a marriage between two individuals ends, the CPP pension credits that the couple collected during their time together must be split up equally between the two. In other words, unlike a car, house, or investment assets, CPP credits are currently not treated as unitary items, and as a result one party cannot end up being the sole possessor of the benefits. Bill 203 aims to add more choice to this equation by permitting individuals the option to split their CPP pension credits or to opt out of the credit-splitting process altogether. In other words, the new amendment will allow former couples to treat their common CPP benefits in the same manner as other items like the house, car, or financial assets.

From the fiscal and practical point of view, Mr. Speaker, allowing couples such an option does not sound like an unreasonable idea. This begs the question as to why CPP pension credits are currently being treated differently than other financial assets such as mutual investment holdings or even provincial employment pension benefits. Undoubtedly, there are numerous arguments that attempt to justify the dissimilarity between CPP credits and other financial assets and benefits. However, while some of these arguments were valid a few decades ago, I believe that the present realities have rendered them invalid or obsolete.

One of the main viewpoints against allowing ex-spouses to opt out of credit splitting argues that the Canadian pension plan is a social program designed to ensure that both parties receive the same amount of retirement income regardless of which party was making the majority of CPP contributions. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, if one of the spouses was employed while the other was not, both would receive exactly the same amount of CPP credits if their marriage came to an end. The rationale behind having this measure in place follows the logic that both partners are equal contributors to the relationship regardless of their financial or employment status, and as a result, if they choose to go their separate ways, they should receive equal compensation.

While this argument may promote fairness, I am afraid that it does not stand up to the present fiscal or practical realities. First of all, Mr. Speaker, while CPP pension credits are a source of ensuring that individuals enjoy a steady retirement income, in most cases these benefits are usually never large enough to provide for a comfortable retirement. Consequently, the average Albertan cannot live on a CPP pension alone and, as a result, must make sure that he or she is procuring income from other sources. With this in mind it makes no sense why ex-spouses are currently being forced to split their pension credits if at the end of the day these credits don't amount to a whole lot of money.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I cannot see the benefit of splitting a relatively small quantity of funds into two lesser but equal sums. To put it into more practical language, if retired individuals cannot live on a CPP pension alone, how can they possibly be expected to live on half of that amount? Consequently, by allowing ex-spouses to opt out of the credit-splitting process and permitting them to decide for themselves how their CPP benefits should be affected by their divorce, Bill 203 brings more options and more clarity to the table. In the end the bill would make it possible that at least one of the individuals would enjoy the full benefit of CPP retirement income, even though it does not amount to much, while the other would be equally compensated by another asset of their choice.

Now, Mr. Speaker, some may argue that by allowing couples to opt out of CPP credit splitting, Bill 203 opens up the possibility that one of the ex-spouses could potentially end up with an unfair settlement. In other words, if one party were to trade their benefits for other, less valuable assets, there is a possibility that they may be giving away more than they realize. As an example, if one were to trade their portion of their CPP credits for another item like a vehicle, which may not hold its value over a long period of time, then this person may end up with an unfair deal due to the depreciation of the vehicle's value. Also, apart from having a shrinking asset value, this individual will have no CPP retirement income, thus making his or her financial situation even worse. The only way this individual will enjoy steady retirement income is if he or she thought in advance and made appropriate financial choices and decisions.

While this may be an extreme scenario, Mr. Speaker, I would argue that Bill 203 offers couples enough choices to avoid unfair settlements that could result from the bargaining process. Firstly, as I have mentioned before, Bill 203 does not force couples to opt out of CPP credit splitting but, rather, gives them the option of pursuing this course of action if they so wish. This process operates on the principle of mutual agreement between both the individuals involved. Therefore, if for whatever reason an ex-spouse decides that he or she does not wish to opt out of credit splitting, then this process cannot be forced upon them.

Secondly, if during the post-divorce procedures one of the spouses or their legal representative believes that they may be getting the short end of the deal in relation to who gets to keep the CPP pension benefits, they have every right to refuse to agree to the settlement. This is a common practice when it comes to decisions affecting other mutual assets and possessions, and in situations where couples decide not to split the credits, it would apply to CPP benefits as well.

As you see, Mr. Speaker, apart from offering ex-spouses more options in relation to what happens to their CPP benefits, Bill 203 ensures that no agreement can be signed until both sides are content with its arrangements. Furthermore, the bill also makes certain that these issues are dealt with in a timely manner soon after divorce or split-up has taken place. Therefore, I believe that it would be unfair to characterize the provisions outlined in Bill 203 as unchecked and unbalanced since they provide ex-couples with more options and more security than ever before.

While I'm on the subject of legal procedures, I would like to point out that this piece of legislation would also help us remedy some of the inconsistencies associated with the current divorce procedures and the issue of the common CPP benefits. By this I'm referring to the issue of matrimonial property waivers and whether they preclude ex-spouses from claiming a credit split even after they have waived their rights to collect CPP benefits. As you have previously heard, Mr. Speaker, this inconsistency has enabled individuals to receive their portion of CPP benefits even though they agreed to waive their right to these benefits while compensated for an asset of equal value.

It appears that these waivers hold no legal backbone as they do not seem to be binding on a signatory. This is due to the fact that the federal CPP legislation states that in order for the credit splitting to take place, provinces must enact appropriate legislation.

As a result, a situation has developed where those who sign the waiver enjoy an unfair advantage as they can collect their CPP benefits and still keep all the assets gained from the divorce proceedings. Bill 203 would remedy this problem by offering ex-spouses a choice to split their CPP credits right away or to opt out of this process and deal with the credits as they would with other common assets. If they choose to opt out and in turn sign a mutual agreement to waive any future claims to each other's pension benefits, they would no longer be able to apply for a credit split.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would urge all members of this Assembly to support this bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to join in the debate on Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, brought forward by the Member for Calgary-West.

The hon. Member for Calgary-West has proposed a very interesting and important piece of legislation. As she stated, this bill creates the right for divorced couples to choose where their Canada pension plan credits go. Both the man and the woman play an important role in a marriage regardless of who earns the higher salary. In addition to working, couples raise their children, manage the finances, and take care of the home. As we all know, many of these tasks are shared. Therefore, both are entitled to CPP credits. This concept is consistent with the fundamental spirit behind the Canada pension plan.

The goal of Bill 203 is to give couples who face divorce a choice of sharing these credits or giving them all to one person. The credits earned while they were married or living common-law could be used in exchange for other equity gained during the time they were together.

I support the right to choose, as do most members here, I believe from comments heard. I'm sure that most of the members in this Assembly also agree that a divorced couple should be given the opportunity to share pension credits or give them solely to one person. I think this legislation makes a lot of sense.

Passing Bill 203 could clean up some of the confusion regarding CPP credits in Alberta. Clients sign a waiver that settles financial agreements and allocates property to each party. Currently pension credits are listed as property along with other forms of equity. As previous speakers have pointed out, in some cases this waiver directs CPP credits to one person. However, this isn't always the end of the story. The person who forfeited the credits can attempt to reclaim them at a later date. Needless to say, this causes financial problems for the people who lose part of their pension. I would agree that something should be done to eliminate this legal glitch from happening in the future.

Although I support Bill 203, I would like to take this opportunity to present a few concerns I have with the proposed legislation. The strongest argument against Bill 203 is the philosophy behind the Canada pension plan. These credits were not meant to be bargaining chips. They are part of a federal policy to provide coverage for retired or disabled Canadians. Bill 203 creates a legal mechanism to take part of a public pension away from one person, and that's not consistent, Mr. Speaker, with one of Canada's oldest social programs.

Some may argue that these credits are property that should be on the table. These people may point out that other provinces have passed similar legislation and that Alberta should do the same. The problem is that CPP credits are seen as both a financial asset and an important pillar of a national social program. It's true that other provincial governments have passed legislation similar to Bill 203, but not every province believes that this is the best way to go.

Mr. Speaker, there's a precedent set by other provinces that helps legitimize Bill 203. There are also precedents set by provinces that feel that CPP credits should be shared to ensure that people have access to their public pension. The Alberta Law Reform Institute studied this issue in 1990, and the institute agreed that actions needed to be taken to eliminate any uncertainty around the division of CPP credits. It was agreed that the social value of assuring the income security of noncontributing spouses outweighs enacting the opt-out legislation.

The Ontario government has also chosen not to adopt the opt-out legislation and continues splitting CPP credits. The Ontario Law Reform Commission looked at the pros and cons of legislation similar to Bill 203 in 1995. The commission believes that the definition of net family property should be amended to specifically exclude benefits payable to a spouse under the Canada pension plan.

I would like to know how this amendment is working in other provinces. Has anyone challenged the perceived contradiction? Are people who gave up their CPP credits reconsidering their decision?

Bill 203 is taking away part of a pension that every Canadian is entitled to if both spouses agree to do so. This bill could help everyone involved in a divorce because it clears the way for a choice to decide whether or not to split CPP credits. However, this bill could also take money away from people when they are most vulnerable.

The CPP has always been a social program. Taking elements of a social program away from one person and awarding them to another for financial gain is not consistent with the mandate of a publicly funded pension.

One thing this Assembly needs to remember is that pension credits do not equal money. Although every Albertan contributes to the pension plan from every paycheck, the credits are part of a formula. The more credits you have, the more money you are entitled to when you retire or become disabled. The amount of credits will determine the entitlement, and some may not want this right to be taken away.

The CPP is a taxpayer-funded social institution. In hindsight, I'm not sure every Albertan believes that a social program should be a bargaining chip during a divorce. In fact, this may be part of the reason why people try to reclaim their credits. They may see an opportunity to claim something that they now know they should not have given up so easily.

Some believe that the CPP is doomed and barely provides coverage in its current structure. It's believed that the entire plan needs to be reformed to make it sustainable for Canada's large aging demographic. I don't know where the CPP will be in 20 or 30 years, but I do know that the federal government can make quick and drastic decisions. Creating a gun registry to reduce crime and accepting the Kyoto protocol, that may or may not help the environment, are things that come to mind.

I understand that the Canada Pension Plan Act currently allows the provinces to opt out of the credit-splitting program. On the other hand, what would happen if the federal government decided that credit splitting as proposed in Bill 203 was not consistent with the social values of the plan? Mr. Speaker, let's just look ahead a few years. A large number of Canadians may be looking at retirement options and sizing up their financial situations. A number of people who went through a divorce see the connection between the CPP Act and the social safety net and want their credits back. They could organize into one group and pressure the government to make changes to provide more protection.

Now, the federal government could see trouble in this with a sizable proportion of the voting electorate feeling this way and may decide to take some action. In haste perhaps the federal government could make sweeping changes to the CPP that would allow people to reclaim their lost CPP credits from their divorce settlement. I realize that this might be a highly unlikely scenario to some people, but some of us in this Assembly didn't think that the federal government would launch on to some of their programs like the Kyoto protocol either.

Deciding where CPP credits go is a provincial jurisdiction. This is clearly stated within the Canada Pension Plan Act, and my concern is with the predictability of the federal government because we're working with that federal legislation. Perhaps the sponsor of this bill can clarify this question in her closing comments.

Some may argue that the easiest solution may be to remove CPP credits from the waiver in divorce proceedings. This would ensure that the credits remain shared equally between the two parties. Keeping the credit split eliminates any chance of surprise well after the divorce is settled.

However, most people aren't aware of the additional paperwork to split CPP credits equally. As it stands now, the federal minister responsible for the Canada pension plan must receive the correct documentation before credit splitting can occur. Therefore, I don't believe that the current program is an effective way to provide retirement income for both spouses.

I support choice, so I do support Bill 203. I also believe that Bill 203 provides awareness and clarity to the CPP credit-splitting issue. As mentioned before, CPP credits aren't even divided equally in the first place without proper documentation in the hands of the federal minister responsible for the act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be here this afternoon and to be able to join the debate on Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004.

As we have heard, Bill 203 would allow Albertans in the process of divorcing or separating to take control of their finances by giving them the choice with regard to how their assets are to be divided. Assuming for the sake of argument that pension plan credits represent assets that can and should be as divisible as, for instance, stocks and bonds, vehicles, and household furnishings, Bill 203 operates on the premise that spouses would be in the best position to make decisions about the division of their property. What to do with benefits earned under the Canada pension plan, then, would under Bill 203 be but one of several agreements into which the divorcing spouses will enter. Such spousal agreements are a sensible and a preferred way of allowing parties to resolve their differences, particularly so in what can often be a very emotional and tension-laden situation.

What Bill 203 proposes, then, is to amend the Matrimonial Property Act and the Adult Interdependent Relationships Act to allow spouses to opt out of the Canada pension plan's credit-splitting program. By amending both pieces of legislation, Bill 203 will apply to married and common-law spouses.

My initial reaction to Bill 203 was that it seems like a rather fair and a very sensible idea. What gave rise to that initial impression was the fact that as things stand now, not being able to opt out of the credit-splitting program raises the possibility of a divorce or separation that's not quite finalized.

Contrary to the spirit of joint agreements on who gets the car or who gets the house or any other mutual agreement, when it comes to splitting the credits earned under the provisions of the Canada pension plan, only one of the ex-spouses or ex-partners needs to apply for the split. The consent of the other half of the now-collapsed relationship is neither mandatory nor necessary. What's more, the credits will be split even if the nonapplicant objects to the division of the benefits.

Whether one has experienced a divorce or not, we all know that they can be quite painful. Love, hope, and a shared future have been torn asunder and in their stead are now sadness, anger, and sometimes countless other emotions. Arriving at mutual decisions may be very difficult under such circumstances but obviously not impossible since many spouses do manage to do so. However, that only one spouse or, as it were, ex-spouse needs to apply for the split in order for it to take place seems unfair.

Under a set of circumstances so unsettling, it would seem obvious that every effort should be made to level the playing field, to use a popular expression, but here quite the opposite seems to be at work. The one saving grace of this predicament is that this inequality is not available exclusively to one spouse and not the other. Rather, it seems more a matter of who first takes advantage of this glaring omission and thus quite literally gets to cash in on it. Of course, it does depend on which spouse has been paying into the pension plan during the relationship. One would be remiss for not clarifying that. In any event, Mr. Speaker, this is a situation that ought to be rectified sooner rather than later.

Getting back to the outset of my remarks here today, this is what gave rise to such a favourable impression of what may be accomplished were Bill 203 to pass this House. It would seem to me that among all the things divorcing spouses seek to realize as part of the divorce, closure is at or near the top of the list. To be able to put an end once and for all to a very difficult time is what is desired.

Under current circumstances, however, it would seem that such closure may be somewhat elusive or at the very least subject to change. A person may be under the impression that a previous marriage had been relegated to the past when all of a sudden his or her ex-spouse files an application for pension credit splitting. Since there is no longer any restriction on the maximum length of time that can pass for such an application to be filed, this may force spouses to revisit what both of them thought was a closed chapter, indeed, to continue the literary metaphor, what they thought was a long since finished book.

However, the deciding factor for me is whether we can or for that matter should treat Canada pension plan credits like any other goods or piece of property. In short, are pension plan credits really ours to barter with as we see fit regardless of the situation? I suggest that they are not, and this is the conclusion I have come to after considering Bill 203 from a variety of perspectives. As much as it would be desirable to put an end to the one-sided and unequal nature of the credit splitting as it currently exists, Bill 203 is, from my point of view, simply not the proper mechanism to effect such a change.

This is one of those situations where the means do not justify the ends. Why do I say this? Simply put, it is everything to do with the very reasons why credit splitting is an option for divorcing spouses: ensuring that retirement income is available to noncontributing or lower contributing spouses, particularly women. This is not a gender issue. I'm not seeking to put this on a gender plane. However, when it comes to earned pension plan credits, many women are at a disadvantage compared to men. This is undisputable.

Why is this so? After all, hasn't the economic position of women, both in Alberta as well as throughout the country, improved over the years? Absolutely. Generally speaking, today's women are in a much stronger economic position than women were just a decade ago.

Having said that, however, women generally remain the primary caregivers of children, and women have a significantly greater tendency than men do to work inside the home. As a result, women are less likely to pay into a pension plan, and consequently women are less likely to have a secured retirement income. To mitigate against such an outcome, the Canada pension plan credit-splitting policy was created in order to ensure that both parties will have a retirement income.

Now, suppose that we were to opt out of the credit-splitting policy, much like Saskatchewan, Quebec, and British Columbia have done. What might be on the horizon if we were to do that? Well, Mr. Speaker, for instance, for those with low or even moderate incomes relinquishing credits earned under the Canada pension plan may in the future create a dependency on various retirement income support programs such as the guaranteed income supplement and the Alberta seniors' benefit.

No amount of planning can ever prepare us completely for what the future may bring. This is true under most every set of circumstances and is certainly true here. It is important to not lose sight of the fact that beyond a 30-day appeal period the decision to opt out of credit splitting would be final and binding. No matter how carefully one plans and seeks to factor in every foreseeable variable when making the decision to opt out, an individual's financial situation may change drastically at a later date. Assuming that the current conditions remain in place, the ex-spouse who chose to forgo his or her credits will have passed the point of no return.

On a final note, I find the notion of treating pension plan credits like any other piece of property somewhat unbalanced. Given the purpose for which the Canada pension plan was created, it would seem like a step in the wrong direction to take an entitlement program like this and turn it into a bargaining chip.

I am reminded of the coupons one sometimes gets in a store or in the mail offering 35 cents off here or a dollar there. If you read the fine print carefully, it often says that this coupon has no cash value. If that is a guiding principle for a coupon that entitles you to get a can of peas for a few nickels and dimes less, it ought to be a guiding principle for how to treat a program that may very well provide a significant portion of one's income at a time in an individual's life when his or her prime earning years are in the past.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult to support Bill 203.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Cernaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to have the opportunity to address the Assembly regarding Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004. I'd like to commend the hon. Member for Calgary-West for her vision and attempt to give Albertans more flexibility and choice when it comes to managing their Canadian pension plan credits after a divorce.

While I believe government has an important role to play in the decision-making process for the province on behalf of Albertans, I also firmly believe that individual citizens need and deserve the freedom to make decisions that pertain to themselves. Freedom of choice in our society is fundamental in maintaining the democracy we enjoy as Albertans. Bill 203 is about choice. It's about instilling power in the individual. Albertans have the ability to make the decisions that are best for them, and they should be afforded the opportunity to make such decisions.

Like many other federal laws and institutions the CPP credit-splitting legislation as it currently stands isn't in the best interest of Albertans. Unlike other federal impositions like gun control, the Canadian Wheat Board, and the Kyoto protocol we are in a situation that allows us to opt out, as other provinces have, of this mandatory CPP credit-splitting process. Section 55.2 of the CPP Act allows provinces to opt out of the credit-splitting program. We would be so lucky if all flawed federal legislation that is imposed on Albertans granted us the option to pull ourselves out from Ottawa's intrusive thumb.

Mr. Speaker, I will base my comments on two key areas. First, Bill 203 will allow more options for those working out a divorce settlement, and second, this bill brings CPP benefits to the forefront of discussion during divorce proceedings. This will prevent situations where either a party is unaware that a credit split is taking place or situations where a CPP benefit split is applied for well after the two parties have come to a perceived agreement.

Mr. Speaker, on my first point, as it stands now, CPP credits are automatically split after a divorce in provinces that have not legislated a change in the federal government's policy. This is done whether one partner paid into the system or not. The decision to automatically split credits was made with good intentions in mind. Automatically splitting credits provides a safeguard for a spouse who may have not paid into the program through a profession but contributed to the household in other ways, like caring for young children.

While the rationale of split CPP credits after marriage was meant to provide an automatic equity between partners, benefits are not always split because an application form isn't always submitted immediately after separation. Credit splitting occurs in less than 15 per cent of divorces. Obviously credit-splitting legislation does not work the way it was intended to. Alberta should adopt a more effective approach by opting out of the current CPP credit-splitting process.

It's also important to note, Mr. Speaker, that Albertans are finding new ways to prepare for their future. For some Albertans their livelihood after retirement doesn't necessarily hinge on whether they are a part of the CPP plan or not. Many contribute to other plans through investment agents. Others have invested savings in a manner where the return is greater than what the CPP offers. Some Albertans also fear that the CPP program will not have the necessary funds to support them through their retirement. Many have backup plans. They contribute to RRSPs and savings bonds.

The point I am trying to make here, Mr. Speaker, is that there are other options available, and it is appropriate to treat CPP credits as a monetary value in reaching a settlement between parties. It is unnecessary to automatically split CPP benefits to reach an amiable solution between a recently divorced couple. Money or other assets can be exchanged in lieu of splitting CPP benefits to reach an equitable settlement. There may be those who have made other arrangements for themselves and are willing to forgo their share of a CPP plan in order to obtain an asset of equal value.

I believe it's important to point out that Bill 203 maintains credit splitting as an option. Many times it would be the ideal solution to resolve differing opinions when it comes to dividing an estate. Bill 203 allows both parties more flexibility in resolving a dispute associated with marital assets, and flexibility is an important asset that helps achieve an agreement between spouses.

The period of time following a divorce is often a trying emotional time period for all involved, even more so if there are children involved. Flexibility becomes key in allowing parties to reach an important agreement and move on with their lives. We can make it easier for couples to come to an agreement by increasing the number of options available in the system. Other jurisdictions like Saskatchewan, Quebec, and British Columbia have already recognized what good legislation of this nature can have on these uncomfortable situations. I believe Alberta should follow suit.

On my second point, Mr. Speaker, by opting out of the mandatory credit-splitting clause in the CPP Act, Albertans would have a better chance of dealing with issues surrounding their CPP benefits at the time of the divorce. One of the problems with the CPP program as it stands now is that spouses are able to file for a portion of the benefits at a later date and there are no current time restrictions. This can draw out a divorce process that may have been considered completed months or even years before.

Even though opting-out legislation has not been passed, spouses sometimes include CPP benefits in the general waiver or divorce agreement. These waivers and decisions reached about CPP benefits are not recognized by the federal government, and some spouses enter into these agreements knowing that they can collect CPP benefits at a later date. This practice would be eliminated as such waivers would be recognized if Alberta opted out of the practice of mandatory credit splitting. These practices, while not necessarily commonplace, can be corrected through the passing of Bill 203. Opting-out legislation would make such waivers valid and would in effect eliminate the practice of going back on an agreement that has already been reached.

Also, under the federal program mutual consent is not required of both parties in order to split CPP credits. This means that one-half of a divorced couple can have his or her CPP credits split without input or even knowledge of the process taking place. Bill 203 would prevent an ex-spouse from starting the credit-splitting process without the other party's consent, especially in the case of a mutually signed agreement. I believe that it is important for both parties to at least be aware that an application is being put forward, especially when the results can have such a dramatic effect on the long-term financial situation of one of the people involved.

This legislation would do much to create a less hostile environment between ex-spouses. Trust is obviously key to successful discussions of this nature, and participants in this process should not have to fear a future claim when a settlement was thought to have been reached.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 does not eliminate the ability to split CPP credits after a divorce. I think we can agree that in some instances a credit split may be the right thing for a couple to do. This bill allows more flexibility between parties, and it will help divorcing couples arrive at a fair split of their overall assets. We should not look at this bill as taking away credits from a deserving party. By passing Bill 203, we would be adding a tool to help fix the financial problem that exists between a couple in the process of going separate ways.

Bill 203 also creates a more transparent method of dealing with the issue of CPP benefits, which puts more trust in the discussions revolving around the splitting of assets after a failed marriage. I believe that this allows all parties involved the ability to get on with their lives in a more expedient manner.

I urge all of my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly to pass Bill 203 and give Albertans more freedom over their finances. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Lord: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise in the Assembly this afternoon and offer my remarks on Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004, sponsored by the Member for Calgary-West. Mr. Speaker, as we have already heard this afternoon, this bill would allow Albertans the choice of entering into spousal agreements guiding the distribution of their CPP benefits. This option would be afforded to a relationship breakdown of both marital spouses and common-law couples in order to keep consistent with the current provisions outlined in the Canada pension plan credit-splitting program. The CPP program permits pension benefits to be split for common-law partners and marital spouses; therefore, this legislation has extended the opt-out to both types of relationships.

I would like to take a moment to clear up a misconception surrounding this piece of legislation. Bill 203 would not force ex-spouses or ex-partners to opt out of the CPP credit-splitting program. This legislation would give the province the authority to uphold spousal agreements entered into and agreed to by parties who decide to not split their credits. Therefore, Albertans could still choose to split their CPP credits if they do not enter into these agreements.

Mr. Speaker, quite simply, this bill offers Albertans choice. Parties can agree not to split the credits or decide that the division would be in their best interests. This bill does not force Albertans to opt out of the program. Instead, it puts forth flexibility and an option for Albertans to take control of their finances while making decisions that are relevant to their individual situations. This legislation provides ex-spouses or ex-partners flexibility in determining how their equity is divided upon the breakdown of a relationship, rather than letting the federal government dictate the outcome.

Mr. Speaker, I believe options in making these decisions are crucial. The dissolution of a marriage is difficult enough without not having the ability to make decisions based on personal circumstances. I question: does it not seem logical that spouses should be able to waive rights in a particular piece of equity, especially when the waiver is in exchange for something of more or less the same value? Are not these individuals in the best position to make decisions about their own financial futures, and if this isn't the case, who is in a better position: the federal government?

I believe that more problems can arise from inflexibility in these proceedings. The current federal legislation holds authority over how pension benefits are to be split. However, what if it is in the couple's mutual disadvantage to do so? Should they be forced to divide the pension? As the law stands, they would be required to split and would not have the option to choose for themselves as to how their rights are affected by a marriage breakdown. The lack of flexibility may interfere with sensible or practical resolutions of equity issues between the parties.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to offer an example to highlight this situation. Let's say that during a marriage one of the spouses worked outside the home and paid into the CPP plan while the other spouse stayed at home to raise the children. The couple is now seeking a divorce, unfortunately. The spouse that stayed at home does not wish to collect any of the CPP benefits. The children have since left home, and this individual is now working and paying into an employee pension plan. This person has also secured other means of providing retirement income through investments such as RRSPs. Therefore, it has become beneficial for that spouse to retain other equity such as the house. Perhaps the spouse that paid into the CPP has not paid into an employee pension plan and has no other means of securing retirement income. In this situation it would work against both parties' interests to have to split the CPP credits. It is beneficial for the spouse that paid into the CPP plan to keep all of his or her credits because he or she has no other source of retirement savings.

Mr. Speaker, another important point which should be brought forward is that Bill 203 would also work to raise awareness and provide information about the CPP's credit-splitting program. Income security in retirement is as important for noncontributing spouses as it is for contributors. Regardless of the decision that spouses make regarding CPP benefits, they should be aware of their options and the credit-splitting program. Credit splitting has not been an effective tool in providing retirement income to both spouses. Despite attempts to raise awareness by the CPP, there seems to be a lack of understanding of the Canada pension plan credit-splitting program.

Over the past few years various methods have been used to deliver credit-splitting information to divorced couples. Provincial courts currently include an information sheet with the provisions of the program in mailings of the divorce judgment documents. The information is also made available on the Human Resources and Skills Development Canada web site.

Despite these attempts many spouses or common-law partners are under the impression that if they did not pay into the CPP, they are not entitled to receive any benefits. This is simply not true. However, this perception is still prevalent among the general population. The CPP recognizes the importance of spouses who work inside the home to contribute to the well-being of the family. Even if both spouses paid into the plan, the CPP will take the pooled total and then divide and distribute the pension benefit.

It is important that both spouses are aware that they have a right to this benefit. Both spouses are entitled to share CPP pension credits. Bill 203 will help to raise this awareness. This bill would assist in dealing with pension credits in an upfront manner at the time of divorce or separation when other decisions are made about the division of property or equity.

Mr. Speaker, some individuals argue that the CPP is not an effective way of securing retirement income because it does not provide sufficient funds to cover the cost of living. Now, I would agree that Canadians should not rely solely on this program to provide their retirement income. However, it does provide important assistance to many Canadians.

The calculation of retirement pension varies with every circumstance and is dependent on how much and for how long an individual contributed to the plan. In 2001 the average pension that started at age 65 was over $420 per month. The maximum for that year was $775 per month. In 2002 the maximum retirement pension was $788 per month. Therefore, half of the benefit is almost $400 per month. It's not insignificant. I realize that for a lot of people this does not cover expenses. However, let us not forget about individuals who are on fixed incomes. Many seniors have tight budgets and cannot compensate for any deductions in their income. Therefore, any future entitlements could greatly affect the financial situation of some seniors.

Credit splitting needs to be dealt with in an upfront manner and through mutual understanding, whether the parties agree to split the benefits or not. Both parties need to understand the program and be provided with options to address their individual needs. Bill 203 would serve to raise the profile and create an understanding about credit splitting. It would allow individuals to make decisions about CPP benefits and plan appropriately for their future.

In closing, I would like to commend the Member for Calgary-West for raising this issue. Bill 203 gives Albertans an important option when making decisions about their pension. I encourage all members of the House to join with me in supporting Bill 203, the Canada Pension Plan Credits Statutes Amendment Act, 2004. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

May I at this point adjourn debate on Bill 203.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn until 8 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:28 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, March 1, 2004

8:00 p.m.

Date: 2004/03/01

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Mr. Marz: Mr. Speaker, could we revert to introductions?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Tonight members of the Alberta Special Constable Association made a presentation to the standing policy committee. Four of them are with us tonight. The other four – Paul Badger from Strathcona county, Darlene Roblin from the municipal district of Foothills, Terri Miller from Clearwater county, and Faith Wood from Airdrie – had more pressing things to do. The ones that were able to join us tonight are John Armstrong, special areas, Jayson Nelson from Mountain View county, Mike Woods from Lacombe county, Bruce Mackenzie from the county of Stettler. Would you please give these special constables the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four introductions tonight, and they're in the members' gallery. I'll start off with Darlene Williams, who has one child in Belgravia elementary and a second who will be starting school soon; Beth Hendrickson, who has a child in Belgravia elementary as well; Erin Rowe, who has two kids, one in kindergarten and one in grade 2 at Parkallen; and the grandfather of these children, Howard Rowe. They are all parents and grandparents who are here because they're concerned about the funding for public education and are interested in watching the proceedings of the Legislature. I'd ask them to rise in the gallery, and we could all give them a warm welcome.

Thank you.

Education Funding

501. Mr. Griffiths moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to phase out the education portion of property taxes over a 10-year period, gradually supplementing the loss from alternative sources thereby freeing up financial resources for municipalities to adequately provide required services.

[Debate adjourned February 23]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this evening and join the debate on Motion 501, sponsored by the Member for Wainwright. Alberta continues to be in a very unique economic position compared to other provinces in Canada. As an example, earlier this month the Minister of Human Resources and Employment showed that his department had seen a net gain of 47,900 jobs in Alberta in 2003. This rate surpassed all other provinces. Alberta's economic growth along with sustainable financing for program spending has earned accolades from financial institutions and envy from other governments.

To some people Motion 501 may threaten Alberta's success by eliminating a sizable portion of the tax revenue necessary for Alberta's education system. Mr. Speaker, this idea can be looked at from two different perspectives. On one hand, Motion 501 could drastically lower taxes for Alberta property owners. This motion could also lead to a reformed tax collection system and more accountable local governments. This shift in taxing policy could address many municipal issues by increasing available funding and helping them achieve long-term goals.

On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, some may wonder if this is a reasonable way to help municipalities. This motion isn't talking about a few million dollars. As it stands today, if we handed over the education portion of property taxes to municipalities, local governments could see a province-wide increase of approximately $1.4 billion in a single year if they took it all.

Alberta's tax base is already low compared to other provinces. Some would say that the reason for this is because Alberta, unlike other provinces, has the luxury of collecting royalties from nonrenewable resource revenue. I won't deny that high oil and natural gas prices make up a great deal of the resources in the provincial coffers, but Alberta also collects a substantial amount through other taxes. Alberta's tax revenue for the 2003-04 fiscal year is projected to be just under $10 billion. The school property tax accounts for approximately 12 per cent of the total amount, which is a very significant portion. Personal and corporate income tax accounts for over 70 per cent of Alberta's total tax revenue.

Eliminating the education portion of property tax would cost the Alberta government over $1 billion each year. This shortfall would have to be made up in other areas. In the event that oil and natural gas prices fall, there would have to be another option for stable funding. One would assume that the Alberta government would look to the taxpayer. The taxpayer could play less of a role if we remain committed to sound fiscal policies. The concept of eliminating the education portion of property tax is feasible without causing great harm to our bottom line.

In the immediate future the government needs a diverse tax base to fund key programs and address immediate issues. In the future I don't think that the funding needed to address the issues of the day needs to come solely from the taxpayer. After Alberta's capital account is fully funded, less money will be needed for infrastructure. Once the stability fund is fully funded, Alberta will have a sizable amount of funding to survive inevitable dips in the energy market, and after Alberta's debt is paid off, the province will save millions each year in payments in debt-servicing costs.

I'd agree that it might be too soon to eliminate almost $1.4 billion from Alberta's operating budget by eliminating the tax collected from property owners. I've no reason to believe that this process would be simple or quick. This motion isn't asking government to eliminate the education portion of property taxes over a single fiscal year. Doing so would no doubt cause financial pressure. This plan should be carefully thought out and phased in over time, say five to 10 years after the provincial debt is paid off. I think offsetting revenues would accommodate that change, and I don't think we should lock ourselves into, particularly, a 10-year program if budgets allow us to move quicker.

I also think it would be interesting to see what local governments would do under a new tax collection structure. Motion 501 urges the government to eliminate the education tax from property taxes and does not say what would happen to the existing tax system. If the amount collected from property owners is significantly decreased, then it may be in the best interest of the Alberta government to create a more accountable tax collection system for local governments. Municipal governments are creatures of the provincial government . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, I'm sorry to interrupt, but under Standing Order 29 we've now reached a point where five minutes is reserved for the mover of the motion if he chooses to proceed to close debate.

The hon. Member for Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise this evening to close debate. I'd like to begin by thanking all those members who spoke for or opposed to the motion. I actually don't think there were very many people really opposed to the intent of this motion but, rather, to whether or not this was going to occur over a 10-year period or immediately.

This motion if it's passed will serve two main points; that is, to continue the move that was started in 1994 to reduce the government's dependency on property taxes to fund education. Mr. Speaker, that's the philosophy of this government, that everyone in this province receives the same and equitable education levels regardless of the resources available in that municipality.

It will also achieve the second main goal, Mr. Speaker, which is to allow municipalities tax room in order to expand their tax base so that they can provide services which they've found they experience now with the downloading of some services on them and also, and most importantly, new demands on growth, on new infrastructure – new roads, new sewers and water systems – because our economy is growing so fast.

Thank you very much. I hope everyone supports this motion.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 501 as amended carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

8:10 Health Care Premiums

502. Mr. Mason moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to eliminate seniors' health care premiums immediately and phase out premiums for all Albertans within three years.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much. It's an honour for me, Mr. Speaker, to move Motion 502 on behalf of the New Democrat opposition and on behalf of the hundreds of thousands of Albertans of all political persuasions who believe that the health care premiums are an expensive, inefficient, and regressive lump-sum tax.

While the elimination of health care premiums has been the position of the Alberta New Democrats for as long as health care premiums have existed, last month we decided to launch a new campaign urging Albertans to pressure the government to get rid of them once and for all. We're calling our campaign Scrap Health Care Premiums: It's Good Medicine. In our campaign we point out that health care premiums are an unfair tax that hurts seniors, middle-class families, and working Albertans. The New Democrat opposition proposes to scrap them because Albertans deserve a better deal.

In our campaign to scrap the health care premiums tax we put out that we are one of only two provinces with health care premiums. The other is British Columbia. Eight other provinces and three territories fund the health system using more progressive sources of government revenue.

In the past several months groups from across the political spectrum have called for either a reduction or elimination of health care premiums. The Alberta taxpayers' federation is on record as favouring the elimination of health care premiums. The provincial Liberals have also recently adopted this position.

Dr. Taylor: They just copied you, Brian.

Mr. Mason: What else is new? Well, since the last election I guess they've had a different position.

Reducing health care premiums at least for seniors finds support even on the government benches. The Member for Edmonton-Manning suggested only a few weeks ago that seniors' health care premiums should at least be eliminated. He deserves credit for raising this issue shortly after his election, and I hope that he will continue to fight against this unfair tax, not limiting the elimination just to seniors.

That, Mr. Speaker, is why it's disappointing to hear the Minister of Health and Wellness say in the House this week that while there's no immediate plan to increase health care premiums, they will need to be increased in the future. The minister's statement is no doubt code for the fact that while health care premiums won't be increased before the election, they may well be increased after the election.

The New Democrats have been prepared to say how they'll make up the more than $900 million in yearly revenues generated through the health care premiums tax. We're not prepared to shortchange our hospitals, schools, or other important services by scrapping health care premiums without replacing the lost revenue. As part of our campaign to scrap health care premiums as expressed in Motion 502, there's a plan for how to do it without jeopardizing funding for these important services.

The New Democrats would pay for the elimination of health care premiums by cancelling the multiyear corporate tax cut which will cost the Alberta Treasury $1 billion once fully implemented. A phased elimination of health care premiums as called for in Motion 502 would cost about the same amount. Again I want to emphasize that it is only a reduction in the general rate for larger corporations that we would cancel. The New Democrats would retain all of the reductions for the small business tax rates as well as the increases in the small business exemption subject to the lower rate.

One economist that we consulted with told us that a $1 cut in health care premiums would have bigger economic spinoffs than a comparable $1 cut in corporate taxes. Much of the benefit of corporate tax cuts flows to shareholders outside Alberta, while a two-adult family which no longer has to pay the $1,056 per year in health care premiums is going to save more of this money consuming goods and services at home, thereby stimulating greater economic activity and job creation. I'm sure that that approach is going to find favour with the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, who's worried about jobs.

Motion 502 calls for seniors' health care premiums to be eliminated immediately. Until 1994, Mr. Speaker, seniors were not required to pay health care premiums at all in recognition of the fact that they lived on fixed incomes and in almost all cases had no employer to make contributions on their behalf as many working Albertans do. At the same time that seniors were first required to pay health care premiums, they were promised that even if health care premiums rates were increased for other Albertans, they would not be increased for seniors. Two years ago, when health care premiums were hiked 30 per cent, the promise to not hike seniors' health care premiums was also broken. Seniors' health care premiums were also hiked, to $1,056 for a senior couple.

Seniors have been hard hit by this government with the almost 50 per cent in long-term care accommodation rates. Copayments for prescription drug coverage were increased from 25 to 30 per cent a few years ago. Universal eye care and dental benefits were also eliminated two years ago. So it's only fair that seniors' health care premiums be eliminated immediately. This would involve a $90 million reduction in revenue, little more than half the $161 million revenue reduction that would result from the further planned corporate tax reduction scheduled for April 1, 2004.

Health care premiums are a very economically inefficient tax, Mr. Speaker. When the massive administrative and compliance costs associated with this tax are considered, it becomes very clear that not only are health care premiums regressive; they are also very wasteful. Alberta Health and Wellness spends more money chasing down people who can't pay their premiums than it spends on administering the rest of the public health insurance plan itself. About $15 million per year is spent administering this complicated premium tax. In the fiscal year 2002-03 $50 million in premiums were written off because Albertans were simply unable to pay them. One in four individual health care premium accounts is in arrears. Money spent tracking down Albertans who have difficulty paying their premiums could be better spent on improving health care delivery.

Grassroots members of the Progressive Conservative Party have passed resolutions at past policy conventions calling for an end to health premiums. We were amazed, Mr. Speaker, when we read that, but there it is, and I would advise the government to listen to their grassroots because in this particular case I think they're onto something. In previous sessions of this Legislature members of the Conservative caucus have introduced legislation and proposals that would have ended the collection of health premiums. The Minister of Seniors has consistently promised seniors' groups that he believes that premiums should be eliminated, at least for seniors, as soon as possible.

It is unfortunate that the Premier and the minister are unwilling to listen to Albertans on this issue and are in fact considering further hikes in this regressive and unfair health tax. Burdening hard-working Albertans and middle-income seniors while proceeding with an extremely generous tax cut for already profitable corporations sends a clear signal to Albertans, Mr. Speaker. This government continues to listen only to what it wants to hear. It continues to tilt the so-called Alberta advantage to high-income earners and larger profitable corporations while asking average Alberta families to pay more.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I urge all members of the House to support Motion 502. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise in the Assembly this evening and add my comments to the discussion and debate surrounding Motion 502. As we have previously heard tonight, Motion 502 proposes to wipe out health care premiums for all seniors and within three years for all individuals in an attempt to alleviate hardships endured by some Albertans.

As many of my colleagues are already aware, the care and well-being of seniors is of great concern to me. I feel we must always be mindful of the important contributions they have made and continue to make to our families and our communities, and we should provide for them the appropriate programs and necessary supports.

I also acknowledge that this province has an aging demographic and an increasing proportion of elderly individuals. The number of seniors moving into Alberta is also growing. As of April of last year, 2003, 10 per cent, or 1 in 10, of the province's total population were seniors, and it's projected that by 2025 we will have 20 per cent, or

1 in 5. The seniors population will grow to this number, and there will necessarily be an increasing demand on the province to provide adequate supports, health and other, for seniors in our province. So we should be thinking about the future when we go into this kind of discussion.

However, Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to point out that just over half of all seniors over the last year did not have to pay any health care premiums at all because they qualified for an exemption due to a lower level of income. So what you're asking for we are already providing to lower level seniors. Moreover, some additional seniors only paid half their premiums because they qualified for a partial exemption.

So the government already recognizes that lower income seniors and Albertans may not be in the position to afford health care premiums, because we've responded to that. Most definitely, we feel that there should not be a financial impediment for these people to access health care services, so this is not totally a new idea that you have. The province already sets exemption thresholds so that those who need the assistance have the opportunity to receive it. The government implements a formula to determine the amount of premium that is to be paid or not paid by Albertans.

According to our government's philosophy, we provide support for those most vulnerable in society. Health care premium subsidies are not only available for seniors but also for low-income Albertans and are divided into four categories depending on if you're single or have a family, with or without children. It's my understanding that the rationale for the proposed motion and the elimination of premiums is to ease the burden for seniors and low-income Albertans. However, as I just said, exemptions are already provided to compensate seniors and those with lower incomes. In other words, about 60 per cent of seniors already either do not pay anything for their health care premiums or only partial or 50 per cent coverage.

I think that a better way to help those who struggle would be to examine our exemptions system. It seems logical to me, Mr. Speaker, that if the objective is to help those who experience financial difficulty, it may be beneficial to review once again and possibly further increase the threshold levels, because that has been done just recently by this government. This could provide exemptions for more Albertans in lower income categories, and it would ensure that premium deductions are based on incomes rather than by age.

If the cost of health care premiums is a burden for some financially strapped Albertans, then raising thresholds would help those individuals and families who would more likely benefit from a subsidy rather than a blanket or a universal exemption. The main group of Albertans who would benefit most from a total premium elimination would be middle and higher income earners as they pay the full premium. As I said earlier, this government's philosophy is to assist the most vulnerable. Now, I know there are those who would say that I am mean spirited and that I don't care, but I am a caring Conservative.

We must also keep in mind that not all Albertans would benefit from the elimination of health care premiums. Low-income earners, as I said, are already exempt, while those who pay only a portion of the premium would only receive a partial benefit. So this begs the question: how would this motion really benefit low-income seniors as they are already benefiting?

Mr. Speaker, many Albertans have their health care insurance premiums or a portion of them paid by their employer. These individuals would only benefit if the employer decided to pass the savings on to their employees. Therefore, there's no guarantee that these Albertans would even see any of these savings.

I would also like to make the argument that health care premiums serve as a reminder to Albertans that health care services cost money. As mentioned many times here and in the past, many Albertans view health care services as essentially free, and this is not the case as $20 million a day is spent on funding our health care system. Albertans need to realize that health care services – and they want the best – are expensive, and premiums serve as a good tool to help those who would forget that. Without the premium reminder it may be forgotten that with each visit to the doctor there is a cost, actually a large cost, as we all know, involved. Or if we don't know, we should know. Health care is not free, and any misperception in this line of thought is dangerous as it does lead to overuse of the system. Granted, it is crucial that health care services are available to Albertans. However, we must not forget the costs associated.

Mr. Speaker, the province continues to recognize the importance of priority spending in health care. Funding for health care services for '03-04 will reach $7.35 billion, which increased by 7.4 per cent over the previous year. Health spending remains the largest expenditure for this government. It is projected for '03-04 that health expenditures will account for 35.3 per cent of the total budget. Now, some provinces in Canada use up to 50 per cent of their budgets for health care. What could you give up in Alberta to cover health care costs as high as 50 per cent?

This province funds its health care system through three methods: federal transfer payments, general revenues, and health insurance premiums. Mr. Speaker, health premiums account for a significant portion of health expenditures. Last year the health premiums brought in roughly $913 million in revenue, and this equated to 13 per cent of health care costs. This year that figure will likely exceed $1 billion. Maybe if the federal government would increase their transfer payments by 13 per cent, as is reasonable, why then perhaps we could consider your motion.

Realistically, if premiums are eliminated, our system would require money to come from other areas in our budget, and $1 billion would have to be cut from our programs and services to make up the difference. Then we could really talk about cuts and not in glasses and dental, as the Member for Edmonton-Highlands referred to inaccurately. The extended health benefit was a universal program that offered only 30 per cent coverage to all seniors, but now – and it folds in with our government's philosophy – it provides a hundred per cent coverage for low-income seniors. And if you don't have 30 per cent of what it costs for a new set of false teeth, then I guess you don't get your false teeth, although we do have the special-needs benefit.

Of course, premiums could be eliminated, and the lost revenue could be replaced through other means, and that could mean perhaps an increase in taxes. Maybe that's another option. Albertans could possibly see taxes go up in order to make up the shortcomings, and from past debates in this province any increases would be met with furious opposition.

Mr. Speaker, in order to take money out of the health budget, reforms need to take place. We're talking about a significant amount of money being eliminated. One billion dollars can't just be dropped out of the budget without Albertans feeling the impact. This money can't be just taken away without changes to the entire health system. It's not that simple. Reforms will need to occur to account for the dollars. The elimination of premiums could possibly be part of health care reforms, but that would have to be a part of a total package that would consider this change.

The province recognizes the importance of health reforms. The annual increase in spending for health care has grown at a faster rate than the province's overall revenues. If this trend continues, the province will not be able to sustain the increases. As a result, the government is in the process of reforming the health care system. The Premier's Advisory Council on Health was established to review the system and make recommendations for meaningful reform, and the full implementation of the recommendations will be completed by December 2004.

The Speaker: I must regretfully inform the hon. member that this portion of her speaking time has now left us.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate this opportunity, and I am pleased to support this particular motion. The Liberals and the New Democrats have both held this position for I don't know how many years but a long time for good reason.

I think there are a few points that are worth clarifying right off the bat. This is not a premium; this is a tax. If it was a premium, there would be some correspondence to risk. There would be some correspondence to benefit. There would be some choice in whether or not you paid it. This has nothing to do with an insurance premium; this is a tax. That's reinforced by the fact that this actually doesn't flow into the health care system directly. It flows simply into general revenues. So this is a tax that should be cut. It's a tax that should be eliminated. It's simply a verbal sleight of hand that it's called a premium instead of the proper title, which is a tax.

I also note from the most recent third-quarter fiscal update that this is in fact a very substantial tax. We make almost the same amount from health care premiums as we do from crude oil royalties, and that's with crude oil priced at extremely high levels. This is telling us that we have become heavy handed in our taxing through this particular avenue and that we should eliminate this tax.

This is a tax cut that would serve all Albertans. As the Member for Edmonton-Highlands pointed out, it's a tax cut that would leave money in Alberta, in the hands of people who will spend it here, in the pockets of employers who employ people here. This would be a significant favour to small businesses when they provide this benefit, paying the health care premium to their employers. It would be a significant benefit to institutions like universities and regional health authorities and school boards, who pay the partial or entire cost of this for their employees. So, again, there are benefits across the board here.

8:30

I listened to the previous speaker's comments on who benefits and who doesn't benefit and who's hit by this tax and who gets exemptions, and I think it's really worth driving home the point that this is a tax that hits the working poor and the middle class the very, very hardest. The way the exemptions are set up is that you have to be almost destitute to qualify. If you are, say, working at an $8 or $9 or $10 an hour wage, just enough to earn more than $16,000 a year in taxable income, then you have to pay the full amount. What that translates to is that a family with children earning $35,000 a year spends about 3 cents of every dollar they bring in in health care premiums. It's a 3 per cent cream off the top for the working poor. A family, say, where one of the parents is at home and one of the parents is working at Wal-Mart or as a secretary in an office or some position like that that doesn't pay terribly well gets hit paying 3 cents of every dollar of income in this premium.

On the other hand, a wealthier family earning $100,000 a year spends only about 1 cent per dollar of income on this tax. You can see who this is hurting the most. It's hurting people who are lower middle-income earners. In fact, the irony here is that the wealthier the person, the more likely this tax is to be paid for as part of a benefits package. So it's kind of a double benefit for the wealthy and a double bind for the working poor.

Alberta is one of only two Canadian provinces that charge these taxes, and it is a tax that has been going up dramatically under this government. It's yet another example of the many flaws of the Mazankowski report. Based on a recommendation from the Premier's Advisory Council on Health, the government actually boosted health care premiums a stunning 30 per cent in 2002, a huge tax increase. Can you imagine? A tax increase from this government of 30 per cent when they have the opportunity to eliminate this tax and at the same time – and this will appeal to the Premier's new chief of staff – lay off a substantial number of civil servants because those civil servants will not be required any more to implement this tax. So win/win: reduce the bureaucracy; make a tax cut.

In fact, most Albertans are quite prepared to pay for their health care system through general revenues, through the normal taxes they collect, and would be delighted to have premiums eliminated. The question comes up: where would a government offset this tax cut? Well, this government hasn't worried before about offsetting tax cuts, and it is in the enviable position of running substantial surpluses year after year as a result of very generous natural gas and other natural resource revenues. In fact, they've been recording an average of about a two and a quarter billion dollar surplus per year for the last eight years.

So one option is simply to offset the reduced revenue through the surplus. Another option is to forgo or reverse the flat tax that was introduced in 2000 and has cost the government about one and a half billion dollars a year in lost revenues, almost all of which is an overwhelming benefit to wealthy Albertans. In fact, it seems that just about everything this government does is an overwhelming benefit to wealthy Albertans. There is a pattern here.

There are also other ways we could rearrange government priorities. We could, for example, forgo the $33 million that this government uses to subsidize the horse racing industry. Or we could forgo the many millions that have been spent on committees studying health care reform and on and on and on. There were six new ministries created in 2001 by this government to add extra employment for its MLAs, and that has cost about $46 million in extra salaries. So this is not a difficult problem. There are savings to be made by eliminating health care premiums.

I would like to hear the debate from the other government members. The speaker from Calgary-West made a number of points which are well worth rebutting, and I'd like to hear where everybody else stands on this issue. Our position is absolutely clear. We will support this motion. We have been for years opposed to health care premiums.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and speak to Motion 502 as put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

First I'd like to recognize the good intentions behind this bill, especially how it relates to Alberta's seniors population. Obviously, it is the goal of government to make continued efforts to improve the standard of living of the people they represent, and one of the ways we do that is by lowering taxes and reducing fees. However, government is also responsible for making sure that the services it is responsible for are both effective and sustainable. Eliminating health care premiums for all seniors immediately and phasing out all health care premiums for all Albertans would affect the number of dollars that are available for health care and seniors' programs.

The idea in and of itself is a good one, but the fact is that it costs money to maintain a high-quality health care system, and Albertans are very proud owners of such a system. According to the Maclean's report last year, those of us in the capital region have access to the best health care system and service in Canada. The overall ranking was based on various criteria such as life expectancy, heart attack and stroke survival rates, as well as local services and preventable admissions. But that quality isn't limited to this region alone. Every year more than 250,000 surgeries and diagnostic tests are performed in Alberta's rural and urban hospitals. Seventy-eight thousand nine hundred and one MRIs were done between April 2002 and March 2003, up 12.5 per cent from the previous year, and during the same time span heart surgeries jumped by 5.4 per cent. Five thousand, one hundred and eighty-one joint replacements were performed, an increase of 6.4 per cent.

I do not believe that we have a crisis in the delivery of health care services, but I do believe that we have a crisis in the sustainable funding of health care services. It costs over $20 million each day to operate Alberta's health care system, and the costs climb higher with each passing year. There are numerous reasons for the increasing costs, and there is great justification for those costs, such as our population increase, greater health needs of our people, an older population, and more diagnostic technology.

This system has become bigger as Alberta's population continues to boom. Costs are rising to maintain the quality of our ever-expanding system, and it is irresponsible to eliminate a form of funding which helps the province deliver these types of services without having some sort of plan as to how the shortfall would be met.

The cost of health care is expected to rise 8 to 10 per cent across Canada this year. Meanwhile, government revenues are growing by less than half that amount. What this essentially means is that money is being pulled away from other departments and other services in order to pay for the health system we so value. Alberta health care premiums bring in $913 million in revenues each year, which is equivalent to about 13 per cent of total health care expenditures.

Now, I know that there are going to be some who will point out that health care premiums do not directly flow back into the health system, and that's true. However, when health care spending receives the most funds of the total taxes collected by the Alberta government, it's easy to see that health care premiums are necessary in order for the system to be properly funded. And while health care premiums flow into general revenue, monies flow from general revenue back into Alberta's health care system. The title of this fee is a question of semantics. The reality is, however, that if this amount, just shy of $1 billion, is not collected in this manner, it will have to be obtained some other way.

8:40

Now, the motion itself focuses firstly on seniors and asks that they be exempt immediately from health care premiums. Those who live on a fixed income can be burdened by monthly expenditures, and health care premiums can be one of those burdens. This government has recognized this, and more than half of our seniors do not pay health care premiums. Of the 323,000 seniors living in Alberta in April of 2003, 164,000, or 51 per cent, did not pay health care premiums, and an additional 20,000 seniors pay only part of their health care premiums. Eliminating these premiums in general, especially in a manner that puts age before more important factors such as income levels, is the wrong approach. I prefer to increase the exemption levels for seniors. To exempt all seniors from having to pay health care premiums would simply download a burden onto Alberta's younger families.

The second part of the motion calls for health care premiums to be phased out over three years. Obviously, the motion is recognizing the value of health care premiums, or it would simply ask that all health care premiums be eliminated, period. But a timeline is included in the motion, I sense, because the member realizes that if the money is not coming in through health care premiums, then either the government would need to raise the necessary funds using other methods such as increases to personal income tax, or the government would need the time to figure out how to rid the system of nearly $1 billion in services.

I believe that health care premiums assist in significantly sustaining our highly valued public health care system. Our health regions have made strides in encouraging the use of emergency rooms exclusively for incidents that truly warrant immediate attention. In fact, Alberta is an international leader in delivering health and educational services using telecommunications technology. Initiatives such as 408-LINK help us to understand our health care needs and the most appropriate actions to be taken in serving them. Having the health care charge related to the paycheque is an open way of collecting the necessary dollars needed for the health care system. Again, I would like to reiterate: if the money were not being collected in this manner, it would have to be found in other areas.

As a point of interest, I would point out that Albertans pay the overall lowest taxes across this country. As Albertans we do pay health care premiums, granted, but we do not pay a provincial sales tax, and we do not pay a high rate of personal income taxes. This goes back to my point that if health care premiums are eliminated, these funds would have to come from somewhere else. If we truly want to get rid of health care premiums, then we need to find new ways of funding health services in Alberta. This has been a focus of our provincial government for a number of years. If we want to get rid of health care premiums, we must be willing to discuss substantial and significant ways of funding our beloved publicly funded health care system.

In addition, we need the federal government to honour their funding share of implementing the five principles of the Canada Health Act. One has to wonder whether any health care premiums would be required if the federal government paid their committed and commitment share.

Mr. Speaker, the motion put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands is admirable because it does attempt to alleviate a cost faced by Albertans, but at this point in time the motion is somewhat premature. Right now health care premiums play a sizable role in generating funds for Alberta's health care system. Removing them puts more strain on a system that is expected to become only more expensive in the future unless we reform how we fund our very valuable public health care system to make it sustainable and affordable for our seniors, for ourselves, and for the generations to come.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and speak to Motion 502, sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands. I'm very pleased to speak to this issue again as it is one that will never go away. Motion 502 urges the government to get rid of health care premiums. Now, I know that it urges the government to phase it out over three years for everybody other than seniors, but I think that we can safely say that the intent of this motion is to rid this province of health care premiums altogether, an idea promoted by the opposition in this province for many years.

This is an issue that many of us have debated time and time again. I will say that, yes, I would love to support this motion. I would love to stand before you and say that we can do away with our health care premiums because we can afford it, but I can't say that. I know that we have premiums for a reason, and like it or lump it, they are here to stay for a little while longer.

Mr. Speaker, health care premiums are a very important part of our health care system. For some people they are a burden. Some Albertans do have difficulty paying the premium, but what I don't think people in this province really understand is that we are struggling ourselves to foot the health care bill in Alberta. Health care is a top priority for Albertans, and I think this government does a great job, with the resources it is given, ensuring that our health care system is decent if not fantastic.

Throughout the years as health care has become larger and more comprehensive, this government has met the challenges that have been thrust upon it. One of these challenges is not getting the proper amount of funding from the federal government. I know that you might stand up and say: oh, sure; you're blaming the feds for our woes. It's true. Their lack of foresight on this issue has really caused a lot of problems for this province as well as other provinces around the country.

Every day the price of health care seems to increase in Alberta. We see more and more people moving to this province from around Canada, and they expect to receive excellent services while we send $24 million a day to Ottawa. However, when these people come to our province, they aren't bringing with them the infrastructure that they used to have. No. They expect to use ours, and that is completely fine except that this powerful growth is putting a strain on all of our top priorities. Health is included.

Alberta is having a tough time keeping pace with the amount of activity that this province is seeing in regard to growth. So when the topic of premiums comes up, everybody seems to always want to get rid of them. What I think everybody seems to forget is that these premiums bring almost a billion dollars into our health system. That is a significant amount of cash, that is desperately needed for our system.

Let us imagine that we did cut the premiums from Albertans. What if we decided, yes, that not paying premiums is a good idea? Where would that leave us? Well, I think that we could safely say that we would be without a few luxuries in this province. You have to remember that $1 billion is a large part of our health budget, and we would have to recoup that cost somehow because, as you all know, health care is not free no matter what you think. So what luxuries should we be without in this province? Of course, maybe calling them luxuries is a bad moniker, but if we were to eliminate close to $1 billion from our budget, they would have to be coined luxuries.

If we look at the current budget, what do we see that we would not be able to afford if we cut premiums out completely? Currently health care premiums bring in approximately $913 million. So we'd need to cut funding for the departments of Economic Development, International and Intergovernmental Relations, Revenue, Seniors, Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development, the Solicitor General, and Sustainable Resource Development just to make up the shortfall that would occur if no one in this province paid premiums.

Of course, if we put this into perspective in regard to Motion 502, we see that premiums would be totally eliminated in three years. I can almost guarantee that our health costs will be far higher and the amount eliminated from premiums will be far greater than what we see today.

8:50

So I put this back to the hon. member: what would he like to see us cut? What portion of our budget would he like to see tossed to the wolves, as it were, and what services would he deprive Albertans of? Would it be the entire budget of the Solicitor General? I'm sure Albertans could do without our police. Or would you have all of our aboriginal programs cut? I mean, they don't really need our help; do they?

That is what Albertans must realize: we just cannot cut premiums without some sort of plan to find revenue to sustain our health system. We all know how Albertans react when there are cuts made. Think back to when this government had to cut 1 per cent from every department in 2002, 1 measly per cent. That is barely a surface scratch, but the opposition was up in arms yelling, screaming, and kicking trying to save their precious services.

So how would we get away with just cutting almost $1 billion from our budget? We wouldn't get away with it. Something like this cannot be dropped; it cannot just happen. There needs to be a well-developed and very well-thought-out plan to make up that revenue. So how would we make up that revenue if we weren't able to cut anything? Maybe we would start delisting certain services. Maybe we would have to bring in more private health care options for Albertans. Or maybe we could just raise taxes, which would fly in the face of our Alberta advantage.

Mr. Speaker, I'm not saying that I disagree with the motion sponsored by the hon. member. In a province that is proud of having very low taxes, I think premiums are a bit of an anomaly. But health care is not free, and if we got rid of premiums, we would be sending the message that health care is free. Oh, wouldn't it be lovely if health care were free? Let me assure you that there is nothing I would like to do more than get rid of premiums. But, again, I am not in support of something that has the potential to cripple not only our health care system but our other programs and services as well.

Like I said before, health care is not free. I know that we all feel that it is public health care and that it's paid for by government, but we cannot overlook the fact that it's the taxpayers' money and premiums that are paying for that system. To remove such a large amount of money out of the system without a plan would be disastrous.

So, Mr. Speaker, you can see why I have reservations about supporting this motion, but my reasons do not stop there. Currently, we are trying very hard to reform our health care system to try and make it sustainable for many, many years to come. The system is in the midst of changes that should be completed by the end of this year. The changes stem from the Premier's Advisory Council on Health report, and the changes that are occurring should help alleviate some of the difficulties the system is facing. The recommendations being implemented will do a lot for our system. I know that one of the recommendations was for Albertans to continue to pay for health care through something similar to premiums to ensure that they realize that health care is not free.

Mr. Speaker, health care is not free, but we do provide millions in subsidies to low-income seniors and low-income Albertans who cannot afford these premiums. I think that it would not be a good idea to implement something like this motion is urging now, because we are in the midst of a great debate over changes to the system. Making a radical change like the one asked for in Motion 502 I think would be irresponsible. It lacks focus and vision.

If we were to eliminate premiums for seniors, who do you think will be paying for their health care? It is well known that this province is aging, and to remove premiums on the basis of age I think is a very poor way to do things. Currently in Alberta there are approximately 330,000 seniors, and less than half of those seniors pay the full premium.

Mr. Speaker, until we can come up with a proper plan to be rid of premiums, I think they should be here to stay. I urge all hon. members to vote against Motion 502 this evening. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to join the debate on Motion 502. At the very outset I would like to urge all members to support this motion, which eliminates seniors' health care premiums immediately while phasing them out for other Albertans in three years or less.

I have listened in vain, I'm afraid, for persuasive and sensible arguments against the motion by government members. What I've heard instead are purely ideological or philosophical arguments, as the Member for Calgary-West would prefer to call it, in favour of corporate tax cuts combined with specious and fallacious rationalizations that levying a health tax on individuals and families somehow makes people more aware of the cost of health care or that it makes health care more sustainable in this province. Far from it, Mr. Speaker. Every Albertan knows that health care is not free. This is a completely specious argument that's being made again and again by government members.

Albertans know full well that health care costs money. The question is whether it should be paid for by a regressive, lump sum tax disguised as health care premiums or from corporate taxes and other more progressive sources of government taxes and revenues. Health care premiums are one of the most flawed taxes levied by this government. My colleague the Member for Edmonton-Highlands has pointed out a number of these flaws. I need not repeat them. I'll briefly describe some more flaws of health care premiums to add to the list.

The health care premium tax is costly to administer, with $50 million per year spent writing off premium arrears and an additional $15 million spent on administering them. Add the two of them: $65 million right there.

Health care premiums are unfair to middle-income seniors and the self-employed, who it is not possible to include in an employee benefits plan. In recent years senior citizens have been hit not only with a 30 per cent hike in health care premiums but also a 50 per cent hike in long-term care fees, an increase in the copayment on their prescription drug coverage, and the loss of universal eye care and dental benefits. Scrapping health care premiums immediately is the least we can do for Alberta seniors living on fixed incomes.

Because health care premiums are not a true premium but a regressive tax cleverly disguised as a health premium, these premiums cannot be deducted as a health expense on tax returns in the same way that extended health and dental benefits can. If an employer pays a premium in whole or in part on behalf of an employee, this is considered a benefit and gets added to the employee's income, on which tax must be paid. Scrapping health care premiums also puts an end to this unfavorable tax treatment.

Health care premiums are a payroll tax, now speaking from the side of employers, that adds to the cost of doing business in this province. Employers are required to deduct and remit premiums on behalf of their employees, adding to the cost of the red tape. Scrapping premiums will cut payroll tax costs for employers like hospitals, school boards, universities, municipalities, community agencies, and businesses large and small.

Worst of all, health care premiums are plain and simple unfair to middle-income earners. A two-adult family making $35,000 per year pays exactly the same $1,056 in health care premiums as a family making $100,000, $150,000, $200,000, or more a year. Everyone who now pays health care premiums would benefit from scrapping this tax, but middle-income families, including middle-income seniors, would experience the most relief. In fact, a family making $35,000 would see their total tax load cut by one-third when health care premiums are fully eliminated. That is significant tax relief to hard-pressed families, Mr. Speaker.

In September 2000 the then Provincial Treasurer and the Premier's incoming chief of staff committed the Conservative government to cut corporate taxes in half, thereby permanently reducing provincial government revenues by over $1 billion after four years. The original four-year time frame of the corporate tax cuts has been extended . . .

The Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but the time limit for consideration of this item of business has now expired.

head: 9:00      Government Bills and Orders
    Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

The Chair: I'll call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 2
Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

The Chair: Are there any questions, comments, or amendments to be offered with respect to this act? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I did want to make a few comments with respect to this bill. This bill will allow vehicular access to a recently declared environmentally protected area, an access that is currently prohibited under the Wilderness Areas, Ecological Reserves, Natural Areas and Heritage Rangelands Act. The bill proposes to allow a throughway to both off-highway and highway vehicles to specifically allow "access to and egress from the Bob Creek Wildland." The bill also provides for the erection of signs and notices marking trails, access ways, and boundaries. The trails named specifically in the act are the Bob Creek trail and the Camp Creek trail. However, the bill is worded rather generally enough to leave it open ended whether or not other trails can or will be added.

I just want to indicate that I have some very serious concerns and reservations about this bill. The concern is that the nonconforming uses could remain prohibited and could set a bad precedent for all protected areas. There are other ways to deal with exceptions that are necessary, such as those by ranchers and so on who do need to access the area and have traditionally done so, by giving special permits to access the trails. That would ensure that the traditional uses could be met, and the access by people who need to be there for economic reasons and historical reasons would be able to continue.

I'm advised, talking to individuals in the area, that the Bob Creek trail has been maintained as a road for some time, a long time, but that the concern is more the Camp Creek trail. It currently has no status as a road. I think, Mr. Chairman, the problem is that we have the potential for an increase in use of these trails. I just want to indicate that there are ways to do this and provide access to this area for those traditional uses without opening it up for general use. Once you allow the vehicles on these trails, you're going to have a lot of trouble enforcing it, and particularly the cuts that we have seen to enforcement staff and budgets . . .

Dr. Taft: Are there any enforcement staff left?

Mr. Mason: Well, we don't even know, Mr. Chairman, in fact if there are any significant resources that remain available to the department to patrol and protect these areas. So you're going to allow these four-wheel drive vehicles in there, you're going to put a bunch of signs up, and the people that do the protection are complaining that they can't even afford the gas for their vehicles to do their job. That's how bad the department has been cut.

So really the fear here is that you're going to increase the recreational use of these trails. Ostensibly the bill is to provide for traditional access for economic activities that have long existed. I think there are ways to do that without breaking the principle of prohibiting these kinds of vehicles in this type of area.

So I think, Mr. Chairman, that with that I will indicate that we'll not be supporting this bill and urge government members to take another look at this. I think there are, as I have said, effective ways to meet the needs of the community in this area who do require the access while maintaining some protection for the area from increased recreational use, which I fear is inevitable if this bill is passed.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: You're ready for the question?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This is a piece of legislation that is symbolically significant as a representation of this government's attitude towards wilderness and towards protecting land that's in its natural state or at least is close to its natural state. We're addressing here a block of land in southwestern Alberta just north of the Oldman River, I believe. Absolutely beautiful country. I'm not sure I've been to this exact location, but I have spent time down in and around this area. It's rolling rangeland with some wooded area and open prairie, and it is quite gorgeous with the Rocky Mountains on the horizon to the west.

It's also very important traditional land for aboriginal people. This is not, I think, terribly far, for example, from Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump. Well, it would be certainly in the same general area.

Dr. Massey: It's in the province.

Dr. Taft: I'm getting heckled by my own members. Ah, yes. Respect.

Now, it's interesting to go back and look at a little bit of the history, the background to the Black Creek heritage rangeland, which was designated in that somewhat infamous program called the special places program in 1999. The special places program started off with, I think, a world of good intentions and ran into an awful lot of compromises, and we may yet be seeing some of those play out here.

Now, I understand that the management plan for this area has been actually drafted, and it states the following, and this is a quote, I understand, from the management plan for the area.

The primary goal of the Wildland and the Heritage Rangeland is as follows: To preserve the natural heritage (i.e., soil, flora, fauna, landscape features, and natural/ecological processes) of the two protected areas in perpetuity.

And this next point is crucial.

Other provincial protected areas program goals (i.e., heritage appreciation, outdoor recreation, heritage tourism) are of secondary importance with respect to the protected areas. The heritage appreciation and outdoor recreation goals may be met, but only to the extent that their attainment does not conflict with or impinge on the preservation goal.

9:10

Now, the question here is: will Bill 2 as it is proposed impinge on the preservation goals of the management plan for this area? It seems to me that it will in fact impinge because it's going to allow an increase in off-highway motorized vehicle transportation into this area. It'll increase vehicle access to the Black Creek heritage rangeland, and inevitably, it seems to me, that's going to lead to degeneration in the natural condition of this special area.

So unless I hear information otherwise from the sponsoring minister – it's none other than the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek – I think we'll have to oppose this piece of legislation. I mean, it's well known that off-highway vehicle activity has a detrimental impact by and large on wildlife habitat. We're probably all familiar with the kind of disturbance and damage that's done to the soil and to creek beds where these roads cross creeks. It certainly is noisy. It disturbs wildlife, increases air pollution, and can cause, in fact, significant soil erosion. I saw some photos from last fall of soil erosion in an area north of the area we're discussing right now resulting from off-highway vehicle use, and it was actually quite dramatic and quite disturbing.

Now, I suppose that if there were some absolutely overwhelming justification for this, I'd consider it, but I think that in some ways we not only need to think locally and act locally; we need to think globally as well here. We are in a world in which wilderness is being eliminated. Wilderness is being lost around the planet. In fact, there are some people who have put forward pretty powerful arguments that nature as it has been known throughout the entire existence of humanity has now ended. The whole idea of genuine nature is no longer a reality. It is simply a historical idea, meaning that there is no part of this planet any more that is untouched or unaffected by human activity and that indeed we have gone from allowing natural processes to shape the course of the earth's health to having that overwhelmed by human activity.

So the whole idea from a global perspective that wilderness is rapidly diminishing has to be considered here. We in this country, this incredible country of ours, Canada, and this wonderful province of ours, Alberta, still have corners of this land that are about as wild as any you are going to find in the world. We ought to be stewarding that land; we ought to be protecting it; we ought to be thinking of generations ahead and the value that untarnished natural land will have in perpetuity. I'm afraid this bill doesn't respect that idea. This bill threatens yet more wilderness in Alberta and is something that I think our children and grandchildren will look back at and say: wasn't that too bad; we lost that gorgeous piece of nature.

So I do look forward to the comments from the minister, the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek to see how he justifies this bill, see how he explains it to us, and how he can attempt to convince us that opening up yet another little corner of Alberta's nature to quads and motorized vehicles is a good idea, because I don't believe it is.

I don't want to consume any more time than is necessary here, Mr. Chairman, but unless I hear something quite remarkably convincing from the minister, I'm going to be opposing this bill. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I've continued to follow this debate in Hansard and while I'm able to be in the House, and there was something that the Member for Highwood had brought up that sort of caught my attention last time when he was talking about the lack of snow in the area. Therefore, my discussion about whether it was appropriate for snowmobilers or not was somewhat of a moot point because there wasn't any snow, and I thought: okay. I went looking for a better description for my own purposes of where this area was and what it was like and didn't have to look too hard because we're getting very good in Alberta on having information available on web sites.

This is from an Alberta government web site. It's on the special places, called Alberta's Commitment, from page 31, and I'm just going to read this description because it quite struck me and, I think, was the deciding factor in my decision not to support this bill. So, if I may, it just says that one of the most noteworthy accomplishments of Special Places is the designation of over 30,000 hectares in an area known as the Whaleback. The largest undisturbed montane landscape in Alberta is now preserved in Bob Creek Wildland and Black Creek Heritage Rangeland. A series of spine-like ridges, the landscape of the Whaleback alternates between open grasslands and forests of pine, spruce, fir and aspen. Limber pine over 575 years old and 400-year old Douglas fir have been recorded. The snow free, Chinook-swept grasslands are winter range for mule deer and Alberta's largest elk herd while the list of predators includes cougar, wolf and grizzly bear.

Then it goes on to talk about there being over 80 species of birds there, that "many rare plants have been recorded," and of great interest is that with the co-operation of industry, the Whaleback is permanently preserved free of mining, oil and gas development and logging. Forestry tenures were relinquished and oil and gas rights donated to the Nature Conservancy of Canada. Grazing lessees also supported inclusion of their leases in the protected areas.

So there's been a lot of work, a lot of meeting of the minds, from sectors that may traditionally be seen to be in opposition to one another, and I was quite struck by that.

Given that it is a very special place in Alberta – and I listened carefully to what the minister brought forward as rebuttal to the concerns that have been raised – I'm not satisfied by his points that this is reason enough to step away from our previous commitment to protect this area. I'm aware that my colleague the Official Opposition critic on the environment and on parks and forestry and sustainable resource management has also spoken at length raising her concerns around this. We have had a feedback loop in the community, both the interested constituency of environmental enthusiasts but also from the area. We always seek out what their opinion is on anything, and we've not had a very positive response coming from there.

Given all of that in context, I'm not willing to support this bill. I even looked at whether it was possible to amend the bill to make it more palatable, and I don't see opportunity for amending without, you know, totally scratching the bill, which is going against the whole point of an amendment.

So at this point I'm not willing to support the bill. Thank you.

Bill 3

Architects Amendment Act, 2004

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to make a few brief comments in support of the bill and to summarize it a bit.

Bill 3, the Architects Amendment Act, 2004, is a measure that strengthens the professional standards for the architectural and interior design community. I was pleased to hear supportive comments on the bill from other members during second reading, and I'll take that support as affirmation that we are on the right track with the proposed amendments contained within this legislation. Through different amendments contained in this bill, the licensed interior designers would find a greater inclusion within their related industry. I'd like to touch on some of these amendments and briefly explain the benefits, as I see them, that would result.

Bill 3 proposes that licensed interior designers be defined under section 2 of the Architects Act, which references the definition contained in the act's interior design regulation. Defining this group in the act represents the main intent of Bill 3 as it makes the act more inclusive and at the same time provides greater legislative transparency. This is a measure that has been requested by the Alberta Association of Architects. Also under section 2 is a definition of restricted practitioner.

Under section 3 licensed interior designers would be authorized to perform specific architectural services as defined in the Architects Act's supporting regulations. The proposed amendment would reflect what is currently happening within the industry.

Section 4 would see a licensed interior designer elected to the Alberta Association of Architects governing council. This would ensure that licensed interior designers would be represented in the association's decision-making process. Also, it would improve the communication process between the association and licensed interior designers.

The current act contains no provisions to authorize the development of regulations specifically relating to the registration, education, training, professional conduct, and practice of interior design. This would be alleviated in the change found within section 5 of the Architects Amendment Act, which establishes regulation-making powers.

Amendments under section 7 and part 8 establish the registration, certification, and licence renewal requirements of APEGGA members who are authorized to become restricted practitioners under the act. Thus, they would be included in the Alberta association and the Alberta register of members. There's little doubt in my mind that these amendments would strengthen professional standards as they relate to the licensed interior designers and restricted practitioners. The industry is healthier when regulatory bodies are given the authority to ensure that members meet proper educational requirements and provide their customers with a safe, competent, and ethical service by following the prescribed code of conduct.

I'd like to conclude my comments by once again acknowledging the contribution of the architect profession in helping to develop these amendments. The co-operation between the staff of Alberta Human Resources and Employment and the Association of Architects' representatives was key in bringing forward recommendations to improve the Architects Act.

So with that, Mr. Chairman, I'll take my seat, and I'll look forward to hearing the comments of other members.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I know that the Official Opposition critic covering this area, my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar, has already spoken in support of this bill. We have sent it out to our usual feedback loop, and no one raised any concerns with it. The Official Opposition has certainly been on the record in the past as being supportive of self-regulation for certain kinds of professional associations covering scope of practice and various housekeeping matters.

At this point no one has raised with us any concerns about the bill, and I'm willing to support it at this time.

Bill 4

Blind Persons' Rights Amendment Act, 2004

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Lest any of us think that nobody follows what we do in here, actually there are people who pay close attention to what we do in here. One of them phoned me after my last round of comments on this bill and gave me some very useful and interesting information. This is a person who has worked closely on this piece of legislation for many years, has some expertise in guide dogs and in service dogs and how they're trained and how they're handled, and in fact relies on a guide dog for her daily life. She pointed out to me that, obviously, she fully endorses Bill 4 and that perhaps instead of extending or expanding this bill and sweeping service dogs into the same legislation as guide dogs, we may want to consider separate legislation for service dogs.

Service dogs, of course, can be trained for all kinds of things. They can be trained to help people who have trouble balancing. They can be trained for people who are prone to seizures. But they can also be trained to be quite aggressive. There are in the United States service dogs who are trained to help people who are having problems with stalkers, and if the wrong person approaches the person being helped by the service dog, the service dog will snarl and growl and, if need be, I guess, attack the potential stalker. That can be a problem in some public arenas, as you can well imagine. So we need to perhaps consider the full range of services that service dogs provide when we come to regulating them and providing legislation.

We also need to be very conscious of the different standards of training that dogs are provided. There are different organizations that certify dogs. There's the international federation of guide dog schools, which has, I understand, quite stringent standards specifically for guide dogs for blind persons. There are other dog schools and dog training associations for different kinds of service dogs, and unfortunately there are people around who have no licence, no particular background at all who claim that they are effective at training service dogs or even guide dogs. Of course, the danger there can be that if these dogs are not properly trained, somebody's life can be put in danger. If you're a blind person relying on your dog to help you across the street or if you have health problems or whatever other issues, the dog can mean life or death to you, and if the dog isn't properly trained, the consequences can be tragic.

These are some of the issues we need to be aware of, and we may want to look in the future at something like a service dog act or an assistance animals act, because they're not always just dogs. They could be developed in conjunction with a blind persons' rights amendment act or some other legislative framework. There certainly are many issues very closely connected to what we're debating in Bill 4 that need to be considered. I don't want to hold up Bill 4 while those other issues are considered, but in the future I hope that the government pays attention and looks at bringing forward other legislation to address other kinds of assistance animals.

With those comments I'll wrap up and look forward to other comments. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to use this opportunity to ask the minister who is sponsoring this bill, the Minister of Community Development, once again if he can give the Assembly a clear understanding of when we would see what should be the companion legislation.

A number of people have spoken about their, in my case, disappointment that we didn't get the other kinds of service and assistance animals included in this legislation. Fine. I'm willing to accept that this act remained pure, if you like, in that it was really dealing with the needs of blind persons and their guide dogs. I'm perfectly willing to accept that, but there were many of us who were waiting for the update or were waiting to bring us into the new millennium with clear legislation around service and assistance animals.

My concern was that we've now seen the update on the guide dogs and Blind Persons' Rights Act and no companion legislation, so when do we see the companion legislation? Are we going to have to wait another 20 years for that? I'm trying to prod the minister a bit here, but really this is an incomplete picture that we now have. We have resolved one small bit of this issue and have not resolved a whole other large area.

I also want to pick up on something that my colleague, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, said and maybe help to bring him additional information. He was mentioning the service animals that are specially trained to assist individuals who are being stalked or in a position of imminent severe threat. Usually someone has threatened to kill them and has every intention of carrying that out, and there are dogs that have been specially trained – you do hear of them mostly in the United States – to protect that person.

So the concerns expressed by my colleague that somehow they would be snarling and snapping at somebody in a public setting – strictly speaking those animals were trained to stay with the individual they are there to protect, and they are only to react if that person is going to be killed, essentially. The threat of them being killed is very high coming from a particular individual, and the animal is trained to react to that particular menace coming at them. It does allow that individual to get out in society in the same way that guide dogs allow persons with visual impairment to get out and move around in the world and do their business and that seizure dogs help people get out and move around and do what they need to do, and they'll be alerted if a seizure is coming by the animal.

The whole point is that people can get on with their lives, and these specially trained protection dogs are so that those individuals that are under extreme threat for their lives, in fact, can still go out and, you know, have coffee with a friend, do their grocery shopping, or go and gas up the car and do some of those things that everybody else gets to do, but because these individuals are under dire threat, they may not be able to do that. The dogs protect them, and they only react to the one individual. So it's a highly specialized area of service dogs, and these dogs don't go after anybody else in a public area. They are there to save someone's life, and it's a very specific reaction.

Again, part of the frustration here is that we didn't get the second bill that would have covered and outlined acceptable training standards, some sort of identification, and where in public various assistance animals would be welcomed or would be allowed to go with their owners. I was looking for the complete range of animals: those that are signal animals, for example, that can detect oncoming seizures in individuals or other kinds of health related issues; those that are an assistance animal, you know, for working with kids with autism or somebody in a wheelchair where they can pick up things that have been dropped by the individuals; and the protection animals that I just described.

We didn't get anything for all of those kinds of animals, so we're still in limbo with them. They're not allowed and accepted and protected in public spaces like the guide dogs are. That just simply wasn't addressed, and there's no information coming from the government about when we could expect that.

I'm certainly willing to support Bill 4, but I need to know when the rest of this comes, when we get the companion act that's going to come. So that's my plea to the sponsoring minister, to please move as quickly as possible. I would like to see it in this spring session, at the latest in the fall session, but let's have an answer from the minister. Where are we in the planning process with this second bill? I mean, I know that it takes the government some time to get all of their ducks in a row and to have this flow through their process. Where are we? If this is not going to happen this year, then stand up and tell us because there's been a lot of interest and a lot of people that are asking for this.

We've supported this Bill 4 for the blind persons. We'd like to know when we're going to get what we're waiting for, which is the rest of the service and assistance and signal animals.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Bill 1

Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Interim Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I had the opportunity to speak to Bill 1, the Alberta Centennial Education Savings Plan Act, at second reading, and now, as is the practice, we have an opportunity to go through the bill clause by clause and to look at some of the provisions.

I wanted to start with the preamble, Mr. Chairman. The preamble is one that I think most of us would have difficulty disagreeing with except, I think, for the interpretation or the action that seems to flow from those beliefs. That's really what they are, three belief statements. The first one is that the Alberta government recognizes the benefit of postsecondary education. The extrapolation from that, of course, is the bill that we have before us to encourage young Albertans to continue to postsecondary education.

We have in front of us a financial scheme that's supposed to do that. Unfortunately, it seems to be inconsistent with some of the other actions that the government has taken, and I think, in particular, it's the failure to have in place a long-term plan for the financing of postsecondary schools in the province.

The result of the lack of that plan is that we have the yearly – I've used the word "crisis" before, and "crisis" may not quite be the term. But each year as institutions prepare their budgets and, faced with fewer and fewer resources of the government, are forced to turn to students and increase their tuition, there's not a crisis but certainly an air of distress and a lot of political action with respect to students to try to make the government aware that if they really did recognize the benefits of postsecondary education, they would make it easier for those students already attending those institutions and make it easier for those people in those institutions that are responsible for postsecondary education and responsible for providing programs. That would make it easier for them, and that would be a true reflection that they recognize the benefits of a postsecondary education.

[Mr. Lougheed in the chair]

The second whereas in the preamble indicates that the government "wishes to raise awareness of the benefits of post-secondary education among children and their parents." I think I mentioned the last time I spoke to the bill that there has been a great effort on the part of the government, and in particular the Minister of Learning, to remind individuals who attend postsecondary schools and graduate from them how much they personally gain from that education. I think that there have been numbers tossed around with respect to the return on investment you get for investing in a postsecondary education.

The other piece of that has really not been very prominent in the government's awareness campaign, and that's the benefits that we all as a community enjoy because students are successful at our postsecondary schools. That goes for everything from the kinds of medical doctors and nurses and health care workers that we graduate and we all are able to draw upon when need arises to the engineers that help design bridges and highways and the kinds of structures we need for the transportation system that we all use to the social workers who help those in our community who are vulnerable or who are in distress and need help: a whole host of professionals that add to life in our community, both essential and the amenities that we enjoy.

There seems to have been little effort on behalf of the government to raise awareness of that kind of benefit of postsecondary education among citizens. I think it's unfortunate, and if the wish is to raise awareness, as this second whereas in the preamble indicates, I think that there could be a great deal more done with respect to the benefits to the broader community of encouraging youngsters to go to postsecondary schools.

The third whereas is one that we have some trouble with, and that's the government wishing "to encourage parents to plan and save for their children's post-secondary education." Now, no one will object or I don't think talk against parents planning for their youngsters to go to postsecondary schools, but the whole notion of saving and how much of the savings are going to be needed by parents I think is troubling. We've seen the withdrawal of support for postsecondary schools, the rather dramatic withdrawal in the last decade. The cuts that postsecondary institutions took in 1994 were the largest of all the budget cuts, 20 per cent, and many of the institutions have never recovered from that withdrawal of funds.

To turn around and to indicate to parents through actions like this – if the message is, "You're going to have to pay more because government is going to pay less," I think it's an issue that needs to have wider debate than what is stimulated by this whereas clause in Bill 1. So I'm concerned about the message that that puts out to parents, and I'm concerned about the message to government in terms of their responsibility for providing for postsecondary education.

It wasn't that long ago, Mr. Chairman, that Canada and a number of nations gathered at the UN and agreed that they would extend tax-supported education for students past 12th grade. They would extend a tax-supported education a year at a time until students had, first of all, a two-year college degree or diploma without having to foot the bill and then eventually a four-year degree.

It may not happen immediately, Mr. Chairman, but there's no question in my mind that a number of years down the road that's exactly where we'll be. As the importance of postsecondary education becomes more and more critical to the success of a knowledge economy like ours, an information economy, the need to have our students complete those programs is going to become more, and what better way to encourage students to continue past high school than to make that as part of the tax-supported system? I think that it is eventually where we're going to have to go as a society.

If you look at the grants that are outlined and who's eligible for them – I think that I mentioned this before at second reading, the whole notion of a child only being eligible if they were born to a resident in Alberta in 2005 or any subsequent year and the inherent unfairness of that for students who were born a year or 16 years previous to that. Many of them are going to be going on to postsecondary schools, and they are not going to have the same opportunity as the Albertans who by accident of birth are born in 2005, and I think that sends the wrong message to those students.

I also think that it's a shortcoming in terms of planning with respect to the centennial. We would hope that people wouldn't look back on the centennial as the year that they were left out of a plan by the government that would have allowed them to put aside some money, if they so desired, for their education. So I think the unfairness of the bill is unfortunate, I guess, to say the least.

The notion under section 3(1) of paying a grant of a hundred dollars into a registered education savings plan. There's still a great deal of discussion and a great deal of information about registered education savings plans. I heard a presentation on television just recently where parents were being encouraged to not use the registered education savings plan but, instead, to put that money into a registered mutual fund that acted exactly the same way but ended up paying far greater returns with respect to the money that was invested. So whether the registered education savings plan is the best vehicle to carry this money and to make it grow I guess has been questioned by people, and I'm not sure that I've heard a full discussion of the alternatives that the government looked at before they happened to settle on this plan. I realize that given the federal law in this area, that made it attractive to piggyback on. Again, I'm not convinced that the alternatives have been explored.

I dealt with the matter of eligibility, Mr. Chairman. I think it's a plan that on first blush looked good but on closer examination has some flaws that I think warrant more questions and certainly without some amendment I don't think deserves to be supported by this House.

Thanks, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I just thought I might try and respond to some of the comments made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. When I was listening to what he had to say in dealing with raising awareness of the importance of postsecondary education, the hon. member spoke of doctors and nurses and teachers and social workers, and I was quite frankly surprised that he didn't speak to any of the skills, any of the apprenticeships, or any of the college-applied degrees and so on that are also part of this. In other words, any approved postsecondary institution is then qualified to use these funds to further education. Whether or not your passion may be professional or in the area of skills, you should be able to follow your passion.

Another comment that the hon. member made was that he was concerned that the notion of saving for future education was troubling because he felt that perhaps it was a signal that government would pay less. Well, I think, Mr. Chairman, that saving for a postsecondary education is really a joint responsibility between parents, students, and government. I don't think saving is ever a bad idea.

With respect to the unfairness that was brought up again with respect to the fact that it starts in our centennial and goes on beyond, I'm wondering what benefit it would be for a 17 year old or an 18 year old to get a $500 contribution for postsecondary education. Really, the bottom line here is the magic of compound interest as well as the top-up, with respect to the federal government, of 20 per cent. What better return on investment is that?

If we look at the number of children we have in this province, there are 560,000 in K to 12. That means we must have another 200,000 that are from zero to age five. So you are looking at, you know, 700,000 to 800,000 kids. Divide that into $20 million and what do you get? About $25. Would that entice anybody to open an RESP? I don't think so.

With respect to whether or not RESPs are the best vehicle, the guidelines are federal guidelines, and I think the hon. member knows that you can find all manner and types of RESP plans, including some that invest in mutuals. So I don't know that the hon. member understands that you can go to any RESP dealer of your choice, and therefore you have a whole gamut of types of investments that you could in fact invest in.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Chair: Opposed? Carried.

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

Bill 7

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. I'm pleased to be able to rise in Committee of the Whole to add my comments on Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. Actually, I welcome the discussion that's caused by the introduction of this bill because I think there does need to be a discussion in Alberta about democratic renewal. Of course, senatorial reform, senate selection reform, is part of that package that needs to be considered.

The other ones that often are in the mix at the same time include the election process, whether we need to look at changing how we actually elect people. We have a first past the post system currently. You often hear proportional representation talked of as a viable alternative. The other day on the radio I heard someone talking about a mixed system, which would have been a version of proportional representation plus an additional vote. You would, in fact, cast two votes, an additional vote for the party of your choice. You could vote rep-by-pop for the individual person in your constituency, and then you could cast another vote that indicated your preference for the party. So if you thought the individual was doing a very good job and wanted to support them, if you had an incumbent, for example, but you really had to hold your nose over the overall party platform, you could reconcile those two things.

So there are still a number of other creative solutions that are coming up around election processes. I think this has to be addressed, and sometimes people laugh at me and say: "Oh, no, no, no. That's not going to happen. Whoever is in power is never going to let go of the system that keeps putting them back in power." But I would argue that there comes a point when the credibility of the party that wins is seriously impinged. At what point? When 50 per cent of the population, 40 per cent of the population, 30 per cent of the population are the ones that are voting? At that point what kind of credibility does the government have when they stand up and only 35 or 40 per cent of the population voted?

Well, how does that give them the great, you know, right to govern? It doesn't. At that point I think even governing parties, even parties that have monstrous majorities in the House, like the current situation in Alberta, even those parties will have to start to look at changing the system and championing a change for the system, because nobody believes them any more. Nobody gives them any kind of high regard because so few people actually participated in putting them there.

That links to another issue that I keep running into, and that is that we are not engaging young voters. A number of people have done work on this and I'm of course now tracking all of this, but what we're finding is that the current crop of young voters – in other words, 18 to 30, let's say – are not learning to vote. Generally, what we have is that lots of people, when they turn 18, don't vote in their first couple of elections because they're busy and they don't feel that they really have a lot of influence and they're not really paying attention. They don't have a lot at stake and stuff in the decisions.

Then they, you know, start a family, or they buy a house or property, and they get a bit more interested in how the laws that are passed and the people that are passing them affect their individual life. They become engaged in the process, and they start to vote. What we're finding with this group of younger voters now is that they're not learning to vote. They didn't vote at 18. They're not voting at 22. They're not voting at 26. It's not happening. They are not engaging in this system. So if we don't do something now to bring them into participation in this democracy, they will never participate, which I think bodes very ill for us in the future if we end up with an entire – what's the word I'm looking for? – age grouping that doesn't participate at all in the democratic process. We've got a problem.

So with the current voting system a lot of them say: "Well, I don't think my vote counts. You know, I don't feel that I participate. I don't think anybody listens to me." You know, I felt that way. I was in my 30s before I actually voted for someone that won, and that's a bit frustrating. I mean, that was hanging in through a lot of elections. It was actually municipal elections. That was hanging in through a lot of elections where I voted for people that just never won. You think: "Well, what's the point? My vote doesn't count here. Nobody really cares about my input." I guess I'm just stubborn in that I stuck it out so long that I actually started to get to a point where people that I was interested in were winning, and they were engaging enough other people to win.

Mr. Herard: Was the first time you did that when you voted for yourself?

Ms Blakeman: No. It was municipal.

The idea that we're not engaging those younger voters I think is a huge issue. They understand that with the first past the post system they're not getting the representation that they expect to see. I mean, look around. We're not very representative of our population at this point. We've got to make this system better so that we are more representative of the people that actually live in our constituencies. So we have a whole issue around the election processes and what is going to serve us better.

There are also issues around citizens' initiatives, and there are two parts to that. One is the idea of recall, and the second is what's most commonly called citizens' initiatives; that is, the citizens' ability to bring legislation or a bill or an idea, a concept, before the Legislative Assembly so that it is seriously considered. It doesn't mean that the Assembly has to pass the bill, but it does mean that it has to consider it and debate it and look at it. Again, that's a way, because people feel that their elected representatives are not paying attention to them. There's an issue that they want brought up, they keep coming back to it, and they can't get it on the floor to be debated.

So that's where we get these kinds of citizens' initiatives where, you know, you get so many signatures on a petition that supports the introduction of a piece of legislation or an idea to be debated, a certain percentage of the population, and in fact the bill is put in front of the Assembly and is debated, and if it passes from there, it's a different problem. I've always found it very interesting that this Assembly, in particular the governing party in this province, will not support those kinds of citizens' initiatives.

Now, I think there probably is a problem around MLA recall. Watching what's gone on in our sister province, our neighbouring province of B.C., that hasn't been a particularly successful experiment. It seems to have been driven more by, you know, a small group of dedicated people that really, really didn't like their MLA and, you know, set out to get them, and it . . .

Chair's Ruling Decorum

The Chair: Hon. members, it is becoming more and more difficult for the chair to hear, even with the aid of this marvellous instrument, over the loud chuckles and enthusiasm of some of the conversations. If you want to carry on a lively discussion, would you please, with the whip's permission of course, go out into the chamber next door or at least keep it down low enough so that we can hear the speaker, because there's only one speaker being recognized at this time, and it's definitely the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Debate Continued

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. So what we're talking about here is all the different possibilities for democratic renewal that we could be discussing as we look at this bill which is brought forward, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004.

So far we've talked about election processes. We've talked about citizens' initiatives. We've talked a little bit about actual Senate reform. This bill is not what it could be, and I wish that it would have been much more, because this is a rich discussion and, in fact, goes to the very heart of who we are as Canadians, that constant striving for representation, access, and equality. I think that's what the Senate represents.

I was one of the lucky people that got to participate in the Shaping Canada's Future Together constitutional discussions that went on across Canada in 1992. I was specifically chosen to participate in the one that happened in Calgary that was centred on the Senate and reform of the Senate. People from across the country were brought together for I think it was five days to look at every aspect of reform of the Senate and what that could possibly look like and what we thought the best idea was.

These constitutional conferences were set up in a very interesting way. Each morning we had presentations made to the entire group of us that really brought out all of the arguments that existed, and we sort of had two or often three sides of an argument laid out for us by learned people, experts in those particular areas. We all listened to this, and it cut through a lot of the blather that you sometimes get in those kinds of conferences where you have people that really aren't very well informed about it kind of mouthing off about their key thing. But there was no excuse for that in this case because we all now had presentations from learned people, and off we went into our breakout sessions to discuss what had been put in front of us.

Of course, we all had the workbooks, and we supposedly had gone and consulted with our various constituencies. Whether that was a geographic constituency or a constituency of like-minded people or shared interests, which is what I was representing, we should have consulted with them on the various questions and then brought that into the discussions that we had. I was really fired up by these discussions because to me it opened up a whole possibility of a way of life and a way of democracy that had never occurred to me. I got quite excited by the possibilities of having more representation. More of what I saw when I walked down the street could I see in an elected Chamber, in an elected Senate, and that was really exciting to me and energizing to me.

10:10

We did look at many of the same things that I brought up here, that sort of: well, if you're looking at an elected Senate, then what would the elections look like? Could it be proportional representation? Would it be a mixed first past the post and proportional? What became possible there in our discussions was that, you know, you could have a younger person elected. You could have somebody that was under 30 that would get elected to the Senate, especially if you were looking at proportional representation.

What we were talking about was the standard way of looking at proportional representation in which people cast their vote and then the votes were added up and, you know, proportionately the top whatever number of people elected were from a certain party, and the party would have a list, and they would then designate which of their people got the designated number of seats. Of course, that is both the huge step forward and the huge drawback because would you, could you trust the parties to actually be fair and representative in the way they put together those lists? Would they have, you know, every second person be a woman, which would be representative of Canada? We've got approximately 50-50 here, so we should have 50 per cent of the people in the Chamber be women. Would there be a certain percentage of people of different race? How far do you carry it? Do you look at sexual orientation? Do you look at religion? What else could you bring into the mix here?

We also looked at how many seats were appropriate across Canada. We're very interesting in Canada because our north takes in the territories but it also takes off basically the top half, top third, top quarter of each province. So there is a constituency of the north that needs to be represented. If we're going to look at a second kind of representation of various constituencies trying to achieve that equality across the country and that representation across the country, then the north was a particular constituency that needed to be brought into the mix.

In the end the Shaping Canada's Future Together constitutional session that was held in Calgary wasn't successful in coming up with any particular direction that everyone could agree on. Interestingly enough, here we are 14 years later and we're still talking about it, and we can't agree on much here.

Just to go back and look at what's actually being presented in this bill and whether it touches on any of the areas that I've just covered, it doesn't. What it's really looking to do is extend the current act to 2010 because as it stands now, it will expire at the end of this year, December 31, 2004. So it doesn't open this up, it doesn't look at any other kinds of democratic renewal, and it doesn't discuss any of the other things that we could be discussing around senatorial reform, which is just a huge disappointment to me because it's such an exciting area.

Again, if we really wanted to engage some of our younger voters, here's the way to do it. Here's the opening. If we want to talk about a whole new world that could be challenging and accessible to people under 30, this is it, and we're not doing it. We're not discussing it; we're not opening it up; we're not engaging the younger voters. There are some of them sitting in this room that are our faithful pages here. You know, I'm sure they've got lots to say. Probably there's one of them that would be interested in being a Senator if that was a possibility for them.

That's the kind of vision that we needed to look at. You know, how is it possible to get someone that's under 30 representing one of these seats? How could we do that? That would be so exciting. But, no, none of it's considered inside of this bill. We're just talking about extending the date for the same old thing that we've always been talking about.

So, you know, the Alberta Liberals voted against the Senatorial Selection Act in '89 and the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act in '98, which this one is now extending. The agony for me on this one, the agony and the anger, frankly . . .

Mr. Mason: The ecstasy?

Ms Blakeman: No, there's no ecstasy in this. It's the agony and the anger. The Alberta Liberals, the Official Opposition, are strong believers in a triple-E Senate and especially in Senate reform, but this is not the way to do it, and we're not going to support same-old, same-old here. The whole idea was to get a different take on this.

So this is just disappointing considering all the other things that are going on, all the other possibilities that we have to engage the voting public and the nonvoting public that could vote and aren't and, you know, to look at other kinds of democratic renewal and democratic reform that we're going to have to do. I think it would be much more exciting and fun and getting out ahead of the pack if we could actually grapple with this one and do it. What an exciting thing to be involved with. But instead we have: well, let's just take the same old thing and make it 2010 instead of 2004. That's just a huge disappointment.

We need to look at meaningful Senate reform. We've got three vacancies this year, and this is when we could be having it where it would actually do some good for Alberta to have that discussion, but it's not happening.

I often hear Senate reform talked about by members in this Chamber, members of the government, as a diversion tactic, which I think is particularly sad given all I've said about, you know, exciting possibilities to move forward into the future. To see it sort of flogged as a diversionary tactic to get away from the other things that the government doesn't want direction or focus on is even more disappointing.

I understand at this point that there are others interested, and I'd like to adjourn debate on this bill. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report bills 2, 3, 4, and 1 and progress on 7.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Clover Bar-Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following: Bill 2, Bill 3, Bill 4, and Bill 1. The committee reports progress on Bill 7.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the hour, I would move that the Assembly now stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10:20 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, March 2, 2004

1:30 p.m.

Date: 2004/03/02

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. We give thanks for the bounty of our province: our land, our resources, and our people. We pledge ourselves to act as good stewards on behalf of all Albertans. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mrs. Nelson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce some very special guests who are visiting our Legislature and question period for the very first time. They are from the Department of Finance. We have with us Faye McCann, Erin Hnit, Heather Gibson, Shannon Heffel, Arthur Arruda, Marianne Baird, Diem Le, Valerie Goodall, Chris Gallant, and Colin Leschert. These are the young people who work very, very diligently to answer all of the action requests for information that come from all sides of the House. This is the first time they are going to see how all that information is culminated into questions and answers. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly 78 students from Meyonohk elementary school in Mill Woods. They are accompanied by their teachers Mr. David Fairfield, Mr. Don Wiley, Mr. Victor Wang and by student teacher Miss Jessica Liddell. They are also accompanied by parent helpers Mrs. Marcie Hanson, Ms Hilda Mah, Mrs. Phillis Wong, Mr. Terry Siebert, Mrs. May Dong, Mrs. Tracy Cheng, and Mrs. Nancy Graham. Meyonohk is a school that reflects the best in multiculturalism in our country. They are in the public gallery, and I'd ask them now with your permission to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

RCMP Corporal James Galloway

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to make a statement concerning a tragic incident involving an RCMP member this past weekend. It has been only three years since I was appointed Solicitor General, but this recent tragedy reminds me that since that time a total of eight police and peace officers have died in the line of duty in Alberta. I would like to read those names now: Senior Ranger John Graham, Constable Darren Beatty, Park Warden Michael Wynn, Constable Christine Diotte, Superintendent Dennis Massey, Constable Ghislain Maurice, Corporal Stephen Gibson, and now the latest, Corporal James Galloway.

Early Saturday morning, Mr. Speaker, Jim Galloway died in the line of duty during a police standoff in Spruce Grove. He died leaving behind his wife, Marg, three adult children, three grandchildren, and many, many friends and fellow officers.

Yesterday I had the opportunity to speak to Marg Galloway to pass on my condolences and to express on behalf of our government our deep sadness and grief. She told me how his death had shocked his family, of how she still could hardly believe what had happened, that she found herself expecting to see him walk through the door at any moment.

This most recent death has brought back the memory of another death. About a year ago I attended a funeral of a Calgary police member. My role, Mr. Speaker, was to walk behind the casket as it was carried. Police and uniformed officials from around this province and this country had gathered to mourn the loss of yet another brother. I will never forget that day, seeing hundreds of officers saluting as the casket passed by, and I remember the tears that streamed down many of their faces. Today I am once again reminded that while Corporal Galloway's death has devastated his family, it is also a tragedy for the entire law enforcement community. Every member of this community understands the risks they take, the dangers they face, the fact that one day it could be their funeral.

By those who knew Jim, he will be remembered for his leadership, his caring, his dependability, his professionalism, his expertise, his enthusiasm, his vigour, and his passionate devotion to his work. Jim was a police service dog handler with the RCMP's emergency response team. That meant that Jim and his police dog, Cito, often attended armed standoffs like Saturday's, literally hundreds of situations during a career that spanned more than three decades.

As Albertans we need to be reminded that our safe communities come at a price. We need to be reminded that men and women police and peace officers sometimes must give their lives so that we can sleep at night. Corporal Galloway deserves our deepest gratitude for his sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, today we honour Corporal Galloway and the other fallen officers as well as their families, their friends, and their colleagues who must live with this loss.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, I join all the members of this House in mourning the loss of Corporal Jim Galloway, who was killed in the line of duty this past Saturday. Police and peace officers are some of the most selfless people who walk amongst us. They put their lives on the line every day ensuring our safety and the safety of the whole community. They sacrifice time with family and friends to serve and protect. Some, like Jim Galloway, even sacrifice their lives in the performance of their duties.

It is important that all Albertans remember the service that these fine men and women perform for us every day. It is important that we remember Jim Galloway, Christine Diotte, Graeme Cumming, Ezio Faraone, Richard Sonnenberg, Johnny Petropoulos, Robert Vanderwiell, and so many other police and peace officers who have made the supreme sacrifice doing the work they loved.

Every September we gather to remember on Police and Peace Officers National Memorial Day those police and peace officers who have laid down their lives. However, we should never forget the sacrifices which are made to keep us safe. We should also never forget that each day thousands of police officers put their lives on the line. The slogan for the memorial service is They Are Our Heros: We Shall Not Forget Them. Let us all reflect on the meaning of that statement today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in order to recognize an additional speaker, that being the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, we will need unanimous consent.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I wish to thank the House for this opportunity to briefly participate in this tribute to RCMP Corporal James Galloway, who died tragically in the course of fulfilling his duties as a police officer last weekend. Corporal Galloway, like all police officers who do so on a daily basis, placed himself in harm's way in the line of duty every day of his long service. All Albertans owe Corporal Galloway and other police officers a deep gratitude for the service they provide to keep our communities safe.

On behalf of my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Highlands and the New Democrat opposition I wish to convey my condolences to Corporal Galloway's wife, Margaret, to his children and grandchildren, and to all members of the Galloway family on this tragic loss. I also extend condolences to Corporal Galloway's friends and his fellow officers in the RCMP as well as other police services, by whom a death in the line of duty is so deeply felt.

1:40

The circumstances in which Corporal Galloway died are doubly tragic, Mr. Speaker. Also dead is Mr. Martin Ostopovich, whose family is also mourning him, and I extend my condolences to this grieving family as well. In due time I trust that an inquiry into the circumstances that led to these tragic shooting deaths will be held to determine if such a tragic shooting could have been prevented and recommendations for how such tragedies can never be repeated. I sincerely hope that such an inquiry will also find answers and bring some closure for the grieving families and friends of the two men who died in such tragic circumstances last weekend.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head:

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Electricity Deregulation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On April 1, 1998, the Eight Billion Dollar Man, Dr. West, stood in this Assembly and said, "The full [extent] of Bill 27 is to bring forth a deregulated electrical system to the fullest benefit of the consumer, the customer, and Albertans." But Albertans stopped being fooled by this government about electricity deregulation when they saw nothing but their high-cost power translated in their monthly bill. Now, my first question is to the Premier. Given that electricity deregulation has failed to deliver the fullest benefit to the consumer, the customer, and Albertans, when will this government do the right thing and unplug electricity deregulation?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the last part of the hon. member's question, we don't plan in any way, shape, or form to unplug deregulation. Deregulation is here to stay. I would remind the hon. member that Alberta has gained over 3,000 megawatts of new power generation. That's a 30 per cent increase to Alberta's electricity supply since deregulation was introduced. In addition, investors have indicated that they propose investing close to $6 billion by the end of 2006, which will bring another 5,400 megawatts of power on stream.

When we look at electricity, which the Liberals have failed to do – you know, they would rather talk about, well, the five-second sound bite, the Eight Billion Dollar Man, who was devalued yesterday to $8 million and is now back up to $8 billion. But looking at the price of electricity, it's clear that prices in Alberta have gone down since 2001 when deregulation was introduced. The average pool price of electricity in 2001 was 7.1 cents per kilowatt hour. The average pool price last year was 6.3 cents per kilowatt hour, and the average price so far in 2004 is 5.3 cents per kilowatt hour.

I have a chart, Mr. Speaker, that I would be more than happy to table with the Assembly, that shows the month-to-month breakdown and yearly averages of the pool prices. I would be happy to table it. It's time they started to tell the truth.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that the Premier on March 25, 1998, stated in this House in regard to electricity that "competition equals lower prices," how can the Premier now admit last week to Albertans that electricity competition may never equal lower prices?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I went through that last week, and I explained to this Assembly and to the hon. member – but, obviously, he wasn't listening – that the price of commodities generally goes up. Electricity is a commodity like natural gas, like wheat, like barley, like coal, like gold, like silver, like diamonds. Like everything else the price incrementally goes up. Hopefully, we can stabilize the price of electricity, and hopefully if more competition comes on stream, it will go down. But the price of the commodity generally goes up. It's going up everywhere throughout North America.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: given that the Eight Billion Dollar Man, Dr. West, said this about electricity deregulation on April 22, 1998, in this House, "It will bring tremendous competition that will put downward pressure on prices" – and we know that this hasn't happened; ask any Albertan with a power bill – will the Premier now admit that electricity deregulation has failed to deliver on any of the promises made by Dr. West whenever we debated this in 1998?

Mr. Klein: No, Mr. Speaker. It has not failed by any stretch of the imagination, and I know that the hon. member has a very vivid imagination.

To put more light and to bring forward some facts on this matter, I will have the hon. Minister of Energy respond.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Premier and Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to expose what has gone from a credibility gap from this member to actually a credibility chasm. This member has been at the point of tabling a press release that says that fog is the result of deregulation and then withdrawing that. He's had me in Oregon when, in fact, I was in Wetaskiwin. On and on go the credibility gaps of this member, and I think that today is a very good time to address that.

Not only did the Liberals, Mr. Speaker, support those quotes from Dr. West in the days of 1998 to 2001. We also see where provinces across Canada are wrestling with the very same problem that Alberta has solved. So, in fact, other jurisdictions, not only in North America but around the world, are looking at Alberta as being an example of being able to provide reasonable prices, reasonable generation, a good system that is open and transparent, a system that provides power when blackouts have occurred in other parts of North America causing billions – billions – of American dollars, billions of Canadian dollars in damage. That has not happened in this province. This member knows full well that there is compelling economic evidence as to the success of electrical deregulation in this marketplace.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The effects of jet lag are apparent.

Now, on March 13, 1998, in a letter to the Premier regarding electricity deregulation, Mr. Ron Southern, an influential Calgary businessperson, lamented former Energy minister Dr. West's determination to ram this unfair and unjust scheme through the Legislature on a poorly informed public. My first question is to the Premier. Why did this government force electricity deregulation on consumers when it was warned by Mr. Southern and many others that there were no economic benefits whatsoever to this unfair and unjust scheme?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I was involved in discussions with Mr. Southern. They were long discussions, and his concern wasn't over deregulation. As a matter of fact, he indicated to me that he favoured deregulation. His concern was over the stranded costs of his assets, his power generating plants. It had nothing to do with deregulation. It had something to do with how he was going to be compensated for his stranded costs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that Mr. Southern also stated in that letter, quote, one department's determination is not an adequate substitute for clear foresight, prudence, and caution in this case, unquote, when will this government listen to the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties and others? The municipal districts and counties last fall passed an emergency resolution urging this government to abandon and unplug electricity deregulation. When will you do the right thing?

Mr. Klein: We are not going to abandon and unplug electricity deregulation, Mr. Speaker. I want to make that abundantly clear. So he can quit asking about it, and he can quit suggesting it. It's not going to happen.

Relative to Mr. Southern, I would challenge the hon. member to ask Mr. Southern today if he would go back to a regulated environment. I think his answer would be a lot different.

1:50

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: given that Mr. Southern also said in 1998 during the electricity deregulation debate that electricity deregulation will force consumers . . .

Speaker's Ruling

Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: Hon. member, please. You know, I'm going to do this again. Oral questions, Beauchesne: a question "must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate . . . The question must be brief." Do I take it that we're now talking about a letter published in 1998, this being 2004? I'm sorry.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order.

The Speaker: Absolutely.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, this past weekend a tragic incident between police and a gunman suffering from schizophrenia left two dead and a community in mourning. This government has continued with a long-term program of moving mental health patients out of institutions, but it has consistently failed to provide adequate resources in the community to support them. Police officers are left to respond to people suffering from many forms of mental illness, too often becoming front-line mental health workers. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: does the minister accept this incident as an isolated case?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I've stood in this House on many occasions to talk about mental health programs in this province. In looking at our health care system not in the next year or the next two years but in the next 10 or 15 years, I've indicated that there are two things that loom large on our health care horizon. One is diabetes, and one is mental health. It's the reason why we have devoted much time and much effort to developing a provincial mental health strategy. It's the reason that we spent in the year 2003-2004 $240 million on mental health services. That was an increase of 4.8 per cent from the previous year. We will always be able to find circumstances that are tragic, and I don't wish to politicize any individual's tragic circumstances, but we do have tremendous resources that we place toward the treatment of individuals with mental health problems.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that there will come a day when we will be able to look at a broken mind no differently than a broken arm, that we are able to integrate our mental health services into the health care system, that we'll be able to deal with issues without the stigma attached to those who suffer from mental illness. We are focused on trying to deliver services as best we can. We are placing resources in the community as we make the move to moving people out of institutional care and into our communities. We are in fact providing our resources at the community level for those individuals to get treatment.

We are moving forward, Mr. Speaker, on a mental health plan. We have protected the budget for mental health, and this has been something that we've done with the co-operation and the assistance and the input of stakeholders throughout this province. So I will not be drawn into a debate on the individual circumstances that may have occurred on the weekend, but we are making every effort that is reasonable to improve the mental health services in this province.

Dr. Taft: Well, given that a new mental health strategy is in final stages of development, can the minister tell us whether there will be an increase – an increase – in community support programs for persons with mental illness in Alberta?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I've indicated my support, and I've tried to indicate my passion for the subject of mental health. We are again moving forward on an important plan, but matters of the budget are properly left for budget day, and there will be ample opportunity to discuss the sufficiency of resources for mental health services.

Dr. Taft: Well, to the Solicitor General: given that confrontations between police and persons with mental health problems too often have tragic consequences, is the Solicitor General prepared to review training that's provided to police officers in light of the current situation?

Thank you.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, I'm absolutely appalled at the questions coming from this member. We have a family out there that is in deep grieving right now, and to politicize an incident that happened on Saturday is, in my mind, unthinkable. We are going to have a review of the incident that happened, a very clear review. The RCMP in this province want to know what happened; the family wants to know what happened. What I'm going to say right now is: drop the crap; let the family grieve at this particular time.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Cattle Industry

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Until now this government has refused to call an independent investigation into 800 million federal and provincial dollars spent so far on the BSE crisis. Relying on some internal study done by the same officials responsible for doling out the money will not be independent and doesn't pass the smell test. My question is to the Premier. With farm bankruptcies looming, cattle producers beginning to lose hope, high beef prices in grocery stores, and record profit margins for meat packers, what more information does the Premier need before calling an independent inquiry into what is already compelling evidence of something gone seriously wrong with the government's relief plan?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. Deputy Premier reply in more detail, but I would like to preface perhaps her remarks with a statement, and that statement is thus. Ninety per cent of our emergency funding for mad cow disease, BSE, which, by the way, can't be resolved through money alone – somewhere and sometime, and maybe the hon. leader of the third party can get on board, the international community needs to talk about the stupidity of the international protocols affecting this so-called disease or affliction. It is not like measles or chicken pox. The chances of getting it are, I'm told, 1 in 10 billion meals, and that's if you eat spines and brains and eyeballs and tonsils and other kinds of crap.

But getting back to the issue, 90 per cent of our BSE funding went to programs designed to get money into the hands of cattle owners and to move cattle through the marketplace. Mr. Speaker, that's what they did. Producers got close to break-even prices for their cattle, and we moved nearly 1.2 million head through the marketplace because of our programs.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Premier again: what specific evidence of price gouging would satisfy the Premier and lead him to call for an independent inquiry into the claims being made of profiteering and waste of public dollars being made by the beef industry itself?

Mr. Klein: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member has conclusive evidence relative to price-fixing or gouging or any other inappropriate activity, present that to the Competition Bureau. There is a federal agency that is responsible and acts very quickly, I'm given to understand, when there are allegations of price-fixing. If he has a quite specific allegation, stand out there publicly, make the allegation, and then pass the allegation and any evidence he might have on to the Competition Bureau. They're in a position to investigate thoroughly any allegations of price-fixing.

Mr. Speaker, I'll have the hon. minister respond.

2:00

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, as a matter of interest to the House, I'm sure, and certainly of information to the hon. member the Commissioner of Competition for the Competition Bureau has appeared before the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, and in fact he was referring to a study on the pricing of beef at the slaughter, wholesale, and retail levels in the context of the BSE crisis in Canada.

If I may just be permitted to quote very briefly – and I would be happy to table this; it's a public document – he states:

On the basis of the information available to date, I have no reason to believe that the Competition Act has or is about to be contravened. That being said, I would like to assure the Committee that I continue to examine this important issue that is so critical to this Committee, farmers and ranchers and Canadian consumers and I will not hesitate to take appropriate action if I uncover information which points to a potential breach of the Act.

Mr. Speaker, clearly, this has been and is being reviewed by the Competition Bureau, which is the correct and proper agency to do this.

In Alberta, Mr. Speaker, we have determined that it's important for us to look at Alberta pricing. We expect to have an analysis, as complete as we possibly can do, on this issue by the end of the week, and I have said that I will share that information.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the recent $1.28 billion jury award in the U.S. against Lakeside Packers' parent, Tyson Foods, for fixing cattle pricing, when is the Premier going to take his head out of the sand and acknowledge that the same kind of price-fixing could be happening right here in Alberta?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, you know, I take great exception to the way the hon. member is wording this: could, might have. You know, this is innuendo at its absolute worse. No one in this government condones gouging or price-fixing. Indeed, there are agencies with huge investigative powers to determine whether in fact this is taking place, and I would ask the hon. member again that if he has concrete evidence, not innuendo but concrete evidence, then please give it to the Competition Bureau, and they will thoroughly investigate this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I will say that finger pointing and accusations and innuendo of excessive profits are the last things we need right now. What we do need is an industry and political movements that will work together to find new markets and develop new products and open old borders and get the message out relative to the ridiculousness of the international protocols surrounding this affliction, BSE.

You know, there were accusations last year that feedlots were taking all the profits. I don't know if we heard the same rhetoric from the NDs or not. The year before, some accused farmers of excessive profits on hay during the drought. I recall that quite specifically.

The fact is that in an open market there are always some that will profit and some that will lose, and that's the nature of a free market. I know that the NDs can't understand that because they don't believe in free markets.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're getting into a debate here now. That's not the purpose of question period.

The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Aboriginal Consultation on Resource Development

Mr. Ducharme: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In May of 2003 during the budget presentations the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development identified that $6 million had been allocated for the development of an aboriginal consultation policy for resource development. My question is for the minister. The resource industry wants to know: what have you done with this $6 million?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, the $6 million was targeted for building cross-ministry capacity and co-ordination. I've said in this House many, many times over that the $6 million was to make sure that government built its capacity. The expenditure to date is approximately $4.3 million out of $6 million. By building capacity, we talk about hiring, training, educating staff with the skill set to meet face to face with First Nations and industry leaders.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, on research, document collections, supplies, travel, stakeholder meetings, and of course administrative services. The breakdown for each ministry is as follows.

The Speaker: That's way too much to be expected in the question period.

The hon. member.

Mr. Ducharme: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last supplemental is also to the same minister. Can the minister explain what the travelling and training has accomplished in developing these policies?

Ms Calahasen: Well, Mr. Speaker, I know that the breakdown of the ministry costs certainly can be tabled later. However, we held 735 meetings with stakeholders all over the province. There are, after all, 47 First Nations in Alberta and over a thousand industry members, and the key to the process has been the ability to personally meet with First Nations. Anyone who knows First Nations understands that that relationship is a very important component. We held our first round of meetings. We have gone back to validate what we heard. We will continue to do this to ensure that we have a made-in-Alberta process.

We also want to ensure that we meet with industry representatives for their input, and, Mr. Speaker, I have committed to meet with First Nations as soon as we have the next to the final draft to ensure that they know what it is that we're going forward with in government.

Ophthalmology Services in Calgary

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of Health and Wellness confirmed that he declared an emergency shortage of pediatric ophthalmologists in Calgary and then allowed two ophthalmologists from South America to be brought to Calgary. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: can the minister explain why ophthalmologists from out of country are being brought into the country to work in a private clinic owned by the chief of ophthalmology of the region while other ophthalmologists in Calgary are being underutilized?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I think most Albertans and most Canadians would applaud bringing in physicians from other parts of the world. This province has been a leader in attracting health care professionals from around the country and from other parts of the world. We've gained more than 600 physicians over the last three years. We now have more than 14,000 postsecondary seats in health care.

We've started the first, that I am aware of, program of international medical graduates getting residencies in this province. There are some 160 physicians who were trained in other parts of the world who are not working as doctors now, but we're making an effort to bring those doctors up to speed with Alberta and Canadian standards of practice. We started out last year with eight residencies for international medical graduates, and we're moving this year to 12 residencies in the specialty areas and eight more in family practice for a total of 20. I note also that the federal government is making some effort at putting some resources into training international medical graduates so that they might participate here in Canada and provide much-needed services to Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, with respect to Dr. Maria Castro and Dr. Alberto Castro yesterday, one of them is employed by the University of Calgary and the regional health authority; that's Dr. Maria Castro. In order to get her to come here, it was her wish, her condition that we, in fact, be able to bring in Dr. Alberto Castro as well. Dr. Alberto Castro does work at the Holy Cross centre, but keeping in mind that many of the services provided by Holy Cross are under contract to the regional health authority, while he might not be working for the regional health authority directly, he is still providing services that benefit the public here in the province of Alberta.

2:10

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will this minister admit that it's a conflict of interest for the head of ophthalmology of the Calgary health region to sponsor out-of-country specialists to work in his private clinic in Calgary while specialists already in Calgary go without allocations?

Mr. Mar: Dr. Maria Castro was sought by the regional health authority as being a pediatric ophthalmologist, a specialty which is a very difficult one to fill. The regional health authority satisfied me that they made an inquiry throughout Alberta, throughout Canada and could not find a pediatric ophthalmologist, Mr. Speaker. So Dr. Maria Castro from Colombia said that she was prepared to come if there would be work available for her husband, Dr. Alberto Castro. I've heard nothing but praise for the work that is being done by those two physicians. So if the hon. member is asking me if I would approve such a part 5 special designation again, I would.

Dr. Taft: Given that there are four specialists in Calgary already working as pediatric ophthalmologists, some of them underutilized, will this minister terminate the emergency designation for this specialist in Calgary?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, at a time when people are concerned with issues of wait lists and access to the health care system, I should think that it would be really quite a folly to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Police Services

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Many communities in Alberta are struggling to pay the costs of providing police services to their residents. The town of Lac La Biche in my constituency is an example of such a community, with a population just over 2,500 and where close to 50 per cent of taxation is dedicated to policing. In fact, the cost is so high that the town has considered the drastic step of dissolving itself, one reason being the difficulty to pay for the service and protection provided by the RCMP. My question is to the Solicitor General. Communities in Alberta argue that the threshold system is not the best resolution for policing. What alternatives can the minister see in assisting rural communities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul is right. Policing costs are a serious concern for many towns and cities right across this province, and the question of what alternatives would best address the problem is a tough one with no easy answers.

We have thought long and hard about the issue, reviewed the current funding formulas, and looked at many options in regard to how we can change this. We have consulted at great length with the AAMD and C and the AUMA to get their views, and they represent many, many communities in this province. In the end, Mr. Speaker, I believe we have come up with an alternative that will benefit all of the communities in this province.

There are financial implications attached to this, Mr. Speaker, and I look forward to budget day. I believe that we are going to solve a lot of policing problems in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister: not divulging any budget concerns, can she expand on what alternatives are possible and what has been looked at?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a good question, and I have to be very careful in how I answer that without worrying about giving up some answers in regard to what we'll look forward to in the budget.

Mr. Speaker, we've looked at many, many things. We looked at population thresholds. We looked at per capita grants. We looked at: does everybody pay for policing? We looked at: what's the best solution to deal with the problem? As I mentioned earlier, in my first answer, we talked with the AUMA and the AAMD and C, who represent all of the communities in this province, came up with an answer, the first time we've had an agreement in 30 years with AUMA and AAMD and C. To the member, I think we're going to have some good news on budget day.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

Mr. Danyluk: No second supplemental.

Aging Provincial Infrastructure

Mr. Bonner: Mr. Speaker, my questions today are for the Minister of Infrastructure. Why according to the 2003-2006 Infrastructure business plan is this ministry planning for a yearly decrease in the quality of provincial buildings?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, over a period of time all of the infrastructure that we're responsible for ages. When you look back to when a lot of the infrastructure was built, a lot of it is getting to be in that category of 25, 30, 40 years old. When you start talking about the mechanical systems in a lot of these structures, you'll find that when they were new, they had a life expectancy of 20, 25 years.

Coupled with that, because of the great economy that we have in the province of Alberta, the population has increased dramatically when you think of the fact that over the last five years just about every year the number of people that came to the province would be equal to a city just about the size of Red Deer. Those people didn't bring their roads, their schools, their hospitals, or any of those things with them.

So we've got a combination of effects here. We've got the fact that the infrastructure is aging, we've got the growth pressures, and of course we've got the aging population, which also adds to the need for those kinds of facilities.

There's a limited amount of dollars, so we have to try to stretch the dollars out as far as we can. We are being very honest. We are being straightforward, as are other ministries in their business plans, and we know that we can't do everything in one year. So, yes, there is an indication that there would be a decrease in the quality, from good to fair, in some of our structures, but that doesn't mean that they are dysfunctional.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: according to the 2003-2006 Infrastructure business plan why are only 79 per cent of provincial buildings providing merely adequate functional service?

Mr. Lund: Well, I think I went into some length explaining my first answer, Mr. Speaker. The fact is that there are a limited number of dollars, and we have to make the best use of those dollars.

Mr. Bonner: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: why is there no measure to determine what percentage of postsecondary institutions are providing adequate functional service?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, we are currently working in that area. One of the things that we are attempting to do now is not only assess the physical condition of all of the structures but also look at the functions that are being provided from those facilities. We haven't completed our work on the postsecondary institutions; therefore, we do not have that measurement. Those are questions, of course, that should be discussed when we're going through the business plan and the upcoming budget.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Cattle and Beef Trade Policy

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development travelled to Washington last week with many of her provincial colleagues for meetings with various American politicians, officials, and industry representatives. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. What next steps were discussed with respect to reopening borders to full cattle and beef trade?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, it was a great opportunity to gather with ministers of agriculture and officials from across Canada to discuss these issues in Washington with politicians first and with the industry secondly. The goal of the meeting was to have frank, open discussions and to get a sense as to where this whole thing was going. I believe the discussions were successful. I came back with a renewed belief in the fact that we will resume normal trade in the, hopefully, near future.

But it was definitely evident from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, whose representatives we had lunch with, the National Processors Association, and the American Meat Institute, that we met with, that their goals are the same as ours. They want resumption of normal trade between our countries.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is for the same minister. The American Meat Institute, a participant in the Washington, D.C., meetings, recently wrote a letter urging Secretary Veneman to reopen the border immediately. How does this contribute to ongoing efforts to re-establish trade between our countries?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, no question that the American Meat Institute is an important player in the processing of agricultural products in the U.S. I would just quote two lines: "The [United States] has the authority and the credibility to lead the way in establishing a rational BSE trade policy. We urge you to take this critical first step." A second line I would read is, "We are writing to urge you to use the full range of your authority immediately to reestablish trade in cattle, beef and beef products produced in BSE minimal risk countries like Canada." Mr. Speaker, that's a very important support for moving that forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition.

Children's Services

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Department of Children's Services is currently evaluating a number of new companies. These companies will be hired to screen and to accredit agencies providing services for children in the province. My questions are to the Minister of Children's Services. Why are a number of separate companies needed to provide this screening and accreditation service?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, at this time it would be premature for me to comment too extensively except to say this. With so many activities in our department – including adoption, including the implementation of new legislation, the resources for children with disabilities legislation and the Child Welfare Act – there's a need not only to train staff but to make sure that all of the pieces are in place so that there's not only a smooth implementation but that there is service that continues in the best possible way. With changes in the legislation I think it's important for us to look at other options for training.

Dr. Massey: To the same minister: why is the department soliciting proposals from companies in the United States?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, we've got a lot of wonderful advantages in Alberta, but we don't have a lock on everything. There are some amazing things that we've learned both in the adoption file situation and from certain resources with the disabilities file situation. The solicitation doesn't necessarily mean that there will be an outcome that's an American firm, but if we can find the best at the best possible price to do the best job, I would say that we have no question to look elsewhere for the best price.

Dr. Massey: Again to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: who will bear the cost of the work done by these companies? Will it be out of the Children's Services department budget, or will it come from the agencies?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the hon. member opposite has gone right from A to Z on this situation. I'd be pleased to table what we're doing, how we're doing it, what the results will be, and who will pay for it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development is asking cattle producers and Alberta consumers to trust the findings of an internal study our officials are doing into what may have gone wrong with the $800 million BSE assistance program. She's asking that we trust our own ministry's review into whether meat-packing plants lowered cattle prices in response to the subsidy payments, thereby tripling their margins. A question to the minister: why should cattle producers and Alberta consumers have any confidence in an internal study prepared by the same ministry that administered BSE assistance in the first place as opposed to an independent inquiry to get to the bottom of things?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member as usual is wrong, absolutely wrong. You know, it would be really interesting if they became interested in this subject more than once or twice a year. Then they'd be current.

In fact, I have said that I asked for a carcass evaluation, a review of those costs for my purposes, to try and understand whether there was an issue. I have one obvious difference with this hon. member: I like to deal in facts.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister believe that her ministry, that administered the $800 million BSE assistance, has the necessary independence to get to the bottom of this mess? Or would they have an incentive to cover things up?

The Speaker: Well, there are two questions there, hon. minister.

Mrs. McClellan: And both of them are totally ridiculous, Mr. Speaker, and hardly deserve an answer.

In fact, in Alberta there has been just over $600 million spent on BSE, $400 million by the province and just over $200 million by the federal government, Mr. Speaker. In fact, if this hon. member went out of Edmonton and discussed this issue with the agricultural community, they would know that they hold my department staff in the highest regard, as well they should.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary is to the Premier. Why is the Premier assigning the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development to investigate herself?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, the simple answer is that I have the fullest confidence in a competent minister.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Electricity Deregulation (continued)

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a member of the Advisory Council on Electricity I'm keenly aware that the government has actively taken action on many recommendations in the ACE report. My first question is to the Premier. What is the most current information from industry leaders on the progress of electricity deregulation?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, speaking to the policy of deregulation, Nancy Southern, the daughter of Ron Southern, last summer at the dedication of the power plant at the Oldman River dam said that this wouldn't have happened under a regulated system. She had nothing but praise for deregulation.

Speaking to the policy of deregulation, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Ron Southern, alluded to by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, in an August 2003 letter said, "Your policies have allowed the creation of an abundance of generation capacity and, while the transmission no doubt could use some future reinforcements and redundancy, it is in every respect a very robust system." He goes on to say, "Your determination to level the playing field and provide retail competition has been exemplary." He goes on to say, "I truly do believe you are on the threshold of a showcase for the world of successful deregulation of electricity and gas."

The Speaker: The document in question will be tabled.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, my first supplemental to the Minister of Energy: given that energy costs are down from 2001 and 2002, the majority of calls I deal with are billing issues like true-ups, off-billing cycles, and reconciliation. When do you expect these types of concerns to be resolved?

Mr. Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that it's clear that we're on an ongoing pursuit of excellence in this model, and that hasn't changed. In fact, that pursuit of excellence is reflected in comments from members of the industry such as Mr. Southern, and they're also reflected in the ACE report, which is the Premier's Advisory Council on Electricity. We've never been afraid to face any issue head-on. We, in fact, did this. In fact, the commission came together on numerous issues, and we've put that on the web site, and I will be tabling that report in the House today.

Mr. Speaker, we will continue to be vigilant in the pursuit of excellence for consumer protection. That consumer is being protected both by the utilities advocate here as well as the competitive process in the marketplace, and it's reflected by lower prices in the marketplace, which is a sign of increased generation and an open access, nondiscriminatory transmission policy.

Mr. VanderBurg: Final question, again to the same minister: given that 20 of the best and brightest minds in electricity sit on the ACE committee, what will you do with this group now that the report is complete?

Mr. Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is one of those 20 best and brightest minds unless the commission is composed of 21 members.

This is an important commission. This is a commission that has undergone a very, very direct examination of issues. Unlike the opposition, Mr. Speaker, they do deal in facts. Unlike the opposition they don't deal in innuendo; they deal in reality. And unlike the opposition they have fiduciary responsibilities, corporate responsibilities, shareholder responsibilities to deliver this commodity at a reasonable price to markets across this great province.

They do it every day. Our members are there. The Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne will continue to be a member of that council; that council will continue to give this government good advice. There is also a second member from the government side who, indeed, may be classified as one of those best and brightest minds. We haven't done that kind of an evaluation, but the Member for Leduc is also expected to continue in that role on the advisory council on electrical issues.

head: Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, in 30 seconds I'll call upon the first member.

Hon. Interim Leader of the Official Opposition, I've been notified that you were the one speaking on behalf of your caucus under Members' Statements.

Education Funding

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday former Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed told a Calgary awards ceremony what many Albertans have been saying with respect to postsecondary education for years, and I quote: I don't think we're doing the job we could be. Further, Mr. Lougheed lamented: we're falling behind the U.S. dramatically. This government sought the former Premier's advice recently on Kyoto, and now is the time to heed his advice and start looking at education as an investment as opposed to an expenditure.

Many of our young people are caught in a catch-22 situation when they graduate from grade 12. They can either choose to go straight into typically low-paying dead-end jobs or opt to further their studies and graduate under a mountain of personal and public debt. If education is a public good, then why should students have to scrape, save, and go into debt to access programs?

The Liberal opposition agrees with the Council of Alberta University Students when they insist that postsecondary education should be a right not a privilege. The individual benefits for students of such an education while extremely important have been overstressed. The quality of the streets we drive on, the hospitals we visit, and the community amenities we enjoy are directly linked to a well-educated citizenry.

Unfortunately, tuitions are soaring at postsecondary institutions across the province making further education a less appealing choice for Albertans. This government must develop a long-term plan to finance postsecondary learning, making it accessible to all Albertans. There needs to be a realistic approach to tuition fees and resources to help institutions fund and deliver high-quality programs across the province.

Alberta cannot be proud of granting only 4.3 university degrees per 1,000 people when the Canadian average is 5.8. The time for change is now. We must properly fund postsecondary education and provide accessibility to all Albertans who want it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Augustana University College

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about changes and new opportunities at Augustana University College in my constituency. On November 21, 2003, a letter of intent was signed by the presidents and board chairs of Augustana and the University of Alberta and the Minister of Learning setting up a framework for a merger between the two institutions.

Augustana, founded in 1910 by Norwegian Lutheran settlers, began operations in 1911 as Camrose Lutheran College. It was to be a residential high school embodying the values of those pioneers and bringing educational opportunities to many students across Alberta and other provinces as travel in those days was restricted. In 1959 Augustana became an affiliated college of the University of Alberta, offering university level courses with the second year of the university transfer program added in 1969. In 1985 Augustana became the first private college in Alberta accredited to grant three- and four-year baccalaureate degrees.

Throughout the many years that Augustana has been a part of the Camrose community, its residents have embraced the students that travel from around Alberta and the world to attend, with many Camrosians joining them in the classroom to take advantage of the opportunity right at home for lifelong learning. Many students earn their degrees as adults from this fine liberal arts and science university college.

Both Augustana and the University of Alberta seek to retain and build on those features that have made Augustana a unique and caring place with high educational standards. The merger with the University of Alberta will be another transition in following Augustana's mission to lead and to serve. It also offers the University of Alberta a unique opportunity to enhance service to rural Alberta.

Today I wish to acknowledge Augustana for 93 years of providing educational opportunities in Camrose and wish them continued success as they move forward with pride in past accomplishments and confidence in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Harry Zuurbier

Ms Kryczka: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to stand in this Assembly today to recognize Harry Zuurbier, who passed away at his home on Saturday, February 21, 2004, as a result of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease. Harry was just 70 years of age.

Harry was a member of the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta, and as we already had a Harry on our council when Harry Z. became a member, we affectionately referred to him as Harry Two, and he did also. Harry brought to the council an enthusiasm to learn in working for seniors, his great intelligence, and his passion for life.

Harry Zuurbier was born in Ursem, Holland, in 1934, immigrated to Canada at age 19, and settled in Brocket. In 1954 he graduated from St. Michael's high school, Pincher Creek, and taught for more than 30 years in the Calgary Catholic school system. Following retirement Harry refocused his energies as a mediator for the Calgary Police Service, the Better Business Bureau, and as a member of the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta.

Harry is survived by his wife, Catherine, and their sons, Peter and Jacob, as well as his former wife, Marial Piotrowski, and their children, Maria, Paul, Ted, Dianne, and Donna, and two grandchildren, Jessica and Grace.

Last week I was honoured to attend with members of the council a funeral Mass for Harry Zuurbier at Sacred Heart Catholic church and wish to share some special words of remembrance from that occasion.

Remember him with a smile today
He was not one for tears
Reflect instead on memories
Of all the happy years
Recall to mind the way he spoke
And all the things he said
His strength, his stance, the way he walked
Remember these instead
The good advice he'd give us
His eyes that shone with laughter
So much of him will never die
But live on ever after.

Rest in peace, Harry Z.

Thank you.

New Immigrants to Calgary

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to speak about the population diversity in Calgary and about some ideas benefiting Alberta. In 2001 200,000 Calgaryians, 2 out of 10, were born outside Canada, accounting for 3.6 per cent of Canada's immigrant population. These new Albertans are a great asset to connect Alberta to the world, and with encouragement this global connection is becoming part of the Alberta advantage.

Of the new immigrants to Calgary in 2002 53 per cent applied under the skilled worker class and 30 per cent under the family class. Most new immigrants to Calgary were between the ages of 26 and 35. These Albertans provide a productive workforce helping Alberta develop its economy to the world scale. Forty-eight per cent of new immigrants to Calgary in 2002 were male and 52 per cent were female, making Calgary more beautiful each day.

Of all immigrants to Calgary in 2002 49 per cent knew neither English nor French. This indicates a need for language training. I suggest that Immigration Canada create language training at the departure point where the Canadian way of life is taught along with the language. This will cost much less and help immigrants to integrate more quickly into the Canadian environment. Yes, Mr. Speaker, there is the ESL, English as a Second Language, program. An ability in our common language, in this case English, is vital to immigrants. I want to suggest that we should change ESL to EFL, English as a First Language, and make it suitable to the type of learners.

Of the immigrants to Calgary in 2002 48 per cent were over the age of 18 and held at least a bachelor's degree or higher. This indicates a need for an Alberta program to help these highly educated and already trained individuals to integrate properly into the economy. Alberta doesn't have to pay the costs of 22 years of education and reaps the benefit. I suggest an internship program be created to help Alberta realize this benefit earlier.

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Bill 10

Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2004

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I request leave to introduce Bill 10, the Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2004.

The bill proposes amendments to seven pieces of justice legislation. Perhaps the most significant change under the bill will allow courts to order periodic payment of settlements or judgments, otherwise known as structured settlements, in cases involving injury or death. This change to the Judicature Act will provide courts with the flexibility to address both current and future needs of victims and their families.

Other amendments, to the Provincial Offences Procedure Act, will allow for the electronic transfer of ticket information from enforcement agencies to the courts and will generally apply to offences under the Traffic Safety Act.

These changes along with some other minor amendments and housekeeping to the Court of Appeal Act, the Court of Queen's Bench Act, the Jury Act, the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Act, and the Queen's Counsel Act will help to ensure that these acts are up to date.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 10 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Bill 15
Fiscal Responsibility Amendment Act, 2004

Mrs. Nelson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I beg leave to introduce Bill 15, the Fiscal Responsibility Amendment Act, 2004.

Bill 15, Mr. Speaker, amends the existing act to raise the limit of nonrenewable resource revenue spending to $4 billion from $3.5 billion as the sustainability fund is forecast to be fully funded in this fiscal year.

[Motion carried; Bill 15 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, as promised, I rise to table the expenditures for government's efforts in building an effective consultation with First Nations and industry regarding resource development.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have one document to table: five copies of this document which indicates that Tyson Foods in the United States was hit with a $1.28 billion judgment by a federal jury for manipulating the cattle market and was ordered to change its buying practices.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. The first is a letter to our office from Delia McCrae, and it is in regard to the Learning Commission.

The second letter that I have is a letter from a concerned parent, Ms Elizabeth McLeod on 79th Street in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar, and this is also concerning Edmonton public school board funding.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Three tablings today with permission. The first is a letter that has been brought to my attention and that I was asked to table. It's from a constituent who has traced his ATCO Gas bills for the last 18 years, and they've more than doubled in the past six years. He wanted to bring that to public attention.

The second is an eloquent letter from Karen Cox of Bashaw raising many concerns with government waste.

The third is a petition signed by 18 Albertans urging the Legislative Assembly to protect patients' rights.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today there were allusions in question period to a letter, I think in 1998, from Mr. Southern of ATCO Gas, and the Premier, in responding to questions, alluded to a much more current letter of August 20, 2003, which refers to a definition of excellence in terms of the way that the government has handled the deregulation process. I'd like now to table five copies of that letter for the House.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, much as I would feel compelled to read every word of that previous letter into the record, it's my privilege today to table to you and through you to the House five copies from the Alberta Advisory Council on Electricity. This is a signal that Alberta is ready to meet serious questions about serious topics head-on and put together, as said earlier in the House, some 20 of the best and brightest minds in this industry. Here are the deliberations. Here are the results of the reports. It's with pride that I am able to table these in a sense of transparency, openness, and gratitude to the members who served on that committee.

The Speaker: Are there others?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the point of order.

Point of Order
Explanation of Speaker's Ruling

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise, please, under Standing Order 13(2): "The Speaker shall explain the reasons for any decision upon the request of a member."

Earlier in question period, Mr. Speaker, my attempt at my second question was cut short. You gave an explanation; I believe it was Beauchesne 409. There was a lot of noise from across the benches. I didn't hear your full explanation. As I said earlier this afternoon, I rose to participate in Oral Question Period but was not permitted to follow up my main question. I seek your guidance and your advice on this matter.

In 1986 Speaker Bosley of the House of Commons gave a statement of how question period should be conducted as described on page 425 of Marleau and Montpetit. Speaker Bosley stated a number of principles, of which all Legislative Assemblies in this country have taken notice, including that the primary purpose of question period must be the "seeking of information from the government and calling the government to account for its actions" and "members should be given the greatest possible freedom in the putting of questions that is consistent with the other principles."

Marleau and Montpetit continue on page 426, Mr. Speaker, by stating that in Question Period, a member should, among other things, seek information and "ask a question that is within the administrative responsibility of the government or the individual Minister addressed."

Further on, on page 430, Marleau and Montpetit state in part that "members may seek to clarify the answer to a question or solicit further information through the use of supplementary questions." It was my second supplementary question that I was asking, and of course I was not allowed to finish that question.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are naturally guidelines that have to apply to initial questions and how they flow with supplementary questions, but a follow-up device flowing from the response – I agree it ought to be a precise question put directly and immediately, in this case to the Premier, and I believe I did that. I believe a review of the Hansard Blues, which I haven't had an occasion to do, will confirm that I asked a supplementary question that flowed from the response I received from the government in order to solicit further information about the subject matter that was then at hand.

Mr. Speaker, the second supplementary question that I posed I believe clearly sought information from the government, clearly called the government to account for its actions, and clearly was on a subject that was within the responsibility of the government. I in no way intended my supplementary question that I posed to be any sort of an argument, I didn't pose it to be in any way hypothetical, and I believe it was certainly, as I said before, within the responsibility of the Premier.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I again seek your guidance and your advice on this matter. This has been a matter that has been reoccurring in this Assembly. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview had a question at some point recently that was ruled out of order, and for myself and particularly for the research staff I await your guidance on this matter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to comment with respect to the request for clarification by the hon. member. I appreciated also hearing the hon. member actually read some of the rules with respect to question period in the hopes that he will abide by some of them in the future.

Beauchesne's 409 on page 121 indicates, for example, in (8) that "A question that has previously been answered ought not to be asked again." Of course, we've heard that over and over again, and even today the hon. member violated that rule.

I only point that out, Mr. Speaker, to say that it's entirely appropriate in my submission to you for the Speaker to interject when the rules are being blatantly violated over and over again. The members of the House will note that I have not been rising on points of order with respect to the frequent misuses and abuses of the rules and misuse and abuse of question period because, unfortunately, under the rules that we have, all of those points of orders are dealt with after the fact when they can be of no force and effect. So it's entirely appropriate – it ought not to be done often, and you've used it only sparingly – for the Speaker to interject when rules are being violated on an ongoing basis.

So I think it would be appropriate to clarify for the House your ruling in respect to the particular question that was asked. But I think it would also behoove me to encourage you to continue, not on a daily basis but when the rules are being grossly violated over and over again, when supplemental questions are, indeed, not supplemental but prewritten. Supplemental questions, according to Beauchesne's 414 are supposed to be "necessary for the elucidation of the answers that have been given, within due limits." Often we hear supplemental questions which actually have no bearing or no relationship to the first question or have obviously been prewritten so, therefore, couldn't possibly adhere to the rules.

So, Mr. Speaker, a timely intervention by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar asking for your advice with respect to how he might appropriately put questions in the future.

The Speaker: Well, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, your name has been mentioned. Do you have a participation to make?

Dr. Taft: No.

The Speaker: Oh. So I'll assume there was no petition on your behalf.

All hon. members, there's an old saying – I think it's in English literature; I think it was Shakespeare who once wrote it – something along the lines of, "I think you protesteth too much," or something to that effect.

Okay, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, you have an assignment, and that is to do some homework. Homework number one is to read the letter that I sent to all hon. members prior to the commencement of this session. I think it's the seventh such letter that I've sent in the last seven years, and it outlines the rules that we will follow. It outlines the documents that we will use to administer the procedures of the House.

I would also draw to the attention of the member an agreement that was signed by the various House leaders, signed some time ago, about preambles. Basically, it indicated that a preamble was permitted in the first question of the set, but there was to be no preamble in the second and subsequent, and as I recall there are signatures from three House leaders with respect to that document. So would you kindly find such document? Would you have a discussion with your leader, who signed it, and ask for an interpretation of what it meant?

Now, number three. I have read the Blues, and the member is wrong. The member goes on ad nauseam. The member violates the preamble rule repeatedly. These violations occur over and over again, but the Government House Leader asked me to just intervene intermittently, which has been my style: to intervene intermittently. Quite frankly, I could probably intervene 10 or 12 times a day, which would be known as Mr. Speaker's intervention period rather than the question period.

Now, having done that, you will also read the Blues tomorrow for what I've just said today, so there's no mistake because everything I've said here today is in writing.

Speaker's Ruling

Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: We will now deal with Beauchesne 409. I repeat this again for all hon. members not just the member in question that I'm talking about today. "It must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate." All members might want to study Hansard to see how all of these things have been violated in most of the questions that come in here.

Secondly, "the question must be brief." Now, "a preamble need not exceed one carefully drawn sentence." Whoa, hon. member. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, I'm not even talking about your first question; I'm talking about your second question when I quote:

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier. Given that Mr. Southern also stated in that letter, quote, one department's determination is not an adequate substitute for clear foresight, prudence, and caution in this case, unquote, when will this government listen to the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties and others?

And then, you know what? The Hansard people have put a question mark in there, but that's not where it ends. It continues:

The municipal districts and counties last fall passed an emergency resolution urging this government to abandon and unplug electricity deregulation.

It still doesn't end. Then it goes on:

When will you do the right thing?

I mean, there are several. I didn't do this; the Hansard people did. Total violation. Total violation.

Now, number three: "[A] question ought to seek information and, therefore, cannot be based upon a hypothesis, cannot seek an opinion, either legal or otherwise, and must not suggest its own answer," – how often do people come in with a question saying: well, you know, we're right; why don't you do the right thing? – "be argumentative or make representations."

The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne asked for, I guess, accommodation from the Minister of Energy today about bright minds. He got one. That violated that one too, but I thought that one was rather frivolous and most people would see through that, so I didn't have to intervene.

And 409(8): "A question that has previously been answered ought not to be asked again." And on and on and on it goes.

Then, Mr. Bosley's quotation is a great one, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, because you didn't use everything in the section. I draw your attention to page 430. I think that Speaker Bosley is in that area, but on page 430 it says this: "In conformity with parliamentary tradition, the Speaker retains the authority to determine when supplementary questions may be permitted."

3:00

So, in essence, if I read – which I did not write; it's not my book; I didn't write this. We take great heed with respect to parliamentary tradition. It essentially means that, to follow through from our Standing Orders wherein I quote Standing Order 2, the Speaker must retain order in the House, must ensure that the practices of parliamentary tradition are present. Basically, decorum must be followed.

Then you go from there. Speaker Bosley and all the other authors of this particular document, Marleau and Montpetit on page 430, and I quote again: "In conformity with parliamentary tradition, the Speaker retains the authority to determine when supplementary questions may be permitted."

When the Speaker today suggested to the hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development that she need not proceed to tell the whole world what every department of government is doing with respect to a certain matter, there was an intervention in terms of the conformity to parliamentary tradition. You, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, received the same treatment in a fair, unbiased, nonpartisan, dignified manner. It's the job of the Speaker to do that for the benefit of the protection of the democracy in Alberta.

Thank you very much.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 14
Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you very much. It's my pleasure to move on behalf of the hon. minister Bill 14 at second reading, that being the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to have this opportunity to once again, as I've repeatedly done over the years I've been here, speak to an appropriation bill, this time Bill 14 as the supplementary supply.

This is, Mr. Speaker, the second supplementary supply requested by the government in this current fiscal year. In November 2003 16 ministries, one office of the Legislative Assembly, which was the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner, requested a total of $1.251 billion in supplementary supply for operating expenses and equipment and inventory purchases and capital investment.

This last year was a lot of money especially since the government's new fiscal framework had just been announced seven months earlier. Here we are, a few short months, back again where this government has to come back here for more money because they still haven't figured out after all these years in office how to adequately budget or forecast. That's a real problem. It would be a significant problem in a province that wasn't as wealthy as ours, but repeatedly this government is able to get away with this because there seems to be more than enough money to go around to those departments and those issues that they think are important.

We can't support this, Mr. Speaker. The reliance on supplementary supply estimates to manage a government is neither effective nor responsible management for a $20 billion corporation. In the business world these guys would be turfed as managers so fast that you wouldn't be able to blink. The current reliance on supplementary supply estimates points to real problems with budgeting processes and the revenues and the way this government has managed their ability to forecast those revenues.

Relying on the supplementary supplies for making up budget shortcomings demonstrates a clear lack of effective management and long-term planning. We saw that reflected when we had the appropriations before us and we had the ministers reporting. Repeatedly they underbudget, underestimate.

I'll take fire management as an example. They have a five-year forecast, an average of what they've spent, yet each year they come in under that forecast when it comes to budget time. Well, what's that all about? Common sense tells you that at least you should be hitting the forecast, and particularly when we've had widespread drought conditions and several years of higher than normal fire forecasts, you would anticipate that the year to come would also be a problem, and you would budget accordingly. But not this government. It is the way they like to do it.

The government brought in a new fiscal framework. They talked about it as the Financial Statutes Amendment Act that enshrined into law several new fiscal rules that they promised would protect Albertans from riding the energy roller coaster. This new framework was supposed to put an end to the stop-and-start program funding and the government's reliance on supplementary supply. Yet this hasn't been the case. Less than a year later the government is breaking its own rules. We see that Bill 2 has capped government resource revenue spending, but the Premier recently announced that new legislation will be introduced this spring to raise the resource revenue spending cap. So how is that responsible fiscal management?

We've got a number of questions still outstanding on what's happened here that we weren't able to have answered when we had the supplementary supply estimates in front of us. In terms of those that are pertaining to ministries that I follow as the critic, it's primarily the fire question that I have, and I would hope that that will be answered.

I know that the minister has the answers to these questions because we have talked to them about them off the record, but I would like them answered here before we get through this bill, Mr. Speaker, specifically, in addition to what I've talked about, what I see as an inadequate forecasting process for this particular department on this particular issue. Could he answer the question of where the forest fires were during the last four months of the year for which this extra money is being requested, and has the ministry already spent all of the $113 million requested in supplementary supply for firefighting just four months ago?

So if I could have those questions answered before we pass this last bill, I would very much appreciate it. I'll take my seat now and allow another member to ask some questions.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a second time]

Bill 12

Financial Administration Amendment Act, 2004

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour, my duty, and my job to move second reading of Bill 12, the Financial Administration Amendment Act, 2004.

Bill 12 streamlines and clarifies how government manages and invests funds, clarifies its wording and definitions, and makes other technical amendments. Mr. Speaker, the act is a key part of the province's financial management. It identifies how the government is to manage and control the financial resources of Alberta and provides for accountability by assigning authority and responsibility for financial management.

There are three main aspects that I would like to address in a very brief way, the first being amendments relating to how certain aspects of investments are administered, the second being amendments relating to the consolidated cash investment trust fund, the third being amendments that would allow for improved controls around the authorization of disbursements by accounting and expenditure officers.

The first change relates to the allocation of investment costs amongst various participant funds. Rather than conducting transactions for each investment fund for which the province is responsible, for example, it's more efficient to create a pooled fund. Structured not unlike a mutual fund, you buy it for your own investment and invest all the various funds as units in this pool.

As the province manages funds and surplus cash, each transaction bears a cost, including the cost of buying and selling, the personnel cost of managing and administering the investment, and so on. It is most efficient to have these costs allocated to the pooled fund and reflected in the value of the units held by the various funds that invest in the pool, just as each investor in a private mutual fund pays a cost for the management of the bigger mutual fund. So the amendment that we are proposing simply clarifies that the investment cost can be allocated to the pooled funds. This is the existing administrative practice.

Next, amendments would clarify that where the Minister of Finance is a trustee of funds, such as the pension fund, these funds may be invested in units in the province's pooled funds. Again, this is to clarify that the existing administrative practice of public sector pension fund participation in pooled funds is appropriate.

With respect to the CCITF, the consolidated cash investment trust fund, there is a further change relating to the establishment of these funds. This practice is very outdated, Mr. Speaker. It was written some 15 or 16 years ago, and we propose streamlining the legislation and replacing the details of administrative practice in the statute with provisions for contractual agreements. With these changes the minister may enter into contractual agreements with financial institutions and with the participants in the fund for the management and pooled investment of the participants' surplus cash. This will streamline and update our current cash management practice, and participants in the fund will see no significant changes to the way the funds are managed.

The final change that I wish to address relates to the authorization of disbursements. Now, this amendment allows Treasury Board to make regulations or issue directives establishing controls with respect to the disbursement authorization. When the Financial Administration Act was written, it did not contemplate many of today's common practices; for example, the world of electronic payments. So this amendment would authorize the establishment of alternative approval procedures to allow a greater flexibility for the authorization of disbursements by expenditure and accounting officers.

Treasury Board will also be given the authority to approve alternate procedures. Treasury Board directives and regulations are publicly available, so there will be full accountability and transparency of our internal processes. This does not change the principle of expenditure officer and accounting officer authorization, but it does provide for improvements to the authorization controls.

Mr. Speaker, the changes proposed under the financial administration amendment act would streamline how the government manages and invests fund and will clarify wording and definitions. The proposed amendments are designed to improve efficiency in administering investment opportunities and improving the effectiveness of controls on payment authorization.

I urge all the members to support this, and I hope it's self-explanatory. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

An Hon. Member: Question.

Dr. Taft: Nice try.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 12 is going to work its way gradually through here. I don't think it's going to get a lot of opposition from us, but perhaps as the debate moves along we will be able to make some suggestions to improve the legislation. The object of this bill, as I understand it, is to streamline and clarify how the government manages and invests funds, to clarify the wording and definitions, and to make a few other technical amendments to legislation.

It's also attempting to update the legislation to keep the province's investment activities in line with electronic fiscal transactions, which might save money in the management of government funds by reducing transaction fees. I would be interested, actually, in whether there's any estimate of how much money this transition from paper to electronics might save and, in fact, how the electronic information will be backed up.

I think, though, given that this is second reading – we're looking at intent here in a fairly general discussion – a point has to be made that the province should actually be in the position of having to manage far more wealth than it has. The volume of nonrenewable resource revenues that have flown through the provincial coffers since this particular government was elected is absolutely staggering. Over 90 per cent of it is gone forever. So is the oil and gas.

So here we are looking at legislation that adjusts the technicalities of how government manages and invests funds, but we never raise the much bigger issue of how large the amount of funds we're dealing with should be. In my view it should be vastly greater than what it is now, and if we'd had wiser management, it would be vastly greater than it is now. But here we are today reduced to debating details, and details are important.

I appreciate the efforts of the Member for Little Bow in briefing us. At this point there does not seem to be a lot to oppose in Bill 12. It largely adjusts language, brings language up to date. There are a few questions, and perhaps some day I'll even ask the member if he can arrange a tour, a visit to the government's investment offices.

I am curious to know how the amendments proposed here are actually going to improve the efficiency in administering investment opportunities. Has there been any cost-benefit analysis done? Are we able to say, "Yes, by bringing in this legislation, we're going to be saving $100,000 a year in transaction fees" or whatever? That's just a pure example. Or are we doing this without a cost-benefit analysis? Any information along those lines would be helpful. I would hope that somewhere behind the scenes somebody has looked at the details to justify this legislation and said, "Yes, this is going to save us money," or "Yes, this is going to allow us to be quicker," or "Yes, this is going to do something for us." More detail on that of course would be helpful.

I think that until we get into committee, I will probably leave my comments at that and look forward to any information that can be brought to me by the Member for Little Bow on this or perhaps by the Provincial Treasurer.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow to conclude the debate.

Mr. McFarland: Mr. Speaker, I'd be happy to provide the information to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, and I'll undertake to do that. In the meantime, I'd like to call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 12 read a second time]

Bill 13 Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004

[Adjourned debate February 26: Mr. Marz]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had moved second reading previously. If I could just take this opportunity to provide some highlights of the legislation for the members before I turn the floor over to other members.

This legislation is proposing to update the act to reflect the present practices in Alberta. It'll also address concerns over noxious and restricted weeds and propose to increase penalties for violations of the act and provide consistency with other existing legislation. It will also delete parts of the act that are covered in other legislation so that there's no duplication and provide a streamlined process to update the legislation when required.

These adjustments will continue a very long tradition of Alberta heritage in this province of grazing livestock throughout the forested area. It dates back to the early 1900s. Grazing is a sustainable land use that also assists in managing natural grasses that in times of forest fires can help control that situation.

With that, I'd be eager to listen to comments from the other members and happy to answer any questions.

3:20

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to have an opportunity to speak to Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004. This bill was first described to me as being something that may not be that big of a deal, but as we look at it, we've got many, many questions outstanding on the bill. The initial groups that we sent this bill out to to review have raised some pretty grave concerns and are hoping that we can hold this bill over for some time while they can look at it in more detail and look at the implications.

As we see it, this bill proposes to give broader, more sweeping powers to the government with regard to forest reserves and their management in the province. I'm going to put my questions on this bill on the record in second because until we have the questions answered, in principle we won't be able to support it.

So we see now that this act applies to all the forest reserves in the province and not those established after the year 2000, when there were some previous significant changes. It looks to us that it gives rather sweeping powers to anyone in government and that they're assigned to deal with the forestry reserves and not just the forest officers, specifically referring to section 7 of this act.

In section 6 we want to know why the reorganization of the acquisition of land is done the way it is and why there's the order of preference that there is: expropriation, purchasing or otherwise acquiring, or exchange. So some more specifics on why that section is in there and how the ministry would expect that to be used.

Then we see in section 6(b) that "any personal property" is added to this section, so if we could have the questions answered on why that is happening. Also, it states in the bill that it allows the minister "to purchase or otherwise acquire any estate or interest in land and any personal property in conjunction with it." This is a pretty general statement. So can you give us some examples of where we expect to see this being used and whether or not there are going to be any specific conditions on it?

Also, we see additional power being given to the minister through section 6(c), "where the Minister considers," to determine adequate compensation for land exchange. Already this year alone, Mr. Speaker, I've had two complaints to my office about people thinking that land had been exchanged in an unfair process, that it didn't seem to be a fair value exchange. So in the interest of being open, transparent, and accountable we want to see that process work for all people. Would the minister answer the question of whether or not when transfers are done they could be made public at that time so that the appearance of value is not subjective, that it's open to interpretation by all people in the community? It doesn't look like that would happen here, and we would like that added.

We also see that this bill removes the authorization by the LG in Council "to prohibit or restrict . . . any business or commercial activity" in a forest reserve. That's the one that's got a number of the communities that we sent this bill out to very upset. So if that can be addressed in terms of why that's in there, we'd appreciate it.

Section 7 removes "the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations," and replaces it with "the Minister may make regulations," always a highly contentious issue for us and for many people in this government and in this province, that the ministry has such an overriding authority. So if that could be answered as to why that change is being made and why we couldn't leave it the way it was and whether or not there are any expectations that those regulations may be posted in public before they're put into force.

It's standard practice at the federal level of government for that to happen so that impact statements can be made and there can be some discussion about whether or not the regulations being put forward are going to hurt, help, or even substantially hinder the way people can protect areas and do business. So is there any move to do that in this case? That would eliminate a lot of the concerns from people in the first instance.

Section 7(b) also gives the minister the authority to make regulations regarding

- (i) vehicular, pedestrian or other traffic,
- (ii) the conduct of any business or commercial enterprise, or
- (iii) any other kind of behaviour.

So what it looks like to us is that that essentially removes prohibitions and restrictions rather than increases them, and when we're talking about forest reserves, once again that's a problem.

Because of the power that section 7 gives the minister, section 11(2) becomes subject to any regulations that might be made by the minister under this act. This could mean that such regulations could usurp the authority of both the Forests Act as well as the Public Lands Act. So if we could get some comments on this. In particular, we are concerned about whether or not this will blur the separation of the sale and leased timber rights between the Forests Act and the Public Lands Act. If so, why would this be the case? If not, that's great. Just explain it to us, and we can send it to our groups that are concerned and have a further debate when we get to committee.

It also takes out all references to signage in a reserve until section 9, which is also amended to give the minister all authority in this area. So why that was done, I guess, is the question.

We see that the prohibitions are removed relating to traffic in forest reserves as well as the use of firearms and air guns. Once again, who was the lobby group that you were working on behalf of here, and why would you do this?

We also see that the minister is allowed to establish fees for services. Anytime we smell user fees coming down the pipe, we want to be sure that that's the most effective way to manage the areas because, generally speaking, it's been my experience in this House that it isn't.

Overall we think that this bill weakens the protection of forest reserves. We do like the idea of higher fines for offences against the act, so that's a good move. The questions around the fines are: why are the fines for administrative penalties in section 8 as high as those for offences and penalties in section 10? Do you anticipate seeing more administrative penalties? Are they easier to enforce; less easy to enforce? Are they less serious; more serious? What's the justification for going here?

If we take a little bit of a look at the background of forest reserves, we saw under the Forest Reserves Act of 2000 that all forest reserves within Alberta are set apart and established for the conservation of the forests and other vegetation in the forests and for the maintenance of conditions favourable to an optimum water supply, and we agreed with that statement. We see some undermining of this by the late agreements that have come in when much of the land and forest reserves was turned over to forestry companies to manage with the idea that their primary use would be for logging. I think we need to have a public discussion about whether or not that should be the primary use and whether or not the forestry companies are always the best stewards in this particular instance.

We are also very concerned that these agreements continue to be made behind closed doors. The lack of public consultation signifies that we could have future problems with public access to forest reserves being denied and other kinds of problems occurring for the management of the flora and fauna in the areas because what happens traditionally is that there is more of a focus on the economic harvest and less of a focus on the water management strategies and the conservation strategies. So I would like some comments about this.

At first glance it looks like this bill represents the shortcomings that we've seen in forest management, and we've had quite a bit of contact. Just so the minister and the member who introduced this bill know, the stakeholders we've consulted so far are the Alberta Wilderness Association, CPAWS, the Sierra Club, and the Environmental Law Centre.

While a lot of people could say, "Oh, you just talked to green organizations on this," in fact I would have to say that at the very least everyone has to respect what the Environmental Law Centre has to say on this bill because their primary focus is proper management in the areas of the province. They have a high stake in ensuring that we have a lot of continuity here in how we manage our forests and the interrelation between them and water. So I think it's pretty hard to discount some of these comments that we've heard.

One of them talked about: the amendments speak to the issue of this government allowing the forest industry to control access to our forest reserves, which were initially created to ensure conservation and protection of water. As such, these proposed amendments may look like they are trying to guarantee access to forest reserves for other uses like industry and that the future public access may be denied, as it is now in B.C. So if we could have some comments on that.

There's always the concern about turning the public responsibility over to the private sector, which would make it impossible to co-ordinate an effective forest management strategy and will place our forest reserves in the hands of private interests. Cases such as the hearing that stopped logging at the Bar C Ranch Resort show that the pressure that is being put on forestry companies is happening now for those companies that are not acting responsibly. These are clear indications that SRD as a ministry has to take back the management of forests and involve the public in its decisions.

We've heard time and time again in this Assembly that the forest companies are good stewards and good managers, but as that case particularly showed, it isn't always the case. It's a horrendous fight for members from the general public to get involved in and very costly in terms of time and money to fight these cases, but we've had more than one in the last few years. So we have to consider that and those ramifications when we talk about this.

I go back finally to my last concern about this province and about how it's managed environmentally, and that's that I've said for more than a decade that before we make any decisions to change how we manage the land, the landscape, and flora and fauna, we really have to talk about cumulative impacts when we go into an area, particularly when it's a direct focused attack by industry. Not that they can't be good players and good stewards, but when they're not looking at it from a cumulative impact position, then they're missing some of the mitigating circumstances that could make a difference in how we sustain these forests for the next 50,000, 100,000 years. So my major concern in this area is that we're not talking about those particular issues any time we see an environmental bill before this Assembly, and that's a real problem.

It really seems to me that this bill is more than just about Alberta livestock producers having access for cattle grazing in the Rocky Mountains forest reserve. I think that this is a bit of a slippery slope, and I think that we're going to see some fairly significant concerns. Certainly, over the years we've had many alarms sounded about Canadian forests and about how we need to overcome some barriers to manage forests well in this province. This is a good time to talk about them in this bill and to be concerned about cumulative impact and to discuss who it is that should in fact be managing a natural resource like that: industry or government. I firmly believe that it's government's role.

With that I'll hold my questions and concerns until they're answered in committee. I would expect that the answers will come back in committee, and we'll see how we proceed from there.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act, 2004. Certainly, the importance of conserving our wilderness areas and our forest areas in this province needs to be a top priority, and to some extent I think the bill moves in this direction. But there are a number of questions that need to be answered before we on our part can support this bill.

Just a few questions. How will the minister determine the qualifications of Crown employees to administer and enforce the act if forest officers are no longer considered the standard to do that? Who will do it if not forest officers? Will that, in fact, permit the government to appoint people who are not government employees; that is to say, contract this work to private companies or individuals?

My second question has to do with the destruction of weeds. This has created some concern in the environmental community in particular because the question that comes to mind is the use of herbicides in our forest envisaged here. If so, is this going to be at the unfettered discretion of the minister, or in fact could we not do it in a different way that places a greater threshold to the use of any kinds of chemicals to maintain weeds in the forest? Certainly, an elaboration on this part would be important.

There are many fragile ecosystems and many ecosystems within forest areas that could be damaged if herbicides were misused, and the question of when they'll be used and on whose behalf is an important one. Is it the government's intention to use weed control measures including herbicides in order to extend the use of these forests for ranching and other purposes? So questions with respect to that need to be answered.

A third set of questions, Mr. Speaker, deals with the question of watershed management. The wording about maintaining "conditions favourable to an optimum water supply" currently in the legislation is being changed to read: within the confines of the reserve. So the question becomes whether or not water management can be effectively carried out within the boundaries of a particular forest reserve.

I guess I'd like to raise the concern that in many cases it may not be possible to maintain water conditions for a particular piece of land if you just look at that piece of land. What happens outside it, upstream or in aquifers that overlap with the forest reserve, I guess leads me to conclude that it may be possible to damage the water supply in a forest reserve by not protecting that water supply in an area adjacent to the reserve but not actually in it. That's a very serious concern, and we're hearing quite a bit about that from people who are following these matters and are very concerned about the conditions relating to water supply in these reserves.

3:40

Now, Mr. Speaker, a fourth point that I'd like to refer to is a question about whether or not businesses and commercial enterprises are going to have an easier time gaining access to the forest reserve. Is it the government's intention to ensure the original meaning of this, that it was setting up these protected areas so that they would not be compromised through the introduction of industrial activity?

I think there are lots of very important questions, Mr. Speaker, that must be responded to because I think that what the bill is purported to do and the actual effect of some of the language may not exactly be the same thing. Again, we have an extensive use of regulation and that, of course, puts much of that beyond the control of this Legislature.

I want to indicate that it's of paramount importance to us that the preservation of water supply to these forestry areas is preserved, and if that means controlling activities upstream but not on the reserve, then that needs to be done. Particularly, we are also very concerned about increasing industrial and commercial activities within the forest reserve. That seems to be a direction of the government in general, but it's not necessarily going to retain these forest reserves as sustainable forest areas.

I guess the last point that I'd like to make is the question dealing with user fees. I certainly think that we need to know more about how user fees will be used: who's going to pay them, what for, generally what kind of amounts are intended, and so on. Certainly, people that make money operating in these areas should be compensating the Crown, and their activities ought not to be financially supported by the taxpayer. But people who legitimately use it for other purposes I think need to have some protection against being charged fees that will unduly burden them. So we make a distinction between people who are exploiting the forest for economic reasons and the public, who may just wish to use it for other purposes, recreation and so on.

So, Mr. Speaker, those are my questions and comments. I certainly think that strengthening some of the penalties is a good aspect of this bill, and I think that when I've heard some of the responses to these questions in committee, I'll be in a better position to indicate to the House the position that we will ultimately take with respect to the approval of this piece of legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have just a couple of comments about Bill 13. If you look at section 6, the Lieutenant Governor in Council is given some rather sweeping powers to be able

- (a) to expropriate any land in or adjoining a forest reserve,
- (b) to purchase or otherwise acquire any estate or interest in land and any personal property in conjunction with it where the Minister considers that the land or personal property is required for the carrying out of any policy, program, service or other matter relating to the administration of a forest reserve, or
- (c) to exchange public land in or adjoining a forest reserve for land outside a forest reserve where the Minister considers that adequate compensation is obtained for the public land, and to pay further compensation on the exchange.

So sweeping powers for the minister and for the cabinet.

I was struck when I was reading the bill with the kinds of concerns that we've raised with respect to another bill that was introduced this session, and that was Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. Mr. Speaker, what I fear is the precedent set.

Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act, makes the kind of power that's given here to the minister and to the cabinet questionable. It seems to me that if you read this bill from the viewpoint of someone who sees it as being in the public interest, a bill that will allow the government to act in the best interests of forest reserves – and that's what I think most of us would hope is the motivation for the bill – that assurance I think is chilled somewhat when, in the very session that the government is taking this kind of power onto itself for the protection of forest reserves, we see it overriding in another bill protection that we all thought was in place.

I don't think any of us thought that the government would do anything that would interfere with the Whaleback. I remember when the Whaleback was being discussed, the area that's being set aside to protect that area, how strongly people felt about that, yet here we see it being set aside. So I guess the question it asks is: how good is the legislation? Does it really provide the protection, or the very first time that a special interest group comes along, a company that wants to do something, will all of this be set aside and those groups accommodated?"

So, as I say, I think it's rather interesting that we would be considering both of those bills at the same time during this session, Mr. Speaker. I think the existence of the first, Bill 2, weakens the arguments and support for Bill 13, the Forest Reserves Amendment Act.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, the member in his comments was really questioning the value of legislation and then cited the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act as the one that he claims was the change in policy or change in legislation. I would like to ask the member: if, in fact, there's a commitment by government that has been made prior to the legislation for some certain thing on land, should the government go through with its commitment on that land? I would like to know his opinion of that.

3:50

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Massey: Sorry, Mr. Speaker. I don't have the background that the minister has. I'd need further clarification.

Mr. Lund: Well, I guess to set the record straight, the fact is that there was a commitment back before the Whaleback and/or the Black Creek were designated, and the commitment was that those trails that are existing today would not be shut, would not be closed. Unfortunately, the way the legislation was written, they did get closed. So the legislation that the hon. member was referring to as if it was some kind of a backtracking of legislation is absolutely not true. There was a commitment as a matter of fact. The people that had that land under disposition prior to the designation – part of the condition of them allowing this to move forward was the fact that those trails would not be cut off. So there was not a backtracking of commitment.

Dr. Massey: Well, then I guess my response is that that's sloppy law-making. Surely you wouldn't bring a bill to this House knowing that there was a prior commitment and not include that commitment in the bill.

Mr. Lund: Of course, the difficulty that happened in that whole scenario was that the minister that was involved in the designation – there was an event called an election in between the time that the negotiations were going on and the legislation. So there was a gap, and that's how that all happened. But I firmly believe that when government makes a commitment on anything, then it should be followed through, and I feel very strongly about that.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Massey: Yes. My point stands. It's sloppy.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else wish to participate in the debate? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This bill seems all too consistent with a couple of general trends of this government. One is the consolidation of power into the hands of fewer and fewer cabinet ministers, and we're seeing that played out here over and over when powers are actually pulled out from the Lieutenant Governor in Council and are given specifically to the minister, which certainly bypasses or short-circuits any normal democratic process of cabinet discussion or, even better, bringing decisions out for public consultation. That concentration of power is consistent over and over in this government.

I guess it's an approach of philosophy, although it seems ironic that it's coming from a government that complains so much about not having enough power from Ottawa and wanting more and more power delegated from the federal government while at the same time as a provincial government it wants to hold onto more and more power itself.

I also see this bill as making accountability more difficult. It's partly because of that consolidation of power into the hands of the minister that it becomes more and more difficult to have a sense of what goes on in the decision-making process. It pulls the decision-making process further and further behind closed doors. As a result, it becomes more difficult, I think, to hold the government accountable because of this bill.

This even can in some points get pretty dramatic under Bill 13 when you have, as I understand it, in section 7 that sweeping powers may be granted to anyone in government that the minister assigns to deal with forest reserves, and that's not limited to just forest officers. It could be almost anybody, it seems. So there is a substantial increase of powers there.

Alberta's forests are perhaps one of its least recognized resources by the general public. There was a time about 15 years ago when Alberta had the largest virgin boreal forest in North America and some of the largest in the world. Virtually all of that forest, certainly a huge majority of it, has long since been assigned for use by the forestry industry and the paper industry. We have as a result seen a real decline in the percentage of Alberta that is actually in wilderness condition, especially the percentage of forest that's in a wilderness condition.

Here we have a risk under this legislation, and perhaps that risk will be dispelled when we get into committee, but right now it looks like there's a risk that we have the government actually allowing the forest industry to increase its access and to increase control of access to our forest reserves. These were originally set aside for purposes of conservation and water management, and it seems now that we're seeing that curtailed and limited more and more severely.

In particular, when it comes to water, which is going to be a vastly growing issue here, we are by all accounts narrowing the mandate of forest reserves and forest reserve managers to be concerned about water management outside of the limits of the forest reserves. So while these forest reserves were initially created to ensure conservation and protection of water, including water outside the range of those reserves, there is now a risk that with these amendments under this particular bill we'll be curtailing the mandate of forest reserve managers to only considering the effects of water within that reserve.

I expect that there's going to be some significant debate on this legislation as awareness of it grows and as various groups make their views known and have time to study it. As unfortunately happens with so much legislation, it passes through this Legislature with terrific speed, and given the small resources of the opposition and of people in the public, a thorough review of the legislation can't always happen. Sometimes this leads to mistakes and sloppy legislation, as was pointed out by the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods just a few minutes ago.

So I will be looking in subsequent debate, Mr. Speaker, for government members or the minister or the sponsoring member to perhaps consider amendments to reduce the consolidation of power in the hands of the minister. Why are we having it do that? Are these cabinet ministers not already powerful enough to do their jobs? Why do they have to be able to have fewer and fewer lines of accountability and fewer and fewer counterbalances to their decision-making? That'll be, perhaps, my key concern as I watch this legislation unfold.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29. Anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills to close debate.

Mr. Marz: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I commit to the members that spoke that I'll review their comments and questions in Hansard and be prepared to answer their questions once we get into committee. So, with that, I would call for the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a second time]

Bill 11
Alberta Personal Income Tax
Amendment Act, 2004

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move Bill 11, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2004, for third reading.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, introduces amendments that will make technical and clarification changes to ensure that provincial legislation remains consistent with federal legislation, with current administration, and with other parts of the act.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's interesting that in the discussion of the last bill there was a bit of comment about when legislation gets rushed through too quickly and not enough people are involved and the stakes get made and then we're back having to revise bills in the subsequent session. I wonder if that might be what's happened here as well.

This particular bill, which is fairly brief, fairly small, basically addresses technicalities, and it seems to make some corrections, in effect, to legislation that was passed earlier. So one of the lessons here might be that if the government took a bit more time in drafting legislation and debating it and distributed it a bit more widely, we might actually be able to avoid having to keep coming back to correct bills in subsequent legislation.

So this is more or less, I think, a housekeeping bill. I don't think it requires much in the way of comment on this, although there are a couple of questions such as the one about: why do we have to be discussing the bill in the first place? Why wasn't the job done correctly last spring when we passed what was then, I believe, Bill 4?

I guess we might as well move things along, so I will stop my comments there, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul to close debate.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to say that there were changes that were made to the federal acts and federal bills, and this government, I believe, was very prompt in identifying those changes. That's why it's before you here today.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 11 read a third time]

Bill 5
Family Support for Children with Disabilities
Amendment Act, 2004

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Children's Services.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed my pleasure to move for third reading Bill 5, Family Support for Children with Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004, and I do so on behalf of the hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mr. Speaker, I know that our Minister of Children's Services would like to extend her thank yous to the MLA for Red Deer-North at the very outset of this debate at third stage for all of the incredible hard work and time and effort that she put into this particular issue and this particular bill on behalf of all of Alberta's children and the youth in our province.

It is groundbreaking legislation through this particular Assembly, and I think all members here are aware of that. The minor amendments outlined in Bill 5 are very necessary prior to proclamation and implementation of the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act. I think we should express confidence in this legislation, that it is going to be a beacon of light, as it were, across the entire country with reference to the coverage of services for children with disabilities. This particular legislation is, of course, the first of its kind in Canada because it will provide separate and distinct legislation to cover services for the children with disabilities.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that through the various consultation processes and research that has been done for the drafting of this bill many parents and service providers throughout the province were contacted and spoken with and listened to, and we have listened to what they have said to us. Indeed, this legislation itself came out of what we heard from the families of children with disabilities and from other key stakeholders who expressed concern that the unique needs of children with disabilities were not being sufficiently addressed in some cases within the provisions of the child protection legislation.

There are 10 child and family services authorities and the ministerial advisory committee and the expert advisory committee who have actively participated in the process as well, and they, too, need to be thanked. I also know, Mr. Speaker, that our Minister of Children's Services would like to extend her thanks in particular to our colleagues the Minister of Health and Wellness and the Minister of Learning for their insight and willingness to address the challenges that have arisen as this legislation has been developed.

For the past several months we have seen consultation with an even wider range of people, including parents, service providers, and other stakeholders, regarding the drafting of the regulations that will accompany this particular legislation. So the public consultation process that ended just a few days ago in February I think has resulted in very necessary and very good improvements to the services that we are already providing and will provide in the future to children with disabilities.

Specifically, this new legislation will ensure greater consistency in services for children and families and will also ensure that families and children receive appropriate supports and services based on their assessed needs. This act will broaden the scope of the existing resources for children with disabilities program to focus on supports for the child and the family rather specifically.

The Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act will provide a wide range of family-centred services and supports that will preserve, strengthen, and empower families in caring for their child with a disability. As I have said and other members in this House have said, children are our most precious resource in this province. These are God's children, and they deserve the same opportunity that any other child in Alberta is being offered. The legislation is also going to provide that opportunity well into the future.

Mr. Speaker, I want to add my personal thanks from the Ministry of Community Development, and in my capacity as the minister responsible for the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities my personal thanks are added to the Minister of Children's Services and also to the Member of the Legislative Assembly for Red Deer-North. This is an excellent bit of work here, and we're all thankful to you. I hope that this act will in fact positively affect and change the lives of children living with a disability and their families. I'm looking forward to the proclamation this summer of the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act, which will of course be a very momentous occasion for our province and for all children with disabilities and for their families.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With that, I'm pleased to lend my support to third reading of Bill 5 and do the same on behalf of the Minister of Children's Services.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Massey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a few final comments on Bill 5. Bill 5 essentially takes the definition out of Bill 23 with respect to disability and expands upon it.

It's a bill that everyone wants to succeed, Mr. Speaker. The definitions are extremely important to families that have children needing services and needing help from the government. The wording is crucial. I thought it telling, because I'm fairly well acquainted with the area, that I still found myself asking the minister for examples of the various categories. I think that that's going to continue to be a problem for parents, and it wouldn't surprise me if we're back here a third time at it trying to clearly define what is meant with respect to the act. I hope that's not the case.

When the minister was good enough to give examples, it became clear. Unfortunately, those examples aren't in the act. It's really an act that requires plain English, and it's an act that has to be written with an eye on the prospective reader, which is parents in this province who are seeking assistance for their youngsters. So I hope that we won't be back here, but it wouldn't surprise me if we are, Mr. Speaker, making modifications to it.

With that said, Mr. Speaker, I'll support the bill and, as I said, hope that it does the job that it was intended to do, and that's to bring some clarity to section 1(c) of Bill 23.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to stand on third reading of Bill 5, the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004.

I just want to go over the five amendments that this act involves, and those amendments include clarifying and broadening the definition of disability; changing the phrase "therapeutic services" to "child-focused services"; requiring the director and the appeal panel to consider a family's specific circumstances as set out in regulations when making decisions that affect services to be provided; the fourth one, stipulating a residency requirement for children and families receiving services under the act; and the fifth and last amendment, allowing a parent under the age of 18 to enter into a legal agreement regarding supports for their disabled child.

I think that during debate last Tuesday the hon. Minister of Children's Services clarified issues that were raised by members of the Assembly.

I'd like to thank all members for their support of this legislation, and I would just like to say thank you again, Mr. Speaker, and move third reading of this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to speak to this bill, Bill 5, the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Amendment Act, 2004. This bill, I think, does what it sets out to do. It tightens the definition of disability, eligibility, services, and guardian, and it gives some direction on decision-making under the act. At least on the surface it looks like these changes will facilitate how families with disabled children are assisted and will help to ensure that children with conditions that could be treated medically are not grouped under the label disabled and hence may be eligible or ineligible for services.

So, Mr. Speaker, I just want to indicate that the New Democrat opposition thinks that this bill is generally positive, makes changes that are going to do more good than harm, and we are pleased to support the bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29? Anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Children's Services to close debate.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, there are many occasions when members of this House take strong stances in opposition to certain things that are sometimes advocated, and on the other side of that coin there are occasions when everybody knows what is serving the common good and comes to agreement. I think we see that case here, which is again reflective of the comments that I alluded to in the opening remarks.

I'm pleased to conclude debate at this time on this important and historic legislation.

[Motion carried; Bill 5 read a third time]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll call the committee to order.

Bill 7 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister for International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Jonson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to make a number of comments with respect to Bill 7 at committee stage. I think it's important to emphasize that this bill provides for a very simple and straightforward measure, and that is extending the application of the Senatorial Selection Act until 2010.

As you know, Mr. Chairman, Senate reform has long been a priority for this government, and there is a renewed interest in change with respect to many aspects of looking at the future structure of our government, not just in Alberta but, as I've said, in other parts of Canada. As an example, it was not too long ago that, as I recall, statements were made on this topic by the Premier of Nova Scotia, and he was indicating that the Senate structure needed to be examined, needed to be reformed. They had their views on that particular topic, but it was certainly important to them as well, and I sense that there is a similar interest in many other parts of Canada.

So as far as the bill is concerned, Mr. Chairman, Bill 7 represents an important but relatively small component of the government's overall activity in this very important area of Alberta's place and Alberta's future as far as Confederation is concerned, but also it's a matter for consideration by other provinces all across our land.

I want to emphasize, because there were certain remarks made by the Member for Edmonton-Centre evening last, that this is only a small component of our overall effort in looking at various aspects of Alberta's role in Confederation. As members should be aware, we do have a committee chaired by the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford that has been struck and has been hard at work going across the province from north to south and east to west and into our major urban centres providing a vehicle for Albertans through public hearings to express their views about how our place in Confederation could be enhanced. That, of course, has application possibly to all the provinces in Canada. They might want to examine this overall matter and pursue various initiatives as well.

The committee has been very busy in doing their work. I think that for a topic of this type it has had considerable media coverage. It has had, I think, a pretty good attendance given the time of year that these hearings are being held and the lack of co-operation of the weather on certain particular evenings, and there's certainly been no shortage of views and recommendations coming from the Alberta public on this overall issue.

There have been, yes, additional comments with respect to Senate reform. There have been comments with respect to gun control, the collection of taxes, the future of the Canada pension plan as it applies to Alberta. The list is very, very long. It will be, I think, a very important but also a very challenging task for the committee when it is done to bring all of this material, all of these viewpoints, ideas, and recommendations together as a report to myself as minister. But, of course, I am only one person involved in this overall work. It will be something that will have to be considered by government, and certainly we will want to, I would expect, further consult and get a reading of the public's views once we have a report to present from the work of that committee.

At the first ministers' level I believe that there are two things that I'd like to comment on. In a general way there has been additional impetus given to working on new arrangements and more effective ways of relating to and working with the federal government in this country. The first ministers of the provinces and territories have agreed to set up a structure called the Council of the Federation. It's had its first meetings, and there is there, I think, a new sense of co-operation and cohesion as far as the provinces are concerned in terms of the way they present various recommendations and enter into various agreements with the federal government. To this point in time the federal government has been responsive to a large degree to the ideas and initiatives being put forth from the Council of the Federation.

We look forward, Mr. Chairman, to being very active in the area of interprovincial relations and federal/provincial relationships, and we are far from just dealing as a government overall with Senate reform. Bill 7 is a time-sensitive matter. We need to extend the Senatorial Selection Act so that the provision is still there for the selection by the province of our future Senate nominees, and I would request the Assembly's consideration in having this passed.

I would just like also to assure members of the Assembly that the whole matter of improving overall governmental relations and our place in Confederation is a very high priority with our Premier, with our caucus, and we are certainly working on matters far beyond this particular bill, Bill 7. Bill 7 is one important step in an otherwise very important area with many, many facets to it.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise and address Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004, and very pleased to announce today that Alberta New Democrats are prepared to support a triple-E Senate. That stands for eliminate, eradicate, and erase.

The position that we have taken for many years, Mr. Chairman, has been to eliminate the Senate, to abolish it. I like to think that the New Democratic Party in Canada was the leader in Senate reform and is prepared to go further than any other party in reforming the Senate. It is a rather useless encumbrance, and that is not to say that many of its members are not distinguished Canadians and actually do good work, but having a Senate of the form in Canada is not useful and not democratic. So the question is then: why eliminate it instead of reform it? To go back . . .

Mr. Dunford: I'm sending a copy of your speech to Tommy Banks.

Mr. Mason: I hope you'll include, hon. member, the part about the distinguished Canadians who do good work.

It is something that we think is not acceptable in a democratic society, to have something appointed essentially by the Prime Minister, and we question the need for a check on the democratic passions of the House of Commons.

I might point out that this was certainly the view about the time of Confederation, and the House of Lords, upon which the Canadian Senate was modelled, was considered to be a check on the democratic passions of the population. There was a great deal of nervousness among the privileged classes of Britain in those days about the extension of the franchise, first to all men and later on to women as well. There was a real concern that democracy might get away on them, and they might find themselves having to work for a living. But, in effect, that has never been the case. In fact, there's been a long period of struggle in Britain, in Australia, and in Canada to restrict the upper House's powers and its ability to prevent and hold up legislation that the democratically elected House decided to put forward.

It's interesting to note, Mr. Chairman, that a number of provinces used to have upper Chambers that were appointed in the same fashion; that is to say, by the government for extended terms. They have gradually been eradicated, and the last to go was that of Quebec, which was eliminated in I believe 1967 or 1968. They did away with the Red Chamber in Quebec.

The history of these upper Chambers in Canadian history going back before the Canadian Senate and before Confederation was that they were essentially appointed by the British Crown in order to retain control, Executive Council, and were in fact an instrument of British control over the colonies that came to make up Canada. Gradually, as responsible government developed and colonial Legislatures evolved, they came into conflict with the appointed Executive Council, the governor and council.

That has largely been resolved today in the sense that in Canada as in Britain the Senate, or the upper Chamber, no longer has the ability to permanently hold up legislation which has been approved by the lower Chamber. So it has now some power to delay.

The question is whether or not this is necessary and whether or not it's necessary to have a Senate to represent provincial interests. I think that that's a very debatable proposition. I believe that provinces in this country do indeed have a considerable amount of power and particularly when they can work together. That doesn't eliminate a considerable amount of frustration with the actions of the federal government from time to time, and that's not limited to Alberta or even to western Canada. So I think we would be far better off, Mr. Chairman, to eliminate the Senate and work towards a more co-operative style of federalism, and I think that some steps have been taken in that regard.

Now, I think that some of the activities of this government, Mr. Chairman, have been political and partisan in nature and quite counterproductive. I'm thinking about some of the actions the government has taken with respect to Kyoto, with respect to the Wheat Board, with respect to the gun registry, and so on. These activities are not designed to resolve these issues, and I certainly think that constructive efforts in those areas would be of some use. But they are very often based on simply distraction and attempting to get Alberta voters fired up about the federal government in Ottawa as a means of distracting them from issues here in Alberta. So, for example, I'm thinking of electricity deregulation. I'm thinking of automobile insurance, the cuts to education, and so on.

I don't believe that this use of fed-bashing, if I may call it that, is constructive, and it certainly doesn't work to strengthen the unity of the country. I think there are legitimate interests that Alberta has in Confederation, and they do need to be represented, but the government has in my view misused its platform in order to distract attention from a serious and growing number of problems here in this province.

Mr. Chairman, I want to talk a little bit about proportional representation. I think part of the reason some people feel alienated in western Canada has to do with the system of individual geographical ridings which we use in Canada, and it's one of the few democratic countries left in the entire world to use this type of system. I think there are only about three or four. Most democracies now either use a form of proportional representation or mixed member proportional representation, which does allow the retention of geographical districts and makes sure that there is geographical distribution of the representation in the Assembly or the parliament, but the numbers are proportional to the votes cast for the party.

I think that it would be quite beneficial to people's feelings of alienation if we had that sort of system. I think it would go a long way towards relieving that because every vote would count. For example, if you lived in Quebec and you wanted to be a Reformer, you wouldn't feel that your vote was lost because your candidate had no chance of winning. Similarly, if you were a Liberal candidate in Alberta, you might feel that you might still – yeah.

So, Mr. Chairman, I think that it is an important reform and one whose time has come. I think the idea of the triple-E Senate, which was just adopted from the United States, is not suitable to Canadian conditions despite all the attempts to try and make it appear as if it's a relevant institution. I don't believe that we should be having to import our institutions from the United States, which has quite a different constitutional structure altogether.

I just want to say as well, Mr. Chairman, that I'm very interested in the exercise going on in British Columbia right now, where the government there has essentially convened a group of citizens drawn from all walks of life and all areas almost by lot, as I understand it, and put them to work drafting changes to the political system and the democratic system in that province. One of the things that they've arrived at I think is a proposal for a form of proportional representation in that province, and British Columbia may well be the first province to bring that system in. Of course, British Columbia is highly polarized, and some of the smaller parties are not represented at all in the Legislature, and I think it's the intention that a greater number of voices will be heard if that sort of system is brought into place.

I would have preferred that the government of Alberta do something like that rather than establish the committee that it has. The committee that has been travelling around the province I guess has had a couple of strikes against it. One is that it has only got members of the Conservative Party on the committee, and for a committee to go out and try to represent and hear from Albertans of all different opinions and perspectives, I think it's important that it be representative of the Legislature rather than just the government. I think that this has been one of the reasons why only certain perspectives have been brought before the committee.

I also think it's the case that the terms of reference of the committee have brought forward people who are for one reason or another dissatisfied with Alberta's role in Confederation. I'm not suggesting for a moment that only those people have come forward, but it has been a bit of a magnet, I think, for those people who have hard-core provincial rights and Alberta-alienation types of views. I just want to indicate that I think that the government could have taken a much broader perspective and talked not only about Alberta's place in Confederation but talked about how democracy works in Canada and how it works in Alberta. It could have been an all-party committee, it could have had a broader mandate, and I think that it would have heard from a broader cross-section of Albertans and probably would have been able to provide us with a more balanced and broad perspective.

Mr. Chairman, I want to indicate that that's more or less my comments on Bill 7. We will not be supporting it.

I think, just in conclusion, it's important to review the history a little bit of the government's efforts in respect to electing Senators here. Of course, under the government of Brian Mulroney an elected Senator or two were appointed by the government, but in the Senate election most recently that was not the case. It was held in 1998. The election coincided with municipal elections held across Alberta that October, and there was a lot of protest from municipal governments at having the senatorial election foisted on them. The two top vote winners were to be put forward by the provincial government.

It had a serious credibility problem from the start, Mr. Chairman. The Prime Minister at the time, Mr. Chretien, made it clear that he had no intention of appointing the winner of the election. Before the vote was held, he filled the vacant Alberta seat by appointing Douglas Roche, a former Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament.

Now, Mr. Roche, it turns out, has been one of the most outstanding Senators that that Chamber has ever seen, and notwithstanding my views on the Senate, I do want to indicate that Mr. Roche and a number of other people, including Mr. Banks, have done an outstanding job in an institution that, unfortunately, I cannot support.

In that election, Mr. Chairman, neither the Liberals nor the New Democrats fielded a candidate. The Reform Party ran two candidates, and there were two independent candidates. One of the independents was actually somebody who had run for the Reform nomination for the Senate but came in third. So really what you had were three Reform candidates for the Senate, two of whom were official and the other independent was unaffiliated. So it was seen at the time by many people as a Reform Party exercise, and I think that's what it was, Mr. Chairman, and a futile one at that.

Public interest was extremely low. Because people were voting for municipal councils at the same time, it was difficult to know exactly how many people didn't bother to cast a vote for the Senate elections, but I think estimates are that as many as half of the people who went to the polling stations that day left their Senate ballot blank.

So it turned out to be a big embarrassment for the government, Mr. Chairman. You know, quite frankly, we haven't heard that much from this government about Senate reform since then, but they have put this little bill in here just to keep their Senate bill alive, and I suppose that they need to do that in order to satisfy certain sections of their supporters. But I think that election showed just how indifferent most Albertans really are about the government's triple-E Senate reform project.

You know, I think, Mr. Chairman, they are far more concerned about the government's handling of the BSE crisis, about the government's handling of the deregulation crisis, about the government's handling of the education crisis, or about their handling of the auto insurance rates crisis. All four of those crises are far more at the top of mind of Albertans than the triple-E Senate or the Canadian Wheat Board or any of the other little federal issues that this government would rather be talking about.

I think that the public is seeing through the exercises that the government goes through when it's talking about some of these federal issues, and they know that it's not the kind of thing that they particularly care about. They are not the kinds of things that affect them in their daily lives, and I think that they feel that the government is off base and out of touch by putting so much emphasis on these peripheral and marginal issues. That's what I think this is, and I think this bill is merely an attempt to keep this issue alive so that the government at some time can raise it again when there might be a little bit more interest and so that they can escape criticism from their supporters to whom this is a somewhat important issue.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It gives me great pleasure to rise and join the debate in Committee of the Whole on Bill 7, the Alberta Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. I'd just like to make a few remarks. I do support Bill 7. As a matter of fact, the Alberta government has long advocated for Senate reform, and it's something that I do personally believe in as well.

Alberta has held the only two Senate elections in Canadian history. Our province has lobbied other Canadian governments in support of Senate reform, and we continue to raise the issue with the Prime Minister at every opportunity. As a matter of fact, I understand that this has been as recent as the last first ministers' meeting in January. Our hon. Premier was there, and I know that Senate reform was one of the items on the agenda.

In 2002 the Alberta Legislature reaffirmed its support of a triple-E

Senate by passing a resolution calling on the Prime Minister to respect democracy and appoint one of the province's elected Senate nominees. Following that, our Premier wrote the former Prime Minister again asking that one of Alberta's elected Senate nominees be appointed to fill a vacancy in the upper House. Now, the former Prime Minister chose not to respect the wishes of Albertans on this matter.

With Senator Thelma Chalifoux having reached mandatory retirement age in February of 2004, just last month, and with Senator Doug Roche due to retire in May of 2004, Alberta will actually have three Senate vacancies. That is exactly half of our allotted seats, Mr. Chairman. By agreeing to appoint elected provincial nominees, the current Prime Minister would take a small but important step towards comprehensive Senate reform. It would also demonstrate that the Prime Minister is listening to the concerns of western Canadians, who overwhelmingly support Senate reform, as I will talk about later. Perhaps the Prime Minister, while he's at it, could listen to Albertans and cancel the gun registry as well.

In our federal system the Senate was designed to represent the interests of the provinces in Parliament. So to abolish it, as the NDs have just said, is to lose any hope of a provincial check and balance. Mr. Chairman, what that would do is essentially cut the legs out of any hope for the provinces having a say as to provincial jurisdiction within federal legislation.

Because the current Senate lacks a democratic foundation, it is not performing its function. Currently, Mr. Chairman, it's not an effective counterbalance to the House of Commons. The people, not the Prime Minister alone, should be able to choose their Senators. Again, the NDs don't seem to want to recognize the people's choice, which is really sad for democracy. However, it is the people that have spoken in Alberta, spoken very clearly, yet the Prime Minister has not listened to those concerns.

The Senate should be reformed so that it is elected with equal provincial representation and effective power. That's what a triple-E Senate is. That's what pioneers like Bert Brown have worked so hard on for so many years. People like Ted Morton have also worked hard to see this happen. Not erase, eradicate, and eliminate, as the NDs say, but elected, equal, and effective, Mr. Chairman.

Currently, Mr. Chairman, the Senate is also flawed because the provinces are not represented equally. In the Senate there are currently 10 seats for New Brunswick, 10 seats for Nova Scotia, four for Prince Edward Island, 24 seats for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, six seats for Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and B.C., six seats for Newfoundland and Labrador, and one seat for each of the three territories. This is not even close to equal, not even close.

In 2003 the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations introduced through a government motion a model constitutional amendment to reform the Senate. The key provisions of Alberta's proposed model for Senate reform are simple: six Senators per province – that's right; even for Ontario and Quebec six Senators per province – and two Senators per territory. That's the first point.

The second point is elected Senators, elected by the people for the people – elected Senators.

Thirdly, absolute veto power over legislation that is affecting provincial jurisdiction. Mr. Chairman, the current health care debate is a good one. It's something where the provinces are trying to exercise their provincial jurisdiction, yet we have some federal legislation sitting there that could possibly encumber the provinces from doing anything. A reformed Senate would provide a much-needed balance to the House of Commons. Everybody knows that Albertans want that, that we need that. It would also force the federal government to make better decisions on a day-by-day basis for the benefit of all Canadians.

More recently, last December the Premier established an MLA committee to consult with Albertans on the current state of federal/provincial relations. Further discussions on Alberta's Senate reform resolution will await the outcome of those consultations. Mr. Chairman, I do look forward to the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford's report. I understand that it's going to be an exciting one and one that is definitely thinking outside the box.

In the meantime, we need to address the fact that the current Senatorial Selection Act will expire on December 31, 2004. As we've been discussing, the act establishes the procedures for the election of Alberta's Senate nominees. It was previously extended in 1994 and 1998, and I believe that we will continue to extend it and to improve upon it until it happens, until we finally get some satisfaction in Senate reform.

The proposed amendments in Bill 7 would extend the life of the Senatorial Selection Act to December 31, 2010, so that senatorial elections may be held in Alberta again. That's what the people want, Mr. Chairman. In fact, a recent Canada West Foundation poll showed that 80 per cent of Albertans support elected Senators, so it is important to Albertans, even though again the New Democrats say that it isn't. It is important. Eighty per cent of Albertans support elected Senators. Therefore, I support elected Senators, and I support Bill 7.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that all my colleagues in this Chamber will join me. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My comments on this bill will be fairly brief. In committee I understand that we're to debate section by section. I think that including the title, this bill is only 42 words long, so I will only be debating one section, which is section 2, which reads as follows. "Section 54 is amended by striking out '2004' and substituting '2010'."

Well, I think that's a poor piece of legislation.

An Hon. Member: It's that simple.

Dr. Taft: It's that simple. I think we're missing the whole point here. It's been an interesting debate, though. It's been interesting hearing the perspective from the New Democrats to abolish the Senate completely, which, you know, is not bad. It's been interesting listening to Tory members talk about bigger dreams for Senate reform and equal Senate representation from every province and that kind of thing. Again, a very interesting debate, interesting points.

What I'd like to focus on is the section that I would like to see in here, which would have to do with democratic reform within Alberta, because I think that we could lead this whole debate by example. We could show the federal government what democratic reform is like by reforming our provincial government processes. There are just a few examples I'll lay out.

The Member for Edmonton-Highlands referred to the efforts by the B.C. government, which look really very interesting, in assembling a group of citizens chosen by lottery representing every area of the province and giving them a mandate in law with a budget and with facilitators to come up with a new electoral process for B.C. and then making a commitment to take that proposal to the citizens of British Columbia in the next general election. That's exciting. What I would like to see in a bill addressing democratic reform would be ideas like that.

Some other examples that we could look at in Alberta would be strengthening the legislation governing our Auditor General to give the Auditor General of Alberta the same power that the Auditor

General in Ottawa has to conduct investigations, to make reports public, to subpoena witnesses, and so on and so forth.

We could bring in whistle-blower legislation. Why not do that? I think that would be a great idea, and that would set an example that would be important for the federal government and for other provinces.

We could strengthen the power of our Public Accounts Committee, which was recently compared by a World Bank analyst to public accounts processes in Third World countries. He was in fact shocked and appalled at how little power the Public Accounts Committee in Alberta has. Interestingly, it's been to a large extent the work of the Public Accounts Committee in Ottawa that has led to the exposure of the scandal in Ottawa. I only wish we had a Public Accounts Committee with the same strength here.

So those are some things that I wish were in this very, very brief bill.

As it stands, I'm wondering what's going to happen if the Senators who won the last election die before the deadline, before 2010. What if they change their mind? Or, heaven forbid, what if they get appointed to the Senate? What if the Prime Minister were to appoint Ted Morton to the Senate? Wouldn't that be interesting? Then what's this legislation all about?

The people who were chosen as the so-called Senators-in-waiting were chosen through a process that in the eyes of Albertans had very, very limited legitimacy, and that was now so many years ago that extending the deadline for another six years is silly, and I think it's a distraction from the much more important issues that this province faces.

So I've made my comments clear, and from the very first word all the way through to the 42nd, which is the last word of this legislation, I'm opposed to this bill.

On top of that, Mr. Chairman, I would like to adjourn debate. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: To adjourn debate, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview?

Dr. Taft: Mr. Chairman, might I make a correction? I would move that we adjourn debate until 8 o'clock this evening. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: No. The motion is not in order. I'm wondering if the hon. member wanted to have a vote. Were you calling the question?

Well, anybody else wishing to participate in the debate then? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I do have a few comments to make.

Do you want us to adjourn debate, Gene?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Yes.

Ms Carlson: Okay. I'll leave those until 8 o'clock tonight. Thank you.

I'll adjourn debate now on this bill.

The Deputy Chair: Well, that motion is not in order, but the motion to adjourn debate is.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I would move that we rise and report progress on Bill 7.

[Motion to report progress on Bill 7 carried]

5:00

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration and reports progress on Bill 7.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I would move that the House now stand adjourned until 8 this evening and that we return and reconvene in Committee of the Whole at that time.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:01 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, March 2, 2004

8:00 p.m.

Date: 2004/03/02

[Mr. Tannas in the chair]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

The Chair: Good evening. I'd like to call the committee to order. For the benefit of those who might be unfamiliar with this stage of the Legislature, it's the informal session, where hon. members are allowed to move around quietly from one place to another and engage in very quiet conversations, where we only have one member standing and talking at a time, and they're allowed to take off their jackets. It's the part where we are able to go through either the budget item by item or in this case, in Committee of the Whole, we go through an act and can go piece by piece.

Before we begin this evening's deliberations, I wonder if we might have consent to revert very briefly to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's, indeed, a great pleasure tonight for me to recognize and introduce some members of my constituency who are here observing proceedings. They are with the Education Watch initiative, which, as many people here would know, is a specific initiative on behalf of education in our province. It's a nonpartisan, Alberta-based parent advocacy group who are advocating for improved funding and better learning environments in Alberta public schools.

Joining us tonight are Lynn Erickson, Terri Tumack, Lori Almborg, Catharine Schoendorfer, Barb White, Trina McCloy, Joanne Abbott, and Roger Abbott. These constituents have young children in Velma E. Baker school and at Kate Chegwin school in my constituency. I've had the pleasure of meeting with some of them before; I'll look forward to probably meeting with them again. I would ask that they please rise, receive our thanks and also the warm welcome of our Assembly this evening.

Thank you. My other introduction, Mr. Chairman, is on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora. This is a young lady named Linda Inglis, who resides in that constituency, and she's also part of the Education Watch initiative. She has one child at Westminster school and another child at Ross Sheppard school. I would ask everyone to please warmly greet and receive Linda Inglis to our Assembly.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my great pleasure to introduce tonight 10 visitors who are joining us in the public gallery who are part of the Mill Woods Youth Council. They are accompanied by Mr. Shane Isfield and Miss Paige Denham. Just to tell you a little about this council, they do a wonderful job helping and supporting youth in Mill Woods. They have a very small budget, but from that budget they will take applications for funds for things like support for sport programs for children who otherwise wouldn't be able to attend due to financial difficulties and things of that nature. They're a welcome addition to Presidents' Council, which we all try to attend every month. I would like you all to very much welcome them as they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Chair: Thank you.

Bill 7

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: I believe I was speaking to it and adjourned debate, Mr. Chairman, this afternoon.

Yes, I'm happy to finish my comments on this particular bill, which I had hardly started. This is one of the silliest bills I've seen in this Legislature.

An Hon. Member: Silliest?

Ms Carlson: It is. Two lines.

What does it do? It changes the date of expiry for those silly Senators-in-waiting that were elected in one of the lowest voter turnouts we've seen in this province. [interjections] Well, perhaps some of you would argue that all Senators are silly, but that's a different argument. Tonight we're talking about this particular silly bill, which is two lines. It extends the expiry date from December 31, 2004, to December 31, 2010. Who knew, you guys, when you drafted this silly piece of legislation back then, that it would actually expire before your Senators were appointed? Who knew that?

Rather than participate in really effective Senate reform, which is what we need, you wanted to do this: just waste a lot of money on an election to choose a couple of Senators that wouldn't be put in place. Instead, you could have spent that money and spent all of the wind that you expended on this particular topic over the years in really effective reform, which is certainly what we support and continue to support.

We have to see at this time, when we've got two Senator vacancies right now in Alberta and a third one coming up, that we work cooperatively with the federal government to ensure that we get a Senate that's representative for Alberta. That doesn't just mean filling a couple of vacancies. That means giving us some sort of proportional representation out here that's going to actually give us a voice.

Mr. Bonner: Doug Roche.

Ms Carlson: Well, Doug Roche was a very good Senator, and now he's another one who is retiring here very shortly.

Mr. MacDonald: He's an independent Senator.

Ms Carlson: An independent Senator. We could have more like that if we had an effective kind of proportional representation platform that we took here. That's something that both sides of this Assembly would be happy to co-operate and work on together, because there is no doubt that Alberta needs a stronger voice, and that's the only way that we're going to get it. Based on population, as electoral divisions go for at least another 10 years, we're only going to have 26 elected voices in this province. When you think about the over 300 MPs in Ottawa, that isn't a very high percentage. So the best way for us to get a more effective voice in Ottawa regardless of the government in power is through effective Senate reform.

So I urge members to not support this bill, to instead take the money on the development of this and any future conditions and work co-operatively on effective reform. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. McClelland: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I can understand the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie's concern and derision of the Senate as a silly Chamber, because most of the present Senators are Liberals appointed, generally speaking, by a Liberal Prime Minister, and that's what makes that body often a seat of derision, that it doesn't often deserve.

In my experience – and I'm sure I reflect the attitude of most members of this Chamber – the people that are in the Senate of Canada are by and large very worthy individuals. This debate is not about the individuals that presently occupy the Chamber although as in all Chambers some are more worthy than others. This is about the kind of country we would want to have.

I would remind our Liberal colleagues here tonight that the first elected Senator appointed in Canada came from Alberta, and it wasn't all that many years ago. His name is Stan Waters, and he ran against Bill Code in the election for Senator to represent Alberta. I'm sure Liberals in the House would not ever want to hear a person of the stature of Bill Code described as unworthy, because he's not.

When the electoral race took place in Alberta that resulted in the Senators-in-waiting that we have now, it's fair to say that political parties were not particularly engaged. The Alberta political parties were not particularly engaged in that election with the exception of the Reform Party. The Senators that ran representing the Reform Party at that time won, and they won handily. They ran under the complete and clear understanding that the chances of their being appointed to the Senate were something akin to remote and zero. They knew that there wasn't much chance of their being elected, but that's not what that was about, and that's not what this is about.

This Senatorial Selection Act and the continuation of the act that we have in place have far more important ramifications than the two people that are presently the Senators-in-waiting or perhaps the new people who will replace those two when the next election is called if they don't run again and aren't re-elected.

What this act is is a manifestation of the absolute desire, the fact that Alberta will not rest until we as a province achieve balance in the country. Right now it's widely agreed that there is a good deal of alienation in our country from east to west and perhaps to a lesser degree from north to south, but there is no question that there is a great deal of alienation in the country. The Canadian Unity Council in their most recent in-depth polling indicated that alienation is something in the order of 40 per cent throughout most of western Canada. It's certainly centred in Alberta, and one of the reasons for that is that Alberta contributes a tremendous amount to our country.

Alberta contributes not just financially, but we contribute ideas and we contribute spirit. We contribute an ethos that is very different from any other province or region in the country, and we also contribute a substantial amount of money annually, in the billions of dollars. We're a country, and we understand that, but we do not as Albertans or in British Columbia or Saskatchewan or Manitoba have the weight in the centre of the governance of the country, in Ottawa, commensurate with our contribution to the country, with our population, and certainly not with the financial resources that we contribute to the country.

That imbalance is reflected in legislation that comes from the centre of the country, which may be good and may be appropriate for certain regions, the heavily, densely populated centres of Toronto, Montreal, but in a country as broad and diverse and vast as ours, it doesn't make a whole lot of sense. So the struggle to have a Senate that represents the regions or the provinces of the country as it was originally determined that the Senate would represent has as its core the potential to resolve the alienation problem that our country faces, and that's one of the reasons why this is such an important debate.

Now, just a little over 140 years ago, in 1864, when the founding fathers got together and decided that we had to have an upper House, Sir John A. Macdonald said:

We resolved then that the constitution of the upper house should be in accordance with the British system as nearly as circumstances would allow. An hereditary upper house is impracticable in this young country. Here we have none of the elements for the formation of a landlord aristocracy – no men of large territorial positions – no class separated from the mass of the people. An hereditary body is altogether unsuited to our state of society and would soon dwindle into nothing. The only mode of adapting the English system to the upper house is by conferring the power of appointment on the crown (as the English peers are appointed), but that the appointments should be for life.

So Sir John A. Macdonald understood the problem. They limited the number of Senators that would be in the upper House. I believe it was 24, 24, and a combination of 24 from the Atlantic provinces. They understood that the upper House had to be composed in a manner that would not have deadlock. They didn't want the representatives of the upper House to be popularly elected because they wanted the members of the upper House to have a different political and a longer range view so as to be a check or a balance on the lower House. It wasn't a deeded or a hereditary aristocracy that would be in the upper House. It had to be an upper House of the people.

So how was that to be achieved? This is the elemental difference between what was envisioned by Sir John A. Macdonald and the Fathers of Confederation in 1864, when these debates took place, and today. At that time, the upper House was to be appointed by the Crown so that those in the upper House appointed by the Crown would not be subject to the same pressures, the same responsibilities, the same concerns as the lower House: needing to be elected, needing to be popular to be elected, and therefore perhaps not having as long a range of vision.

Well, as we all know, what has happened over the intervening years is that the upper House has become a resting place for political supporters, fundraisers, bagmen, deadwood from the House of Commons that the Prime Minister wants to move into the upper Chamber so as to provide space for someone else to come in. For Prime Ministers the Senate of Canada is a very, very handy place to have around because it does offer a very cushy and a very warm and nice and prestigious landing spot for ministers, front-benchers, or others that the Prime Minister wants to get out of the House to get other people into the House, to open up a slot and to reward the party faithful.

After the scandals of the Senate in recent years made it a much more visible House, to be fair, there have been some appointments that have brought tremendous credit on the institution of the Senate, but that does not absolve us of the core problem that we have, and that is that we do not have in Canada a House that represents the regions of Canada. There is a possibility that through the Council of the Federation the Premiers will get together and we will have a pseudo-Senate as a direct result of the Council of the Federation, but that's only a possibility, and that's only if the Premiers can get together to make it happen.

What we do have is the reality of a Senate that is at present a final resting place for friends of the Prime Minister. It does not fulfill its very important function in our country, and it must be reformed.

8:20

Now, whether or not it is reformed as a triple-E Senate, we don't know. Our legislation calls for a triple-E Senate. But it's very, very likely that across the country over the next few years there will be a tremendous increase in the interest of things electoral as another generation takes the reins of political leadership in our country. We all know that political participation across the country is not nearly as high as those of us in this House think it should be or high enough to be good for the future of the country. We have to put our minds to work to figure out how we can get more people engaged in the political life of our country. So this is going to be something that will be considered. I think that at present in Canada there are five Legislatures that have either full-blown or slightly less than full-blown electoral reform commissions in place right now.

The Senate of Canada is a particularly important constitutional body, especially now, it's fair to say, that the Supreme Court has taken on a law-making role not envisioned by the Fathers of Confederation, who designed our parliament after the Westminster model, and we now have the introduction of the civil code through the Charter of Rights interpreted by the Supreme Court. So it's fair to say that we probably do not have a Westminster democracy today as much as we have a democracy influenced by the court. We have to have checks and balances. There are none today. The Senate of Canada offers our country the potential to have a check to the absolute power that's vested in the office of the Prime Minister.

So, Mr. Chairman, although on the surface this bill is not all that exciting, once you get past the surface, this bill and what it means to the potential of Alberta, what it means to the potential of our country to live in harmony, what it means to the potential of our province to be a full partner in this country, to contribute, to be recognized – and not just our province but all of the provinces because we are a federation of provinces. We're not a unitary state. If we have the resolve, the unrelenting resolve to see this through to the end, we have the capacity to change our country and to change it for the better and perhaps even to protect our country.

So with those words, Mr. Chairman, I'm going to take my seat and hope that the members of this body will support this bill and take a renewed interest in the capacity of our province to lead our country once again. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's with interest that I listened to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, a constituency that oddly enough is named after the first Liberal Premier of this province. It's quite interesting to hear the hon. member's historical analysis of the Liberals and Liberal patronage in the Senate. I would have to remind all hon. members of this Assembly and particularly the hon. member of the role that the Mulroney Conservatives played in appointments to the Senate.

Now, the federal Progressive Conservative Party was the party that originally came up with this idea of the GST, and they had to go to extraordinary constitutional lengths to get more Conservatives into the Senate in order to pass the GST.

Mr. McClelland: So let's fix it.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. The hon. member says, "Let's fix it," and that's a good idea. But for the debate, Mr. Chairman, it would be the right thing to do to make clear to all those that all parties in the past have used Senate appointments in what some would consider to be an unsavoury manner. So to label one political party and not the other is in my view wrong.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to briefly enter into debate. I wasn't going to comment, but I heard the comments made by the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, talking somewhat derisively about the Senatorial Selection Act and the purpose of the act and the effect and benefit that the act has had.

I have to enter into the debate first of all because I believe that fundamentally Albertans do support the concept of a triple-E Senate – equal, effective, and elected – and that getting there from here is not a direct journey. In fact, having constitutional change in this country, as we've seen, is problematic at best, so we need to have some steps along the way to show that provinces are unalterably set on this course, that want to see it happen.

I also wanted to speak specifically about the Senatorial Selection Act because it provided two purposes. First of all, it resulted in the first appointment of an elected Senator in this country in the person of Stan Waters, so the act, in effect, worked in its first instance because of the time and place and circumstance. But I would submit to the House that the act has efficacy in and of itself in that the quality of appointments to the Senate from Alberta has been far superior, in my humble submission, to those in the rest of the country, and you have to ask why that's happened.

While we don't agree with the concept of appointing Senators, the fact of the matter is that since this act has been in place, not only has Stan Waters, who was elected under the provisions of this act, been appointed to the Senate, but I believe also Senator Doug Roche has been appointed to the Senate. He was a Conservative Member of Parliament who provided exemplary service. Not everybody in the province agrees with his political philosophies, but everybody, I think, has to agree that he provided exemplary service to the province and to the country as a Member of Parliament, and he has continued to provide that service in the Senate.

He was one of the few people who you might have identified as a Progressive Conservative appointed by a Liberal government to the Senate, and one has to ask why. I would submit that when appointments were considered at that time, the Prime Minister looked at Alberta and said, "How am I going to deal with Alberta and Alberta's proposal for an elected Senate and the concept of having this Senatorial Selection Act?" and went out of his way to find an appointment that would be a good appointment to the Senate and would deny all the challenges that people might have, that people were appointed as political hacks or as a patronage appointment or all those other derisive things that people say when Senators get appointed in this country from other jurisdictions.

You can say the same about Senator Thelma Chalifoux. You can say the same about Senator Tommy Banks. You could say the same, I think, about Senator Jean Forest. Alberta has had exemplary appointments to the Senate, unparalleled anywhere else in this country. In my humble submission the reason for the quality of the appointments to the Senate from Alberta is because the Prime Minister, when he's making an appointment to the Senate from Alberta, has to look very, very carefully, has to make sure that the appointment is of outstanding quality so that people don't rise up and criticize the appointment because they don't like the quality of the people.

8:30

So this act has had efficacy not only in putting forward Alberta's position that the Senate should be an elected, effective, and equal

Senate, and until that can be accomplished, we should at least have the opportunity to elect nominees from this province. Not only has it had efficacy in putting that forward, but it has actually offered a very real benefit to the people of Alberta in that we have better quality of appointment of Senators because of this act, in my submission.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I want to make a few comments here, as well, on this particular bill, and I want to start off by making it perfectly clear that myself and my caucus colleagues believe very strongly in Senate reform. Of course, it was a Liberal bill – and I believe it was Bill 210 – calling for triple-E Senate reform in this province, and we fully support that same position today. We also feel that this would address the imbalance that does presently occur in the Senate if this were to take place.

But we do have a lot of problems with this particular bill, Bill 7, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2004. Certainly, one of the reasons that we have difficulty with this is that when elections were held in 1998 and the two members were elected, they were elected by approximately only 25 per cent of the eligible electors in this province. Now, here we have an amendment to a piece of legislation that's going to extend that period another 10 years.

So here we have two members sitting on the sidelines hoping that perhaps the Prime Minister of the day may appoint them to the Senate. We also have two people who were elected by only 25 per cent of the eligible voters, yet we are going to extend the period when they can sit on the sidelines another 10 years. So that will take us to the year 2014. When we see that they were first elected in October of 1998, then we're going to have a 16-year period approximately when we have elected members sitting on the sidelines. I don't know anywhere else in democracy where you can get elected and not have to be re-elected and maintain your position for 16 years. That is certainly not the way democracy works.

So from that very standpoint this is not a very good bill and certainly not an amendment that I can support. Thank you very much.

Mrs. O'Neill: Well, Mr. Chairman, as I understand the bill, it does not point to the extension of the two gentlemen that have previously been elected to the Senate for the period that the Member for Edmonton-Glengarry indicated. This bill is intended to allow the process to continue the availability of the electoral opportunity, if you will, for the citizens of Alberta to possibly elect members to the Senate, who might even eventually be in-waiting should there be the opportunity for appointment. But we would, if this process is followed through, have an indication of those who are willing to let their names stand and, secondly, whom a number of people in this province believe should be vested with this honour and this opportunity.

I just want to be very clear that we can't misread the bill, however brief it is, to be understood that we are by virtue of it proposing that the two individuals, Mr. Bert Brown and Mr. Ted Morton, continue as Senators-in-waiting, if you will, or however people have been referring to them. Their term, if you will, ends this year, expires. So let's be very, very clear on that.

Thank you.

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 6

Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004, certainly is, I think, worthy of debate, discussion, and I would strongly urge all members of this Assembly to have a second look at this and consider supporting this legislation. If they have any questions or if they have any concerns about this, now is the time, I believe, to have them addressed.

Now, we're considering making amendments to the Income and Employment Supports Act, that was originally passed in 2003, and in particular in committee here amending section 49 to allow Human Resources and Employment officials to enforce all child support agreements that cannot be pursued by maintenance enforcement by protecting the privacy of people who provide the whereabouts of the parent who had not paid maintenance. I'm also told that this bill will resolve conflicts between other pieces of legislation. I see the hon. member nodding his head. I would consider that to be an affirmative, Mr. Chairman.

Now, the hon. member earlier said that the intent is mainly to help parents get child support by allowing Human Resources and Employment to enforce all child support agreements not covered under maintenance enforcement. When we look at this bill and we see the amendment to the Income and Employment Supports Act, there is a change here that allows the director to provide employment and training benefits to eligible people with disabilities or an employer, training provider, or other person to be used for the benefit of an eligible disabled person. In section 24 we are substituting for "Minister" the "Director." Hopefully, this will resolve some problems for some people in the province.

That's all I really have to say in regard to Bill 6 at this time, Mr. Chairman, but I would urge all hon. members to consider supporting this legislation. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll take this opportunity to address some of the questions that were raised during second reading of this particular bill and perhaps even some of the questions that were just raised by the speaker who preceded me.

One of the questions that was asked, I believe by the Member for Edmonton-Centre – and I'm just paraphrasing her question – was to the effect that the parents or one of the parents have to be on an assistance program through the government, programs like AISH or supports for independence, in order to be eligible to have the government assist them to seek and obtain child support agreements or court orders. Well, there currently is a structure in place to assist custodial parents to pursue the noncustodial parents to obtain child maintenance and to instigate child maintenance enforcement. This bill does not attempt to change that.

The bill's goal is to basically give the department and those who pursue noncustodial parents – or shall we call them delinquent dads to drive the point home? – more teeth to allow them to find those individuals, to assess their assets, to ascertain what their income level is, to find out whether they are working or not, and bring them back to the responsibility of raising their own kids, if not in person then at least through financial means.

So at this point the department is of a great deal of assistance to single parents who are in receipt of any benefits from the Department of Human Resources and Employment, be it AISH or the old SFI or, as we currently know it, Alberta Works. But it also extends assistance to those who get off the benefits and become independent yet are considered to be low-income earners or those who are in receipt of benefits such as medical health benefits, be it for adults or for children. It is the goal of this government to extend those benefits to a wider range of Albertans, but obviously there are costs attached, and at this point it is available to the group of Albertans who are in need, who can't pursue those child maintenance orders on their own and require that assistance.

Another question the Member for Edmonton-Centre raised was to the effect of: what is the correlation between Alberta Works and this program? Well, there is a great deal of correlation. As we all know in this House, we passed new legislation in 2003, to which my predecessor just spoke, which basically absolves us of the terminology of SFI, supports for independence, and we have a new global program in place.

It is the goal of this government and particularly of the department to pursue initially the noncustodial parents whose ex-spouses happen to be recipients of low-income benefits. It stands to reason because, after all, if there are children out there who are in low-income families, those children are primarily the responsibility of their parents, not of the government. Government is the last resort to which, unfortunately, the custodial parents have to turn. If the government is to be of assistance to custodial parents in raising their kids, it only stands to reason that we primarily pursue the noncustodial parent and have him own up to his responsibility and contribute to the raising of his or sometimes her children, although unfortunately it happens mainly to be his children. So the correlation is quite large because most of the individuals who are seeking assistance through the department to enforce their court-ordered child maintenance agreements are individuals who are in receipt of additional provincial programs such as Alberta Works.

The third question raised, I believe also by the Member for Edmonton-Centre, was regarding pursuing noncustodial parents for maintenance agreements or support agreements. Her question was: are we just looking for money that would be in fact coming back to the government, or are we willing to pursue this on behalf of court orders where monies would not necessarily be subrogated to the department? It's a good question. However, our main priority is to assist those who really need help to begin with.

There are many families out there who have child maintenance agreements ordered by courts who simply are affluent enough to be able to pursue those court orders on their own and to enforce those court orders on their own by simply hiring a lawyer for a fee or by hiring a private detective or whatever means need to be employed in order to track down that delinquent parent. However, unfortunately, those who are in receipt of government low-income benefits don't have the luxury of being able to hire legal counsel or a detective to track down the delinquent father. In this case, it is the department that has assumed the responsibility of assisting those parents.

Does it have anything to do with subrogation of dollars? Obviously, as a result, it will because if there are monies coming from a father towards a child and the single mother in the meantime is receiving low-income benefits from our province, it only stands to reason that we hold the father responsible primarily for the cost of raising his children. Then the government becomes a secondary payer and not a primary payer. However, it is not exclusive, because in many cases single parents raising children are not in receipt of any financial benefits from the province. All they're receiving is a medical services card, and then the province will not be subrogating itself to any dollars but will simply be able to assist that single mother with the additional monies that she will now be receiving from the delinquent parent in order to allow her to have more resources available for the raising of the children.

I'm glad to hear that at least the Liberal opposition appears to be in support, and I'm glad to clarify the questions. I would urge all members to support this bill. I think it's a very important piece of legislation. Unfortunately, in our society it is not uncommon to have breakdowns of families, and we accept that. We have learned to accept that in our families.

However, what we accept is the fact that adults do divorce, but one person in your family that you can never divorce is your child. That child, whether there was a breakdown of a marital union, remains your child and your responsibility, not only a parental responsibility but also a financial responsibility. As MLAs too often we see that not everybody concurs with that. There are many individuals out there who feel that the moment their marriage has fallen apart, their financial responsibility towards their children also disappears. Too often those individuals turn out to be quite crafty, shall we say, in their ability to disguise their income or employment to begin with or assets for that matter and, by doing so, make it virtually impossible for the other ex-spouse who happens to be in a financial predicament to be able to pursue them, because to pursue them you have to have resources to begin with, and that's one thing that they don't have.

So I think it's a fabulous step that this department has taken in introducing this bill. What this bill really will do is it will give the department one more tool to be able to track those parents down without primarily worrying about issues of privacy and from where they obtain the information or who reports the information to the department.

As we all know, most Albertans agree that being a delinquent parent is not the proper thing to do, yet because of the fact that if you were to report that person to the department and they were to find out that you did that, that could severely jeopardize your relationship with that delinquent parent, many hesitate to report. Well, with the advent of this bill and with the passage of this bill into law, that is one less concern that Albertans will have to have. They will be able to report the individual or assist the department in locating the individual without having any consideration for the fact that their personal information will be disclosed and perhaps the relationship with the delinquent parent will be jeopardized.

So, again, I would urge all members of this House to support this particular important piece of legislation simply to assist those who are in financial need and to drive the point home that it is everyone's moral and financial responsibility to raise their own kids. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It is indeed a pleasure to rise this evening and make a few comments on Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004. A few years ago I had the opportunity to listen to Senator Jesse Jackson, and he made an interesting comment at the start of his speech. He said: you know, the poor people in the United States today aren't seniors on fixed incomes; they're not our new Americans; they are single mothers with young children. This particular bill, Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004, is a bill that certainly addresses this very situation.

8:50

One of the strengths of this particular bill is that it does indeed show the value we have for children. We do need tougher legislation in this province, certainly, to deal with noncustodial parents who do not pay for child support. The other situation we also have is that even when we do have our legislation, we have to make certain that it is applied to the fullest in order that children and the custodial parent are receiving the dollars that they deserve and the dollars that are rightfully theirs to feed and house and educate those children.

One of the ways that I think we could have done it – and I would have liked to have seen this – is that we have far more interprovincial co-operation between agencies where we can track down the deadbeat parents, the parents who are noncustodial and who are not paying their fair share.

Another issue that we seem to have with parents who phone the constituency office in Edmonton-Glengarry is that in too many cases the money that is coming from the noncustodial parent does not arrive in a timely manner. When parents are trying to raise families and pay rent and buy food and whatever else, they certainly want predictable and stable funding in order to pay their bills.

As well, I think another area that we have to look at when we're talking about parents and particularly the noncustodial parent who is in arrears to the custodial parent and their children is how they can go to court and get this amount reduced and then go on from there, for all the time that they were in arrears and the custodial parent and the children were doing without and they were struggling because of that.

I would have liked to have seen legislation that would address where noncustodial parents hide their assets or perhaps have legislation where we can seize assets of those particular noncustodial parents who are in arrears so that they aren't driving new fancy vehicles, they aren't living a lifestyle that is luxurious in comparison to what their former spouse and children are.

As well, I think we have to have some type of system whereby we can crack down on these people who are in arrears, who work for cash or in some other manner get money. It is a very difficult task for us to trace. So certainly this is one more tool that we can use to address some of these situations.

I think that we can go a lot further in passing legislation which would definitely put more teeth into collecting in a timely fashion the monies that the noncustodial parents owe and certainly forcing those parents who have not made it their number one responsibility to care for their children so that we do pass legislation which will assist those custodial parents and children in getting their money and getting it in a timely fashion.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to make those comments.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I wanted to speak a few words on Bill 6, the Income and Employment Supports Amendment Act, 2004. When we as the government were first looking at this bill, the question arose in my mind in terms of the balance, in terms of how vigorously we go after these financial debts that parents owe. It seemed to me that we were going after these debts in a manner that was much more intense and put much more of the force of the law behind it than most any other debts that we collect. You know, that was sort of something that struck me at first, and I started thinking: well, how far do we go with this?

I found out that there are many states within the United States where rather than just going after a parent, going after their financial needs, the parent who does not pay their support payments is actually thrown in jail. So in terms of where we are as a government compared to all the other governments, we tend to be sort of in the middle of the road with this.

But it also got me thinking about what a parent contributes to their child's upbringing. I know it's quite difficult for us. You know, we tend to be a little older, and it's hard to remember what it was like as a child in terms of how much we needed our parents. But I think most of us have children ourselves, and we can at least look back that far and remember the really intense relationship with our young children.

So what this brings me to is that even though we work really hard on getting the financial backing of parents for their children, we should be working just as hard at making sure that children have access to both their parents. I think that as a Legislature we should be looking at opportunities for enforcing the access just as strongly as we enforce the financial side of parental responsibilities.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report bills 6 and 7.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following: Bill 7 and Bill 6.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Third Reading

Bill 2

Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise one final time here during third reading of Bill 2, the Black Creek Heritage Rangeland Trails Act. In my comments I hope I will be addressing some of the concerns that some of the members expressed as I talk about the general spirit and intent behind the nature of this important bill.

I want to begin, Mr. Speaker, by simply saying that Alberta Community Development's primary mandate with respect to provincial parks and protected areas is to preserve representative examples of the various natural landscapes in the province in order that Albertans can enjoy these many areas for many years into the future. The negative impacts of recreational motorized vehicles on the natural environment, particularly in more sensitive areas within the foothills and mountains, are generally not compatible with the many other activities that occur in provincial parks and protected areas, where Albertans and visitors alike travel to enjoy the peace and the solitude of the great outdoors that our province has to offer.

Now, with respect to protecting this significant area in the Whaleback, a commitment to continue to provide for some level of recreational vehicle access through the heritage rangeland was made to local ranchers and other stakeholders prior to the establishment of the two Whaleback protected areas back in 1999. To put it another way, we needed to do this in order to establish these protected areas.

So Bill 2 provides a unique and specific exception that will allow two short existing trails – in other words, trails that are already there and have been for decades – within the heritage rangeland to continue to be used to access the existing trail system in the adjacent Bob Creek wild-land, where limited recreational off-highway vehicle use is already permitted. These existing trails have been there for many years and have always provided the main access into the Bob Creek wild-land, and that includes off-highway vehicle access.

The monitoring of off-highway vehicle use in Black Creek heritage rangeland and in the adjacent Bob Creek wild-land by my department staff will of course continue. Reports from the local residents and, on occasion, incidents reported by a responsible OHV user also contribute to the monitoring of use in this area. My department staff patrol this area on a regular basis and find compliance to be generally very good.

OHV users have reported that overall the use in the area is relatively low. Most OHV use occurs during the hunting season, and during that particular time of year there are more frequent patrols and enforcement measures that my department staff undertake. Ranchers are in this area on virtually a daily basis during much of the year, and they also provide us with important monitoring information.

Trails such as the ones we're talking about can be closed due to fire conditions and for other reasons such as flooding or wildlife hazards or generally poor trail conditions and so on. But trails will continue to be monitored and closely watched as required.

In the end, Mr. Speaker, we are very mindful of our preservation commitment to this generation and to future generations of Albertans. In fact, Alberta has approximately 12.5 per cent of its total land base already in some form of protected area status, be that provincial parks, wild-land parks, natural areas, ecological reserves, recreation areas, national parks, heritage rangelands, or the Willmore wilderness.

Now, with the Whaleback areas that are part of this bill, Bill 2, that is before us tonight, we made a commitment to continue to provide for some level of recreational vehicle access through the heritage rangeland prior to these protected areas being established, and Bill 2 simply provides a specific exception to allow the two short existing trails that I alluded to earlier within the heritage rangeland to continue to be used by recreational vehicles and to provide access through those two trails into existing trail systems in the adjacent Bob Creek wild-land. This exception was always anticipated in managing these two special areas.

Once this has been addressed, we will also proclaim a section of another important piece of legislation governing our protected areas to prevent general recreational OHV access. The Wilderness Areas, Ecological Reserves, Natural Areas and Heritage Rangelands Act is what I'm referring to, and that is the one that defined the parameters for establishing and protecting heritage rangelands, including the general prohibition of off-highway vehicle use in such areas as a means of assisting with their ongoing protection.

Dispositions, as I indicated during earlier stages of debate, are permitted for such uses as grazing and trapping and so on. This prohibition, however, that I have just alluded to has not yet come into effect as we had a very unique situation affecting the Black Creek heritage rangeland, which, by the way, is the first officially declared heritage rangeland in our province. We recognized that this situation was unique, and it had to be addressed before we proclaimed any general prohibition of OHV use in heritage rangelands, which will come into being in the not too distant future.

So that addresses a few important concerns. I just have a couple of other ones very quickly, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I want to reiterate that with respect to the heritage rangeland, the Black Creek heritage rangeland specifically, and the Bob Creek wild-land, both of which are beautiful areas in the Whaleback, no final management plan has yet been arrived at. There has been a draft management plan made available to the public. We've had public consultations in a couple of locations and received a lot of input, but that particular final management plan is still being worked on.

With respect to the issue of alternative access that has been referenced, this too was explored, but as I indicated earlier, the topography, the drainage patterns, the configuration of the heritage rangeland precluded any reasonable access from elsewhere to accommodate the commitments made back in 1999 and to accommodate the unique features that formed the perimeters of these two special areas, so we're going with what already exists in order to provide access into the Bob Creek wild-land.

I want to also emphasize the importance of the local ranching community, the farming community, and the MD of Ranchland, all of whom have requested this particular solution to the unique problem that exists down there. They have been very forceful and adamant in ensuring that the government lived up to the commitments that were made back in 1999, and had we not made those commitments then, Mr. Speaker, we would not have been able to even get to the protected status level of the larger picture which we're trying to serve, so, please, let's keep that in context.

With respect to the monitoring of OHV use, which some others have commented on in the House, I want to say that we will be doing more frequent patrolling and enforcement, particularly during the hunting seasons and so on. Also, just to reiterate that ranchers are there and they are very vigilant, and they, too, report any problems that might be encountered.

The other point is with respect to the additional work that we will still be doing around creating specific strategies to implement the management plan once it's finalized, and that, too, will require the co-operation of all the local stakeholders and others that we've been hearing from.

Mr. Speaker, I think it's important to again emphasize that the Black Creek heritage rangeland is Alberta's first, but we will also be looking at re-establishing as heritage rangelands over a period of the next several years six other heritage rangeland natural areas in the province. Today's bill, Bill 2, is specific to one heritage rangeland only, and it applies only to two short existing trails in that Black Creek heritage rangeland itself.

9:10

The heritage rangeland designation as a classification requires, however, an understanding of the unique relationship that ranchers play in maintaining native prairie vegetation on these sites through carefully managed cattle grazing. A heritage rangeland designation will sustain the traditional ranching approach to the management of native grassland ecosystems while ensuring the preservation of ecological integrity and biological diversity associated with these sites.

That is the thrust of what we're doing here. We're not opening up the entire heritage rangeland. We're only saying that two short trails will be allowed to carry off-highway vehicles through the heritage rangeland to the Bob Creek wild-land. So the proposed bill does not affect any other provincially protected lands, as some people may have thought. It is very specific, only to the Black Creek heritage rangeland itself.

Mr. Speaker, I think that basically concludes my comments on Bill 2. I hope it also alleviates some of the concerns that some members may have. We fully understand what the ecological benefits are, the economic benefits, the educational benefits, the recreational and health benefits, the scientific benefits, the spiritual and cultural benefits, and so on. We fully realize what those are and how important they are to Albertans and to future generations of Albertans.

So that having been said, I will look for the support of members on this important Bill 2 as we conclude our debate. If there are other questions or concerns that were raised during other parts of the debate, Mr. Speaker, between myself and my staff we will endeavour to get answers out to those members as soon and as quickly as possible. With that, I will take my seat and hope for your unanimous support of Bill 2.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Carlson: Well, Mr. Speaker, you're not going to have unanimous consent on this bill because the minister's comments have not satisfied the stakeholders that are in contact with me.

The minister himself said that motorized vehicles generally are not compatible with preservation goals, and then he goes ahead and allows motorized access. He knows, I know, we all know that off-highway vehicle and highway vehicle activity is known to have a detrimental effect on wildlife habitat. It disturbs the wildlife. It increases air and water pollution, it causes soil and stream and bank erosion, and it is in direct contradiction with what the initial intent was of having this Black Creek heritage rangeland established. Allowing this kind of traffic into the rangeland sets a dangerous precedent for the protected areas in Alberta, where currently we already have less than 9 per cent of provincial Crown land set aside for nonmotorized access. They made a bad deal, and it's not getting any better with this bill.

Thank you.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I just want to get on the record a couple of comments relative to this bill. I think it's really important to recognize that prior to the designation of the Black Creek heritage rangeland and, for that matter, the whole setting aside of the Whaleback from industrial activity and general traffic in the area, there was an agreement with the ranchers and the people in the area that these trails would remain open. Unfortunately, as the act was put together and the designation occurred, these trails were part of the designation.

If people want to have a look, there are other areas where we set aside parcels of land and where trails have been used for ages, and we excluded them from the designation. Unfortunately, that did not happen in this area, and I think it would be an absolute insult to the people in the area that agreed to work with the government and set this area aside and preserve it into the future. As part of that agreement these trails were going to be open, so now we're fulfilling what we agreed to back in 1999.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Lord: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to add just a couple of quick comments in support of this bill. Frankly, I agree with my hon. colleagues that this is a pretty big success story overall and that it's very important to look at the big picture and the agreements and what has been in place there for many, many years. From an environmental perspective this is a 98 per cent success, and instead we hear people focusing on the 2 per cent negative portion to this. I would suggest that, in fact, this really has been an overall big success story, and I hope that members of this House will solidly support this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development has moved third reading of Bill 2.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a third time]

Bill 3

Architects Amendment Act, 2004

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. member who sponsored the bill, I would move third reading of Bill 3, the Architects Amendment Act, 2004.

A thorough explanation was given at the time it was moved for second reading of the need for the changes to the Architects Act to bring it into alignment, allowing for the designation of licensed interior designers and bringing them into the scope of the act. I would commend the act to the House for passage.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I certainly at this time in third reading would like to express my gratitude to the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, the sponsor of this bill. He went out of his way to explain what was being accomplished here by this Bill 3, and I appreciate that.

Certainly, I have read in a number of publications the efforts that the hon. member has made to discuss this legislation with as many of the 600 practising architects and 60 licensed interior designers as possible. I'm left with the understanding that other people were in discussions also with the hon. member. So with those remarks, I hope that the changes that are proposed here to define "licensed interior designer" and allow for one licensed interior designer to be elected to the council of the Alberta Association of Architects work out.

I would like to think that now that we have this accomplished with the architects, perhaps it's an opportunity for the government to look at the building code, which certainly the architects work from. I think it's time for a comprehensive review of the building code in this province to ensure that consumers who are buying condos – condos are springing up all over the province, but one has to make sure that our building code is adequate to not only protect the purchasers of those condos but also to protect the builders as well. Let's make sure that our building code is sufficient to protect all parties here. Now that this has been accomplished, if I could encourage the hon. members on the government side to give themselves another job to do, it would be to have a look at our building code to ensure that it is satisfactory in this day and age and in this marketplace.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a third time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 9:21 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, March 3, 2004

1:30 p.m.

Date: 2004/03/03

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly 32 grade 6 students and their teacher, Ms Natalie Gago-Estevés, and Mrs. Joanne McMillan, parent and school council chair, all from the Brander Gardens elementary school in my constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. They're here today to observe and learn with keen interest about government. I had an opportunity, while we had pictures taken earlier, to receive questions, and I can tell you that this group asked some of the most intelligent questions that I've ever had as a member of the Legislature. They're seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask that they please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development.

Mr. Norris: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise on this beautiful Alberta day to introduce to you and through you a constituent of mine, Mrs. Anna Nascimento. I haven't had a chance to have questions from Mrs. Nascimento, so I can't comment on them, but I'm sure they're going to be very good ones when we get a chance to talk. Like many Albertans she was proud of the Alberta Learning Commission and is here to see that process unfold as we discuss it. Would you please join me and give her the warm welcome that she deserves in our gallery.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to the balance of the Assembly 16 visitors from the Department of Energy. It's part of our new employee orientation program. I'll read their names and then ask them to stand at the completion of the names so they can be recognized and receive the warm welcome of the House: Ms Josie Kumar, Diane Smith, Janette Appelt, Alexei Jernov, Michael Martell, Pawel Swisterski, Robert Parker, Janette Pole, Susan Friedrich, Veronica Henriquez-Torres, Patricia Chatzoglou, Cecilia Bloxom, Dawn Von Semmler, Barrie Harrison, Anna Ellert, and Baxter Patey. I think it's important that I say that there is no relation between Diane Smith and myself. Please rise.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly some guests who were instrumental in shaping the Residential Tenancies Act, those amendments which are going to be tabled in the House today. These people and the organizations they represent were crucial in our ongoing efforts to listen to Albertans, to work through a diversity of views, and to help the government pursue a balanced vision, one that is acceptable to both landlords and tenants.

There are over 300,000 rental units in the province and a demand for more, and in the middle of their busy days these folks worked on these amendments to the Residential Tenancies Act to ensure that they keep pace with the rental housing industry and make Alberta's legislation among the best in Canada.

May I ask our distinguished visitors – they are seated in the members' gallery – to please rise when I call their names: Gerry Baxter from the Calgary Apartment Association, Ron Holland from the Edmonton Apartment Association, Brock Ketchum from the Calgary Better Business Bureau, Hope Hunter from the Boyle Street Co-op, Colleen Burton-Ochocki from the Edmonton Landlord and Tenant Advisory Board, and Katherine Weaver from the city of Edmonton. From my own Department of Government Services I'm pleased to welcome Rick Solkowski. I ask the Assembly to give them the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce a couple of constituents of mine, one of whom, I'm pretty sure, voted for me because she's my wife, and the other one, I hope, will be able to vote for me someday. That's my five-year-old son. So I would ask Lucas and Linnette to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Tannas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured today to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly 50 home-schooling students from Keg River to Milk River, from Lloydminster to Canmore. They are studying through the Centre for Learning at Home, which is headquartered in my constituency, in Okotoks. They are accompanied today by Bernadette Palamarek, Cindy Pukalo, Lori Snoxell, Leah Boorsma, Kari-Lynn Hastman, Maria Blunt, Leon and Tracy St. Denis, Raelene Devich, Mary Lynn Schneider, Carol Durnford, Elaine and Nolan Chapman, Jennie Almost, Heather Gautreau, Kim Frisch, and Deb Van Ember. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure of mine to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 22 of the best and brightest students this province has to offer, who, I'm sure, someday will be very interested in pursuing my job given their energy and their intelligence level. I'd also like to introduce Mr. Rick Dawson, the teacher; parent helpers Mrs. Barbara Bitzer, Mrs. Donna Fischer; and the bus driver, Mr. John Bruketa, with whom I had the distinct pleasure of discussing the importance of rural development for the success of this province. I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all hon. members of this Assembly a constituent of Edmonton-Gold Bar, Mr. Jim Guthrie, who is accompanied by three visitors from the Soviet Union who are employees of the oil company SeverTEK. This company is just completing a $355 million oil processing facility and a 110-kilometre pipeline in the Russian Arctic. SeverTEK employees include Canadians, and SeverTEK has purchased much of its equipment from Alberta companies.

On this trip these guests are meeting with as many Alberta oil field supply companies as possible and are here to learn more about the safety and environmental best practices that happen in Canada in Fort McMurray and also in the Northwest Territories. They are seated in the public gallery. I would like them now to rise as I call their names: Mr. Jim Guthrie, Alexander Seleznev, Alexey Boichenko, and Nina Salikova. I would ask them now to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also have a number of introductions today. The first are some parents and their children who are here watching the proceedings of the Legislature, interested in the welfare of Alberta's public education system. They are in the members' gallery, and I'll ask them to rise. The first is Liz Miller. She has four boys in elementary, junior high, and high school. I might add that I believe her father-in-law was once a member of this Assembly. The second is Kathy Pontus, who has two children in Windsor Park elementary. The third is Stacey Pelechaty, who has a child in Windsor Park, and finally Karen Ferrari, a mother of three with two children in Windsor Park elementary. As I say, they will be watching our proceedings with close interest as we comment on public education. Please give them a warm welcome.

Mr. Speaker, I have one other introduction. I'd like to introduce Carol Carbol. She's a licensed practical nurse very concerned about the future of public health care in Alberta, particularly interested in issues surrounding the use of P3s to build hospitals and about the impact of moving nurses from site to site, the impact of that on patient safety. I would ask Carol to rise, and please give her a warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glengarry.

Mr. Bonner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a constituent of Edmonton-Glengarry, Jimmy Ragsdale. Jimmy has a keen interest in politics both at the provincial and federal levels. He is seated in the public gallery, and with your permission I'd ask Jim now to rise and please receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my haste and excitement I forgot to mention that the students were from Allan Johnstone school, the same school that last year won first place nationally for a Scholastic book award. I'd like that in Hansard.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head:

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Cattle Industry

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Cattle producers in Alberta are in financial trouble. Programs supporting the cattle feeder industry which were implemented last summer did not trickle down. The cow-calf program initiated this past fall has not been sufficient given the stall in today's market movement. [interjection] That's interesting. My first question is to the agriculture minister. Why did the government decide to use trickle-down formulas to insert money into the market rather than a program to support market demand, which would have kept a functional market in place?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I take exception to the hon. member's assertions. First of all, it's an insult to the cattle industry in this province, that I believe knows a heck of a lot more about their business than the hon. member. Every program, all five, was designed with the cattle industry at the table. They were developed fully – fully – looking at all of the ramifications, all of the benefits, all of the effects, with a very strong concern that we know most emphatically that when there is ever any government intervention, it can cause some distortion in the market. The industry worked hard to ensure that the programs that were developed minimized that opportunity for distortion in the market. So, again, it is an insult to an industry that has proudly contributed to this province for this many years to suggest that the design of those programs did not work.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: what steps is the government taking now to help small cow-calf producers who got too little help too late?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, again the hon. member displays his lack of knowledge of the industry in the question. Last summer when I met with cow-calf producers – I didn't actually see the hon. member present at any of these functions, but he may have been – I was told by cow-calf producers of the great concern they had that they'd be selling 50-cent steers this last fall if we didn't intervene. Well, we did intervene and in a program that was designed by the industry to solve all of the effects of this through that chain of the industry. Cow-calf producers last fall saw prices that were as high or higher than the year before and an additional blessing of better weights because we did not have the drought conditions in the majority of the province.

Mr. Speaker, where the issues came with the cow-calf producers are the producers who decided not to sell their calves last fall for one or two or three reasons. One could be that you're in a tax position where you don't sell until spring and you can't change that quickly and, secondly, maybe because they were speculating that if the border opened, the prices would in fact improve. That's their management decision, not mine.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the same minister: given that this government led producers into a false sense of security by giving the impression that the borders would be open in the new year, is it not now your responsibility to share some of the financial burden currently being felt by the small cattle producers in this province?

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order recognized.

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, that tops it. It really does. I'm fairly used to questions that display ignorance of an industry by the Liberal opposition, but that tops it. I can't see any shred of evidence, and I'd invite the hon. member, although it would be out of character, to produce some evidence that this government – this government – gave the industry a false sense of security.

What this government did do and is doing and has continued to do for the past 10 months is work shoulder to shoulder with that industry to do everything we can to assist the federal government, who is our negotiator on international agreements, to move ahead on border opening. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I spent two days in Washington last week doing exactly that. My consensus and the information from that meeting are that the U.S. industry, politicians, cattlemen want that border open as much as we do.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Electricity Deregulation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier stated, "It's clear that prices in Alberta have gone down since 2001 when deregulation was introduced." As proof the Premier tabled a chart of electricity prices, and this document was prepared by Alberta Energy. It clearly shows that Albertans' monthly power bills have skyrocketed since 2000 by as much as 41 per cent for some customers. My first question is to the Premier. Given that the government's own research clearly shows that monthly bills excluding rate riders have still increased for Edmonton and Calgary power customers, why is this government still clinging to Dr. West's failed electricity deregulation scheme?

Mr. Klein: It wasn't Dr. West's scheme, and it didn't fail.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that electricity deregulation has not brought "tremendous competition that will put downward pressure on prices," as Dr. West promised on April 22, 1998, why won't this government listen to Albertans and unplug electricity deregulation?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I will say that Dr. West promised that deregulation would bring about the generation of more power, and that has happened. Alberta has gained over 3,000 megawatts of new power generation. That's a 30 per cent increase in Alberta's electricity supply since deregulation was introduced. In addition, we understand that investors are contemplating another $6 billion by the end of 2006, which will bring on another 5,400 megawatts of power.

So, Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding the fact that prices have indeed stabilized, we now have a secure supply of energy, and even this member should be feeling a lot more comfortable than he did before deregulation.

The Speaker: The hon. minister to supplement.

Mr. Smith: Thank you very much. Very quickly, Mr. Speaker, I would draw the member's attention to a study done by the Independent Power Producers Society of Alberta. They clearly say, through a well-documented study, that today's prices are what the regulated prices would have been from the period 2000 forward, so he knows very well what the real prices are. He knows the price of power has dropped in this province. They know that Albertans are getting some of the best power deals in North America.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier: if this extra generation, in this case 3,000 additional megawatts of power, is supposed to drive down prices, why has the opposite happened in Alberta and prices have gone up?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, the price of electricity has stabilized. How can anyone believe this member when he quotes from a 1998 letter written by Mr. Southern? Mr. Southern as recently as August of 2003 wrote us a letter saying that notwithstanding the carping and the misinformation and all the stuff that the Liberals put out, deregulation is working. It's working well, and this government has managed it well.

Calgary Emergency Health Services

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, last week the Premier brushed off questions I raised from patients and their families about shocking conditions at the Foothills emergency ward. This government has blown up and sold off hospitals in Calgary to the point where it has far fewer beds for its population than any Canadian city outside of Alberta, and Calgary is still years away from a new general hospital. To the Premier: does this government accept responsibility for conditions in which a sick elderly man, repeatedly vomiting, spends hours lying on a dirty floor in the Foothills emergency room on a makeshift bed of coats in the heart of one of the wealthiest cities in Canada?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member would send me the information, all the details relative to this situation, I'll make sure it's investigated thoroughly.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, I tabled this material last week when I questioned the Premier then.

Does this government accept responsibility for conditions in which an 80-year-old woman with symptoms of a stroke is left for eight hours in the Foothills emergency room and eventually leaves without seeing a doctor?

Mr. Klein: Oh, Mr. Speaker, I apologize. There was a letter that was tabled. It was entitled Politicians Playing Doctor, and I guess it was sent from Monica Blackwell to Marlene Graham, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed. But I'm sure that the hon. minister is having this matter investigated, as indeed all complaints are investigated, including the one that he raised during his second question.

The Speaker: The hon. minister to supplement.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I can provide some more detail on this. To put this in context, there are some 250,000 visits a year that are dealt with at the emergency rooms in Calgary hospitals. Of the two letters tabled by the hon. member last week, one was about the circumstances surrounding the care of an individual written by a friend of that individual, and in the other case it was a family member who was writing about actually quite a number of different incidents that she alleges to have observed in the health care system.

Mr. Speaker, patient confidentiality, I think, is something that needs to be respected here on the floor of this Legislature, so we should not engage in the debate over the specifics of an individual whose circumstances may warrant some further investigation. But I can say that in this particular case both writers of the letters and their families have been contacted by the regional health authority, by the patient representative who assists people in resolving some of the complaints. There is a proper complaint resolution process that the Calgary health region has. I'm assured by the health region that the writers of these two letters have in fact been contacted and that they're going through the process of ensuring that their complaints are resolved to their satisfaction.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question, again to the Premier: does this government accept responsibility for throwing Alberta's health care system into such crisis that the Calgary health region has had to invent a new term signifying an absolute overload of emergency resources, code burgundy?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, that statement is not only wrong; it is vicious, malicious. It misrepresents the situation here in Alberta, where we're spending over $7 billion on health care, over $19 million each and every day. Yes, there are going to be instances, as there were back in 1950, 1960, 1970, 1980, as there will be in 2004, '05, '06, and every year and every century. There is going to be a problem or problems with the system. It's a huge, huge system that breaks down from time to time.

But all the Liberals can concentrate on is picking out what is not good about the system. You know, there are probably I don't know how many thousands of people that go through the system each and every day, and many of them, most of them, all of them with the exception of a few come out alive and well, and 80 per cent of them say that they were treated very, very well indeed. But the Liberals don't concentrate on the 80 per cent. They will search high and low and turn over every rock to find a little bit of dirt. That's what they're all about, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, followed by hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta taxpayers feel betrayed. They have eaten more beef and gladly contributed $400 million to assist Alberta beef producers only to find out that two large American-owned packing companies may have received most of that money. This morning the Tory MLAs at the Public Accounts Committee dutifully voted down a motion for the Auditor General to investigate. My question is to the Premier. Will the Premier overrule his stonewalling backbenchers and ask the cabinet to order a special investigation by the Auditor General?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Deputy Premier and minister of agriculture has said that she will release publicly the expenditures to address the BSE crisis. I mean, where does this guy think the Auditor General has been? The Auditor General investigates all expenditures by all departments for all purposes in government, and if he finds that this $400 million – and it's not going to go unnoticed by the Auditor General – was used improperly, he'll let everyone know. You're darn sure.

Since the hon. member alluded to Alberta beef producers, he obviously believes in the Alberta Beef Producers organization. Do you not? Do you believe in the Alberta Beef Producers association?

The Speaker: Hon. Premier, please.

Mr. Klein: Any member can ask any other member a question.

The Speaker: Well, actually, it doesn't really work that way. The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that the Auditor General told the Public Accounts Committee this morning that he could only look at the various expenditures and so on and couldn't do a value-for-money audit without being instructed by the cabinet, will the Premier take back that misinformation and stop stonewalling?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out, the Auditor General can investigate anything he wants. During the course of his normal duties he examines all expenditures by all departments.

But, Mr. Speaker, getting back to the Alberta beef producers – and the hon. member alluded to the Alberta beef producers. Well, I have a letter here from the Alberta Beef Producers, and it says:

We are concerned about the criticism that the financial support programs put in place to respond to the border closures resulting from the discovery of BSE in Alberta did not achieve their objectives. The programs stabilized our industry's situation and allowed for flow through to cow-calf producers who sold production in the fall of 2003.

2:00

He goes on to say:

Your government's leadership kept the beef cattle marketing system functioning by ensuring that cattle feeders received quick and vital financial support to offset their very significant losses created by the immediate over-supply of cattle for slaughter and sale within Canada.

This is from the Alberta Beef Producers, who go on to say:

Minister McClellan's persistence and leadership in negotiations with the federal government has also contributed to the recent changes in the Canadian Agricultural Income Stabilization Program and in their change in policy to not require slaughter under their national cull animal program.

The letter further states . . .

The Speaker: I appreciate that, but I think there's still another supplemental. There may very well be an opportunity, and we'll also table the letter as well.

The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, a lot of arm-twisting went on yesterday.

Will the Premier, who no doubt wants to avoid any hint of a cover-up, please tell the House when and under what circumstances he will ask for an investigation by the Auditor General?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, you know, the hon. member alleges a cover-up, but 32,000 members, Alberta beef producers, say that indeed there has been no cover-up, that quite the opposite has occurred, and that this government has provided leadership, strong leadership in keeping the beef cattle marketing system functioning, and all this member can do is stand up and try to smear the Alberta beef producers. That is shameful.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mrs. Jablonski: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, we are hearing a lot about the BSE compensation packages, and I, too, have a question for our Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. That question is: since the Auditor General will not even begin to audit the 2003-2004 financial reports for at least four weeks, could the minister tell us when we will receive a list of the payments made to date in the compensation package?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have said consistently that I will be very pleased to supply that information. However, I have resisted requests to file that information with anybody, including the media, until the program is complete. That would be totally unfair because the cheques that go out to producers go out as their claims are answered, and I don't want that to be a partial list.

There is no secret about where that money went, Mr. Speaker. Every cheque is made out to a producer, a feeder, and the exact amount that they have received. We are 95 per cent complete. We have a few claims that had to have some further information supplied. I should say also, for the hon. member's information and for the House's information, that we have done audits throughout this process to ensure to the very best of our ability that those dollars did in fact flow to the owner of the animal.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: will the new CAIS program do anything to help our local smaller producers?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, it is designed to do that with the changes that have occurred to it, and you heard the Premier reference the Alberta Beef Producers' comments in their letter. While the CAIS program, or the Canada agriculture income stabilization program, was designed to assist producers in all aspects of primary and secondary production through difficult times or through swings in commodity prices or markets, it became very evident with the disaster the magnitude of the BSE incident that it would not be adequate under its present form.

So we worked hard with other provinces and the federal government over the summer and, indeed, were able to negotiate two changes to it. One was 60 per cent negative margins being recognized, and the other one, I think a fact that we should be very proud of in our province because of the size of the industry here, reminding members that we have 71 per cent of the slaughter, over 60 per cent of the feeding, half of the breeding stock, as well as a very large percentage of purebred stock, is that the caps were too low at $975,000. Nationally they are looking at a $3 million cap; in Alberta we're looking at $5 million.

We want to be fair to all of our producers, Mr. Speaker, because the hurt is the same whether you have a thousand animals or 10,000 animals. It just goes up in degree. There is no point where it breaks off and doesn't become a hurt. So those changes will help our producers, and we look forward to other provinces coming on board and signing that agreement so that we can get on with the support our producers need.

Sour Gas Well Emissions

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, proposals currently before the EUB would allow sour gas wells to be drilled in and around Calgary, encompassing about 300,000 people and a hundred thousand homes. The sour gas concentrations in these wells are high, posing serious threats to health and comfort. People prefer not to live near sour gas wells if they have a choice. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: what is this minister doing to ensure that residents in and near Calgary will not be adversely affected by these proposed sour gas wells?

Mr. Boutilier: Well, as the member, Mr. Speaker, is fully aware, this is in front of the board, but I can certainly assure every member of this House and all Albertans that the safety of all Albertans is a priority of this government. The oil and gas industry is one of the pillars of the Alberta economy. However, as with any heavy industry there are inherent risks.

Now, with respect to sour gas we have a very comprehensive plan in place to ensure the safety of both the workers and the residents and a protocol to go along with that procedure.

Dr. Taft: Okay. I'm sure that reassures them.

Given that a recent report entitled Impact of Oil and Gas Activity on Rural Residential Property Values says that property values in this area could depreciate by 10 per cent if they're located in the emergency planning zone of sour gas wells, what is this minister doing to ensure that Calgarians will not suffer this hit to their property values?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, every municipality in this province has emergency response plans and every corner of the city of Calgary, that the member mentioned. So he should be very much aware that emergency plans are in place in every area, consequently, to be proactive in dealing with some event that may happen. Without question I believe that the emergency response officials in the city of Calgary are exemplary, in fact to the point where they're unmatched in any other province in Canada by comparison to the city of Calgary. The people of Alberta are well assured, Calgarians included, that their interests are being protected relative to what is being asked today.

Dr. Taft: What is this minister doing to ensure that the city of Calgary, the city itself, will not lose millions of dollars due to reduced property taxes as a result of these sour gas proposals?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, one of the strengths of the Alberta advantage is that people are coming to this province because of the environment that this government has set. Consequently, the values of people's homes are in fact increasing because of that environment that we have set. So, to the hon. member, I do know that Albertans are very pleased by the fact that their values are appreciating because of that environment, because we've set the environment right in protecting Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Provincial Recreational Trails

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I received numerous copies of letters addressed to the Premier regarding the recently released Recreation Corridors Legislative Review report. People throughout Alberta are expressing concerns that their issues were not heard by the committee or included in the report, such as the fact that many people simply do not want trails or that municipalities may have their authority to decide on development of trails taken away. My question to the Minister of Community Development: will the minister confirm that he will not remove municipalities' authority to decide if trails may be developed in their jurisdictions by designating provincial recreational trails in Alberta to be continuous?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't recall having read anything in that report that would suggest anything of the kind. I can certainly assure this hon. member and all members of the House that I've never said anything about removing any of that type of authority. I think it should be made fairly clear that the Recreation Corridors Legislative Review report is just that: it's a report provided to me. I have not yet responded to it. I have sent it out to the public for additional comment and input, and to my knowledge virtually everything that the committee heard was fairly and accurately reported in that report. In addition to that, I've also received quite a bit of correspondence on it, so I understand that there are some anxieties out there.

Let me just emphasize again, Mr. Speaker, that no decisions have been made yet with respect to that report. It's coming through the process, and as part of that process I want to assure the member and others that local decision-making is paramount. Municipalities would first have to make approval of any potential trails or corridors in their areas, and that is throughout the report in several places, and I have indicated that many times in my conversations with the individuals and/or in my written correspondence with them.

Mr. Marz: Well, will the municipalities, given that they are going to have authority to continue to approve these, be able to put conditions on those approvals?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, as part of that local decision-making process I think the issue of conditions would certainly be part of that review, and that would also fall under the purview of the local municipality. The issue of governance of existing trails – and I believe we have something like 18,000 kilometres of them in the province – or the potential creation of new trails with various conditions or whatever might be deemed locally important would be addressed at the level that I indicated earlier in the first question, and that is at the level of the local municipality in question. In fact, under the guidance of the Municipal Government Act there is that provision for a local land use jurisdiction and authority by the local municipality, and I think the report that was chaired by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul references that quite emphatically.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that abandoned rail lines previously had responsibility for fencing and that responsibility should have been transferred with the ownership of the land, will the conditions a municipality may apply to an approval include fencing to a certain standard?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, whenever there has been an abandonment of a right-of-way, then so, too, does whatever agreement may have been in place cease to exist, and the lands in question are treated as any parcel of land would be treated under the Municipal Government Act. The basic premise of the Line Fence Amendment Act references the containment of livestock, so municipalities would not be able to compel a trail operator or a trail developer to build a fence or erect a fence or whatever have you unless it was specifically with respect to the issue of livestock containment.

That having been said, the MLA report does suggest that fencing and many other items that are referenced in that report would need to be negotiated at the local level, and in that respect so, too, I would expect that the standards would be referenced as you are questioning.

Finally, let me just say that no decisions have been made on this report. The results are coming in. We'll take our time to have a look at it, and we'll also look at what the benefits of these trails are, because active and healthy recreation lifestyle is being pursued in some municipal areas but not in others.

Sour Gas Well Emissions

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, sour gas is lethal. Even minor exposure to this gas has been linked to long-term serious health effects for people and animals. My first question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. When planning and protocol fail, how does this government respond to a hazardous sour gas release? People want details.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much. I appreciate the question by the member. It's very important that there is an emergency response plan in place. I spoke earlier about a situation in Calgary. We have an approach, in fact two mechanisms. We have a protocol in place. As well, if citizens, in fact, are to smell sour gas, they can of course respond to 911, and the emergency response team is executed. Accordingly, there is a protocol in place with the AEUB officials as well as industry officials as well as emergency response officials.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: will this minister and his government accept liability in the event of a hazardous sour gas leak?

Mr. Boutilier: First and foremost, Mr. Speaker, it's important to recognize that there are emergency response plans in place. This government has a reputation of being very proactive.

Relative to issues of liability we hope and pray that situations like this will never happen because of this government's proactivity.

Ms Carlson: Mr. Speaker, my final question is to the Solicitor General. How does this government plan to protect Calgary residents and all Albertans from acts of terrorism on sour gas based facilities?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's another good question the hon. member has asked. I have to tell you that Alberta is in the lead in regard to dealing with terrorism. We have an SIM unit that we put together. Our Premier in 2001, on September 12, after the devastation in the United States, called together a team of the government led by the hon. minister of intergovernmental affairs. We have many ministers on the front bench involved in this.

I had the opportunity of speaking at a keynote conference with industry players from across this country, and the federal minister at the time, Minister Easter, was there, and he said to me: "Heather, why would we invent something? Alberta has taken the lead on this." So we're well prepared for terrorists in this country and have been for some time.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy to supplement.

Mr. Smith: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to add that Alberta is the world leader in handling sour gas facilities. The industry is world best. The board is world best. There is absolutely no doubt as to their excellence because they're being asked daily by groups such as the World Bank and others to impart this knowledge to others.

Since the 1982 Lodgepole blowout, Mr. Speaker, there is a very sophisticated process on emergency response and emergency response planning, and there has never ever been a civilian fatality from sour gas management in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-West, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Low-income Albertans

Ms Kryczka: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, last month I met with some truly low-income Calgarians representing AISH and the working poor. They are finding it increasingly difficult to afford the basic necessities of life, including transportation. AISH receives $10,500 a year and many working poor earn about $12,800 a year. These people depend on public transportation to get to work, to doctors' appointments, to their day programs, or to volunteer agencies. The problem is that they can't afford the $65 per month adult transit pass, causing them to lose their ability or incentive to get to work. They don't understand why seniors below $18,000 annually only pay . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, work with me. Just get to the question. Okay?

Ms Kryczka: The first question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Can you explain whether this situation is more of an income problem or an affordable public transportation problem?

2:20

Mr. Boutilier: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Municipal Government Act, as you know, enables municipalities to provide municipal services such as transit, which is, obviously, a very important service, such as the member described in Calgary. I can relate that this is a local issue where the members of council will determine the best policy.

I can say, though, that in my past experience as a former mayor we had a program in place, that I know many municipalities utilize, in terms of helping Albertans that are in need, in the special circumstances that, in fact, the member has just raised. I would suggest to you that working locally with the municipal council, using some discretion on some cases – as you know, the province of Alberta in terms of helping those that are in need has removed over a quarter million Albertans off the Alberta tax roll that do not pay one single cent of tax, based on the kind of discretion that we've used in the policies that have been within this province.

Ms Kryczka: My first supplemental is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Given that affordable public transportation is needed to help low-income Albertans first meet their basic needs and, second, help them gain the skills and training needed to succeed in the labour market, which are two goals in the department's 2003-06 business plan, what are you going to do?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dunford: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to first of all make a differentiation in terms of low-income Albertans. In the question it was lumped together, and there has to be, I think, a definition. If we're talking about low-income Albertans that happen to be on the assured income for the severely handicapped, the so-called AISH program, then I think the hon. member needs to know and understand that AISH is not a needs-based program. It is a program that provides income support to the person, and of course it would be expected, then, that transportation is included in that.

Now, if we have another low-income Albertan who is not working but is eligible to work, one of the cornerstones of moving that person from welfare assistance into the workforce is the fact that they need help with transportation to and from the job. Then, of course, we can look at that on a needs basis and provide the bus pass.

Ms Kryczka: My second supplemental is also to the same minister. Would the minister consider forming a committee with provincial and municipal representation to attempt to improve this situation in Calgary and in other urban centres?

Mr. Dunford: Well, there's been a joke around here for a while that if you're on one of Clint's committees, honk your horn. You know, they were kind of making a bumper sticker out of it. So I'm not so sure that we need another committee in this particular instance, Mr. Speaker.

There's a committee that is already in place that is looking at this, and it is called the Advisory Committee on Barrier-free Transportation. We've been working with some of the major municipalities around the province in order to determine this.

As far as AISH is concerned, this AISH program has to be reviewed. It is a legal requirement that this fall we start into a formal review of the AISH program, and of course we will put together the formal structure, then, in order to do that.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that the adverse human health effects of sour gas exposure are well known, this government has yet to conduct an objective, scientifically based study on the issue. This lack of research demonstrates a questionable regard for the health of Albertans. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. When will this minister finally complete this study?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the Ministry of Health and Wellness has been working not only with our own provincial health officers but in collaboration with the minister responsible for Environment. This is an ongoing matter. My recollection from my time as being Minister of Environment is that they were a lead ministry in this particular area and, in fact, have equipment that is used for the monitoring of air quality throughout the province of Alberta, including equipment that is able to detect things like sour gas. So we continue to work on improving the quality of our air in this province, ensuring that the health of Albertans is safe.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness: given that the EUB's Advisory Committee on Public Safety and Sour Gas recommended over three years ago that this government conduct a comprehensive study, not a snippet but a comprehensive study, on the health effects of sour gas, how does the minister explain that this study still isn't done?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I'm not familiar with the recommendations of the EUB in this regard.

Ms Blakeman: To the same minister: given the recognized dangers to human health and the proliferation of sour gas wells, will the Ministry of Health and Wellness acknowledge its responsibility to Albertans and advocate against sour gas development in and around populated communities?

The Speaker: One is up already. The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to add as well that working with our emergency response plan, companies, the industry, also have dependable systems of monitors in place to warn of any potential incident, which is part of the emergency response team. I failed to mention that earlier. There are sensors and monitors in place as well, in answer to the question posed by the hon. member.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, this is an important question. I think that because they're now spreading confusion and misinformation and talking about something that they really don't know the effects of, I'd like to talk with a little more clarity on what the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board does with respect to this important and large-producing amount. We produce a lot of sour gas in this province. In fact, at the University of Calgary there's the sulphur research centre. In Caroline, where we produce sour gas, they have some of the world's best handling equipment.

Now, when sour gas comes in an application like this, there is a process at the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board. It's an open process, Mr. Speaker. The party opposite could very well apply for intervener status and go and make their own statements. One of the problems they would have is that their interventions would have to be based on fact. I think that may pose a problem for them.

These open hearings, Mr. Speaker, consider the need for wells, well spacing orders, location of the proposed wells and facility, environmental impacts, health and safety impacts, land use impacts, condition of existing pipelines and facilities, and their operators' corporate safety record, compliance record, insurance. Then, in fact, the ongoing side is all monitored by the Department of Energy, and it continues to advise on any changes. Now, this means an emergency planning area. It means a way of alerting everybody to the effect of sour gas in case there is some issue that goes on. I can tell you that the Alberta record is unparalleled in the oil and gas drilling universe and will remain so. It's something we've worked on since 1954.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think it's very important to put forward the salient features of what occurs with sour gas management, how we've got a policy structure with the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board, how we've got a Department of Environment that monitors its particular pieces, how we have industry standards that use stainless steel in their couplings and in their pump jacks. There's a great deal of research and information already done on this. There's an $18 million study on the effects of sour gas on animals.

The Speaker: Thank you. I would invite the hon. minister to return tomorrow under the Routine for Ministerial Statements.

Dr. Pannu: Mr. Speaker, one month ago today an official in the Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development said that allegations that packers are gouging cattle producers were investigated but that no wrongdoing was found. Later this week the ministry will release another study, which no doubt will reach the same conclusion despite powerful evidence to the contrary. A question to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development: why should cattle producers and consumers put any faith in the carcass evaluation study to be released later this week since her officials already decided a month ago that packers didn't do anything wrong?

2:30

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, it wasn't my officials that decided a month ago. My officials have undertaken to do a carcass evaluation for me because – if the hon. member were familiar with slaughtering animals and how that animal is marketed, he would know – the information in that preliminary or for-discussion-only document from the beef industry that they refer to was incomplete and inconclusive. Instead of standing up in this Legislature and talking like this was a done deal and that the cattle producers supported this, he would explain that it had all been sent back to committee for further study because it was incomplete and inconclusive, but the hon. member wouldn't know that because I understand he wasn't invited to the meeting and wouldn't be a part of the discussion.

Mr. Speaker, I have said in this House that this is a serious issue. We have a multibillion dollar industry with spinoff components of it in every reach of this province including the capital city, where about 100 companies process agrifood products and ship to a hundred companies in the world, and similarly in Calgary and in many other communities. This is too serious to politicize, and to try and make political gain by coming to attention 10 months after the fact and realizing that we have a problem is unconscionable.

Dr. Pannu: To the same minister: are the same officials who did the study a month ago that cleared meat packers of any wrongdoing also involved in doing the study to be released later this week?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I am struggling to understand which study the hon. member is referring to. I referred to two documents. One was to the federal standing committee on agriculture from the commissioner of the Competition Bureau. That is not who is doing the work for me. The people who are doing work for me are the people who have access to the information as best we can get it, which is my department.

Mr. Speaker, to suggest before the study or the review, which is really what it is, or the evaluation is done that it's going to be wrong speaks to the political nature of the question. The honourable thing would be to wait until the information comes forward and challenge it with fact. That's what's missing in this discussion.

Mr. Speaker, anybody can stand up in this House and bandy things around, but I would ask the hon. member – although I understand that that community may not be a high supporter of the NDs – that they take into account the hundreds of thousands of lives of employees of that industry in this province whose livelihoods are at stake.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary to the minister: will the minister table in this Assembly today the findings of an earlier ministry investigation into allegations of price gouging, and if not, why not?

Mrs. McClellan: I can't table something that I am not aware of. I've asked the hon. member to send across to me the information that he has that suggests that my department has done a study. Have they formed an opinion? Have they looked at this? Perhaps.

I asked them to do a carcass evaluation for me because I like to deal in facts, and, Mr. Speaker, I don't have that yet. I did check with the department yesterday again, and they anticipate that they would have that information for me on Friday. I have said that I will share it, and share it I will. But I would ask the hon. member again as a courtesy to send a copy of the document to me, and I would be pleased to respond to him. I don't think I've ever backed off from responding to any question in this House.

Recognitions

The Speaker: Hon. members, 30 seconds from now I'll call upon the first of seven to participate today.

The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Saville Sports Centre

Mrs. O'Neill: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On February 28, last Saturday, the Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation at the University of Alberta celebrated the grand opening of the Saville Centre, which houses new curling sheets and tennis courts on the south campus of the University of Alberta. Mr. Bruce Saville was a major donor to this fabulous new sports centre which appropriately and proudly banners his name.

Let me tell you about this facility which is designed to serve the university community as well as the broader community. It has 10 state-of-the-art sheets of ice for the use of professional and amateur curling teams as well as students and future phys. ed. teachers plus eight indoor tennis courts which will accommodate international meets and programs for young and older able and disabled tennis players plus a 9,000 square foot gymnasium, steam baths, hot tubs, locker rooms, and a lounge that will accommodate 600 people.

Mr. Speaker, the Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation at the U of A can be very proud of this wonderful facility which was built with the vision of John Barry, under the leadership of Dean Mike Mahon, and with the generosity of Mr. Bruce Saville.

Second Playing Space, Timms Centre

Mr. Maskell: Mr. Speaker, the arts in Alberta are a dynamic contribution to our cultural, economic, and social fabric. Today I want to recognize an exciting new development in Edmonton's growing arts scene.

On March 1 the University of Alberta unveiled its newly equipped Second Playing Space in the Timms Centre for the Arts, which will provide students, faculty, and community theatre groups with a new learning and performance venue. Second Playing Space is a wonderful and needed addition to our theatre community. With the upcoming renovations at the Jubilee Auditorium and the loss of the Kaasa Theatre in the lower level, it will help smaller theatre groups to showcase their craft, particularly during the summer months.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of myself and the Minister of Community Development I ask all members to join us in congratulating and in thanking the University of Alberta and Ruth Timms Nishioka for their outstanding support for the arts in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Alberta Seniors

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to recognize Alberta seniors who have been forced by this government to fight for more money for seniors' programs. Just last week more than 20 seniors from the Coalition of Seniors Advocates, COSA, demonstrated outside of Calgary's McDougall Centre in an attempt to get this government to recognize that seniors have been hurt by their cuts to the programs and desperately need to share in the provincial surplus.

These brave men and women are fortunate to be able to take a stand on behalf of all seniors. Many of those hurt by this government's cuts and underfunding are not physically able to demonstrate. Many are in long-term care where they're now paying 42 per cent more for care than this time last year.

Alberta seniors deserve better. Our seniors deserve universal programs for dental and optical care, premium-free health care, a safe home, and reasonably priced access to care should they need it.

Fortunately, seniors won't take no for an answer, and groups like COSA, SUN, Alberta Council on Aging, Elder Advocates of Alberta, SALT, One Voice Seniors Network, and the Liberal opposition are willing to fight for the rights of all Alberta seniors.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

David Angus

Mr. Hutton: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to have the opportunity to rise this afternoon and recognize a dear friend, a constituent, and an Edmonton business leader, Mr. David Angus, who very recently joined the board of governors at St. Michael's University School in Victoria, B.C.

St. Michael's University School is a co-educational, independent K to 12 and boarding school of 850 students which specializes in educating students looking to pursue higher learning. Ninety-nine per cent of the students graduate and pursue postsecondary education including top universities across Canada, United States, and the world.

David and his family have had a long affiliation with the school, Mr. Speaker. David attended St. Michael's from 1957 to 1962 and graduated as head prefect. His two sons, Sasha and David, and daughter, Jennifer, are also St. Michael grads. I'm pleased to say that Sasha is currently enjoying an illustrious career with our own Minister of Economic Development. I would like to take this opportunity to thank David on his commitment to our city and business sector and congratulate him on his appointment.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Spitz Sylvan Lake Ice Marathon

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mr. and Mrs. Evert van Benthem, Mr. and Mrs. Dirk Appel, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Yss, and the Foothills Speed Skating Marathon Association. On February 26 and 28 the association held the second annual Spitz Sylvan Lake Ice Marathon, a tribute to speed skating and the three men's Dutch heritage.

Folks in the Netherlands treat speed skating like we treat hockey. It is their national sport, and their Stanley Cup is the Eleven City race, which covers 200 kilometres and draws more than a million spectators.

Evert van Benthem is the only two-time winner of the Eleven City race, and today he farms in Spruce View. Together with Mr. Appel and Mr. Yss and their wives they re-created the Eleven City race on Sylvan Lake in '03, and they continued the tradition this year. This year more than 100 skaters came from the Netherlands to participate in the 200-kilometre race along with competitors from Canada and the United States. As well, many local skaters competed in other events. In total, more than 500 speed skaters competed on the weekend. It's safe to say that this year's event was an exceptional success, and I can hardly wait to see next year's, which we all know will be even better.

So thanks to them and thanks to you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Redwater.

Edmonton Garrison World's Longest Hockey Game

Mr. Broda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On February 18 I had the pleasure of attending the official opening of the Edmonton Garrison's longest outdoor hockey game. It's also my pleasure to recognize Sergeant Rick Dubé, a driving force behind this event, and the 39 other Edmonton Garrison-based soldiers in their great efforts to set a new Guinness world record in playing the longest hockey game. This event was supported by the United Way, with all fundraising proceeds to be donated to the Stollery Children's Hospital Foundation. Last week, unfortunately, due to Mother Nature and plus 6 temperatures the game had to be called after playing 87 hours and 20 minutes on extremely bad ice conditions. The score was 1,186 for the black team versus 951 for the red.

Congratulations to all on your efforts, and good luck for next year. They are also accepting donations today. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

International Women's Day Edmonton Committee

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. March 8, next Monday, is International Women's Day. There'll be numerous events held to celebrate this day around our city, our province, and the world. The International Women's Day Edmonton Committee has organized events to celebrate International Women's Day for many years.

For the past two years the committee shifted their focus in the way they celebrate March 8 by participating in V-Day, a global movement to stop violence against women and girls. Through V-Day campaigns local volunteers and college students produce an annual benefit performance of The Vagina Monologues to raise awareness and funds for anti-violence groups within their own communities. By organizing and presenting these performances of Eve Ensler's original works, this vibrant and energetic committee last year raised $10,000 for the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters.

This year the beneficiaries are Planned Parenthood Edmonton and the Sexual Assault Centre of Edmonton. The benefit played to a full house this past Saturday.

I recognize and congratulate this committee for their commitment to women here in the province of Alberta and around the world.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Bill 16 Residential Tenancies Act

Mr. Graydon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Residential Tenancies Act.

We heard earlier today that there's been extensive consultation with stakeholders, landlords, and tenants regarding the changes contemplated in this bill, and it will update what is already very good legislation.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 16 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to table the requisite number of copies of the Safety Codes Council 2002 annual report. As you know, the Safety Codes Council is a valued partner of this government and in particular my department, Municipal Affairs. The council works on behalf of all Albertans, and it's my pleasure today to table the requisite number of copies, and certainly I want to say that I appreciate their good work.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me today to table to you and for the House the government response to recommendations of the Advisory Council on Electricity.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Premier I would like to table for the House five copies of the letter which he referred to in question period today from the Alberta Beef Producers, which references that the support of the government has been vital to the carrying on of the industry and the good work that's been done by the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development in that regard.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table for the benefit of all hon. members of the Assembly a letter that I received from the hon. Minister of Energy on September 30, 2003.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling a document showing that Alberta Agriculture had investigated allegations regarding the packers gouging feedlot operators but had found no wrongdoing.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Speaker's Ruling Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: Hon. members, we had a discussion yesterday about interventions and points of order and the like. Before I get to the two points of order that have been identified today, let me just note seven additional possible opportunities for intervention today by the chair.

Let's see. On two occasions the chair did intervene to ask the Premier to terminate his answers and sit down and did the same thing for the hon. Member for Calgary-West.

He might have intervened once when the Premier mentioned the name of the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed in this Assembly, which is a no-no, and then the hon. Solicitor General got around that same thing by referring to a certain member by the name of Heather. Then the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment did the same thing by referring to an hon. member as Clint. So it's kind of an interesting approach.

There would have been a point as well when the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness – Government House Leader, this is a point for yourself and the hon. Opposition House Leader and the House leader of the third party, and this could have been an intervention by the chair, but it was not – mentioned that one should not mention the names of certain individuals with respect to a certain issue, yet a document had already been tabled in the House identifying the names of those individuals, and the leader of the government had already mentioned one of those names in a response. So there's a circuitous thing in here that if a document's going to be tabled that has names on it and becomes part of the public record, well, just how are we supposed to not deal with it if it is part of the government record?

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands, a couple of words were used here that certainly could have caused interventions. One was the word "cover-up," and the other one was the word "arm-twisting," almost to suggest that something that happened that was innocuous shouldn't have happened.

Those are just seven or eight interventions that really could have occurred but didn't occur.

Now we'll deal with the hon. Government House Leader and his point of order.

Point of Order

Preambles to Supplementary Questions

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, because I think that really highlights the point of both points of order this afternoon. In fact, I counted a considerable number more that I thought would have been appropriate for intervention.

The point of order that I am rising on first references the second supplemental to a question by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, and I'm rising under Beauchesne's 409. The supplemental was something to the effect – and I don't have the Blues, so I'm not quoting exactly – that given that the government lulled the industry into a false sense of security. There are a number of problems with this type of statement.

First of all, under Beauchesne's 409 "it must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate." There's been a practice in this House to get around the concept of the rule that says that you can't have a preamble to a supplemental, which is also rule 409(2) that a supplemental does not need a preamble. There's been a method of getting around that by putting "given" in front of a statement as the first clause to a question, thereby saying that it's not a preamble, that it's actually part of the question. I think that in actual interpretation anything that is extra to the question is a preamble whether it's part of the same sentence or not, but that's a question for another interpretation.

The part that I'm concerned about here is the continuing use of preambles in questions and supplementals by members of the opposition to put matters of argumentation into the equation rather than to state facts upon which they are going to base their question. It's not a given that the government lulled the industry into a false sense of security. It could not be a given that the government lulled the industry into a false sense of security, and it was entirely inappropriate, Mr. Speaker, to put that in as a preamble to the question, which is often done, therefore requiring that one negate the preamble rather than answer the question.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much for the opportunity to rise and respond to the Government House Leader's point of order. Just very quickly I will note that in the concern that he raised about beginning sentences with "given that," in fact on February 25 – that's a long time ago – I think about 1998, page 557, the Speaker did note that starting a supplementary question with "given that" was quite acceptable. We are following, as always, good advice, but just to clear that up in case there was some dispute over it.

Now, what we have, in fact, was that the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar said, "Given that this government led producers into a false sense of security by giving the impression the borders would be open in the new year" and then went on with a question about responsibility and sharing financial burdens. We are basing that on our understanding of, in fact, what people who have contacted us have said.

Now, is it possible for both things to be happening at the same time in this House, where we have the minister stating without any uncertainty that she did not give an impression that the borders would be open and members from the opposition feeling that, in fact, that impression had been given? Of course, that can happen. It's not at all uncommon that we have the two sides of the House often having different experiences over the very same issue. We may well be contacted by different people expressing different points of view.

So was the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar contravening something by saying that producers had a false sense of security? No, I don't think he was. In fact, when I looked at the documentation around the time that we're referring to, part of the facts in this is that it was around "the impression the borders would . . . open in the new year," which would have been January or February: now.

If I look at a news release put out by the government on October 31, in fact there's quite a bit of discussion from the minister, which is then quoted in other newspaper articles. She does comment on the rules that have been put forward by the U.S., and in fact if those are accepted, then the borders would be open within 60 days. So that puts us into the time period that we're talking about, and indeed – and I will not table the news release in the House – we have the minister responding to that. It is "extremely good news." It's "very encouraging," very "encouraging to note." A number of things.

So that's easily available to anyone in this House. In fact, her points about it being encouraging and it being very good news are in fact reflected in other newspaper stories. So even according to Beauchesne 494 it is quite possible that we have two points of view having to be both taken as truth at the same time.

The question itself did seek information, and it was therefore satisfying the major requirements of Beauchesne 409, and it was asking the correct minister, who had within her administrative responsibility the issues that were under question. So I would contend that there is no point of order under Beauchesne 409 with reference to the question from the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others?

Hon. members, the chair has listened very carefully to the arguments given by both the Government House Leader and the Opposition House Leader, and having listened attentively to all of the discussion with respect to it, anything that would impute motives and false motives of a particular nature, of course, would definitely have met the test for a point of order.

In this case it appears to be a disputation of facts, recognizing that this is a highly, highly emotional issue, had been a highly emotional issue at the time, and will continue to be. Countless numbers of producers on almost a daily basis are contacting Members of this Legislative Assembly and asking them the question: when do you think the border will be open? And responses are given at various times.

I hope that that's not a false sense of security given by everyone, but virtually everybody in the cattle business in the country of Canada is contacting not only the members of this Assembly but federal Members of Parliament and everyone across this country for some form of assurance. I hope that wasn't imputing a negative kind of thing with respect to this, so we'll deal with that.

I'm not sure if Hansard caught the words, but there were some words echoed at about the same time as this question was being raised, something to the effect of: what an idiot. I'm not sure if Hansard will pick that up. It won't be helpful, again, because it certainly would not be pertinent language but, nevertheless, perhaps echoed.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again I rise under Beauchesne's 409. Not to belabour the point, but the fact that the Member for Edmonton-Centre went into some debate over the preamble clearly indicates in my view that that was argumentative and called for debate.

I would suggest that the same is true of the supplemental question raised by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview, in his preamble, when he referred to the Premier brushing off questions about a person he was referring to who had attended at a hospital in Calgary. That is an allegation, and it is an allegation of some serious import.

Now, again, in reference to what has just recently been said about using the term "given that," turning a preamble into a question, I wouldn't at all want to debate that you can't make a statement in a supplemental starting with given that. That's a time-honoured tradition, it seems, of the House. The question of whether it's a preamble is really a question of what's in the statement, not that it starts with or doesn't start with given that. The point that I was making is that you can't turn a preamble into a question simply by adding given that. You have to really deal with the context.

In this case there was a preamble, and in this case the preamble clearly, I think, didn't adhere to the proprieties of the House pursuant to 409(7) in that it imputed motives and cast aspersions because clearly it is an aspersion against the Premier to suggest that he's brushing off a serious allegation with respect to people who have to attend at hospital or who have serious illness. We spend a huge amount of time in this House and in this government, huge amounts of people's money are spent by government, 36 per cent of the budget, if I remember correctly, last year on health care issues.

I won't go further into the details because I think there were quite considerable answers given in question period today. I don't think there's anything wrong with the opposition or anyone in this House asking questions on important matters, but in asking those questions, it is wrong to impute motive or cast aspersions on the character of other members of the House by suggesting that they don't treat those questions with respect to individuals that are being talked about in a serious manner. This definitely was a violation of 409(7).

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think that once again the Government House Leader and I are engaged in questions of interpretation and definition. He is referring specifically to the use of the words "brush off," that were part of the preamble for the question from the Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Well, what does brush off in that context mean? It means sweep aside. It means not deal with, in essence. If he'd like to argue with me about those definitions, I welcome him.

When I go back and actually look at the question and that exchange that happened on February 25 occurring on pages 150 and 151 of Hansard, in fact there's a direct question from the Member for Edmonton-Riverview to the Premier asking the Premier what excuse he offers specific to a particular person, situation, stroke victims in a particular hospital.

When I look at the answer that the Premier gave, he comments for some several sentences on his approval rating, which I don't think is specific to the question of either stroke victims, elderly people, or the Foothills hospital. If I continue on and look at the rest of the answer given by the Premier in response to that direct question, he gets into discussing things like electronic health records, physician funding models, wait list registries, and telehealth and then gets into some MRIs, again not dealing directly with the question that was asked of him.

So did he brush off the direct question around stroke victims and that particular hospital? I think it could be argued or certainly interpreted that he did. He did not refer to any of the things that were the key ingredients of the questions that were asked.

Has the Member for Edmonton-Riverview offended Beauchesne's 409(7) in imputing a motive? Certainly not. He doesn't impute any motive to the Premier's comments. Does he cast aspersions upon the person? No, I don't think he did. He gives a fairly accurate recounting in his terms of the exchange that occurred between himself, the Member for Edmonton-Riverview, and the Premier the week previous. So I would argue that there is no point of order here.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, everything must be taken in the context of the question and the impact of the words. In this case part of the give and take in question period would suggest that "brushing off" here is not detrimental to anyone with respect to this particular matter. However, they do become personal, and that's where the chair has a problem. If we stick to questions with respect to government policy, then we avoid these kinds of situations.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: We'll call the committee to order.

Bill 14

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Dr. Nicol: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll just rise to make a few brief comments about the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2004. One of the things that is quite evident as we go through the review of this appropriation is that over the past year Alberta has faced its share of uncertainty, with forest fires, with agriculture, with increased revenues needed for specific growth patterns in different departments. These are the kinds of things that one would normally expect a piece of supplementary supply legislation to address in the sense that when best knowledge is used to make projections in a budget and we end up with different growth patterns, different disasters, different relief programs that are needed, you show that if we have in effect done a reasonable job of budget estimates, we can expect that in some years not all of them will be right on.

If we look at some of the issues that come up in dealing with the appropriation bill – I went back and checked in Beauchesne. It says basically: to further existing programs. And the one that's interesting is "for a new expenditure on behalf of a newly-enacted statute."

Yet what we're seeing are a lot of new expenditures here for new initiatives that are not supported by a statute. In effect, the government is putting in place new initiatives, new programs mid-year rather than during the legislative debate that comes in a legislative session. It doesn't come through proper budget debate of new programs, doesn't come through notification of intent in the Speech from the Throne. So what we're seeing here are quite a number of actual new initiatives just being put through in supplementary supply without full legislative recognition and debate being introduced.

If you go through and look at them, in Health and Wellness there's the Alberta Wellnet; in Human Resources there's the skills investment program; under Infrastructure there were the dollars that were needed for the natural gas rebate. That in many ways is not a new program because it was put in place as an ongoing program which they didn't expect expenditures for, and therefore they were not in the budget for last year. If we get down under Innovation and Science, there are new initiatives that talk about compliance with the Auditor General, and these should be in effect brought through the legislative agenda again where there's an open debate on how we make sure that the new initiative does comply with the Auditor General's requirement.

When we get down to Learning, we see that there's a new initiative in apprenticeship, trade, and occupation. There's a new program, the Alberta heritage scholarships, under Learning, as well.

When we get into Revenue, there is the purchase of an investment risk management system. This is the kind of investment that should be dealt with through proper budget debate when the process is complete rather than through supplementary supply.

When we get to Seniors, there are also a couple of new programs there in support of the needs of seniors. Under Sustainable Resource Development I guess this is an ongoing one that I talked about originally, the risk associated with needing to have an increase in dollars for inadequate estimates in the original spring budget.

If we look through here, there's really a pattern that emerges in the sense that there are a lot of new initiatives that are funded through this supplementary supply bill that are in support of programs that have not truly had the full public debate that would be associated with programs that were passed and enacted during the full budget debate in the spring. I think we need to look seriously at that and see whether or not we are using the supplementary supply fully.

I think that if we go through there and look at some of the individual components, the main thing that we see is that, you know, in Health there are programs that come out for the West Nile virus. I don't think any of us really understood what the implications of it would be on Alberta a year ago, so the fact that there's new money being added now to cover what we had to do in the past to be proactive on that front would be really quite useful.

3:10

The other is for the increased cost of the nongroup health benefit program, and this is, I guess, a matter of: are those increased costs for the same program, or is this increased costs for new initiatives that are put under Blue Cross coverage? So we need to look at it from the point of view of, you know: is it just expanded use?

It would help us judge and review the effectiveness of the supplementary supply system and the purpose behind that supplementary supply if that kind of information were made available because, you know, we're talking here about $2,165,000 being put in for nongroup health benefits. What was the reason for it? I guess that what we need to do is have a little bit of an explanation for each of these items similar to what we get in the main budget when we're given that kind of information. There needs to be an explanation of what it's being put out for.

You know, when we end up with basically almost a 10 per cent additional allocation in the budget, one begins to wonder what the purpose of the original budget was when the government over a period of a year introduces that many new programs, introduces additional expenditures in that many ongoing programs that they're dealing with. To even further complicate it, we're dealing here with the fact that in the fall session we passed another supplementary bill that, in effect, also increased expenditures to the government by about a billion dollars, and that's in association with, you know, the issues of, again, forest fire fighting and the BSE program supports that were put in place.

So, you know, the degree to which we get full coverage and full debate that can come out on these really needs to be looked at so that as legislators we can go back and talk to our constituents about whether or not these were good.

In terms of the focus that comes out as we look at this, the main programs that we saw under the seniors' program – this is basically a government action. When they started talking about how they were going to help low-income seniors, what they were going to do for the affordable housing program, that, especially the affordable housing program, was being proposed at the time of the last budget, and the dollars that were needed for that should have been estimated, should have been predetermined and put into that spring budget rather than being left and then put into a supplemental budget.

What it does is it sends a signal that, you know, this is important to Albertans, that we will be dealing with it. The exact amount can be adjusted later. But what we end up with is having to have a program there that talks about where this government stands on things like affordable housing, access to housing for seniors, access to care in long-term care facilities.

The idea that we don't seem to have the long-term plans in place that allow for a more accurate estimate of our full budget in the spring seems to be something that the government needs to address. They handled the idea of stability; they handled the idea of natural resource revenue variation. That, in effect, is being looked at now in the budget.

We need to go farther and make sure that as we go into dealing with our full budget process, we do have some mechanism in there to justify the estimates that are made with respect to the uncertainty that's associated with budget on the expenditure side. We've done things now to talk about the uncertainty that's associated with revenues. Let's start looking at how we make sure that risk analysis and risk management get put into dealing with the expenditure side because, you know, we're off by quite a bit on some of these programs when we look at them relative to their original expenditure levels.

Mr. Chairman, I think that kind of gives an idea of where I think this should go. The programs specifically are in an order that they do reflect all of the components that are associated with the main intent of the budget, but there's still again those new initiatives that came because of government action halfway through the year to programs that were already being discussed at budget time and to new initiatives that showed because the government didn't commit to the appropriate expenditure pattern at the time.

I think that it's important that as we go through looking at what is that purpose behind a supplementary budget, we really go back, you know, and read what Beauchesne says and talk about the purpose of it. It shouldn't be just, you know: well, we don't have to deal with this now because we've got supplementary supply; we can put it in there. We should be looking at what is an appropriate budget when we do the overall budget and the overall financial planning position for our province, and then this should be in effect fine-tuning rather than a change in direction, rather than a real new program initiative process.

I think it's important that we do make sure that there is consistency and that there is predictability to our budgets because when we start doing this, it in effect increases the baseline of the budget, which we act on again next year, which expands that base, and in effect it gives us two chances to up the budget when we should be looking at what we are doing to make sure that dollars are spent appropriately, that dollars are spent effectively, and that we do get the intent out of the dollars that we spend in this province.

You know, some of the monies that we have spent in the last year have been questioned. They've been addressed by different groups as being not what was expected, and if we're going to be able to carry through and fully answer the questions that these groups raise, we need to be able to say: yes, there was full documentation given; there was full explanation given; there was full interrelationship provided as we did the budgeting process. That only comes with the debate that goes on in the spring budget as opposed to the limited debate that we have to deal with individual programs in the context of the overall plan of the province when we get supplementary appropriations.

You know, it doesn't seem like what we're doing here is effective planning. It's kind of: well, we had to change directions; let's make do. I don't think Albertans want us to make do. They want us to show that we do have effective planning in place, that we are committed to stable budgets, predictable budgets that don't have to be dealt with on a three-times-a-year basis.

That's what we've been doing. Almost every year that I've been in this Legislature, we've had the budget passed, we've had a fall supplement, and we've had a spring supplement before we get interim supply, before we get the next budget. That doesn't create confidence in Albertans that we're really thinking about what we're doing when we put together budgets, that we're thinking about what we're doing when we're putting together a plan of action and a plan of public support, a plan of good government for the province.

So I think it's really important that we end up making sure that in the future we have better processes in place for our budgeting on the expenditure side and that we do have a relationship between those expenditures and the debate that goes on in the Speech from the Throne, the debate that goes on in the primary budget in the spring, so that when we go out to Albertans we can say: see; this is how it fit.

If we look back over the last year, Mr. Chairman, I think there are a couple of real issues, the BSE and the forest fires of last summer. Nobody could have predicted those at budget time. So supplementary estimates in connection with that type of uncertainty, I think, fits into the general purpose of supplementary supply, you know, kind of the philosophical intent of supplementary supply. It's something that was not anticipated. It was something that could not have been addressed in the original budget.

Most of these programs that we're giving extra dollars to here, most of the programs that are new initiatives were being discussed last spring, were being dealt with last spring, and their estimates should have been in the budget for them. The ministers have leeway in their budgets as they're presented. They could have fit fine-tuning into that leeway and made it work.

So I think that that's one of the things that struck me as I went through and looked at this supplementary supply, that we really had to make sure that in the future we look at how our long-term plan fits with the wishes of Albertans and we build that into a stable budgeting process on the expenditure side. That hasn't been done through the new financial approach taken in the spring, when we put in place the stability funds, when we put in place the transfer of dollars from the natural resource revenues. So we need to look at that. We need to make sure that we do have stability built into both sides, the revenue and the expenditure of our budgets, so that we do have predictability and direction given for Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. My first set of questions I'm going to direct to the Minister of Seniors and housing. If we could get responses from him, that would be great. I know that the Minister of Justice was supplying us with answers last week, so I'd appreciate hearing directly from the man in charge.

A couple of questions. The money that's going to the year-round and seasonal beds in the homeless shelters: I understand that that is dedicated to Calgary. The complete amount of money that's requested through the supplementary supply has all gone to Calgary, and I'm aware that they were under some distress to get assistance, but I'm also aware that there's an equal demand in Edmonton. Being an Edmonton MLA, I'm wondering why Edmonton didn't share in any of the money. If he was going to come forward and ask for additional funds for money already spent – I understand this is already gone – why didn't he come forward and ask for money for Edmonton as well? Why does Edmonton have to wait? That's question one.

An observation and a question as well. The additional $4.5 million to assist the increased number of low-income seniors with the cost of long-term care accommodations. Now, this is around a planning, timing question, if you will. The notification for the increase in long-term care was given somewhere around the 19th, 23rd, or something of June for increases to take effect on the 1st of August, so inside of the fiscal year that we're still in.

I'm wondering why the choice was made to institute the increase for the 1st of August because it inevitably was going to require the minister to be coming and asking the Assembly for an increase in order to cover those who are experiencing financial distress as a result of this August 1st increase. Why the choice of August 1? Why didn't the minister wait to have the rates go up until the 1st of April, 2004, in which case the increased funds that he's requiring could have been part of the next budget cycle?
