Mr. Speaker, this bill incorporates the Bow Valley Community Foundation and empowers it to receive and administer donations in trust for charitable purposes. I would encourage all members to support it.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr.1 read a second time]

Bill Pr. 2
Camrose Lutheran College Corporation Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka on behalf of the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased on behalf of the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose to move second reading of Bill Pr. 2, Camrose Lutheran College Corporation Act.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is being proposed as a result of the merger of Augustana University College with the University of Alberta. The Camrose Lutheran College Corporation no longer owns and operates the college. The new role of the corporation would be to provide support to the Augustana Faculty within the University of Alberta. This could be mainly to preserve the Lutheran and Scandinavian history and traditions of Augustana within the faculty. So I would encourage all members to support this bill.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 2 read a second time]

Bill Pr. 3
Medicine Hat Community Foundation
Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River on behalf of the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today on behalf of the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat to move second reading of Bill Pr. 3, Medicine Hat Community Foundation Amendment Act, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this bill would allow this organization to expand its reach and good works beyond the boundaries of Medicine Hat. It would include the surrounding towns and rural municipalities in a regional foundation. This bill has been recommended by the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and it has received the approval of the existing foundation board.

On behalf of the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat I respectfully urge the support of all members of this Assembly. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Private Bills
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll call the committee to order.

Bill Pr. 1
Bow Valley Community Foundation Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill?

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 1 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill Pr. 2
Camrose Lutheran College Corporation Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On behalf of the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose I'd move that Bill Pr. 2 be amended as follows. I think the amendment has been passed around. The main purpose of the amendment is to change the word "nominating" to "search" and "City of Camrose" to "Faculty," a couple of simple amendments.

I don't have too much more to comment on it, but if there are questions, I can answer them. Thank you.

[Motion on amendment carried]

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 2 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill Pr. 3
Medicine Hat Community Foundation
Amendment Act, 2005

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill?

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 3 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I would move that the Committee of the Whole now rise and report bills Pr. 1, Pr. 2, and Pr. 3.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill Pr. 1 and Bill Pr. 3. The committee reports the following bill with some amendment, and that is Bill Pr. 2. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Third Reading

Bill 29
Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped
Amendment Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a member of the MLA AISH Review Committee it's an honour and a privilege for me to move third reading of Bill 29, the Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped Amendment Act, 2005.

We've had a good discussion on this bill, and I believe that I'm correct in saying that thus far all members of the House have agreed that this amendment is needed and advisable and that this amendment will make a significant difference to AISH recipients.

This amendment will provide supplementary benefits for AISH recipients. Those supplementary benefits will renew the AISH program by making the program more flexible. It will provide the ability to help AISH recipients with extra benefits for things like school supplies for children, special transportation, replacement wheelchair batteries, diabetic and special diets for specific health conditions.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate and respect the debate and discussion we've had and would ask all members of the House to support Bill 29, the Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped Amendment Act.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Through discussions with one of my constituents who has an issue relative to spina bifida – this particular person has an 18-month-old child and a three-year-old child. She has spina bifida, and the bill seems to lack the scope to cover her needs. I'm standing in terms of asking if the bill could be enlarged to encompass what they call the nurturing assistance program for persons who have this particular disability.

In light of that, I'm hoping that the bill or the committee can maybe address that. The good member from I believe Calgary mentioned that maybe they can have some kind of investigation to include the nurturing assistance program so people with the handicap of spina bifida, with the problems that this particular person has, can receive some assistance.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to mention that in discussion regarding the bill. Thank you.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased to get an opportunity to speak in regard to Bill 29, the AISH Amendment Act, 2005. Certainly, this bill provides the government, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill has indicated, with the authority to develop regulations to allow for the provision of supplemental benefits. The hon. member outlined that. It certainly is needed. It certainly is welcomed by those in the AISH community. When we look at this, it is a step certainly in the right direction. It has been a long time in coming. We have to recognize that there are many people in this province who cannot, through no fault of their own, participate in this unprecedented economic boom, and we have a duty, we have an obligation to provide for their basic essential needs. This is, as I said, a step in the right direction, but there is still much work to be done.

If you look at the annual report of Human Resources and Employment from 2003-04 and you look at the number of caseloads for AISH clients, there has been a modest increase between 2001-02 and 2003-04. There has been roughly an increase of 2,400 caseloads. When we look at the focus that this group of caseloads has had on government policy, we can't forget the supports for independence, or the SFI, caseloads. Now, Mr. Speaker, they're roughly the same. For instance, in the last fiscal year that I have the annual report for, there were roughly 30,862 files or caseloads for AISH and about 29,200 for supports for independence.

Now, if we look, Mr. Speaker, at this year's budget in Human Resources and Employment – and we know that all the AISH files have been moved over to another department. AISH is gone, but the SFI caseloads are still with Human Resources and Employment. I would urge all hon. members of this Assembly to do the same thing for those Albertans as we have done for our AISH caseloads.

I would even go one step further. I would never dare hold up this bill in third reading, Mr. Speaker, but we should consider an annual review of all these support programs. I don't see that in this bill, but what I do see is a real need in the community of Edmonton-Gold Bar for adequate support programs for SFI clients.

If you look at the budget, you see last year that there was a line item for $290 million. This year it's $295 million. If we look at the number of caseloads in regard to these people – and I'm referring to this year's budget – people expected to work, about half of them are expected to find work of one sort or another. For people not expected to work, there are over 9,000 caseloads, Mr. Speaker, and that's going to go up. The government's forecast is that this is going to at least increase by another 2,000 caseloads. These are people who are not expected to work.

I don't know what percentage of these caseloads would have children in those households. I do know that in some cases with AISH clients there are children living in those homes, and we have to, Mr. Speaker, think of the children as well, not only the adults but the dependent children. It is quite unsettling, to say the least, with our economic prosperity to visit a temporary shelter in the community of Edmonton-Gold Bar.

It is unsettling, but at the same time when one enters the shelter, you have to admire the many volunteers who are there, Mr. Speaker, doing their very, very best to volunteer their time and their resources to provide warm shelter and a healthy meal for many people who cannot provide one for themselves or their children. This is what's shocking about this, to see children coming in routinely to shelters and soup kitchens and different organizations that provide meals for those who have no money or no means to make a meal for themselves.

I think we can do better, and that's why I would urge, as we conclude at this time third reading on this bill, that we don't forget about the other group. This is a much-needed advancement, and it's not the end of this for AISH clients because certainly an annual review I think is needed, but we cannot forget the 30,000 files that to date have not seen any increase in their monthly benefits.

Some people can have the attitude, "Well, let them look after themselves," but I would refer all hon. members to the fact that in Human Resources and Employment's business plan for 2005-06 better than 9,000 of these people are not expected to work. I wish, Mr. Speaker, I knew how many children would be involved in that number, but for the sake of the children let's look at improving their lives through increased and better benefits. If we have to cut other programs, so be it. Certainly, the first program that I would urge the government to cut is in the department of gambling, and that's this horse-racing renewal. No child in this province should be going to a temporary shelter to get a bite to eat while we are giving in excess of $40 million to horse-racing renewal. It just doesn't make sense.

I would welcome all hon. members of this Assembly, when the recess does occur, to visit Edmonton-Gold Bar, the north end of our constituency, and they can see first-hand what I mean when I say that children are going to shelters for breakfast before they go to school. This is not an Alberta advantage, and I think we have an opportunity now, a real opportunity, to improve that.

In conclusion, let's not rest with Bill 29 with some improvements to the AISH program. Let's look at improving our SFI benefits and our delivery programs as well. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The bill, as mentioned, we'll certainly support because it's obviously a step in the right direction. But there are some concerns with the announcement, and they're not new. We've had a number of reviews, and finally there is going to be an increase for recipients that I guess is long overdue. We think it's still not enough because if you look back to '93, if you use inflated dollars, AISH recipients are still not back to where they were even at that particular time. In other words, their standard of living has gone down, Mr. Speaker.

I appreciate the fact that with this bill there are some new medical benefits, and that is an important step forward. No doubt about that, Mr. Speaker. I would be interested in how the government is going to make the recipients aware of it because sometimes we're dealing with some severely handicapped people. I think there has to be a special effort to make sure they know exactly and precisely what they're eligible for. I expect that all our constituency assistants will have to be on top of this too.

The other important thing that the government did – again, another step in the right direction – is double the amount to $400 that recipients are allowed to earn before getting AISH clawed back.

Mr. Speaker, the written questions that I asked were trying to figure out precisely – it was amended, and we didn't get it – how many people do get the maximum amount. Through word of mouth in the AISH community many people are saying that it's not that many, but we were unable to go that way, so we don't know.

Mr. Speaker, to come back specifically to the bill in terms of the new medical benefits, I mentioned that there has to be a special effort, I think, to get out what people are eligible for. The problem that I have to some degree with this is that according to the minister, they will be dispensed on a case-by-case basis. Again, as I said, I think it should have to be a lot more universal than that. Depending on how good a lobbyist you are or how many people you have lobbying for you, you're going to know more about these programs, and you're going to be able to lobby. What about if you don't have that same ability?

The case-by-case basis, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, could create problems. Some people who deserve it might not get it, and others who are able to lobby may. I don't understand why the program isn't made more universal so it's clear who should get it. If you do it on a case-by-case basis, it could depend, for example, on who your social worker is whether you get that particular amount get that medical benefit or not. It may be just luck of the draw is what I'm saying.

So when we bring in a piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we should be making it clear and not having it sort of the luck of the draw or the luck of the social worker or whatever. I stress that we have to bear in mind that in some cases this is the severely handicapped people, who may not be able to advocate for themselves. I really suggest that on this case-by-case basis we're giving people more bureaucracy to navigate, and I really don't think that that's the answer.

As I said, we're happy about the increases that they're getting, and I alluded to this. But just to give you some figures, Mr. Speaker, since 1993 AISH recipients have lost 23 per cent of their income to inflation. These increases mean a 15 per cent increase, and that's after the final payment comes due. In other words, to put it in figures, your purchasing power is 8 per cent less than it was in 1993. In a rich province like this, hardly the Alberta advantage, if I can put it that way.

Mr. Speaker, our position was to raise, whether this is enough or not, AISH to $1,050 immediately. That would've at least put them back to the 1993 levels, which was lost to inflation over the last 12 years. Then we strongly suggested – and I'm disappointed that the government didn't do this – that it be indexed to the cost of living using a market-basket measure. That would ensure that the severely handicapped would be able to meet their needs with this program.

We all know, Mr. Speaker, that MLAs' salaries are indexed to . . .

Dr. Brown: Point of order.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill is rising on a point of order.

Point of Order Relevance

Dr. Brown: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, but I'm calling the hon. member on a point of relevance. This bill is a very simple bill. It's one clause which enables a supplemental benefit to be paid in addition to the monthly benefit. The hon. member is telling us about what his party would propose to do with the monthly benefit, which is not even part of this bill. So it's clearly not relevant to the issue and the bill that we have before us this afternoon.

The Acting Speaker: No citation has been provided.

Mr. MacDonald: Exactly. Mr. Speaker, I was going to ask for your guidance on this. Hon. member, there was no citation. There's no point of order.

The Acting Speaker: There was no citation provided, so we'll proceed with the debate.

Mr. Martin: I didn't think I'd get the hon. member so exercised over this. It seems that every time I stand up, I get a point of order, you know. Mind you, I was glad the other day when Minister Hancock pointed out that it made . . . [interjections] I love this, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, it was just after question period that the Speaker admonished the leader of the third party about naming an individual in this Assembly. You know that that's not the practice.

Mr. Martin: Yes.

The Acting Speaker: Please.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I take your guidance on that matter.

Debate Continued

Mr. Martin: Mr. Speaker, the point that I'm trying to make is that this is part of the bill. It's part of the budget. The bill has to do with the medical benefits, but along with the medical benefits came the amount of money that was increased with AISH. What I'm saying is that it was inadequate. It did not even live up to the inflation level. They're not better off than they were in '93. I would think all hon. members would be interested in that when we're dealing with the most vulnerable people in society. I think that's pretty relevant to those people.

Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, the government has committed to reviewing AISH every two years, and it seems to me that this is not enough. We've had AISH reviews over a number of years – I don't know how many times: eight or nine – and generally it has not worked out well for those people. I think we need the inflation. We need to work on increasing these medical benefits. We need to certainly move away from the case-by-case basis.

At least this bill, Mr. Speaker, is a step in the right direction, and for that reason we will support it. Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, are you rising on a point of order again?

Point of Order
Clarification

Dr. Brown: Yes. Simply, the hon. member had requested the citation. It's Beauchesne 459. Again, the relevance of whether or not the benefit is indexed or whether or not the monthly benefit should be a different number is not related to the content of the bill in any way.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill had risen first on a point of order without having provided a citation, so we did not proceed with that. I don't know whether it's in order to rise a second time on the same subject. If it is, we will call on the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview if he wants to participate in this point of order as being cited.

Mr. Martin: I'm sorry. I had more important things to look at. I didn't hear him. So that's fine. Whatever he wants to do.

An Hon. Member: It's a moot point.

Mr. Martin: It's a moot point.

I've said what I wanted to say anyhow. The member helped me out, and I greatly appreciate it. Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Okay. I hope that the explanation provided by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview lends clarification to what has transpired. We will put this matter to rest.

Debate Continued

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise in support of this bill. I think it's been a long time in coming. It certainly speaks to what the Liberal opposition has been asking for for quite some time as well as the government committee that has looked into the AISH benefit question.

You know, in speaking in third reading to the effect of this bill, just a little bit of explanatory notes about how it affects some people I know in Alberta and some members of my riding. Martha and Henry are often put out to be a description of somebody who is an average Albertan. Martha, to me, is an AISH recipient in my riding of Edmonton-Manning who would love to work, who is a dear person who likes to volunteer but cannot work because of medical conditions, and her physician has indeed endorsed that. She and her husband, who is also usually on AISH and does try to work whenever he can, try to make do on the meagre sums that are available in AISH.

In talking to her, quite often she says that she's very pleased to be on AISH. Compared to what some people might be able to get on other benefits from the human resources department for those who cannot work, AISH is often better and at least assured. It's kind of sad in our society that these meagre benefits, which are something that pretty much these folks are destined to have for their entire lives, are what they are. I'm disappointed that, in the effect of this bill, it did not take the committee's recommendation to raise it to $1,000 and to the minimum amount of $1,025 in April 2006. Only raising it to $950, a hundred dollars a month, I don't think is quite enough for Martha and the other AISH recipients in my riding.

A lot of people who are on AISH are not necessarily only in certain communities. You find them all through the communities in my riding, which has quite a range of demographics. The importance of it to all communities I think must be recognized and the importance of it to our general society in the way that we treat those that are disadvantaged, those that have things happen to them that, but for the sake of God, might happen to any of us.

In terms of the increases to the exemptions I think they're very well taken, very well put forward. I think, you know, they could even be a little higher. Sometimes those people on AISH, if they could somehow find some ways to make some more money – many of them are still quite vibrant, and if there was some way that they could find a way out of their predicament, they would certainly like to do so.

I talked about Martha and Henry. My cousin Henry is actually from Rimbey. Now, he's not on AISH. He's a pipe fitter, as a matter of fact. He's been quite affected by the operation of Alberta's labour laws, and it's restricted the amount of work and the amount of income he could make. But I won't go on about Martha and Henry because this is about Martha on AISH, which to me is that Martha. Henry is my cousin from Rimbey, who is affected by the labour laws in this province.

The importance of AISH is clear as a way to deal with the disadvantaged in our province, and I'm pleased to speak in favour of this, Mr. Speaker. The increased benefits in terms of some of the medical benefits are also very timely, and the fact that these benefits are insured does bring some peace of mind to these people that are AISH.

You know, in talking to a number of AISH recipients, the fact that they are on this lifelong sentence, almost, one thing is the lack of security in their old age. Somehow, you know, they have no hope of gaining a pension. They have no hope of gaining an RRSP because they cannot save. Martha tells me that sometimes they skip certain months for the bus pass because they cannot afford it. This is their transportation. They do not have the ability to buy a computer and access and get into some of the modern-day communications, modern-day information, modern ways of learning that we, in fact most families, I think, take for granted. Those are things that I think are crucial. Somehow in this society we must be looking at ways to enrich the lives of those on AISH, and not just leave them to a meagre existence.

I support this bill, Mr. Speaker, and I ask, of course, that everybody support it in third reading, as they will, but with the clear reservations that I think it could have been improved. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else?

Hon. Member for Calgary Nose-Hill, would you like to close on behalf of the minister of seniors.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I now rise to move third reading of the bill, that it be now read a third time and passed.

[Motion carried; Bill 29 read a third time]

Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Strang: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move third reading of Bill 10, the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005, which was amended in the spring of 2004.

Further amendments were requested to clarify the process that tenants must take to move out of their unhealthy or unsafe housing, to prohibit tenants from objections if they're being evicted for not paying the rent, to permit landlords to return security deposits by regular mail. The Alberta Advisory Committee on Residential Tenancies supports those proposed amendments. The amendments will ensure that Alberta residential tenancy legislation works effectively for both landlords and tenants and remains balanced.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for West Yellowhead, I presume that you were moving this bill. Right?

Mr. Strang: Moving it. Yes. I moved it.

The Acting Speaker: Okay.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak in favour of the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act. I did speak to this, however, in second reading or Committee of the Whole and did say that there are, you know, a number of effects of the Residential Tenancies Act. It's one of the areas that really comes through my constituency office doors on quite a number of occasions. There are difficulties yet from both sides, and there are still some things that I think could have been addressed in this bill. In any case, I do speak in favour of it, and the Official Opposition supports this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else?

The hon. Member for West Yellowhead to close debate.

Mr. Strang: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 10 read a third time]

3:50

Agrology Profession Act

Mr. Knight: On behalf of the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul I would like to move Bill 17, Agrology Profession Act.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise in support of this act. To quote the Minister of Human Resources and Employment, Alberta's 1,500 professional agrologists "provide professional services in agriculture and in the environmental sector, which are vital to our Alberta's economy." They are vital to the Alberta economy. This is an important piece of legislation that recognizes and updates the operation of the profession within Alberta, and the Official Opposition supports this.

[Motion carried; Bill 17 read a third time]

Corporate Tax Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I move Bill 26, Corporate Tax Statutes Amendment Act, 2005, for third reading.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else?

Hon. Minister of Finance, would you like to close debate?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I would just thank all hon. members for their input into this bill. I would thank my colleague from Leduc-Beaumont-Devon for his participation in this debate and his quickness in getting answers to the questions that our various members have raised. If we have missed any, we will ensure that all those are dealt with. I did review Hansard and couldn't see anything that we had not brought forward in committee. Again, thanking the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, I move third reading of Bill 26.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a third time]

Insurance Amendment Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand today and move third reading of Bill 34, the Insurance Amendment Act, 2005.

As I've stated throughout the legislative process, this government is standing by its commitment to allow public auto insurers to operate in this province, allowing that they must follow the same rules and regulations that private insurers abide by. During the other steps in the process there have been a lot of questions regarding the section that outlines that insurance companies are not entitled to compensation for lost revenue. This aspect of the reforms was part of the ongoing negotiations the government had with the insurance companies, Mr. Speaker.

The bill also clearly indicates that the all-comers rule, which doesn't allow an insurance company to refuse insurance for an individual or cancel a policy, covers insurance on private passenger vehicles only. The bill also allows for a three-step resolution process.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Official Opposition I'd like to rise and speak against this bill. Certainly, I think this could be improved in many ways. You know, we've had representation from a number of members of the legal community, quite a few, even the Alberta Civil Trial Lawyers Association on a number of issues. It really does not speak to the flaws inherent in the government's auto legislation and auto insurance reforms. It does not address the problems that we have in terms of—you know, there should not be, really, the subrogation of some of the insurance claims that may be made. The accountability is diminished by removing responsibility to the superintendent and not having these changes actually debated in the Legislature.

There were a number of issues raised in the earlier parts of this debate by the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, and on behalf of the Official Opposition we find that we cannot support this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I certainly hope that Bill 34 will result in greater competition in the Alberta auto insurance marketplace. I suspect that if Saskatchewan Government Insurance, for instance, decided to set up shop in Alberta, a lot of Albertans might well sign up with SGI just to spite their home insurance company, so some of the money will go to the Saskatchewan government rather than to the already obscenely, profitable private insurance companies. We should caution Albertans, though, to be aware that they can't expect to pay Saskatchewan rates just because they've signed up with Saskatchewan Government Insurance. To do that you have to move to Saskatchewan, which is simply too high a price to pay to save on insurance.

As we've mentioned many times, though – and I'll be brief – our concern is with the Crown immunity in this bill. Protecting the government from potential liability arising from auto insurance reforms is somewhat of a draconian measure. By including this provision in Bill 34, the government has basically set itself up as judge, jury, and executioner. While the provision has been written to make it appear to include all insurance companies, the only apparent reason has been to quash one single solitary lawsuit.

This sends a chilling message to the business community in Alberta. It says: "Don't mess with us. We hold all the cards. We set the rules, and if you don't like the way the game is being played, we'll change the rules in mid-game." So I find this part of the bill quite disturbing. Therefore, we really can't support this bill at this time.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's ironic to say the least when this government, that refuses to look at public insurance for the people in Alberta, goes ahead and under the guise of so-called competition invites public insurers from other provinces into the province. Now, that makes not a lot of sense to me at all.

If they think public insurance works and works well, Mr. Speaker, then it seems to me that we'd be looking at it here if there's a way of driving down the rates for ordinary drivers. This idea that somehow because we don't have enough competition and insurance profits are skyrocketing, the government is feeling the political pressure – gee, what do we do? Oh well, maybe we'd better look like we're having more competition, so we'll invite in the public insurers from other provinces.

Well, Mr. Speaker, even if they come in, as a member previously talked about, they're not going to offer the same rates there. If they're public insurers coming in, they're going to try to make money here in Alberta. They're going to compete with the private-sector people. So that's not going to have much to do – in fact, if I were a Saskatchewan taxpayer or a B.C. taxpayer, I'd be demanding they do that. The reality is that this is not going to impact the price of insurance down the way, I don't believe, at all.

It seems to me that we have this sort of triumph of ideology over common sense. We sort of know that maybe we should be moving towards public insurance, but, gee, we can't do that because supposedly, you know, we're great free enterprisers. We'd rather have monopolies in the insurance industry than public insurance, Mr. Speaker, even if we know that public insurance is cheaper, works better. So we come in, if I may say, with a silly bill like this.

An Hon. Member: Give it to us, Ray.

Mr. Martin: I thought you were great today, by the way.

Mr. Speaker, for that reason, as I say, I don't think this is going to have a major impact at all in terms of lowering rates, which I suppose is the purpose of Bill 34.

You know, I have no great love for the insurance industry because I think that as consumers we've been ripped off dramatically. I always worry when we take away, whether it's an individual's rights, as with the bill on workers' compensation, or anybody else's rights, access to the courts. I think that is quite draconian, and I'm not sure that it works over the long haul. I guess if you can do that for one group that's relatively unpopular, it's easy to take away other people's rights. I think the point that the previous member made is an important one.

Mr. Speaker, I said this before. The fact that government insurance is compulsory – you know, we talk about the market. The market works well when there's legitimate competition, but when it's a monopoly situation and people need it, then that's when it runs out of control. Clearly, public enterprise does the job much better.

I find this so ironic that in the guise of competition we're trying to bring in, whether that'll come or not, public insurance from other provinces. I think it's, quite frankly, the height of hypocrisy, Mr. Speaker. As I say, the bill I don't think is going to have that much of a major impact on consumers at all.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions?

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, did you want to participate in the debate?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much. I appreciate the opportunity to participate in the debate on Bill 34 at this time. Certainly, we have talked a lot in the last three years in this Legislative Assembly about insurance and insurance reforms in this province, and I'm disappointed to rise and say that the government still has not gotten it right. This was yet another opportunity to do the right thing, but I am not convinced that this is in the best interests of consumers.

It's certainly not going to provide, as previous speakers have stated, better protection for consumers. We need a consumer dispute resolution system that consumers can have confidence in, but I am not convinced that this is going to make any difference at all. Consumers have been in the past very, very frustrated. Maybe this is a step in the right direction. Who's to say? I guess time may prove me wrong, but certainly in the past consumers have been very, very frustrated.

We have made suggestions on this side of the Legislative Assembly – I think they were thoughtful suggestions – on how to improve the system, but the government has difficulty with the whole notion of consumer protection. It doesn't matter whether it's insurance or natural gas or even electricity or pine shakes. Consumer protection is a simple second thought. It doesn't really show up on this government's radar screen. This is, unfortunately, yet another example of this in Bill 34.

Consumers have been frustrated. It doesn't matter which insurance district they're in. Whether they're in Calgary or whether they're in the rural area or whether they're in Edmonton or whether they're in the northern district, consumers are frustrated. Their relationship with their insurance broker is sometimes difficult. Disputes go on and on and on, and nothing seems to work.

We have the opportunity to implement public auto insurance. I actually thought from what I had heard that if these insurance reforms didn't work, this government was going to implement public auto insurance similar to what they do for crop insurance. But this public auto insurance policy would be self-sustaining, certainly similar to the one that the B.C. government has. We know the different models in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, but the B.C. government has a very, very good model.

In fact, I was in the library downstairs the other day reading how the profits from ICBC – the profits – were being invested, and invested wisely, in improved safety programs for motorists in that province. Nothing of that nature seems to happen here. We see the amount of money that we are collecting on insurance premiums in this province. Perhaps all hon. members of this Assembly would be better served if we were to take a wee bit of that money, not all, and use it for consumer education and consumer protection programs.

We could have programs, for instance, to change our habits in regard to headrests so that we all would have our headrests adjusted properly. For the life of me I can't see how the insurance industry makes such a fuss about soft tissue injuries and how much they drive up claims costs, yet nothing seems to be done to educate motorists on the importance of having a headrest that is adjusted properly to prevent whiplash in case of a car crash or a rear-end accident. I don't understand this. That would be real consumer protection.

If we were contemplating other changes to the Insurance Act and we were going to have these protections where we're going to improve the lot of consumers, well, we could also look at a program to have younger drivers operating their vehicles in a more safe manner. We could look at seat belt use. We could look at the difference between rural and urban settings and the use of seat belts and why there is such a high number of fatalities in rural areas and the reverse applies in urban areas, where there are a high number of car crashes but a significantly reduced number of fatalities. In fact, Mr. Speaker, 80 per cent of the crashes are occurring in urban areas, but 80 per cent of the fatalities are occurring in rural areas, where there's significantly less population. There are matters of density and driving habits and whatnot. There's a lot of work to be done, and I certainly don't think this bill is addressing that.

Now, with this idea of allowing public auto insurers into the province, in the height of the debate two years ago auto insurers from the provinces where we have public insurance indicated that they would come into Alberta, but they would operate under the same rules as the private operators. So until we have the single model of delivery for third-party liability insurance, we are not going to see a significant reduction in premium rates. If we were to adopt public auto insurance, I don't think there would be one job lost in the industry. There are those that say that there would be job losses, but I'm not convinced there would be. We would need those people to help deliver the public auto insurance system.

I think we should be very cautious about moving forward with this bill at this time. Maybe time will prove me wrong, Mr. Speaker. Maybe Bill 34 is the answer, but I'm not convinced, and I cannot support this bill in this form at this time. I would caution all hon. members of this Assembly that these are not the insurance amendments that we need or want.

The majority of motorists, whether they're polled by a newspaper or whether they're polled by a national outfit, have indicated that they want public auto insurance. They want public auto insurance because they know that it is more efficient and it is more economical than the current system that we have, where we have over 70 different companies supposedly competing – but I'm not so sure that they do compete – for our insurance policies. There are a shocking number of them that control a significant amount of the auto insurance market, and that market share seems to be growing, so I don't think that is very competitive.

Sometimes I think the hon. Member for Peace River would be better served by taking the revolutionary step – if we're not going to have public auto insurance and if this government is not going to allow the real deal with public auto insurance, perhaps the hon. member would be serving consumers better, Mr. Speaker, if we were to allow the banks, yes, the chartered banks, to sell auto insurance. If we're going to have a competitive market – and hon. members on the government side are always talking about competition – well, perhaps we should allow the banks to sell auto insurance.

So let's say that the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky buys another car and decides he's going to go to the bank and arrange insurance. He wouldn't have to go to a broker. Just go to the friendly CIBC or the Bank of Nova Scotia. Or let's say that a consumer from Edmonton-Gold Bar . . .

Mr. Martin: What about the credit union?

Mr. MacDonald: They could go to the credit union too. The credit union could perhaps sell insurance. As well as arranging financing for their new vehicle, they could arrange insurance.

I know that the banks are involved in the insurance industry, and they certainly are aggressively pursuing companies. But if we're not going to allow public insurance – and I'm not convinced this system is working – why do we not then allow the banks? They're selling everything else these days. Why not allow them to sell car insurance directly? If we're going to believe in competition and free enterprise, let's try that and see what happens. That would be an insurance reform that I would certainly have to study and contemplate.

At this time I can't support this bill because I don't think it's adequate. It doesn't do anything for consumers. It doesn't do anything to help the legal profession with their concerns over previous reforms, and I don't think it helps the public auto insurance providers in other provinces. So, with that, I will take my seat.

Mr. Speaker, if I did in error misquote the bank, I will retract that. For the record it was the CIBC. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

The hon. Member for Peace River to close debate.

Mr. Oberle: I'll call the question, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 34 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This has been just an extremely productive week, as all members here would agree, and we're very delighted with the co-operation that we've received. The spirit was truly remarkable. The day had a good start with the Premier's breakfast, which, I might add, was attended by members from all sides of the House. That was much appreciated. We heard the song Alberta. The song talks about how lovely this province is, and I think it's time that we all got out there and had a look for ourselves and just remind ourselves of the privileges we have.

With that, I would move that this House now stand adjourned until Monday at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; at 4:17 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Title: Monday, May 16, 2005

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. At the beginning of this week we ask for renewed strength in the awareness of our duty and privilege as members of the Legislature. We ask for the protection of this Assembly and also the province we are elected to serve. Amen.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, we will now participate in the singing of our national anthem. I'm going to call on Mr. Paul Lorieau, who is in the Speaker's gallery. Please participate in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce four of my friends from the Lacombe-Ponoka constituency. They are members of the Wolf Creek school division. In the members' gallery we have Karin Engen, the chairman of the board; Kelly Lowry, the vice-chairman of the board; Dr. Larry Jacobs, superintendent of schools; and Joe Henderson, secretary-treasurer of Wolf Creek school division. I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's a pleasure and an honour to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature a group of 53 curious and clever students from Gateway Christian school in Red Deer. They're very excited to be here, and they will be watching us during question period. They're accompanied by their teachers Mrs. Carolyn Stolte and Mr. Jim Driedger. They are also accompanied by parents Mrs. Tracey Numrich, Mrs. Donna Strome, Mr. Clary Michael, Mrs. Sherry Glebe, Mrs. Cathy Nicolay, Mrs. Jackie Southwell, Mrs. Michelle Rance, and Mrs. Christine Schick. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two people who are very important in my life and the lives of my colleagues; that is, two of our staff members.

We have with us Lori DeLuca. I'll ask Lori to stand while I say nice things about her. She is from Edmonton, graduated from the University of Alberta with a bachelor of arts degree in political science. She was working for Health and Wellness as a research assistant, and she has now joined our staff as a research analyst. Lori is also involved with co-ordinating the annual World Partnership Walk in Edmonton to raise money for social development projects in Africa and Asia.

I would now ask Mark Leigh to also stand and join Lori. Mark was born and raised in Edmonton and received his degree in psychology from the University of Manitoba. Before joining our team as an administrative assistant, Mark worked with nonprofit agencies, group home shelters, and won the Alberta Fitness Leadership Certification Association leader of the year award for 2000.

So just two of our staff but ones that are very important to me. Please join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature the STEP grant student who is working in the Edmonton-Glenora constituency office for the summer, Peter Marriott. He is an expert on computers and an excellent writer. I would invite him to stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased today to introduce to you and through you to all the members of this Assembly three very active persons from my constituency office in Edmonton-Manning. One is Jane Walker, who does much of the casework and is an active constituency assistant. Please rise, Jane.

Also, Martha Wong, a volunteer who was very active in my campaign, who is an incredibly active volunteer in the community in many social issues and at church. Also Cecily Poohkay, who is the STEP student for the summer, a very accomplished individual who's worked in many volunteer activities, from raising money for the CNIB, working in Urban Manor, and many other activities. We look forward to your being with us in the summer.

I'd ask the Assembly to please welcome them and give their usual warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly three bright young students who have been working with us in our constituency offices. Roland Schmidt has joined us in Edmonton-Strathcona as the STEP student, and he's also active as the co-chair of the New Democratic Youth of Alberta.

Suzanne MacLeod is my new STEP student in Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. She is graduating with a bachelor of arts in anthropology from the University of Alberta and is going to study law in the fall at Aberdeen university in Scotland.

Our final introduction is Erica Woolley, who has been working in Edmonton-Strathcona as a social work student caseworker since January. We greatly appreciate her hard work for those needing assistance and wish her the best of luck in all her future endeavours.

I'd ask all three guests to now rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and the Assembly Dorothy and Harold Hall. Dorothy and Harold have been active members in the CCF/NDP for more than 40 years. They both attended the founding meeting of the Alberta NDP in 1962 and have worked on every single campaign since then. Dorothy and Harry lead an active lifestyle by participating in a number of sports, including golf, baseball, and curling. They're seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Mr. Eric Musekamp. Eric is the founder and president of the farm workers union of Alberta, based out of Bow Island. This organization was established in 1999 and was created to raise awareness about the deaths and injuries that occur on farms throughout Alberta. Eric is in the public gallery, and I would ask him now to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and privilege to be able to introduce to you and to Members of the Legislative Assembly some guests that I have here today. They're the Golden Hills school board: Wilf Golbeck, Christene Howard, Dianne McBeth, who is the superintendent, Joyce Bazant, Paul Crown, Corey Fisher, Karen Harries, Sylvia Holsworth, Larry Maerz, and Christine Painter. I would ask them all to rise and receive the wonderful welcome of this Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd direct your eyes, please, to those present in the Speaker's gallery. I'm pleased to introduce visitor services staff and Legislature tour guides who are here today. You will have noticed that they have traded in their regular dapper duds for frocks of a more traditional time. They are wearing 1905 period costumes and will continue to wear them during our centennial celebrations. The period costumes were done by two groups in commemoration of Alberta's 2005 centennial. Rhonda Coates, theatre studies department of Red Deer College, made the costumes for the visitor services staff. Anne Hill, textile, clothing and culture, department of human ecology, University of Alberta, made the costumes for the tour guides.

I'd now ask Brent Francis, Karen Muhlbach, Keltie Troock, Janet Baker, and Meredith Shaw to rise. These are the costumes you'll see in our building for much of this year.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Legislature Environs

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Legislature Building and Grounds are of defining importance to Edmonton and to the entire province, but for years now they've been left to decline. In the winter the skating rink facilities amount to a trailer and a couple of porta-potties. Year-round this area is scarred with parking lots and vacant buildings. This province and this city deserve better. My questions are to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation.

Given that the Legislature precinct is of profound importance to the city of Edmonton and the entire province of Alberta, what plans does this government have to revamp the lands and buildings surrounding the Legislature?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That's an absolutely great question. We have taken the first steps already in that we have put out an RFP to take a look at three buildings which are presently housed on the Legislature Grounds: the federal building, which has been vacant for approximately 12 to 15 years, the Legislature Annex, as well as the Terrace Building. I agree with the hon. Leader of the Opposition that the Legislature Grounds have to be a showcase for Edmonton, have to be a showcase for Alberta. They have come under a state of disrepair. When we take a look at the exposed aggregate that is presently out in front of the Legislature, I do feel that that needs to be looked at. We're currently examining how best we can do that, but we have to do it in context of those three buildings as well.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can the minister tell us what stage the request for proposals has reached for overhauling the Legislature precinct?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The request for proposals went out approximately a month to six weeks ago, and we should expect the answer by the end of June or the first part of July, with some things starting to happen in July, August, in that particular time frame. If you're wondering why the rush, one of the issues that we're looking at with the federal building is that there's a potential bill for $250,000 on the roof if we choose to keep the federal building and work on it. So it's very timely that we look at the Legislature Grounds as a whole right now, and that's what we're doing as opposed to just doing some one-offs.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Specific to the power plant on the south edge of the grounds by the greenhouse, what plans are being considered for that site, that very old power plant?

Dr. Oberg: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's one of the things we're taking a very close look at. There are some questions as to whether or not there are some archeological issues in that particular area. We're taking a look at the power plant to see if it could potentially be relocated, exactly what can happen. Part of this RFP is to take a look at the Terrace Building, the Annex, and the federal building and to ensure that we come up with a solution for Edmontonians and all of Albertans so that we truly have something magnificent here at the Legislature.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Government Aircraft Flight Logs

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian Association of Journalists at its fifth annual code of silence awards, recognizing the most secretive government agency in Canada, last Saturday night awarded this Alberta government first prize for denying access to public documents on the use of government planes to journalists and opposition parties until after the 2004 provincial election. My questions are all to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation. Will the minister tell this House and Alberta Justice lawyer Bill Olthuis which of his department's two flight log e-mails, the one prior to the election or the altered one after, is accurate?

Dr. Oberg: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. This was brought to light in a public inquiry last week. What we saw in going back and asking the person who sent the actual e-mail was that there was a grammatical error. What the document said was, first of all, on or after, which really didn't make a lot of sense. She changed that to on or before November 25, which I believe was the date in question. The documents were received I believe on November 23 or November 24. This is very serious. If there was a document altered after it had been sent, it's a very serious charge. We went to the specific individual and asked her, and she said that she had made a grammatical error and subsequently changed it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As evidence of his ministry's pursuit of transparency and accountability will the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation now release or post all flight logs from May 2004 to May 2005?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, consistent with the FOIP legislation we'd be more than happy to.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I said flight logs, not manifests.

Again to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: why did this government deliberately sit on the FOIP flight log request for six months before releasing it after the fall election? What else is this government trying to hide?

Dr. Oberg: Absolutely nothing, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Energy and Utilities Board

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Liberals have learned that this Conservative government through the Energy and Utilities Board is proposing changes that would prohibit disclosure of information through freedom of information and privacy on large facility liability management programs. The EUB proposal would prevent any consideration of the public interest by the FOIP commissioner and would also prevent the public from any opportunity to examine information that may directly and adversely affect the public. My question is to the Minister of Energy. Why would the Energy and Utilities Board withhold important information from the public and weaken the FOIP process?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, there may be some discussions at the present time. The Energy and Utilities Board is continually looking at their processes both with respect to what should be accessible to the public, intervenor status, and a whole host of things in the process. If there's a specific instance though, I'd surely be happy to look into that one.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: why would the minister change FOIP regulations which will mask the extent and liability for costs of reclamation and remediation concerns at oil and gas sites?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, there certainly is no intent on the part of the government to see that the public wouldn't have information that they should be aware of. In respect of FOIP none of those changes have yet been made. At this stage it's just still consultation that's being held.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given the EUB mission to base all decisions on the public interest, how will this barrier to information serve the public interest?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, the EUB does have a policy, and that was continuing to take part. Those that would be directly or indirectly adversely impacted by any development would have a say. They would be able to bring those issues before the Energy and Utilities Board, and that will continue to be the policy.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Sale of Social Housing Corporation Land

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last Thursday the minister of seniors confirmed that 927 acres of prime real estate in Fort McMurray were sold by the Alberta Social Housing Corporation to a private developer without a public tender. The purchaser of this untendered real estate is Timberlea Consortium Incorporated. Fort McMurray's booming economy makes this extremely valuable real estate, making its sale at below market value and without a public tender most unusual. My question is to the minister. Given that Timberlea Consortium paid only $35,000 per acre whereas nearby comparable parcels were being sold for over $60,000 per acre, why did the government sell this prime real estate in a cozy private deal rather than opening the sale to bids from other interested developers?

1:50

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, this question, as the member said, was before the House on Thursday. I did not say, hon. member, that there were 900 and whatever acres of land, that you've mentioned here. That's not accurate.

Anyhow, Mr. Speaker, I also mentioned that under the Alberta Housing Act we do through the Alberta Social Housing Corporation have the ability to sell land through a number of processes. Those do include a direct sale, a nominal fee sale, or through the tendering process. This land that this individual is talking about – I know that my predecessor in his wisdom when he did offer that land as a direct sale also first hired an independent appraiser to assess the value of the land. The value of the land was appraised at between $15,000 and $40,000, and that was depending on how soon housing could be developed in the area. Given that, the accusation about this being a private, cozy deal is completely untrue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that Timberlea Consortium paid less than the going rate for this parcel of prime real estate, will the minister now clear the air by immediately tabling both the agreement for sale and the appraisal reports, and if not, what is she hiding?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not hiding anything. This was a legal sale, and there was an appraised value by an independent appraiser outside of government. I'd be more than pleased to table the legislation that would let you see that this is legal, and that might be helpful to you.

Mr. Mason: There's absolutely no reason to table legislation in this House, Mr. Speaker. We need to get to the bottom of this.

In addition to being untendered, why was Timberlea Consortium also given a preferential financing arrangement whereby the land was sold via an agreement for sale rather than the usual practice of the developer paying the total purchase price for the land up front?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, I go back to my original point that this is a legal sale. It was done in the best faith and with the best intent for Fort McMurray to develop housing, and that is what is occurring on this land. There hasn't been any unusual agreement made. That seems to be the innuendo here from the member opposite. Perhaps, if you don't want the legislation tabled, you'll re-read it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Food Regulations Review

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many of my constituents through their volunteer groups have expressed grave concern about the apparent new health regulations or their enforcement. These regulations threaten to close down community halls, through their potluck suppers or through their fundraising activities. It certainly has made them uneconomical. Many of these have been operating for generations or decades for sure. My questions today are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Is it simply overzealous enforcement, or is the Department of Health and Wellness doing something different that categorizes these community halls or community groups as now unsafe or a risk to health?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, throughout this session there have been questions and references to the manner in which we administer the regulations relative to food services under the Alberta Public Health Act. The only regulation that has changed changed the 1st of April. When there are six or more food handlers present in a facility, there must be somebody certified in sanitation and correct food delivery. When there are fewer than six, then, in fact, the person has to be not necessarily present but aware of the serving and looking after the service from that supervisory perspective.

Mr. Speaker, because of the issues that have been raised by many members about the consistency of the application of the rules, we have been working feverishly, I might add, on guidelines so that we can come out and ensure that there will be some consistency, which will hopefully rid us of some of the complaints that we've had of perhaps a too rigorous or unnecessarily harsh treatment of any of the groups that have been providing adequate and healthy food service delivery.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: could the minister tell us specifically what changes to the regulations she's contemplating that might make these not-for-profit organizations operate as they were before, and does it have any effect on farmers' markets?

Ms Evans: There are four categories of permitting that are done under this regulation: permitting of the facility itself, its operations, the farmers' markets as well as the construction of the facility. All I can advise is that we will be releasing to stakeholders a redraft of the regulations dealing with farmers' markets and dealing with the other areas of the regulations that have been problematic. My first hope is that the guidelines, once released, hopefully within the next two weeks, to all Albertans, will make a considerable difference in the way that the administration is conducted. Secondly, we will undertake a further regulatory review.

Just one more comment, Mr. Speaker. Our goal is to have some equity in the manner in which safe food, healthy food is delivered throughout Alberta, and we will still pursue that goal.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Whistle-blower Protection

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last month, within hours of the Finance minister saying that Alberta Securities Commission employees had nothing to fear, the director of administrative services was let go, allegedly because he was a whistle-blower. Now the minister is named in a $1.3 million lawsuit filed last week. We have long called for whistle-blower legislation in this province, but never has the need been greater. My question is for the Deputy Premier. What is the government's reason for refusing to give all government employees real protection by implementing whistle-blower legislation?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I'll answer the question in this way. It was raised that an employee of the Alberta Securities Commission was terminated, suggested that it was because he came forward with information. I said at the time and I repeat again that any employee that is terminated from their position has an opportunity to bring that forward. Indeed, that employee can and will do that.

Mr. Speaker, I have not experienced in 18 years here a concern from our employees in this government that they cannot come forward with their concerns. We hear from our employees at all times. We welcome hearing from our employees. I think the hon. member is out, way out, if he believes that the employees of this government don't believe they can bring their concerns forward.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, they keep coming to us.

Mr. Speaker, without whistle-blower legislation will the Minister of Finance admit that employees are not safe to come forward with the truth about human resource and enforcement irregularities at the Alberta Securities Commission?

Mrs. McClellan: No, Mr. Speaker, I certainly will not. As I indicated in my previous answer, employees can feel quite comfortable in coming forward if they have concerns in the workplace and, in fact, do that, and they are dealt with. I would suggest that if employees come forward to the hon. member opposite, he would do that employee a service by making sure that the respective minister is aware of it. They can sit down together and deal with the issue. I'm quite happy to have the hon. member present when we discuss the issue if that makes him feel better.

Mr. R. Miller: I'm not so sure I want to be a party to that.

Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that the federal government has whistle-blower legislation and that now, as of July 1, public corporations regulated by the ASC must also have whistle-blower legislation, why is this government dragging its feet and not protecting its own employees who want to speak the truth?

Mrs. McClellan: I think that one of the issues, Mr. Speaker, is the aside: "I'm not so sure I want to be a party to that." The fact is that if you had a genuine interest in the employees and their well-being, you would do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Species at Risk

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The attention that Alberta gives to species at risk is extremely important to all Albertans and a key part of our provincial commitment to care for our wild species. My first question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. What are the provincial wildlife managers doing to ensure the recovery of species at risk?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has been working really hard over the last 30 years at protecting species at risk, and particularly over the last four years we have established a comprehensive recovery planning program that encompasses 15 recovery teams working on 18 particular conservation actions. Not only are those comprehensive actions handled in offices, but they are actual on-the-ground work as well. A key part to the made-in-Alberta approach, we feel, is having that on-the-ground planning process involve stakeholders and landowners because that's key to finding out the results. As well, as the hon. member knows very well, the Endangered Species Conservation Committee is a good example of Alberta's co-operative approach.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is to the same minister. Do Alberta's practices give due consideration to the protection of plant species?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, it's important to note that our policy of conserving species at risk does include and extends to plants as well. Even though it's under the provincial Wildlife Act, there are provisions in the act that allow the capability of lists going to species at risk for plants that are either threatened or endangered. One of the plants that's been identified is the western blue flag, which is a wild iris that grows in southern Alberta. We're into our fourth year of implementing an action plan on that, and credit for that action plan goes to the people that are actually working on the ground as well as the landowners that get us in to see where the plant exists. We are also in the process of developing more specific regulations to protect plants under species at risk.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary question is to the same minister. How committed is your department to providing adequate resources to protect species at risk in the province?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, species at risk are a top priority for myself, and as a result of that the department treats it as their top priority as well. We want to make sure that they can fulfill their role. Our recent budget allocations include a dedicated management specialist that will help focus on things like caribou, and we will also consider a number of new biologists that will help us with our species-at-risk management as part of their day-to-day job.

For the next hundred years we will make sure that Albertans are well served in terms of dealing with species at risk.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following up with questions pertaining to the same issues surrounding the Edmonton Journal's FOIP request for Tory Air flight logs, I will ask the hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation the same question posed by my hon. colleague from Calgary-Varsity. Why did this government deliberately sit on the FOIP request for six months, only to release the information after the election was called?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, the FOIP inquiry that is presently going on is looking at all of these potential questions. They're looking at, for example, why it took so long to get the flight logs out. It's also looking at why exactly it took so long to get all of the information. It's presently before the inquiry, so I do not want to bias the inquiry and what is being said. There have been some irregularities, and the inquiry is taking a very close look at these irregularities.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that on October 27, 2004, only two days after the writ was dropped, the ministry granted itself a 30-day extension, what was the reason given to delay the release of that information? Again, why wait until after the election?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will give the same answer to the question. The public inquiry is looking into all of these, and I expect that they will come up with some answers very shortly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question, then, goes to the Minister of Government Services. Access to information fees at the federal government level are an initial symbolic fee of $5 and only 20 cents per page for photocopying. The recent Edmonton Journal request was at a cost of over $900. Why does this government use the high FOIP request costs to limit access to information?

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, we believe that it's very important that we spend taxpayers' dollars wisely. The fact is that since FOIP was put in place, we have actually spent about $52 million on it. On the recovery from the costs that we have for the information – $52 million cost, slightly over $500,000 return.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Hantavirus

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Wednesday Alberta's provincial health office issued a warning to Albertans about the danger of contracting hantavirus after three cases were confirmed in central Alberta, including the tragic death of a single mother. The three cases of hantavirus involved members from the same family who were working together to clean out their garage, an activity that many Albertans do this time of year. My questions are for the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell us what level of risk hantavirus poses to Albertans?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, Dr. Karen Grimsrud, the Alberta deputy provincial health officer, advises that although the risk is relatively low, there are a number of factors. Since 1989, in fact, we've had 31 cases, nine of which have died. It's a sad tragedy. This year because apparently there are mice that have weathered the winter better, there is considerably more danger to be assumed. So at this time of year when people are cleaning out sheds and barns and sweeping things out, we're issuing some health warnings. Certainly, it's been tragic to note the deaths that have taken place in David Thompson.

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, my last question to the same minister: can the minister tell us if she plans to have an information campaign or post information on the department's website on how Albertans can protect themselves from contracting hantavirus?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly on the health website, health.gov.ab.ca, we provide advice. We are through the medical officers of health throughout the regions distributing more advice. We are providing additional public service messaging to advise people if they are going to clean out these kinds of places, not to use vacuums, not to sweep – they can spread it because it's an airborne virus – advising them to handle any mouse droppings, urine, or any other kind of evidence of mice, presumed to be deer mice, extremely carefully and to secure them in a way that doesn't further antagonize or spread the disease.

Mr. Speaker, this is the kind of thing that we are making mention of in children's authorities as well as through the schools and the regions.

The Speaker: The hon. member? Fine.

The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

School Funding Formula

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dr. Russ Wiebe's analysis of the funding and costs of plant operations and maintenance in Alberta's schools report states: the funding formula has not kept pace with the real costs; in the year 2004-05 school boards collectively faced a $21.3 million shortfall in their electricity and gas bills. School boards rely almost entirely on the provincial government for school facility operations and maintenance funding. To the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: is the minister's $9.6 billion investment in school buildings at risk because dollars are being shifted from the infrastructure maintenance to utility costs and to keep schools clean? Are school boards losing out?

Dr. Oberg: Well, Mr. Speaker, the short answer to the question about whether or not it is at risk is: no, it is not at risk. We are in the process of taking a look at the operation and maintenance for the school boards, and hopefully we will be doing something very, very soon on this.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: why are school boards in Alberta, specifically St. Albert, being penalized by the current funding formula?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, the current funding formula, in essence, plays a lot on utilization, and the key behind this is that if you have two facilities that are 20 per cent full, perhaps you should combine them and have one facility and pay less for operation and maintenance. These are some of the concepts that are out there. I think they're very standard concepts.

We are looking, though, at a better way, potentially, for the dollars to be distributed. We're looking at a way that is not going to solve all of the problems for all of the schools and keep every school in the province open because there are some schools that have seen a significant decline in enrolment. However, we are looking at a way that will make it fairer for all school boards in this province, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the current funding formula did not work in '02-03, '03-04, will the minister now commit to reviewing the present formula and adding $21.3 million for electricity and gas bills, which will be required in 2004-05?

Dr. Oberg: Well, Mr. Speaker, in reviewing the gas bills and reviewing the needs, we find that there are some significant needs in the operation and maintenance formula. It is something that we are reviewing, and it is something that we will be taking a very close look at.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

School Closures

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Education keeps trying to pin the blame for school closures on school boards. But at a board retreat in November an October 14, 2004, letter to Chairman Hansen from then ministers of learning and infrastructure indicates very clearly that funding for new schools would not be provided unless older schools in established neighbourhoods were closed down first. My question to the minister is simply this. Why does the minister keep wanting to shift the blame for school closures onto local boards, when they were given clear direction by this government to close schools in the older parts of the city to build new schools?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I have never shifted any blame for anything onto any school board in this House or anywhere else, and those members know it. To play that kind of politics is cheap and absolutely silly.

I think the average taxpayer out there knows that there comes a period in a school's lifetime when it is no longer practical to perhaps keep it open for whatever those local reasons are. That's why we have elected school trustees out in the communities to look at those situations and make those difficult decisions.

Mr. Martin: Mr. Speaker, the point that I'm making – and the minister did not answer the question. It was a direction from this government to close schools down. Does he think that it's fair and equitable to do that? How are the local boards making that decision?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm not familiar with that particular correspondence. If the member opposite wants to send it over to me, I'd like to just have a read through and see exactly what that correspondence did read.

I think it's absolutely unfair for someone to sit in this House and make that kind of an allegation or accusation.

Mr. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure he can get it from the previous minister of learning if he wants to.

My question to the minister is this. Would the minister – and we've had this discussion – rather than getting exercised and excited, agree to doing what they do in Ontario, where they make it clear that it is illegal to close down old schools to bring in new ones? Would he look at that at least?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, during the estimates debate, I think it was, I indicated to this member and perhaps to others that I would welcome looking at any suggestions that they might have. Now, there were a number of items that were referenced. When the summer break here, as it's referred to, comes up very soon, I'll be happy to take a look at that Ontario model and other models that have come to my attention: the Oregon model, the B.C. model, the Paris model, and a number of others. There are a lot of ideas out there that bear some consideration, and I'm willing to do exactly that.

I know this is an exciting topic right now because we're doing our best to follow up on so many recommendations of the Alberta Commission on Learning, and this is certainly one of them, and I think the members opposite know that. Certainly, the school boards do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Project Kare

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The body of another woman was recently discovered in a remote area east of Edmonton. Police have identified her as having worked in the sex trade. Now the victim is added to the list of the many other women whose murdered bodies have been discovered in or around the Edmonton area. We hear about Project Kare almost daily in the news. My questions are to the Solicitor General. What is the function of Project Kare?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Project Kare was named to reflect the philosophy of care and concern and compassion that goes on in the investigations of missing and murdered women. The initial "K" in Kare provides the initial for the lead agency, that being the RCMP in Alberta, which is K Division. Therefore, Project Kare, starting with a K, in conjunction with the Solicitor General's office provides the support with regard to the 43 highly trained investigators including crime analysts and behavioural and forensic experts regarding this investigation. They are investigating 42 murders and approximately 31 persons that are still missing in the province, most recently, obviously, the 12 murders in and around the Edmonton vicinity over the past 16 years.

Mr. Johnston: My final question: what is the province doing to assist Project Kare as they conduct their investigations into these brutal murders?

Mr. Cenaiko: Mr. Speaker, again, as I mentioned, Project Kare began about two years ago with provincial funding from the Solicitor General's office. Last year we provided $2.9 million to fund the program and the investigation, and this past budget year we've provided them with an additional $800,000 for support staff and investigators to increase that to $3.7 million.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Federal Financial Support

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Thursday the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations reported that Alberta was being shortchanged by the federal government and that he was seeking a new deal that would pay more than $2 billion over five years. The next day the Premier refuted this by stating: there's not a perceived shortfall. End of quote. There appears to be a disconnect within the government. To the minister of international and intergovernmental affairs: is there a federal funding shortfall in Alberta or not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, there is no disconnect. Secondly, Albertans are proud to contribute to Canada through the equalization program. The dollars that we had referred to in question period are those relative to these one-off deals that have been made with provinces over the last couple of weeks in the country of Canada and, quite frankly, that many are finding to be rather distasteful at this particular junction in our history.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that you've partially answered my second question, which will be directed to you. Given that the Premier has stated that a funding shortfall does not exist, has the minister withdrawn his request with the federal Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs for increased funding for Alberta?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'd just like to clarify. There are two issues that we're talking about. One is the equalization, and the Premier and government agree that that is fair unless the federal government decides to tinker with it in the future. The others are these transfers of funds from the feds to other provinces. With respect to the Ontario deal, we don't know if it's $2 billion, a billion and a half, $500 million. We need time to examine that agreement with the Minister of Finance, and once we examine the agreement and we find the full context of that, we will bring that forward to government for a decision.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. I would like to direct my question to the Deputy Premier. Given that the Premier stated that the International and Intergovernmental Relations ministry, quote, can do what they want – and that's the end of the quote – who really is in charge here?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, as my hon. colleague said: there is no disconnect. There are two issues. You know, if you do all your research in the newspapers and on the talk shows, as good and thorough as those happen to be, you're bound to miss a part of the story, especially when the conversations happen in two or three venues over two or three days.

The fact is that Alberta is a proud supporter of equalization. There is a formula that provides fairness across Canada. We have never debated, argued, or disputed that we should be a contributor in that area. We're thankful that we are in a financial position to do that.

However, Mr. Speaker, the next part of the question: are we doing all right? Well, you know what? The province of Alberta is doing all right. We're in a sound financial position, and that's exactly what the Premier said.

As my colleague pointed out, what is distasteful are these one-off deals that are happening with rapidity across the country in the last days. Mr. Speaker, that is where we need to have some information. We do not know the details of the Ontario deal. We want to know and we will know and we will determine whether there's anything further we should do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Aid for Disabled Persons

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta government has been doing a good job in its mission of developing, implementing, and evaluating programs for the delivery of supports to adults with developmental disabilities. From my past visit to the CNIB office in Calgary and reflecting the concern from my constituents about the bridge to employment program, my question today is to the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. What is the bridge to employment program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The bridge to employment program is offered by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Calgary. It's a program that assists people with that disability to find a job. They do it in ways which would include computer classes, training through group workshops, resumé writing, job search, individual interviews, and whatnot. It's a good program.

Although the program is offered by the CNIB, it had been funded by the federal government through their opportunities fund. That, I understand, is the hon. member's concern because that funding has ended through the federal government. Although the CNIB continues to offer the program and is carrying it through right now, hopefully when the new budget comes forward, the hon. member can assist the CNIB with accessing the funding through the federal government once again.

The Speaker: Hon. member, do I understand this correctly? You're talking about a federal program totally unrelated to this Legislature and this budget?

Mr. Cao: No.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: My supplemental question is to the same minister. Given that this program has been discontinued, what are you going to do to help the clients of this program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to clarify, though, the program hasn't been discontinued. It's offered by the CNIB, but the funding for this program is through the federal government, and that is what has ended. There are other programs that we assist. It would be with the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment. They have programs available in Calgary as well, and I will take that under advisement for that minister.

Mr. Cao: My last supplemental question is to the same minister. Given that many disabled Albertans know in advance of the deterioration of their abilities, what is the government's policy to help people in their transition to permanent disability so that they maintain productive lives?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, through my department we do have a couple of programs that would come to mind that have been in the Legislature here during session. That would be the AISH program, the assured income for the severely handicapped program, where we offer assistance with a living allowance, a medical benefit, and more recently we're developing legislation for personal income support. As well, we offer assistance to persons with developmental disabilities through a number of assistance-type programs that are unique to the individual, depending on their disability. So, hopefully, that will help the member as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Use of School Instructional Funding

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government promised that the starvation diet for education would be over. That has not happened. In fact, the government continues to practise the sugar daddy politics which they're famous for with other levels of government in this province, including the public school boards. My first question is to the minister of infrastructure. Why has the government ordered – ordered – the Edmonton public school board to use $300,000 that was approved for the Victoria school project on the design work for three new schools in the city of Edmonton?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I certainly will get back to the hon. member with the specifics, but I do believe that that was the interest that was accumulated from the dollars being given to the school board.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Education: given that the Edmonton public school board is forced to use over $7 million in instructional dollars to subsidize the plant operation and maintenance grants, why is this government forcing the schools to take money from the classroom to pay the bill in the boiler room?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, this provincial government isn't forcing that particular board to do anything of the kind. Under the renewed flexible funding framework, which was worked out with, by, and for those school boards, they have the ability to shift around a significant amount of the monies that we provide to them, monies which, I might add, went up by $287 million in this current budget to the largest amount ever for K to 12, $4.3 billion. It's a 7.1 per cent increase, and I think education fared very well in those terms.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: if that response was true, can the minister please explain why the provincial government's position now is that this practice of transferring instructional dollars to facilities or vice versa must end by the 2005-06 school year?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think that he might have a question here for the hon. minister of infrastructure. Insofar as instructional dollars are concerned, for which I have responsibility, we have increased every single part of the budget. We've increased money for special needs by 4 per cent, by another 4 per cent, and a total of about 11 per cent for severe, mild, and moderate. We've increased the English as a Second Language learning by 30 per cent to over $40 million. We've increased every part of that budget, and we've increased the flexibility that the school boards have as well.

It would behoove all members, I think, in the opposition parties to have a close look at the Education budget. For a short read of it, have a look at estimates because a lot of the good news is rolled out there. I understand that they're trying to put a shadow over top of education, but we're very proud of education in this province, and we're going to remain to fund it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

School Fees

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Parents and students in my constituency are concerned about some of the additional costs that they've had to cover for education purposes. As the end of the school year approaches, stress levels increase with respect to costs for graduation, field trips, and other fees. My questions are to the Minister of Education. Why are school boards allowed to charge school fees?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, that's a very good question. I think the short answer is because it's allowed under the School Act. I think we also have to understand that there's a dichotomy, if you will, of costs, some of which are prescribed and some of which are retained and others of which are refunded. For example, fees are charged for school book rentals, but if the books are returned in good usable condition, those fees can be refunded. For other fees such as school busing – that's a consumable service – those fees are not returned. The short answer is that school boards are allowed to charge certain fees. In fact, those collections probably amount to over $30 million, if memory serves, per annum.

Mrs. Ady: My first supplemental is to the same minister. What does the minister suggest that I tell those families who cannot afford to pay these additional school fees?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, if we take the example of school busing fees, which was in the news not that long ago, there's a certain prescribed amount that gets charged on a monthly or an annual basis, but families who have perhaps three or four children in the school system can take advantage of a group rate which is significantly less, obviously, than if it were charged out on a per person basis. So there is that.

Secondly, any school board does have the ability to waive any particular fees. Superintendents in most cases have those abilities to waive certain fees so as to not prevent a child from accessing the same kinds of education services that other children in that area receive.

Mrs. Ady: My final supplemental to the same minister: given that parents often fund raise to help cover these added costs, will the minister please explain what is eligible to be fund raised by parent advisory councils?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, I wish I had a short, simple answer to that; I don't yet. But, as you may recall, Alberta's Commission on Learning has a section where it requires us as a government to more clearly define what are basics in education that we should cover as taxpayers and what are extras, things that can either be fund raised for or certain school field trips or school uniforms or band uniforms or things of that nature, which a local school board may feel are enhancements to education. So I do hope that we'll have more progress on that answer more definitively very soon. It'll certainly take us at least through the end of the summer to arrive at it, but we are working hard to provide a very specific answer to that very specific question. I'm just sorry that we don't have it yet.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Minister of Community Development would like to supplement a response from last week's QP. Now, remember that once this is provided for, the hon. member to whom the original set of questions were dealt with has a chance to raise a question. At this point in time I do not know which answer the minister is responding to, so we will proceed that way.

Applewood Park Community Association

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I'm responding to a series of questions last week in this Assembly, predominantly by the Leader of the Opposition, wherein I was asked questions about a Wild Rose international development program grant that was given to Applewood Park Community Association. At the time – and this would've been Thursday of last week – I indicated that the money had been properly disbursed in an appropriate way. I did this on the basis of three pieces of information. First of all, we had a signed declaration by two of the principals of Applewood Park Community Association; secondly, based on the verbal assurances of another principal of Applewood community; and thirdly the Auditor General had in fact conducted a random audit of Applewood and found nothing out of the ordinary for the year 2004.

Since then, Mr. Speaker, the individual who made the verbal assurance to us that the money had been sent from Applewood to Vietnam has changed his statement, which leads us to concerns as to whether or not the declaration that was provided for us and that we relied on was, in fact, accurate. To this point Applewood has not provided all of the documents necessary to establish how and to whom the funds were transferred. In light of this new information I've asked the Auditor General to determine how Applewood Park Community Association has disbursed and used its grants from the Wild Rose Foundation.* The Auditor General's review of that will determine if there has been a violation of the regulations under which the Wild Rose Foundation operates, and the Auditor General's findings will determine our next steps in this matter, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition if you wish.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will say that I respect and appreciate the minister's comments and forthrightness here. There were some very unpleasant exchanges and points of order brought last week that I hope we all regret because I don't believe they were justified.

I do look forward to the Auditor General's report, and I hope it's made public as much as is possible. There are inconsistencies around whether CIDA was involved or wasn't. Our information is that they don't have any records of being involved. There are inconsistencies from the Applewood position.

So I thank the minister, in fact, for his comments here. This is a serious issue. We all know that Wild Rose is an important asset to this province, and we need to maintain its integrity. To help the minister, I, too, will have some information tabled in just a few minutes that may be of relevance to him.

Thank you.

The Clerk: Members' Statements.

The Speaker: I think, hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, your guests have departed, so there's no need, then, to revert that way.

Then, in just a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of six members to participate in Members' Statements.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: Hon. members, before I call upon the first, just the historical vignette of the day. I want to announce that starting today the Alberta Legislature is home to the Famous Five maquette for our centennial year. All Albertans are familiar with the Famous Five, whose portraits hang on the fifth floor of the Legislature Building.

Emily Murphy, Nellie McClung, Henrietta Muir Edwards, Irene Parlby, and Louise McKinney gained their Famous Five status due to their efforts to ensure that women are recognized as persons in Canadian law. Their October 18, 1929, victory in the highest court of appeal at the time, the British Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, is recognized in many places throughout the Commonwealth.

In 1996 an Edmonton artist, Barbara Patterson, was commissioned by the Famous Five Foundation to create a larger-than-life monument to these five women. The miniature version of this sculpture, the maquette, tours the country in hopes of educating Canadians about these five Alberta women. This year, starting today, it will be on display in our Carillon Room, and it will become part of our tours of the Legislature Building. In front and on the desks of all members are brochures that highlight the many accomplishments of the Famous Five. It's another addition to the history of our province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Angela Lemire Caroline Giguere

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize two individuals in my constituency of West Yellowhead who each recently received a very important award. Last Saturday the recipients of the 2005 excellence in teaching awards were announced. The two winners from my constituency were Angela Lemire and Caroline Giguere.

Angela Lemire is a teacher at the Jasper junior/senior high school. She has been teaching senior high school for 32 years, and her passion for teaching and learning has never ceased. Her students consistently score very high on the diploma exams, and many of her students achieve the standard of excellence each year. She is a dedicated teacher who spends her days ensuring that her students are given every opportunity to be successful.

Caroline Giguere teaches at Gerard Redmond community Catholic school in Hinton. Throughout her teaching career she taught kindergarten, junior and senior high school students. She is also heavily involved in the learning for life program, which targets high-needs students at risk of dropping out. Caroline is respected by all of those who have worked with her over the years, and many of her students love the fact that the word "detention" is not in her vocabulary. Instead of punishing mischievous students through detentions, she lovingly gives them learning opportunities, a chance for students to catch up on their studies in a supervised environment.

Mr. Speaker, these two teachers from my constituency are very deserving of this honour that has been bestowed upon them. I can't say how proud I am of these teachers, and I would ask all members to recognize these wonderful Albertans.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

2:40 Petroleum Industry

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks to our petroleum industry Canada is now the third largest natural gas producer and the seventh largest crude oil producer in the world. Canada is a net exporter of petroleum resources, and Canada has reported 178 billion barrels of proven oil reserves in 2005, second only to Saudi Arabia. The bulk of these reserves are oil sand deposits in Alberta, the largest deposit in the world.

Our oil and gas industry provides 56 per cent of Canada's trade surplus and a share of 12.6 per cent of Canada's total exports. Our oil and gas industry employs almost half a million people and contributed $18 billion in royalties and taxes in 2004. Mr. Speaker, Alberta contributes a very large percentage of this Canadian economy. All in all, Alberta's petroleum industry contributes 23.4 per cent of our GDP. By any standard Alberta, and Canada for that matter, is a world energy leader. We need to celebrate and capitalize on this success.

Mr. Speaker, the whole world knows about the importance of OPEC, and I quote an official document from the OPEC organization:

The OPEC . . . [members] co-ordinate their oil production policies in order to help stabilize the oil market and to help oil producers achieve a reasonable rate of return on their investments. This policy is also designed to ensure that oil consumers continue to receive stable supplies of oil.

What it means is that they use supply management for the benefit of the people. The actions of these smaller nations affect the whole world economy. They use their petroleum supply as leverage for economic relations and trade negotiations in the world.

Mr. Speaker, thinking outside the box, I venture an idea that the governments of Canada and Alberta, as a net exporter of petroleum resources, should explore the possibility of joining OPEC. As a developed nation, Canada and Alberta and our petroleum industry could share our expertise and reap benefits from the relationship.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Women's Global Charter for Humanity

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. From May 1 to May 7 the Canadian Women's March Committee celebrated a young woman named Tonika Morgan, who carried the Global Charter for Humanity from Vancouver to Quebec City. The Women's Global Charter for Humanity is a proposal to build a world where exploitation, oppression, intolerance, and exclusion no longer exist and where integrity, diversity, and the rights and freedoms of all are respected. These women hope to build a world based on five core values: equality, freedom, solidarity, justice, and peace.

Tonika, like myself and many women in Alberta, has a commitment to the improved status of women. Far too many women have lived the nightmare of poverty and homelessness. Women want and need a place as leaders and decision-makers.

The passing of the Global Charter for Humanity through our province is an opportunity for all Albertans to mobilize against poverty and violence. It is time for this government to fully commit toward universal equality for all residents of Alberta. We need to provide adequate resources for women such as Tonika to bring about positive change in our society. Only when women are treated as complete equals to their male counterparts, face no exclusion from the workforce, and suffer no oppression or exploitation from society will our society succeed to its fullest potential.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Student Leadership Conference

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday students from all over our great province gathered in Olds for their three-day 16th annual Alberta Provincial Student Leadership Conference. The goals of the conference are to provide a forum for students to reflect and learn from the past, to connect with student leaders and help them become more aware of what's happening in our world today, and to motivate participants to return to their home schools and communities to make a positive difference now and for the future.

The conference was kicked off by our own Minister of Community Development, followed by one of the best productions of Grease that I have ever seen, which was performed by the Olds high school drama class and a band made up of the Olds high school students. They received a well-deserved standing ovation. The next two days promise to be fun-filled, exciting, and also a tremendous learning experience. The title of the conference, Back to the Future: Celebrating and Connecting Centennials, is certainly an appropriate theme for this year's conference, as both the town of Olds and the province of Alberta are celebrating their centennials this year.

As I pointed out last night, Alberta's first century belongs to the pioneers, our grandparents, our parents, and us. The next century belongs to our students, their children, and their grandchildren, who will be the leaders of tomorrow. If the students at this year's conference are any indication of the quality of leaders who will take our province into the next century, then our future is certainly in good hands. I know that we all wish them the greatest success in this year's conference.

Thank you.

Discovery of Oil in Turner Valley

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an important anniversary in Alberta's history. On May 14, 1914, the landscape of Alberta was forever altered. It was on this day 91 years ago that Alberta's first commercially viable oil well struck pay dirt.

After several failed wells Archibald Wayne Dingman and his company, Calgary Petroleum Products, struck oil, sending a geyser of light-grade crude 60 feet into the air. When this well, Dingman No. 1, blew for the first time 91 years ago, it launched Alberta's first major oil boom and transformed a small farm town 25 miles south of Calgary into the economic hub of this province. It was reported at the time that within two hours of the strike 200 automobiles were headed toward Turner Valley. Twelve years later Royalite No. 4, another new well located in Turner Valley, was producing more oil than all of the 4,500 wells located in Ontario together.

The discovery of oil gave birth to the community of Turner Valley. Evolving from a small group of houses to a thriving community, the town of Turner Valley was officially incorporated in 1930.

Mr. Speaker, while all Albertans celebrate our province's centennial this year, the citizens of Turner Valley are celebrating their 75th anniversary. Anniversary celebrations are being held on June 4 in conjunction with the town's Discovery Days, and I would invite all members to come to Turner Valley to discover its rich history and the natural beauty that Turner Valley has to offer.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to represent the people of Turner Valley and to acknowledge their important contribution to the history of this province and to the development of our economy. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Edmonton City Centre Airport

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will discuss a grave concern to the people, most particularly the business and government community, of southern Alberta. The date of the closure of the municipal airport to traffic from the south is fast approaching. Closed to aircrafts carrying more than 10 paying seats, I find this most peculiar as Edmonton is the capital of this province. In fact, it is discriminatory when other areas of this province can continue to use our capital city's airport.

The southern business community in addition to the personnel of health regions, education and advanced education, research stations, and municipally elected leaders of their communities will be placed at a complete disadvantage to being able to conduct business with their government due to the lack of convenience and timeliness.

The business airline industry is going through dramatic change. City airports are for destination traffic. Commuter airlines are proliferating and are very successful. People come for meetings and leave immediately afterward. Time is money, and having high-salaried administrators cooling their heels in lineups is not the way business is done any more. Just this morning I read in the paper of smaller jets for four to five people being designed for this very type of air travel.

Relocating businesses or new businesses looking to hire first look for easy access for their executives, good schools for their children, and quality of life. I can't understand why such an advantage would be lost. Most North American cities would love to have the airport that our capital city has. Denver, Colorado, has four small airports to choose from. All, I may add, are in the city proper.

People cut off from the south will certainly drive because it's quicker, so I fail to see how, if the objective is to make the International more viable, this will help. I can't see that Calgary will not always be the hub for this province as had been understood from the start.

Thank you.

head: Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I stand in the House to present a petition signed by 306 Albertans who urge the government of Alberta to introduce legislation that allows parents the authority to place drug-addicted children into mandatory drug treatment and to fund urgently required youth drug treatment centres.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to present a petition of 101 good Albertans from the fine Alberta communities of Devon, Duffield, Wabamun, Camrose, Sherwood Park, and Alberta's summer festival city of Edmonton, which reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: 2:50 Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

Mr. Stevens: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of tradition that a miscellaneous statutes amendment act relates only to matters which are agreed to by all parties represented in the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 42 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

Mr. Graydon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the appropriate number of copies of responses to questions raised during the Gaming estimates on May 4, 2005. These responses have already been sent to the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, and the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition I'd like to table an e-mail from the auditor of Applewood Park Community Association, which does state, "The name of the Vietnamese group that we got the Wild Rose grant for was: The Calgary Vietnamese Caoadaist Cultural Society."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have an e-mail I'd like to table with appropriate copies from southern Alberta, urging an inquiry into the child welfare system due to the "serious lack of resources and lack of support for child welfare workers to practice competently in a very demanding and challenging job."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of tablings today. The first consists of several e-mails from distressed parents whose children attend elementary, junior, and senior high schools in the Calgary-Varsity constituency. Norma Armstrong states that she finds it "hard to believe that in a province as 'wealthy' as Alberta . . . we are still losing programs that enhance our children's education." Other authors, including Jane Lee, Louise Ladouceur, Karin Kaarsoo, Aidan Hollis, Tina Wiley, and Peter and Eleonore Aukes, similarly outline their concerns regarding the elimination of the Simon Fraser junior high school band program.

My second tabling is a news release from the Canadian Association of Journalists. CAJ president, Paul Schneiderei in presenting the code . . .

The Speaker: How about just tabling it?

Mr. Chase: Am I not allowed to express the contents?

The Speaker: No.

Mr. Chase: Okay. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for that direction.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to table five copies each of six letters dealing with good Albertans speaking to the deskilling of the workplace apprenticeship ratios and foreign replacement workers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Mar: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the requisite number of copies of a letter dated May 16, 2005, to the Auditor General, requesting a review regarding Wild Rose Foundation pursuant to section 29 of the Auditor General Act, sir.

Thank you.

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, just for clarification. A short description is okay, but not a long one, and usually we're dealing with official documents rather than just correspondence from one to the other.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much for the clarification.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish today to table the required five copies of a document prepared by the Elder Advocates of Alberta Society, in which they outline the rights of vulnerable persons in care and give specific definitions of what and how that care should be delivered. I trust that those who will be setting new standards will give this document careful consideration.

Thank you.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Cardinal, Minister of Human Resources and Employment, College of Chiropractors of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the year ended June 30, 2004.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Written Questions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given on Thursday, May 12, I move that written questions appearing on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

[Motion carried]

head: Motions for Returns

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice again having been given on Thursday, May 12, I will now move that motions for returns appearing on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places.

[Motion carried]

head: Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

The Speaker: Before I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, just a bit of an update to the hon. members. I received a number of notes from hon. members saying: "Whoa, what's happened? There's been some renovation here on the Speaker's dais." There has been, and it's in preparation and anticipation of the presence of Her Majesty the Queen here next Tuesday. This is temporary. But if you walk by at any time thinking that it is the same as the way it was before, you will run into a wall. So, please, be careful.

Bill 204
Pharmacy and Drug (Methamphetamine Limiting)
Amendment Act, 2005

[Debated adjourned May 9: Mr. Cao speaking]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned before, I applaud the Alberta College of Pharmacists for taking the initiative to voluntarily put the products containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine behind the counter, knowing full well that they might lose some business. It shows a lot of integrity in the profession to do this.

Frankly, I'm embarrassed that we haven't acted on this sooner. We need to move on Bill 204 quickly to ensure that meth makers aren't just moving the business out of the pharmacies and into the corner stores. By making products containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine schedule 2 drugs, it would take those products and put them behind the counter of pharmacies only. This will ensure that the meth makers will have a lot tougher time purchasing the main precursor than they have today.

On the occasions that I have had to purchase a medication over the counter, the pharmacist is always asking questions to ensure that I am purchasing the correct products for my ailment. I have also purchased cold medication at convenience stores, not 100 per cent sure if it is exactly what I needed. I certainly never considered asking the clerk at the convenience store for advice. When your job is to dispense medication, it is expected that you are going to be knowledgeable on the proper usage and effects of those medications. I don't think that we can expect the same from employees at the convenience store, nor should we.

This bill is also going to help law enforcement activities. Pharmacists are much more likely than a clerk at a convenience store to take note of a large, bulk purchase of products containing ephedrine or pseudoephedrine and notify the authorities. A cynical person might suggest that all we are doing is forcing meth producers to purchase the precursor in another province or through mail orders, and because of this, the amount of meth on our streets will not be reduced.

While, obviously, I would like to see all production of crystal meth stopped, I know that this bill isn't a silver bullet, but a lot of this comes down to simple supply-and-demand economics. By forcing meth makers to look elsewhere for the precursor, the precursor will inevitably be more expensive due to transportation and shipping costs. This increased input cost should lead to higher prices on the street, and it might also cause some producers to quit making meth. After all, some of the reason why crystal meth is so prevalent in Alberta is that it is relatively inexpensive to produce and the precursors are easily obtainable.

If we pass Bill 204 and make it harder for the producers, some might quit making it, and the lack of supply generally drives prices up. The reason why crystal meth's use is so widespread in Alberta is that it is inexpensive to buy and so readily available. If it were more expensive and harder to find, perhaps we could stop some of our children from experimenting and inevitably becoming addicted.

Not to dwell on the economic impacts, but crystal meth users need to pay for their habit somehow, and, as many of us have seen in our communities, break-in and theft charges are on the rise. If we can reduce the number of people who are addicted to crystal meth, logically we can reduce the associated crime costs.

So I urge all members to support Bill 204.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad to get the opportunity to speak in second reading to Bill 204, the Pharmacy and Drug (Methamphetamine Limiting) Amendment Act, 2005. It's very interesting to see the level of concern in this Legislative Assembly in this sitting alone for the devastation that is being wrought in our communities and particularly upon and among our youth with crystal meth addiction.

I am particularly concerned about how this is playing out in the rural areas where there are less resources to identify and assist youth that are in trouble with this, less resources for the family, perhaps less awareness of what's going on. But this is not an issue or a problem that just affects the rural areas. It affects everywhere in Alberta. It's not just youth, but it is primarily youth. Why? Well, because of the cost. It's cheap. It's a cheap high, and it is increasingly readily available. I'm pleased to see the understanding, the acknowledgement of a serious problem for our youth.

Where my issue comes in is the way this government seems to want to deal with things. They tend, if I look back over my years in the Assembly, to want to do something that shows that they're doing something, but I often have to go back and really look to see if what the bill is proposing addresses the problem. Does it get at the root of the problem, or does it cut a little piece off the side and isn't incredibly effective overall?

I think what's being proposed with this bill in that any drugs that contain ephedrine or pseudoephedrine, which is the active ingredient that is then used in the manufacture of crystal meth – if you can cut off the supply of that, cut off the access to that ingredient, this will diminish the amount that is being produced. Well, possibly, but not for long.

When I look at the areas in the United States that have enacted similar legislation, yeah, they have seen a drop in the number of meth labs that they have been busting, but they've only been able to track this over a period of about a year to 18 months. Again, I will wait to see the actual evidence so that we could make a decision based on evidence instead of on what we think might happen, but I suspect that what we will see is that there is a downturn in the production of crystal meth in the short term in those locations as people who are cooking or making meth search for an alternative way to get the active ingredients, but in the long run it is doing nothing to address the demand for it.

As long as that demand is there for that cheap high, that universe-altering drug, there will be people who will be happy to continue to make it in whatever form and with whatever junk is in it to be able to sell it to people and make money. So until we address the demand for this drug, we're going to continue to have problems with it.

The biggest issue is: you can cook it yourself. Anybody in here could. I know well that nobody in here would, but they could. It's very easy to make. The recipes are all on the Internet. The ingredients for it are readily available without going to any kind of great lengths to acquire them. Having the drugs go behind the counter I think might slow it down, but I suspect that what we will see are thefts of larger shipments of it now or swarms of people going in and, you know, saying, "It's cold season, and everybody here's got a cold," and just buy up 30 boxes that way.

It's addressing a small part of this, but it's not addressing why we have such a demand for this. It does nothing to reduce that demand. It does nothing to address activities for youth to get involved with. I see that in the cities. You know, if you don't have money and your family is not willing to go and ask for a reduction in fees or a waiver of fees, you may not have anything to do as a youth.

I understand what a privileged upbringing I had, where I could pick whatever activity I wanted to be involved in, and my parents had enough money that they could let me participate in that. I think I got to do two things, and so did my brother. We could pick whatever those two activities were, and off we went and did them. There were volunteer opportunities we were encouraged to participate in. Bus passes were given to us. Lots of things were done to facilitate our being involved in that. We were always allowed and encouraged to go to classes.

But there are a lot of youth today that don't have anything to do, and that's why they hang out. They have nothing to do. There is no activity for them to get involved with in a way that is readily accessible and easy to get at and doesn't cost them too much money. So they hang out, as youth have hung out for centuries when they've got nothing else to do.

If they had a basketball and a hoop and a bit of concrete, they'd tend to get involved in a pickup basketball game. If they had a baseball bat and a couple of mitts and a ball and a field, they could get out in the field and play baseball. Most people would rather be engaged in something and do something. But if we don't allow them those opportunities, they're not going to be able to take advantage of that, and they've got nothing else to distract them away from it. You end up with boredom and apathy, and you've got the perfect mix for drug use right there.

The second thing that's not addressed in this bill is any kind of treatment, and that's the second way to reduce demand. Once you've got somebody addicted to crystal meth, they are driven, absolutely driven, to the exclusion of all other things, including sleep and food, to get another fix, to get another high. So by reducing their addiction or eliminating their addiction with treatment, you reduce that demand. I think that's much more effective with those two approaches than trying to address a bit more of the supply side of it.

I keep seeing this government make those choices. I notice that my colleague talked about: why is it always the pharmacist who has to police the industry? Again, that's exactly what's happening here. The government takes no responsibility for this. They're not assisting in any way. They haven't determined a fee structure that will be used to compensate pharmacists. The pharmacists are just directed that they now have to move their product off the shelf, build shelves somewhere else, rearrange their store to be able to accommodate the ephedrine-based cold medications. They have to cope with all of that cost. They don't get any reimbursement for that or any fee structure put in place, and they now have to police it.

Well, you heard the pharmacist in the Liberal caucus say that, yes, he was pretty much willing to go there and do that because he believed in it, but he does note that he's not paid for that. So once again we have the government downloading the responsibility onto someone else totally disconnected and to whom it costs money to put this in place.

The final issue that I want to talk about is a sunset clause. I think that if this effort and other efforts like I've described of reducing the demand are successful, we should be able to return to a point where it's not necessary to be doing this and it's not necessary to be requiring the pharmacist to be doing this. So I would like to see a sunset clause built into this act, whether that anticipates a three-year change, were it possible to do that, or possibly five. I would prefer to see a review of the legislation and the need for it three years down the road.

In principle, I'm supportive of what's being recommended and being proposed in this bill, but once again I just see the government, first of all, not making decisions based on evidence, not taking an overall plan of management to attack this. It's another piecemeal bit that's being tacked on the side of something. We don't know how it fits into the whole. It doesn't include any kind of treatment. It doesn't deal with the demand side of things. It doesn't do anything to address activities for youth and, if it passes, will now be locked in forever. So I think it needs the sunset clause added to it. Additionally, it totally downloads the responsibility for the entire initiative onto a third-party sector, who doesn't even get compensated for it.

So nice idea, but there are a number of flaws and a number of other pieces missing from a total plan and approach to addictions. This government has a problem with addictions, whether it be alcohol addictions, drug addictions, or gambling addictions. I would prefer to see an approach that had a better management plan to it than this constant piecemeal. Again, I think this is another example of the government in some ways having too much money because they can sort of keep coming up with these ideas without really having to implement them themselves.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We all know that methamphetamine is a powerfully addictive stimulant that dramatically affects the central nervous system, and we also know that it is prepared in secretive laboratories using ephedrine or pseudoephedrine, which are contained in over-the-counter cold medications amongst many other products. Now, these two factors combine to make methamphetamine, a drug with high potential for widespread abuse.

Meth is a white, odourless, bitter-tasting crystalline powder that easily dissolves in water and alcohol. It increases activity, decreases appetite. A general sense of well-being and the effects of meth can last six to eight hours or much longer, but after the initial rush there is typically a state of high agitation in some individuals that often leads to extremely violent behaviour.

Now, whether we call meth by one of its names – speed, meth, chalk, or in its smoked form, ice, crystal, crank, or glass – whatever the case, Mr. Speaker, whatever we call it, the harms that hit those associated with the use and production of crystal meth destroy families, leave individuals and communities and others in desperate situations.

Bill 204 is an important part of the overall approach in that it makes products containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine less readily available to those individuals looking to purchase them for the illegal manufacture of methamphetamine. There is no comprehensive research data available yet on methamphetamine use, abuse, and dependence in Alberta, but the proportion of AADAC clients, for instance, reporting using amphetamines and stimulants in 2003 was charted at 11.9 per cent. The year before, in 2002, AADAC's Alberta youth experience survey found that 5.3 per cent of Alberta youth in grades 7 to 12 had tried club drugs, including ecstasy and crystal meth, at least once in the previous year. In contrast – and this is worthy of note – 56.3 per cent of youth had abused alcohol, and 27.6 had used cannabis.

Now, Bill 204 gives Alberta an opportunity to deal with the diversion of methamphetamine precursor drugs that are found in some over-the-counter cold remedies. In other words, if we take away the ingredients of this lethal concoction, we can remove one of the avenues that this drug finds its way to Albertans. In the case of crystal meth the harms associated with its use and production can potentially be reduced. Bill 204 is not offering a simple answer to these problems. Bill 204 is providing additional momentum to ease the choke hold that this horrific drug has on so many of our youth and older folks.

I am told that methamphetamine use is on the rise in various parts of Alberta, where it is said to be taking over from cocaine as the third most common drug abuse after alcohol and cannabis. There seem to be a number of factors that are driving this change. First of all, it became widely available because it's made from substances that are openly purchased, as we've discussed; secondly, it's much cheaper than cocaine, which must be smuggled into Canada; and thirdly, the effects are very similar to those of cocaine, but they do last longer. However, this drug has high liability for addiction and very serious physical harm. Lastly, the availability of crystal meth has increased the drug's popularity because smoking it gives the quick effects of injected meth without the inconvenience and dangers of intravenous use.

Mr. Speaker, trends in illicit drug use show a generational cycle of increase and decline in popularity, and meth is one example of this. It was popular as a recreational drug in the '60s and '70s, fell out of favour in the '80s, and re-emerged in the '90s.

The arrival of a new threat to the health and well-being of Albertans is always a great concern to AADAC, and at the same time we know that meth is not now, nor is it likely to be, the biggest addiction threat to face Albertans. I'd argue that alcohol has and will continue to have this dubious distinction.

Meth is not a new drug. This is its third wave of popularity in North America, and each wave has faded with the assistance of public education and legislation. There is no question that in addition to being highly addictive, this drug is physically harmful to its abusers. The fact that it's readily available and relatively inexpensive makes meth appealing to young people who are willing to experiment and may partially account for its popularity.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that there's no single simple solution to putting an end to illicit drug use. We all share a common concern for the harm meth and other drugs cause in our communities, and we each have something to contribute in reducing those harms. We have to work together to form strategies.

The problems linked with substance abuse, including meth, affect all of us directly, or indirectly at least, and the challenge, then, is in identifying effective actions to prevent the harms associated with the use and production of meth. How do we do this? Well, one part of the overall approach is to reduce the supply through enforcement and regulation such as restricting access to precursors used in making methamphetamine, as Bill 204 suggests.

However, determining what needs to be in place in our society to prevent drug use and abuse overall is much more complex, and it requires a collaborative approach. AADAC has a particular contribution to make in communities across the province; that is, their knowledge and expertise and the best practices to prevent and treat addictions as well as the range of services they provide.

The problems related to drug and alcohol use are wide-ranging in scope, complex in nature, and costly in personal and economic terms to Albertans. I know that we can succeed with the involvement of partners in the community, including individuals, municipal leaders, government and nongovernment agencies, law enforcement, educational and health professionals, and others. Momentum is obviously growing across this province as people work together to tackle these and other drug issues in an effort to build safer communities where we can raise healthier children.

It's worthy of note that drug use and abuse patterns continually evolve, and even as we conquer meth, new designer drugs will emerge or old drugs will regain popularity. So we need to maintain the momentum we are seeing now and apply what we're learning from this experience to prevent the harmful consequences of the next drug trend.

Addiction is complex and difficult, but Bill 204 will give it much-needed support. We need to extend the reach of the existing services we offer and provide and invest where the likelihood of success is the greatest.

AADAC continues to offer a comprehensive range of substance abuse treatment facilities and services for meth users and their families, but meth and old and new drugs remind us that there is an inexhaustible supply of these addictive substances. So we need to continue to prevent and treat addiction. We have to acknowledge that all aspects of drug use and abuse maintain collaboration and a balanced, informed response no matter what the specific drug of concern is. Bill 204 will undoubtedly help us achieve these goals.

I encourage our hon. colleagues to join me in supporting the author of this bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and participate in the debate on Bill 204 this afternoon. I would like to thank the hon. Member for West Yellowhead for bringing this forward.

Many people have expressed many different views on this bill and on this issue of crystal meth and crystal meth addiction, but any step in the right direction is a step that everyone should endorse. I would urge all hon. members of this Assembly to give this bill very careful consideration. Hopefully, they will support this legislation, and it will be implemented immediately. Sometimes in the past we have seen private members' bills in this Assembly that have received favourable treatment, and they have yet to become law. So, hopefully, this bill will come into force as soon as possible.

Is it needed? Yes, it certainly is. Is it going to be cumbersome for some people, particularly some merchants? Yes, it will be, but it is necessary. It is absolutely necessary. When we look at the whole view of crystal meth and the problems that it has created, I think back to a documentary I saw on the CBC. There are many small towns in Alberta that are affected by this very negatively.

Rev. Abbott: Well, you know that's got to be in Alberta if it's on the CBC. That's a powerhouse station right there.

Mr. MacDonald: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar is saying that the CBC is a powerhouse station. Certainly, there is a role in our society for public broadcasting, and I hope that the CBC continues to provide excellent programming and excellent documentaries like the one on crystal meth and how it's affected communities like Drayton Valley, Hinton, Edson.

It's a problem in the oil patch. It's a problem as far as occupational health and safety view it in the oil patch. This is becoming a significant problem in injury rates, whether it is on construction sites or whether it is oil field truck drivers that are working 20 and 24 hours straight and using crystal meth as a stimulant. It might work for them for one shift, but certainly this is a very dangerous practice. This bill will help that.

We look here in the city. Yesterday I had the privilege, Mr. Speaker, of attending the Greater Edmonton Alliance initial assembly. There were many speakers, and they spoke on many issues, but the first speaker spoke about the problems around drug addiction and crystal meth specifically. It's a problem in both rural and urban areas. It's a problem in the workplace. It's a problem in junior highs. It's a problem in high schools.

When we look at this bill, Mr. Speaker, why I would say that it is a good first step is that we have to look at exactly where we are going now as a province. Through all this prosperity and the fast pace of our lives, sometimes we may be forgetting just how much we have changed. I was sitting listening to the speaker yesterday at the Greater Edmonton Alliance talk about the problems with crystal meth and how crystal meth is affecting junior high students.

We are looking in this city at adopting a public policy where the larger the junior high, the better it is. One of my hon. colleagues said to me earlier in discussion on this matter: well, the larger the junior high, the easier it makes for the drug dealers because there are fewer stops to be made and more customers. Unfortunately, that is true. In smaller schools administration and staff can keep an eye on things a lot better than at a junior high where there are 600 or 700 students. That size of student body can become a problem.

We look not only at that, but we look at, you know, the growth in VLTs in this province, and we see the growth in the number of instant loan places and cheque cashing places. On the way to work this morning, Mr. Speaker, I saw another one, almost like it sprang up overnight. Is this progress? Is this progress whenever we look at everything and we look at the fast pace of our lives? Perhaps we're not noticing some of the negative social conditions, I might call them. One of them is crystal meth and our unfortunate group that quickly becomes addicted, and there's almost no hope.

Hopefully, this bill will reduce access. We can increase hope by increasing the number of facilities we're going to set aside for drug treatment and rehab and also counselling. Hopefully, we are going to be able to provide counselling for those who become addicted. Take, for instance, a program like the DARE program. This hon. member would not for one minute criticize this government if they were to take money and ensure that every junior high student or every student in grades 5/6, before they even enter junior high, had access to a DARE program so that they could know first-hand the chronic problems, which have been outlined by previous speakers, that happen as a result of crystal meth addiction.

We can do a lot more than this bill. This bill is a first step. Certainly, it follows in line with what the hon. Member for Red Deer-North did earlier in this session, but let's look at some education as well. Let's fund the DARE program so that every child in this province, before they enter junior high, knows full well the consequences of this horrible, addictive drug. I'm confident that if that were to happen, we would be hearing a lot less about gangs that form in junior high and then, as they get older, have confrontations in places like Groat Road. There are teenage parties that wind up in shootouts. There is youth violence that almost seems to be – well, it is out of control. Not almost; it is out of control. These are the first warning signs that perhaps we're not paying as much attention to as we should.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank this hon. member for bringing this forward. I would be very pleased to offer my support to this legislative initiative, this private member's bill, but there's a lot more to be done. I think if we work collectively, we can have a better province. We will be watching the news and there will be a lot less crime on there and a lot more stories about Alberta such as this: not many hon. members in this Assembly would know that the under-18 Alberta men's team won the Canadian national handball championships yesterday evening at the University of Alberta gym. That's a story we need to see on the news, not the shootouts up on Groat Road.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to be able to stand and speak to a bill that is looking to make our communities safer places to live, and I commend the member for West Yellowhead for bringing this piece of legislation forward. As a former chair of AADAC I am especially supportive of initiatives that reduce or, indeed, eliminate chemical addictions, especially amongst our youth. Although we have made some great strides forward in regard to crime and drug addiction in this province, we have not moved forward quickly enough to address all problems as they have emerged.

One such problem is that of methamphetamine use. I would like to thank the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek in her past role as Solicitor General for hosting the Alberta workshop on methamphetamine back in September of 2004. This workshop did an exceptional job of bringing much-needed attention to methamphetamine use in Alberta and of drawing our attention to the fact that these drugs are dangerous to use and dangerous to manufacture.

Drugs and crime have been and are often associated with big cities. We often have a false sense of security that our rural communities are immune to drugs. Some feel that the only drug we have to worry about is alcohol. While alcohol abuse can be devastating to individuals and their families, the problems that accompany drugs like crystal meth are far worse. It is not an uncommon occurrence for our local papers to be reporting on drug seizures and crime relating to those trying to get money to buy drugs or for those individuals who are high on methamphetamine to be committing random acts of violence.

Alberta is the best place in the world to live, work, and raise a family, but we need to be vigilant to make sure that this remains the case. We cannot let drugs engulf the lives of our neighbours or even our children or other youth. Crystal meth is a growing concern, and we need to aggressively address this issue before it gets any worse.

I am pleased that Bill 202, introduced by the Member for Red Deer-North, and this bill are taking steps forward to help combat drug addiction in this province. Moving products containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine into pharmacies and behind the counter is an excellent idea, and restricting access to these drugs to just pharmacies will help twofold. First, pharmacists are much better suited to monitor the distribution of drugs and have a much better grasp of noticing when a person might be purchasing more drugs than an average person should be. They have the training to be able to raise a red flag when an irregular pattern of purchases begins to take place at the pharmacy that they work at. While most Albertans are willing to try and help fight against crime, the employees at most nonpharmacy retail outlets most likely don't have the training to be able to spot potential purchasing patterns that indicate that an individual or a group of individuals are trying to cover up mass purchases of precursor drugs for the production of crystal meth or a variety of other methamphetamines.

The second advantage is in regard to the health care of Albertans. Bill 204 creates more opportunities for Albertans to interact with their pharmacists. Only positive results will occur through this increased interaction. Methamphetamine abuse is a growing problem in communities across this province and all of Canada. I'm glad to see that it's Alberta taking the lead in this country to help stem the production of meth.

We need the federal government and other provinces to move forward with more consistent legislation in regard to the retail sales of precursor drugs. I hope that this bill and subsequent debate will urge our other partners in Confederation to also move forward with similar types of legislation to help stem the manufacturing, distribution, and use of methamphetamine in our communities.

Bill 204 is a good first step in reducing the prevalence of methamphetamine. There is more that can be done, and as members of this Legislature and members of our communities we should examine options that will help to create a more comprehensive plan to reduce the production and use of meth in Alberta.

I will be supporting the second reading of Bill 204 and urge my fellow members to do the same. I look forward to hearing and possibly debating any amendments during Committee of the Whole. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to speak to Bill 204, Pharmacy and Drug (Methamphetamine Limiting) Amendment Act, 2005. The whole purpose of this is basically to ban the sale of products, often cold medicines, which are sold anywhere besides behind the counter in a pharmacy and are part of the producing of methamphetamine. Behind the counter, I guess, it's called a schedule 2 drug. This whole idea of this limiting act came from Oklahoma, where they had, I guess, a successful opportunity to reduce the sale and limit the number of meth labs that are continuing to pop up there.

The drugs that we're talking about here are simple ones, such as cold and sinus, children's allergies, children's cold pieces, Claritin for allergies; you know, the real simple things that are found on everyday shelves. Now, some people might in fact go to the pharmacy or their local Safeway or a Superstore whenever they're in need of trying to pick up a simple piece like this, and all of a sudden they're not able to do it because of the fact that this bill would prohibit there being a convenience in purchasing it. I can see that the reason for trying to limit the convenience is to deter people from even being able to come up with this concoction which is known as meth or crystal meth. I think it does have some merit.

One of the things that we could put into place, which hon. members have mentioned, is better education. We have a program out there, which is DARE, the drug resistance education piece, which is normally done at the elementary level, but because of the limited amount of officers and civilians trained to be able to administer this program – there are a lot of kids that could in fact benefit from that program of DARE. I think it's sad that more schools aren't able to have the officers in place. There are, I know, numbers on the waiting list to be able to have that, but they're not able to, again, maybe because of funding or it's not enough officers to be able to put this into practice.

Certainly, some of the schools in my community or in the inner city, which is predominantly where you'd find some of the drugs or these seedy characters operating, would the beneficiaries of this. It's often where you find the people who are in fact on the street selling themselves to take up and buy this drug. So it would only make sense that you would have some of these programs right in the heart of where these are being sold and are being recognized as some of the worse cases on the street.

If we talk about why this has come into effect, I think of Bill 202, Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Act. It started off to be a great bill, and when it was passed, it was watered down profusely. In fact, I think it missed its mark. I had the opportunity to be able to hold a forum involving some 250 kids, and I did put the question: would you be in favour of the treatment centre almost essentially locking you up? I did take a secret vote, and out of the 100 per cent that did vote, 90 per cent were in favour of it. So I'm not sure why this government was scared to put a tougher law in to seek treatment for these kids. There was only 10 per cent that were not favour of it.

Again, it comes out with good bills, but we get a little bit scared because we have to get tough. Well, I think what people elect governments and their legislators to do is to be tough. We're talking about a tough bill. We're talking about a tough drug. That's that methamphetamine, crystal meth. It's destroying families, it's destroying lives, and it's destroying communities, yet we're coming in with weak legislation. That's not what people want. They're wanting tough legislation against tough drugs. If we're going to talk about being leaders, then we've got to step up and do the right thing.

This, again, is a first step, but I don't think it's strong enough because even Bill 202 was weak. We need to have more influence within the schools with regard to education. We have pilot projects with training in walking around the drug dogs in the schools. That, again, is a first step, to be able to put the presence there of the police and the deterrent for bringing this drug into the schools. But it needs to be expanded, not only just on pilot projects but to the community schools out there, the high schools and the junior highs. Perhaps we'd even go that far.

I'm hoping to God it hasn't even gone to the elementary level, but again – you know what? – you can't take anything for granted nowadays, as we're seeing. We could expand that to the junior high level and, certainly, right within the rural communities as well, where some of these methamphetamine or meth labs are able to set up undetected amongst their neighbours in the community because of the lack of policing out there. Now, we have in fact put out more police officers to be able to handle the concerns with regard to the drug labs and/or the grow ops, and I commend the government for doing it.

Unfortunately, it was on a reactive basis and not on a proactive basis. The community right now has said more than once that we need proactive government. We have shootings going on in communities, and they're drug related. We have murders going on, and they're drug related. We have children going to school, and we have them coming back different because of that one time they were talked into taking one of these drugs. They have parties. They have these all-night raves where they do ecstasy and meth. I mean, it's all over the place, and some communities don't want to admit, in fact, that it's in their backyard because heaven forbid: it doesn't happen in ours. But you know what? That's being naive, and that's the pitfalls of parenthood or that even communities get into because they don't want to admit that this sort of thing would happen in their community. They're in denial is what they're in.

I think that if we all realize, in fact, that it's everywhere and no one is immune to it – it doesn't matter what socioeconomic status you come from, everyone has the opportunity to be involved. It's critical that we recognize that and make sure that the laws are place and the education as well as the police officers and the detectives, whatever, the supports to be able to deal with it.

We need more treatment centres to deal with the addictiveness that we have out there. We talked about the addictiveness being gambling. We talked about the addictiveness with regard to AADAC and drinking. Those addiction centres were developed years ago. In fact, I don't think some of the things that they're treating are that different, but I think it needs to be revisited as to what sort of treatment and how it's administered. Comparing 20 years ago, comparing today, we have a whole different group of individuals. There's a different mindset, and that's in fact what's come up with trying to introduce the new heroin of the day, which is now, you know, ecstasy or crack or crystal meth.

We need something that's going to be able to give these kids an advantage in the detox centres and not just a five-day stay-over which is like a Holiday Inn. We need something that's going to keep them in there. Take away the rights of freedom, if that need be, to clean these kids up. Perhaps even part of their treatment would be to go out and lecture some of the other kids as to: "You know what? I look normal like you, but in fact I was one of these kids that was enticed and fell into the pitfalls of it." Give their testimonial. Nothing is stronger than for kids to hear from one of their own peers talking about this, testimonial, what's happened to them and how it affected not only them but their potential livelihood and their family and friends. This is devastating to not just their family, their friends, relatives but to the community. As soon as one person suffers, the whole community suffers.

We talk about the piece about: it takes a whole village to educate a child. Well, this takes a whole village also to protect that child. In protecting that child, we're talking about the proper laws in place and the proper facilities in place. We need to have more money, unfortunately, and build more facilities. Maybe they'll not be within a city but on the outskirts or in the outlying areas, so they don't have the opportunity to be just locked up. They can wander that 200 acres out in the middle of nowhere and, kind of, really contemplate why they're there, get to their heads with some fresh air instead of the city smog and the drugs that are filling them.

I gave you just a little bit of insight as to why I'm concerned with the drugs and the lack of real meat and teeth with regard to some of these bills that are passing. Again, they're good, well-meaning and -intended bills, but when they get down to the voting stage, they've been watered down so much that it's unfortunate that the real intent and the real beneficiaries, the public, don't really see the whole thing of it. Compared at the beginning to where it comes out at the end, it is completely lacking where it should be then.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to add my thoughts to the discussion surrounding Bill 204, the Pharmacy and Drug (Methamphetamine Limiting) Amendment Act, 2005. I sincerely thank the hon. Member for West Yellowhead for introducing this bill, as it represents a creative approach to a growing problem in this province, especially in the area of Drayton Valley-Calmar, where crystal meth is dwarfing our future potential as a community. I would like to express my support for this idea but would also like to comment on issues that may be created by Bill 204.

Mr. Speaker, although Bill 204 seems like a simple bill, it actually evokes some interesting questions and valid concerns. In the overall context of what this bill is trying to achieve, we must look for a balance. Balance is the hallmark of any good government.

I would like to begin by discussing a trend that is occurring in this country because I believe it has implications not only for Bill 204 but also for the problem of rising health care costs and approaches to dealing with those problems.

Mr. Speaker, modern-day Canadians are more likely today than in past generations to think of themselves as partners in a collaborative health care system than as recipients of care provided by experts in a hierarchical system. They tend to view themselves as well-informed individuals shopping for the best treatments available instead of patients who must act on the opinions of others. They feel empowered to make more of their own decisions about treatment, and they base these decisions on information from various sources.

Bill 204 proposes to change drugs that contain ephedrine and pseudoephedrine from unscheduled, where Albertans are able to research the effects of the drugs and to make decisions on their own as to whether to take them, to schedule 2, where they will have to consult a pharmacist before being allowed to purchase them. The problem with putting these drugs behind the counter of pharmacies is that they become more difficult to obtain.

Now, many people will argue that this will cause an inconvenience. According to a study called The Role of Self-Care in the Treatment of Illness, approximately one-third of adults will have a sore throat, cold, or flu in any given month, and 63 per cent of those adults will initially react by using some type of self-treatment. Mr. Speaker, the form of self-help they will choose is the very type of medications that we are discussing today. It seems that Bill 204 is moving Albertans away from the trend of counting more on themselves and their ability to obtain information toward having to rely on other sources, like pharmacists, about drug options for treating minor ailments.

Mr. Speaker, I would agree that Bill 204 will make it less convenient for people to obtain these drugs. This is especially true for people who have taken the time to research their conditions and ailments and who know which medications will help them. The purpose of Bill 204, however, is not to make it less convenient for people who want to buy medication to treat a valid ailment but, rather, to make it less convenient for people who want to use the medications to produce a dangerous drug that is devastating many people in our society, increasing our crime rates, and overworking our police forces.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, what we are looking for is a balance, and I believe that Bill 204 does give us the ability to strike a balance between slowing the methamphetamine problem and providing sick people with access to the medications they need. Although Bill 204 will make it less convenient for people who have minor illnesses to obtain the medications they need, this bill may actually have a positive consequence that could outweigh this noted inconvenience.

According to studies, at the onset of a new medical condition or ailment just over half of Canadians will likely just tough it out and wait and see if it gets worse. Unfortunately, 1 in 5 will immediately run to their family doctor, and thankfully 1 in 10 will self-medicate with a self-care health product. Now, this statistic tells me that more Canadians will go to a doctor than will look to other sources of information for treating their medical problem.

The point I'm trying to make is further illustrated by the fact that of Canadians with ailments 57 per cent use a medical doctor as a source of information about their treatment options while only 37 per cent consult a pharmacist to gather information about medications. Mr. Speaker, by changing medications that are used for relieving symptoms for colds and other minor ailments from unrestricted drugs to category 2 drugs, people may begin changing their tendencies toward seeing doctors for advice to seeing pharmacists. That would be good, good for Alberta. The reason for this is because Bill 204 will cause people to interact more with their pharmacist than previously. This, in turn, may create a level of trust and appreciation toward pharmacists that previously did not exist.

Now, I personally don't think of going to a pharmacist when I'm feeling a bit down, yet pharmacists are highly trained professionals that are capable of more than simply counting and bottling pills. Mr. Speaker, the Alberta College of Pharmacists has recently put forward proposals to make their profession more prominent in the area of primary health care. As you can see, Bill 204 may indirectly help them in achieving this important goal.

Having a population that tends to research their ailments and possible treatments on their own along with a growing tendency and trust toward pharmacists can lead to decreased costs on our health care system. A visit to the family doctor is, of course, quite high when compared to a stop at the local pharmacy. Furthermore, since it's much easier to consult a pharmacist, this may cause people who usually choose the wait-and-see approach toward their ailments to see a pharmacist before the condition gets too bad. This, in turn, may also lead to reductions in long-term health care costs since pharmacists can advise these individuals to go see their doctor about ailments that do not seem major to the uninformed eye but can actually be quite serious, such as bumps that could be cancerous or internal pains that are foreign. Mr. Speaker, Bill 204 may actually lead toward a larger role for pharmacists and less costs on the health care system, especially if people are educated about the potential roles of pharmacists.

Now, while I'm on the topic of cost implications of Bill 204, I'd like to comment on the real cost of methamphetamine use in this province. Methamphetamine causes strains on the health care system because of the dangerous effects it has on the body and because of the high costs associated with addiction treatment. Methamphetamine causes strains on the police forces because of the increased crime rates due to addicts stealing to support their habits. Methamphetamine causes strains on the justice system as a larger proportion of crime inevitably relates to higher levels of prosecution and incarceration.

Mr. Speaker, I support any bill that attempts to reduce the ease of making meth and any bill that attempts to address this growing problem in our province. Earlier I mentioned how much methamphetamine production and use costs our society. By limiting the amount of methamphetamine produced in Alberta, Bill 204 will also reduce the costs of meth use on our society. These cost savings can be used to educate Albertans about the new process for obtaining these drugs or for much-needed tax cuts. By explaining the new process as well as why this measure needs to be taken, Albertans will likely be sympathetic. The slight inconvenience they might have to go through will seem insignificant in comparison to the spread of addiction that is occurring in their neighbourhoods.

Mr. Speaker, I'm gravely concerned about the growing methamphetamine problem in Drayton Valley-Calmor and in this province, and I will support any reasonable measure that is taken to help fight against it. For this reason, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting Bill 204. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to join the debate on Bill 204, the methamphetamine limiting act. I want you to know that I agree with my colleague from West Yellowhead that the use of methamphetamine, meth, is a serious problem, one that our society cannot and must not take lightly. What makes this matter even more concerning is the fact that all the necessary ingredients, including ephedrine and pseudoephedrine, are so readily available that illegal meth producers can cook up this product so easily. From a prevention standpoint I feel that Bill 204 holds much merit. It's important for us to take concrete steps to not only try to make it harder for meth labs to obtain the necessary ingredients to produce the product but to ensure that the public is aware of the existence of this potentially epidemic problem.

I'm not sure, Mr. Speaker, that at this point the public is fully cognizant of what meth really is and what it can do to a person if used in large quantities and how inexpensive it is to produce and purchase this illicit product. As a matter of fact, so little is known about the drug that there have virtually been no comprehensive studies done on meth use here in Alberta or Canada-wide. One figure that is available to us comes from the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission, or AADAC, and it reveals that in 2003 approximately 12 per cent of AADAC's clients were reported to have used stimulants.

In the United States over the past decade the problem of meth production and meth consumption has taken that nation by surprise as more states have only recently become aware of the dangers and prevalence of meth use. More alarming is the discovery of a growing use of the drug, especially among minors and youth in their early to mid-20s. An interesting aspect that many states are finding is that the problem is sometimes more prevalent in rural than urban communities. According to law enforcement authorities across the U.S. the production and the use of meth has hit the rural communities particularly hard as many of them simply lack the necessary policing resources to combat the problem. Unlike their urban counterparts these communities lack the necessary resources to raise the awareness of this increasingly concerning problem.

In order to illustrate this point, Mr. Speaker, according to U.S. news reports the crisis has become so prevalent in some counties in central Tennessee that the rural communities are not only becoming flooded with the drug itself but also with the labs used to produce it. In some cases the labs consist simply of mom-and-pop operations used by amateurs to produce the drug primarily for their personal use but sometimes also for sale and distribution. Law enforcement authorities have found labs in homes, apartments, trailers, motel rooms, vehicles, and even a chicken coop.

As a testament to how prevalent the problem is in Tennessee, the Cumberland county local jail has become so overcrowded with inmates, many of whom are held on meth-related charges, it may require a new extension, which could prevent the county from building a new high school. In the meantime, authorities are dealing with the overcrowding problem by expanding inmate spaces into the prison's gym and library. As well, it has been found that the hospitals in the county have also experienced a rise in emergency room admissions and have had to train doctors and staff members on how to handle violent meth abusers.

One of the most appalling social consequences related to meth use is what happens to the children of those individuals who succumb to the influence of this devastating drug. According to the news reports there are hundreds of cases in Tennessee where children have been taken from their parents and placed in foster care due to parental neglect. Sadly, these kids are known as meth orphans. Law enforcement officials say that many children have to be taken away simply because they were found neglected and living in deplorable living conditions because their parents were too consumed by their own addiction to care for them properly. Many of these orphans face physical, developmental, and emotional problems resulting from long-term neglect.

As you can clearly see, Mr. Speaker, the picture is pretty bleak in some parts of the U.S. Having said that, I'm not implying that the problem is or will be similar here in Alberta, but it will be if we don't address the problem of the unregulated access to these things that make up meth within the province. However, I would argue that this is what could take place if we don't start analyzing and addressing the issues associated with the use and illegal production of methamphetamine.

Aside from what Bill 204 is proposing, Mr. Speaker, I believe that we still have a long way to go in educating the general public, particularly young Albertans who are most at risk, of the potential dangers of meth abuse.

An interesting fact about meth is that many users who purchase the drug on the streets aren't even aware of what the ingredients are that are used to make the drug. In a story from Colorado a juvenile probation officer who dealt routinely with minors who use meth was very surprised to discover that most youths aren't aware that meth is made from products that use ammonia or a variety of other dangerous chemicals. In one of the instances when she asked some youths whether they would sit down and drink a bottle of Drano, most of the juveniles reacted surprised at such a question. Many were simply unaware of the fact that Drano or other products that contain ammonia are used to make the drug.

When asked what constitutes the main reasons why youth were turning to meth, she cited the lack of knowledge about the drug and its effect, the ease with which it can be produced, and the fact that it is cheaper than other illegal drugs and substances. It would appear that she is correct. According to the reports coming out of the U.S., meth is starting to compete with marijuana as the drug of choice among youth. This is particularly dangerous as meth is far more dangerous than marijuana. With this in mind we as a province and a nation need to step up our awareness strategies and efforts because if we don't address this problem now, later on, as we have seen, it may be too late.

Having said that, I believe that Bill 204 represents only one of the many strategies we can use in order to limit the illegal production and use of meth within our province. Reclassifying medicinal remedies that contain ephedrine and pseudoephedrine as schedule 2 drugs and permitting them to be sold only behind the counter in licensed pharmacies represents a step in the right direction. We could perhaps even further strengthen Bill 204 by following Montana's example and examine the possibility of limiting the sale of behind counter cold remedies that contain ephedrine and pseudoephedrine to only two packages at a time, which could further dissuade any potential misuse of the product.

While such measures may dissuade some illegal meth producers from purchasing these drugs, they will not solve the problem as a whole. The reason why I say this, Mr. Speaker, is no matter how diligent we are at making it harder for the producers to acquire these medicines in Alberta, it does not mean they can't purchase them from other jurisdictions within Canada. Our efforts to limit methamphetamine use are bound to fail unless all provinces abide by the same rules and pass similar legislation to what is being proposed in Bill 204. However, we don't want to be the number one province for this problem. We'd like to solve it here.

I believe that one of these strategies we should be looking at is collaborating with other provinces and the federal government in order to push for national legislation or policy that would in essence follow the provisions outlined in Bill 204. Only this way would we be able to genuinely challenge the meth producers and shut down their supply routes. With this in mind, Mr. Speaker, I will vote in favour of Bill 204 and look forward to further debate and development on the matter.

Thank you.

Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Mr. Pham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to move second reading of Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005.

In a nutshell, Mr. Speaker, Bill 205, if passed, will give Albertans back their dinnertime. From my door-knocking during this past election I heard from many constituents that they were generally happy with our government, but there were some small annoyances that they wanted us to correct, one of which is the telemarketing phone calls we all receive just as we are sitting down for a family dinner. I heard this complaint at many doors. Albertans are fed up with having their family time interrupted by telemarketers. In fact, all Canadians are fed up. In the December 2003 survey conducted for the federal government, 97 per cent of respondents indicated a negative response to receiving unsolicited phone calls.

Much of this frustration has been created by the telemarketers themselves. Often they call between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m., when the vast majority of Alberta families are eating or enjoying family time together. To make it even worse, telemarketers often use computer dialers which ring at both ends, on your phone and on the telemarketer's. If the customer picks up but the telemarketer doesn't, they are only greeted with silence. This can cause frustration and in some cases fear.

One evening last year I had an extremely frustrating experience with a telemarketer. Our phone rang right at our dinnertime. I answered, but no one was there. I hung up immediately, and immediately my phone rang again. Still no one was there. This happened repeatedly for the next two minutes. Finally, I called the operator and asked what was going on. She informed me that some telemarketing companies have automatic dialers that will call you back unless you listened to their message. She further informed me that I could pay a monthly fee to have all undisplayed calls blocked to my line. Blocking undisplayed calls is not the answer, nor should Albertans be subject to paying a fee to keep telemarketers from annoying them.

I know from my own experience from my door-knocking and from the survey done that Albertans are becoming quite annoyed. With 97 per cent of Canadians reacting negatively to telemarketers, some have suggested that we should make all unsolicited phone calls illegal. It is my belief that we must be fair and balanced in our own law-making. Because of that, Bill 205 will still allow companies to solicit their products over the telephone.

Bill 205 has two major components. The first is the licensing requirement. This bill will require any company wishing to market goods or services over the phone to apply for and obtain a telemarketing licence. The reasoning behind this is so that the government will first of all know who is making the phone calls and, secondly, be able to fine or refuse a licence to a company who is not following the provincial and federal rules. It would be pretty tough to fine a company for breaking the rules if you don't know who they are, where they originate, and who owns them.

The second major component is the calling hours restriction. Currently the CRTC does not regulate when telemarketers may make phone calls. If they wish to call you in the middle of the night, there's nothing other than their own good sense to stop them. Bill 205 proposes to only allow telemarketing to occur between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and again from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends. No telemarketing would be allowed on holidays. By allowing nine hours each day for telemarketing, I believe that we are striking the right balance between Albertans' right to eat their suppers in peace and a telemarketer's right to solicit potential customers.

Furthermore, Bill 205 defines telemarketing strictly as phone calls made for commercial purposes. That will automatically exempt groups that are not selling goods or services such as local Neighbourhood Watch groups, nonprofit organizations, charities, polling companies, and any other group that may not be selling goods or services.

This bill also exempts those calls coming from companies who have already established a business relationship with a customer. What that means is that if you do business or have done business in the past with a company, they can still call you. For example, if you have a Visa credit card, Visa will still be allowed to call you. If you previously had subscribed to the Calgary Sun, they would be able to call you to see if you are interested in subscribing again. But under Bill 205 those companies would have to apply for a licence and respect the calling hour restrictions if they wish to randomly take numbers out of the phone book to solicit.

As I have mentioned before, governing is all about finding the right balance. When it comes to telemarketing, we must balance the privacy and intrusion concerns of Albertans with the needs of charities, polling companies, and business. Bill 205 doesn't arbitrarily make telemarketing illegal. What it will do is give Albertans back their dinnertime and allow them to spend some family time together without the interruption of a telemarketer trying to sell them goods or services.

Some of my colleagues have expressed to me some concern that this legislation is going to be hard to enforce. I agree that there are going to be some challenges with enforcement, but does that mean that we should just forget about this legislation? No, of course it doesn't.

Telemarketing is much like the Internet; it's not restricted by geographical boundaries. Some have suggested that because of this, telemarketing might be better handled by the federal government. I don't necessarily disagree, but just as we may have some problems enforcing this legislation outside of our borders, our federal government is going to have just as tough a time enforcing their rules on companies calling from Asia or India or even the United States. I also find it doubtful that our current federal government will be able to pass meaningful telemarketing legislation before they are defeated. Furthermore, I find it hard to believe that reputable businesses will knowingly and intentionally break the laws in other jurisdictions.

In addition, the licensing requirement that we establish in Bill 205 will be much cheaper and easier to maintain than some of these do-not-call lists in other jurisdictions. When the U.S. government created their do-not-call list, their registry received 635,000 requests in their first 14 hours of operation and had registered over 64 million phone numbers by this past September. I believe that those numbers indicate two things for us here in Alberta, the first being that there is obvious support for this type of consumer protection in North America; the second is that the manpower required to set up a do-not-call list is unnecessary and wasteful. If our federal government does somehow pass national do-not-call lists, Bill 205 will not clash with that list or that legislation. It will merely enhance its protection.

People often comment that if you want to find a harder way to do something, just call the government. Well, Mr. Speaker, Bill 205 bucks that trend and is a very efficient way of dealing with a problem that has been nagging Albertans for many years.

It is also very obvious that telemarketing companies are not as effective as they could be in dealing with this problem. They are already required to maintain their own do-not-call lists, but this obviously isn't working primarily because most people aren't aware of this requirement. Instead of requesting that they be added to the do-not-call list, they just slam down the phone. Secondly, even if they're added to the telemarketer's do-not-call list, it may only be for that particular client for whom they may be calling and not for the telemarketing company as a whole. Lastly, no government agency is actively checking to ensure that the people who ask that their numbers be added to the list are actually being added. The industry had their chance to regulate themselves, and they have failed.

Albertans continue to grow frustrated with unsolicited phone calls. We must act now to give them back their dinnertime. If we pass Bill 205, we will be taking a large step in the direction to ensure that Alberta families will be able to eat their dinner in peace. I don't think that I need to give the members here a hard sell on the merits of Bill 205. If any member here today is unsure as to whether they intend on voting in favour of this bill, I have a suggestion. I suggest that you go back to your constituency this summer . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon member, the 10 minutes allocated has run out.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to respond to Bill 205, and I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose for sponsoring it. I think that most people in this House would agree that this is a useful piece of legislation, and I think that the majority in this Chamber would support it. I for one would definitely support any measure that would decrease the inconvenience that Albertans incur from telemarketers and telemarketing schemes.

Of note is that this bill is trying to make the distinction between what is a telemarketing approach and a phone call or a fax that a person would receive from a charity or a benevolent organization. I think that this is an important distinction to make because charities do rely, for the most part, on making those phone calls and sending those faxes to try to solicit support for their causes, and most of these causes are definitely worth supporting.

I think it also attempts to increase the capability of Albertans and the citizens of this province to raise concerns and approach these companies when there is a complaint. It really tries to offer them some recourse and some way out. You know, we've heard of cases where a telemarketer has been persistent in phoning and phoning again and phoning a third time, and they don't take no for an answer. I don't like to use the word harassment, but it is harassing the person on the other end, exerting pressure. They just don't get it. They don't take no for an answer. So I think it's useful to try to limit this harassment.

We are talking about telemarketing, and this bill is trying to define that. It talks about telephone calls and fax transmission, which is good because, you know, long gone are the days when it was only done by phone. Now we have even e-mail marketing, telemarketing through the Internet and by e-mail. I have received a few of those. They appear credible, and they appear to be trustworthy, but the frequency with which one is bombarded and the volume of these messages keeps increasing.

I have a certain question with regard to whether this amendment applies to calls or faxes originating from outside Alberta. I think it's a legal clarification. You know, does this law and the amendment for this law apply to the point of initiation, or origination, or the point of termination? I know this is only second reading, so maybe this is something that I might be waiting for an answer for in committee. Do we apply this law to where the call originated? So this telemarketer from Toronto who's trying to phone people in Alberta: would that apply to him? Or would it only apply to companies and agencies which are registered in this province? It says in this new amendment that "no person may engage in telemarketing unless the person is the holder of a subsisting licence." Are we talking licensing in this province, or is it Canada-wide?

I think it also was notable and commendable that the definition of telemarketing doesn't apply to campaigning for political parties or candidates. I think this is commendable. We should really add this definition in section 5 of the amendment because section 5 told us which agencies and which people and which groups and organizations were not covered by the purposes of this law and amendment, so maybe we should clarify it further and indicate that it doesn't apply to political parties and candidates. Mind you, it doesn't happen too frequently. We only have an election, be it provincial or municipal or even federal, you know, every so often, but I think that clarification needs to be made.

Having said that, the opposite would apply. I would definitely like to see collection agencies and debt-recovery companies added to the definition of telemarketing because the harassment and the pressure exerted by agencies like those is tremendous and should not be overlooked. So in that restriction as to what is telemarketing and what isn't, I would definitely like to see collection agencies and debt-recovery companies included in that definition.

The provision for which times are appropriate and acceptable and which times are not I think is an important provision. These are good guidelines. Like the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose said, it's really annoying when a person phones around supertime and you're trying to get some time with your family. You tell them that you're busy or you ask them to call again, and then the next day they call at the same time. They don't get it. So I think restricting this is a good move.

As a citizen, as a person I generally tolerate telemarketing calls, but I ask myself whether the person was polite or courteous, whether they were brief, and whether they accepted my decision. When I tell them no, it is a no, and it's a final no. Some do, and for that I am thankful. Some don't. I think many people like myself would not like pressure. They don't like to be pressured into buying something or paying for a product or a service, and some indicate that they don't like to be called again. I know that with the registry now, with the do not call or do not fax, these companies and these agencies are forced to honour that request, but some don't, Mr. Speaker.

I myself once told a particular company that I wanted my drugstore to be taken off their fax list, and after four weeks and me phoning three times they eventually removed me from their fax list. But let me tell you; I actually retaliated when I noticed that they were very slow in implementing my request. I started faxing them back junk faxes to tell them that if I am going to receive 10 faxes from your side, I'm going to send you 12. If they send 15, I send them 20. They listened eventually. But, you know, it wasted some of my time, and it wasted some of my staff's time because we get those junk faxes and we have to sift through them to see which ones are really important for the druggist or for the staff of that drugstore and which were just garbage, selling you vacations or selling you tickets to comedy shows and stuff like that.

When they remove you from the list and put you on a do-not-call or do-not-fax list, there is nothing to stop them from passing your information on to a different agency. That's what I noticed. After I stopped receiving this from this particular fax broadcaster, I started receiving similar faxes from a different broadcaster, so I think we should strengthen the regulations to prevent them from sharing the information. I think maybe we can be as bold as to say that when I say do not call and do not fax, I am telling everybody do not call or do not fax, not just this one particular agency. They stop today, and then a different agency would pick it up and start harassing me. So the request to be added or included on a do-not-call, do-not-fax list has to be honoured, and it has to be implemented with the strictest adherence to that request.

Moving on, I think that requesting the person or the organization to identify themselves and giving me the name of the person calling and what the business is and what they're trying to do and also including their phone number or fax number for follow-up is the responsible thing to do. It is not an unfair request to make. I have to have some recourse, and I have to have some exit way to sever that connection. If I say that I don't want you to phone me again and they continue, then there is a higher authority or a person higher up in that hierarchy that I can take it up with to say, "Please. Your employees don't get it." So I think it's fair and it's a commendable thing to do.

Now, I briefly commented on charities needing to solicit support from individuals and companies. I think that for the most part they are responsible and they are honourable in their conduct. Still, some are very forceful and some are very pressuring. We allow them to be exempt from the telemarketing definition. I think we should also maybe look at a minor amendment that says: while you have that access and while you have that privilege, you have to also be responsible and you have to act honourably. Maybe the exclusion should not be as generous, you know. Some charities are desperate, if you like, or they're more forceful than others, and I think people have complained that it shouldn't go like this.

With that, my point is that we generally support this bill. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Good afternoon and thank you. I'm pleased to rise and join the debate on Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005, sponsored by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose. The purpose of Bill 205 is to prevent unwanted solicitation from telemarketers.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot think of a single person who has not been interrupted in their daily routine by a salesperson offering them the latest gadget or gizmo or requesting a donation for some worthy cause. It always seems, at least at my house, that they call in the middle of the supper hour, interrupting a special family time and leaving me with a cold meal.

Now, I firmly believe that unsolicited phone calls from telemarketers are a clear invasion of privacy. A person has the right, especially in their own home, to be free from unwanted intrusions. In my view, unsolicited telemarketing is a form of trespass, and it is certainly not something that we as a society should endorse. The best feature of this bill is that it only allows telemarketing to occur during specified time periods. The restrictions in this bill prevent telemarketers from calling people's homes during the supper hour. Furthermore, telemarketers would not be allowed to solicit on general holidays. Now, Mr. Speaker, holidays and a family's dinnertime are important private times that should be free from unwanted interruptions.

This bill does not limit the ability of companies to contact customers that they already have a relationship with. For example, if you're a current subscriber to a magazine, this legislation will not prevent the magazine from calling you to inform you that your subscription is about to expire, such as the Western Standard recently did for me in my home. Now, Mr. Speaker, your right to privacy is protected because you are not receiving unsolicited calls. Most companies, when you sign up for their services, give you the option as to whether or not you wish to be contacted. If you say no, then they usually do not bother you again.

Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to see that this bill proposes to require telemarketers to acquire a licence within the province of Alberta. By having telemarketers obtain a licence, we are able to better enforce the provisions of this bill. Should a telemarketer call you unsolicited or outside of the regulated call period, they run the risk of losing the ability to operate within Alberta.

Additionally, the CRTC has some strict rules to which all telemarketers must adhere. Callers must identify themselves and their organization and display a number at which they can be contacted. Furthermore, should you ask not to be called again, then the company must comply with your request within 30 days. Each company is currently required to maintain its own do-not-call list. Now, my wife and I use that option quite often, Mr. Speaker.

If this bill is to become law, then Alberta would be able to revoke the licence of businesses not conforming to the CRTC regulations on telemarketing. This bill works to ensure that those who wish to be contacted by telemarketers are still able to be contacted over the phone. However, this bill protects Albertans' right to privacy. You have an inherent right to privacy, Mr. Speaker, and to not have unwanted intrusions into your blessed household.

Mr. Speaker, other jurisdictions such as the U.S., when considering the problem of unsolicited telemarketing, have chosen to create a do-not-call list. These lists require an individual to call and have their name and number listed on the registry. Once your number is on the list, then it is prohibited for you to be called by unsolicited telemarketers. The government of Canada has also introduced legislation that would allow the CRTC to create a national do-not-call list. Industry Canada has promised to conduct extensive public consultations on a national do-not-call list before it would come into effect. Given the experience of the U.S., it is likely that Canadians and Albertans would be extremely responsive to a reduction in unsolicited commercial calls.

Mr. Speaker, no other jurisdiction in Canada has attempted to regulate telemarketers in the manner proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose. Alberta has the opportunity to be a leader in Canada on the issue of privacy protection. Albertans have always prided themselves on their ability to live their lives free from unwanted intrusions from either the government or private interests. Albertans believe in more freedom and less government.

Some may argue that a do-not-call list is not necessary because of the technological advances in recent years. It's now possible to display the name and number of callers who are calling your house. This allows you to screen your calls and only answer those from people you wish to talk to. Of course, it's also possible to block certain numbers from calling your house.

The problem with these technologies is that they place the onus on the individual, and they can be very expensive, Mr. Speaker. In order to receive these services, you have to pay, which again is contrary to the principle of an inherent right to privacy in your home. The sound of the phone ringing is an interruption. Society has conditioned us to stop whatever we are doing whenever the phone rings. Answering the phone has become an almost conditioned response. You know, it bothers me when I see someone drop everything to answer a phone call when I'm in the middle of talking to them. It seems to create a sense of false urgency. Therefore, in spite of the advances in technology it is still necessary for prohibitions on calling.

Mr. Speaker, seniors and those who have been victims of telemarketing fraud will also benefit from the creation of a licensed telemarketing list. By limiting telemarketers' ability to conduct unsolicited solicitations, we are helping to reduce the instances of telephone marketing schemes that are successful at defrauding people, especially seniors, of their limited income and their hard-earned money.

Mr. Speaker, another important aspect of the legislation is that it exempts charities. You know, many charities are facing difficulties in raising much-needed funds. Bill 205 proposes to only limit commercial calls and not charitable calls. Now, although allowing charities to continue to make unsolicited phone calls is still somewhat of a violation of your right to privacy, I feel that this is a justifiable infringement. Why? Because charities are not soliciting you to increase their profit. They are not trying to sell you goods and services. Charities are attempting to raise money, often in order to help cure a disease or to help those in need. While some people may find calls from charities intrusive, the good work accomplished by charities more than compensates for any inconvenience their unsolicited calls may cause you.

The intent of this legislation, as I understand it, Mr. Speaker, is to limit unwanted calls from people with a commercial purpose. In fact, with restrictions placed on Alberta-based telemarketer calls, I'm sure that calls from charities will become less bothersome within the context of an overall reduction in call volume. Maybe you'll now take the time to listen to these charitable requests instead of just lumping them in with commercial solicitation.

Mr. Speaker, in today's society we're consistently inundated with advertising. It's important in our free and open society that businesses are able to advertise and freely sell their products. I agree with that. Equally as important, though, is the ability of citizens to not be forced to listen to or be party to advertising. Within the privacy of a person's home they should be free from unwanted advertising. Business will still be able to contact and reach their customers in many, many different ways.

Any interaction in a free society must be based on consent. The same is true for interactions between business and their customers. Businesses have the right to air commercials on TV, and by watching programs that they sponsor, I'm giving my implied consent to that advertising. However, when I answer my telephone, I am giving no such consent. By answering my phone, I've not agreed to listen to any form of advertisement. Unsolicited marketing calls are an unwanted interaction that is forced upon us. In a world where advertisements are on buses, radios, TVs, and the Internet, our homes should be a place free from unwanted interaction.

I urge all members to support this important legislation. Albertans are clear on this issue. They do not want uninvited intrusions into their home. It is our duty in this House to respond to the desires of Albertans. Bill 205 does that, and that is why I'm supporting it and urging all members to support it as well. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 205. The object of this bill is to implement rules regarding the definition and functions of telemarketing not already covered by CRTC regulations.

Telemarketing is one way that businesses can advertise their products and offer their services. They will often use professional telemarketers or call centres to make telephone calls and send faxes to potential customers on their behalf.

To generate funds, charitable organizations will sometimes contact potential donors directly or through a telemarketing firm using unsolicited telephone calls or faxes. Charitable organizations will not be considered as telemarketers for the purposes of this bill.

Some telemarketing organizations use automatic dialers to place telephone calls or send faxes. Dead air or a hang-up call will occur if a telemarketing representative is not available when the call is answered. Generally, companies allow sufficient time between calls for a representative to be available; however, if the telemarketing representative is on another line longer than expected, the result is dead air.

Do any rules or restrictions apply to telemarketers? Yes. Restrictions apply to all telemarketers although they may differ depending on whether they use a fax or a telephone. As a minimum telemarketers must maintain do-not-call or fax lists and provide customers with a fax or telephone number where a responsible person can be reached. Specific rules are needed, Mr. Speaker.

Telemarketing rules refer to the rules of telecommunications facilities to make unsolicited calls for the purpose of solicitation, where solicitation is defined as the selling or promoting of a product or service or the soliciting of money or monies, whether directly or indirectly and whether on behalf of another party. This includes solicitation of donations by or on behalf of charitable organizations. These rules apply to all unsolicited calls for the purpose of solicitation. They apply to business-to-business telephone solicitation and calls from businesses to existing customers.

These rules do not extend to calls where there is no attempt to advertise a product or offer a service; for example, calls for emergency purposes, calls to collect overdue accounts, calls for market or survey research, and calls to schedule appointments.

Mr. Speaker, the fax calling hours are restricted to weekdays between 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and weekends between 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Restrictions refer to the time zone of the called party and must identify the person or organization on behalf of whom the fax or call is made, including the telephone number, fax number, and name and address of the responsible person to whom the called party can write.

This rule also applies to organizations sending unsolicited fax calls on behalf of another organization: must display the originating calling number or an alternate number where the call originator can be reached, except where number display is unavailable for technical reasons. Sequential dialing is not permitted. Fax calls are not permitted to emergency lines or health care facilities. Names and numbers must be removed within seven days of the called party's request. Do-not-call lists are to be maintained by the calling party and remain active for three years.

Telephone callers must identify the person or organization they represent. Upon request, callers must provide the telephone number, name, and address of a responsible person a called party can write to. Callers must display the originating calling number or an alternate number where the caller can be reached except where the number display is unavailable for technical reasons. Names and numbers of called parties must be removed within 30 days of the called party request. Do-not-call lists are to be maintained by the calling party and remain active for three years. There are no calling-hour restrictions on live voice calls. Sequential dialing is not permitted. Calls are not permitted to emergency lines or health care facilities. Random dialing and calls to nonpublished numbers are allowed.

Mr. Speaker, it's really a good bill, and I will support this bill because this is absolutely imperative and very useful. This bill will decrease the harassment or inconvenience that for all of us is incurred by telemarketers. This bill differentiates between the role of telemarketers and those raising funds for charitable or voluntary organizations. Bill 205 also increases the accountability to the telemarketing firms for the conduct of their interaction with clients. This will also increase the capability for Albertans to contact the telemarketing firms if they have concerns, complaints, or if they wish to be removed from the calling list. It's about time to decrease the inconvenience that all of us are facing every day.

I really commend the sponsor of this bill for his great efforts. Thank you.

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, and then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise with some interest in speaking this afternoon in regard to Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act. Now, while I think that the spirit of Bill 205 should be widely applauded by most Albertans, I do have a number of concerns with it in regard to both its scope and perhaps some omissions that are built into the bill itself. I think we all have spoken quite extensively on the annoyance factor of telemarketers and how this should be somehow constrained, but how we go about doing that in the most effective way and the most expeditious way is the concern that we should be bringing forward for debate at this time.

We can look across North America and see a number of different jurisdictions trying to come to terms with this problem. I think the two areas that I find the most interesting and that we should view with the most interest are the national do-not-call registries that we see in the United States and the do-not-call registry legislation which has been put forward through our federal government. Let's remember that telemarketing is something that can cross borders very, very easily. In fact, we've created a largish industry here in our own city, where people are working in call centres, fulfilling various services for individuals across North America and sometimes even around the world. So our choice of how we restrict telemarketing has to reflect that reality as well as the fact that, you know, telephone marketing is used by not just retail commercial operations but charitable operations, and it's used extensively by political parties as well.

This is perhaps the first place that I need to draw my fellow members' attention to. There seems to be a loophole, in my mind, in this Bill 205. This is in the provision that allows for people to conduct polls and surveys. If this Bill 205 must be robust, then we must make a clear differentiation between a telemarketer and pollster. You know, I think that that is a problem because there are different ways by which a telemarketer could disguise themselves as a pollster, and Lord knows that there are lots of polls flying about these days for all sorts of things. You know, it's easy enough just with a simple script to do both, sell something and conduct a poll at the same time. So this seems to be the most obvious loophole that I find in this Bill 205, and I would suggest an amendment to the bill if we did in fact have the opportunity to go ahead with it. We need, as I say, then, to have clear provisions to define the surveyors and pollsters as opposed to telemarketers.

You have, I think, this phenomenon – we've all experienced it – where someone phones up and asks you some survey questions but, in fact, built into that is an advertisement. You know, when we look at telemarketing, sometimes we have this idea that it's simply somebody calling you up and saying, "We'll give you a free or a discounted vacuum service" or what have you. But, you know, advertisements using the telephone are also a way by which telemarketers forward their cause. So I think that there's definitely a grey area as this bill is worded currently, and that would need to be fixed.

Another area that is of concern, I think, is the absence of any mention of political phone polling and, otherwise, the various forms of solicitation that go on during elections and between elections. Now, the reality of how most political parties conduct themselves is that, you know, we do use the telephone quite extensively, and by simply not including some provision for that in this bill, I think that we've run into a serious problem. It's important that we keep all forms of communication and avenues of communication open for political candidates during elections and between elections. So the absence of dealing with that reality in Bill 205 I think causes serious concern and needs to be amended as well.

The specific constraints that Bill 205 seeks to place on telemarketers between, sort of, these no-call hours: although there are telemarketers that go outside of these boundaries, I think that, you know, telemarketers will move away from those certain hours regardless if you legislate it or not because, of course, if you are annoying your customer, then, in fact, you're less likely to be able to sell them something. This is a basic principle that I think telemarketers do operate on. You know, it opens the door to, in my mind, the more logical way to control telemarketing, and that's through using a do-not-call registry, so then people are making that choice. We're seeing it quite successfully solicited and used across the United States. People can choose to not be interrupted by telemarketers at all if they do in fact find that to be a problem.

You know, something that occurs to me – and I guess this is outside of this bill as well – but personally, my own self, I don't receive a lot of telemarket calls. That's because the one line that we use for our family line at home is not in the phone book. Although we have a number of other lines by which people can reach us in the phone book, the one that we use personally for home is excluded. It opens the door, I think, for us to consider perhaps limiting or restricting how telemarketers pass lists around, and really the biggest list and the fattest list of all is the phone book. So, you know, this is how these people are making intrusions into our lives. I don't know. It just occurred to me that there are other ways to perhaps limit lists that are passed around and whatnot because, as I say, on the phone that we use at home, I don't get many calls at all in regard to telemarketers.

Mr. Lukaszuk: What's your number?

Mr. Eggen: Yeah, give me a ring sometime. I'm kind of lonely, so you can give me a call, right?

Anyway, those are the main concerns that I do have. I think that, as I said before, the spirit of this bill, in fact, I think would be welcomed by most Albertans. But always when we are creating legislation, I think it's important that we are absolutely crystal clear as to our intentions and as simple as possible. It's a moving target, being able to make calls to people's homes. It's a very effective way to sell things, so we have to make sure that we build the best edifice possible to limit the abilities of telemarketers to annoy people who don't want to be phoned. I mean, let's not forget that, you know, not everybody is in that situation. As I say, I would suggest an amendment to make a clearer definition between telemarketers and pollsters and, number two, to add political polling phoning and telemarketing as an exemption to Bill 205.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This bill, to me, has a good intention, but if any one of us has business experience, we'll see it from a different view. I just want to voice some concern about the practicality of this bill and the concern from small-business owners. I see this bill creating obstacles for small-business opening and operation, and small businesses are very, very important to our economy and employment.

Talking about the do-not-call registry or creating a registry that anybody can put their name on to be called: first of all, nobody will put their name on the registry to be called, so that is not very effective. If we want to create a registry for companies who want to make a call, that will incur a cost to the small businesses, particularly the ones that are just starting out and want to connect with potential markets and customers. To me, in a free-enterprise society we should know that our society prospers because of businesses, of innovation, of new ways of opening up business, of creating new products. This sort of control gives me concern on that aspect given that we are at times inconvenienced by some calls. The other side of that inconvenience also gives freedom to enterprises to prosper. When I see that we create legislation to govern the inconveniences, to me it's not a very good way to make the law in that aspect.

Also, if we create a registry where you can call, there are a lot of call centre companies doing services to make calls on behalf of the companies. They already created the call centre, they have a code of ethics, and they have created many, many best practices. When a business practice becomes obsolete or ineffective, it will die naturally, by natural business causes. So I don't feel that we need to make legislation that creates obstacles for small businesses to start out by controlling them in this fashion.

I'm also concerned about the enforcement of this legislation. First of all, the enforcement is tough because the call could be coming from anywhere in the world. It's not just particularly in a province. So if we penalize a call from our province, then we will have competition from other provinces getting in and taking advantage or even having the upper hand on that.

Also, recently in Edmonton we just attracted a big call centre, a huge industry here in Alberta. My concern is that this piece of legislation will create an image of: hey, we don't want any call centre business here in Alberta. Basically, I see that as a concern from the small-business community that I talked to about this issue.

I also want to emphasize the point that the inconvenience of a telephone call – to me, it's worth it to pay for the free-enterprise society, with the prosperity that it brings to Alberta.

We should not forget the costs of enforcing this legislation, the registry. We all know the gun registry, as an example. When you create a registry, then you own the support of it, the creation of it, the maintenance of it. Let's say it generates some fines from the ones who violate this law. Immediately this becomes a cash cow or a revenue for the government. I don't want that kind of approach, when government starts taking money out of the economy. To me, if a manufacturer or a service provider can go direct to a customer in the least-cost way, then the end product or service will cost less to the consumer.

With that aspect, I just want to raise the concern for small businesses for a piece of legislation that may create a cost of enforcing.

To those who are concerned about the inconvenience of telephone calls, I say that bad practices will die out. It's just a matter of business effectiveness. When you phone and people don't have any response, or you do call and you don't sell anything, that service will die out.

With that, I just want to suggest that the hon. members consider those factors. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not often that I find myself agreeing with members from the other side. Perhaps there is something in the water today, but I wholeheartedly agree with the Member for Calgary-Fort that we have to look at this objectively, on both sides.

He did admit to the fact that in Edmonton we are attracting business opportunities, economic diversity. Regardless of how you describe a person's job, telemarketing is still an honourable way to make a living, and here we're saying that we're trying to get rid of it with the fair trading. That, in itself, is kind of a pun. Regardless of how you look at it, again, it's still an opportunity for those people to be able to have some livelihood.

Not everyone may agree with it, as I've heard from a number of speakers here. If we're going to shut the door on telemarketing here, we may in fact just increase the amount of spam through our e-mail. So, you know, one reaction may cause another equally concerning reaction.

Some of the points raised, you know, I do agree with. They, in fact, can be concerning, especially depending on the time, the hour that you receive the call. I think it's interesting that maybe a lot of the constituents have concerns with regard to the methodology. When you say no, is it no, or are they going to continue to berate you on that?

Speaking with my constituents of Edmonton-Decore, I know that I have a number of seniors, and a lot of them may not in fact be up to date with the technology which is call display. That's one way that you can in fact eliminate even answering the phone. When they do describe their number there, you're not obligated to pick it up. It's not an intrusion in your livelihood or in your household, as the member said, until you actually pick up that phone. Nothing makes you pick up that phone. For those that don't have call display, you know, they do pick it up regularly, and in fact they are given the opportunity to speak. Maybe these are the only people that even call these people.

Regardless, I can see how some people might find it to be one after another. I've noticed that, in fact, telemarketing over the last few months has increased. It's not just local people that are calling us. This is from other provinces and, in fact, from the States.

I'm not sure how this bill will be able to connect with those people that are breaking the traditional times and guidelines set forth by this bill, such as the times between the 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. calls, because I know that we've received calls later than that and through all those faxes outside the parameters set forth. So I'm not sure how this bill would include and, in fact, capture some of those people that we're going to charge or revoke their licence with the CRTC. Well, those operating in the States certainly are above the CRTC. They get numbers passed around frequently on disks, and they're allowed to use those numbers as they wish.

A lot of the times, like I said, you may be taking a phone call that might be a positive one, reducing your credit card amount from the 20 per cent or 19 per cent to 5.9 per cent, so they aren't all bad calls, you know. There might be the 5 or 10 per cent that are actually reasonable. But most times it's something or it's a product or it's a contact that you can make on your own. They're just making that extra effort to make sure that you're aware of it, which most people don't really want to know about.

You know, there are some positives with this, but again I think it speaks negatively to some people or some person's job or job description. Some people, in fact, have been employed with telemarketing for years and do consider it to be an honourable piece of work or a way to earn their wages. They're on commission. I do sympathize with them if they've taken up this calling. Some do sympathize with us with our calling here as well. Nonetheless, it's still an honourable job, which I think needs to be considered with regard to when we do vote for this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before I begin, I'd like to thank my hon. colleague from Calgary-Montrose for bringing forward this piece of legislation and for allowing the House the opportunity to consider this matter.

Without a doubt, most Albertans are perturbed many times about the present state of affairs with regard to telemarketing and the annoyance of companies and individuals trying to sell them products over the telephone. Most of the time the products and services which they are trying to sell us are things that we don't want or have any need for, in fact, and they seem to have a knack of calling whenever we're in the middle of our favourite television program or reading our favourite magazine or newspaper. In other words, the phone calls are likely to be a complete waste of our time.

I would agree with a number of the speakers that have been speaking on this motion. As the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar mentioned, telemarketing is certainly an invasion of privacy as well. Over the past decade or so it seems to have gotten a lot worse. The telephone has become one of the favourite tools of communication for many companies.

Bill 205, now before us, calls for the creation of a government-maintained telemarketing licence registry that would issue licences to companies wishing to solicit Albertans over the phone. In addition, it also proposes to incorporate more stringent rules and regulations concerning telemarketing so that Albertans are not overly inconvenienced by telephone solicitors. Under these restrictions telemarketers would be restricted to placing their calls between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. on weekdays and between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. during the weekends, and they would not be allowed to solicit on general holidays.

The advantage of those measures, of course, is that it would not only forbid telemarketers from contacting customers during those times, but it would also establish a set of consistent rules and limitations regarding those practices within the province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, while I agree in principle with the concept that telemarketing must be controlled, I do see some issues with respect to this particular bill, Bill 205. The first is that it would necessitate a bureaucracy to be created, some sort of a registry bureaucracy, and that's one more piece of red tape that our businesses and people would have to deal with.

Secondly, I feel that Bill 205, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort and the Member for Edmonton-Decore have mentioned, also could be viewed as unfair to our business community here in Alberta. So to some extent it might create an unlevel playing field and give advantages to other people in other provinces.

Thirdly, when I first saw this legislation, the first thing that came to my mind was the issue of jurisdiction over these matters. In light of the federal jurisdiction over telecommunications and the fact that telecommunications which cross provincial boundaries are interprovincial undertakings, there are serious questions about the constitutionality of trying to control these telephone calls that may originate outside of our province. Many of the telemarketing businesses presently operating and calling people in Alberta operate out of other provinces, particularly the Maritimes, where they do not have the benefit of the Alberta advantage. So we would be creating an unlevel playing field should we choose to control those companies that are telemarketing here in Alberta without the same restrictions applying outside of the province.

I also think it's important to clarify that the current federal legislation does not adequately produce the necessary controls that are required to properly influence telemarketers to respect the rights of individuals. However, as I mentioned, the best way to address this is very likely through a national approach. I think that there's little argument against enforcing those stringent regulations, but the federal government is the body which ought to be passing legislation to control this. So I think it's something that the individual provinces can work on together with the federal government. The federal government has laid out a list of actions that could be taken to control telemarketing, and although those aren't presently effective, they could be made effective by approaching this through some sort of national legislation.

Presently individuals can contact telemarketers directly and ask to be removed from their lists. They can also contact the CRTC, in which case they would pursue the matter on behalf of the individual. Another possible solution is for the individual to have their contact information removed from directories, although that's not always possible where you don't want to hide from people that may want to get in contact with you and may in fact have a legitimate interest in contacting you.

The current rules in place apply to all unsolicited calls for the purpose of solicitation and apply to business-to-business telephone solicitation. However, the rules don't apply to calls where there's no attempt to advertise a product or offer a service; for example, calls for emergencies purposes, calls to collect overdue accounts, calls for market survey research, and calls to schedule appointments.

The specific guidelines that are presently used for automatic dialing and announcing devices, or ADADs – these devices used for the purpose of solicitation are sometimes controlled and sometimes not. A lot of those calls can be made by referring the called party to a 900 or a 976 service number. So, in addition to the legislative difficulty with this from a constitutional standpoint, I also think, Mr. Speaker, that we have a problem with respect to practicality. I'm not convinced, given the fact that many of these calls originate outside the province, that this legislation would be effective in accomplishing what it seeks to do.

In summary, I believe that the desired results would be better accomplished by working with the other provinces and working with the federal government with respect to this issue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I have listened with interest to the discussion this afternoon on Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005. It's certainly something that I think is a good idea. I don't want to deny anyone their means of livelihood, but I think telephone solicitation has gotten out of hand, particularly at the hours which are identified in Bill 205 as being particularly vexing.

Now, the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar was talking about his evening meal with his family and how sometimes his dinner got cold. Someone was trying to sell him new carpet or hardwood floor or a vacuum cleaner or who knows what. I would certainly agree with the hon. member that this form of sales can be quite annoying and can be very, very intrusive. I don't care whether it is the bank that's phoning at suppertime to try to sell me a new account or a new form of account or whether it's someone who doesn't even give me time to respond whether I've got carpets or hardwood floors, but they certainly want to sell me some new wax or a means of waxing my hardwood floor.

This seems to definitely indicate that some people are concerned about consumers and the rights of consumers. I'm not saying that this is a form of consumer protection, but at least it's a recognition by an hon. member of this Assembly that, hey, consumers need a break even if it is only on a weekday between 5 and 8 and at various times during the weekend.

I do have some concerns. I guess, Mr. Speaker, it would be best if I described my concerns as a question. I could say that there's no interest like self-interest, but what does this mean for election campaigns? Certainly, I see here that "telemarketing" means the marketing of goods or services by telephone or fax for commercial purposes whether done by a personal call, fax, computer or an automated recorded message device.” Now, perhaps the hon. member or another hon. member of the Assembly can answer that. Exactly where does election campaigning fall into this? Would election campaigning be exempt because it is not considered commercial? I have no idea.

I for one run very modest election campaigns, and we don't have megabucks to hire those demon dialers, those direct dialers. Is that practice going to be eliminated? Perhaps we should seek guidance on this matter from the Chief Electoral Officer. Just where would we fit into this as hon. members of this Assembly who may be considering running in the next election and planning election strategies? Certainly, we cannot afford these demon dialers, or automatic dialing systems. Others may. There are many members from different sides of the House that have dozens of volunteers that may phone a poll list. How do they fit into this? Are they considered telemarketers?

I would really appreciate some advice from the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose on this issue or from any other hon. member that may be able to clarify this for me before we proceed much further with Bill 205.

There are certainly habits of the telemarketing industry that need to be broken, and one habit is the constant, annoying intrusion into one's home at any hour of the day or night. If we could restrict or limit that, I don't think it would harm the industry. It would certainly improve, in my view, our quality of life, and I would urge all hon. members to have a close look at this legislation.

I don't think we should wait and see what other jurisdictions are doing. Some jurisdictions have more stringent controls on telemarketers and their actions. I don't think it's progress. I don't think that there will be an increase in market share for many of these agencies that are promoting products or services in this manner.

I again have to urge members to please have a close look at this bill and consider supporting it. I think it's a step in the right direction for consumers in this province. Again, I can't see how we can be faulted for regulating an industry. In most cases it's not even based in this province. I know that there are call centres in this province that service products and companies from all over North America, and there are calls that one can make here and the service provider or the agent can be in New Brunswick or New Jersey or New Mexico. It doesn't matter.

Enough is enough. I think this bill is a good idea. It has been discussed by hon. members of this Assembly in the past, and to see this Bill 205 at this time I think is a good step, and I would urge all hon. members to consider it. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Webber: Good afternoon, and thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and join the debate on Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005, sponsored by the Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Bill 205 is a bill whose, some may say, time has come. We live in a world where technologies are changing at an ever-increasing pace. It seems that on almost a daily basis someone somewhere has found a better, more efficient way to do things. The fast-paced advancement of technology over the years has allowed for companies and individuals to advertise easily and quickly through mediums such as telephones, fax machines, and e-mails. I'm certain that every member in this Assembly has experienced at one time or another the inconvenience that arises as a result of impersonal, random advertising. If a member is unable to recall a personal experience, their constituents would likely provide one or two of their own.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 205 would create a licence registry for private companies engaged in telemarketing to Albertans. From my understanding this would affect telephone and facsimile marketers, thus preventing unsolicited telemarketers from annoying Albertans and their businesses both financially and personally. This is an issue that I feel needs to be addressed if not now, then later. But sooner or later something needs to be done to put an end to the economic and personal annoyances that come along with these attempts at marketing.

Mr. Speaker, to get a better insight to what Bill 205 may lead to do, it is appropriate to look at another jurisdiction that is knee-deep in similar types of legislation. Last June the United States starting accepting names for its do-not-call registry through the Federal Trade Commission, the FTC. In addition, approximately 37 states maintain their own do-not-call registries. For instance, the fine state of Kentucky has legislation similar to what is being proposed today, not a mirror image but something to look at nonetheless. The state of Kentucky requires that all telemarketing companies register 10 days in advance with the state as well as provide information regarding their company, products, and salespeople. Telemarketing companies are also required to provide a $50,000 surety bond and an annual registration fee of $300.

This is just one example, Mr. Speaker. In giving examples, I find it useful to ensure that we discuss all aspects, including the problem that arose as the federal legislation in the United States was brought forward. Although the number of registrants for the do-not-call list is quite substantial at 64 million, there were still some bumps in the road involved with activating the list. Early in the process a court in Oklahoma City said that the FTC overstepped its authority, stating that although Congress gave the agency funding for the list, it did not give the FTC the power to implement it. The next day the House of Representatives voted 412 to 8 in favour of giving the FTC the authority to run the national registry of phone numbers that telemarketers would be prohibited from calling. This is an example of the overwhelming support such legislation may have, not only in the United States but here in Canada as well.

Although not well known to many Canadians, Canada has had a do-not-call list administered by the Canadian Marketing Association for over a decade. People can sign up and be on their list by going to the Canadian Marketing Association's website. However, Mr. Speaker, the list does not hold users to any substantial legal repercussions, such as fines of up to $11,000 like our neighbours to the south have implemented with this strategy. Nothing says "leave me alone and let me eat my dinner" like an $11,000 fine. After its 15th year in existence not many Canadians even know about the list, where almost 500,000 numbers are currently registered. In fact, it is estimated that the list is only adhered to by 80 per cent of telemarketers.

The one side effect of any list that should be looked at is the fact that as long as the consumer has purchased a product from a company, they have theoretically entered a business relationship and can therefore be called and faxed at the company's or charity's discretion. Mr. Speaker, if we are serious about putting an end to these annoying phone calls and wasteful faxes, then individuals who wish to be placed on the Canadian Marketing Association's do-not-call list should be protected not only from those entities that they have not entered into a business relationship with but also those that they have entered into one with.

To be honest, when a constituent goes to a store to buy a jacket or performs any other financial transaction, they are not interested in entering a business relationship. They want to purchase the goods and services they have worked hard for and to enjoy them. Mr. Speaker, if a constituent wants to enter a business relationship, it should be their choice not an assumption from a sale or application for a credit card. A question posed to a customer may be as simple as: Can I call you, fax you, e-mail you? The consumer's answer should be respected.

One thing I would like to see in this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is the inclusion of e-mail spam along with telephone calls and faxes. As technology becomes available, it is becoming increasingly easier for someone to sit at their computer, run a program, and have a sometimes inappropriate advertisement sent to an extremely random, extremely large number of e-mail addresses. Some of those addresses belong to children, who don't necessarily need to be aware of what the advertisement is selling. These same technologies allow companies to make random calls and send out random faxes. There are a number of programs out there that help parents and individuals lessen the amount of e-mail spam that is pushed upon unsuspecting Internet users. But these are only a band-aid, and ultimately we have to find a way to eliminate the unsolicited advertising that takes place through e-mail.

The problem we are dealing with today may be telemarketing and the annoying, unwanted phone calls and faxes that Albertans receive. I am certain that the problem we will be dealing with tomorrow is the annoying, unwanted e-mail that Albertans receive. Mr. Speaker, by not targeting telemarketers, we are only sweeping this problem under the rug. Should this legislation pass as the number of telemarketers decreases? I don't think it is much of a stretch to assume that these individuals, determined to make big bucks off taking advantage of the vulnerability of some and annoying others, will find another way to do so. Their next move will be e-mail spam, and they will find a way to bypass current software programs, and the e-mails will still get through. Consumers will need to purchase more software programs to counteract the advanced attacks.

There is a trend here, Mr. Speaker, and the consumer is always at the losing end. The government of Alberta has in the past protected the rights of Alberta consumers. The government continues to do so today. It is necessary to take this step and ensure that Albertans are protected from the annoyance and exploitive factors of these practices. Be it through e-mail, telephone, the mail, or faxes, Albertans are tired of this annoyance.

While Bill 205 does not address e-mail spam or junk mail, it does speak to telemarketing and facsimile marketing. This is a step in the right direction, and I encourage government and all members to work towards a more extensive list that includes e-mail and even junk mail, which only clutters mailboxes, both digital and post office versions.

Beyond moving the protection of Albertan consumers and businesses forward, Bill 205 also provides the government an opportunity to properly enforce the CRTC regulations by ensuring that such companies are properly licensed and comply with the regulations that are in place. Mr. Speaker, it is time that these regulations get some teeth and hold those individuals responsible for these actions accountable to all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to adjourn debate.

The Speaker: The hon. member moves an adjournment of the debate?

Mr. Webber: I would like to adjourn the debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we now call it 5:30 and reconvene tonight at 8.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:23 p.m.]

Title: Monday, May 16, 2005

8:00 p.m.

Date: 05/05/16

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Motions Other than Government Motions

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Postsecondary Education System Review

509. Mr. Mason moved on behalf of Dr. Pannu:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to establish a commission on advanced education to thoroughly review Alberta's public postsecondary education system and recommend changes to enhance accessibility and affordability while ensuring excellence in areas of research and instruction.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just speaking to that, I want to indicate that the NDP opposition has made this a priority. It formed part of our party's platform in the last provincial election. It is based primarily upon the success of the commission on education, the so-called Learning Commission, that I think has been an excellent example of this type of approach. We believe that this approach should be extended to postsecondary education in this province.

The government has committed to spend a great deal of money on postsecondary education, and that by itself is a good thing, Mr. Speaker, but the question is whether or not we should be pursuing a significant increase in funding without taking a good look at where we are, where we have been, and where we want to go.

If I can just talk a little bit about some of the issues facing postsecondary education at the present time, I'd like to start with the question of cost to students and accessibility to education. A student at the University of Alberta now pays $4,537.20 in tuition fees plus another $500 in mandatory fees. The average tuition, according to Advanced Education, is $4,487 a year at a university, $2,866 at a college, and $2,971 at a technical institution. The average student debt after education is $20,000.

Between 1992 and 2004 support for postsecondary institutions in Alberta dropped by 28 per cent when counted in 1992 dollars. One of the consequences of provincial underfunding is an increase in the amount of deferred maintenance at universities, colleges, and technical institutions, something the Auditor General has repeatedly pointed out in his reports. Buildings on university and college campuses are aging, and we need to make sure that the dollars are there on a consistent basis to do maintenance, repairs, and renovations. While there have been significant dollars put into the construction of new buildings at some public postsecondary campuses, many of these buildings are for research purposes and do not relieve the crowded lecture halls and labs that students are facing.

Mr. Speaker, barely half of Albertans today view the education system as affordable. This number has dropped by 24 per cent in the last three years alone. Meanwhile, universities, colleges, and technical institutions see operating grants that don't keep pace with inflation let alone accommodate rising utility costs, enrolment increases, deferred maintenance, and infrastructure needs or allow them to expand programs for the continuing demands of a growing economy.

Getting back to accessibility, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has the second-lowest postsecondary participation rate in Canada. Only British Columbia is worse. According to Missing Pieces, an annual report from the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives, Alberta is ranked seventh among Canadian provinces for its commitment to funding postsecondary education and ensuring its accessibility, this despite Alberta being the wealthiest province in the country. The minister has promised a review of the affordability of postsecondary education, but such a review would be far too narrow. A commission on advanced education would broadly examine the system in its entirety.

I'd like to speak briefly on the role of the private sector in postsecondary education. Certainly, the underfunding has resulted in universities placing greater reliance on private funding for research, scholarships, and so on. There is considerable evidence showing that biases appear in corporate-funded research. In particular, results tend to be positive more often when studies are funded privately. That's a very interesting observation, Mr. Speaker.

For-profit postsecondary education models pose a threat to important functions of universities, which are to investigate, debate, and propose things whether or not they are popular. A course may not be profitable. That does not mean it lacks social or scientific value. As Gordon Laxer has noted: "Bringing in private education institutions undermines the idea of equal public education access. Education becomes a commodity and those who have more money can have access to it." There are also important concerns about whether knowledge and research that comes from a university is public or whether it should be allowed to be privatized, commodified, or sold.

Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, the NDP opposition recommends the following terms of reference for an advanced education commission. It should have set out the timelines, composition of the commission. It should deal with accessibility to postsecondary institutions, affordability, quality, teaching and research: finding the appropriate balance at our public universities. It should deal with university governance. It should deal with the role of the private sector. It should deal in an overall way with the financing of the system. It should debate and discuss the future of the social sciences, arts, and the humanities.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would recommend passage of this motion of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. I believe that now is the time to take a good, in-depth look at our postsecondary institutions and provide the public with an opportunity to have their say as well. This process has proved very successful with respect to the K to 12 system through the Learning Commission. We believe that before we launch into a major expansion of funding for the postsecondary system, as the government has promised, we ought to take a good look at that system and determine exactly where it is that we want to go.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with pleasure that I rise tonight to join the debate on Motion 509, proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. First of all, I'd like to thank the hon. member for putting forward this motion. I know that I personally appreciate the opportunity to discuss Alberta's postsecondary education system. As the mother of four boys between the ages of 18 and 25 I'm riveted at this time by Alberta's postsecondary system. It's something we spend a lot of time in our household discussing and looking at as we try to help our sons prepare for their future.

As I look at the motion that the hon. member brings forward, he talks about establishing “a commission on advanced education to thoroughly review Alberta’s public postsecondary education system and recommend changes to enhance accessibility and affordability while ensuring excellence in areas of research and instruction.” I think those are all very, very plausible things to talk about. But, Mr. Speaker, as I think about where my boys are today and how long a commission actually takes to put together and to really do a very, very thorough job, I’m wondering if we can just wait that long. Part of my problem is that those issues are in front of us today, and I think we have on some levels a pretty good understanding of some of those issues.

Some of it has to do with access. I know that I’ve been in this House before and I’ve talked about a bubble that was moving. People go: what is a bubble? I just remember when my boys were all kind of clustered around the elementary years, and there was this bubble or this surge of population, and we didn’t fit in our elementary schools. We were struggling to get everybody into elementary in the city of Calgary, then that moved to junior high, and then it moved to high school. I would say to you today that it has hit our postsecondary system. Added to that, many learners and many people out there are returning to postsecondary education in order to upgrade. In a sense, you have this bubble moving through with this rise and people returning. So I think that the hon. member is right: one of the big issues is accessibility, and can kids access a postsecondary education?

I was very, very disturbed last week to read in the Herald the grade point averages that you have to have to get into things that are basic. You know, to me, when it comes to choosing education like engineering, teaching, nursing, things that we know in this province we’re going to need a lot more of in the future – we know that. I don’t really think that we need a major review in order to tell us those things. I think we understand that issue. As I was looking at those grade point averages, they reminded me of the kind of grade point averages kids used to have to have to get into, say, medical school. I thought: my word, we have an access issue in this province.

I think, though, when I start to look at what those issues are in postsecondary, that we as government are really focused on this issue. Bill 1 I think proved that in this session. We have spent a considerable amount of time as government focusing on the postsecondary issue. So while I support the general intent of the motion that’s before us today, there’s no question that the goals that this hon. member raises with his motion are some of the same goals that government also has in their aim.

I think the commitment to these goals was very clearly displayed in the 2005-2006 provincial budget. Funding to address accessibility, affordability, and to improve the overall quality of our postsecondary education system was laid out in the budget. The government increased the advanced education budget by nearly 30 per cent, $433 million over the next three years with an immediate injection of $196 million. The Alberta government has targeted these dollars to ensure that they are used to deal with the major areas of concern: affordability and accessibility.

Ninety million of those dollars have been specifically targeted for the access growth fund to achieve the goal of adding 15,000 postsecondary spaces over the next three years. I think that’s a really ambitious goal and one that government is prepared to back up and commit to. Additional dollars will follow to bring that number up to 30,000 and then eventually to 60,000. Undoubtedly, it’s a lofty goal, but with focus and an unwavering perseverance I have no doubt that we’ll see these projected spaces come to fruition.

In fact, another $111 million has been budgeted in postsecondary capital projects alone this year. I look at the University of Alberta and the cranes that we see now emerging. I was at a groundbreaking ceremony just this last week at Mount Royal College as they broke ground again. I know that we are working on physically building the spaces as well.

Also included in this year’s budget is $105 million for student loans, $72 million in scholarships, bursaries, and grants. This is an increase of 11.7 per cent in those scholarship programs. Part of this increase will be used to fund the new Lois Hole humanities and social science scholarships. We spoke about all of these things in Bill 1, so I won’t go back into them tonight.

The two things that I did want to just put a little bit, you know, finer point on is that this year’s tuition fee gives government the time and the opportunity to create a tuition policy for Alberta. I quote the Premier. He laid out the reasons for this new tuition policy when he said in his annual televised address:

By the time post-secondary students head back in September 2006, Alberta will define a new tuition policy for the 21st century. It will be the most innovative, entrepreneurial, and affordable tuition policy in the country – one that reflects the shared responsibility of students, parents, educators, and administrators. We will do whatever it takes to make sure money isn’t a barrier to attending Alberta’s post-secondary institutions.

As this House has already heard, the Minister of Advanced Education has committed to follow up on the Premier’s statement. The hon. minister will be instituting a review of the postsecondary system in Alberta. While the exact framework has not yet been released, I know that affordability will be one of the main areas of focus.

That’s the main reason I don’t feel that I can support this motion. I support the aims, I support the ultimate goals that the hon. member has laid out, yet there has already been a commitment made by the Premier and the Minister of Advanced Education to undertake a review of our postsecondary system. I worry that if we were to pass this motion tonight, we might be hamstringing any upcoming review. I’m not prepared to limit the government’s review by a strict scope of this motion.

Once again, I appreciate the hon. member’s intention and his commitment to postsecondary education, but until I know exactly what shape the government review is going to take, I feel that this motion would be premature. I will be unable to support it tonight.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is with pleasure that I rise tonight to speak to Motion 509, moved by my colleague for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and to perhaps respond to some of the comments of my colleague across the way as well.

I had the great honour of attending the graduation ceremony of the Alberta College of Art and Design yesterday, where some 200 students received their degrees, mostly bachelor of fine arts, some bachelor of design. Of course, most of them were young and fresh-faced and eager to get out there with their degrees and change the world. Many of them had friends and family in the audience, and as they came up to receive their degree, they got cheers and whoops and whistles and all sorts of things and applause from their supporters and their friends in the audience. I couldn’t help but notice that the two students who got the loudest, biggest cheers were both mature students, very mature students, well into their 50s or perhaps beyond, I would guess. I think that point needs to be made to counteract this bubble myth that has just been presented from across the House.

Yes, there's a bubble; it's called the echo generation. We baby boomers hatched out in record numbers, of course, between 1946 and about 1964. Although the birth rate in Canada right now is perhaps lower than it has ever been, by sheer force of our numbers we baby boomers have hatched out another bumper crop of young'uns, young'uns who are of the age of majority, of the age of maturity, of the age of entrance into colleges and universities and technical institutes right now. I have an 18 year old, so I know a little whereof I speak, as does my colleague from across the aisle.

We talk a lot about access and affordability and excellence and questions of grade point averages and admission requirements to, you know, what used to be pretty basic four-year liberal arts, humanities, social sciences, and general science courses that didn't require the kind of grade 12 average that a medical school entrance did to get in, and now they do. That's an access problem, no question about it. Some of that access problem may in fact go away, lessen a little bit when the bubble, when the echo generation, moves through its baccalaureate years, but it won't all go away because we live in this culture of life-long learning, as we are told.

Many of us will go back to school and get second and third degrees and diplomas and certificates and whatever else is required. Someday when perhaps the Minister of Advanced Education has more than just a little grey around the temples, he'll go back. You know, after the voters have thrown him out or he's retired from politics or whatever, he'll go back, get a degree, and he'll get the biggest cheer at graduation ceremony. I don't know.

The point is that postsecondary education is phenomenally important to every person in the province of Alberta. It is important to Alberta society, and it is too important to simply approach as though you were a mechanic fixing an old car with a lot of problems: well, this week we need to throw some money at the brakes, and next week we're going to have to get new tires on the beast and get the wheel alignment redone, and a couple of weeks down the road we'll have to replace the windshield and then, you know, do some major engine repair, and on and on like that. What this system needs is for somebody to step back and take the long view, take a holistic approach, and do a comprehensive review of the whole thing.

So I would speak to the motion put forward by my colleague from Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood with support with reservations, I guess. The reason why I say that I have some reservations about it is because I think this motion perhaps doesn't go quite far enough. The motion reads as follows:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to establish a commission on advanced education to thoroughly review Alberta's public postsecondary education system and recommend changes to enhance accessibility and affordability while ensuring excellence in areas of research and instruction.

If my colleague were the student and I were the instructor here, I would give my colleague a very high mark, but I wouldn't give him a perfect score because one of the things that's missing from the motion, I think, is a specific recommendation to make this a commission that is independent of the government.

I suspect that we can take it that that's implied, that that's what my colleagues had in mind when they crafted this motion, but the motion does not specify that the commission be independent of the government even to the extent that the K to 12 Commission on Learning was. We all know that even after accepting the idea of the K to 12 Learning Commission, the ministry of learning went to some lengths, I think, to make sure that the members that were appointed to the commission were seen as more or less relatively safe in most cases by the government.

After selection the commission had to struggle to maintain some of its independence. It succeeded in that, Mr. Speaker, and produced a fine report, and many of the recommendations of the K to 12 Commission on Learning were adopted by this government, although certainly not all of them have been acted upon yet, but many of them are still in progress.

One recommendation that wasn't accepted that was initially under review but then just seems to have dropped off the government's agenda was recommendation 12: "Undertake a comprehensive, independent review of Alberta's post-secondary education system." That is what we need in this province going forward. We need to make sure that the advanced education system that we have today – and by advanced education, by postsecondary education I mean college, technical institute, university, and apprenticeship programs. We need to make sure that they're going to meet the needs not just of the bubble, not just of the echo generation, not just of our kids but of our children and our children's children and the adult learners of the province of Alberta for the next 50 years. What's required here is some vision.

We've seen over the past five years, just to give an example, all sorts of ministry-driven reviews that haven't generated any significant improvement or even any significant action on key priorities such as funding increases or tuition controls. There was the MLA Committee on Lifelong Learning in 1999, the 2000 MLA Funding Review Committee, the Campus Alberta Symposium in 2000, the Alberta learning accessibility study in 2001, the strategic framework review in 2002, the Post-secondary Learning Act in 2003-04, tuition fee policy consultations. I mean, this tuition review, this funding review or affordability review or whatever you want to call it that the government is about to undertake will be, I think, the fourth creation of the ultimate be-all and end-all tuition policy in the last 14 years in this province, and none of them have stuck for more than a season or two.

I would suggest that given this government's record in health care reform or lack thereof, if we wait for this government to do its own internal review to create the ultimate affordability policy, well, my children, both of them, will be through university. They'll be through any postgraduate work that they do. They'll be through their career, and they'll be retired and living off their pensions by the time you guys come up with the ultimate tuition policy. By then it'll be the 22nd century. But I quibble.

I think what's missing from this motion – and I wish that it had been put in and specified – is the word "independent." But in other respects I feel that this is worthy of this House's support: a comprehensive review done by outsiders of the postsecondary system in the province of Alberta, comprehensively, holistically so that out of that comes a series of recommendations that may not do anything for my colleague across the way's 18 to 25-year-old sons and may not do anything for my 18-year-old son and my 16-year-old daughter immediately but will produce a blueprint for a great, a world-class, a world-beating advanced education system in the province of Alberta that will do wonders for everybody in this province going forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, appreciate the opportunity to speak to Motion 509, calling for a commission on advanced education. I'll say right at the outset that I don't support the motion, but I want to make it clear that the reason I don't support the motion is because much of what is being asked for in the motion is already well under way. It's not that I don't agree with the concept or the content. In fact, we do need a thorough review of Alberta's postsecondary system. We need to do that review, much as the member across the way has just said, to ensure that there is a clear vision for Alberta as a learning society, how we develop a system that is world-leading in postsecondary education so that every Albertan has the opportunity to obtain the education and skills that they need to be able to compete in a global economy.

Mr. Speaker, we have in this province a 20-year strategic plan. Actually, I think we're quite unique among governments, certainly in Canada, having had that kind of a vision and planning framework. I'm very proud of that. One of the things that's very clear when you have a 20-year strategic plan that talks about unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit is that the underpinning of that strategic plan is advancing our knowledge and advancing our education.

There are a number of things ongoing, a number of things that have been happening. In 2000, for example, there was a review of the postsecondary funding system. One of the things that the review committee at that time indicated was that a review should be conducted every five years to ensure that the principles of equity, adaptability, and stability continue to be reflected in the postsecondary funding framework. So this year we've promised and we've indicated that we will conduct a review of the funding framework. We've also indicated that there would be an affordability review, a review of the cost of going to school and how those costs are paid so that finances are not a barrier to any Albertan getting an education.

In looking at those two commitments and having had the opportunity and the privilege to lead the newly formed Ministry of Advanced Education, it quickly becomes apparent that in the context of our 20-year strategic plan, in the context of the new ministry going forward, in the context of our centennial year looking to our 21st century, now is an excellent time, an excellent opportunity to do more than just review funding and review affordability. So in January I met with representatives of all postsecondary stakeholders. We brought in some other members of the public to be, as I called them, agents provocateurs in the discussion, to actually have a robust discussion about what we needed to do going forward to fulfill the promise that the Premier made that postsecondary education should be our number one priority, to be able to provide some input and advice as to what should go into the Premier's speech at the beginning of February to Albertans about what might contextualize postsecondary being our number one priority, and in terms of what content might be available for a Bill 1, to really show that we were serious about putting the wheels on, so to speak.

During those discussions stakeholders indicated also a need for a full review, a full policy development on postsecondary in Alberta so that we could ensure that our postsecondary system was leading-edge in the world and to identify what needed to be done to articulate a clearer vision. Alberta's vision as stated by the Alberta government and, therefore, my ministry's vision, is to have "a vibrant and prosperous province where Albertans enjoy a superior quality of life and are confident about the future for themselves and their children."

What does that mean, Mr. Speaker, in terms of a vision for the postsecondary education system in Alberta? Well, it's a vision for higher learning where the postsecondary system has a place for every Albertan who wants to advance their education. That means that we must inspire Albertans to want one of those places, to want to advance their education, to become a part of that vision of the future of Alberta. It's a vision where cost is not a barrier to a person receiving a postsecondary education, and it's a vision where people have all of the opportunity they want to explore their passions and their talents in a quality postsecondary system that provides an opportunity for an education in a way that's accessible and affordable and of a high quality.

Specifically, we will only succeed when we have a world-class postsecondary system based on access for all learners so that Albertans have access to the opportunities to achieve their expectations, affordability for all learners to ensure that cost is not a barrier to higher learning, and quality and innovation. To be a leader in learning, Alberta must continue to move ahead towards excellence.

More can always be done. Now, does that mean more dollars? Does it mean better use of existing resources? Does it mean new types of programs? Those are just some of the questions that a comprehensive review of the entire postsecondary system will answer.

Mr. Speaker, we've planned that full and comprehensive review of Alberta's postsecondary system. That's what the motion is calling for, but it's calling for it in the context of a learning commission. As we heard earlier, a learning commission puts a structure around it that may not be the best structure for that review in this year. We want to do it thoroughly, but we also want to do it quickly. We want to move ahead to make whatever changes are necessary, certainly on the urgent priority of access, on the very, very important priority of affordability, and of course on the always essential priority of quality. Our system must be dynamic, it must continue to change and adapt to meet current and future needs, and it must reflect the perspectives of all Albertans. So the review that we're talking about will not only review affordability, access, and quality but also roles and responsibilities.

Once we look at the system and say, "What do we need to be a world leader in education?" then we can look at our existing system and say: "What do we have? What are the gaps? What do we need to do to get there? What holes must be filled?" Our system must be dynamic. It must continue to change and adapt to meet current and future needs. So we must take that look, develop that policy, that strategy which says, "This is Alberta as a learning society" and identifies what we need to put into effect to get there.

One of our most valuable assets in our ability to create that postsecondary system that meets the demands of a changing world is the willingness of government and stakeholders to periodically sit down and assess where our postsecondary education system is. The success is in constantly looking at where we're at, figuring out where we need to be. Where do we need to be? Well, we need to have that first-class world-leading education system. If we aim any lower, we're aiming too low.

Do we need a learning commission? No, Mr. Speaker, because we have already moved forward to set up. In fact, the invitations have gone out to people to sit on a steering committee for a committee which will drive the process, which will ensure that there's research done on every aspect as identified by the conference that we had in mid-January, followed up with subconferences in early February with both the learning community and the aboriginal community to fill out the breadth of our scope and discussion.

We'll establish a learning steering committee that will have representatives from across the province bringing forward perspectives from students, from people who are dealing with literacy programs, people who are dealing with the learning communities in various methods across the province as well as people who know and understand the college system, know and understand the university system, know and understand the urban and rural issues and concerns, bringing in the aboriginal perspective; in short, a comprehensive review which will culminate in a public discussion which will happen throughout the review but in a conference in late October so that people can reflect on the issues that we've talked about, the research that's been discussed, and find the best way forward, make recommendations on the best way forward.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the interest of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in putting the motion on the table and the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood in moving the motion. I certainly appreciate the comments from the other speakers tonight with respect to the need for this review. It's absolutely essential that we have a very strong vision of Alberta as a learning society: how we move forward with that, how we make sure that access is there when students will want to do it, but more importantly that we inspire every Albertan to want to advance their education so they can take advantage of the opportunities which present themselves in this province, not just the economic opportunities but the social responsibilities that are available for us all to maximize our own human potential, contribute back to our communities in the strongest way possible so that we continue to make Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to speak in favour of the motion proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Part of the argument, as I see it, across the way by the Member for Calgary-Shaw and the minister seems to be that time is of the essence, that we have to move ahead. Well, it doesn't mean that if you have a commission, the whole advanced education system shuts down. There are things that will continue to go on as they did with the Learning Commission.

Mr. Speaker, I was somewhat dubious as a school board member when the Learning Commission was set up, I have to admit. I thought, well, you know, there would be some good Tories on there, and probably they'd do what the government said. But I was pleasantly surprised. I think that the Learning Commission came back with a very comprehensive report. Not that all of us would agree with every single item on there; there are obviously some things that we don't. But I think that above all it captured what needed to happen in public education.

I think, more importantly, what it's done is set a mark that we can all judge the government by. In other words, we can go through the points. I'll use one that's important to me. Is the government going to move on early childhood education, full-day kindergarten in high-needs areas? That was a recommendation, and we can look at that, Mr. Speaker, so we know exactly what the government is doing.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if that worked well in public education, I can't for the life of me see why a similar process would not work well in advanced education to make it broader, to make it more independent. That's certainly one of the key recommendations of the Commission on Learning, as has already been pointed out by the Member for Calgary-Currie. They could see that there were problems there when they looked into public education. They said that we should undertake a comprehensive, independent review of Alberta's postsecondary education. That's precisely what we're trying to do with this motion.

Now, if I may, Mr. Speaker – time is of the essence – there are a couple of things the government can do about two major things. They don't need to wait for a commission. We know that we have a problem with tuition fees. The temporary measure announced this year is creating uncertainty. We look at this. There are over 230,000 postsecondary students in Alberta. In exchange for receiving education, students sacrifice an average of nearly $5,000 per year in tuition and other mandatory fees. They sacrifice income opportunities from jobs now so that they can get better jobs in the future. At the end of this most of them on average – and it goes higher – will have a $20,000 debt. That's a considerable amount of money for people who are just starting out in the workforce if they don't have wealthy parents. Clearly, we could have done something about that. We could have put on a permanent freeze as other provinces have done.

The other thing that was alluded to, Mr. Speaker, was the accessibility, and that is a major issue. As my colleague has already talked about, we have the second-lowest participation rate in the country. That's a very serious matter. I think the Member for Calgary-Shaw is correct. I mean, a lot of us probably wouldn't have got into university with the marks that they need to get into university or NAIT or SAIT or Mount Royal. We have a serious problem with accessibility. We didn't have to wait for any review to know that, if we have the second-lowest participation rate in a rich province like this. We could have moved ahead. So time is of the essence, as I said. It's not that everything stops. We could have moved on those two major things.

We're moving ahead with some items. The minister has promised to undertake a review of the affordability of postsecondary education in Alberta. We're glad, Mr. Speaker, but what we're saying is: why don't we take a broad look as we did with public education? The government, I believe, says that it worked well there. I don't understand for the life of me why it won't work well in postsecondary education, especially with the recommendation that came from this group. It's a broad sense, and it would be independent. [interjection] To the minister, I'm glad that you're consulting and doing those sorts of things. That's an important role for the minister to participate in. But this commission, if it was set up like the learning commission on public education, would be independent of the government, would set some standards, would look at it broadly, right across. It wouldn't be sort of behind closed doors with smaller meetings, although some good things could come out of that. It sets a goal. It sets standards for into the future of what we might expect for our postsecondary education.

Just as with the Learning Commission now we can watch from year to year to year what's happening with class sizes, what's happening with some of the other recommendations that the government hasn't got around to yet. We have some way to judge, then, if the government is going in the right direction. We have sort of piecemeal things that occur, maybe some very good things for the minister with his consultations, but how do we have a measuring stick to know later on whether the government is following what they were told?

It seems to me that this review, rather than just a review of the affordability of postsecondary education and a lot of the other consultation, is behind closed doors. Tell us how broad it's going to be, Mr. Minister. We haven't seen what's going to happen laid down like when the commission was announced. That's the problem. If you're going to do something that we're advocating, I would have thought that we would know about it by now and that it would be laid out: here are the parameters of what we're looking at, this is what we're going to do, this is how we're going to be judged, and here's where the public hearings are going to be, as they did with the Learning Commission. I don't see that, Mr. Speaker. I don't see that at all.

The reality is that we need it, I believe, because we are spending a lot of money, and so we should, perhaps more or less. We have private universities, private schools proliferating in the province. Is that the right way to go? Well, I have my doubts about it, but if a commission looked at it, maybe they could take a look at this and see if this is good or bad.

We've had discussions in here. I believe it was a member across the way that talked about wanting more fine arts in the schools. Well, that has implications for postsecondary education also. What is the role of arts and science at the universities? A lot of people say that they've been downgraded. We haven't had that discussion.

Mr. Speaker, this is what we're talking about. We lay it out like the Learning Commission. This is what we're going to do: we're going to have public hearings, we're going to do the work, we're going to come back and make a report, and then the government has the right and can respond to it. But at least we have a measuring stick.

The point that I want to make in a broad sense, Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, is that we deserve a true commitment to postsecondary education starting with a review. I just want to enlarge on this. It should examine a wide range of issues – this is a point to the minister – including accessibility, affordability, quality, balance between teaching and research, the role of the private sector, how to finance the system, and the future of the arts, sciences, and humanities.

If the minister could stand up and say: well, we're going to lay this out in a public way – I don't care if you call it a commission. [interjection] Well, you're saying it behind closed doors. [interjection] Well, we don't know exactly what's coming. It has not been laid out, Mr. Speaker. It has not been laid out the same way the Learning Commission was. That's all I'm saying.

I'm not saying to the minister that there aren't going to be some good things coming out of it. We're saying: let's put it in a broader way and set some measuring sticks so we can do as the Learning Commission. That's all we're saying. Let's do it right. Let's do it in a broad way. That doesn't mean that in the short term we don't deal with things like accessibility and affordability. Of course we do, Mr. Speaker. The whole system isn't going to shut down while we do this, just as the public education and Catholic education systems didn't shut down. Let's do it right. If we're going to spend this money and we want to look into it, let's do it right. Do it independently. Set it up and do the hearings, and then come back with a report that, hopefully, would be as good as the other one.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to add my comments to the debate concerning this Motion 509. I'm especially pleased to speak to the motion since I've been involved in the postsecondary education system for some years in a number of capacities.

I believe first of all that we have a system that is an excellent postsecondary system and one which is very responsive to the majority of Alberta students. It's a system that endows our students with not only facts and knowledge, but more importantly it endows them with the ability to think creatively and critically.

I don't think I'm overstating it when I say that one of the reasons that our province has done so well over the past hundred years is that we have had an excellent postsecondary education system here in the province of Alberta. Albertans by nature, Mr. Speaker, are creative and imaginative, hard-working, entrepreneurial, and these are the characteristics which one needs to be successful in postsecondary education.

With this in mind, I certainly agree with the sentiments of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in bringing this motion. I would agree that we need to continually work to improve and enhance our advanced education system. We certainly need to make sure that it is accessible, affordable, well funded, and effective when it comes to the areas of research. Certainly, our present and future realities would demand that we continue to hold the postsecondary education system high in our priorities. Indeed, the future growth and prosperity of our economy here in Alberta are dependent on our ability to invest in human capital and to train and attract skilled and enhanced and educated individuals that will be able to meet the needs of the future economy.

So by reviewing and investing in the advanced learning system, we certainly ensure that future generations of Albertans will be provided with the knowledge that they need to realize their goals and aspirations. In support of this vision I'm very pleased that the Minister of Advanced Education has announced that a review of our postsecondary education system will be taking place later this year. I'm certainly heartened to hear that the review will be comprehensive and inclusive and that it will involve stakeholders and partners from both within and outside the education system. In addition, I'm sure that that review will help to raise the awareness of some of the challenges that the system is presently facing and that it will hopefully generate a dialogue out of which a lot of insights and ideas and solutions and innovations could arise.

So while I applaud my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona for his concern in bringing this motion and seeing that Alberta students receive the best higher learning that is possible, I certainly have some concerns, which I share with the hon. Government House Leader, that the motion calls for measures which are substantially the same as what the government is already in the process of doing.

Not only that, Mr. Speaker, but as the hon. minister has already mentioned, the government has been doing much more than planning a review. Aside from the review, the province has been looking at ways to improve accessibility, affordability, and the excellence of all of our advanced education institutions and by working with our partners and stakeholders in the field has made considerable gains in that regard. The recently announced budget allotments; legislation, including Bill 1, as has been mentioned; and other initiatives introduced by the government are a direct result of the collaborative approach.

Given my concerns, Mr. Speaker, I guess that in summary I would say that I do have concerns about the overlap between the commission that is requested in this motion and the comprehensive review that has already been announced by the Minister of Advanced Education. With that in mind, I will end my comments and will not be supporting the motion as presented.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, support Motion 509. I believe it's a starting point. I also prefer the idea of an independent commission due to the greater transparency afforded, as suggested by my fellow member from Calgary-Currie.

While I understand the Member for Calgary-Shaw's reluctance because of how commissions tend to drag out, it's up to the government to adopt the measures that commissions have put forward and quickly implement them so that we can start to benefit.

One of the most revolutionary reports of its time happened with the Kratzmann report in 1980, and if we had put in place the recommendation of that time, the major recommendation that Kratzmann put forward of 20 students per teacher in a classroom, just think how dramatically our education system would have advanced in the 25 years that followed. We're just starting through the Learning Commission to approach some of those pupil-teacher ratios that were recommended way back in 1980.

Another recommendation that was made in 1980 and was one of the underlying reasons for the Calgary public teachers' strike that lasted the better part of three and a half months was the fact that at that time elementary teachers were given no preparation time. What happened immediately – while the Learning Commission was taking place and prior to it being set up, the government, basically, went into the contract, stripped out preparation time, and the idea of a pupil-teacher ratio was basically suspended.

Now, the Learning Commission – granted it's a slow process, but it is a process – and its independent nature I think added to its own credibility. The government accepted 86 of the independent Learning Commission's 100 recommendations. As a result, slowly but surely it seems that these recommendations are being acted upon. We still haven't got to the point where we're not closing inner-city schools and dealing with the larger issues, but it is a starting point.

The problems are acute at the postsecondary system. Bill 1 does not begin to address them. Bill 1 is not going to change the fact that at the U of C they're going to continue for the next four years to have a 5 per cent clawback on programming. That will not be addressed in Bill 1. Bill 1 cannot magically with the wave of a wand create 15,000 new spaces by 2008. It's great to hear that ground has been broken at Mount Royal. That ground, as I understand it from last week's release, will account for 10 new classrooms. I'm not sure how big those classrooms are, but it's certainly a small portion of the 15,000 seats that have been promised for 2008 and the 60,000 by 2020. These are wonderful goals, but unless we have some kind of a measuring stick, such as Motion 509 suggests, our chances of getting there are very much limited.

The hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View questioned the validity of the MacLean's review, so let's just rewrite history. Say that MacLean's hasn't written these reviews over the years, which have unfortunately put my University of Calgary further down on its list. Let's look at the internal reviews by the students themselves, which recognized the University of Calgary as 47th out of 48 in terms of student satisfaction with the institution. Now, there have been good professors at the university. There continue to be good professors, and there are some very good programs in research, undergraduate, and postgraduate, but the institution itself has been forced to cannibalize, and as a result, the quality of education has been reduced. Class sizes are getting larger. Temporary, portable solutions are being sought rather than permanent infrastructure. These have to be addressed.

We currently have the lowest per capita postsecondary graduation level from this province, and again Bill 1, while it basically throws 3 and a half billion dollars of one-time funding at the problem, doesn't have a sequential solution to it. Twenty-five per cent of students were eligible students who had these high grade-point averages, as the hon. member alluded to, that would have kept at least myself and himself out of the institution at that time – or if current averages were being applied, we wouldn't have made it in – and students who have the money to afford these inflated tuitions, with this one-year exception of basically what amounts to a freeze and then it increases as usual.

Bill 1 does not in itself even approach the problem. Bill 1 is a one-shot, one-time postsecondary band-aid, as opposed to our opposition legacy fund, which would top up funds on an ongoing annual basis as a percentage of future surpluses, 35 per cent to be exact, with another support of 25 per cent to be set aside for infrastructure needs. So that's the type of long-term solution that we need, long-term funding.

What Motion 509 does is say that we've got to start somewhere, and let's start with Motion 509. The Learning Commission served as an independent measuring stick for public education. We desperately need such a device for postsecondary. You've got to start somewhere. I would suggest: the sooner the better. Let's start with Motion 509. We can always fine-tune it as the process gets under way. I thank the hon. members of the NDP opposition for putting it forward.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to express some ideas about the need for a review of our postsecondary education. I'm very pleased to hear the minister today talking about the action he's going to take. If I can think back to what I read, some 2,500 years ago Confucius taught the rulers of the kingdoms in ancient China: to make society prosperous, provide them with education. This has been true for thousands of years. Even the recent study from Stanford University indicates that among nations in the world now the most prosperous, with the highest quality of life are the nations with high education participation.

It just happened that last February I had an opportunity to be in Toronto, and I visited the Ontario Assembly and had an opportunity there to meet with the hon. David Zimmer. He's a parliamentarian, assistant to the Attorney General. The coincidence is that at that time the government of Ontario released a report on postsecondary education. I had the privilege to receive a copy hot off the press. To my surprise when I read through that, there was a quotation about the things that we have done in Alberta. The outstanding part is that the hon. Bob Rae was commissioned to do the study on that. He was the former NDP Premier in Ontario. In his report to the government of Ontario he quoted the great things that Alberta did. I felt so proud, so great. We looked at that.

Anyway, I took that report and gave it to our Minister of Advanced Education. So from that perspective, I don't think we need to again have a study here, a study there. We should probably just look at the report from Ontario. It has been done quite extensively. There are a lot of good ideas in there as input for the minister to have the review.

Now, I'm for the review, to look at the funding of the institutions, particularly Calgary postsecondary education, the need for infrastructure funding, for equity funding, and on the other matters. But I am very glad that the minister already said a few minutes ago about that approach. I also want to emphasize that students are the target of any review and make sure that accessibility and affordability are addressed. I only want to say that I differ in the method of the review. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is saying to organize a commission to study. I am quite concerned whenever we organize a commission to study. There are two things. If the government is doing it, hon. opposition, then you have a chance to criticize. But if an independent commission is to study it, you have to . . .

The Acting Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, but under Standing Order 8(4), which provides for up to five minutes for the sponsor of a motion other than a government motion to close debate, I would invite the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood to close debate on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to close debate on this motion. I think this is an important motion to come before this House since it represents one of the recommendations of the Learning Commission, one of the recommendations that has not been adopted by the government. The government has chosen instead to proceed with an ad hoc approach, a variety of approaches, but without a comprehensive plan, without a systematic look at our postsecondary system in this province with all of the pieces fitting together. Certainly, they'll deal with some things. They'll deal with tuition policy, for example, yet we don't know the direction, and we haven't had a degree of public input into that discussion.

When the Premier announced the freeze, there were some very serious weaknesses with that, Mr. Speaker, not the least of which was that it was simply the government paying an increase, not preventing an increase, which means that next year students may well be hit with a double increase as well. The use of the term "entrepreneurial" by the government when it comes to things like tuition fees sends shivers up my spine because it sounds like they're prepared to experiment with market forces where those are inappropriate once again.

Certainly, things like private education and the proliferation of public funding for private postsecondary institutions is not something the government seems to want to have public discussion on. The role of institutions. For example, there's been a bit of a debate within the government caucus, obviously disagreements on the question of Mount Royal College. All of these things need to be placed in context with one another. The whole system in its relationship to itself needs to be considered, and there needs to be a degree of public discussion in a comprehensive way before the government establishes long-term policy.

In conclusion, I'd urge all members to support this motion because what it does is it encapsulates the Learning Commission's recommendation. It avoids what the government is, I'm afraid, making the mistake of doing, and that is to take an ad hoc approach towards our postsecondary institutions and our system in this province.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 509 lost]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 41
Appropriation Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to move for second reading Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005.

The Appropriation Act is the culmination of the month of discussion we've had in Committee of Supply, in which we've had a day for each department to discuss the estimates that have been brought forward. Particularly valuable in that discussion were the estimates, in my view, if you'll give me leave to say so, of Advanced Education, in which there's been a great leap forward in putting the wheels, if I can say, on our strategic plan. When we have a strategic plan in this province of unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit, certainly the underpinning of that strategic plan, that 20-year vision forward, is advancing our knowledge and advancing education.

So I am very pleased to move Bill 41 and move for the approval of the appropriation for the operation of the government in this year for many, many reasons, not the least of which, Mr. Speaker, is the important step that it's taking towards investing in the advancing of education, the advancing of knowledge in this province not only through the Department of Advanced Education but also in terms of the estimates of Innovation and Science, the commitment that's been made to that direction; the major commitment that's been made in the Education portfolio; the acknowledgement through the Health portfolio of the need to continue to have a sustainable health system and invest in wellness, invest in the health status of our community; the important steps forward in Justice and so many other areas. We've had the opportunity to debate that at length, so I won't continue to do that now but would ask the House to approve second reading of Bill 41.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed my pleasure to lead off debate on behalf of the Official Opposition on Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, this bill, as the hon. minister indicates, has been debated at some length now over I believe the past 23 sitting days. I think we managed to squeeze two in in one night there. The bill includes a total of almost $26 billion in spending. I think I've indicated it before, but I'm not afraid to say it again: $26 billion is an awfully, awfully big number, a bigger number than I can really get my head around. The spending is up nearly 6 per cent from last year's budget, and unfortunately no substantial tax relief for the Alberta taxpayers. In fact, it's been suggested in some quarters that we should be calling this government the tax and spend Conservatives. I'm not so sure that that would be entirely inaccurate given the fact that, as I indicated, there's no real tax relief and, in fact, an awful, awful lot of money being spent.

Mr. Speaker, more than 1,000 full-time employment equivalents are being added to the government, so in fact the government is getting bigger, not smaller. For a government that has long touted the fact that they don't believe in big government, they seem to be going the opposite direction from what their ideology would indicate.

Probably the most ironic thing is that we now have one extra ministry, and the extra ministry is Restructuring and Government Efficiency, if you can imagine, a ministry designed to make government more efficient, and presumably that would mean smaller. In fact, we're going in the opposite direction and getting bigger. I find that quite ironic, and I know that several of my colleagues do as well. In fact, several of the people that I've spoken to in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford are quite amused at that, and I don't doubt that people across the province are making the same comments, Mr. Speaker. So I do appreciate the humour in that.

Mr. Speaker, early on in my term as an MLA we had a third-quarter update from the Finance minister as regards last year's budget, and at that time there were a number of very fancy documents produced and circulated. I can't recall the exact catchphrase on the cover of those documents, but it was something to the effect of: on track and on schedule. Boy, you talk about government spin. This was amazing to me because only a couple of months later we found out that, in fact, this government had spent nearly $2 billion in excess of last year's original budget. How anybody could interpret that as meaning that they were on track and on schedule I'm not sure. Nevertheless, that's what we were told.

I've said this in the House before, but I do believe it bears repeating. Only by the grace of God and incredibly good fortune, the fact that natural gas and oil revenues were higher than anybody, even this member, had anticipated they might be last year, only by virtue of those facts did this government not break its own law last year by going into a deficit situation, quite clearly, with $2 billion in excess spending. In fact, Mr. Speaker, a lot of that spending was announced within weeks of the budget being approved last year. At that point in time, there was no certainty at all that oil and natural gas revenues would stay as high as they ultimately did. So, really, I think that quite clearly this government could very well have ended up in a deficit situation last year. I'm certainly not advocating that. I wouldn't want to see it happen, and I wouldn't want to see it happen this year either. But, boy, we have to be awfully careful with the way that we spend money without it being budgeted and planned for.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, again this year, literally within days of the Finance minister making the Budget Address in this Assembly, we had ministers going around talking about unbudgeted spending and the fact that if revenues stay high, there are all sorts of goodies that might be in store for Albertans. Again, I'm not suggesting that I have a problem necessarily with sharing the wealth, as it were, but the fact that within two days of a Budget Address we had ministers going around talking about unbudgeted spending really does, I believe, bring into question the entire budget process, especially in conjunction with the fact that we know that we were $2 billion over budgeted spending last year.

Mr. Elsalhy: It's a mock budget.

Mr. R. Miller: A mock budget, the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung calls it, and perhaps that's what it is.

You know, we came into this House later this year than is normal, ostensibly because ministers were struggling to put their budgets together. I've gone on record before as saying that I think it might well have had something to do with the fact, Mr. Speaker, that there was a certain amount of—I'm not sure if I would call it squabbling, but I think the words I used before were that everybody and his dog were scrambling to get their piece of the pie, knowing that the revenues were high and there was going to be this incredible amount of spending taking place this year, 6 per cent more than was done last year. I think everybody wanted to get in on that action and probably justifiably so.

Nevertheless, we came into the House at least a couple of weeks later than would normally be the case. We never even had a budget to debate prior to the end of last year's fiscal year. I'm not so sure that that's necessarily prudent planning on behalf of the government, that not only did we have to spend $2 billion in supplementary supply to make up for the money that wasn't budgeted for last year but then 5 billion and some dollars in interim supply to get us through to the point where the budget could be approved by this House and money available to run the business of government. Really, I think the entire budget process is called into question by the actions of this government.

I know I mentioned earlier that the province of Saskatchewan last year, for the first time ever in history, Mr. Speaker, had to ask for some supplementary supply money. Really, considering that this government says that this is standard procedure, I would suggest that we should have an awfully careful look at what our neighbours to the east do in terms of . . .

Mr. Martin: NDs.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, it's not always been ND. The Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview seems to think that the NDs deserve an awful lot of credit, but I said: the first time in a hundred-year history.

Mr. Speaker, quite clearly, there is with good planning and good budgeting a way to present a budget document that actually has some meaning and, if I can use the phrase, be worth the paper that it's written on.

Having complained about that a little bit, I would like to thank the various ministers. At least, certainly on every occasion that I had opportunity to be part of a budget debate, there was a real willingness, I think, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the ministers to provide reasonable answers to questions that were reasonably asked by the opposition and by some of the government backbenchers in terms of the budget that was presented before us for the various departments. Where the answers couldn't be given the night of the budget debate or the afternoon of the budget debate, certainly for the questions that I asked, most ministers were very timely in getting a written response back to us in advance of having to debate this bill this evening. I do appreciate that.

In fact, I would suggest that as one of the crop of rookie MLAs I found that perhaps to be one of the most productive parts of everything that we've done in the Assembly this spring: the budget debates. It was very informative. It was civil, and, as I say, provided good information, not only to members of this Assembly but ultimately to Albertans, and that really is what it's all about.

Mr. Speaker, I've commented before on the fact that this particular budget and this appropriation bill are based on a price of west Texas intermediate of $42 a barrel for the coming year. While I have indicated that that is actually a little bit higher than I had thought the government might use, it is nevertheless, I believe, likely to be a bit on the low side. When we look back at the end of the year, of course, we'll know whether or not the Finance minister or the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford had better prognosticating skills, but certainly at this point I'm quite willing to suggest that I believe $42 a barrel will likely end up having been on the low side. Having said that, I think our budget surplus at the end of the year is most likely going to be somewhat more than what the government has indicated. That would be consistent with the pattern that we've seen over the last several years.

Perhaps even a bigger factor, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that this budget is based on a dollar at 83 and a half cents. When I came into the office this morning, I heard that for the first time in some period of time now our dollar had actually sunk below 79 cents. So at this point it's a difference of 4 and a half cents, and that will have a big impact on the amount of the surplus if the dollar were to stay below 80 cents. Of course, again, nobody knows for sure, but I'd be very surprised if the dollar ends up at 83 and a half cents, averaged over the year, and certainly I don't expect that it will be higher than that.

In fact, the government's own budget material indicates that most of the stock houses and financial institutions are indicating somewhere below 82 cents as what the average prediction is for the coming year. Even the industry experts are indicating about a penny and a half or more less than what the government is using in their own budget figures. So, Mr. Speaker, again, based on the fact that we're using an unrealistically low price for the barrel of oil and, in my mind, an unrealistically high estimate for the Canadian dollar, I have no doubt that we're going to be looking at a very healthy surplus again at the end of this coming year.

That really probably begs the question: how much will the supplementary supply estimates be when we come to March next year? We were $2 billion over budget this year, and I'll be surprised, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, if a year from now we're not debating supplementary supply estimates that are at least as high, if not higher. Again, given some of the comments from ministers and others shortly after the budget was released, I have every reason to expect that we're going to be looking at some pretty big numbers.

Mr. Speaker, I'm just going to quickly touch on a couple of other points, and then I would like to speak specifically to the Solicitor General's department since I didn't have an opportunity to take part in that budget debate.

There's $667 million in this budget this year for the Alberta heritage savings trust fund to begin inflation-proofing the fund, and that's something that the Alberta Liberals have long been calling for. All I can say is: it's about time. It's certainly better than not inflation-proofing. I would really, really like to have seen us make more of an effort there, but at least it is a step, albeit a small one, in the right direction.

There's $250 million for the advanced education endowment fund, a small part of the money that the hon. Minister of Advanced Education referenced a few minutes ago. I know that I'm on record as saying this, but I'd like the opportunity to say it again. At that rate, Mr. Speaker, if we were to continue that, it would take 12 years for us to reach the magical $3 billion cap. Under an Alberta Liberal plan, if I remember right, within three years we would virtually have made the cap. Although it's an effort, I think we could have done more.

Now, specific to the Department of Solicitor General, I've made an awful lot of comments in this House, Mr. Speaker, about Constable Green at Harry Ainlay high school and his black lab, Ebony, and the work they do in educating students about the dangers of particularly crystal meth but also drugs in general. Following some of my comments, the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner sort of took up the cause and started talking about having drug-sniffing dogs in every school, and even the Solicitor General seemed to pick up on that, and there was an awful lot of talk about having these dogs doing enforcement duties in the schools.

I just wanted to be on record, Mr. Speaker, as saying that that's not what this program is about at all. This program is an educational program designed to educate students about the dangers of drug use and, by bringing a dog in and showing them the capabilities of the dog, create awareness of the fact that this tool is there should it be needed. Never was it intended to sniff drugs out specifically and be used as an enforcement tool.

In fact, in the dogs for drug-free schools program outline, it outlines that the primary component is to provide education to youth using a passive-trained narcotic detection dog as the catalyst. In other words, this dog, when it does smell drugs, Mr. Speaker, will actually sit there and wait for the police member to come over as opposed to scratching or barking or whatever. It's a very well-behaved dog, and it's meant not to create any anxiety or animosity in the schools but, rather, to educate.

The secondary component of the program is visibility. Just simply by having the dogs in the school, Mr. Speaker, they provide a constant reminder to students that the ability is in fact available to locate drugs should that be required or desired by the school.

A member of the Medicine Hat police force, a school resource officer who's involved with the program in Medicine Hat, Mr. Speaker, was quoted as saying: "The purpose is not to search students and their lockers. It's to educate them about the use and misuse of illegal drugs." He also goes on to say, as I indicated, that "as opposed to scratching or barking, the dogs will be trained to search on command and sit when they detect the smell of narcotics." As I said, this is really meant to be an educational tool.

I'm just going to share with you some statistics about the program and how well it works and how inexpensive it is and really, I think, something that if it's too late to squeeze into this year's budget, I sincerely hope that next year the Solicitor General will have a careful look at this. I do know that Constable Green has made these documents available to the Solicitor General, so he may well have had a chance to review them already, Mr. Speaker.

The cost sharing. I mentioned this before. This particular dog that's in the Harry Ainlay high school is a dog that belonged to Constable Green already. Constable Green was already the school resource officer at Harry Ainlay anyway, so the costs are really minimal. In fact, the Edmonton public school board and the Catholic school board in Edmonton are sharing: $2,500 expense each so a total of $5,000 to cover the cost of dog food, veterinary fees, equipment, and other incidentals. So for a very, very minimal price they've been able to bring Ebony into the schools.

Constable Green has provided a list of all of the presentations that they've made in this past school year, and it's far too exhaustive to run through right now, but I will say that from September of last year through to the Christmas break, there were a total 25 presentations made by Ebony and his handler or her handler. I can't recall if Ebony is male or female. Five hundred and twenty administration and staff and parents were able to view the presentation, and a total of 3,835 students were presented with this particular program. From January of this year, 2005, through to the end of the school year a further 21 presentations will take place, including at least 165 administrators and parents; 6,795 students will see the presentation this term.

It's unbelievable to me that for the small sum of $5,000 and an incredible effort made by Constable Green he is able to take this presentation in the Edmonton area alone to well over 10,000 students. That is just a tremendous effort, Mr. Speaker, and I really believe that if the education component of this works, as it is hoped that it will, students will not only be educated in terms of the dangers of crystal meth in particular but drugs in general, certainly will have a better understanding of the capabilities of the dogs. My hope and the hope of Constable Green is that students will hence be reluctant to become involved in drugs and will be reluctant to bring drugs into the school.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move third reading of Bill Pr. 3, Medicine Hat Community Foundation Amendment Act, 2005.

This act was discussed in Private Bills Committee, and the amendment addresses and better reflects the mandate and the focus of this foundation.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 3 read a third time]

Bill 40
Alberta Personal Income Tax
Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is the bill that I thought I was getting up to speak to before.

I'm pleased to move on behalf of the Minister of Finance Bill 40, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2), which has been carried throughout in debate by the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

So I will relinquish my spot now and allow him to speak to the bill and its contents.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Ducharme: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak at third reading of Bill 40, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2). This bill proposes amendments to the Alberta family employment tax credit that will enhance the credit available to low- and middle-income working families. This tax credit has two goals. The first is to provide some additional financial support for children in lower and middle-income families. The second objective is to support parents as they work.

One amendment in this bill would reduce the entry threshold to $2,760 from $6,500. This change will make low-income working families eligible for the program. Because the credit is phased in, lowering the threshold will also increase the amount many low-income working families receive.

As a further improvement to many Alberta families, amendments in this act will extend the credit to more children in the family. Under the new rules the third child will qualify for up to $300 and the fourth for up to $100. Currently only the first and second children qualify for the credit. We also propose to increase the maximum credit for the first child from $500 to $550. Overall, these changes will increase the benefits available to qualified working families.

Finally, to make sure these changes are protected over time, the Alberta family employment tax credit will be indexed to inflation.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, the changes proposed to the Alberta family employment tax credit will serve to expand the credit to more families, increase the amount available to many qualifying families, and index credits to inflation.

I urge all members to support Bill 40.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I indicated when we were in committee stage on this bill, I really don't have any problems with it. I'm recommending to my caucus colleagues that we support it.

I did raise a couple of questions as to: why bother having an entry-level threshold of $2,760 at all given that there may well be some workers who make less than that amount? If we're lowering it to that level, perhaps we should just dispense with an entry-level threshold at all and allow anybody who works and has any employment income to benefit to some extent from this tax credit.

Nevertheless, as the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake has described, it does certainly provide some further tax credit to families, recognizing those that have more than two children, and that is a good thing. I'm certainly going to, as I suggested, recommend to my caucus colleagues that we support this. With that, Mr. Speaker, I will take my seat.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll be very brief. We'll support this bill. It's a good step in the right direction. However, we must point out that it is only a partial solution.

It's hard to fathom the government's direction with support for families when they move in this direction on the one hand and on the other hand they retain the health care premiums, which hit families, especially low- and middle-income families, very hard. We see a real contradiction in the direction here and certainly would recommend to the government that if they really want to get serious about helping families financially in this province, they ought to get rid of the health care premium.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to commend the government for the indexing aspect. I hope that this represents a new trend and that we can see the indexing idea attached to other programs, like AISH and SFI and so on, so that programs wouldn't be so arbitrary but would gradually adjust as inflation increases through the years. So this is great. I'm glad this indexing aspect is here.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader on behalf of the Minister of Finance to close debate?

[Motion carried; Bill 40 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed with the next item before us, the chair is a little confused in looking at his watch and the clock before us. My time indicates 9:35. Is that correct?

An Hon. Member: Correct.

The Acting Speaker: Okay. We'll follow my watch. It seems like that clock has gone one hour ahead of time for some reason. There is an important vote that should happen at 10:45.

Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Pharmacy and Drug Amendment Act, 2005

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to address some of the issues that were raised in second reading of Bill 38. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre asked about future legislation regarding an expanded role for pharmacists in order to free up more doctors' time to care for patients. The scope of practice for pharmacists is dealt with separately under the health professions legislation for pharmacists in the Health Professions Act. On the other hand, the Pharmacy and Drug Act amendment removes the requirement for a specific amount of drugs to be stated on a prescription. This change allows more flexibility in the quantity the individual receives when the prescription is filled as long as it does not exceed the maximum amount stated on the prescription.

The member asked why institution pharmacies are not required to be licensed. This is a timely question. Institution pharmacies have not required a licence because of the limited scope of their operation. An institution pharmacy is only providing services to patients of the institution. An institution pharmacy that operates beyond the limited scope allowed under the act must be licensed.

It's important to note that while the act addresses the licensing and operation of pharmacies, individual pharmacists are regulated under separate legislation. The pharmacist in the institution pharmacy must be a licensed pharmacist and must adhere to the regulations, standards of practice, and code of ethics that apply to the members of the College of Pharmacists. Health and Wellness is working closely with the College of Pharmacists to ensure that the provisions for institution pharmacies maintain the requisite limitations.

In a few moments I will be introducing a House amendment to Bill 38 to more narrowly limit the definition of institution pharmacy.

Regarding self-regulated professions, it should be noted that none of the regulated health professions governed under the Health Professions Act exempt their members from regulation by their respective colleges. Bill 38 deals with the licensing of the pharmacy, not the individual pharmacist. The legislation provides the ability to set out the physical and operational requirements for a pharmacy. Mr. Chairman, when we look across Canada, the government is not aware of jurisdictions that allow licensed pharmacists to practise outside of their regulatory structures. Alberta is no different in this respect. All health professions in Alberta that are or will be governed under the Health Professions Act require their members to adhere to the regulation, including pharmacists.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview suggested regulating bulk shippers of crystal meth ingredients as an effective way to combat the use of crystal meth. Bulk shipments of products such as pseudoephedrine and ephedrine are being addressed at the federal level.

Another suggestion involved bulk purchasing of prescription medications used by health authorities in order to lower costs. In September 2004 first ministers announced the 10-year plan to strengthen health care. A key component was a desire to develop and implement a national pharmaceutical strategy. First ministers specifically identified a need to pursue purchasing strategies to obtain best prices for Canadians for drugs and vaccines. Bulk purchasing is one strategy under consideration. In regard to a reference-based pricing strategy, again the 10-year plan to strengthen health care applies.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview indicated that pharmaceutical education needs to be enhanced, especially in senior care. Mr. Chairman, the Alberta Management Committee on Drug Utilization is a multistakeholder committee that oversees the Alberta drug utilization program. The program includes activities that encourage optimal drug prescribing and use. These activities include drug utilization reviews to analyze drug use and behavioural change intervention to educate physicians/pharmacists on drug use options. Some of the behavioural change strategies include academic detailing, where a trained professional, often a pharmacist, will visit physicians to talk about specific drugs.

Another education piece is the recently implemented community patient safety initiative. The initiative involves pharmacists going over checklists as a type of risk assessment with certain patients who are receiving a new medication. By educating patients about all their medications and engaging them in discussions about their medication, the patients' health and safety through drug therapy will be enhanced.

I trust that this clarifies the points raised during second reading. I would now like to introduce a House amendment to Bill 38, and I believe that that has already been circulated. I previously noted that the questions on the scope of institutional pharmacies are timely. This is because I am proposing a related House amendment which will impact three sections of the Pharmacy and Drug Act.

First, subsection (1)(j)(v.i) will be repealed to exclude the possibility of the facility listed there operating an institutional pharmacy. This is appropriate as the amended definition of institution pharmacy allows for compounding, dispensing, and selling of all types of scheduled drugs. This change will not prevent these facilities from assisting their clients who are taking prescribed medication. The definition of "dispense" in the Government Organization Act does not include the administration of a drug. Therefore, this House amendment maintains the integrity of institution pharmacies.

The second change will repeal subsection (1)(j)(vii), which was designed to allow for any other facility "operated by or approved by the Minister of Health and Wellness" that may not otherwise be listed to have an institutional pharmacy. This clause is being removed to avoid the possibility that a private surgical facility that has been approved as such by the minister could operate an institutional pharmacy. This was clearly not the intent of the legislation as institution pharmacies are intended to be pharmacies operated and regulated by a regional health authority or other government agency. Also, the definition in section 4(4) of a patient of an institution pharmacy is more clearly defined to ensure that institution pharmacies only serve patients of the institution. Services to the general public will require the pharmacy to be licensed.

Finally, section 23.1(2) will be amended by striking out "giving a copy to" and substituting "serving a copy on." This change was recommended by the Legislative Review Committee of the Canadian Bar Association.

The Alberta College of Pharmacists has been consulted and supports this House amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I now move the amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, the amendment that's being moved by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw shall be referred to as amendment A1.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to initially talk to amendment A1. I think that in general we are in agreement with this amendment, and I understand that there has been some communication between the hon. member and the Official Opposition health critic, so I'm going to be in favour of this amendment.

Maybe now is the time, or maybe when we go back to regular committee business would be the time, for a comment on licensing of institutional pharmacies because there is division on this issue and there is no consensus whether we should require institutional pharmacies to be licensed like regular community pharmacies, for example, and make them fall under the purview of the Alberta College of Pharmacists or whether this exemption should continue. Like I say, there is division in the profession, and there is division even in my own caucus. It's a subject for more discussion, I think. There is definitely a strong call for standardization and offering uniform standards of care. I think any reduction of the standard of the service offered is totally unacceptable.

So I'm going to talk a bit more about this in regular committee. I just wanted to highlight what I see as a very positive component of this amendment with respect to subsection (B)(viii), stipulating what is an institutional pharmacy. I commend the hon. sponsor of this amendment because this really offers clarity in that this facility or this institution has to be operated by the Crown and not a private provider. So pharmacies in private institutions will not be treated as institutional pharmacies, which is commendable.

To make it brief, I support this amendment, and I would encourage the other hon. members to do the same. Thank you.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you again, Mr. Chairman. It is, of course, with extreme pride and pleasure that I rise today to participate in the regular debate on Bill 38, Pharmacy and Drug Amendment Act, 2005. As was previously expressed by my hon. colleague for Edmonton-Centre, the Official Opposition critic for Health and Wellness, our caucus is generally in favour of this bill because it was drafted in consultation with both the regulatory pharmacy body, the Alberta College of Pharmacists, or ACP, and the advocacy group, the Pharmacists Association of Alberta, or R_xA. Very seldom does this government consult with the stakeholders, so this is definitely a welcome change.

I'm also in support of this bill because it really flows in tandem with Alberta Liberal policies that we shared with the people of this province during last November's election; namely, policy point 10, where we called for the restructuring of the health care workforce to free up physicians' time and take some stuff off the doctors' plates and let them focus only on what they can and should do. Pharmacists are trained and capable professionals, and now we're empowering them to perform more duties and accept more responsibility.

Further to that a bit was our policy point 22, calling for an enhanced pharmacare approach, and perhaps this will be coming our way soon too.

Pharmacists go through rigorous training in school. Our education is one of the most demanding out there. University of Alberta pharmacy graduates usually score the highest grades on the Pharmacy Examining Board of Canada, PEBC, exams, and our professors and instructors are highly respected. Our graduates choose to practise in the community pharmacy setting, hospital or institutional pharmacy, the drug industry, or the military.

Pharmacists always rate as the number one professional that people feel comfortable talking to. Canadians say that the person they trust the most is their pharmacist – this is a survey conducted every year, Mr. Chairman – not their clergy, not their physician, and obviously not their lawyer. Their pharmacist is the number one trusted professional, and they feel he or she is the most approachable. I was an okay pharmacist. Actually, I still am, and I suspect that me being a good community pharmacist had a little something to do with my election success last November.

Pharmacists are required to abide by professional legislation and strict regulations. We also swear an oath and adhere to a comprehensive and strong code of ethics.

Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, a pharmacist never stops learning. After we graduate, we are required to keep up with current and new developments and protocols, check out new treatment modalities, and constantly improve our professional skills. We take courses by correspondence or on the Internet, and we attend seminars, lectures, and professional development conferences. We call that continuing education.

Pharmacists also subscribe to a large malpractice insurance policy. However, let me tell you, Mr. Chairman and all hon. colleagues in this Chamber, that very few lawsuits and claims were ever filed against Alberta pharmacists. This is mostly a self-policing sector, whose members take enormous pride in the work they do and the services they provide to their patients and their families. We perform our duties carefully and diligently out of a concern for public safety and adherence to the highest standards, not for fear of litigation or disciplinary action.

When I graduated in 1994, Mr. Chairman, I had a T-shirt that said on its back, "Pharmacists, pillars of society," spelled with an "e." Now, obviously this was meant to be a funny grad joke, but in reality pharmacists are pillars of society, spelled with an "a." I truly believe that.

Pharmacists are team players. We are sometimes the first line of defence and sometimes the last line. We get along very well with other health care providers and, obviously, with the patient and his or her family. Pharmacists have approached the government on numerous occasions urging it to recognize their role as essential, front-line health care providers and to allow them to exercise what they were trained to do. Pharmacists are not there to count pills, Mr. Chairman, or to simply lick and stick.

There is, unfortunately, a shortage of pharmacists in Alberta specifically but all over Canada in general. Older pharmacists are retiring, fewer are graduating, and a good percentage of the new grads go to the United States. At one point, Mr. Chairman, we may have a crisis on our hands.

Many issues are important when we're talking about pharmacy services. I'm cognizant of the time and the constraints, and I will try to briefly touch on just a few.

This bill appears to broaden the licence categories to include facilities such as compounding and repackaging centres, and I think it's high time we did. Although those establishments existed a few years ago, their numbers and roles have significantly grown over the years. They're increasingly becoming a factor in the distribution and supply of pharmaceuticals and medications, and there is definitely a need to align them more closely with the rest of the industry.

Also, this bill attempts to create an avenue of appeal and review if for some reason the registrar of the college will not issue a licence to a pharmacy. I think this is a healthy move. Registering the drug wholesalers is also a positive move.

Now, briefly, previously I talked about the two pharmacy organizations we have in this province, one being the licensing and discipline arm and the other being the advocacy, or representative, arm. In my humble opinion, as I expressed in my response to the amendment, I think institutional pharmacies ought to be included in the requirement to get licensed just exactly as a community pharmacy would. They're currently outside the purview of the College of Pharmacists, and this has to change. My approach is one of standardization. The same standard of care has to be offered, and the same expectations have to be met. Anything less would be unacceptable. This is a point of view that I am particularly passionate about, and I know many people out there share this sentiment.

Expanding the scope of pharmacy practice should not be seen in any way as stepping on other people's or other professionals' turf or potentially disrupting the delivery of health care services. In fact, allowing pharmacists to recognize their full potential would be a healthy move. They're definitely underutilized.

Pharmacists have advocated for so long that the province allow them some prescribing authority, with proper training and evaluation. It's no secret that pharmacists are drug experts and are well versed in disease management. The profession wants to work with other front-line professionals to streamline and facilitate patient care as it pertains to drug therapy. Safeguards will be in place, and proper training and follow-up will be offered to those pharmacists whose names are going to appear on the clinical register.

Pharmacists have also requested the capacity to administer drugs by injection, which in my view is not an unreasonable move. Things like insulin or vaccines, for example, are given by injection. Again, I believe qualified pharmacists will have no problem administering such drugs in such a format.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I think we support this bill. In the future – and I hope in the not too distant future – we could come back to the Legislature and talk about issues like reimbursement for cognitive services, the practice of Internet and cross-border pharmacy, immediately making printed prescriptions mandatory, and possibly even the relationship between Alberta Health and Wellness and an agency like Alberta Blue Cross. These are questions that are on my mind, and I would hope to discuss them later.

But for the purposes of Bill 38 we are in support. I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I would appreciate clarification as to who is permitted to administer medication, particularly in the case of long-term care facilities. It is my perception that the level of recognized health care professional permitted to give out medications has been reduced from registered nurses with a four-year degree to a certified licensed practical nurse, who has received considerably less medical training. I would like assurance from this government that life-and-death responsibility for patient well-being in the form of administering medication will not be reduced or further downloaded in the interest of cutting costs, warehousing rather than care-housing seniors in long-term care.

We are very aware of the pharmaceutical mix-ups that have led to deaths in considerably more closely controlled hospital environments, as was the case with the Calgary Foothills. If deaths and mix-ups can occur in those considerably more highly regulated environments, my concern is for seniors in long-term care.

The Auditor General pointed out the access to the medicinal carts and felt that that should be more closely monitored. To me this is a very scary circumstance. I'm hoping members from the government who have proposed this pharmaceutical clarification bill would respond to these concerns.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just very quickly on this bill. I don't know how it fits in, but it may well. We've had a lot of discussion about the problems with crystal meth – I think it's Bill 204 – where there was some debate about how to stop it before it gets into the hands of people.

It's been suggested to us and I think to the government, and I wondered if as part of this – I think the Canadian Council of Grocery Distributors is recommending striking at the source; that is, regulating bulk shippers of crystal meth inputs as an effective way of combatting the crystal meth epidemic. It may be. I don't know. I mean, I don't know enough about it, but that's a suggestion that they feel may be a better way to control crystal meth than trying to do it through the retail way, which could be quite messy. I know it's not specifically part of this bill, but I would hope from this bill, then – whether it would work or not, I don't know, but at least if that suggestion could get back to the government to take a look at it.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[The clauses of Bill 38 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 14

Student Financial Assistance Amendment Act, 2005

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to be able to get up and speak, I think relatively briefly, in committee to Bill 14, the Student Financial Assistance Amendment Act, 2005. It is, as the Minister of Advanced Education mentioned when he introduced the bill in first reading, really just housekeeping with respect to items that have been left over from the past, so there is not a great deal to talk about in this bill.

As we go through it clause by clause, on this side of the House we have essentially the same problems with it that we did in second reading. That is that the minister wishes to remove a referral to categories of students, purportedly to provide additional flexibility for the minister to adjust or set limits to respond to individual cases or extenuating circumstances. He also wants to change the lifetime loan limit definition, to move it from what he has described as a sort of revolving line of credit or outstanding principal amount of loans owed to a simple cap on lifetime loans.

I want to speak to the second part first. That really references part of section 17, which would delete subsection (2): "A student is not eligible for a loan if that loan would cause the outstanding principal amount of loans owed by the student to exceed the amount established under subsection (1)(b) for the category in which that student falls." Now, I know that the minister wants to remove reference to categories in the bill, and it may seem that I'm putting the cart before the horse in speaking to this one first, but I think this is an important issue that we do need to discuss in this House.

We've touched – and we've done it, in fact, here tonight in discussion of Motion 509 – on the concept of lifelong learning and how that has become an integral part of our society and will be going forward. That means for many people, Mr. Chair, that they will be returning to resume their postsecondary education at some point in their future, perhaps at a number of points in their future, and in order for them to do that and take full advantage of it, we feel that they need the most flexible access possible to the system. That access becomes less flexible the moment that you change the regulation and change the rule, change the definition of a lifetime loan limit from an essentially outstanding principal amount of loans owed to a cap on lifetime loans.

In essence, one might almost go so far as to say that it encourages students to default on their loans now because they're only going to be punished for paying them back later if they want to return to school. Why should we penalize someone who has taken out student loans, paid them back or substantially paid them back, and now wants to go back and ask for another student loan to continue their studies or to resume their studies? I mean, certainly out there in the real world, that we ultimately want them to take their part in at some point, we would not prevent them, if they had good credit and had paid off their past loans, from going back to the bank and getting another loan. This is not a situation where the government is giving money away, Mr. Chair. This is a situation where the government is loaning it and expecting it to be paid back. So why would you not allow a student who has been diligent in paying back their loans to go back to the bank of the people, as it were, and borrow more?

What the current law does is technically allow students to do exactly that because it's based on the outstanding principal model of lifetime loan limits, but the ministry for some time now has been practising the more restrictive practice of modelling it on lifetime loan limits and so technically has been breaking its own law. So the purpose, as we see it, of this amendment is to bring the law in line with the ministry's current illegal practice. We think that's putting the cart before the horse. We think that's getting it backwards, and we think we're moving in the wrong direction.

On the issue of categories and deleting references to categories of students as the basis for establishing loan limits or as the basis of something which the Lieutenant Governor in Council can make regulations on, we're told that this is purportedly designed to provide additional flexibility for the minister to go above and beyond if the case allows it and grant in special cases higher awards, that sort of thing. It seems to us that there's no need to do this. So again we would ask why it's being proposed to be done. There's no need to remove the categories of students.

Under student loan limits part 1, section 2(4) this ministerial discretion exists. It exists now, so there's no reason to make the choice. It says:

In the case of a student enrolled in a masters, doctorate or other professional program, the annual loan limits set out in subsections (1) to (3) are subject to any increase the Minister makes on a case-by-case basis where, in the opinion of the Minister, there are extenuating circumstances that warrant higher annual loan limits.

It seems, really, as though the underlying reason for these proposed amendments that would delete references to categories of student are simply to provide the minister with more ministerial control without any specified guidelines. Ministerial discretion: this government likes to use it as though it was a royal prerogative.

Specific rules and regulations, Mr. Chairman, help establish accountability. We've made that point repeatedly during this session of the Legislature when we have been talking about agenda items on the Minister of Advanced Education's file. Specific rules and regulations, specific guidelines, specific how-to manuals help establish accountability and transparency, yet every time we bring it up, the minister responds that they're too restrictive, too proscriptive, that they tie his hands too much, and the implication is that they get in the way of progress.

Well, Mr. Chairman, we see things differently on this side of the House, as you well know, and we think that when progress, even if it moves a little more slowly, can be done in a way that the people in a democracy can track and view and witness and hold their government members accountable for, that's better progress. That's real progress. That's progress in the interests of the people.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll take my seat at that point.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. A problem we face every Wednesday in Public Accounts is that this government changes ministers as rapidly as the Pony Express changed horses. Therefore, at about the time when a minister is starting to potentially get a handle on their responsibilities, they are changed. Whether this makes it easier for the new minister to duck previous historical guilt and plead either ignorance or innocence remains to be seen.

I don't believe that the sole responsibility for loan approval in any one year or, worse, during a student's lifetime should be in the hands of a transient, supposedly omniscient minister. The image I see is that of a Roman emperor seated on his throne high above the amphitheatre deciding whether or not to grant the student a loan, thumbs-up, or sending him to the lions, thumbs-down. This is a place where a committee rather than an individual should have responsibility in the same manner as we need a citizens committee in the case of law enforcement.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Very briefly, just on the one aspect of it. I'm trying to get a handle on why the bill clarifies that a student has a maximum student loan amount for their entire lifetime. I understand that in the previous bill the wording was inexact and could imply that the maximum loan amount was not over a student's lifetime but at any one time. The Member for Calgary-Currie alluded to this. I don't quite understand this. I can understand if there's a person that is taking out the loan and runs a huge amount over and doesn't pay it back. My understanding of this is that if the student has reached their lifetime loan limit and pay off their debt and wait to take out more loans, they may not do that with this legislation. I don't understand why we would do that if their credit is good.

One of the things that we know about lifetime learning – and we know that people don't go into jobs now for 30, 35 years. They have to be retrained constantly. Many people have families, and it seems to me that if their credit rating is good and they've paid off loans in the past, why should that be held against them in the future? Maybe there's a reason for it. It's not evident to me, Mr. Chairman, why that would be. I hope that perhaps the minister would indicate if I'm wrong about this or, if I'm not, why they see the necessity to do this.

I really want to stress, as we talk about education, that people are going to have to keep going back more to the institutions. They're going to have to be retrained a number of times. Many of these people will not be young people; they'll be people later on in life. It would be nice, if we need them in the economy, to at least give them that access to the loans. If they don't need the money, well, perhaps there's a way to come at it that way, but I'm sort of interested why we would penalize people who pay off their loan and then may need some help later on if their credit rating is good.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[The clauses of Bill 14 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd move that the committee rise and report Bill 38 and Bill 14.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Mrs. Mather: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 14. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 38. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Second Reading

Bill 41

[Adjourned debate May 16: Mr. Ducharme]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005, at second reading. This is an interesting budget from this government, I must say. It is a little different than the ones we've been used to since the beginning of the current regime in 1993.

I would start with a quotation from a columnist at one of the local newspapers in our city. He says: Alberta's new fiscal plan is not what you'd expect from a supposedly right-wing Conservative government that froths at the mouth over same-sex marriage and smoking bans; it is not a rootin' tootin', knee-jerkin', tax-cutting, dividend-giving budget; it is a spending budget; this year the Alberta government expects to spend almost $26 billion; that's $3 billion more than the budget estimate from 2004 and a record for Alberta; drunken sailors must be on the Finance department payroll, or Liberals; welcome aboard. [interjection] Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford says tax-and-spend Conservatives. I find it odd that they're doing a lot of the things that the Liberals have been proposing for some time, and when they do it, they get called tax and spend.

If I can say something positive about the budget just for starters, it is beginning to address some spending priorities that have been woefully underfunded over the past 10 or so years. I think that without the excuse of the debt anymore the government is very hard-pressed not to do that given the enormous wealth that's flowing into the provincial coffers from oil and gas revenues.

Now, the minister has continued the unfortunate practice of understating, although not as much as her predecessor, to be sure, the projections for oil and gas prices and the impact on the budget. But the fact remains that given realistic energy projections, the government is still lowballing those, and the result is that we're continuing with the practice of large, unbudgeted surpluses. I think this is not a good way to deal with it. I know that certain programs, most notably the postsecondary endowment fund, depend on unbudgeted surpluses, but I think it would be far better and more prudent to accurately project revenues and then budget certain funds for that program and all the rest of the programs. I think that it is far more honest and straightforward, and the public knows clearly where they stand.

The government has again failed to keep its promise on property taxes. That promise was made when Dr. West was the finance minister, and his proposal at that time was to cap the total amount of revenue that the province received for property tax and allow it to decline over time relative to the rest of the provincial resources. That promise has not been kept. There's been all kinds of double-talk about, you know, capping mill rates and so on, but we all know that the property base has gone up. There's new property, and existing real property, of course, is worth more than it was. That trend is going to continue, so the province is going to continue to cash in. We believe that that area of property taxes should be vacated for municipal governments in this province.

Again, the government has failed to eliminate health care premiums. It's taken a positive step in the sense of eliminating them for seniors. But we don't understand why that's the kind of taxation that the government seems to be committed to, given that it's the same amount for families regardless of their income unless they meet the low income cut-off. It's flatter than a flat tax, Mr. Speaker. Rich or poor, you pay the same amount, and that's not fair taxation. Of course, we've said repeatedly that this has got nothing to do with health care; it flows directly into general revenues. So it shouldn't even be called health care premiums, in our view.

Now, there has been more spending on education, but as we learned today, the government is not interested in doing a comprehensive plan for postsecondary education, so we don't really know where that spending is going to go. We certainly don't know what the government is going to do with respect to its tuition policy. The one year so-called freeze is less than adequate and may force students to face a double increase next year. When the Premier talks about an entrepreneurial tuition policy, Mr. Speaker, I get very, very concerned indeed.

Infrastructure. There is additional infrastructure spending, but of course, as we repeatedly pointed out in the election, the formula disadvantages the city of Edmonton relative to other parts of the province. Certainly, an increase in municipal infrastructure is welcome. Nevertheless, it comes at the expense of infrastructure for hospitals and schools, both of whose capital budgets are actually reduced in this budget, and that is a great concern, especially given the state of many of our inner-city schools. We think that the government should invest in those schools rather than forcing school boards to close them.

There are some issues that I want to raise relative to priorities. I notice, Mr. Speaker, that other provincial governments are in the process of wrapping up negotiations with the federal government over child care. Those provinces are going to receive significant amounts of money. Where is Alberta on this? Alberta is dragging its feet. Time is running out on this government in Ottawa, and the chance for the province to make a deal with this government is running out. As bad as this federal government is, I can only imagine the lack of generosity of a Harper-led Conservative government should the country be unfortunate enough to elect them as a federal government.

AISH has been increased, but people are still receiving less than they did in 1993 on an inflation basis.

The government is still spending, in one of the most glaring of misplaced priorities, $45 million a year to subsidize the horse-racing industry. The government comes up with all kinds of reasons for this: you know, all the people that work in the industry that wouldn't otherwise have jobs and so on. Well, you could say that about a dozen other industries, Mr. Speaker. You could say that about the fast-food industry. You could talk about that in terms of the industry of cleaning homes. You could talk about it when it comes to agricultural workers in general. There are all kinds of areas where people receive poor pay. I don't think that much of this money finds its way down to the people that work as grooms and so on. This is a direct subsidy to wealthy agricultural producers that produce racing horses. It's a subsidy for an industry that stands in sharp contrast to the government's avowed aim of eliminating subsidies to business, and it really needs to go.

The government, Mr. Speaker, continues to get huge revenues from gambling, and very few of those revenues are returned, in fact, to addiction and helping people who have a problem with gambling. A small percentage of problem gamblers have been shown to produce a very significant percentage of that revenue, and the government, not to put too fine a point on it, is directly benefiting from the addictions of people in our society who may be losing jobs or their family as a result of their addiction and not doing much about it.

It's good to see that the government is increasing spending for police. The NDP made this an issue in the election, and we campaigned for 500 additional police officers. The government has come up with funding for 200 but all in rural areas served by the RCMP. I want to stress again that we believe that municipal police forces need support; they need direction to deal with the issues. The number of murders that have taken place in Edmonton, the gang fighting that's going on that we read about almost every day in the newspaper are unacceptable. The Edmonton police, the Calgary police, and other municipal police services need more support, and we need direction from the government with respect to community policing.

I think about the shooting that took place at a house in Edmonton. Apparently, the police had been back and back and back. That's a textbook definition of what's wrong with traditional policing. I heard Doug McNally, the former chief of police, on this subject many times. He talked about the fact that 80 per cent of the calls for service went to about 10 per cent of the places, and they were repeat calls and repeat calls. They'd come in, and they'd arrest, and they'd prosecute. Maybe they'd convict and maybe they wouldn't, but they'd keep going back to the same place instead of solving the problem and asking, "What's the problem, and how can we make this problem go away once and for all?" so that they don't have to keep going back to that location.

Community policing is the correct approach, in my view. We need stronger leadership from this government with respect to promoting community policing as a way to solve problems rather than just reacting to them over and over again.

Mr. Speaker, we haven't had an increase in arts spending in this province for years and years, and I think that this is probably one of the most glaring deficiencies of this budget. There needs to be a greater commitment to the arts. I think we've seen in centres around the province that the business community has gotten involved in a big way with the arts. Municipal councils have gotten involved in a big way with the arts. The one that's not on board is the provincial government. They need to pay more attention to arts spending. Arts is more than just a cultural activity; it's one of the most effective economic development tools and job creation tools that is available to a community. This provincial government needs to do quite a bit more in that respect.

I just want to talk a little bit about some ideas that the NDP opposition are proposing that we would like to see the government deal with. One would be a revolving green fund. The idea here is that by an initial investment of, say, a billion dollars different individuals, homeowners, or municipalities, hospitals, school boards, postsecondary institutions, and so on would be able to borrow from the fund and invest in energy-saving technology and bring down their costs. The drop in their costs, the reduction in their costs, could be used to fund the repayment of the loan. When the loan is fully repaid, the fund is whole again and can be used for more projects, and any ongoing savings that accrue to the institution or the homeowner or the business just come off their bottom line. So it's a good idea, one that requires an initial investment but not large-scale, ongoing expenditures by the government.

Bringing down the cost of health care is an important priority for all, Mr. Speaker. Instead of experimenting with privatization, which has been proven to drive up costs, it might make more sense to set up a pharmaceutical savings agency, as has been done in New Zealand, and use the negotiating power of the entire health care system in this province to negotiate arrangements through bulk purchasing of pharmaceuticals and, of course, use generic drugs wherever that can be accommodated. This approach has made New Zealand alone among the major industrialized countries to have declining expenditures on pharmaceuticals, and I recommend it very much to the government.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with pleasure and interest that I rise tonight to speak to the appropriations bill in second reading. It's an opportunity to touch on a number of points, I guess, in one session, that you couldn't do as we went through the estimates department by department.

I want to start it off by reminding you of an old bumper sticker from the mid '80s that said: "Please, God, let there be another oil boom, and I promise not to bleep it all away again." There was another word in there for "bleep," but I think Hansard would prefer bleep, so I'll use bleep. My colleague from Edmonton-Glenora in his past life as a clergyman might have said something along the lines of: God answers prayer; it's just not that God always gives you the answer that you want. God may have answered the prayer on that bumper sticker. We have a boom. We have another oil boom. But it seems that we haven't learned the lesson that we thought we had back in 1985. We're bleeping it all away again, and there's plenty of evidence of that right in here.

We have, I think, half a dozen, or close to, multibillion dollar ministries: Advanced Education, $1.582 billion; Education, $2.726 billion; Health and Wellness, $8.973 billion; Infrastructure and Transportation, $3.463 billion; Seniors and Community Supports, $1.582 billion; and then under Gaming, of course, we have lottery fund payments of $1.2 billion. In total we have spending of $26 billion, $3 billion more than last year.

I want to be fair about this, and I want to give the government the benefit of the doubt in terms of saying: lookit, there certainly is plenty to spend the taxpayers' money on in this province. There's plenty that has been neglected over the last dozen years of this government's blinders-on, single-minded obsession with paying off the debt, with paying down the mortgage to zero while the pipes were leaking and the roof was leaking and the handle on the toilet was broken so that you had to jiggle it to get the stupid thing to flush, and so on and so forth.

I guess that if a house were a province, those would mostly be infrastructure items. In an ordinary house you'd call it renovation. Here we call it the Ministry of Infrastructure and Transportation. That explains their budget for expense and equipment/inventory purchases of $3.463 billion and another $699 million on capital investment. Infrastructure and Transportation is not a bad place to start, I guess, in looking at this budget as sort of representative of some of the things that are problematic here.

I quote from the business plan for Infrastructure and Transportation: "Much of Alberta's infrastructure is aging, resulting in maintenance and rehabilitation needs for the provincial highway network, water/wastewater management and facility infrastructure managed or supported by this Ministry," and so on and so forth. You know, when you read that, the first thing that comes to mind is: yeah, and I wonder why that is.

I'll refer to another quote in here: "Working with municipalities and stakeholders to improve traffic safety and build a modern infrastructure in support of Alberta's social, environmental and economic goals is part of Making Alberta the Best Place to Live, Work and Visit." Now, parenthetically, I find that a strange pillar: "Making Alberta the Best Place to Live, Work and Visit." I mean, what happened to play? Aren't you ever allowed to play in Alberta? You can visit, but you can't have any fun.

You know, why that caught my eye is because the first time I came to Alberta was as a visitor crossing the border from Saskatchewan, and the first thing I noticed was how good the roads are here, were here in 1985, compared to Saskatchewan and Manitoba and northern Ontario. You know what? We're still driving on 1985 roads. Yes, the Trans-Canada has been twinned all the way, and it wasn't in 1985; I'll grant you that. So there has been highway construction in this province, but the point is that we have not – we have not – kept up our infrastructure.

We have not kept the roof from leaking because we've been so darned obsessed with paying down the mortgage. We've been so darned obsessed with paying down the mortgage that our kids don't have schools to go to. We've been so darned obsessed with paying down the mortgage – and I'll clarify that for a skeptical Minister of Education – that our kids do not have schools to go to in the neighbourhoods and the communities where they live: 28 communities in the city of Calgary do not have public elementary schools because this government wouldn't fund them. The minister needs to know that denial ain't only a river, Mr. Speaker.

We're short of hospitals and health care facilities, we're short of long-term care facilities, and, far worse than that, as we learned from the Auditor General's report last week, we are short of the people to staff those long-term care facilities to make sure that the seniors, who this government boasted in the throne speech built this province, you know, actually have decent care in their twilight years, actually are entitled to more than one bath a week or even less than that if their caregiver happens to be out with the flu that week.

Mr. R. Miller: How many a week?

Mr. Taylor: One. One bath a week.

I wonder how many government members – this is a rhetorical question. They don't have to answer this because I don't really need that much personal detail. How many government members could get by on one bath a week? Well, if you stay the course that this government has been on, they'll find out soon enough.

You know, there's a great deal of money being spent in this budget, but the question is: is it being spent wisely? Some of it is being spent on a near-emergency basis to take care of the problems that have developed on this government's watch while they've been so darned obsessed with paying down the debt. When I look at this $26 billion worth of spending – and no, I'm not going to say anything about tax-and-spend Conservatives because that would only prompt the leader of the third party to make some comment about Liberal finances. Then I'd have to retaliate that, well, New Democrats aren't really off the hook when it comes to taxing and spending either. Of course, they're proud of it.

An Hon. Member: Your horse is already out of the barn.

Mr. Taylor: Yeah, but I didn't get $45 million for that race horse.

The question is whether this money is being spent wisely, and that goes to, I think, a fundamental problem here that is exhibited by the fact that we have here a government that will spend $45 million on race horses but doesn't increase funding for the arts. In the context of a $9 billion Department of Health and Wellness, in the context of a nearly $3 billion Ministry of Education, in the context of an over $3 billion Infrastructure and Transportation department, this is not big money. All the arts community in the province of Alberta wants is $45 million, the same amount of money they're giving race horses.

The question is this. When you look at Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005, where's the leadership? We need stronger leadership. The leader of the third party, if I'm quoting him correctly, said that we need stronger leadership in policing issues. Well, I'd go further than that, and I'd submit that we need stronger leadership, period. We need somebody on the government side of this House to show some leadership, to show some vision, to show some ability to plan beyond next Wednesday, even to show up, even to consider the possibility that we live in an era of unparalleled opportunity if you would just take it off autopilot and come up with a plan to invest the surpluses.

I'll cut the government this much slack. In an economy based on volatile commodity prices for a nonrenewable resource, I don't believe that you can always adequately project what your revenues are going to be versus your expenses, and I don't believe that you can ever get to the point where you don't have some unbudgeted, unplanned surpluses. Commodity prices are like that. Sometimes they'll spike. Sometimes you will pull in a lot more money than you intended when you sat down and wrote the budget, although I'll grant you that this government routinely lowballs its estimates for resource revenue. But I'll cut them some wiggle room. I'll cut them some slack. I'll say that there can be some unbudgeted surpluses.

I don't have nearly as much of a problem with them lowballing their revenue estimates and, therefore, the surplus we'll end up with at the end of the fiscal year as I do with the fact that they don't have a plan for that money. They could take it and invest it: 35 per cent into the heritage savings trust fund each and every year. It's not enough to inflation-proof the heritage savings trust fund; you have to grow the thing. You have to grow it so that it produces the kind of income that sustains our prosperity after the oil and gas is gone or, in my opinion more likely, after the rest of the world loses interest in our oil and gas because they've passed it by for alternative energy sources.

Another 35 per cent year in and year out – not $250 million producing $11 million a year in investable income and a promise of $5 billion; you know, I'm from Missouri on that one, so show me – into a postsecondary education endowment fund; another 25 per cent into a capital account, a predictable, sustainable fund for rebuilding the infrastructure we've neglected in this province; and a further 5 per cent into arts, culture, the humanities, the social sciences, an endowment fund for that, up to half a billion dollars.

You know, Mr. Speaker, that's the Liberal plan, and of course I'd be naive to expect the Conservatives to adopt a Liberal plan. Oh, wait a minute. No, they've stolen other of our ideas in the past, so there might be hope for this one yet. It is a plan. It is a vision, and it envisions a long-term future in which prosperity and quality of life and quality of the environment can be sustained and maintained in this province. It envisions life beyond next Tuesday or next Wednesday or next quarter or next election.

It's a plan, and that's what this province needs now more than ever because we have the wherewithal, we have the means to execute the plan for the good of all Albertans far into the future. In order to execute the plan, first we need the plan. They talk about the 20-year strategic plan. They talk it; they don't walk the talk. Not yet. Not in this budget. This is just throwing money at stuff, Mr. Speaker, and it's not good enough.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. My intention is to in some cases highlight, in other cases lowlight some of the portions of this budget. I know right off the bat that I'm going to get in trouble with the hon. member of the New Democratic Party for suggesting that in certain budgets the spending is not sufficient.

I'll begin with the Infrastructure and Transportation budget: $9.2 billion over three years isn't enough. It doesn't bring us back to the pre-cut, 1994 level. It doesn't repair the public schools. It builds few new schools. It doesn't replace the hospitals that were closed in Calgary or in the rural areas. Fort McMurray is still $1 billion short even after the $500 million and change announced last week. Forty-four per cent of roads are projected to be in poor to fair condition by 2008.

This budget doesn't begin to cover the 15,000 newly promised postsecondary seats, again for 2008. In public education schools continue to be closed on a 4 to 1 ratio as opposed to being opened. Temporary, portable, interim solutions have become permanent with this government.

When it comes to parks and protected areas, trails and recreational support infrastructure will not be restored to their pre-1994 cutback level. The needed number of conservation officers won't be hired, nor will conservation offices be opened. Public land continues to be sold rather than preserved.

In the case of the environment, by comparison to the Energy ministry the Environment ministry has a minuscule budget. It cannot protect or even enact it's Water for Life strategy. Oil and gas exploration, in particular methane, has been ratcheted up to a point where water conservation and quality are jeopardized. The Alberta Energy and Utilities Board does not have the staff to adequately and accurately approve new exploration, hold public hearings, or see that orphan wells are properly retired and maintained.

The ministries of seniors and Health and Wellness don't have sufficient staff to inspect all of their facilities on a yearly basis, as was pointed out by the Auditor General's report on long-term care facilities.

The Ministry of Finance continues to permit the annual raiding of the heritage trust fund rather than allowing it to accumulate, as is the case with Norway.

As has been previously pointed out, AISH recipients receive basically a minimal thumb rather than a hand up.

Since 1994 the government ministries have bloated from 17 to 24. In order to save money, we need to put some of the ministries on a crash diet, beginning with the elimination of the Ministry of Restructuring and Government Efficiency. This ministry could lead the way in efficiency and accountability as well as allowing millions to be transferred to other ministries by simply dissolving itself while reverting its responsibilities to Government Services rather than duplicating them.

I also believe money could be saved and efficiencies realized by doing away with the ministry of infrastructure and placing infrastructure responsibility within the other ministries . . .

The Acting Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, but in accordance with Standing Order 61(3) the chair is required to put the question to the House on the appropriation bill on the Order Paper for second reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 41 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that the Assembly adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10:46 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, May 17, 2005

1:30 p.m.

Date: 05/05/17

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Author of all wisdom, knowledge, and understanding, we ask for guidance in order that truth and justice may prevail in all our judgments. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mrs. Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour for me to introduce a very special and distinguished group seated in the Speaker's gallery. They are called the CCAF fellows and are participants in a nine-month international fellowship program based in Ottawa. Today they are visiting us as part of a tour to western Canada.

The fellowship program is a collaboration between the office of the Auditor General of Canada, the Canadian Comprehensive Auditing Foundation, and the Auditor General of Quebec. The program is sponsored by the Canadian International Development Agency and is designed to expand knowledge and understanding of public-sector accounting and auditing as practised in Canada to help participants address auditing issues in their home environments.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to introduce Mr. Sebastian Gil from Argentina, Mr. Carlos Modena from Brazil, Ms Claireann James from Guyana, Mr. Imran Iqbal from Pakistan, and Ms Reahla Balroop from Trinidad and Tobago. They are accompanied today by their hosts Mrs. Donna Bigelow, program co-ordinator, international affairs, office of the Auditor General of Canada in Ottawa; Mrs. Caroline Jorgensen, project and financial officer for international business at the CCAF in Ottawa; and Lori Trudgeon, communications co-ordinator with the office of the Auditor General of Alberta. Again, they are seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the recipients of the first human service worker awards. The human service worker awards recognize Alberta Children's Services employees whose dedication to their work has improved the lives of Alberta children, youth, and families.

Scott Haggins is a caseworker with the southeast child and family services authority in Medicine Hat. Cory Jacob works for the northwest child and family services authority as a family support for children with disabilities worker. I'm extremely proud of these two individuals. With them today are Scott's colleague Samantha Kilford; Cory's wife, Vicki Jacob; and Irene Milton from Children's Services human resources. It is my pleasure to have them, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the entire House a group of 15 students from Vincent Massey junior high. They are accompanied by three teachers: Andy Heaton, Leanne Jackson, and Erika Smith. I would ask them to please rise and receive the kind welcome from the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly my boss at the Legislature office. She's the one who tells me what to do and when to do it. She's my assistant, Marie Martin, and her husband, Bryce Martin. With them today are their many-year childhood friends, Robert and Fay Mearns, who reside in the city of North Vancouver, also employees of the city there. I would like them to stand and receive the warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two of my children: my daughter Julia Prins Vanderveen and my son Lorne. Julia just arrived from Vancouver, where she graduated with her master of divinity from Regent College. Lorne has just finished his first year of business at NAIT, and he'll be working in the oil patch this summer. He'll be capitalizing on the Alberta advantage and adding to the prosperity of our province. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd like them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a very fine young man I've known for some 13 years, since he was in grade 1 with my daughter. He's planning to attend NAIT this fall to study a program of bilingual business. He's a true Albertan, being of Ukrainian and French-Canadian descent. I would ask Mr. Dominic Mishio to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you two members of the Alberta Liberal caucus. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize them.

The first person is Mr. Ryan Bissonnette. Ryan started his career as a paramedic in the province of Ontario and worked night shifts through political science studies at the University of Toronto. He began his political career as a legislative assistant in the Ontario Legislature and then moved into federal politics, where he most recently worked as a special assistant to the Minister of International Trade. Ryan relocated to Alberta in April of this year to join the Alberta Liberal caucus as a research analyst. He's currently responsible for files of Municipal Affairs, Government Services, and Environment. Lastly, he also dared me to mention that he is single.

Second, I would like to introduce Gerri Kleim, who has joined our staff as an administrative assistant. Gerri was born in Whitehorse, Yukon, and she's a first-generation Canadian. She has worked with federal, provincial, and municipal governments and enjoys spending time with her husband and singing in their band. She has recently also picked up a hobby. She's trying to learn how to play the electric guitar.

I would ask both of them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted today to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly an organization known as Together We Can community initiative. These youth workers run a youth crime prevention patrol, participate in community enrichment activities as well as lead information sessions for students and seniors on safety-related issues. I'd now ask that each of them rise as I call their name to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: Jasmine Tolhurst, Miranda Tanfara, Lorelei Hamilton, Dean Reid, Corey Bourque, Daniel Klasson, Tammy Burns, Amanda Gilliland, Corenda Steinhauer, Elias Dudley, Bambi Greenall, Jaylene Hamilton, and Agnes Kamela.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and to all members of this Assembly today Elizabeth Sumamo. Elizabeth is joining the NDP caucus office staff this summer as a STEP assistant. Elizabeth is a recent graduate of the University of Alberta with a major in biological sciences and a minor in physical sciences. She's planning to attend graduate school in the fall in the program of health sciences at the U of A. I would now ask Elizabeth to please rise to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very delighted to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly Olga Chirka. Olga is a constituent of Edmonton-Calder for the past 38 years. She is an avid gardener and active community member in our constituency. This is her first visit to the Alberta Legislature. I would ask that she now rise and receive the very warm traditional welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure to join with the Member for Strathcona and also the Member for Drumheller-Stettler, who have advised us that we see a former flame, I believe, of the Deputy Premier in the gallery. I just couldn't resist doing this. He also was a councillor in Strathcona county. He's here at a recreation board meeting, I'm understanding, and his name is Bob Weller. I know that's way too much information. If I may also introduce a very strong director of recreation and parks and a stalwart in Strathcona county, Cliff Lacey, who accompanies him to keep him protected. If they would both stand, please, and receive the warm welcome.

head: Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Securities Commission

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The controversies surrounding the Alberta Securities Commission continue. The perception is widespread and growing that the ASC is operated by a cosy group of insiders with close ties to this government. This perception needs to be addressed if the ASC is to regain the credibility it needs to flourish in the future and maintain its position as an Alberta-based regulator. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. Will the minister tell the Assembly whether any candidates for chairman of the ASC have been recommended by the recruiting team, and if so, have they been accepted or rejected?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, first, I'd like to set the record straight. I met with the part-time members of the commission as well as the past chairman about three weeks ago. There was really only one person of those people that I knew. So let's make that very clear and very straight. It would have been nice to have known any of these fine people, but frankly I did not.

Secondly, the search is continuing well. We have some interviews concluded, and it is our hope that in the next very short time, perhaps another two or three weeks, we will have a final decision on a full-time chairman.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: to eliminate any perception or reality of political interference in the selection of the ASC chairman or commissioners, will the minister end the practice of government MLAs participating in nominating part-time commissioners to the ASC?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, if I recall correctly, I think the procedures for nominating part-time commissioners are that they are nominated externally and certainly can be nominated from within this House, from any party in this House.

I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that we had quite a large number of very well-qualified persons that put their name forward to act as chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission. A difficult choice to come up with a final person because they were all very well qualified and submitted their requests for consideration quite independently.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: can the minister tell this Assembly how many of the current part-time commissioners were endorsed or nominated by government MLAs?

Mrs. McClellan: I cannot. Most of the part-time commissioners – well, in fact, all were appointed before I assumed this ministry, and it would not have occurred to me to look at that. What you do look at are the credentials of the persons who sit on that commission, and I can tell you that all of them come very highly credentialed.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. leader for Lethbridge-East.

Sale of Social Housing Corporation Land

Ms Pastoor: The hon. leader for Lethbridge-East? Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I am the only person from Lethbridge-East, I guess I am a leader.

The Alberta Social Housing Corporation sold over 900 acres of land to a private developer in Fort McMurray. The government had previously sold land based on bad appraisal advice indicating that land was not fit for development, but, in fact, it was developed. The government continues to base land sale decisions on miscalculated appraisals. My question is to the minister of Seniors and Community Supports. What was the appraisal date used for this sale, and was there more than one appraisal submitted?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have responded to this question previously. The preamble was inaccurate in regard to the amount of land that was for sale and some of the process that was referred to. In response to the question, there was one appraisal for this property, and that was in the fall of 2004.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: will the minister table a copy of the agreement for the sale so that we know the terms and conditions placed on the use of the land?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did respond to that question in the Legislature yesterday. I do have my staff looking into whether or not that is appropriate, given that there is a third party involved and also that the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act comes into play with this particular sale.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Again to the same minister: can the minister guarantee that the land earmarked for social housing will in fact be used to develop low-cost housing?

Mrs. Fritz: That is an excellent question. That's a very good question, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I can guarantee that land that is earmarked through the Alberta Social Housing Corporation is definitely for low-cost housing. Especially in the Fort McMurray Area, for the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East to know, what we may refer to as low-cost housing in the rest of the province in Fort McMurray they may call affordable housing for people that are in service positions such as the nurses, policemen, firemen, teachers. Those are the people that we are hearing back from that would like to see properties available.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

For-profit Health Care

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A study comparing private, for-profit and not-for-profit hospitals in the United States revealed that for-profit ownership of hospitals results in a higher risk of death for patients. There is overwhelming evidence that contradicts the notion that the private sector is cheaper and more efficient than government. The truth is that for-profit health delivery results in higher costs, poorer outcomes, and more lawsuits. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Given all the evidence of adverse effects in for-profit health care delivery, why does the government allow private, for-profit facilities to exist at all in Alberta?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to quarrel with studies that have been published on both sides of this issue. Let me give the example of HRC in Calgary and the specialized facility, which is part of the arthroplasty project where we are doing hip and knee replacements, and Health First in Strathcona on behalf of Capital health, in Red Deer in a clinic there. What we find, at least in this contractual arrangement with Calgary health and HRC, is that we are able to reduce the waiting times, reduce the waiting lists, and address the issue of capacity as quickly as possible. It's not so much a matter of money that we're discussing here but a matter of getting better access to patients in a timely fashion.

Ms Blakeman: Again to the same minister: why does the province allow any private operators to receive taxpayer money to deliver long-term care?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, in excess of 30 per cent of the health budget is privately delivered, and I know that the hon. member is well aware of that. The long-term care projects have not only been delivered by private entrepreneurs but by nonprofit organizations, and communities have arranged those, sometimes, totally beyond the capacity of government's involvement. So why do we allow it, Mr. Speaker? It's been part of how we have evolved in long-term care in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the same minister: given that the private, for-profit long-term care provider Extencare employs political figures to lobby for its interests in America, what is the government doing to guarantee that business is conducted in a transparent and accountable manner as Extencare expands business within Alberta? How about a lobbyist registry?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, the item of a lobbyist registry is not under the domain of this minister.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The seniors minister's refusal to be transparent about a shady multimillion dollar land deal in Fort McMurray is just the latest example of why this government is a worthy recipient of the top secrecy award from the Canadian Association of Journalists. It's pretty clear, based on the minister's nonanswers, that this government has plenty to hide about a deal involving the sale of hundreds of acres of prime real estate to a Tory-friendly developer. My question is to the minister of seniors. How can the minister claim that this isn't a private, cozy deal when there were no fewer than 22 developer groups interested in bidding on this prime real estate had the government decided, as it should have, to sell the land through an open-bid process?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, I have responded to this question in the Legislature over the past two days, and my answers haven't changed. I'd invite the member to reread Hansard.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the minister quoted property values based on a series of appraisal reports in the House yesterday, will she do the correct thing and table the reports from which she was quoting?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was actually one appraisal – and I did mention that to the member opposite – that was completed on this land. Also, as I indicated, I asked the appropriate people involved about tabling such a document in the House, and my understanding is that because there is a third party involved, due to the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act it cannot be tabled. [interjections] Yes, actually, that does include the appraisal, according to my information.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I don't know what's being hidden here.

What role, if any, did the Minister of Environment play in this private land sale in Fort McMurray?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any other role that any other minister in this Assembly has been a part of with this land sale. It is through the Alberta Social Housing Corporation, and my ministry has full responsibility for the sale of properties through this corporation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace, followed by the Member for St. Albert.

Crop Insurance

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know that Alberta's agricultural producers are in a tight situation this year with low commodity prices and high costs for everything from fertilizer to fuel. My question is for the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Now that the production insurance sign-up deadline has passed, could the minister tell us whether these factors appear to have had any impact on participation in the production insurance program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the hon. member indicated, producers have completed electing their coverage levels for the production insurance for 2005 crops. Overall, I can tell the hon. member that the number of producers purchasing crop insurance this year, or production insurance, was consistent with the last couple of years. There was a slight decrease of the number of producers, about 3 per cent, but in actual fact we've seen a notable increase in the average number of acres being insured. So producers are trying to protect their remaining equity after a number of very difficult years.

For 2005 the majority of producers elected the higher levels of coverage. Where previously they tended to purchase 60 to 70 per cent coverage, this year they're now choosing the 70 or 80 per cent coverage. I feel very confident, Mr. Speaker, in saying that producers recognize that peace of mind comes from transferring some of the risk they face to the government's risk management system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My only supplemental is again to the same minister. A month ago our government reduced premiums on the spring price endorsement, or SPE, available through the production insurance program and increased benefits on revenue insurance coverage. Could the minister tell us if these initiatives had the intended effect of encouraging producers to take advantage of this market price protection coverage?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is correct: we did reduce the premiums. Until we had reduced the premiums for the spring price endorsement, there was actually very little interest in the feature for the 2005 crop year. Once the announcement was made, about two weeks prior to the April 30 deadline it did become a main discussion point on the telephone lines with AFSC, where the office staff were helping producers considering their production insurance options.

I can say that the premium reduction has proved highly successful. With 40 per cent of the insured producers purchasing the spring price endorsement, it's a 50 per cent increase over 2003, the previous best year for that particular part of the plan. When you compare this year's spring price endorsement uptake to last year, it's over a 387 per cent increase in that uptake. Producers who purchase that are automatically eligible under the revenue insurance. As well, the variable price benefit and the spring price endorsement have all been calculated into that, and we'll see what the results are at the end of the year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

School Closures

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Students and parents deserve some straight answers from this government on school closures. Yesterday the Minister of Education said that the public school board's practice of transferring $7 million from classrooms to maintain crumbling infrastructure and keep the lights on is simply part of the flexible funding framework. Flexibility is fine, but we need certainty here, sir, and we need to get clear on the impact of these policies. My first question to the Minister of Education: given that the documents obtained from the school board indicate that the government is putting a stop to this practice next year, is this transfer of instructional dollars away from the classroom allowed or not? Which is it, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to review that question a little later. I want to just make it clear what I did say yesterday in the House because I think the hon. member has taken some liberties in the wrong direction. What I did say was:

Under the renewed flexible funding framework, which was worked out with, by, and for those school boards, they have the ability to shift around a significant amount of the monies that we provide to them, monies which, I might add, went up by $287 million in this current budget to the largest amount ever for K to 12, $4.3 billion.

I think the hon. member might wish to review what he just said and perhaps offer me an apology, which I would be happy to accept.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Flaherty: Well, thanks for the lesson, Mr. Speaker.

To the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: given that the class size reduction initiative is requiring schools to put more space into use, can the minister explain how school boards can operate and maintain that space when the operation and maintenance funding doesn't recognize this usage?

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The answer is quite simple. Edmonton public has roughly 160,000 square metres too much space.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the operation and maintenance funding is tied to utilization rates and not the needs of the facility, essentially guaranteeing that older schools fall into disrepair, how can the minister maintain that he has no responsibility for school closures?

Dr. Oberg: Because it is the Edmonton public school board. It is the responsibility of the public school boards to close schools and go through a school closure process, Mr. Speaker.

Quite simply, the hon. member has answered his own question when he was talking about why $7 million had to be transferred over. It's because they have 160,000 square metres too much space that they are paying to heat and take care of.

The Speaker: Before I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, do you want to raise a point of order at the conclusion of the Routine today with respect to an exchange between yourself and the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports? Is this correct?

Mr. Mason: Yes, please.

The Speaker: I'll advise then.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

2:00 Postsecondary Education Review

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is for the Minister of Advanced Education. The budget and throne speech set out a plan for increasing postsecondary access by 60,000 places by 2020. The minister stated in the House that the Department of Advanced Education is conducting a comprehensive review of the system. Meanwhile, there have been recent announcements about significant capital expenditures at Grant MacEwan College and Mount Royal College. Can the minister advise the House what the scope of the review which is being conducted will be?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, in our 20-year strategic plan we've indicated the four pillars under the strategic plan: unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in a global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. Of course, underpinning that is making sure that Albertans have the opportunity to advance their knowledge, skills, and education so that they can take advantage of the opportunities and trade in the world. So it is necessary to take a look at our postsecondary system to ensure that it's world leading, that Albertans have the best in-class opportunity to get the education they need to take advantage of those opportunities.

Based on that, we had a conference in January. We brought stakeholders together, and we talked about what was necessary. From that came the promise to create 60,000 new spaces over 20 years. The scope of the review will be to set out a policy framework for Alberta as a learning society and determine what we need to have in our system to be the world-leading postsecondary system and what we have now and what the gap analysis is.

Dr. Brown: Can the minister advise the Assembly whether or not the review will focus on the priority areas of access and affordability?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, access, affordability, and quality are, of course, the three key ingredients to a world-leading postsecondary institution. So, yes, we'll be focused on those as well as on the affordability equation, as we've talked about funding, what the cost of going to school is as well as how students finance that cost. Innovation and roles and responsibilities: we need to look at the institutions that we have and the roles they play both in their communities and in their geographic areas as well as in the context of the whole system. So the review will look at funding, it will look at access, it will look at quality, and it will look at how we fill the gaps that are necessary to ensure that we have opportunities for every Albertan to advance their education.

Dr. Brown: Can the minister assure the House that the review will be independent and geographically representative of all parts of the province?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely. Our goal is to have a well-constructed steering committee that represents both the geographic nature of the province as well as the stakeholders in the province. The steering committee will have people who are familiar with the college role in rural colleges, the rural development issues, university issues, student perspective, faculty perspective. We need to make sure that it's a full, broad-based, varied look at the whole system and, as well, of course, have the opportunity to hear from Albertans. So it will be a full, complete, comprehensive review, which will culminate, hopefully, in an opportunity for the public to watch and participate in a conference which will have an informed discussion and lead to an informed conclusion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Arts Funding

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently many stakeholders in the arts community have come forward with serious concerns about the fate of the Visual Arts Alberta Association. Their concern is that this highly effective organization will suffer the same fate as Music Alberta and be eliminated without any consultation or accountability to affected members. My questions are to the Minister of Community Development. Why is the Visual Arts Alberta Association being subjected to a review by the Alberta Foundation for the Arts into areas that the AFA has no jurisdiction over?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the AFA has much jurisdiction over the discretion to grant monies to various arts groups throughout the province of Alberta. It is appropriate that groups like the agency referred to by the hon. member be reviewed from time to time to determine whether or not there are any problems, to determine whether or not there are things that can be improved. Visual arts should be subject to the same kind of scrutiny and accountability that all other areas of government enterprise are subject to.

Mr. Agnihotri: Will this minister assure the 360 individual artists and the 26 groups that the VAAA represents that there is no hidden agenda to disband this organization? It happened to Music Alberta.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I don't have time for all the things in our public agenda let alone a hidden agenda.

Mr. Agnihotri: Given that Music Alberta was subjected to a similar review and then disbanded with no consultation with the stakeholders, will this minister commit to an open, inclusive, and transparent review of the VAAA before any decisions are made?

Mr. Mar: This has always been my practice, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

English as a Second Language Programs

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The ESL Council of the ATA reported in January of this year that a survey of teachers conducted in the fall of 2003 found that over half of the teachers providing explicit ESL training and instructions do not have ESL training. The report also stated that the ratio of ESL students to certificated teachers is 121 to 1, and the ratio of ESL students to certificated teachers with ESL training is 248 to 1. This is of very great concern to students, parents, and educators. Would the Minister of Education tell the House and the people concerned if he's planning to make any further funding improvement to ESL programs?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm not familiar with the report of 2003, but I'd be grateful if the hon. member would send me a copy of it so I can freshen up on it.

The fact is that teachers, once they receive their certification, are eligible to teach throughout the K to 12 system. Now, there are some who have the benefit of having some enhanced training, in this case in ESL.

I think the short answer to the question about the improvements is that we've made a number of improvements to ESL programming. We have four different programs now for ESL. You have the general program, you have the enhanced program, you have the ECS program and another program which ECS-eligible children can qualify for. So we've made a number of improvements, and we'll continue to make them where they are necessary.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: would the minister consider removing the five-year funding cap given that the five-year cap on ESL funding is disadvantaging the disadvantaged?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the normal expectation is that children who are receiving ESL programming would gain sufficient proficiency in the English language within a three-year period. However, we extended that to a five-year period. I should tell you that last year the overall programming for ESL was added to through the introduction of a new program called enhanced ESL programming, and that particular program would be possibly for students who have exceptional circumstances, and it, in fact, has no cap. But, in general, there's a three-year expectation. If that doesn't work, then five years, and if it's really critical, there is an opportunity to enhance even further.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Minister of Education consider giving the Calgary board of education an additional 2 and a half million dollars, that it is spending of its own money, to support 2,300 students who have exceeded the five-year limit and are assessed as still being in need of ESL supports?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that when I met with the Calgary board of education, this issue was raised, and I believe they indicated to me that they were going to be experiencing an inordinately high number of foreign-born ESL students who are in need of language proficiency upgrading. That having been said, it prompted me to look into this matter a little more deeply, so we are now undertaking a complete review of ESL programming from kindergarten right through to grade 12 because what we want to ensure is that our students, regardless of their circumstance, regardless of the literacy level of their families or their siblings, have every opportunity to succeed, and language must not be a barrier to that success.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

School Construction in Calgary

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Calgary's Western Canada high school is one of the oldest and most respected public senior high schools in Alberta, with a long-standing reputation for academic excellence. It is also a mishmash of buildings and additions dating back to 1928, and the physical plant is so worn out that the school has had to undergo major emergency repairs at least three times in the last three years. This government's own audit ranked Western Canada high school at 953 out of a possible 1,000 points in terms of the pressing need for restoration or replacement of the school building. To the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: will the minister commit to providing the Calgary board of education with the funds to restore or build a new Western Canada high school in the coming fiscal year?

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is absolutely correct when it comes to Western Canada high school. His description of it is probably fairly aptly put. It is the number one priority for the Calgary public school board to redo the Western Canada high school along with the Bowness school, which is another one which is high on the list. It's something that we are currently working on with Calgary public to find a way that this refurbishment of that school can be expedited. It is quite a situation in Calgary when it comes to that. Quite simply, I'm working very closely with Calgary public to ensure that this can be done.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, then, to the same minister if I may suggest a way: will he address the current inadequacies in the funding framework for new school construction and ongoing school operations and maintenance by providing school districts with a separate capital envelope for restoration or replacement of aging schools?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, we're looking at a lot of different ways that capital dollars can be given out to school boards. There certainly is some merit in having a different process to put out capital dollars.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: why does the Calgary board of education seem to find that the department of infrastructure keeps changing the rules during the life of a school board's funding applications?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, actually, they don't. What the hon. member is alluding to, I'm sure, is the Calgary public and why they have not started some of the schools that approval has been given to. Everything has been completely consistent from my department's point of view.

There have been some issues about tenders not being received. As soon as a request to go out to tender is received, it is looked at in my department, and subsequently it is provided to the particular school board to go out to tender. There are presently 16 new schools being built, or under construction, in Calgary right now – 16 under construction now in Calgary – and that's absolutely huge.

I will certainly give the hon. member this. There is a need of Western Canada high school that has been identified as their number one priority, and we are looking at how we can accommodate these requests.

First Nations Participation in Royal Visit

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, leaders of Alberta's First Nations have complained that they've been relegated to a token status when Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip visit the province next week. First Nations leaders have complained that their participation has been limited to a ceremonial nature only. While happy to participate in cultural events, Alberta's First Nations leaders have been denied an audience with the Queen to discuss treaty concerns. My question is to the Minister of Community Development. What has the government done to address the concerns of native leaders who claim that they've been relegated to only a ceremonial role during the royal visit?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I should indicate that I am not the person responsible for accepting Her Majesty's itinerary nor setting it. However, I can advise the hon. member that Prince Philip, when he attends the city of Fort McMurray, has meetings set with First Nations and Métis leaders in that jurisdiction. I don't control Her Majesty's itinerary outside.

I know that Her Majesty did make requests, for example, to be welcomed in a very aboriginal First Nations ceremony when she arrives later on today, I believe in roughly one hour and 15 minutes, in the city of Regina. So, Mr. Speaker, there is ample opportunity for the aboriginal community to participate in the events both ceremonially but also as guests of various dinners such as the Prime Minister's dinner and the dinner hosted by the government of Alberta and, certainly, at Commonwealth Stadium as well as the event at the Roundup Centre in the city of Calgary.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Has the government, then, conveyed to Buckingham Palace the desire of First Nations leaders to have an audience with Her Majesty, whom they see as a guarantor of their treaty rights?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, there is, again, an itinerary that has been set by Her Majesty the Queen, that has been set many months in advance, and it would be very difficult to change that itinerary now, sir.

Mr. Eggen: So did you in fact convey the desire at least for the First Nations to have an audience with the Queen?

Mr. Mar: That would not be my responsibility, sir.

Public Land Management

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, there are few places considered more valued by Albertans than the magnificent eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains. In fact, to some it seems that we are loving it to death. Recently a task force of four rural municipalities presented a report to the Standing Policy Committee on Energy and Sustainable Development. This task force prepared 21 recommendations for actions to implement on public land and resource management, issues such as increased and inappropriate public use and the lack of provincial management. My first question is for the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Because the focus of the report is on public land, what support can these municipalities expect in dealing with what's happening on our eastern slopes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I had the distinct opportunity to participate in that meeting, as well, along with a lot of my colleagues, and we were impressed with the task force commitment over the last two and a half years to try to find solutions to access management in the backcountry and some of the other issues that are important to the municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, Sustainable Resource Development has had the task force document for a few months, and after the meeting last night we've thoroughly gone over the report and now will make it available to other departments of government. What's interesting is that many of the recommendations in the task force report fit initiatives that we are already doing in Sustainable Resource Development and trying hard to address. Some examples of that are . . .

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Because a major portion of the problem stated by the task force referred to a rapid increase of off-highway vehicle use and abuse on the public land, how is the minister's department dealing with this issue?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, in addition to co-ordinated weed management and access management as well as monitoring and enforcement and a major respect the land public awareness and education, we believe that we have to have all stakeholders involved in those consultations. That's why we involve a broad sector of stakeholders, to make sure that access management like what happened in the Bighorn – many of the people that were involved in the stakeholder meetings are now involved in the enforcement as well. That particular access management plan is working very, very well.

We also want to take that initiative and provide the same thing to the Ghost-Waiparous area, among other areas in the province. While we have good co-operation solutions to high-use or environmentally sensitive areas, we're also working with stakeholders, Mr. Speaker, on a province-wide basis.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplement, again for the same minister: what steps is the minister's department taking to ensure public safety and protection of the environment during the upcoming long weekend in busy off-highway vehicle recreation areas like Ghost-Waiparous, which is a real hot issue at this time?

Mr. Coutts: And a very important question it is, Mr. Speaker. For 75 years we've had government staff active in monitoring and enforcement on our public lands in the Rocky Mountain areas, and we continue to do that today. I must add that today we also focus on engaging the public because we feel that they're responsible for being good stewards of the land as well. So it's an education component that we're looking for.

This year's budget reflects some of the focus of that education and that stewardship. Among other areas Ghost-Waiparous will be a hotbed of activity on this long weekend, but more importantly we plan to have at least an additional 30 enforcement officers and personnel out there in Ghost-Waiparous helping people to have a safe, enjoyable weekend.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona.

Métis Hunting Rights

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During question period throughout this session the Official Opposition has asked the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development a number of questions about the process involved in the creation of the final agreement that will replace the interim Métis harvesting agreement. However, the minister has repeatedly dodged questions about the timeline for completion of this agreement, leaving many groups wondering and worrying about the next step in the process. My question is for the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development. Given that the minister stated in question period on April 28, "If there is going to be, a final agreement or a series of agreements," is the minister suggesting that the agreement may stay in place for months or years to come?

Ms Calahasen: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, in terms of the date and the time that we would be able to look at the agreement, we did sign the interim agreement so that we have until I think about this fall to look at what the outcomes will be. We would like to see what the results will be because we want to be able to bring out more information, to be able to find out the number of cases that we do have, how many possible hunting licences that we do have. We would be able to get all that information in order for us to be able to come together to determine, as I indicated in the last question I was asked, whether or not it will be a final agreement or a series of final agreements that we would look at.

Mr. Tougas: To the same minister: what did the minister mean when she said that there could be a "series of agreements"? Can you expand on that, please?

Ms Calahasen: Well, Mr. Speaker, we don't have that information. We need to be able to get all the information in order for us to be able to determine what it is that we will have as the final result. We don't have that information. When we have that information, we will then come forward, and our caucus colleagues will be involved to determine what will happen in terms of if there is a final agreement or a series of final agreements.

Mr. Tougas: Well, given that the minister has never set a firm deadline for the new agreement to be in place, is the minister attempting to shut out conservation groups, hunting groups, and her own caucus from the negotiation process?

Ms Calahasen: Well, Mr. Speaker, not at all. I think that's just ludicrous. First of all, we have a process in this government. That process identifies that a standing policy committee will make those decisions in terms of a policy. Secondly, we will then take that through the regular process. We have been working with our colleagues on this side of the House to be able to determine what the concerns will be, and they've been hearing as well from their organizations. We also have information that will be coming from Sustainable Resource Development that we have to monitor what's going on in order for us to be able to determine what it is that we have to do. The Minister of Sustainable Resource Development has been working with the various organizations that fall within his jurisdiction.

Lakeland College

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, the 2000-2003 business plan for Lakeland College addressed the requirements of the college to reverse a five-year enrolment drop of about 20 per cent. The college decided to invest its own resources in the growth of the college, and over the past few years Strathcona county has been working with Lakeland College to develop a Sherwood Park campus. Recently there were rumours that the Sherwood Park initiative has drained the college's reserves and that Lakeland College would not move forward by offering courses or creating a campus in Sherwood Park. Could the Minister of Advanced Education advise the Assembly if he's looking into the operations of Lakeland College?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No, the Minister of Advanced Education is not looking into the operations of Lakeland College, but I can tell you what has happened. In fact, there are a number of rumours and innuendos in the communities from Sherwood Park east to the border with respect to what's happening with Lakeland College, a lot of concern that's come out of the communities, many concerns, even those expressed by the MLA for the Lloydminster area. In fact, people are very concerned that the college continue to provide educational opportunities in the communities of Vermilion, in the communities of Lloydminster, and throughout the whole area east of the city. So we took a careful approach to appointing a new board chair, appointed a new board chair recently, asked that board chair to work with the board to determine the financial situation of the college, to make sure that they were on firm ground financially, and then to pursue the mandate of the college prior to any large expansion plans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister advise us about the status of course offerings in Sherwood Park for the next year and if a Sherwood Park campus would fit into the ministry's plans for increasing seats for students in Alberta?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the long-term plan for the college, of course, will be developed by the board of the college but, hopefully, in the context of the system review that we're talking about in terms of what the component parts of a postsecondary education system in the province are. As we look to extending educational opportunities out past the corridor and into other parts of Alberta, we will have to be conscious of the role that's played by colleges like Lakeland College, Portage College, Northern Lakes, those colleges, but we also have to be very interested in the educational opportunities for, for example, the county of Strathcona and Sherwood Park.

The mandate in terms of where Lakeland provides courses will be determined by the board of Lakeland after it's done its review and looked at its mandate, and of course we will be looking to work with them to determine how far and how fast they expand into the Sherwood Park area and whether a Sherwood Park campus fits into that context.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: has he had the opportunity to consider the P3 proposal by Lakeland College for a Sherwood Park campus?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Approximately three or four years ago the county of Strathcona gave, in essence, 67 acres to Lakeland College for the siting of a college. Subsequently what has occurred is Elk Island Catholic has become very excited about this particular project.

Mr. Speaker, we are looking at it. As the hon. Minister of Advanced Education stated, there are mandate issues that have to be dealt with with regard to this college. We're just in the business of building buildings, and if indeed there is a will to have a college there, we will build it. It is a good proposal that has been put forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Reforestation

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the course of the last decade over 13,000 hectares of forest north of Slave Lake have fallen to wildfires, including over 1,000 hectares of replanted cut blocks. However, the reclamation of the reforested cut blocks destroyed or damaged by the forest fires have been ignored by this government, forcing industry to bear the cost of this devastation alone. My question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Given that the forest industry spends millions of dollars in reforestation efforts, which can be compromised by wildfires, when will this government take responsibility for reclaiming burnt plantations on Crown land instead of passing the buck to small operators?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, we take responsibility of that through our delegated authority called FRIAA. In addition to that, in this year's budget, which was discussed in this Assembly for a matter of two hours here Wednesday night, I believe the 4th of May, we discussed the $1.5 million that goes into reforestation to make sure that these cut blocks on the forest fire side and on the small producer side – that $1.5 million goes to reforestation of those areas. So that's already been looked after.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Why has this ministry allowed huge swaths of burnt, replanted land north of Slave Lake to revert to grasslands, which are hostile to the coniferous seedlings and detrimental to the area's future abilities to maintain the vibrant forest industry?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, sometimes when you have a number of forest fires and you have a number of hectares that are burnt, you can't keep up with the reforestation with the dollars that are available. Sometimes there are areas where other species will take over where the forest was. FRIAA takes those into account. They do an assessment on the ground of exactly where the forest is and the kinds of species that could be reforested in those areas that are available. That assessment is done on a year-by-year basis by the delegated authority, and they do a very good job of it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My third question to the same minister: given that the forest protection core business plan does not specify the government's roles and responsibilities in reclamation of burnt areas, when will this government take action and put the required strategy into place?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, we do have a strategy. Under forest management agreements the companies do have a responsibility to reforest the areas. They want to make sure that reforestation in their area is sustainable for years to come. In areas where a forest fire is outside their forest management, we look at FRIAA to help us make sure that reforestation is done there as well. So it's a very responsible policy that is put forward by this government and the industry and the dollars that are committed by the industry to make sure that they reforest.

Mr. Speaker, 73 million trees are planted in this province every single solitary year. This year I believe we are up to 150 million trees being planted, and the anniversaries of that are within the next couple of weeks here. So our forest companies do a very responsible job of making sure that it's sustainable for years to come.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Domestic violence is a very serious problem in Alberta. In 2003 5,921 spousal abuse incidents were reported to police – that's an average of 16 per day – 3,666 charges were laid, and six people died as a result of spousal abuse. During the May 2005 fatality inquiry into the deaths of the Fekete family the RCMP was criticized for the way its members responded to information that the estranged husband was dangerous and threatening. My questions are to the Solicitor General. In the wake of the Fekete fatality inquiry what is the Solicitor General doing to ensure that the RCMP are adequately trained to address domestic violence cases?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The RCMP have been very proactive regarding this issue since the tragic incident happened two years ago. In fact, a senior executive officer of the RCMP took the lead in doing an internal review, where 91 recommendations were brought forward to the assistant commissioner of K Division, where, in fact, 30 of those recommendations have come into being already.

Mr. Speaker, following this tragic incident the ability to ensure that domestic violence training is taught to RCMP officers throughout this province has assisted the Solicitor General's office, with the office of the Minister of Children's Services as well as the Minister of Justice and Attorney General, where courses are provided throughout the various detachments throughout the province. In fact, one of those courses is going to be held in Fort McMurray later this month. To date 1,800 RCMP officers have been provided domestic violence training since the passing of the Protection against Family Violence Act of 1999.

Mrs. Jablonski: To the same minister: what's the Solicitor General doing to ensure that municipal police services are adequately trained to address domestic violence cases?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Well, again, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The larger municipalities such as Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge, and Medicine Hat have units that are specifically dedicated to investigating domestic violence cases. In Calgary they have the domestic violence conflict unit. In Edmonton they have the family violence conflict unit. Those investigators work alongside Children's Services officers that are human service workers, who are sort of the old social service workers. They work together in going to a home. They investigate the complaint and, as well, investigate the issues regarding the family. So on one side they can investigate the criminal allegation; on the other side they can investigate and provide the support services that the family may require regarding the incident that may have happened in the home.

Mrs. Jablonski: My final question is to the Attorney General. Given that it's statistically unlikely that a person convicted of domestic violence assault will change their behaviour patterns without help and that they are likely to reoffend, are judges who convict domestic violence offenders required to sentence these offenders to treatment programs?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of sentencing options which are available to the courts – peace bonds, suspended sentence, conditional sentence – all of which have conditions, which can include that the offender be sent to a mandatory treatment centre dealing with the elimination of violent behaviour. So that is the method in which that can be available.

We do have a limited number of programs in Alberta directed at this particular issue. They are located in a number of locations – Calgary, Edmonton, Grande Prairie, and so on – but they are limited. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that it is available, and the courts are in fact addressing this issue by requesting offenders to embark upon these particular programs through conditional sentencing of one form or another.

The Clerk: Members' Statements.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of six hon. members to participate, but in the interim might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community Development.

Mr. Mar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This October Alberta will host a national conference and four national symposia on sport and recreation. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Bob Weller, chair of the Canadian national parks and recreation conference; Heather Cowie, chair of the Youth Development Through Recreation Services 2005 National Symposium; Hugh Hoyles, chair of the True Sport in the Community National Symposium; Cliff Lacey, chair of the Pathways and Trails National Symposium; Valerie Nicoll, chair of the conference facilities committee; and Vern Colley, vice-chair of the International Symposium on Active Leisure for Citizens with Disabilities. With Vern are members of his steering committee who are in the building today in meetings: Glenda Heale, Bev Matthiessen, Norbert Frank, and Katie Burley-Wood.

I'm also pleased to introduce to you, Mr. Speaker, from the Alberta Recreation and Parks Association, providing support for the symposia, Mr. Steve Allan and Todd Reade, and here from Chrysalis, an Alberta society for people with disabilities, are Lorie Fischer and Isabelita Wheeler.

All of these individuals are steering or supporting the conference and symposia to improve the quality of life of all Albertans through recreation and parks. I ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: Hon. members, the historical vignette today refers to an event that occurred on the grounds of the Alberta Legislative Assembly five years ago today. On that day a statue of Lord Strathcona was unveiled on the Legislature Grounds in honour of the 100th anniversary of Lord Strathcona's Horse, the Royal Canadian regiment. This is an important part of our proud military tradition.

This regiment was founded in 1900 by Donald Smith, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, to serve in the South African Boer War. Since its creation this regiment has served in both world wars, the Korean War, and various peacekeeping missions. Three members of the regiment have been awarded the Victoria Cross, and the regiment has 22 battle honours approved for emblazonment. This regiment, with its western origins, has touched upon many of the people and places that have figured prominently in Alberta's development.

Hon. members, for those of you interested in learning more about this fascinating part of our history, I'd like to note that the Provincial Museum is currently showing an exhibit entitled Hoof Prints to Tank Tracks: 100 Years of the South Alberta Light Horse, and that will be on display until September 18.

Benefits of Immigration to Alberta

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We all know that the prosperity of a province or a nation is dependent on its human resources, both as producers and consumers. Our Alberta is blessed with natural resources. Those natural resources have been sitting there for millions of years. They only become Alberta's advantage when our human resources realize them. Human resources make our province prosper through innovation and creativity. To sustain such prosperity and develop it further, we need more human resources.

Indeed, every year, Mr. Speaker, tens of thousands of new Canadians make Alberta their home. They departed from their homelands to leave behind bad practices. They came here to build better lives for themselves and their families and to build a society better than where they departed from. Most of them are professionals in their lands of birth. They need a better society and system, and Alberta needs their human resources. It's a perfect partnership in building a great society.

Mr. Speaker, I have had many occasions to visit several immigrant-assisting agencies. One of their outstanding services is to help immigrant professionals to integrate quickly into the Alberta workforce. I want to take this opportunity to say thank you to the service providers and the companies that sponsored the new Canadians into their workplaces by providing their first work experience in Canada. Indeed, the first work experience in Canada is vital to new immigrants.

I urge our government to create additional short-term internship positions within the government for qualified immigrants who seek work experience for the first time in Canada. This will encourage and challenge private corporations and the federal government to do the same.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Marie Geddes

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to acknowledge a woman who took a small political action which had large consequences. Marie Geddes died yesterday in Camrose. To me she represented all the residents and family members of residents in long-term care who took steps to focus attention on what was really happening. Marie talked in a matter-of-fact way about wanting more than one bath a week, about the quality of food, about the staff just not having the time to get everything done.

Together with the Auditor General's report Marie's story delivered a knockout punch to any idea that everything was great in long-term care. Marie Geddes made it personal and political, and a lot of people had a better understanding of what is wrong in long-term care because of her courage. What she did to get herself into a position where she could get media attention and could get people to listen to her was to go on a hunger strike. Eighty-six years old, a diabetic, and she went on a hunger strike. Pretty courageous and pretty scary.

If we get any action from the government in long-term care, we need to credit Marie Geddes and all the Marie Geddeses who speak out, all the residents and their families and the advocacy groups and even people totally unconnected. I have a constituent who heard Marie's story on the radio, and this constituent went out and organized a petition and within a few weeks had over 400 signatures on it. I'll table that petition later today.

So thanks again, Marie. Thanks for your courageous advocacy, for your simple but powerful descriptions on what is going on in long-term care. You helped a lot.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

World No Tobacco Day

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission I am pleased to inform the hon. members that AADAC will be hosting a provincial celebration to mark World No Tobacco Day, and that's on May 30 at the Coast Terrace Inn in Edmonton.

It's a very significant date, Mr. Speaker. Since 1988 the World Health Organization has designated World No Tobacco Day as an annual global event to call world-wide attention to the impact of tobacco use on public health. Here in Alberta the World No Tobacco Day provincial celebration recognizes the efforts of our community partners and salutes their commitment to tobacco reduction in our province. This year AADAC is pleased to sponsor the event with partners Health Canada, the Alberta Lung Association, and the Canadian Cancer Society.

The event features presentations of the Barb Tarbox awards of excellence and youth scholarship fund. As my colleagues may be aware, Mr. Speaker, after being diagnosed with terminal lung cancer, Barb Tarbox dedicated the remainder of her life to talking to young people about the dangers of smoking. After her death two years ago at the age of 42 AADAC established the awards in Barb's honour to recognize Alberta businesses, nonprofit groups, and individuals who have made significant impacts in the area of tobacco prevention, cessation, and reduction as well as protection from second-hand smoke. In addition, a $2,500 youth scholarship fund is awarded to a young person under the age of 18 who has made a positive contribution to tobacco reduction in their community.

As the leader of the Alberta tobacco reduction strategy AADAC could not have achieved the results it has without the community involvement of concerned individuals, agencies, and nongovernmental organizations. I'm proud to inform our hon. members that the Alberta tobacco reduction strategy is helping to significantly reduce tobacco use in the province, and the results are impressive, Mr. Speaker. The number of Albertans over the age of 15 who smoke has dropped from 25 per cent in 2001-2002 to 20 per cent in 2003-2004. That's a hundred thousand fewer smokers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your support of World No Tobacco Day.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Camrose Kodiaks Hockey Team

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to congratulate the Camrose Kodiaks upon winning the silver medal at the Royal Bank Cup, the Canadian junior A hockey championship. The home team Weyburn Red Wings won the gold in a close 3 to 2 victory in the final game. The game was nationally televised on TSN following the world championship final game where Canada also won a silver medal in Vienna.

All season long the Kodiaks have performed excellently. In reaching the Royal Bank championship, they not only won the Alberta junior A championship but went on to win the Alberta/B.C. junior A championship, the Doyle Cup. This accomplishment was possible thanks to the excellent leadership from coaches Boris Rybalka, Doug Fleck, and Miles Walsh, who provided the guidance and support needed throughout the season to reach these accomplishments in postseason play. Captain Travis Friedley was named MVP and best defenceman in the Canadian championships, and Mason Raymond was named best forward and was the tournament's leading scorer. Forward Jason Roberts was named player of the final game for the Kodiaks.

The Kodiaks have won the Alberta junior championship three years of the eight that they have been part of the Alberta junior league. This is their second silver medal win at the Royal Bank Cup, and although they came close to winning the gold medal this year, the Kodiaks won the gold at the Royal Bank Cup in 2001.

Since their inception in 1997 the Kodiaks have been embraced by the community as indicated by the sellout crowds in the playoffs. The players have had a positive influence on younger minor hockey players of the area, and they have demonstrated that hard work and a high level of skill and discipline pay off in a young player's dream to succeed and excel.

Tonight I will be attending a city of Camrose welcome-home rally. This event will reflect the intense community support for the Kodiaks and demonstrate the importance of this level of hockey in the Camrose area.

In a year without NHL hockey the Kodiaks and other amateur teams have shown that the pure sport of hockey is alive and well and enjoyed by fans across Alberta and Canada. Thank you.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of this month you advised the Assembly that May is Cystic Fibrosis Month. Cystic fibrosis, or CF, is the most common fatal genetic disease affecting young people in Alberta. It affects mainly the lungs and the digestive system, and lung disease represents the biggest single threat to the lives of children and adults who have CF.

Thanks to advances in research and treatment, young persons with CF are living longer and healthier lives. In the 1960s most children with CF were not expected to live long enough to reach kindergarten. Today half of all Canadians with CF are expected to live to 37 years and beyond.

Recently the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation held its annual general meeting and conference in Edmonton. The foundation, with more than 50 volunteer chapters, is a Canada-wide health charity which funds care and cystic fibrosis research. I had the pleasure of attending the foundation's gala awards dinner on Friday, April 29, 2005, and met some of the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation award winners.

In keeping with the conference theme, Volunteers: Our Most Precious Resource, the delegates from across Canada honoured a number of outstanding volunteers for their selfless dedication to the CF cause. Many of those honoured were residents of Alberta. The Breath of Life award was received by Lorraine Johnson, of Edmonton; Jordan Milne, a Calgary law student; and the McWhirter family, of Calgary. Chris Small, of Edmonton, received the Céline award. The Earl Grey Golf Club from Calgary, Gloria Both of Red Deer, and Rob Sokil from Edmonton received the Julia award.

Ron Moore, of Edmonton, received the Summerhayes award. Very sadly, Ron Moore has now succumbed to the deadly disease. He was 48 years old and a truly remarkable individual, extremely dedicated to the CF cause, and an accomplished athlete.

Researchers funded by the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation discovered the gene responsible for cystic fibrosis in 1989. Canadians are marking CF Awareness Month. Let's congratulate the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation for their good work.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Prevention of Youth Violence

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our Alberta is supposed to be one of the safest places in one of the safest countries on earth. Many people come to Canada to enjoy its safety and freedom from the violence they may have feared in their first country. But just look at the news. Every day we get news of more violence: more stabbings, more car theft, and more murders. So often it is our young people. What is happening on our streets, and why?

Crystal meth and other drugs are a big part of the problem. This government is moving slowly, but I'm glad that this Legislature has begun to address crystal meth. Government must focus on drug abuse and find real ways to get kids off drugs and, therefore, to stop the crime and violence we see.

One of the best ways to keep kids out of trouble is to keep them busy. Kids learn teamwork, learn how to set and reach goals, stay fit, gain recognition and confidence by being involved in sports or dance or kung fu or whatever. Cost is a problem for many, many families. I hear the cost complaint often. But the cost of the violence and the loss of the sense of safety and security is much, much worse. Another solution is to increase the number of police officers.

We must provide whatever support we can so that kids can get into good things. We want them off the streets and out of trouble. We must work to win the fight, and we must provide tax credits for kids' recreation or whatever to attack this.

Thank you very much.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a petition signed by 321 Albertans who are eager to see potentially life-saving improvements to highways in northern Alberta, particularly highway 63. With today's tabling the total signatures on this petition so far is 4,699.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise to present a petition from a number of good Albertans, almost all from the city of Edmonton, and it reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling today the required number of copies of responses to written questions and motions for returns raised during the First Session of the 26th Legislature involving the Department of Advanced Education. This would be written questions 1, 2, 3, 4, 10, 11, 20, 21, 25, 26, and 27 and motions for returns 2, 3, and 31. Should members have additional concerns or observations or questions relating to any of the matters out of those written questions or other matters, I would invite them to attend at my office or raise them with me.

I've tabled the copies of the binder with the Clerk's office rather than bringing them all in today, the copies of that. Just out of interest's sake, Mr. Speaker, providing answers to these questions: particularly, Motion for a Return 3 took 64 hours of government staff work and in total to answer all these questions, 96 hours of government staff work.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and table the appropriate number of copies of the 2002-2003 children's advocate annual report. The work of the advocate is extremely important to make sure that children and youth receiving services have an advocate to assist them.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to table copies of a document outlining the action Children's Services has already taken to address the issues in this report. All of the issues have been addressed through various ministry programs, services, or legislation.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table requisite copies of supplementary information to questions that were asked during the April 20 Committee of Supply review of the Ministry of Energy's business plan and estimates.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development.

Mr. Dunford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the required number of copies of the 2003-2004 Alberta Economic Development Authority activity report entitled Strategies for a New Era.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings this afternoon. The first is a letter from the hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation dated May 5, 2005, to myself. This letter indicates that the Edmonton public school board has requested "15 portables at 15 schools, including one for Kenilworth school."

My second tabling is a document that was provided through an access to information request from the Edmonton public school board. It indicates the constituencies where the cluster studies would be conducted to close Edmonton public schools. Cluster study A is in Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, cluster B is in Edmonton-Calder, and cluster C is in Edmonton-Gold Bar.

The third tabling I have this afternoon is also a document that was received through access to information. It indicates, contrary to what the public board had stated, that there was a lease signed at Terrace Heights school between Edmonton school district No. 7 and Alberta Online Consortium Association, and this lease is dated March 24, 2005.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a petition that was put together by my constituent, Norma Nozick. The 418 people signing were asking to urge the government of Alberta to increase staff to our nursing homes. Their residents, citizens of our wealthy province should not be punished for their crime of being fragile, infirm and dependent. They have earned the right to receive adequate, respectful care, which an increase in support would give them.

We strongly implore the government to act immediately.

The petition was not in order to be presented as a petition, so I am presenting it as a tabling.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. I am tabling an additional nine e-mails regarding the fate of the Simon Fraser junior high band program that I received from Calgary-Varsity constituents who argue that the loss of an implicit music program within our school system affects the wider circle of appreciation, exposure, and involvement in fine arts within our province.

The second set of tablings is as follows. I am tabling the required copies of last Sunday's Alberta College of Art and Design's 2005 convocation ceremony, at which artist, author, journalist, and keynote speaker Richard Rhodes reinforced the value of an arts degree, stating: no one else on the job will recognize as many shades of blue or see as far or recognize when the process has gone flat and there is a need to start over again.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to present five copies each of five letters from a pile of about a couple of thousand, one of the piles of letters I've got, from good Albertans decrying the use of temporary foreign workers and on the need to train young people in our own province.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a letter from Jacques Blanchard, from Calgary, who would like to ask the Premier to define the Alberta advantage and explain how the so-called advantage applies to overworked nurses, university students, who pay outrageous tuition fees, everyone who has felt the crunch due to bungled deregulation, and all the other groups who have fallen behind under the Premier's watch.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before the Clerk proceeds, I'd just like to advise hon. members that this afternoon all hon. members will be receiving correspondence from me which will partially outline the procedure for events in this Assembly next Tuesday with the arrival of Her Majesty the Queen, plus there's also a document which deals with some protocol questions. A fairly large number of members has contacted my office in recent days wanting to know some of the protocol things, particularly for the spouses of the members.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Cardinal, Minister of Human Resources and Employment, responses to questions raised by Members of the Legislative Assembly on April 28, 2005, the Department of Human Resources and Employment 2005-06 Committee of Supply debate. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Stevens, Minister of Justice and Attorney General, responses to questions raised by Members of the Legislative Assembly on May 3, 2005, the Department of Justice and Attorney General 2005-06 Committee of Supply debate.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood on a purported point of order.

Point of Order Citing Documents

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise on a point of order, and I will indicate that the citation is Beauchesne's 495: documents cited. Today the minister of seniors referred to an appraisal that was done on a parcel of land that has involved us in some questions in the last few days in this Assembly. She also referred to it yesterday, and I do have the Hansard for that. She said that an independent appraiser was hired to assess the value of the land. "The value of the land was appraised at between $15,000 and $40,000, and that was depending on how soon housing could be developed in the area." She went on to say, "Given that, the accusation about this being a private, cozy deal is completely untrue."

3:00

Now, Mr. Speaker, in Beauchesne's 495 it says:

- (1) A Minister is not at liberty to read or quote from a despatch or other state paper not before the House without being prepared to lay it on the Table.

(2) It has been admitted that a document which has been cited ought to be laid upon the Table of the House, if it can be done without injury to the public interest.

(7) When a letter, even though it may have been written originally as a private letter, becomes part of a record of a department, it becomes a public document, and if quoted by a Minister in debate, must be tabled on request.

Mr. Speaker, I am requesting that the minister be asked to table the documents which she cited, which includes specifically the appraisal on this parcel of land. Also, the agreement for sale was referenced.

I just want to indicate that there is an exception allowed if there would be an “injury to the public interest,” and I would argue most strongly that there’s no way that an appraisal can fit that description since an appraisal is done independently by a professional and is used as a document to establish the value of land and does not comprise in itself the argument or the arrangement or agreement or contract in any way between the government or the seniors’ housing and any private developer but is actually something that is quite objective, or should be objective, and independent.

I would also argue that the public interest would be best served if the agreement for sale was also tabled by the minister since there are many questions about this land deal, and there’s widespread concern in the development and real estate communities in Fort McMurray about what happened with this deal. So I think it makes a good argument that the public interest would be served by the tabling of the agreement for sale as well.

Mr. Speaker, given that the last day of the session may well be tomorrow, I think this issue has some urgency, and I would request, on a point of order, a ruling to the effect that the minister should table both the agreement for sale and the appraisal of this parcel of land prior to this session adjourning tomorrow.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is mixing up a number of different things here. He’s mixing up the provisions of our rules which allow for motions for returns to ask the House to require the return of a document. He’s mixing up Standing Order 30 for an emergency debate on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity, and he’s doing it under the guise of asking for a document to be tabled because it was cited.

Well, Mr. Speaker, 495 says that the “Minister is not at liberty to read or quote from.” I read the Hansard from yesterday. I certainly listened to the answers from the questions today. There was no reading or quoting from any document. The minister simply referred to the fact that there was an appraisal and, as I recall it – and I can refresh my memory – indicated that the value of the land was appraised between $15,000 and $40,000, and that was depending on how soon . . .

Mr. Martin: That’s quoting.

Mr. Hancock: That’s not quoting at all. That’s simply indicating a piece of information in response to a question. If that is quoting or if that is citing a document, then virtually every answer in this House would have to be followed up by the tabling of a myriad of documents from which that information might have been taken or concluded.

All that’s really happened here under this point of order, Mr. Speaker, is that the hon. member wanted one more chance to get his point on the table with respect to the questions raised. This is not a document that’s cited under 495. It doesn’t follow under either 495(1) or 495(5), which says, “To be cited, a document must be quoted or specifically used to influence debate.” Question period, as you’ve said from time to time, is not debate.

Clearly, what’s happened is that the minister has indicated in answer to the question that the sale was done under the law in place, which allowed it to be done based on appraisal. She’s indicated that there was an appraisal done, and she’s indicated that that’s where the evaluation was taken from. But there’s no citing of the appraisal, quoting of the appraisal, or in any way reading from the appraisal or in any way referring to a document which would require the tabling of the document in the Legislature under that standing order.

Certainly, the hon. member could ask for the document under Written Questions or Motions for Returns or could simply write a letter asking for the document, in which case the normal process of review would be done to ensure that there were no issues with respect to freedom of information and protection of privacy concerns or other concerns.

One of the things, Mr. Speaker, that we have to be more and more careful about in this House, unfortunately – and I say “unfortunately” because I think sometimes it’s all too constraining. The rules with respect to the protection of privacy are very clear. Codification . . . [interjection] Members of the opposition often want codification. Well, under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act there is codification.

So, yes, an appraisal; yes, any other document. Before it can be released publicly, absolutely any document that somebody asks for we have an obligation to review to see whether by releasing the document there would be any FOIP issues or any violation of law. That’s certainly true in this case, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others who wish to participate on this point?

Well, this was certainly not the point of order that the chair anticipated. He prepared himself to do all kinds of research for the last hour with respect to 14 different other variations of that but is quite sidelined with respect to that one. Quite clearly, Beauchesne 495(3), “A public document referred to but not cited or quoted by a Minister need not be tabled.” The chair did review the Hansard of yesterday and today and could not concur that this is a point of order.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s my pleasure to move for second reading Bill 42, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005.

As a matter of the tradition of this Assembly a miscellaneous statutes amendment act is a piece of legislation that is noncontentious. It is something that has been reviewed with all opposition parties so goes forward with the understanding that the matters that are contained within are not contentious.

I thought I might just mention the various pieces of legislation that are in fact impacted in some fashion by the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005. They are the Alberta Housing Act, the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act, the Civil Enforcement Act, the Employment Standards Code, the Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2003, the Government Organization Act, the Land Titles Act, the Mines and Minerals Act, the Queen Elizabeth II Golden Jubilee Recognition Act, the School Act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 42 read a second time]

 Third Reading
 Bill 14
 Student Financial Assistance Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move Bill 14, the Student Financial Assistance Amendment Act, 2005, for third reading.

We had it in committee last night, and there was a query from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview concerning the issue of a lifetime maximum. So I'll just briefly repeat what I said, I think, when I introduced this for second reading, and that is: this act is being brought forward simply to make sure that there's clarity in terms of the existing application of the rules. This is the way the rules have been applied, but there has been some question through the audit process, as I understand it, as to whether the act is clear enough in those areas. So this act simply does that.

I would indicate to the House that we are, as I said in question period earlier today, doing a complete review. I expect that the issues that were raised – and, quite frankly, I agree with you, hon. member, with respect to the concern about lifetime limits and the ability of lifelong learning and people coming back into the system. I raised that query, actually, when this came forward as a proposed act, but I was satisfied that we should make those changes in the context of the review, and for now it is entirely appropriate to make sure that the language of the act is clear and the application of the policy that's currently in place conforms with the act.

So that's the purpose for this bill. I hope that we will be back in the not too distant future debating the broader question of student loan assistance and financial aid and affordability for students.

Mr. Flaherty: Mr. Speaker, I wish to finish the debate for the purpose of clarifying amending aspects of the bill. Thus, I move closing of the debate.

Ms Blakeman: Question.

The Speaker: The question has been called.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a third time]

Bill 22
Animal Protection Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton-Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to move third reading of Bill 22, the Animal Protection Amendment Act, 2005.

This is an important bill that updates the existing legislation to reflect the expectations of Albertans when it comes to animal care and protection. I just want to once again thank the hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development and his staff for allowing me to carry this bill, and I appreciate the support and excellent questions from members of the House.

With that, I'd now move third reading of Bill 22. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Essentially, Bill 22, the Animal Protection Amendment Act, was to give more power to peace officers to take animals into custody before they become distressed and also to provide more clarity on the care of animals and more responsibility to the owner. As the sponsoring member did indicate, there were a number of questions raised and answers supplied. The Official Opposition did consult with stakeholders, particularly the Alberta SPCA, and they were in support of what was being proposed here. We also listened to others that contacted us about this bill and raised their issues during debate.

The final point I wanted to make was that in many ways this act was too long in coming. We needed this protection for animals a long time ago. The Official Opposition is pleased to see that it is now in place and has been strengthened, and we are happy to support this bill in third reading.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. My only concern is that we extend to wild animals the same kind of protected rights that we've extended in this wonderful bill to domesticated animals. I would like to see the same sort of protection extended to grizzly bears, for example, and woodland caribou.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a third time]

Bill 35
Employment Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and move third reading of Bill 35, the Employment Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2005.

I would also like to thank the hon. members of the opposition parties for their support of this legislation throughout the process.

As I stated when I was introducing this bill, this is a very important piece of legislation. I'm pleased to sponsor this bill because, as the Member for Edmonton-Centre stated in Committee of the Whole debate, it addresses something that is tremendously meaningful to a lot of people: their pension plan.

The superintendent of pensions under these amendments will have more effective means of ensuring that private-sector pension plans are being properly funded. Bill 35 also strengthens his enforcement powers if problems arise. Bill 35 also provides plan members with better access to information and provides more transparency so that they can see for themselves the financial status of their plan. They will have access to the audited financial statements, any management report that the superintendent of pensions has delivered following a plan examination, and they will have advance notification tion of any proposed amendment to a plan that would adversely affect them. Mr. Speaker, these changes put plan members in a better position to monitor their pensions before they actually need them.

Again I thank all members for supporting this piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I do now move that the bill be read a third time and does pass.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to lead off debate for the Official Opposition on Bill 35, the pension amendment act. As I've indicated previously, this bill appears to accomplish a lot of good things for Albertans who have investments in pensions.

I think it's been mentioned several times that, in fact, for many Albertans the pension that they hold may well be one of their single largest investments, so anything that we can do to protect that investment on behalf of those Albertans, anything we can do to ensure that they have access to better information and are aware of what changes might be taking place in those pensions is a good thing and something I support, and I have recommended to my colleagues that we support it as well.

Certainly, I would like to once again thank the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill for the tremendous effort he made in terms of answering the questions that I had raised personally during second reading of this bill. It was very much appreciated to have that information come back in the fashion that it did.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would recommend to my colleagues and all members of this House that we support this bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 35 read a third time]

Bill 38

Pharmacy and Drug Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move third reading of Bill 38.

Bill 38 will update the Pharmacy and Drug Act to reflect current pharmacy practice and to clarify regulations requirements for pharmacies and drugs in Alberta. As well, changes proposed in this bill will allow the Alberta College of Pharmacists to set standards and regulations for categories of pharmacy services.

I just wanted to add that I would like to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung. I thought his comments in committee were very good and want him to know how much I also value pharmacists and how important I think the work that they do is.

At this time I'd like to move third reading of Bill 38.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak in third reading to Bill 38, the Pharmacy and Drug Amendment Act, 2005. The sponsoring member briefly touched on the purposes of the bill. I'll expand on that a bit.

The bill does change the definition of prescription in order to allow pharmacists to work with doctors and patients to tailor drug therapy. It broadens the licence categories to include facilities such as compounding and what are called repackaging centres. It creates an appeal or review process if a pharmacy is refused a licence. It does register drug wholesalers. It clarifies the definitions and other minor revisions or additions to definitions to ensure consistency with the Health Professions Act.

Mr. Speaker, there was nothing that troubled the Official Opposition greatly in this bill. Essentially, it's a number of needed and, in fact, recommended changes that will better acknowledge the place that pharmacists and pharmacies have in our health system.

There was an amendment brought forward yesterday that further clarified concerns that I had put on the record around institutional pharmacies and that it be clear that these are to be only pharmacies operating in what we would call Crown institutions. I was concerned that there be a chance that privately run facilities with a pharmacy would then be captured under that definition. That's now been clarified, so thank you to the government for recognizing that gap and for, in fact, closing it.

We have checked with all of the stakeholders, and they are happy to support this bill in the state that it is now in. We also support this because it does adhere with our policy position 10 that came out in our health policy, and that is around recognizing how we manage our health care workforce, reducing doctors' roles in care provision where someone else can actually do it, in this case pharmacists, so reducing that role as gatekeeper, and gathering better data to plan for the future.

This was I think a step forward, and at this point I am happy to support third reading. Thank you.

Hon. Members: Question.

The Speaker: Should I call the question?

[Motion carried; Bill 38 read a third time]

Bill 39

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead on behalf of.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to move Bill 39 for third reading, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2005, on behalf of the Member for Calgary-North Hill.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The intention of this bill is to save lives. As the critic for Infrastructure and Transportation and representative of the Alberta Liberal opposition I fully support this bill. Hopefully, this fall members of the government will reconsider their opposition to banning the use of hand-held cellphones while driving, which if enacted would also save lives.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Question.

The Speaker: The question's been called.

[Motion carried; Bill 39 read a third time]

Bill 36
Police Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Cernaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move Bill 36, the Police Amendment Act, 2005, for third reading.

These proposed amendments build on an existing police oversight mechanism with many areas being clarified and strengthened. The amendments ensure that every community has either a civilian police commission or police committee to whom the chief of police is accountable for the handling of complaints.

The amendments strengthen the role of the commission considerably. The chair of the commission under the amendments can at their discretion request another police agency anywhere in the country to investigate any complaint against a police officer. The MLA Policing Review Committee recommendations state that "it is most appropriate that the chief of police be responsible for the investigation of routine complaints." While this may be true, these amendments go farther and allow for the chair of the commission to request an outside police agency to investigate what might be considered a routine complaint if it would be in the public interest.

As well, Mr. Speaker, the amendments of the responsibilities of the director of law enforcement have been significantly increased. The director of law enforcement will ensure that commissions and committees have the training that will provide them with the knowledge and skills to perform their duties more effectively. The director of law enforcement will also monitor complaints, establish standards and audit practices to ensure that standards are met.

Finally, at the provincial level we are enhancing the role of the Solicitor General to allow the minister to require an external investigation even if the commission chair had decided against such a course of action. The minister can also appoint a civilian monitor or review person or team to oversee an investigation in cases where provincial intervention is needed.

Also, Mr. Speaker, when any complaint has been dealt with and the complainant is not satisfied, they can appeal to the Alberta Law Enforcement Review Board, which is a civilian body with considerable powers. We do not need to enhance the powers of the Law Enforcement Review Board, but we can enhance their role through policy and increased resources. In addition to its most common role of an appeal body, the board also has the power on its own to conduct inquiries respecting complaints. Further, at the request of the minister the LERB can inquire into any matter respecting policing, and that is as it should be.

Mr. Speaker, I believe I've highlighted the key points of this bill. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the hon. members from the Liberal opposition for the debate that we've had as well as thank our department staff for their hard work in drafting this bill as well as the stakeholders for their invaluable input over the last few years on this very important issue.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to speak on third reading of Bill 36. I congratulate the Solicitor General on presenting this bill because I think it is a substantive bill. The Solicitor General has mentioned I think previously that all legislation is in process of evolving, and certainly this is a step in the right direction, beyond where we've been before. Our only reservation is that it hasn't evolved enough to where we want it to be.

Bill 36 provides guidelines for the establishment of policing committees and police commissions, and that's all very important. It also ensures a high level of competence in terms of the training of members of police commissions and police committees through a director of law enforcement whose responsibility it is to develop crime prevention and restorative justice programs and to train personnel and to ensure high standards for police committees and commissions, and that's really important.

It also provides guidelines for the designation of a public complaints director to receive routine complaints against police officers, who would refer them to the chief of police, and then the chief of police may request the commission chair to bring in another police service to investigate, and all that's really important.

The one area where we have reservations is in the way that this amendment act suggests how serious incidents and complaints should be handled. When the minister is notified by a chief of police about a serious complaint, the minister may – it doesn't say that he must – do one or more of the following. He may request "another police service to provide a police officer" to investigate or he may request "another police service to conduct an investigation" or he may "appoint one or more members of the public as overseers to observe" and to monitor the process of the investigation carried out by a police service.

Now, in our view this does not go far enough, and during committee we suggested an amendment to the section, which was defeated. We think that this part of the act does not satisfy it. We're talking about the effect of this bill on the public. This bill does not go far enough in dealing with the public desire for actual independence and impartiality on the part of investigation.

We've got a lot of cases where the public is expressing its lack of confidence in the abilities of police to investigate themselves, so there's a desire for something more. There's a desire to have an independent and impartial investigative process and also a process that has the appearance of impartiality and objectivity. That's very, very important.

Of course, there are lots of models in other jurisdictions across Canada and the United States, and we made reference to the Ontario model of the Special Investigations Unit, which was established some years ago to deal with serious cases. It's interesting. Their motto, as I mentioned in our previous debate, is Independent Investigations, Community Confidence, and that's exactly why we in the Liberal opposition are opposing this bill, because we don't think in its effect it's ensuring public confidence. Independent Investigations, Community Confidence: that's what we need.

In the different models of civilian oversight of the police, of course, there are two extremes. There's the in-house model where police officers receive a complaint and they investigate it themselves, so it's police investigating police. That's the in-house model. The other extreme is the Ontario example, the fully independent model, where civilians both investigate and adjudicate the complaint. What we brought as an amendment was a model in between. We don't think that what is suggested by the bill goes much beyond the in-house model. Sure, you have a couple of people from the public who maybe could be appointed to ensure the integrity of the process. So they oversee the process, but they are not engaged in the investigation itself, even though a person could be a retired judge, retired policeman, and so on, and have the abilities to carry out investigations.

So this is just a variation, I think, of the in-house model, and what we need is a fully independent model. I'm looking forward to the day when we can evolve a little further down the road to have an amendment to the Police Act so that we can have a fully independent, impartial, objective, civilian oversight process to hear serious complaints about the police service.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be brief. I've made comments before on this, but it seems that there was a change from the minister. I notice that three years ago, when the minister was a backbencher, I think he advocated for an independent police secretariat as part of the MLA Policing Review Committee's proposal for better civilian oversight of police. Now that he's the minister in charge of policing and the Solicitor General, although, admittedly, I suppose it's a step in the right direction, the minister is proposing much more modest measures to deal with the problems of police investigating themselves.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that it serves the police well if there is the cynicism that police are investigating themselves, especially in the Edmonton area after the infamous Overtime bar symptom of the problems created when police operate without accountability to the community. I think that brought it front and centre. As a result of that, I believe that we need at least a more transparent process, that it's not the police investigating the police.

Now, this bill takes us in some direction to cover this, but it doesn't go the way I think it would have if what the minister was proposing as a backbench MLA – I think it can be best described as minor tinkering rather than significant change. Admittedly, Mr. Speaker, it does open the door slightly to an independent investigation of serious police wrongdoing, but again, as mentioned by the previous speaker, this would be entirely at the discretion of the Solicitor General. There's no agency being established to conduct such investigations. It seems to me, then, that as a result of that, even though the minister theoretically has a right, the status quo of the police investigating the police will continue to prevail in this province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, again, I don't think that serves the public well, and I don't think it serves the police well when that perception is out there. Whether they come back with the right decision, if it's the police investigating themselves and they come back and say that there was nothing wrong, maybe they're right – probably in most cases they were – but there's always that perception out there that if it had been an independent investigation, there might have been a different result.

That's why I say, Mr. Speaker, that I don't think police investigating police – there at least should probably be police on it but an independent commission looking into it. The previous member mentioned Ontario. Whether you have to go, as he said, that far or not, I don't know. But it seems, in the discussions that we've had, to be working relatively well there, and I think the police would argue that they're perhaps being well served.

So I don't understand why we can't take the final step here, Mr. Speaker, as when the minister was an MLA advocating an independent commission. Now that he's the Solicitor General, we're going to have more power in the Solicitor General's department. The only other point I would like to make – and I know that at this stage in third reading this is probably not going to change, but I would hope that the minister would reconsider and go back to his MLA days and look at what he was advocating at that particular time. I think that made the most sense.

The other point – and I've heard the minister talk about this in the media – that I think is a bit of a problem is the one-year time limit being imposed on making complaints against the police. I know that the minister has said that in a couple other provinces – he can correct me if I'm wrong: I think he mentioned New Brunswick, and I'm not sure of the other province – they had six months or three months or something and that by comparison Alberta was better off with a year. Well, I don't think we should be comparing ourselves in that regard, Mr. Speaker. I think limiting periods are problematic because people have intimidated their victims so much sometimes that they don't report the crime for many years. Certainly, a one-year time limit I don't think is adequate.

So the best I can say about the bill, Mr. Speaker, is that it's better than what was there before, but certainly I don't think that as an MLA on the MLA review committee the member would have accepted this. As I say, this is tinkering rather than really doing something about the problem, and I think the minister could do better. Hopefully, next year he will come back with a different bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available should anyone wish to participate.

If not, then I'll call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I'm glad of the opportunity to speak in third reading to Bill 36, the Police Amendment Act, 2005. Frankly, I'm glad that my colleague who is the Official Opposition critic for the Solicitor General spoke before me because he's kinder than I am, and it was probably nice to start out that way. To me, this bill has utterly failed in what we needed it to do. I find it meek, I find it tentative, and I find that it polishes up the status quo. It did not do what we the people needed it to do.

We allow policing by consent. We agree as a population that we will allow police officers to move among us and uphold the laws that we want, and we agree that these people will be given the special powers to do that. When we as the public start to develop suspicions or have concerns about the police, it's very, very important that we are reassured that there are strong and vigorous processes in place.

There have been a number of examples in Calgary and Edmonton and elsewhere that are causing a credibility crisis, an integrity crisis here. I was hoping that we would see the leadership from the government that stepped forward and said: "We understand that, and we're going to deal with this. We will do what needs to be done to reassure the public." What that really was about, Mr. Speaker, was making sure that that transparency, that civilian oversight, that accountability was put into place and everybody could see it so that, if I may paraphrase, not only was justice done but seen to be done. It's what some of the others have commented on, that not only is there actual transparency but that there's the appearance of that.

It has to do with who gets to make those decisions and whether they are making those decisions in public or behind closed doors. That's why I say that all we got here was the status quo polished up a bit because, ultimately, the big changes that we needed are not in this act and are not provided for us. Could the Overtime incident happen again, and would the outcome be any different with what we have in this legislation? The answer is no.

Where they had the opportunity to turn shalls into mays, they didn't do it. My colleague brought forward amendments that gave them a second chance to do that. They wouldn't do it. So it is weak, it is tentative, it is meek. It did not provide what we needed it to do.

Neither does it give police officers a fair shake, Mr. Speaker. I think all of us in here appreciate the work that police officers do. We have comments from some of my colleagues with their concerns over rising crime in their communities and how valued officers are. All of us mourned the deaths of the four RCMP officers that happened a few months ago. I don't think there's any question that everyone here values what police officers do.

From my point of view as a previous critic in this particular area, what I saw happening was that even when an officer was involved in something and they did get cleared, nobody ever believed them. They didn't get credit for that because they had been cleared by a process that the public didn't trust. So even if that officer should have walked away with his/her head up high and absolutely any blemish taken right off their record, they couldn't do that because there was always a sneaking suspicion, there was always a wonder about what really happened and who really was there and what really was said.

Because it was a behind-closed-doors, secretive, by-appointment-only kind of process and officers investigating themselves so there was always a question of whether the brotherhood was assisting or aiding or abetting each other, it did not help those officers to be able to have the cleared record that they deserved, and that was very frustrating for me. I have a number of police officers that are constituents, and that was my concern, that when they were cleared, they were really cleared, and there was no question. There would be no lingering doubt here. They would be absolved as was appropriate. On the other hand, if they weren't, if they had done something, then that would be clear too, and it would be out there and above board.

This legislation did not give us any of what we the public, we the people, needed to be reassured of those decisions. It's not independent. There's fiddling around, well, maybe they could do this, and they could bring in someone else, and they could send it to an outside source but none of the strong actions and leadership that I was really hoping to see, especially since we've spent so much darn time on this, Mr. Speaker.

I mean, that first Police Act review was in 2000, I think. Yeah, October 2000; there you go. Then they reported with that really awful draft in 2002. Then the final report was released in July of 2002. Then there was a second version of it in 2003.

I mean, there were all kinds of wild and wacky things that were being thought of in there. I think the committee was genuinely trying to envision a future and to really see what all kinds of possibilities were out there, so maybe that's what gave it that sort of air of the sublime. But in the end the final report that came through had gotten rid of some of the things like the aerial space drones to spy on the sheep in the pasture and that sort of thing.

One of the areas that continues to cause me some questions – and I'm not having those satisfied by the minister – is around the deputy constables and around the special constables. Who does what role, and how much do they do, and are they going to be armed and with what? How much training do they get for using that weaponry? All of those things have yet to be sorted out, Mr. Speaker.

As I say, this is 2005. We started down this road in 2000. I would have expected that over those five years some of those questions should have been answered. So I'm also noting that failure in my discussion over the anticipated effects of this bill.

So I will not support this bill, and I didn't at any stage that I was able to vote on it. It will be a long time before we get another shot at this. If I knew that it was going to come back next year and we could take this a step further or the many steps further that I was hoping to see, I'd maybe be a bit more willing to go: well, incrementally, okay. But my experience has been that once legislation like this goes by, it'll be five or 10 years before we see it back in here because it's sort of off the burner now, and nobody's too excited about it, and well, you know, just give it some time to settle in and shake down and we'll see what happens with it. It takes a long time before the rumblings from the population bring it back up onto the stovetop, if you want to put it that way, so that it gets another chance at an amendment. So we're stuck with this.

I think that in this day and age, especially when we look at issues around the databases that the police have access to and the information that they hold on us – you know, most officers are very conscientious individuals. They're working very hard to uphold the law that they're given. It's frustrating to them when people take advantage of situations that are presented to them, and it's frustrating to us as a public. I think many, many more people are becoming aware of how carefully we all have to tread around those issues of access to personal information and who has it and what they use it for.

Certainly, there were great concerns, again, around the Overtime, and there were some equivalent episodes in Calgary around how that information was used and, I would say, abused and inappropriately. When people look to see, "Okay, then, what happens when that's the case?" we're not seeing any really positive forward movement on that, and this act is not giving us anything to reassure us that that leadership is in place and that, in fact, we have major changes in the way this is all dealt with.

So I'm very disappointed in this act. I'm very disappointed in the five years that it's taken us to get to this. It is very weak, Mr. Speaker, so I will not be supporting this in third reading.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, it's to participate in the debate; correct? Anyone under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Then I'll recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The only way to combat the perception or charges of secrecy, cover-up, or partisanship is to be transparent and accountable. It is for this reason that an external civilian oversight committee must be established in order to ensure public confidence in Alberta's law enforcers and enforcement. It is unfortunate that the government did not incorporate our Liberal opposition amendments, which would have gone a long way to improving accountability. To quote a line from a well-known country song which summarizes Bill 36's inadequacy: "No-one knows what goes on behind closed doors."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Speaker: The question has been called. Any other participants?

Hon. Solicitor General, did you want to close the debate, or is everything fine?

Mr. Cenaiko: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 36 read a third time]

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Marz in the chair]

The Chair: I'll call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 42
Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 42 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 41
Appropriation Act, 2005

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to be able to join in the debate in Committee of the Whole for Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005. There were a couple of things I wanted to talk about at this stage. I do want to talk about some of the health provisions around smoking that would appear under Health and Wellness. I'd like to talk about some of the off-budget spending that is happening and what's being planned there. I also was very interested in the information that came to me from the Winspear fund, which I think is applicable to both the Ministry of Seniors and Community Supports and the Ministry of Human Resources and Employment.

Let me start with the off-budget spending. Mr. Chairman, I've joked in the House that off-budget spending is sort of akin to off-track betting, but I really am concerned about what we're seeing here. Last year the budget was passed in the middle of May, and by the end of June there were huge amounts of money that were being rolled out that had not been contemplated in the budget. We thought: "Just a minute here. What the heck happened in the last six weeks that all of sudden they have these additional sums of money to be announcing? Why wasn't it in the budget a mere five weeks ago?" No answer from the government.

This time I don't even think we got the budget – well, we haven't completed debating the budget. We're talking about Committee of the Whole budget debate on the appropriation bill today. But for weeks we've been hearing the government muse out loud about all the possibilities for what they call off-budget spending, and I'm presuming what's happening there is that they're anticipating record surpluses rolling in and how they are going to divvy up the extra surplus that they get above and beyond the surpluses that are actually planned for in the budget. There are a number of problems around this. I have continued to express my concerns around management and planning processes that this government has.

Now, to be fair, they do have some good ones, and we are regarded across Canada and even in the U.S. as being ahead of the game on doing things like instituting performance measurements and tying business plans to that and to targets. We should be rightly proud of that. I maintain that we had a lot of good ideas that we never followed through on, and that whole accountability section is one of them in that we got the performance measurements, and then we really never went back and made sure that they were the right performance measurements, that they do what we need them to do, that they're outcome based, that they're measuring the information that truly is useful for us to make management decisions about, whether we keep doing what we're doing or change it.

So when I look at a budget that anticipates from the beginning and builds in that it's going to have a surplus, I have to ask questions because you say, "Shouldn't you be budgeting for a zero-based budget where all the money that you reasonably expect to come in, you reasonably expect to spend or to put in a savings account of some kind if you want to be saving for something particularly special in the future, which is perfectly reasonable, a good idea in many cases?" But what we're getting here is a dependence on that surplus now and an inability to allow people to really deal with the amount of money that they have.

Here's what happens. The department is asked how much they need. The department says, "We need X amount of money." Then they come back, and the government says: "Well, you can't have X amount. We'll give you T amount, which is less than you wanted, and you'll have to make do with that and just figure out how to make do with it." What gets lost, usually, is the monitoring and enforcement of whatever that particular ministry is doing.

Then towards the end of the year they get that special phone call that says: gee, it looks like oil is at $100 a barrel now, and you're going to get some more money to spend. Well, at that point, a couple of months from the end of the year, there's not much that department can do. They needed to know that they could have had another full-time staff person on for 12 months, not the last two or three months. They can't bring that person on now. Have them do what? Put in a year's worth of work in three months? It's impossible. So they just didn't get that project happening as they should have.

But now they've got the money. What are they going to do with it? That kind of budgeting and monetary planning, all it does is encourage that – what did someone call it? – March madness, where everybody goes: "We've got this money; we've got to spend it now. Okay. Let's go and spend it on promotional material, on this, that, and the next thing, and buy computers." Everybody does it, trying to spend it on sort of hard versions of things, computers and equipment and things, so that they can save that money and not spend it in next year's budget and could supposedly transfer the money over to do what they really want to do. It's frankly just a dumb way to budget stuff.

I wouldn't believe that this government could take this one step further, but in fact they have. So now we have this off-budget spending. Before we've even passed the budget, ministers are out there discussing with people how much money might be forthcoming off-budget. Well, why are we bothering to do the budget at all, then, if that's what this is really about? How do you have any kind of control over everybody out there now promising that they're going to try and get this extra money directed into whatever their project is? It's a ridiculous way to do things, but a lot of people over there are doing it. I don't think it's acceptable; it wouldn't work if I were in government.

An Hon. Member: That's why you're not.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Well, next time, my friends.

So that's the remarks on the off-budget spending. I find it ridiculous. More to that, you know: how much more is this government knowing right now it's going to spend that is not in that budget, is not being reviewed by the people of the province, and there's been no opportunity for them to comment on it? And what kind of announcements are we going to get in a month or five weeks from now? Really, that's about transparency and accountability. Let's not call it anything else, Mr. Chairman.

I had wanted to note under the Health and Wellness budget around the initiatives to decrease smoking in public places – and we had quite a good private member's bill that came forward earlier in this spring sitting, which was then watered down by a government amendment, which basically neutered it. Very disappointing because it was actually quite a strong bill about no smoking in public places and in workplaces.

The reason we got into this was to protect workers where they work so that they were not exposed to a known health hazard, which was second-hand smoke. That all got watered down. Now we'll only protect a certain kind of workers that work in certain kinds of places, and we won't protect other kinds of workers. No one has been able to justify for me why it's okay to discriminate against certain kinds of workers and expose them to health hazards. Nobody over there has been able to give me a good argument as to why they're doing that, but they're doing it.

I did want to acknowledge that there are some people that are trying. There's a fellow that has a tavern in Cold Lake, and he is volunteering to go nonsmoking in his tavern, which is in fact one of the special designated groups that got protected by the government in order to continue to expose their workers to health hazards. Those were drinking establishments, casinos, and bingo halls. So this fellow is taking the courageous step of saying: no, I want to protect my workers, and I want all my workers to be protected. He is going to take his tavern nonsmoking. Now, I wish I could remember his last name. It is in Cold Lake. His first name is Mark, I believe. I'd seen I think a newspaper article from maybe up in the local newspaper. I think he deserves credit and recognition in this Assembly for taking the step that the government was too scared to take themselves. I don't know who they thought they were protecting. It certainly wasn't the workers. This fellow, Mark, is protecting people, and he deserves the credit for doing that.

I'd like to go on and look at some of the issues that have been raised by the Winspear Foundation special fund. They did a report, which was released on October 25, 2004, An Analysis of the Winspear Foundation Special Fund: 1997-2003, prepared by Ann Goldblatt. The project team was Ann Goldblatt and Leanne MacMillan. Of course, everyone in here is no doubt familiar with the Winspears of Edmonton and all that they have brought to our city and, in fact, our province. Mrs. Harriet Winspear still lives in my constituency, I'm pleased to say.

There is a family foundation, and one of the programs inside of that foundation is this emergency fund. It is really set up for small grants of money to people that need it for emergency purposes. They wanted to look at who it was that was accessing this money. There had been some demand for it. The fund is to provide one-time gifts "for people who [are] working hard to help themselves, but whose social circumstances [result in] a need for financial assistance." These are often very immediate needs that government programs used to respond to or could respond to but aren't responding to right now. Either they're not responding, they can't respond fast enough, or they can't meet the requirements of what the person needs exactly. So people can apply to this Winspear fund, and indeed some of the social service agencies will refer people directly there for assistance.

Now, the analysis that was done was very interesting. It's indicating that 58 per cent of the fund allocations went to households with children, 48 per cent to single-parent family households, and 44 per cent to homes that were female led. They note that single-parent families led by women appear to be particularly vulnerable. Often there are children at risk here or children whose needs can't be met and not through the fault of a parent not trying really hard.

Information, in fact, was provided to the previous Minister of Human Resources and Employment in 2001 and in 2002, but this report that was, again, released in the fall of 2004 notes that even though Alberta's economy is prospering, emergency needs continue to grow. And what do they look at? They look at the rise in rents, in utility costs, increasing populations, increasing single-parent families, and lack of affordable housing. One of the issues that the analysis raises in particular – and I know this will be of interest to the Minister of Health and Wellness and I hope to the Minister of Children's Services – is the very, very limited resources that are available to women and children that are leaving situations of violence and abuse. As we all know, they often have to leave on very short notice.

I remember that a woman in the States used to do a seminar. It had a pretty immediate effect on helping people to understand what it was like because she would have everyone in the seminar take off their shoes and leave them underneath the table and take out all their wallets and credit cards, even ID, and leave it all on the table. Then she would make everybody in the room get up and go to another room. So now they were in there without their shoes and without any identity, without any credit cards, without any money, without any car keys, without any house keys. They had nothing.

She would then say to them that, okay, this is what it's like for women and their children leaving abusive situations. You could be out on the street without your shoes, no house keys, no car keys, no ID, no nothing except for, if you're lucky, the clothes on your back, and you may be out there in your nightie. That's when you go, and you take off from there. So you don't have your toothbrush, you don't have the kids' toys, you don't have their favourite blankie, you don't have the book or the magazine that you were reading, and you don't have your clothes, as a woman. So a very tough situation to be in.

Many people know how frustrating it is when you lose your wallet or your wallet is stolen. Trying to get that ID back is darn difficult. Just imagine trying to do that as you are there with no shoes on, you know, literally, and trying to convince people that you now should be able to get ID to be able to carry on when you have no other way of proving who you are or where you've come from. You don't really want anybody to start going back to that old address and asking questions because, in fact, you're trying to hide from that person. You don't have your car to get around with anymore, so you're trying to do all this on a bus and go from office to office to office on the bus to get new ID.

This is one of the points I've raised in this House, others have raised in this House, and here is this special emergency fund, the Winspear fund, raising these issues as well. They're noting that they are seeing increasing numbers of requests for assistance from women who are fleeing domestic abuse situations.

We know how much this costs the system. We have finally figured out that abuse against women and children costs the system money. It does. It shows up in the department of health. It shows up in education. It shows up in human resources. It shows up in employment. It can show up in the corrections facilities. It can show up in the courts. It shows up in community services. It costs us a lot of money.

They are encouraging governments on all three levels to expand the relevant programs and to actively seek additional ways to work closely with the nonprofit sector to address these important needs. I just thought that was really interesting, that we would now end up with a philanthropic foundation coming back to the government and going: "Ah, excuse me. This is what we're seeing. We're noting something. We're out there on the front lines, and this is who is coming to us, decent hard-working people who shouldn't need to come to us for that kind of assistance." That programming really should be available through the government, and for reasons of narrow definitions and lack of funding and whatever other reasons the government has put in place, it's not available to them.

I've often talked about the social determinants of health, and I think one of the areas that most needs the government's immediate attention is housing and housing on a number of different levels. We still need more shelter spaces. We live in a country where people die when they fall asleep outside in the winter. It's cruel. We need to be able to provide some kind of emergency shelter to everyone that needs it. So that's the, sort of, mat program, m-a-t, which is emergency shelters.

But mostly what we need is the transitional housing. There's short-term transitional, which is, you know, the three weeks to the three months, and then we need longer term transitional, which is the three months to the one year. If we're really trying to move people from one situation and get them into a life where they won't ever come back here again, then we need to give them that longer term support. It's cheaper for us to do that than to keep recycling them back into the system.

Who would be in that kind of situation? Well, you've just heard me talk about women and children leaving abusive situations, but it's also about people recovering from addictions. We've had so much discussion of crystal meth in here this spring session, mostly around youth. That was good, and I'm glad we did talk about it. But we also have older people that are addicted to it. Now, if you had someone that genuinely wanted to get off of that and get out of that addiction and create a new life for themselves, well, they too have also gotten rid of all of their ID, figuratively, and they're going to have to start over. How do they bridge from that unhealthy lifestyle that they've been in for who knows how many years? If it wasn't a drug addiction, maybe it was alcohol or gambling. How do they bridge from that unhealthy, bad lifestyle into the positive, new lifestyle that they need to get out of the system and stay out of the system forever? A big part of that is transitional housing.

Beyond that, we need what's called social housing or affordable housing, social housing being when the government is subsidizing part of it, affordable housing being when they're not. Basically, it's lower cost housing that people with lower and middle incomes can afford.

I hope that I get another opportunity to speak to this. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Last year this government spent almost $2 billion of Alberta taxpayers' money beyond what it had originally budgeted, which set a dangerous lack of fiscal planning and responsibility precedent. Having had 34 years of practice, Albertans expect more from this government's ability to do its mathematical homework. The ad hoc, snip and dip, autopilot approach of this government is no longer acceptable to the majority of Alberta voters. Albertans are looking for visionary, sustainable policies that protect and advance their well-being, both physical and economic.

Last fall's election demonstrated that 53 per cent of Albertans who voted were looking elsewhere for leadership. That's the leadership we're prepared to provide.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's interesting, this particular budget of $26 billion and the government touting all the wonderful things that they're doing. It seems to me that what there's an attempt to do is to undo the mistakes of the past.

Clearly, in the balance of things, when we're talking about deficits, we're talking about three deficits. There was a preoccupation in the mid-90s with the economic deficit. Yes, you have to worry about that. At the same time, you have to worry about the human deficit. At the same time, you have to worry about the infrastructure deficit and to try to find a balance between these things.

Now the government comes back after the election and says: "Aren't we wonderful? We're putting all this extra money into things like education, into human resources, into health care." The point that one should make, Mr. Chairman, is that we had to. There was no option because they'd fallen behind so far before then.

Mr. Chairman, the idea that everybody in Alberta – sure, we have a boom economy. We're fortunate to have oil and gas revenues here. Contrary to the feeling that runs around here, it wasn't even the minister of infrastructure that put the oil and gas in the ground.

Dr. Oberg: Yes, it was. Yes, it was.

Mr. Martin: Oh, I'm sorry. I've lost my head. It was him.

Anyhow, Mr. Chairman, the point is that even in a wealthy province we have people falling below and our education falling below the poverty line.

I just want to speak very briefly, Mr. Chairman, about a meeting that was held on Sunday here in Edmonton. The Greater Edmonton Alliance met. There were over a thousand people at the Shaw centre, and they met because they're finding problems in the greater Edmonton area. The so-called Alberta advantage: they're finding more and more people that aren't sharing in that Alberta advantage.

It's an organization of churches, both the Catholic church and the Protestant church, a number of unions, a number of other groups that represent various people that perhaps are not sharing in the Alberta advantage. If you listen to them – and these are church people and others that see what's going on – they have a lot of compelling stories about more and more people falling beneath the cracks.

Now, one of them had to do with housing, Mr. Chairman. We had people talk about that. Others had to do with fair labour laws. Another was a very compelling story that people would hear about a child that was on crystal meth, that we've had this discussion in the media. What they've done is form this Greater Edmonton Alliance so they can speak with a stronger voice for those people that sometimes can't speak for themselves. Their goal is to lobby all governments – civic, provincial, and federal – and I'm sure we're going to hear a lot more of them. The point that I make is that even with the budget that we talked about that needed to flow into education and health care and others, there are a lot of people, a growing number at least in the greater Edmonton area, that are not sharing in that Alberta advantage. We still have a lot of work to do, so we can't sit around and clap ourselves on the back and say that everything's wonderful here – the greatest economy in the world, the greatest this in the world, the greatest that in the world – because it's not relevant to a number of people.

The other part of the deficit. We've had to put some money into the human deficit. Not enough. Even AISH, if we look at the increases there – and we're glad that they're coming – we find out that even there, though, people aren't as well off as they were in 1993 in this rich province, the most vulnerable people. The seniors, many of them are not back to where they were in '93 even though there is some improvement. I guess we should be thankful whenever there's improvement. The point I want to make very clearly before this government congratulates itself on the extra money that they put in is that there are still a lot of people falling through the cracks in this so-called rich province, Mr. Chairman.

The other problem that we have and they're touting now is an infrastructure budget that's finally coming forward. Well, again, we're glad that there is some money coming for Infrastructure and Transportation, Mr. Chairman, but in the meantime we're preoccupied with the economic deficit, and more and more people are falling through the cracks, and our educational system is in desperate need of money. We were told that it wasn't until just before the election and after the teachers' strike. Finally some money is coming back in. We've had crumbling buildings and bridges and roads throughout this province. We've stopped investing in our infrastructure deficit. Now we're playing catch-up a bit, but we've got a long way to go, especially in the school area, something that I know something about.

If you look at the schools in Edmonton – and I expect it's somewhat true in Calgary; I can't say – almost 50 per cent of our schools are 50 years of age or older now. There's a lot of maintenance that we haven't kept up with in those schools. So we have the case where structural money is going into maintenance, as the member was talking about. So we have a lot of problems to catch up with our deficit in terms of our infrastructure, Mr. Chairman.

For those people looking for the quick fix, the P3s, everywhere that it's been tried, the government may try to shift and say that this P3 is just wonderful, works so well. It's not a quick fix. It doesn't matter whether you owe them money and you do it in Henday for 30 years where you're going to pay $32 million to these private developers. That still is a debt; you still have to pay for it. To think that that's a quick fix, that that's going to solve our infrastructure problems is ludicrous. That's the point that I'm trying to make.

Now, this budget is not the worst one I've seen come through this Assembly because they have reinvested at least to some degree in infrastructure, to some degree in education and health care and the things that people need. But we're playing catch-up, Mr. Chairman. That's a problem. So is this hit-and-miss idea of budgeting. You know, before an election or just after we'll put money in, and then all of a sudden we have a fiscal crisis, and away we go, and then we have to cut back. This yin-yang sort of budgeting doesn't work. It has to be sustainable, and it has to be over a period of years.

The only other thing I'd like to comment on, Mr. Chairman, is that looking into the future, yes, we are fortunate with our oil and gas revenues and the high price of oil and gas as a world commodity. We don't know what the future holds. One of the things that I believe Premier Lougheed did was have a vision that when that happened, we'd have a heritage trust fund that could be used – I think the term was “for a rainy day.”

Well, Mr. Chairman, it's just been sitting there. It's just been sitting there while all this wealth is coming in. It seems to me that we have to reinvent the dream of Premier Lougheed and start to put some money back in that trust fund for the future. We don't know how long this ride is going to go. I think that many people opposite think that this will go on forever. We should learn from the past that it's not going to go on forever.

Mr. Chairman, it's a balance, as I say. I've seen worse budgets come through this Legislature. This is catch up, but if the government, before they tire themselves patting themselves on the back, recognize that they created these problems – the fact is that there was not enough money for education in the past, there was not enough money in health care, and certainly our infrastructure has been allowed to fall apart in the last number of years. This to me is unacceptable in a wealthy society.

So we have to find that balance again. We don't have the economic deficit now, but we have to find that balance between what we should put in the trust fund, what should go into our people services, and how we upgrade our infrastructure. This year's budget is interesting. It'll be interesting to see where this government goes in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Hon. members, before I recognize the next speaker, the background noise is getting a little higher, and I would ask that we keep it down to a minimum, please.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to speak about a number of decisions made during the session. First of all, I would like to talk about Bill 29, the AISH amendment. Since 1993 AISH recipients have lost 23 per cent of their income to inflation. This amendment means a 15 per cent increase, and recipients are going to have to wait till next year to get that whole amount. This still falls far short of inflation.

Our election position was to raise AISH to $1,050 immediately. This would make up for the losses due to inflation over the past 12 years, and then AISH should be indexed to the cost of living using a market-basket measure. That would ensure that the severally handicapped would be able to meet their needs on this program. The AISH amendment is a positive step but a small step. There should be annual reviews and adjustments as needed to help these individuals live a quality life.

Secondly, I have questions related to Children's Services. First, looking at child care, why are we delaying signing an agreement that would bring $70 million to Alberta? What are the choices this government keeps saying we must have? How does the federal program oppose those choices? We need money to support child care workers through higher wages, benefits, and help with training so that we can attract and keep workers. Seventy million dollars will help, and our children deserve this.

Looking at youth shelters, we need predictable, sustainable funding so that staff can put energy into offering programs and services. We have to get beyond the tyranny of one-year funding decisions.

Finally, we need to take a serious look at our Children's Services structure and the workloads of our front-line workers and the lack of the support that they need.

I'm pleased to see the additional funding for police in Alberta, but urban areas need more attention. Community policing is essential as a tool to prevent problems. We need to put money in planning and to response and prevention, not just reaction.

I would like to see a commitment to arts by this government. The provincial government contribution is shamefully low. The fine arts do two important things, both of which are hard to measure. They feed the soul, which we desperately need in an increasingly secular world, and they make us more creative. Even with all our advances in technology, we still and will always need creative minds.

Long-term care deserves a review, as indicated by the Auditor General. We need standards that are provincial and are regulated to remove the fears of so many in this province and give them some peace of mind in terms of the care of their loved ones.

I would like to take the opportunity now to add some concerns regarding the Education budget. I spoke earlier about the need to provide adequate funding for education infrastructure. I also talked about the need to change the methods used to allocate funds to senior high schools. My colleagues have talked about the unfunded liability of the Alberta teachers' retirement fund as a growing, intergenerational, unproductive debt. This is another issue that needs to be addressed seriously because it is the right thing to do.

Mr. R. Miller: It's going to be $45 billion by the year 2025.

Mrs. Mather: Forty-five billion? Well, it's outrageous, and it's just unacceptable.

I'd like to look at some other areas, and the first is special needs. To ensure adequate programming for special-needs students, we need more funds. Amounts now allocated do not cover the cost of a full-time aide that some need. They do meet the school's cost to provide the programming ratios necessary to ensure that those with learning deficits can be brought up to speed, and they do not allow for the collaboration time and preparation time necessary to ensure teachers' ability to provide the highest level of assessment practices or to prepare material that will challenge students on higher order thinking skills. The special needs area includes the most disadvantaged, and it is not adequately funded.

Head Start early childhood programs should be strongly encouraged for families who need support to ensure that the next generation has an equal starting place when they hit kindergarten. We have seen six year olds in grade 1 who are already two years behind their peers before they even get out of the blocks. This can be prevented through participation in quality programs and result in ultimately saving dollars that are required now for remediation.

Another area that I'd like to mention is counsellors. We have lost trained counsellors along with librarians and speech therapists because the jobs were cut. University students who might have gone into these fields chose other careers in the hope that they'd have a job. Now we're saying that we need to find more counsellors, we need to find social workers, and we need to find speech therapists.

There needs to be a formula for student-counsellor ratio in place. With the limited resources of child welfare, or Children's Services, there are a lot of families and students that are falling through the cracks and who are not able to meet the demands in the school properly. I think something really tragic will have to happen before we look at this, which will be sad because it will mean that somebody is going to be hurt. The child welfare restructuring of programs is now making things harder for families to access health, and schools do not have the resources to help.

Thirdly, I'd like to just mention the role of the principal. Principals are teachers first. The relationship between teacher and principal is built upon trust, integrity, and moral purpose. The goals and outcomes are the same for teachers and principals: to improve student achievement. If you wish for collaboration, continued growth of professional learning communities, and positive interaction between teachers and unions and principals, then leave principals in the same bargaining unit.

In conclusion, I'd like to say that we need a plan for our surplus revenues. A plan with vision, a vision that embraces every Albertan and recognizes all the potentials that each one has.

Thank you.

Ms Blakeman: I'm glad to get this second opportunity to speak. I just wanted to finish off some of the points that were raised by this Winspear Foundation special fund report and analysis. Specifically, they were pointing out that social assistance and AISH rates and even minimum wage are not and have not kept pace with cost increases, and that really affects people's ability to pay their rent, their utilities, transportation, medication, food, child care, school supplies and fees, and adult learning, training, and fees.

So we have seen an increase in the AISH rates. We did not see an accompanying increase in the Alberta Works rates. At some point in time we're eventually going to see the promised increase in the minimum wage, but I'm not sure when that is. So even though we recognize and the government seems to have recognized that this increase is needed, there's now very slow implementation of it. Even the AISH increase is implemented over time, and certainly the inclination has been that the minimum wage will be incremental as well.

A second point that this group is making is around rent and damage deposits, and we've heard that one before in connection with women fleeing abusive situations. It's just such a huge amount of money that you need to have up front because most places ask for the first month's rent plus an equivalent amount often for the damage deposit. So, you know, a $600 rent, which isn't going to get you much, plus $600 damage deposit: you're looking at $1,200 up front. That's a lot of money to produce out of nowhere if you don't have any money or you're on social assistance in some way. There was special dispensation through social assistance at one point in recognition of women fleeing abusive situations, but you had to know about it and go through it and ask for it. Frankly, at this point I'm not sure if the program still exists.

What's being noted in this report is that when people can't pay their rent, of course, they get evicted, and often because they can't get that amount of money up front, they are homeless. That's particularly difficult if there are children with them. So they're suggesting that "people need access to a payment structure that could be spread over time," potentially some kind of a "rent bank," they term it, from which they could borrow money at a minimal interest and then repay it over a period of time. At least it would help them get into another accommodation.

I've already talked about access to affordable housing. We seem to have gone through the worst of what happened when both the electricity and the gas utilities increased at such a phenomenal rate and the huge effect that that had on people who are vulnerable and struggling and working low income. That problem is still out there although it's not being experienced anew now. They just have to deal with these quite large utility payments that weren't there before.

We find that particularly vulnerable are seniors and children, mostly because they're less able to cope with cold living accommodations. It's just a pretty miserable existence, and adults seem to be able to cope a bit better with it. But for kids and seniors it makes their lives quite miserable if they're in a place that isn't heated very well or they can't afford to keep the temperature up.

I'll make the argument again, as they do make it in this study, that telephones are not a frill. Especially for those families that have children, telephones are necessary for emergency services. They are absolutely tied to employment. So there you've got health and employment; it's necessary for those two things. Also for any seniors that are on those medic alerts, those work through the telephone line. You have to have a telephone to get it. Again that's related to health, but it's certainly not a frill for any of those. So we need to stop thinking of telephones as being an extra and start to look in all of the social programs at incorporating that cost and understanding that it's a necessity.

This analysis talks about bridge funding between programs. They talk about training fees for people, medical expenses and coverage, caring for children with disabilities and chronic illnesses. They single out the importance of child care as a need for single parents faced with a medical situation; for example, if we have a mom giving birth and she already has other kids, she needs child care for those other children. Or if she's receiving some kind of medical treatment, chemotherapy or dialysis or anything else in which you regularly need to be going into the hospital or going into a clinic for some kind of treatment, you've got to have your kids looked after. If you don't, then we call you an unfit mother and we take your children away and make them wards of the state.

Most people really want to keep their families together, and we supposedly want them to keep their families together, but we create situations that make it very difficult for them. This is an area where the government is not filling the gap here.

Another area which I've noticed for a long time is sponsorship breakdown, and those are absolutely heartbreaking. We need to strike a more fair balance because I don't think I'd find many people passing by on the street that would happily say: "Absolutely. Move here and bring all your relatives, and we'll put all of them on social assistance and pay for all of them." That's not what we expect. But where you do have a sponsorship breakdown – and it's not that frequent. I mean, for many people sponsoring their family is a point of great honour and even prestige. They take those commitments seriously, and they fulfill them. But sponsorships do breakdown, and when they do, we've got very hard and fast rules here.

I've had elderly couples whose children have walked away from sponsorships of them, and they could not get any assistance. They were specifically prohibited from getting any assistance. It was a very tough time because all I could do was send them back to friends and try and embarrass the adult children to try and come through with some kind of support for them. It was sickening that we would have people in our country that were in that kind of shape, and they didn't even have the wherewithal and resources to go back. They were just stuck here with no means of support and no access to programs. So we have a gap there as well.

The school fee situation. I often hear members of the government go: oh, well, if they just go and explain it to the principal, you know, that'll all be dealt with. That may not be possible. They might be from a community that doesn't easily interact with authority figures, which they would see a principal of a school as being, or there is a prohibition against asking for assistance. There are lots of reasons why people would be very reluctant to go and admit that. Aside from that, why are we charging school fees to people anyway, that we would be expecting people in strained financial situations to be coming up with that kind of money? And means testing is really unacceptable, I think.

I found this a very interesting report. I highly recommend it. A number of ministries need to be taking a look here. This is a respected foundation with very thoughtful people giving advice to it. They, in turn, have offered very thoughtful advice to the government. I was very interested to see that their advice is reflecting the advice that's coming out of the Social Planning Council. My experiences are reflecting what they're talking about. It's reflected in the social determinates of health. You're hearing it over and over and over again, yet I'm finding the government very resistant to moving on any of this.

I still feel it's worthwhile bringing it up and trying again. There are new ministers in different departments. Maybe they will hear me. Working on the Member for Edmonton-Centre's theory of 500 times and I get something out of the government, I'm willing to raise it again in the hopes of influencing them that way.

This is a very wealthy province, and we have money to invest. I think that if we want to look at the evidence – for example, ensuring that children are successful before they get into school – a dollar invested in a program that gets a kid into a successful position ready to start school on an even par with any of their colleagues saves us $7 down the line.

I've never had enough money ahead to be able to invest in anything, but I'm sure others in this Assembly do. Boy, if you were told there's an investment opportunity where you gave your broker a thousand dollars and they would come back to you with $7,000, you'd all be in there like flint. Why are we not doing that same thing when that investment is around children? A dollar invested in a child, getting them up to speed and equivalent to their colleagues by age six, pays off with $7 for us further down the line, either $7 worth of productivity in tax paying or it costs us $7 in corrections and health and education and social assistance programs and all of those other things.

I think sometimes the government's ideology trips them up as far as offering efficient programs and wise investments. Sometimes I feel that it's my job to get up and give you a bit of a shake and say: look at the evidence, and make the decisions based on that.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Before I launch into a number of comments on Bill 41, I would just like to acknowledge the loss and the trauma suffered by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul and his family and all the other families in the condominium fire the other day. A number of members of this Legislature were treated to a media day at the Edmonton firefighters' Poundmaker training centre on Friday. It certainly gave myself and those of us that were present a tremendous appreciation for the work done by not only the firefighters in Edmonton but across North America and around the world, I would imagine. I just wanted to acknowledge the fact that there has been a loss suffered by a member of this Assembly, and we're thinking of that member and hope that all is going well.

Mr. Chairman, having the opportunity to speak to Bill 41 in committee gives me a chance to raise a couple of ideas that I wasn't able to raise last night, when we spoke to this bill in second reading. They're not major issues. They're little things that wouldn't necessarily have involved an awful lot of expenditure on behalf of the various departments yet at the same time might well have had a very positive impact on the citizens of this province. They're coming to me through motions other than government motions. We're all cognizant of the fact that the spring sitting is very quickly winding down, and these motions are far down the list, and they're not likely to be debated. In fact, almost for sure they're not going to be debated. So it gave me pause to reflect on those motions and how they might have impacted all citizens of this province.

The first one that I'm going to address, Mr. Chairman, would have come under the education budget. Motion 544, which would have been brought forward by the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, would have urged the government to "consider strategies to increase the number of students who successfully complete the requirements for high school graduation." Certainly, throughout this spring sitting of the Legislature and throughout the budget debates there was an awful lot of discussion by the opposition as to the fact that in Alberta we have one of the lowest, or perhaps even the lowest, three-year graduation rate in the country. Given the tremendous wealth in this province and the fact that we trumpet the Alberta advantage, it's disturbing, indeed, to see that so many students are choosing for one reason or another not to finish their high school education.

I know that the hon. Education minister has added some funding to that department, and we're appreciative of that. I'm not aware of any particular strategy or any particular program that's designed to increase that three-year graduation rate. I really think that we're missing the boat if we don't particularly zero in on that issue and really concentrate an awful lot of effort and energy into improving the three-year graduation rate. In English as a Second Language, for example, 75 per cent drop out of high school, so only a 25 per cent completion rate. Again, those numbers are appalling, given the wealth in this province.

Another one that I'd like to highlight, Mr. Chairman, would have been Motion 560, which would have been brought forward by the Member for Red Deer-North. This one would have asked the government to "consider the advisability of implementing a $6,000 annual tax exemption per child in a family as a means of lowering the tax burden for parents." Again, I've indicated in previous debate that, unfortunately, the budget really does not do an awful lot in the way of providing meaningful tax relief for Albertans, especially lower income Albertans. Obviously, just based on looking at that motion, I really don't know what the financial impact on the government would have been, but I suspect it wouldn't have been a major hit, as it were, and at the same time certainly would have provided some very much-needed relief for families with children and particularly, again, low-income families.

Now, here's one that I'm really passionate about. I see that the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky would have brought this one forward. It's Motion 570, which would have asked the government – and I believe this would have been under Community Development – "to review the feasibility and practicality of reinstating roadside provincial campsites in an effort to promote Alberta's natural landscapes as well as attract Canadian and international motoring travellers."

Well, Mr. Chairman, in my youth, growing up in a family that very much appreciated and enjoyed the outdoors and particularly Alberta's outdoors, I was fortunate enough to have parents who made it their mission to have the family out of Edmonton, out of the city and into the countryside, every weekend from the Easter weekend all the way through to the Thanksgiving weekend. We had one of the very first motorhomes on the road in Alberta. In fact, we still have pictures of it. It looked more like an apple crate. It was pretty square with only a few windows, but it had all of the amenities. My parents made a point of making sure that we travelled across the province every single weekend, as I said, between somewhere around the end of March right through to the middle of October.

Now, several years ago, of course, those roadside campgrounds were discontinued. Ostensibly it was, I think, both a budgetary consideration – there was, obviously, some nominal cost in terms of having roadside campgrounds – but also, Mr. Chairman, there was discussion of the fact that we wanted to promote the private campground industry and it was felt that the public roadside campgrounds were taking away from that. Unfortunately, it's been my observation over the years as someone who has tried to carry on the traditions that my family had developed – and I try to get my family out of the city and around the province to enjoy this wealth of nature that we have – that even the provincial parks are pretty much priced out of the range of most families. You're talking quite often in the area of $25 to $30 a night for a basic campground.

This has really made it almost unaffordable for many families again, especially the lower income families who at one time would have looked at camping opportunities and particularly the roadside campgrounds as a very reasonable and feasible alternative to an expensive holiday. The fact that that option is no longer there, Mr. Chairman, I would suggest is a shame because it really is taking away from the opportunity for parents and children to take full advantage of the opportunities that we have in this province in terms of tourism, getting around and seeing the various sights and enjoying nature at its best.

Certainly, there's been a lot of talk this afternoon about drugs and about police and about youth, and crystal meth has come up again in the debates this afternoon.

Ms Blakeman: Alcohol, gambling.

Mr. R. Miller: Alcohol and gambling.

Mr. Chairman, I often credit the fact that myself and my siblings turned out reasonably well to the fact that we had parents that made an effort to not only get us out of the city but to share with us the bounty of this province and expand our opportunities to recreate in this province. I think anything we can do to encourage other families to do the same and make it more likely that they will do the same is something that we should be looking at. So I would applaud the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky for that motion. Unfortunately, we won't have the chance to debate it in this spring sitting, but hopefully it will come back at another point.

Mr. Chairman, going back to the Finance department, with Motion 584, which happens to have been a motion that is under the name of the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, we would have asked the Legislature to consider improving "the quality of life for Albertans earning less than $29,000 annually by reducing personal income tax rates from 10 per cent to 9 per cent." Again I think this would just simply have been a recognition of the fact that the flat tax is a regressive tax. It punishes low-income earners and low-income families unnecessarily, unduly, and unfairly, and I think it very much would have gone a long way toward improving the quality of life for some of those lower income earners if we had had a chance to debate that.

Another one that I'm quite passionate about and that I think would have been a very interesting debate because there are good arguments on both sides – I'm not sure if it would have been Finance or Community Development. Motion 588, a motion that was proposed by the Member for Edmonton-Manning, would have seen us debate the merits of providing "a tax credit to parents or guardians for out-of-pocket costs related to their children's organized, extra-curricular, physical, or cultural activities."

Mr. Chairman, again there's been a fair amount of discussion in the spring sitting about youth and the dangers that society presents to them and particularly crystal meth but certainly drugs in general and gambling and smoking. Here is what I would have thought would have been a great way to encourage more children to be kept busy. I know that my colleague from Edmonton-Ellerslie this afternoon in his member's statement referred to youth crime and the fact that we have to keep our children busy. Here would have been one way that we could have encouraged families to have their children more involved in extracurricular activities.

I remember that several years ago now I had a superintendent from the Edmonton Police Service speak to my Rotary club about youth crime in south Edmonton. He had two things to say, and they're both worth repeating. The first was that he said he could step inside any home in Edmonton that has children and within only a matter of seconds tell you whether or not those kids are going to be in trouble. His methodology was that if there were books present, that was a very good sign, and it was most likely that those kids would not be led astray. Just the simple fact that a family that reads leads to a healthy family situation.

His second point was: don't let the kids hang at the mall. Keep them busy, whether it be swimming or baseball or hockey or piano lessons or art lessons or a drama class or a debate club. You name it, Mr. Chairman. The idea was to do everything possible to keep the children busy and not allow them to hang at the mall, not give them time to fall into the wrong crowd. It certainly requires a little more effort and participation on behalf of the parents to do that, and it's not always possible for parents and certainly not always financially possible for parents to have their children involved in these extracurricular activities.

I think that would have been an interesting debate. Some people have suggested that by doing so you're really only giving an advantage to those parents that can already afford to put their children in extracurricular activities. So there is some argument on the other side of that debate, but again I think anything we can do to provide our children with opportunities to help them grow into well-rounded adults and thereby provide the community with contributing members and keep crime rates down and all of those things, Mr. Chairman, would have been a good thing, and I'm sorry to see that we're not going to have the opportunity to debate that particular motion.

I guess the last thing I would like to mention is the health care premium tax. I didn't mention it in my comments last night, and it would be wrong for me not to since it was obviously a big part of the Liberal opposition's campaign during the last election in the fall of 2004. This is something that would not really have cost an awful lot of money. In fact, it really wouldn't have cost any money at all because we all know, Mr. Chairman, that we have to pay for health care one way or the other, and the majority of that money right now is coming out of general revenue, out of our taxes anyway.

But the health care premium tax as it's now levied is definitely a burden on families, some $1,000, $1,200 – I can't remember what the number is – $68 times 12, so it's well over $1,000 per family per year. In some cases small business picks up that cost on behalf of the family. So it's not only a cost of some note to families but to small businesses as well. I think we could have given serious consideration to removing that tax and allowing the money to come entirely out of our taxes the way that many other provinces do. It would've ultimately, I think, been fairer, as I suggested, to both lower income families, lower income individual wage earners, and also small businesses.

So those would be my comments for this afternoon, Mr. Chairman, on Bill 41, and I look forward to further debate. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to get up and make some comments on this particular section of the debate. First of all, I'd like to comment on the hospital care in St. Albert, especially for people dying under duress. I've had occasion in the last two weeks to be in the hospital in St. Albert quite a bit. I must compliment the nursing staff and doctors at our hospital in St. Albert and clearly say to the House, being a member of that constituency, how proud I am to have that hospital and how proud I am to know the dedicated staff of nurses, support staff, and doctors in that particular hospital.

I stand up also, Mr. Chair, with a concern. This morning I was called to have breakfast with a reporter. One of the ladies that I met during the campaign in St. Albert, her daughter was found in a drug house over the weekend. She has taken a downhill slide in her problem with drugs.

I leave this session somewhat – afraid would be the word because I'm not sure what we are going to do about this very serious crystal meth problem we have in my constituency. I'm concerned in the sense of the adequacy of AADAC to deliver a program. In my particular constituency we have very good prevention programs under the FCSS banner and also intervention programs. But I am concerned that we don't have an action plan for the treatment of our kids or people that come across this deadly drug, and that concerns me greatly. By an action plan I mean adequate treatment, lodging, and support for these kinds of situations.

Also, I just realized today that the advocate's report came out. I didn't get a chance to look at it, but I would hope that the children's advocate is looking at this particular problem for delivery of service to children on drugs. I think this is very, very important.

I hope also that there is some movement to enhance, again, the DARE program at the elementary grade 6 level. I hope that people like Constable Moulds in St. Albert are recognized for their good work, and I hope the program is looked at in terms of looking at a new innovation in the curriculum to look at this particular plague that we have right now.

The other thing I'd like to talk about just before I sit down is our seniors in St. Albert. We have a tax base there that's very high and very difficult on seniors, and seniors are having difficulty with the whole business of utility rates. Lack of affordable housing for them is a major concern.

When I was out visiting at a constituency in the rural parts of Alberta last night, it was brought to me about the need for seniors' accommodation, where people in these accommodations and significant others that support them have access to an ombudsman type of function, where they can bring their concerns and have them addressed.

Ms Blakeman: Like the Liberals proposed.

Mr. Flaherty: Well, exactly. I think this is a big problem. I think this is very, very important, that we have that access to an ombudsman type of function.

I couldn't believe what I heard last night. In the home that we were talking about, one of the doors had fallen on one of the clients in the home and damaged the person, so as a result of that all the doors in this particular new institution were removed. Now people are having to utilize facilities, to go to the washroom, and their dignity is not respected. I am having a difficult time believing this, but I was told this is going on. So I would hope that there is some measure to accommodate an ongoing, 24-hour type of inspection.

Also, I believe that we've talked about whistle-blower legislation in the House, and I think it would behoove us to look at this because I think there are staff that have concerns about this kind of thing, would like to come forth and be able to talk about it. I think we have to make some accommodation for that.

Mr. Chairman, I'll sit down with that and close off. Thank you very much.

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report Bill 42, the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005, and Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 42 and Bill 41.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in this report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour and in light of the state of the Order Paper I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 5:03 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, May 18, 2005 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 05/05/18
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mrs. McClellan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a special group of Alberta's postsecondary students touring the Legislature today. The members of the group are students from NAIT, Mount Royal College, and Grant MacEwan College. They are currently getting some short-term work experience in the Alberta public service in order to complete the practicum portion of their studies. I would ask them to stand as I introduce them: Sherri Bishop, Robin Boschman, Leung Lee, Jody Lucius, Marlene Moreira, Darcy Whiteside, Lisa Nisbet, Trevor Gemmell, and Jenna Stuckey. I would ask all of the members of the Assembly to give these students a very warm welcome to our Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a true artist, Mr. Jeremy Chugg. Mr. Chugg along with his co-writers at Brainstorm, a Calgary-based company, have just won a prestigious award for creating an awareness video for Alberta SuperNet. The Supernet video was recognized by the Alberta Motion Picture Industries Association with a 2005 Alberta film and television award for best scriptwriter. The video was also nominated for best motivational video and for best host. Mr. Chugg co-wrote the script with Barry Chugg and Kerrie Penney. Congratulations, Jeremy, for winning the recognition of your industry peers and of this House. I would ask you now to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if my guests have made it here yet, but if they have – and they have indeed. I'd very much like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Roger Pullishy and Mrs. Sonia Pullishy, very good friends of mine for many years. Along with them are Mrs. Rika Bok, Mrs. Murkje Davidson, Mrs. Heather Gordon, Jordan Labossiere, age nine, Joshua Labossiere, age six, as well as their special guest from Meppel, Holland, Mrs. Ellen Ijben. I would ask them to please rise and receive the very, very warm welcome of this House. Thank you so much for joining us today.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't see my guests in the gallery that's visible to me, so I'm assuming that they're in the members' gallery: two constituents, Tom and Carrie Courtney, from Linden, Alberta. They are accompanied today by their grandson Richard Westlund, who is the executive assistant of the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, and he's also accompanied by his wife, Jamie, and their latest addition to the family, Aaron Westlund. So if they're available, would they stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of very experienced teenagers. They are, in fact, a seniors group from the Devon Alliance Church. Although the Alliance Church is located in my constituency, a lot of these members are also representatives of the members for Drayton Valley-Calmar as well as Stony Plain. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you a good friend and colleague of mine from the department of political science at the University of Calgary, Dr. Keith Archer. Dr. Archer is one of Canada's leading experts on political parties and elections and has written on Alberta political parties as well as national political parties. He's accompanied by his son Justin, who once had the misfortune to take a course from me. I'd like them both to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two new additions to the caucus staff. They've been with us a couple of weeks to a couple of months.

First, I'd like to introduce Carmen Remenda. She has joined our team as an administrative assistant. It's her voice you hear when you first call in to the Liberal caucus office. She moved to Alberta – making the right choice, of course – in 1997 from Saskatchewan and now lives in Sherwood Park. Before joining our team, Carmen worked closely assisting academics and students in an administrative capacity at the University of Regina and more recently at the University of Alberta. We are most honoured to have her join the Liberal caucus. I would ask her to rise.

I would also ask Thomas Lore to rise. Thomas is a lifelong Edmontonian who has an English degree from the University of Alberta and is about to receive his public relations diploma from Grant MacEwan College. He has joined the Liberal caucus as a communications intern and is with us until the end of June.

Would you please both rise and accept the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a single introduction today. It's my privilege to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly two women who have taken a strong position on the need for healing and reconciliation in Canada between families and communities. These two women, Maggie Hodgson and Yi Yi Datar, have pioneered in Canada the National Day of Healing and Reconciliation, in Edmonton as the first location – this is the second annual – on May 26 at Winston Churchill Square between 11:30 and 1:00 p.m. This will happen each year in Edmonton and, hopefully, spread across the country. They're here to highlight the need to reach across the divide of race, colour, religion, and ethnicity. I would ask them both to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very happy to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature two classes from NorQuest College west, which is in my constituency of Edmonton-Glenora. These two classes are studying English as a Second Language. Their teachers are Thu Vu and Debbie Weimann. Just to give you an idea of the variety of people in this class, they're from countries like China, Afghanistan, Uzbekistan, Kurdistan, Russia, Ukraine, Poland, Korea, Taiwan, Vietnam, and Colombia. We welcome them to Canada and to this great province of Alberta. I'd invite them to stand and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted today to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly five guests seated in the public gallery. They are Joan and Doug Miller, Samantha Stasiuk, Katie Hayes, and Lenora Murphy, all of whom reside in my constituency of Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Lenora Murphy and Katie Hayes will be representing Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood at the Royal dinner and reception. Ms Murphy has retired from her job as secretary at Glenrose hospital and now enjoys spending time with her two grandchildren. Katie Hayes is the graduating class president at Eastglen high school.

I'm honoured that Doug Miller and Samantha Stasiuk will be my guests for the Royal Address to the Chamber. Doug, who is accompanied by his wife, Joan, is retired from the navy. On May 26 the Millers will be celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary. They're active members of the Highlands United Church and are extremely proud of their six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Samantha Stasiuk also attends Eastglen high school, where she is the valedictorian for her graduating class.

I would ask that they now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've got two introductions today. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and to all members of this Assembly Karen Stone and Faye L'Hirondelle. Karen and Faye have been here since this morning to meet with the press to express their serious concerns about private vocational colleges. Faye currently works for Planet Organic, and Karen is employed by Stencil Systems, a decorative concrete company. Karen is also a proud mother of three children and is visiting the Legislature for the first time. These guests are seated in the public gallery. I will now ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, my second introduction. I'm very pleased to have this opportunity to introduce to you and through you to the House Samantha Leung, an honours student at Concordia high school.

Samantha will be applying for the page program in this Assembly next year. Samantha is seated in the public gallery, right in the front row. I'll ask her to please rise to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very delighted today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two young people seated in the public gallery. They are Teresa Voss and Stephen Taylor. They're here today to express their concerns about private vocational colleges. Stephen is studying to complete his general education diploma, and Teresa will begin her mechanics apprenticeship in the next two weeks. Both Stephen and Teresa are visiting for the very first time. I would ask that they now rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. My first is with reference to Special Olympics Edmonton. Special Olympics Edmonton is a local nonprofit organization that provides sport and recreation opportunities to Albertans with intellectual disabilities. Currently there are more than 300 volunteers supporting 500 local athletes participating in a variety of sports such as bowling, track and field, floor hockey, figure skating, and skiing, to mention a few. On April 23 this organization with the support of the good folks at Capital City Savings held its annual Bowl for Special Olympics fundraiser at the Bonnie Doon Bowling Lanes. More than 400 bowlers threw strikes, including our very own Education minister. The event was successful, raising over $85,000.

Mr. Speaker, these events don't just happen. They require organizers. We have with us today four very hard-working, dedicated volunteers and organizers with this very special project. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the four individuals who were instrumental in the success of this year's Capital City Savings Bowl for Special Olympics.

Mr. David Armstrong, president of River City Financial Services, has been involved with Special Olympics Edmonton for many years, has served virtually in every capacity they have. This year he served as a member of the organizing committee, and his company was a silver sponsor for the event.

Ms Jacqueline Broverman, community investment manager for Capital City Savings, also served as a member of the organizing committee and was instrumental in ensuring that the event had everything it needed to succeed, including promotional material, a call centre, and 24 bowling teams from Capital City Savings outlets.

Ms Louise Suru, general manager for Special Olympics Edmonton, has been with the organization for 25 years now, mostly serving in a volunteer capacity, and she's truly the heart and soul of this wonderful organization.

Last but not least, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Lenny Andrichuk, who was both the chairman and the driving force behind this year's highly successful event. He's a dedicated and committed individual who, in addition to his role as chair, finds time to volunteer in a number of other capacities, including as a full-time track and field coach with Special Olympics.

I'd ask these four to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome and special thanks of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two very important people in my life this summer from my Edmonton-Whitemud constituency office: Cindy Ho, who runs the constituency office year-round and has been doing so since 1997, and Bryan Lo, who is working in the office this summer as a STEP student. Bryan has just completed his second year at The King's University College. Together Cindy and Bryan look after the many wonderful constituents of Edmonton-Whitemud. They're here today in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Securities Commission

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Finance minister has now been sent a host of information from a wide range of credible sources raising concerns about enforcement irregularities at the Alberta Securities Commission. Two companies have filed legal action that ASC enforcement practices were biased, and more are almost certain to come. My questions are to the Finance minister. Given all the evidence, can the minister explain her position that there is no evidence of enforcement problems at the ASC?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, we've discussed this issue a number of times over the last weeks in this Legislature, but I will recount again for the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition that, indeed, when this was raised with me initially, I took immediate action. I wrote to the commission on January 12 and told them that I'd had some concerns raised and asked them to investigate.

They promptly set that in motion and, in fact, had an outside person by the name of Perry Mack do a thorough investigation, which included two reports: one, a report from the people who had complaints, and the second report, the response from the people who had some allegations made. Mr. Speaker, that is the basis on which I have said in this Legislature that the finding of that report was that the enforcement and regulatory portion of ASC was being handled consistently, even-handedly, and fairly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that government MLAs can nominate candidates to be ASC commissioners and at the same time can be officers in companies trading under the ASC, will the minister admit that this puts government MLAs in a conflict of interest?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, let me make one thing very clear. Nominations can be received, yes, from MLAs of this Legislature.

Mr. MacDonald: What about me?

Mrs. McClellan: Absolutely, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. If you have a person that you wish to nominate, at an appropriate time we would most welcome that nomination.

Secondly, we receive nominations, Mr. Speaker, from the commission themselves. Thirdly, we receive nominations from the financial community and interested parties. If there is any concern on conflict of interest, the Ethics Commissioner will promptly review that and make his determination.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've actually consulted the Ethics Commissioner's office.

To the same minister: will the minister do the right thing and immediately and decisively end the practice of government MLAs nominating candidates to serve as ASC commissioners?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, there are 83 persons in this Legislature that are elected by the citizens of this province. I have the deepest respect for their knowledge of people and possible applicants for many areas. I will not do that. I will not refuse a nomination from any opposition party in this Legislature or from the government. What the hon. member should really be more interested in is how all of those nominations are vetted and approved by external and internal persons. What we want is the best people with the best credentials. I believe that we are achieving that.

Wild Rose Foundation Grants

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I've stated before in this House, the Wild Rose Foundation is an important asset to Alberta, and we need to safeguard its integrity. The Auditor General's investigation into the Applewood community association and how it used its Wild Rose grant is, in fact, a good first start, but it may not answer all the questions that this issue has raised. My questions are to the Minister of Community Development. Can that minister tell us if any other international projects supported by the Wild Rose Foundation operate without CIDA's assurance of accountability?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, on previous occasions the Leader of the Opposition has suggested that there has been some disconnect or somehow an inconsistency with respect to what I've said as it relates to the involvement of CIDA, the national foreign aid agency. I've indicated to him and for the record that there have been occasions where we've asked CIDA, but as a matter of policy we do not ask CIDA to review every single project that we do in foreign jurisdictions. They are involved from time to time but not invariably so, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. My questions are to the same minister. In the case of the Applewood community association will the minister ask the Auditor General to examine whether political interference played any role in this case?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I've requested that the Auditor General examine these matters for two occasions. One is a grant that was given to Applewood in the year 2001 and, secondly, with respect to a grant that was given in 2004. I further asked CIDA to look into the project in Vietnam to be assured that, in fact, the work was done. The Auditor General has not indicated to me exactly what the scope of his review is, but I'm certain that, as is his practice, it will be complete. So I've not given him directions specifically on this point, but as we know, the Auditor General does complete his work in a complete manner.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Again to the same minister: in order to end any questions of political interference and to protect the integrity of the Wild Rose Foundation, will the minister take steps to establish a genuinely arm's-length relationship between MLAs and the Wild Rose Foundation?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is asking for something that seems to be somewhat unreasonable because, of course, he acknowledges himself that there is good work that is being done by the Wild Rose Foundation and that it is a valuable asset to the province of Alberta. In fact, members of the opposition have from time to time come forward and said: look, we think that there is a project that is meritorious of consideration by Wild Rose. There is nothing wrong with this, whether members of the government side or the opposition side suggest that there are meritorious projects that should be considered. I think the important part is that there be a transparent process for decision-making after those meritorious projects have been brought to the attention of Wild Rose by members of the opposition or members of government.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Child and Youth Advocate

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Receiving reports from this Legislature in a timely fashion is important not only to the opposition so they can hold the government to account but to all Albertans so they can be informed of the actions of government. It is not acceptable that Children's Services delivered the report from the children's advocate two years late. To the Minister of Children's Services. Given that staff and funding to the children's advocate's office have been cut, is this the reason the report was so late?

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you very much for that question. I can tell you that, yes, I received the advocate's report late, and the reason from the advocate is a number of factors. One of the contributing factors is the advocate's priorities. The advocate's priorities were the youth and children in this province and not so much writing a report. I can tell you that though I tabled the report yesterday, which is two years old, we have moved on every recommendation through that report.

In regard to the budget I think the hon. member should go to the budget this year. We've increased the budget from $3.8 million to $5.3 million this year, and over the next two years it will be increased by $7.7 million, which is a hundred per cent increase in his budget.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the children's advocate admits, "We are not able to undertake the work that would be necessary to say conclusively that all young people receiving services have the same experience," will this ministry fund the children's advocate for the protection of Alberta's children now so that it can ensure that all children under child welfare services are receiving the same level of care?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, in the previous question I just said that the budget was $3.8 million, that now it's $5.3 million and over the next two years an increase of a hundred per cent to the advocate's budget.

I can tell the hon. member from across the way, though, that what we have done in this particular ministry under youth in transition is phenomenal. The Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul, who is the chair of the Youth Secretariat, and I have spent the last two days at the Children's Forum. I think we have to be exceptionally proud of the children and youth in this province that we are helping under that program. It is incredible what they have been doing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that it has been 15 years since the children's advocate first recommended better plans for permanency planning and we still have children falling through the system cracks, when will the ministry get the people and funding needed to protect and give a future to Alberta's most needy children?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, in a real world everything would be perfect. The unfortunate thing is that we are going to have children in this province that fall through the cracks. I can tell you, though, that the number one priority of the social workers that work in this province is the children and youth in this province. This government has worked very hard on trying to deal with the children that, as the hon. member says, have been falling through the cracks.

We have the Children's Forum still going on at Edmonton Northlands. I would love for her to take a hike over there and meet some of the children that we have helped. We were at a function last night, the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul and I, with probably about 200 high-needs youth that have come into the youth in transition program. These children have done wonderful things in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Government Accountability

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Following the last provincial election and the loss of a dozen seats this Tory government tried to appear humble, promising to be more accountable and more transparent. Instead, the government has quickly reverted to its old ways, refusing to be accountable for the long-term care mess or even answering legitimate questions about a questionable land deal. It's the same old arrogant and secretive government we saw before the election. My first question is to the Deputy Premier. Why is the government failing to be accountable by its refusal to release any details of a real estate deal involving hundreds of acres of prime real estate in Fort McMurray sold in a cozy, private deal to a Tory-friendly developer?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, this government has put into process under the Premier's leadership the most open and accountable governing body that you will find in this country, whether it's through completely transparent, consolidated financial accounts or through providing information. However, the minister very clearly said yesterday that upon reviewing this matter, under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act there are certain things that she cannot release.

I know that the hon. member opposite believes very much in that act, and I believe his caucus supported having a Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. An act that was passed in this Legislature is not an act of convenience. It is an act that protects the privacy of every person in every situation under that legislation.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, why is the government failing to be accountable to whistle-blowers like the former director of administrative services at the Alberta Securities Commission, who got fired when he came forward and exposed wrongdoing and corruption?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I cannot discuss the particular incident that the member is talking about, but as I have said consistently in this Legislature and believe wholeheartedly, if any employee has a concern on a dismissal, there are steps that that employee has available to them. It's most appropriate that any employee, whether it is of the public service or the Alberta Securities Commission in this case, has the opportunity to take those steps.

Mr. Mason: There's a pattern emerging, Mr. Speaker.

Why is the government failing to be accountable to citizens like Marie Geddes, who was forced to go on a hunger strike to draw attention to the government's appalling neglect of seniors in long-term care?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I think, first of all, I find the question a bit distasteful in using an unfortunate passing of a person in this manner.

The budget that we have just concluded debate on in this Legislature included increased staffing for long-term care. The ministers that are responsible for long-term care, both the minister of health and the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports, have indicated that they take all of the Auditor General's recommendations very seriously and intend to act on them. I don't think that that's lack of accountability. In fact, I would say quite the opposite.

I do want to make this point, Mr. Speaker, though. We want to ensure that everybody understands that when we have this discussion, it is about caring about long-term care members and not a criticism of the wonderful staff who do work in those facilities. I've had the opportunity to visit five of those in the last two weeks. Without question and without exception every family member that was there when I presented centenarian medals talked about the wonderful care and caring that exists in our long-term care facilities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Government Efficiency

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are independent, fiscal conservatives who know that the best government is local government and that smaller government is more efficient. In 1992 our Premier said: this government is going to live within its means; that means streamlining our operations, rationalizing and consolidating our government services. Given this government's budget plan to hire 1,023 more bureaucrats this year alone, we have to ask what has happened to this government's fiscal prudence of streamlining and amalgamation of government operations. To the deputy minister: will this government put a freeze on the expansion of hiring 1,023 more bureaucrats and, if it is compelled to hire anyone, hire 1,023 seniors' caregivers?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that was addressed to me. As I just indicated, we had 24 days of budget debate, I think very good debate, some of the best budget debate that I have experienced in this House. The questions were good. I think the attempts to answer were as complete and clear as they could be. I do know that in the estimates of the Ministry of Finance questions were asked on the additional human resource people that we had hired, and I think that the member opposite had that opportunity in every debate.

The province of Alberta is a growing, vibrant province. The population is growing. The services required by that population are growing. Mr. Speaker, we do have a streamlined government offering services. It's a matter of pride to us that when persons do require government services, they don't stand in a long waiting line.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Deputy Premier: are the hon. ministers and their deputies incapable of streamlining and restructuring their own departments?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, we have an incredible talent pool in this caucus and certainly in the ministers that lead these departments. I can assure the hon. member that they are very capable. The most thorough review of all government programs has occurred in this government, and a number of changes have been made. However, I've also said that in the next business planning process, ministers will again be examining all of their departments. If there are things they are doing that they feel could be better done by someone else, that will be raised. If there are areas of their portfolio that they feel would better respond to Albertans by being in another ministry, they will make that recommendation, and indeed the Minister of Restructuring and Government Services will review that.

Mr. Hinman: Albertans will thank you for doing that.

To the Deputy Premier again: will this government act now, as it did with the botched ambulance service, and save millions of Albertans' tax dollars by scrapping the Ministry of Restructuring and Government Efficiency?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, an odd line of questioning. It must be late in the session. The first two questions were about streamlining government, efficiency in government, and examining government departments to ensure that they are most efficient. Then to ask to have the very ministry that has charge of doing that job to be scrapped is a bit odd.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Tracking and Tracing System for Alberta Beef

Ms. Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As many members in the Assembly know, this Friday will mark the second anniversary of the discovery of BSE in North America, an event that has caused unparalleled and unforeseen changes to our cattle industry. Alberta led the country in developing innovative solutions to that crisis, solutions developed in conjunction with industry that have meant we still have a viable cattle industry. However, we still have a ways to go. Markets that were once very lucrative, such as Japan, remain closed. I continue to hear from my constituents that there is an easy answer to this problem: if we test everything for BSE, previously closed markets will open immediately. All my questions are to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. If the solutions are so simple, Minister, why haven't we begun to test everything for BSE to regain market access?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, the solution isn't that simple. I have yet to see any foreign trade agreements that would tell me that if we tested all of our beef for BSE, we would be allowed to export products into that country. The reason for that is very, very straightforward. Testing for BSE isn't about food safety, and it never has been.

The safety of our beef is really determined by the removal of the specified risk materials, which we are doing, not by testing all slaughter cattle. In fact, other jurisdictions, like Japan, as the hon. member mentioned, are moving away from testing all of their slaughter cattle, even within their own countries. The Japanese are moving towards allowing beef from cattle of an age less than 21 months without testing. In the end, Mr. Speaker, testing every steer or heifer slaughtered in Alberta does little to reassure our international trading partners that our beef is safe, but perhaps it does provide good coffee shop talk.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If we don't support testing all animals, could the minister inform the Assembly what we are doing to help our industry access other markets?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are continuing to work with our industry on a number of fronts, all with the aim of re-establishing our presence in those international marketplaces. In fact, today we are announcing that Alberta will be moving forward with age verification of all young cattle slaughtered in Alberta.

With the Speaker's leniency, I'd like to table a press release which I'll be quoting from. The move will mean that Alberta producers will have a definitive competitive advantage over other jurisdictions. By improving our traceability and having a slaughter herd with a verifiable age, we can have the possibility of re-establishing a presence in some very exciting markets, Mr. Speaker, like Japan. We'll be working with the Canadian Cattle Identification Agency, and we are "targeting mandatory age verification for all young cattle slaughtered in Alberta . . . as of April 1, 2007." That is going to have significant benefits to our producers because we will be the first.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Producers will be spending a considerable amount of time to compile this information, Minister. Are they going to get anything in return for that?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is a very good question because we don't want to add more costs to our producers without adding value. This program is going to have some significant benefits to our producers no matter what happens with the U.S. border. Not only will they have the potential for re-entry into those markets which I talked about, but we're also working with the industry to develop a potential carcass quality feedback program. That would allow the feedlot owners, backgrounders, cow-calf producers to gain a better understanding of what kind of production methods are going to be beneficial to them, which results in the best quality of beef. That improves the bottom lines of those producers and the cattle industry as a whole, Mr. Speaker.

We're also going to be working alongside the industry on an information and awareness campaign so that producers will know exactly what will be required of them and what they will be getting in return.

The Speaker: And the hon. minister will table the appropriate document at the appropriate time.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

2:10 Lubicon Band Land Claim

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unresolved land claims affect all Albertans. Companies can't rely on leases and permits issued by the provincial government as disputed territory is not owned by the province. Blockades, unrest, and the loss of important cultures are unavoidable due to this government's unwillingness to tackle tough issues, particularly the continuing tragedy of the Lubicon nation. My question is to the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development. Given that this government has had over 50 years to help negotiate a land claim settlement with the Lubicons and that the government's own consultation process is little more than window dressing, why has this government not been more vocal in publicly urging the federal government to negotiate a settlement with the Lubicon nation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The matter of the Lubicon is within my ministry, so I will address this question. As you know, the federal government is principally responsible for the negotiations with respect to First Nation land claims, and in this particular case that is true also. The federal government last had negotiations in this matter some 18 months ago. The provincial government has always indicated that we are prepared to be at the table if asked. We were at the table at that time. The fact of the matter is that the negotiations reached an impasse, and that is why there has not been any negotiation for some time.

Mr. Tougas: Well, back to the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development: given that once Lubicon land is transferred back to the federal government at the resolution of the outstanding land claim, what is being done to ensure that royalties collected by this government from subsurface extraction are available to the Lubicon nation?

Mr. Stevens: What I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, with respect to this matter is that there have been certain parameters with respect to the negotiations that have been established subject to confirmation; for example, the claim of the Lubicon is for a band of some 400 and some odd persons, and as such a potential land claim based on the claim of the Lubicon has been tentatively set aside. That land has been identified. With respect to that particular land, as I understand it, there have been no transactions of any nature whatsoever for some period of time. That particular land that is potentially part of a settlement, based on discussions to this point in time, has been set aside and has been recognized as the potential land for the purposes.

Mr. Tougas: My final supplementary is definitely to the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development. Will the minister explain to the Lubicon nation why her department failed to consult the band about development occurring at Sawm Lake?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I think that the opposition have to understand that I will be standing and addressing Lubicon matters because of a very clear potential conflict. That very clear potential conflict, as I understand it, is that the hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development is a potential claimant in this claim; in other words, she may well be qualified as a Lubicon claimant. Now, whether that is true or not, I don't know, but I know it is a potential. As such, I am going to be addressing this matter because she cannot.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Cornea Transplants

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A Whitecourt constituent contacted me last weekend, and he's very frustrated by Alberta's procedure for cornea donations, and you can't blame him. The Mayerthorpe man is awaiting his fourth cornea transplant. The wait for cornea transplants seems to be long and growing in this province. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister please tell us what this government is doing to address this issue of long wait times?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you. In the first instance, Mr. Speaker, sometimes it's particularly difficult to get the right match, so there always is a dependency by the ophthalmologist on the right match. There's a particularly concentrated effort in Calgary and Edmonton because these are the places where some six ophthalmologists perform about 250 cornea transplants every year. So while we're working with all authorities, we primarily urge organ donors to make sure that they inform their family physicians, that they inform their family, that they sign their cards, and that we get the network out through the physicians' offices, through the regional health authorities at this time.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, again to the same minister. The minister just talked about the registry process. Can she tell us if other provinces have a registry for transplants?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, the only province to this date that's had a registry is British Columbia. Interestingly enough, they found that when they put this registry in place for organ donations, the numbers of people that offered their organs for transplant actually decreased because they were concerned about having, I gather, the paperwork or the bureaucracy of a registry. At this time the most efficient way is to make sure that everybody signs their donor card and lets people in their family as well as their physician know that that's what their preference is.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, again to the same minister: will the electronic health record help reduce wait times, and will this electronic system work as a new registry for donors?

Ms Evans: We believe it will on both counts. We believe it will help us streamline the capacity of people to receive transplants as well as to alert people that there is an organ available for transplant. Sometimes those organ donors are not caught. The electronic record, once every person in Alberta has that record, will help. For those people out there who are seeking transplants, I think we just have to step up our efforts to make sure that those transplants and those organ donation opportunities are given every opportunity to make that happen.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Parks and Protected Areas

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This long weekend thousands of Alberta families will be heading out on substandard highways in search of safe recreational opportunities. This government has stated that it wants to keep our provincial parks and protected areas, which account for only 4 per cent of Alberta's land usage, safe and enjoyable for visitors. However, recently the Ghost-Waiparous access management plan was released, which offers little protection for families but almost unlimited access for high-intensity off-highway vehicles. My questions are all to the Minister of Community Development. When will more conservation officers be hired and offices reopened to enforce rules in our provincial parks and protected areas?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member knows that we have significantly increased our budget for parks in the province of Alberta and that we are restoring these areas to the kind of condition that they ought to be in.

With respect to enforcement, Mr. Speaker, by and large in our provincial parks and recreational areas – and there are some 500 of them throughout the province of Alberta – there is an outstanding family experience for people who travel to those areas.

Now, there are issues with respect to Ghost-Waiparous, Mr. Speaker. We've taken measures in the past to ensure that there are appropriate usages because these parks belong to all Albertans, not just those that would choose to use the areas, really, in an inappropriate way. We are stepping up on enforcement. We are enforcing, in some examples, liquor bans for use, and this has dramatically reduced the number of offences that have taken place in some areas, but Ghost-Waiparous continues to be an issue.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second follow-up: given that high-intensity recreational activities and noisy parties have the effect of driving families from our parks, how will this minister make these areas safer for everyone's benefit throughout the year?

Mr. Mar: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I indicated to the hon. member, there are great family memories that are grown in our provincial parks, and that's just the reality. The people who use our parks, by and large, are law-abiding people looking for family recreation, looking to get away from the city environment and enjoy nature as it was intended to be enjoyed. I wouldn't want the hon. member to suggest to Albertans that all of our parks throughout the province are places where families can't go. The reality is that there need to be places for people to use off-highway vehicles, as an example. What we need to do is continue to work with local law enforcement officials like the RCMP, like our own conservation officers to ensure that people are staying on trails and not cutting new trails and that there is respect for the park and the other people who are using it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister commit to stronger protection of the environmental integrity of our provincial parks and protected areas from the incursion of oil and gas development, timber clear-cutting, and high-intensity recreational activities? Protect our 4 per cent wilderness heritage, please.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, I didn't realize that you could speak while seated.

Those are the values that the Department of Community Development stands for. There can be good reasons why there may be clear-cutting activities in certain areas. For example, with respect to things like mountain pine beetle, we work very, very closely with the department of sustainable resources to ensure that we try and stop mountain pine beetle where we can. So the result may be that within a park or other protected area we may in fact take a clear-cut in order to stop that kind of incursion of mountain pine beetles from occurring.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Police Recruitment and Training Centre

Mr. McFarland: Good afternoon, Mr. Speaker. Lethbridge Community College and the criminal justice program in my opinion are two shining examples of a good educational program in Alberta. One of the recommendations of the government MLA policing committee was to call for a centre of excellence for police and peace officer training. I understand that the Solicitor General will soon be seeking proposals for, among other things, siting for this particular training facility. My question is to the Solicitor General. Will Lethbridge be considered for the provincial single-site police and peace officer training facility?

The Speaker: The Solicitor General.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, we are moving forward on the policing review's recommendation to establish a centralized police and peace officer training facility in the province of Alberta. Yes, Lethbridge will be considered as a possible site along with all other communities that have an interest and the capacity to provide the services that will be needed to support such a facility. This centre will provide training and professional development for police and peace officers as well as civilian members of police commissions as well as provide professional development and leadership, management, and executive development. In June our department will be releasing a public call for expressions of interest, or EOIs, and I encourage Lethbridge to come forward with a formal indication of their interest at that time.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Then considering the answer, are you, Minister, considering a single-site training college model that anticipates the elimination of, for instance, the RCMP, thereby going to a single police service in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No. We already have a provincial police service for Alberta. The RCMP provide that service to us under an agreement until the year 2012. As any responsible government would do, we are preparing a cost and service benefit review for 2007 to see that we are indeed getting the best value for our money. This review is built in to the present agreement.

We support our contract with the RCMP. The RCMP has a long and proud history in Alberta. However, we do support the concept of regional policing and, as well, looking at other models. So we do support and encourage a model of integrated services in which all police agencies share the resources and services with one another throughout the province, especially those of a critical and specialized nature that services provide.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

Mr. McFarland: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Private Vocational Schools

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today four courageous former students of a government-licensed, private, for-profit vocational school here in Edmonton met with the press to express their concerns based on their personal experiences in that institution. One hundred and forty-seven such government-licensed private vocational schools operate in Alberta and indirectly receive tens of millions of public dollars every year, yet the government allows these schools to operate even if they don't meet performance standards. No wonder default rates and student loans at these institutions exceed 30 per cent, six times higher than those for students in the university sector. My questions are to the Minister of Advanced Education. Given that these institutions are allowed to stay open whether they have a class A or class B licence, whether they have performance standards which are satisfactory or not, why does the government not pull the licences of private vocational schools that fail to achieve satisfactory instructional standards and satisfactory graduation rates? Why not?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to say that when I was a member of the Students Finance Board in this province, we actually initiated a policy which indicated that we would delist institutions that had high default rates and particularly private institutions. In fact, I recall one particular institution that was closed as a result of that. It wasn't closed as a result of that, but their ability for their students to get student loans was removed, and as a result the institution closed. That policy is still in place as far as I know. I'd be happy to look into the specific default rates in the institutions that were raised in the hon. member's press release, but we're very concerned about default rates and about students being attracted to institutions to get certifications or types of certification for which there is no market and no ability to earn enough money to pay it back, so that's a very high degree of concern.

Mr. Speaker, if I may, I'll just add one other thing. Companies can do business in this province and every other place, and it is very incumbent on students, when they make a choice, that they look into the choice that they're making, that they understand what they're getting into. That's very important. Not all vocational schools are registered, and not all those that are registered are appropriate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Charter rights are contravened when government-licensed, private, for-profit vocational institutions in this province expel students accused of trying to form student associations, what action will the minister take to safeguard the rights of students to free assembly and free speech?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's my understanding with respect to private institutions that we don't actually license private institutions. What we do is look at programs that are offering certification and we review the programs to ensure that the programs are appropriate.

Now, again, I'm very concerned about students in this province getting a good education and getting value for their money in terms of moving forward with an education, particularly through the private process. Ninety-five per cent of students in Alberta go into public institutions, but there is a place and an appropriate place for the private delivery of education models in this province. Students need to be careful when they're going forward that they're getting the program they want and that the program they're going into has been appropriately certified. We do not tell businesses whether they can or cannot do business in this province. What we do is take a look at programs for which they're offering certification and make sure that those programs are of a quality level.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This model does not work.

Given that the private institutions branch does next to nothing when students make legitimate complaints about these institutions, when will the government set up an effective student complaints resolution process?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, it's always unfortunate when members of this House denigrate the good work that's done by civil servants in this province. We have a very strong civil service in this province, and I can tell you that the people who work in the private institutions branch do a good job. The public service in this province does an excellent job. The people in the private institutions branch do an excellent job.

When there are complaints, we look into those complaints, but there's also an appropriate role for individuals in this province because we do believe in self-reliance in this province. Individuals making choices need to do their homework and make appropriate choices. I will commit to you, Mr. Speaker, that we also will do our homework, and where appropriate, we will check into the institutions. If there are allegations that they haven't done their work appropriately or that somehow they are not meeting the certification standards that we set, we will shut down those that don't meet the standards.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace.

Government Appointments

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government, and the Premier in particular, have repeatedly criticized the federal government's Senate appointments, saying that they're a slap in the face of Albertans and that they occur contrary to democratic process. Well, this very government continues to deliver Albertans one slap after another in the form of patronage appointments. When it comes to top government jobs, board memberships, and committee positions, this Tory government appoints party loyalists and their own friends rather than the best candidates for these jobs. My questions are all to the Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency. Given that following the last election, Albertans were promised that top government jobs would only be filled after fair and open competitions – and this obviously did not happen – will the minister tell this House if sole sourcing for jobs to Tory friends is the most efficient way to recruit staff?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I've never ever believed this government to go out sole sourcing for jobs strictly for their government friends or whatever he was talking about. I will have the hon. Deputy Premier actually get up and speak on this one.

Thank you.

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, the generalization that was made by this hon. member is, one, quite impossible to answer. If the hon. member has a specific concern about how appointments were made – and it was raised in a question earlier – I think one should raise those directly. For various boards, commissions, and agencies there are processes that are followed. I explained the processes followed in one of those commissions today. For jobs there is a very good publication called The Bulletin. Jobs that are government, civil service jobs are advertised in that Bulletin. There is a vetting process, and they are hired through that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So given that for a brief democratic moment regional health authorities were elected rather than appointed, will the hon. minister please justify his government's practice for hand-picking RHA board members?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, that would be a very good question if it was going to the proper minister that looks after our health regions.

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I am so delighted to answer this because I take huge offence to what you're saying, absolutely huge. The entire time that I've been in this government I've made it a practice to appoint people to supervise the processes of adjudication so that this government cannot be accused of just what you're saying. I take offence to that because with health authorities or any other authority in Children's Services – if the Children's Services minister were here right now, she would stand up and complain about this kind of damnation.

Mr. Elsalhy: So given that the chief internal auditor's resignation is not effective until June 1, will the Minister of RAGE advise the Premier and the Executive Council that this position should now be filled through a transparent and fully accountable job competition rather than being appointed? We have to start somewhere.

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, the position that the member refers to will be filled appropriately, and when the time is appropriate, the hon. member will know who was appointed and how he or she was recruited.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace.

Second-language Instruction

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. One of the many recommendations from the Alberta Commission on Learning that is still awaiting implementation is the second-language initiative. The commission strongly advocated in support of second-language learning because of the obvious benefits this would provide for Alberta students. My first question is for the Minister of Education. Since the minister undertook a readiness survey concerning this initiative two months ago, could he now tell us the results of that survey?

Mr. Zwodzdesky: Mr. Speaker, when I met with all 62 school boards and a number of teachers, it became very clear very quickly that the second-languages initiative, if it were to be mandated, would not have been successful for an implementation date of September 2006, so we're going to be phasing it in. Prior to that, I had to do this readiness survey. I want to tell you that we had about a 92, 93 per cent response rate to that survey, and overwhelmingly we heard many concerns. However, on the positive side I'd say that about 60 per cent plus of the grade 4 classes would be ready to go with this initiative. When we do it, we're going to phase it in, and we'll phase it in right across the system. So the results of the survey are really quite encouraging, but they also tell us that we aren't quite there yet.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move to the next part of the Routine, I just want to give you an update with respect to Oral Question Period. As we began this session, I indicated that one of the things that the chair would try to do is basically encourage . . .

Mr. Goudreau: I just had the one question.

The Speaker: You still wanted to go with another one? Okay. Sorry. I'll sit down.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You're probably as anxious as we are to get out of here.

Mr. Speaker, I have two extra questions. The first of my two questions is again to the same minister. I've heard that many school boards may have to hire additional second- and third-language teachers. What is being done to encourage more teachers into this area of instruction?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, second-language learning is extremely important, and obviously it can't happen without second-language teachers. So we're doing a lot to generate a lot more interest and awareness around second-language importance and around the need to encourage more teachers into the field. Secondly, we're enhancing some projects, such as video conferencing, to make more second-language learning available throughout the province. Thirdly, we're also handing out bursaries and scholarships to second-language teachers. In fact, yesterday I announced 10 more, $5,000 each, that will help encourage people, teachers specifically, who are already in the second-language field to continue and upgrade their studies in that area, should they wish. So those $5,000 scholarships times 10 teachers will help a great deal in that respect.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My third question is to the Minister of Advanced Education. What is your ministry doing to support postsecondary students who are studying to become second-language teachers?

Mr. Martin: Everything.

Mr. Hancock: Absolutely everything, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very important question because under our strategic plan, of course, one of the pillars is competing in a global marketplace. Competing in a global marketplace means that we must develop on the rich heritage that we have of different cultures, languages, and traditions. It's increasingly important to enhance that and to pass on to young people knowledge of a second language, and that does require teachers. So in addition to the 10 bursaries to enhance the abilities of teachers in the system, there were also 12 postsecondary students with a second-language scholarship of $2,500 studying to teach, and of course postsecondary students can also apply for many other scholarships that are available.

The idea that we need to enhance, as the Minister of Education indicated, second-language learning in this province so that we can enhance our ability to compete out into a global marketplace: our postsecondary system has got to enhance that with adding value to bringing in international students, making sure that we have international education opportunities, and absolutely making sure that there are educational opportunities available for second-language instruction and instructors in this province.

The Speaker: Hon. members will note the acute attention to decorum that the Speaker presented to himself when he found that he was out of order and quickly sat down. This is a model for all members.

Statement by the Speaker

Brevity in Oral Question Period

The Speaker: At the beginning of this session I had requested members to deal with the question of brevity with respect to questions and answers so as to afford an opportunity for an increased number of members to participate in the question period. This is now day 41, and these are the results and comparison this year to last year.

Last session, the session of 2004, we had approximately 11 to 11 and a half questions per day on average. Our average this year is well above 15. Now, last year in only one Oral Question Period were there over 14 sets of questions. Only one, same number of days. This year on 14 days we had 15 or more sets of questions, on 10 days we had 16 or more sets of questions, on another eight we had 17 or more sets of questions, and on one we had 18 sets of questions. So by comparison we had 33 days out of the 41 this year when we had 15 or more sets of questions whereas compared to last year we had only one. So there was a dramatic improvement with respect to members' participation, and I appreciate that.

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, did you count the number of answers that were given?

The Speaker: Unfortunately, hon. member, this is one of the truisms of the democratic system that we have and that we follow here: this is not answer period; it's question period.

The Clerk: Members' Statements.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before calling on the first of six to participate, I'm going to call upon the Deputy Speaker for a very special presentation.

Page Recognition

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Deputy Chair and myself would like to draw to the attention of all hon. members that we're going to lose five of our wonderful pages when this spring session ends: Vanessa Pillay, Leslie Day, Whitney Haynes, Christina Molzan, and Justin Laverty-Harrigan. These fine young people will be leaving their duties in this Assembly following the close of the spring session.

I would ask you to join me in recognizing the great efforts of our pages, who daily show patience and understanding of our many demands. They carry out their tasks with attention to duty and in good humour.

On behalf of all members I ask our head page, Vanessa Pillay, to give each retiring page our gift and, with it, our best wishes to each and every one. We are honoured to have had all of you work with us in Alberta's Legislature. [applause]

The Speaker: Hon. members, these are exceptional young people. I received this letter from them, addressed to me but to all the Members of the Legislative Assembly, and I would like to put it in the record. The subject is Retiring Pages.

[Dear] Mr. Speaker,

We are truly privileged to have had the opportunity to serve this house and we take great pride in being able to say, without it sounding cliché, that we have held one of the 'best' jobs. We have never come to work thinking of it as 'work' and for that we thank you, Mr. Speaker, the Sergeant-at-Arms, the current and former members, the officers, the Legislative Assembly Security Staff, and the many others who have made our experience more enjoyable.

Before working here, we were, admittedly, prey to the public's stereotypical view of a politician, but we learned nothing could be further from the truth. The members of the assembly were revealed to be real people trying to do their best in a very difficult position. And indeed, to our surprise, many had managed to retain a great sense of humor while doing so. In addition to recognizing the members as real people, we have also been privileged to be on the floor to hear many inspiring speeches, intense debates, and even a couple of limericks and songs. Despite the excitement, however, we could still tell you that there are 620 light bulbs up there; a little known fact that we are sure every page before us could verify.

We started this job as teenagers and have grown to become young adults. We have gained not only new perspectives on politics and the legislative process, but a sense of maturity and confidence that we would not have otherwise gained. We promise to forever remember our experiences here and to defend the inner workings of our parliamentary system that we have become so familiar with.

With the great honour of serving the province of Alberta, in this centennial year, we would simply like to say, thank you.

Yours Sincerely,

Vanessa Pillay, Leslie Day, Leah Halliday, Whitney Haynes, Justin Laverty-Harrigan, and Christina Molzan.

Some of them are going to meet Her Majesty on Tuesday next, so that will be another great honour for them. [standing ovation]

head: Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Endangered Species Conservation Committee

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to call the members' attention to the efforts of a committee that exemplifies Alberta's commitment to protecting wild species throughout the province. The Endangered Species Conservation Committee works to identify vulnerable species and makes recommendations on their recovery and conservation to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. It has been my pleasure to chair the committee since it was established in 1997.

Members represent 19 stakeholder organizations and include scientists, conservationists, landowners, aboriginal groups, and resource managers. Committee members are dedicated volunteers who know about the land and who are committed to helping conserve Alberta's wild species. They have put in a lot of work and time and energy over the years.

I also want to mention a separate scientific subcommittee working closely with the committee, and its members provide us with expert advice. Working together we have made recommendations on the status of 46 wild species.

I think it is important for all hon. members to acknowledge the valuable contribution of the Endangered Species Conservation Committee and its scientific subcommittee and the benefits they provide to Albertans.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Alberta Centennial

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the occasion of Alberta's centenary anniversary I can't help but project my imagination back into the history of this great land, our province of Alberta and our country of Canada. As I have said before, Canada and Alberta are blessed with an abundance of natural resources and splendours, but it's our human resources that realize these natural resources into prosperity and a high quality of life for our residents.

Prior to the 1400s this vast land was populated by only the people of the First Nations. They lived on the provisions of the land and enjoyed a unique culture. In the early 1500s people from Europe came to this land. This first wave of people arrived with the intention to find wealth and take it back to where they came from. As the first wave died down, a new wave of people came who wanted to build a new nation for themselves and a social system different and better than the one they departed from. They are known as the founders, as pioneers, and homesteaders. Like many of us today and our ancestors in the near past they belong to the waves of immigrants who share this land with the people who were here before them.

For the recent 100 years Alberta has been blessed with waves of immigrants who departed from their lands of birth. They left behind bad practices and learned new, good ones from others. They came here to build a better way of life for themselves and their family. Most importantly, they wanted to continue building and protecting a better society, better than where they departed from.

Mr. Speaker, my family and myself are proud to be among them. We want to express our sincere appreciation for this land and the people who have come here before us. We are what we can be today because they let us stand on their strong shoulders. As we are celebrating Alberta's hundred years of history, I'm thankful that my family shares 30 of those hundred. "Alberta is calling me. Home sweet home, it's where I'm proud to be."

Thank you.

2:50 First Session of the First Alberta Legislature

Mr. Shariff: Mr. Speaker, my statement today reflects upon a moment in time in our history: the day when our first session of the Alberta Legislature met. The content of this statement is summarized from Frank Dolphin's book The Alberta Legislature. It was a cold, windy day on March 15, 1906, and Albertans from every corner of the province converged along 102nd Street at the Thistle Curling Rink north of Jasper Avenue. All the hotels and boarding houses were booked in and around Edmonton. In a horse-driven carriage our first Lieutenant Governor, George Bulyea, arrived to deliver the province's first Speech from the Throne.

Tremendous effort had gone into converting the rink into a meeting place. Flags and banners hung around the rink, and the curling ice was covered with sawdust, and pews were borrowed from churches for sitting. There were 4,000 seats available to Albertans to witness that historic day.

Our first Premier, Alexander Rutherford, apart from being the Premier, took on portfolios of Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Education. Mr. Charles Fisher, MLA for Cochrane, was elected as our first Speaker of this Assembly.

The most important piece of business, that of capital city location, was on everyone's mind but wasn't mentioned in the throne speech. The House of Commons had designated Edmonton to be the capital, and while the Alberta Legislature could have revised or reversed the decision, it did not do so.

Frank Dolphin notes that the members of our Legislative Assembly were relatively young, with an average age of 45. "Although a few were pioneers, none of them were born in Alberta. Most had headed west from Ontario." It is noted that "one of the real characters was Arlie Brick," the MLA for Peace River, who "travelled to one session by sleigh with a small cabin on the back, pulled by two moose."

Mr. Speaker, every day in this Chamber we make history. My hope is that in a hundred years when people read what we have accomplished, they'll look upon it with awe, perhaps with a little bit of humour, and of course they'll see how proud we were to be a part of history in this great place called Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Governing in the Public Interest

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to reflect in this message on the meaning of the public interest. It's a truism to say that elected officials have a formal obligation to speak and act in the public interest. The problem in Alberta is a government that believes it knows the public interest and after 33 years has stopped listening and stopped asking. The public interest is not served solely through economic development and jobs, yet this is the mantra communicated by this government when asked on a decision, especially in the area of resource development in the province.

The public interest is fundamentally about balance, and there are at least four elements. First, public interest has to do with long-term thinking and planning that considers, as First Nations have said, the next seven generations. Second, the public interest is served by honest discussion about resource limits, options, sustainable management, fairness, and trust in our society. Third, public interest places the economy at the service of people and the environment rather than the reverse. Fourth, the public interest is served by transparent decision-making that encourages citizen involvement and vitality in our democracy.

People know, even if they cannot express it, when governments are not acting in the public interest and not connecting with their deeper values. In my experience and in my constituency the result has been increasing fear-based reactions: cynicism, anxiety, anger, or, alternatively, silence and withdrawal from duties as citizens. Citizens of Alberta are hungry for transparent leadership decisions, especially affecting their future, and participation in those decisions. If we care to listen, there are different ways Albertans are telling us that we as politicians are failing to act in the public interest to balance economics and social values with the environment, the long-term view, transparency, and accountability. The test of an authentic government is its willingness to listen and to change in the public interest.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Lieutenant Governor of Alberta Arts Awards

Mrs. Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the recipients of the inaugural Lieutenant Governor of Alberta arts awards presented recently at a very exciting gala hosted at the Banff Centre. These awards were established in 2002 under the patronage of the late Lois Hole to celebrate excellence in and underline the importance of the arts in Alberta. The government of Alberta contributed

$1 million towards a $3 million endowment fund to help generate the funding for up to three awards of $30,000 to be given every other year.

This year 85 nominations were received from around the province in the areas of performing arts, visual arts, cinematic arts, design, architecture, and literary arts. The many achievements are impressive and clearly indicate the strength and depth of artistic talent in this province. This year the adjudication panel selected two individuals as winners, Mr. Douglas Cardinal and Mr. John Murrell.

Douglas Cardinal has been designing buildings for decades. His unique style of organic architecture marked by curvilinear lines has made him internationally renowned. He is probably best known locally for his architectural design at the Edmonton Space and Science Centre, the Grande Prairie Regional College, and the St. Albert cultural centre and internationally for his design of the Canadian Museum of Civilization in Hull, Quebec.

John Murrell is an internationally renowned playwright and artistic director whose plays have been translated into 15 different languages and performed in more than 30 countries around the world. His play Waiting for the Parade earned John his first Chalmers best Canadian play award, and he has earned that honour twice again since then. He also created the lyrics for the very popular, very well received opera Filumena, which I know some of our members recently had the opportunity to see performed at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa, which was showcasing Alberta talent.

Please join me in congratulating all those who were nominated for the Lieutenant Governor arts awards and particularly Mr. Douglas Cardinal and Mr. John Murrell for being selected as this year's winners.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Respect for Women in Politics

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have commented several times in this House about the great work that the Alberta Legislature does in educating today's young people about politics and the very important work that we do in this building. The School at the Legislature program is one I particularly appreciate, and it seems that not a day goes by where we do not have at least one school group in the galleries watching the proceedings. Whenever I have the opportunity to speak to schools and children, I always stress the need for young people, particularly young women, to become involved in or at least more aware of the political process and how they can help to create their own futures.

Mr. Speaker, with this in mind, yesterday's comments from a member of this Legislature in the national media regarding the new federal Minister of Human Resources and Skills Development are especially disappointing. It seems that when a man decides he can no longer reconcile his conscience with a political party and chooses to cross the floor, he is described as principled and wise, yet when a woman makes a similar decision, the comments become personal, belittling, and in this case sexual in nature.

As I drove to work today, Mr. Speaker, I thought about those young ladies that I've spoken to. I also thought about all of the bright women that I've met over the years in my business career, women who would make absolutely excellent legislators. I regret to say that I lamented for all those promising women this morning. I'm not sure what I will say to them now when they suggest to me that politics really is an old boys' club after all.

I can attest, Mr. Speaker, that there is no greater calling than to be elected by your fellow citizens to represent them. When a member of this House publicly degrades, humiliates, and demoralizes female politicians in such a manner, I can only imagine the impact that this has in discouraging women from pursuing such a noble calling. The sexual nature of the remarks is even more distasteful in light of the fact that local sex trade workers appear to be the target of one or more serial murderers.

Mr. Speaker, I can only hope that the women of this country, young and old, will believe me when I sincerely say that we are in desperate need of more female representation in our Legislatures and our parliaments, and I hope that these comments will not further dissuade them from joining their male counterparts in seeking to make our communities, our province, and our country the best that they can be.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar on a point of order.

Rev. Abbott: Yes. Mr. Speaker, if it's possible, I'd like to call a point of order on that member's statement. Is that allowed within our rules?

Speaker's Ruling Members' Statements

The Speaker: Well, hon. member, here's the dilemma and the difficulty. When we brought in this whole concept of statements in 1993, there was a definitive negotiation between the then Government House Leader, which happened to me, and the then Official Opposition House Leader. One of the agreed principles we had was that we would ask all members in the Assembly to deal with the highest degree of civility with respect to these statements, to not bring into question any other member, and to deal essentially with thoughts that they had. Now, in replacement or evenness for that, no member would rise on a point of order or on a point of privilege.

In this case, hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, it's pretty apparent to the chair who the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford was talking about, but he didn't mention it specifically.

To me there's a greater principle involved in this. This Assembly is one of the unique ones that you're going to find anywhere. As an example, in this session we've just now had 169 members' statements. It's an opportunity for members to stand up and air something. The previous recognitions were one minute. In negotiations among the House leaders we said that we'd now go to two minutes per day for these statements, but there had to be some understanding principles.

The member in question is also the Official Opposition whip. I'm going to ask him to just really rethink and try to understand the principles and the rules of this House. I'm not going to censor anybody because that was the agreed principle that we had in here, that we would not, but over the years, then, one also has to have some element of civility because if we don't, then we will definitely go to points of order and points of privilege, and that will just throw out the whole reason for having this whole concept known as statements. That was the principle agreed to, and only on about three occasions in the last 12 years has there ever had to be an intervention. That's a pretty good record, but three are too many. Period.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a petition signed by 213 Albertans who are seeking potentially life-saving improvements to highways in northern Alberta, particularly highway 63. With today's tabling the total of signatures on this petition so far is 4,912.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise with a petition from some hard-working Albertans from the great Alberta communities of Alberta Beach, New Sarepta, Lamont, Gibbons, and the mining capital of Canada, Fort McMurray, as well as various camps in that area. It reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others? That was the 82nd petition presented during this session.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table today the appropriate number of copies of a press release that I alluded to earlier today on this the eve of the second anniversary of BSE being discovered in our province and also some background information on that press release as well as what the government of Alberta is doing with regard to the six-point BSE recovery program.

Just a note, Mr. Speaker. We are extremely proud of the partnership we have with the cattle industry, which has enabled it to survive when many thought in May of 2003 that we would not have a cattle industry today.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling today the appropriate number of copies of answers to the questions raised during Committee of Supply on May 10, 2005.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Science.

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, I also rise to table the appropriate number of copies of replies to questions that were raised in Committee of Supply, and the originals have gone out to the respective members today as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Two tablings today. One of them is answers to Written Question 29, which was posed by members opposite regarding full-day kindergarten.

The other one is responses to Written Question 14, regarding school-raised fees for book rentals, transportation, and other such items.

Thank you.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, today I'm pleased to table copies of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development's answers to Committee of Supply questions.

I'm also pleased to table the appropriate number of copies of the 2003-2004 annual report of the Northern Alberta Development Council.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today: one, a report from the St. Albert Gazette discussing parents' struggle with addiction treatment, and the other a recognition of the National Day of Healing and Reconciliation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies each of five letters from hard-working Albertans asking the government to deal with the issue of temporary foreign workers, apprenticeship ratios, and deskilling of the workplace.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling this afternoon, and it is a copy of a petition from the Strathearn neighbourhood. There are over 700 signatures on this petition. This petition is vigorously opposed to the forced closure of Strathearn elementary and junior high school by this government's utilization and education policies.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of my colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of the Alberta Registries land title certificate relating to the sale of land in the Fort McMurray area. Included in the tabling is a map of the relevant land.

I would also like to table a petition signed by 200 Albertans who "demand and require that Alberta forthwith grant equal status to Farmworkers" in accordance with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. It's five copies of a letter that was sent to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview from the St. Arnaud, McAllister, and Bowie law firm, who are solicitors for Alberta Career Computer Center in Edmonton. The language of the letter is anticipatory in that it advises the hon. member's office that it shouldn't help publicize unfounded allegations and offered us a briefing. We contacted the office and are still waiting for word to be briefed. So I'm tabling this so that it's on record and is available for members to look at.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I'm going to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. He will become tabling number 510 in this session, and he's asked me for permission to just speak a little longer than normal, just a little though.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It won't really be much longer than normal. It's my pleasure to table a document recognizing the dedication and talent of Marilyn Hooper. Marilyn is our director of outreach and is leaving us after eight years of excellent service. Marilyn has many friends among the people that work in the Legislature Building and the Annex. She will be greatly missed by our caucus and by all those who have come to know her in the past few years. On behalf of the NDP opposition I would like to offer Marilyn our heartfelt thanks and best wishes in her future endeavours.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Dr. Oberg, Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation return to order of the Assembly MR 32, asked for by Mr. MacDonald on behalf of Mr. Chase on May 2, 2005; return to order of the Assembly MR 33, requested by Mr. MacDonald on behalf of Mr. Chase on May 2, 2005; return to order of the Assembly MR 39, requested by Mr. Martin on May 2, 2005; return to order of the Assembly MR 41, requested by Mr. Martin on May 2, 2005.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Ouellette, Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency return to order of the Assembly MR 29, requested by Mr. Elsalhy on May 2, 2005.

On behalf of Ms Evans, Minister of Health and Wellness responses to questions raised by Ms Blakeman, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, on March 16, 2005, during the 2004-2005 supplementary estimates debate.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: Hon. members, a historical vignette today. On this day in 1905 the northern Alberta town of Athabasca was established as the village of Athabasca Landing. Athabasca derives from the Cree word meaning where there are reeds. Athabasca Landing developed as an important shipping centre. It was incorporated as a village in 1905, as a town in 1911, and in 1913 the town's name was officially shortened to Athabasca.

House leaders might appreciate the following bits of information with respect to this session as well. When the House rises on Tuesday next, it will have sat for 42 days, including 28 evening sittings. In the spring of 2004 the House sat for 43 days, with 29 evening sittings, essentially the same length of time. However, there are some differences. By the time this House rises on Tuesday, it will have sat for approximately 13,450 minutes in 2005. In the spring sitting of 2004 it sat for 12,246 minutes. There are almost 1,200 more minutes this year, in 2005, than one year ago, and that translated into the number of hours – this year we will have sat so far for about 224 hours, compared to 204 hours in the spring sitting of 2004.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move for third reading Bill 42, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005.

[Motion carried; Bill 42 read a third time]

Bill 41
Appropriation Act, 2005

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Minister of Finance it's my pleasure to move for third reading Bill 41, Appropriation Act, 2005.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak on Bill 41. I'll just make a few brief comments about the entire budgeting process, if I may. I think one of the most interesting and challenging aspects of being a rookie MLA has been this entire process. In fact, as I recall, one of the first things we did as MLAs was approve the supplementary estimates, going back to March I think it was, which was like two and a half lifetimes ago.

As I found out, supplementary means exactly what it says. It was money over and above what was budgeted in the previous year's budget. So one of the very first things we did as MLAs here was to approve the spending of money that already had been spent. So it was an interesting start to the session.

Regarding the budgeting process this time around, I wonder if next March we're going to be looking at more supplementary figures, Mr. Speaker. How many millions or perhaps billions of unbudgeted spending can we expect to supposedly vote on next year? The government's track record in this regard indicates that there is no doubt that we'll be going through this process again. I sometimes wonder if the government thinks its budgets are written on Etch A Sketches. When they get tired of it, they just flip it over, shake it clear, and start all over again.

There were times during the budget debate – I sat through more than my share, I'm afraid – when the debate was excellent. It was genuine, civil, intelligent give-and-take between the minister and the questioners on this side and on the other side. Good questions were asked, and sometimes very good answers were supplied. I guess when you have a total of nearly two full days of debate, something useful has to come of it. There were other times when the minister used what I would call the talking tactic, where you would answer a one-minute question with a 20-minute diatribe regarding nothing in particular.

My biggest concern about the entire process, Mr. Speaker, was the lack of information in some of the budgeting documents, particularly in Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development. There was one line in particular which was simply Aboriginal Affairs, and I believe it was somewhere in the budget of $17 million. A one-line mention doesn't give you much to go on, nothing to chew on. You can't debate a mention of $17 million unless you know what they're for.

The minister was kind enough, after I asked, to send a detailed outline of what that $17 million was for. If I could, I'd just like to go over it very briefly so that it is, at least, on the record. We have aboriginal initiatives, $5.7 million; strategic services, $1.7 million; aboriginal land and legal issues, $2.5 million; aboriginal consultation, $6.8 million; Métis settlements ombudsman, $450,000; Métis settlements land registry, $222,000.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I don't know why this information wouldn't have been included in the budget in the first place. There are quite a few instances where there just wasn't adequate information for us to properly debate the budget. I appreciate getting the information afterward, but it's much more important to get it during the actual debate.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, it's been a very interesting experience. I can't say that I look forward to doing it again next year, but I guess that's our job.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Ms Haley: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak briefly about the appropriations bill. This is the first budget that I actually had the opportunity to see being made. I would like to thank the Minister of Finance for the inclusive way that she made the budget possible this year. As she kept reminding us, this was not her budget, rather it was a budget for Albertans, reflecting the debt paydown and dealing with what Albertans told us they wanted when the debt was paid off.

I have been an MLA for almost 12 years now, and this is only the second time that I have been able to feel like a participant in the planning process for the budget. The first time was in 1993 when we started down the road to the 20 per cent cutbacks. Many of the Conservative MLAs were on subcommittees, looking at various departments, with the goal of cutting overall government spending by 20 per cent while at the same time trying to refocus government back onto its core business.

This time we were able to create a budget after having paid off the debt that we were struggling so hard with in 1993. This year instead of dealing with cutbacks as we were then, we were dealing with an ask list that was simply too big to handle.

I'm not sure which way is more difficult, Mr. Speaker: cutting spending or increasing spending. One thing I can tell you for sure is that in either scenario there are people who are happy and there are people who aren't.

I have really appreciated the opportunity to be on Treasury Board this year and to be able to see first-hand the ministers making their requests for increases in their respective department budgets. I have great respect for the ministers and what they try to achieve. None of them wants an increase just to say that they got one. They all came in and fought very hard on behalf of their departments, the people, and the programs that they serve. I would like to congratulate them on basically never backing down but in the end accepting their increases or not and going back over again to write and rewrite and find new ways to make things work.

It's a real honour for me to be able to work with the Minister of Finance on this committee. The last time I had an opportunity to work closely with her was when she was minister of health and I was the SPC chair. I believe she's an incredible asset not only to my government, Mr. Speaker, but also to our province as a whole.

Creating a budget like this with this kind of an increase is not something that comes easily to a fiscal conservative, but on the other hand the budget reflects what Albertans have been telling us are their priorities. The growth in our economy and the surplus created by high oil and gas prices have allowed us this year to increase funding to health and education, advanced education, and seniors as well as to AISH, parks, infrastructure, and transportation, all things that Albertans told us were their priorities.

Years ago, Mr. Speaker, when I was taking economics at the postsecondary level, the very first graph that we were asked to work with was entitled the guns or butter scenario. The point of the exercise was to assume that you were a government and that you had to make a decision on whether to arm your people to help protect them from a coming invasion or to feed them. You could do one or the other or a combination of the two, but there was limited supply, lots of demand, and limited money. I never thought at the time that it would prove to be a useful graph until I was faced with making choices about where to put resources this year.

While I know it is not about guns or butter, the truth is that the lesson holds true for the choices that you have to make. There was money for health care, and even with a sizable increase in their budget it is nowhere near what the demand was calling for. Money for education, trying to fulfill the recommendations from the Learning Commission, which is hugely expensive and is not just about smaller classroom numbers; it is also about building enough schools to supply those classrooms. It was about money for hospitals or overpasses, roads and schools, portables, seniors' housing, social housing, and municipalities. It is about setting aside future surpluses, if we are lucky enough to have them, for inflation-proofing the heritage savings trust fund, topping up the sustainability fund, putting money into the scholarship fund or access to the future fund, not to mention the medical foundation or the ingenuity fund or billions for municipalities. It seems that there is never a shortage of good ideas or places where money can go.

The common theme in the media and from the special interest groups is that in a province with so much money there is no reason to not do pretty much anything anyone wants you to do. But we all know better. In the late '70s and early '80s it was a common theme as well: we will have the very best of everything for everyone all the time. While oil went up, it was easy to create expensive programs for pretty much everyone. I can tell you from first-hand experience that it was not so much fun cutting 20 per cent out of overall government spending. It was not so much fun when there were protesters out in front of the building day in and out all through '93, '94, '95, '96, and pretty much on from there.

So I want to throw a note of caution into the discussion about the budget. I'm glad that we were able to do these things this year, but I also hope that we will be able to tailor our budget growth to more accurately reflect the growth in our gross domestic product so that we do not find ourselves in a position where we once again have to cut programs.

I am not unlike other Albertans. I want the best health care I can get, I want the best education for our children, and I don't want to be sitting still on Deerfoot Trail because of gridlock. But at the same time, the more we build, the higher the inflationary rate comes in on construction costs. The more we spend on health care, the less there is for other departments. So caution and careful analysis are required even in a province as fortunate as Alberta.

From an MLA perspective I want many things for my constituency. I want, first and foremost, portables for the high-growth needs of my school divisions. I want 24-hour urgent care for the health needs of a city of almost 30,000 people whose patience has run out waiting for the Calgary regional health authority to notice us or listen to our needs. I want the interchange at the south end of Airdrie to be included in the planning so that people can get into and out of Airdrie during rush hour. I want the overpass built on highway 1 where it meets highway 9. It is dangerous, and it is getting worse. I want to address the problems with water and waste water that Rocky View municipal district is facing on a daily basis as growth is overtaking their ability to cope with demand.

My whole constituency is facing between 10 and 20 per cent growth annually. We don't have old infrastructure for anyone to use. We need roads, we need water, we need sewage services, and we need schools just to try and cope with the growth that we have. I need more schools than I even want to talk about anymore. I swear that people think I make it up when I tell them that I need two more schools this year – well, every year. The Premier was right when he said that it was great that people move here. We want them to come here, we need them to come here, but they don't bring their own schools, and they don't bring their own roads. We have to plan better, if not to try to get ahead of the demand, at least to try to keep up with it.

This is just my riding, Mr. Speaker, and many of the MLAs in this room are dealing with exactly the same issues. It is a challenge, but it's also an opportunity. Of all the places in the world where we could be living, we are so lucky to live here. The issues we are dealing with are about what to build and where and how to improve the quality of life for all Albertans. It is not about war or genocide. It's not about starvation or huge refugee camps, where just getting a glass of water is the most pressing issue of the day. We are truly blessed to live here.

I look forward to the future with hope and optimism. I look forward to a year of our centennial celebrations, and I'm even looking forward to starting work on the next budget. But mostly, Mr. Speaker, I'm looking forward to session ending so that we can once again find out what daylight looks like at the end of the workday.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Then I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise with some interest to perhaps sum up the weeks of budget estimates that I've been sitting through. It's been a very educational process and illuminating as well. I was watching with interest previously the machinations of government, and indeed the budget strikes at the very heart of how things function around here.

I believe that there are some signs of hope from this budget that we have been working through these past weeks. Those signs of hope, in my mind, stem from, you know, some good interaction in regard to ministers and critics looking at various ways to solve problems for Albertans because, really, at the end of the day we are spending this money to best serve the most people, most of the time. I think that all members do recognize that, and we do see some positive movement with this current budget.

However, I still have a number of issues that I would like to bring forward, perhaps for further illumination or edification, whatever the case may be, both on the spending and the revenue side of this budget in general. I would just like to point out a number of these specific issues that have come to my mind, and perhaps they have come to others as well.

On the spending side of this budget it appears as if the government is getting used to yearly surpluses, certainly, fuelled by the province's rich natural resource revenues. Total spending will jump to $25.8 billion, $3.2 billion more than last year's budget and $1.4 billion more than the most recent third-quarter update. Budget 2005 shows a surplus of $1.52 billion compared to the so-called $300 million budget surplus of 2004, which of course was entirely superseded by a much larger number. The 2005 budget was based on a $42 U.S. barrel of oil, and of course the current price is at $48 and has reached even higher than that. With Bill 37, the Financial Statutes Amendment Act, 2005, the government has raised the ceiling to $4.75 billion from $4 billion in terms of nonrenewable resource revenue that can be used for program spending.

The government went way over budget last year by spending nearly $2 billion over and above the last year's approved budget. It's, I think, rather sad and ironic that last year's budget was entitled On Route, On Course. With the government breaking its own budget by nearly $2 billion, I would have to question just how on course this action really has been. Half a billion going toward BSE relief. The rest of the spending, I don't know. That certainly was a justified circumstance, but otherwise my question is mainly just underestimating how much it takes to run these various ministries that we are responsible for. The Children's Services ministry went nearly $27 million over budget last year; Ministry of Education, $64 million; Gaming, $40 million; Health, $363 million over budget, just to name a few.

This budget certainly will pass this year, but I'm just wondering if we will be asked to rubber stamp another supplementary budget in the range of billions of dollars ahead. Excuse my perhaps ignorance in this matter, but, you know, it would seem more logical that we would budget more realistically before and avoid this requirement to add such massive supplementary injections of money.

On the revenue side the government has consistently underestimated its expected revenue. Albertans may be forgiven if they're sort of tuning out when the government trumpets each quarterly update because we're so used to this process by now, and we know that the resource revenues are underestimated. It's a bad habit that I would like to see broken.

Revenues are estimated at $27.3 billion, $4.3 billion more than the $23 billion from 2004 but still $1.5 billion less than the revenues estimated in the third-quarter update for 2004-2005. The government is still lowballing revenues but not as low as in previous years. Perhaps this is part of the encouraging trend that I had suggested in my introduction. Budget 2005 is based on $42 a barrel, and certainly we know that it will stay much higher than that.

Given the trend towards high energy prices, the Alberta health premium payment, I believe, is an issue that time has come to eliminate. Health care premiums hit the average family for $1,056 a year but pay less than $1 billion of the now nearly $9 billion health department tab. I would suggest that this is not only an unfair tax, but it's also an extremely inefficient tax that we could afford to rescind immediately here in Alberta.

Furthermore, school property taxes. While there will be a 5 per cent reduction in the mill rate, this will be more than offset by the growth in the assessment base. Therefore, school property tax revenues will increase, in fact, by at least 3 per cent. The government school property tax will increase to $1.45 billion, or 20 per cent above the $1.2 billion tax freeze promised in Budget 2001.

There are some concerns about this. I'm looking to make the most efficient use of our money but also provide the most efficient advantage to the majority of our working families here in Alberta. Both of these, the mill rate and the Alberta health care tax premium, I think would be a wonderful place to start to put money back into the pockets of working people here in this province in the most direct way.

In regard to the various ministries, just quickly. Advanced Education: my biggest concern is that there is a 40 per cent dropout rate for university students in this province. While this may not appear to be a budgeting issue at first glance, the high dropout rate does cost this province dearly. Every student that doesn't finish their education represents a loss of future potential in both economics and in overall developmental growth for this province. Furthermore, the taxpayers invest in students through public funding of their institutions. In every real way the province loses out on this investment. I think, quite frankly, that a 40 per cent dropout rate is unacceptable. We believe as the New Democrat caucus that a postsecondary learning commission is desperately needed in this province to address this dropout rate problem and other issues as well. I think that we are moving forward in a positive way towards advanced education, but we must look at this bottom line of a success rate as a primary indicator of how functional our advanced education system really is.

In regard to Agriculture, Food and Rural Development the budget trimmed $622 million from last year. That's mostly the BSE relief issue. You know, this crisis has not abated, yet we considered it a one-time disaster funding. Many farmers received very little money for relief in regard to BSE, or the amounts that they received were completely out of keeping with the losses that they sustained. This government's plans to solve this issue seem confusing at best. I think that many of our rural colleagues and I know that my own family in the rural area are finding this to be more than frustrating. In fact, it could lead to both financial and political crisis in this province.

Last week the Premier said that it might be two years before the border reopens to live cattle exports. You know, this doesn't mesh with other reports that we've been getting. There's confusion. Placing false hopes on what the Americans might do is not good public policy, Mr. Speaker. We need to solve this issue right here in Alberta. As many people here in this House like to say, a made-in-Alberta solution. Thank you very much.

In regard to Children's Services, the hon. Minister of Children's Services has told the House repeatedly that they're waiting on this federal government to get them back this transfer of funds to a national daycare program. Other provinces seem to be lining up for these funds already, but, you know, I'm just wondering what and where this money is for Alberta families. More to the point, the people who need this service now in this province are wondering and waiting for it as well.

As anybody who's brought up a family in this province knows, you need to have two income earners to make ends meet in this province, so this whole question of choice has been spurious at best as an argument. People can make the choice, yes, if they can afford to do so. I would respectfully suggest that most families do not have that capacity and have to have two family members working. I think it's our responsibility in conjunction with the federal government to put in a program that's affordable, reliable, and secure for all working families to look after our most precious resource, which is our children.

In regard to health, the health care symposiums that we have seen over the last few weeks – in fact, the one run by the provincial government here in Calgary was a pleasant surprise. It was nice to hear a mixed group of presenters and not just the privatization lobby. However, after the symposium the hon. minister said that there were no immediate plans to pursue more privatization in Alberta's health care system. That should be applauded, certainly, but it begs the question: what are the plans for the Alberta health care system in the future? What are we going to do not just next week but over the next 20 years? The people need to know. This uncertainty hanging over our heads in regard to our public health care system is not necessary. The public doesn't have to endure that. We deserve better.

We've been hearing for years about the government's intention to privatize and for the last four months this so-called third way, but Albertans are starting to question if there is even a plan at all. Given that the budget for the ministry of health is in the range of $9 billion, one could hope that the government has a plan how to spend those vast sums of money.

In regard to Sustainable Resource Development, I find that the ministry consistently underestimates the funds that are required to fight wildfires in this province. From 2003-2004 the ministry was almost 90 per cent over budget in fighting wildfires; 2004, 65 per cent over. The budget devotes $14.6 million to wildfire operations, while last year the actual cost was $185 million. I know that this is a difficult thing to predict. Certainly, fire seasons come and go with the relative dryness of the northern boreal forest, particularly, but I think that more prudent budgeting could be employed in regard to this because, you know, going from 90 per cent more than you might have budgeted for would suggest confusion as to what the realistic expectations and needs are for fighting wildfires here in this province.

In regard to the Solicitor General, the government claims that the budget is going to deliver 200 more police officers, a $6 million increase for municipal policing grants, with Edmonton and Calgary really getting nothing more and medium-sized communities down to 5,000 people getting the increases. We certainly applaud this change for the smaller centres around the province, but I think that most Edmontonians and Calgarians and other larger centres are perceiving an increase in crime. We don't have to go any further than our television sets and the newspapers to see the litany of quite outrageous criminal activity going on on our streets. I think that the people in Edmonton and Calgary certainly deserve an appropriate increase to their police budgets as well.

We know for a fact – and I know that our own Solicitor General understands – the importance and the effectiveness of community policing in our urban areas. Quite frankly, the only way to effectively have this community policing functioning is to have more police per capita than what we have now. It's simply impossible to get to know your neighbourhoods and to have people in each individual neighbourhood without increasing the bodies on the streets.

I'm very happy to have provided some outline and analysis of what our own New Democrat caucus feels about this budget. I can say that I've quite enjoyed the interaction that has gone along with this budget debate, and I expect better and bigger things for the future.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In any government fiscal responsibility and fiscal prudence require proper budgets that governments stick to. It is essential to be comprehensive about the priorities of government and not to govern on an ad hoc, day-by-day basis.

In rising to speak to the effect of this bill, I will first note that in its fiscal plan, in its budget, this government has essentially said that it has no comprehensive plan. This Progressive Conservative government has said that it will not be held to its own budget. The government has said that anything goes in a month or two. It will buy into anything if the government feels like it maybe is necessary then. This government has essentially said that it will govern, as usual, by the seat of its pants and as the whim of any particular day strikes it. That said, there remain many people areas that urgently do still require funding, and given this government's day-by-day attitude, it is incumbent on members of the opposition to continue to seek change, to seek proper funding for the disadvantaged and those who through no fault of their own cannot access the fruits of living in Alberta.

You know, I think it's important to look at the government's vision. If we look to some of the budget documents and look to Alberta in 2025 and see what the government would like to see then and how this budget and how the appropriations that we're looking at today will realize those things, I wonder. One of the first is: "Its people are free to realize their full potential, and personal choice is the only limit to opportunity." But so many things are, in reality, outside of the limits of choice for many, many individuals in Alberta. The prosperity is not there for everyone.

As I've said earlier, the problems of people on AISH looking for security in their retirement. It's not there in any way. The needs of our citizenry to have access and opportunity to learning to do teamwork, to many of the recreational opportunities that kids want to get into. Minor hockey is getting harder and harder for many families. I've been to many, many schools here in this short while I've been an MLA, and whenever I'm there, I ask them what's important to them. They say: my mom won't let me into hockey because she can't afford it. Well, there are places that families can go to, but often they're not able to.

I look at this budget, and I see nothing really that will address those needs, that will address those things that could help our problems with gang violence, that could help our problems with vandalism, that could help our problems with the idleness of hands of many of our youth, that I think is leading to great difficulties on our streets and also to the reality that these children just are not able to do those things that would keep them busy, to learn teamwork and, in fact, learn how to work better in the workplace.

An issue in the same group of vision statements is that the government would be "a responsible steward of the province's abundance of natural resources." I look to this budget, and I wonder if it's just to get as much as we can as quick as we can as opposed to really trying to steward these resources over the long term and to ensure that there is indeed a future for our children.

The next point: the issue of safety "in their homes, on their streets, at work, and in their communities." Safety in people's homes is so crucial to many of our seniors, yet they're having trouble being confident to go into the streets, especially with all the many acts of violence we're seeing. There is not, I think, a real sense in this budget to look to providing facilities for rehabilitating, for really giving the proper emphasis on doing this quickly and providing the proper amount of facilities for rehabilitating people on types of drugs like crystal meth and even other drugs that are very, very serious. The need to look to safety is crucial in our society if we are to move forward. People must feel safe in their homes if they're 10 or 12 or 15 or 60 or 70 or 80 or 90. Many people really don't feel that anymore in Alberta, and I think we have to look to stronger policing. That is not looked at in this budget. The policing budget seems to look to minimizing and still not bringing the level of the per capita numbers of police to at least – you know, it should be the highest in the country, I believe.

I think it's important. We have so many challenges in a booming economy, so many new people coming in, so much happening that we must and should have that proper funding for that incredibly important task in our society. In reality, by not doing so, we do put our officers and people in the police forces at a higher level of risk.

Another point: "The economic fundamentals of the province are strong, and the tax system is designed to promote individual entrepreneurship and the transformation to a knowledge-based economy." There have been some moves, certainly, in this, but I wonder if, really, we seem to be moving more to a branch plant economy, to an economy that's willing to be exploited in its resources, bringing in people from lands unbeknownst for temporary periods of time and taking the true fruit of our land quickly away in the form of temporary foreign workers. Many, many people in this province have expressed to me . . .

Mr. MacDonald: How many of these temporary foreign workers are we talking about?

Mr. Backs: I know of over a thousand in Fort McMurray alone from two companies only, and there are many, many others that many people are looking to bring in.

We've seen, of course, some of this division 8 application, and there's an agreement I've seen for a so-called union which has numerous provisions in it to bring in temporary foreign workers. I really, really am surprised and even disgusted at that, Mr. Speaker. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, through the chair, please.

Mr. Backs: The need to deal with investment in our economy, the need to deal with venture capital, the need to deal with R and D I don't think is in any way adequately dealt with in this budget. For many, many years other provinces in this land have looked at providing venture capital through labour-sponsored venture capital funds, and for some reason this government is afraid to provide a tax break and provide venture capital in a way that works so well.

I was speaking the other day with an investor who had a very, very successful product. He's a product developer. He came out of Alberta, came out of Edmonton. He had to go outside of Alberta, outside of this province to find investors, and because of that, he had to site his production outside of this province.

We seem to be looking all the time to just working on energy production and doing everything we can to suck up to the great, huge companies in agriculture, for example, like Tyson and Cargill and other of the huge investor outfits while not really dealing with the important priorities of Albertans to ensure that there is something in the future for our Alberta and our Alberta children and grandchildren, for all that will follow.

The leading in learning. You know, I again see the lowest R and D of any province, and I find that incredible in a province with so many resources and such an ability to probably have the freest budgeting process in the land.

These are a number of, I think, important issues to look at in this budget. I mean, there are many, many, many specifics that I find very difficult. You know, some of the things in education where we're looking actually – in our greatest arts high school in Edmonton, indeed in northern Alberta, Victoria comp, not restoring the promises of this government to actually expand that facility that has been in place for a number of years. We spoke at length in this House, for a whole night, about increasing the hours of instruction for fine arts, yet we're not looking to improve this incredibly excellent facility in Edmonton. That's not in the budget.

The responsible stewarding of our environment. You know, when I look to places like our pristine eastern slopes, we see that, for example, near Rocky Mountain House you have a worse air quality than in downtown Vancouver because of flaring and not dealing with that issue. We have some problems here that really, really must be dealt with in Alberta and are not dealt with by this budget.

I think, though, clearly one of the great problems is that this is not a budget; it's just a snapshot of a particular place and time. We will not have a comprehensive plan until this government says that it will some time in the future ensure that it will not be dealing with most of its spending through supplementaries and whatever on an ad hoc basis, on a day-to-day basis, and to truly plan so that there can be fiscal prudence and fiscal responsibility by putting everything on the table.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to get an opportunity to participate in the debate this afternoon on Bill 41, the Appropriation Act, 2005. We have been basically going through the budget process for this entire session. We now have our 2005-06 budget ready to go, and it has been quite a process, to say the least. I appreciate the time to get to discuss the budget even further because the whole process, in my view, is inadequate.

I am surprised. Regardless of which department we look at, the amounts we are voting are staggering. They're huge. Yet we spend so little time examining these expenditures, and in reality this budget is so large that I think we should spend considerable time. Even before the budget comes to the House, there should be a form of all-party committees to examine these budgets department by department.

Last night we had one of the first steps – mind you, it was a baby step, but it was a very good step – in British Columbia toward significant legislative reform, and I would like to think that this province is also going to initiate some electoral reforms. I'm sure the hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View would share my views on parliamentary reform. I don't think change is necessarily a bad thing. I think we need to look at changing our budget process here.

I look at Bill 41, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, we start with the Legislative Assembly, and we look at the total budget of over $70 million for the Legislative Assembly Office and the support to the Legislative Assembly. I'm curious. What are the plans, if any, for the Legislative Assembly grounds in this budget? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, the Leader of the Official Opposition, was compelled to ask a question in the Assembly the other day in regard to these initiatives. What exactly are the redevelopment plans, if any, for this Legislative Assembly and the grounds? Is it included in this $70 million figure?

I think it's a very important gesture towards this city by the government. There are those that say that this city has been neglected by this government, and I would certainly agree with them on certain matters that they present. This centennial year would be an ideal time for the government to make a commitment to the capital city. What is in this budget for the Legislature Grounds? I would be very curious to know.

Now, when we look at Bill 41 and we go through it department by department, certainly education comes to mind, and public education. We see the amounts here of $2.7 billion, and we've got another nonbudgetary disbursement of $1 million. But we look at the size of the budget, we look at the size of government, even the RAGE minister, the increase in the size of government – and it was noted in this Assembly that the SuperNet was being hooked up to schools that were on the hit list to be closed.

Now, hon. members are going to wonder: well, what's he talking about, the hit list? Well, on October 14, 2004, the ministry of learning and the ministry of infrastructure sent a letter to the Edmonton public school board, and stated: you have a lot of unutilized space; you have to get rid of it; you have to close schools before we're going to give you any construction dollars to build new schools. I think that is just bad public policy. These community schools have been an investment by previous governments.

When we look at these schools and the importance they are to their respective communities, we've got to look at it this way. The parents in those respective communities where the forced closures are occurring felt strong enough about their community schools that they were willing to take the Edmonton public school board to court. It's unusual for parents in the public school system to take the board officials to court, but this occurred. The parents are very passionate about seeing that their schools continue to operate.

Now, when we look at this massive budget and the money that we're spending in education and the amount that we would save by closing these schools, it doesn't make sense. It doesn't make sense that we are hooking them up to the SuperNet unless we have some sort of other motive, if there is a tenant-in-waiting that's going to find that SuperNet connection already installed and already paid for to their financial advantage.

When a school board is forced by this government to implement this closure process – and they implemented the closure process, I must say, in a great hurry, to the point where they forgot to talk about some of the latest changes that this government made to the school closures regulation. In fact, 4(2)(b.1) of the school closure regulation indicates that the long-term capital plan of the respective school division must be made available to the parents when there is a notice of a meeting to close a school. That, in my view, certainly was not done by the school board.

When we look at the money that the school board is spending to close these schools and the money that is estimated to be saved – it's in the range of $90,000 for one school and $140,000 for another school – it's not that much money that we are saving. Mr. Speaker, when we're looking at Bill 41 and we're going through this bill line by line and we see the money that is being spent, perhaps we can spare those community schools.

Perhaps we should look at less money being spent, for instance, on the horse-racing renewal. Maybe we should really put children and community schools first. We could spend a lot less on travel and on communications and spend more on schools.

Now, there are those that say to me at the Capilano Mall, at the coffee shop: "What is this government doing? Where is their vision? They're so anxious to force the closure of public schools, yet they want to open more casinos. They want to facilitate more liquor stores that are open until midnight. Why are we so anxious to close schools, yet we seem to be so anxious to open more casinos?" It just doesn't make sense. It doesn't make sense to this hon. member, Mr. Speaker, and it doesn't make sense to people at the Capilano coffee shop. They're scratching their heads on this one.

I think we can afford to invest in schools in other parts of the city, in other parts of the province without having to sacrifice central Edmonton neighbourhoods and their schools that were a public investment sometimes as much as a half a century ago. I don't think, again, it is good public policy. I think we have the money for this.

Certainly, in the past in other school districts this government has seen fit to invest millions of dollars in funding for schools that have very low enrolments, and there is a very small number of schools in a selected area. Going back six years, the government has made this commitment to other districts, so I'm asking now: why can't they do it for the city of Edmonton? Why can't they do it for central Edmonton neighbourhoods? We don't want to have this doughnut effect for the city, where there are no children in the centre of the city because there are not enough schools.

Now, getting to another point about the importance of schools, I had the opportunity of having a quick look at the children's advocate report, the one that was late in coming. I was surprised that that annual report was so long in the making before it got to this Assembly, but I did notice in there that there were many children who rely on community schools, smaller schools, because it's the only stability they have in their lives. That is why it is so important to have small community schools. I thought that was very interesting. How interesting is that? While this government is forcing the closure of public schools within this city, those children, some of whom are in need, rely on that school, that small school, to deliver specific programs for them because it's the only stable factor in their lives.

I'm disappointed that we are contemplating closing even more public schools. The dropout rate among those children is significant. I was disappointed again, and I'm disappointed to say that in the city of Edmonton and the Edmonton public school district if we average three years, the completion rate for high school is 57 per cent.

Now, when we look at that high dropout rate . . . [interjection] Hon. Minister of Advanced Education, I'm sorry?

Mr. Hancock: It's trending up rapidly. There have been significant improvements.

Mr. MacDonald: There's a lot of work to be done there. If it is trending up rapidly, I'm very pleased to hear that, but the statistics at the moment don't back that up.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when we look at the high dropout rate and we look at the high utilization rate of our city of Edmonton high schools, some of whom have utilization rates well in excess of a hundred per cent, that tells me there are high school students who are falling through the cracks. With the closure of some elementary and junior highs we're now looking at similar utilization rates in some junior highs across the city. I'm afraid that for some junior high students, because of the lack of attention and the overcrowded classrooms and the huge student bodies, in some cases 400 students, in some cases 500 students, in some cases 600 students, these schools are too big. Some students who need individual help will not get it, and as a result they will become alienated and they will quit school, and then we will run into a lot more problems. I would ask the hon. members across the way to have a good look at the children's advocate report and think about the consequences of larger junior highs. I don't think, again, it is good public policy.

Now, when we look at the education budget here and we look at the money that is proposed to be spent here in Bill 41, Mr. Speaker, we have to look at some of the funding that is supposedly coming from Infrastructure for the Victoria school project, as it's called, the Victoria school of arts. I don't know what the government's policy is on this, but I'm told Strathearn school can't have a K through 9 because we don't want any more of these schools. We can't have a combination of an elementary and a junior high, but it seems to fit the model at Victoria school.

I'm sorry; I've run out of time. I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Notice of Privilege

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to give notice of a possible question of privilege. Under Standing Order 15(5) on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford I'd like to be able to advise the House of the possibility that I would bring forward the privilege motion on the next regular sitting day of this Assembly.

There needs to be additional information sought and additional research done, but at this point I can advise the Speaker that this is being considered because of an altercation that took place immediately outside of the Assembly between the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar and the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. Although it is outside of the Chamber, I believe that there are sufficient citations to address a matter that takes place within the precincts of the Assembly and under the purview and control of the Speaker, particularly where the action which occurred involves a physical assault or molestation.

So, with those words, I will hope that that acts as sufficient notice, and when I have been able to do sufficient research to be confident that I would not be abusing the time of the Assembly, as I say, I've given notice and that allows me to bring forward the point of privilege motion on the next regular sitting day of the Assembly. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has given notice that she will bring forward a motion of privilege. As you know, the next sitting that we will have will not be a regular one. That will be the one at which the Queen will visit the Assembly. So probably this matter may not be dealt with until the fall when we reconvene. So it shall be dealt with at that point in time. Thank you.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Debate Continued

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand and discuss briefly some of the issues raised by the Appropriation Act, 2005, and like the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark want to both commend and encourage some reformation of the budgeting discussions and process and encourage more open disclosure of the facts relating to each budget from each department so that it's more constructive discussion, more constructive debate. It's clear that the role of government is to provide a budget that honestly reflects their commitment to the people of Alberta in how they will distribute and invest in the resources and people of the province. I, too, would like to see a more in-depth capacity to do this, less adversarial and more honest, working together for the benefit of all. So I wasn't entirely satisfied with the process, and I, too, would like to see some reform there.

I wanted to talk briefly, then, about some of the issues relating to what we mean by developing the province and how this budget reflects our commitment to sustainable development and the policy that has been explicated in the government on sustainable development, which fundamentally means using nonrenewable and renewable resources without compromising the future. Those are great words, but what we need to see, in my estimation, and reflected in the budget is a stronger commitment to the future and to the capacity to measure what it is we have in order to decide how much we use each year and allow some confidence for all of us that there will be resources there for our children and, indeed, seven generations, as the First Nations have challenged us to think about.

Without that vision and without the measurements of what we are dealing with, I don't see the commitment to sustainability translated into a meaningful plan for the future. So it strikes me that with this commitment the government has made, each department needs to look at what sustainable development might look like in the context particularly of our resources, both renewable and nonrenewable, but also as that would relate to the human services and the protection of the environment.

The Alberta advantage is for many Albertans increasingly becoming an Alberta liability, both economically and environmentally, and there is an increasing call that I'm hearing for a reflection of these concerns about our future and the way we are measuring our capacity to continue with a growing population and depleting resources, how we are going to guarantee that our children will have some quality of life and some capacity to continue to work and play and to recreate in our communities.

We need them to do at least three things to move this budget and planning to a different level. We need, one, to establish the value of natural capital as it exists without developing it and perhaps postponing development to a certain point of time so that we're actually looking into the future and not only looking at what the market is driving us to do today. The second thing it seems to me that we need to do to think about more sustainable development is to measure the inventory we have so that we know how much we can afford to develop in a given year. The third thing is to take the proper role in setting limits on growth, which is the fundamental trust given to us by the people of Alberta. I would add a fourth, that the public needs to be more actively involved in that planning and that decision-making in order to in an ongoing way reflect the interests of the public and to indeed stimulate, encourage, and revitalize the democracy that we say we believe in here.

All the bills, committees, policies, and regulations will not be translated into genuine progress – that is, healthy people, a good quality of life, social cohesion, and vital democracy – if we do not include these parameters in our planning and in our budgeting.

In relation to the Environment budget, then, it was disturbing for me and disappointing for many Albertans that we remain at less than 0.5 per cent of the budget for something as vital as environmental protection. For many of us there is a need for recommitting ourselves to environmental protection and redressing the drastic reductions that occurred in our capacity to monitor and enforce our good environmental laws with more staff since the early '90s, when approximately 25 per cent of the staff in Alberta Environment were cut.

Water protection is clearly a vital interest to all Albertans, and fair allocation of water is an increasing concern across the province, particularly in southern Alberta. Water for Life is a tremendous vision, but without adequate resources allocated in the budget, it's impossible to think that this will become a reality in the very near future, which is needed. We're estimating that more like $100 million, almost the entire Alberta Environment budget, would be needed to adequately implement the Water for Life strategy for the next three years.

Deregulation in this province and self-monitoring by industry have also raised levels of anxiety, and the public interest is not necessarily being served for many in these approvals and decommissioning and remediation of particularly oil and gas sites. There is increasing anxiety that we're not capable of monitoring and certifying that these sites are properly decommissioned and remediated, especially with the fivefold increase in this activity in the last decade and without commensurate staffing increases.

We also need to develop the capacity to measure cumulative impacts. New measures are needed for that. It's clear that we need to invest in both some of the science and some of the staffing that would be needed to look at the tremendous demands that are now on the landscape, not only oil and gas but forestry, agriculture, and other industries. How are they all going to fit together, and how do they link with the plan for that particular region?

People have to have some input into how their region is being developed. It cannot simply be determined by industry and the free market and expect that Albertans will be happy with development as it goes in that direction. People have to have a more meaningful involvement in how their region is being developed, and that, again, reflects back on how well we contribute to a stronger democracy and how well we actually plan for the values that Albertans have articulated as in their interest.

I just want to say before closing a few more comments about energy as it reflects so strongly in this province on our priorities, what our income will be, and what our future environmental and social costs might look like. It's not clear how we will meet the needs of Albertans with declining royalties from conventional oil and gas. As we look to the oil sands to sustain our fossil fuel dependency in Alberta, Albertans are anxious to know whether they're receiving a fair return for their resource, and I think, rightly, that this needs to be addressed clearly and publicly. For example, how long can industry postpone full royalty payments in the oil sands in terms of capital cost recovery? Secondly, should the royalties relate in some way to the price of oil? Since the agreements on royalties were set almost a decade ago, how do they relate now to $55 U.S. a barrel of oil, and are they fairly representing what Albertans deserve?

The Energy and Utilities Board is the gatekeeper for approval, monitoring, and enforcement, and it has essentially lost public confidence. The Energy and Utilities Board does not appear to be serving the public interest, and there's increasing anxiety in the stakeholders that I talk to and the public in many jurisdictions in Alberta, that is going to be expressed in increasing contention and conflict.

I would hope that the budget would reflect a greater commitment to communicating with the public and including the public in some of the decision-making. I've indicated three areas where I think this would be important: one, a vision and a plan for the different regions of the province; that is, priority zoning needs to happen which would identify one or more compatible industries that could be conceived in that area. Number two, substantial public involvement has to be involved in this process. Number three, the capacity to address cumulative impacts of the various activities existing and planned is essential.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will thank you for the opportunity to discuss this vital matter that needs also to be reassessed in terms of how we deal with these issues next year. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 41 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Acting Government House Leader.

Mr. Dunford: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government House Leader I'd like to move to adjourn pursuant to Government Motion 16, agreed to on April 6, 2005.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to Government Motion 16, agreed to on April 6, 2005, the House stands adjourned until Tuesday, May 24, at noon. Members are expected to be seated in this Assembly before that.

I would also like to take this opportunity to wish each and every one of you a very safe long weekend.

[Pursuant to Government Motion 16 the Assembly adjourned at 4:21 p.m. to Tuesday, May 24, at 12 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

12:15 p.m.

Date: 05/05/24

[The Mace was draped]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Ladies and gentlemen, all rise, please.
Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada.

[A fanfare sounded]

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and the Speaker entered the Chamber. Her Majesty took Her place upon the throne]

The Speaker: I would now invite Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us in the singing of the Royal Anthem, God Save The Queen.

Hon. Members and Guests:

God save our gracious Queen, long live our noble Queen,
God save The Queen!
Send Her victorious,
happy and glorious,
long to reign over us:
God save The Queen!

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Your Majesty, it is an honour on behalf of all Members of Alberta's Legislative Assembly to welcome You to this Chamber.

The men and women who sit in this parliament and all who have served remain earnest in their desire to express their loyalty and devotion to the people of this great province, their beloved country, and to their Queen.

Alberta is a land of peace. Freedom, tolerance, prosperity, and unbounded opportunity are words that reflect much of our history.

We are fortunate in God's grace to have been blessed with a beautiful landscape, with abundant natural resources, and with a population drawn from all corners of the globe. Our citizens have created a province known for its vision, its energy, and its spirit.

Our public policies, the laws of Alberta, have been the product of passion, fairness, reason, and debate.

Our Assembly is and has always been in a partnership with the Crown. Safeguarding the rights of all of our citizens, Your Majesty's representatives, our Lieutenant Governors, have well reflected the values that have been the personal hallmarks of Your reign: devotion to duty, an abiding concern for all, courage, stability, a sense of continuity, and above all grace and dignity.

It is with humility and pride that we welcome Your Majesty.

It's now my honour to invite the Premier of Alberta, the Hon. Ralph Klein, to address Your Majesty and all here present.

Mr. Klein: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Your Majesty, members of the Royal household, hon. members of the judiciary, former Lieutenant Governor, former Premiers, Mr. Speaker, hon. ministers, Leader of the Official Opposition, Members of the Legislative Assembly, and distinguished guests all:

On behalf of the government of Alberta it is my very great privilege to welcome Her Majesty the Queen to the Legislative Assembly of Alberta.

Albertans have long looked forward to this Royal visit as a highlight of our province's centennial celebrations. Her Majesty's presence during this special year is an honour graciously bestowed upon all people of this province, one that is deeply felt and appreciated by all Albertans. It is truly a centennial gift to be treasured.

Albertans take great pride in this country's ties to the monarchy and its membership in the Commonwealth and all it stands for. This is as true for the young Albertans who are preparing to continue the work of building this province as it is for those who began that great work 100 years ago.

Today students from Granum school – and Her Majesty had the opportunity of meeting them – and from St. Matthew Lutheran school, which are also celebrating their centennials this year, are here to greet the Queen and to hear Her address to the Legislative Assembly. It will be the first time ever that a reigning monarch has addressed this Legislature, and it gives me great joy that some of Alberta's young people, who represent the very best of this province, will have the opportunity to hear Her Majesty's inspiring message.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Your Majesty, it's my great honour to invite You to address our Assembly.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II Address to the Legislative Assembly

Her Majesty the Queen: Mr. Speaker, Premier, ladies and gentlemen, Prince Philip and I are very pleased to be back in Alberta in this centennial year as you celebrate not only your historic past but also the dynamism of your community today as well as the great opportunities that lie ahead.

When looking back on the story of Alberta, we see it extend well before 1905. It is, indeed, the story of Canada. Your First Nations peoples inhabited the prairies over 10,000 years ago, living in harmony with nature then as they do now. By the 1800s these first citizens along with the Métis were joined by explorers, homesteaders, and railway workers from all over the world. They had a dream: to build homes in a land where freedom reigned. They created a spirit of belonging to a bountiful country under the principles of peace, order, and good government and the unifying influence of the Crown. It is a fitting homage to these ancestors that your motto is Fortis et Liber, strong and free.

Je suis heureuse d'apprendre que le gouvernement de la province souligne cette année charnière en instituant un programme du centenaire laissé en héritage. Il investit dans les parcs, les lieux historiques et les installations récréatives de l'Alberta. Ces projets prometteurs illustrent l'importance que les Albertains accordent à une excellente qualité de vie, aux perspectives économiques encourageantes et aux réussites dans les domaines de l'agriculture, de l'énergie et de l'industrie. Il témoigne aussi de votre gratitude envers les générations d'aînés et d'ancêtres, dont le travail acharné a permis d'édifier l'Alberta d'aujourd'hui.

Among the early settlers who came here so many decades ago to build a new life, there were thousands of families with children who were themselves destined to become the nation builders of the future. Today I'm speaking on air across the province, including schools in communities from Lethbridge to Fort Vermilion, from Wainwright to Grande Cache.

Just half an hour ago at the Provincial Museum, now called the Royal Alberta Museum, I enjoyed the opportunity to meet some of the young people of Alberta who were touring that showcase of living heritage. I hope that all young people in the province will take the opportunity of the centennial to learn of the way in which their own communities have flourished over the last hundred years.

Alors que les Albertains et tous les Canadiens voient leur histoire comme un récit coloré du passé, nous estimons qu'elle est aussi le fondement du présent et de l'avenir. Au cours de cette visite, puisque nous rendons hommage au dynamisme de ceux qui ont bâti ce grand pays, il convient de se rappeler que nous pouvons effectivement faire une différence pour ceux qui viendront après nous. Si nous nous efforçons dans notre vie et à notre manière d'améliorer le monde qui nous entoure, alors nous pourrions à bon droit être fière de notre contribution.

During a previous visit 32 years ago I said: "I want the Crown in Canada to represent everything that is best and most admired in the Canadian ideal. I will continue to do my best to make it so during my lifetime, and I hope you will all continue to give me your help in this task." I would like to repeat those words today as together we continue to build a country that remains the envy of the world.

May God bless you on this happy hundredth birthday, and I send to you all my warmest good wishes for the years to come.

The Speaker: Your Majesty, through Your actions and through Your words Your Majesty has conferred a signal recognition on Alberta's Legislative Assembly. Since 1905 its members have sought to serve their sovereign, this province, and the dominion of Canada faithfully and well. We face our future ever mindful of our heritage and our history and especially of our duty to future generations as yet unborn. We thank You for Your belief in us as a people.

God bless Alberta.

God bless Canada.

God save the Queen. [applause]

Hon. members, ladies and gentlemen, if we could all rise now and join in the singing of our national anthem. We'll be led by Mr. Paul Lorieau. Please feel free to participate in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members and Guests:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
Car ton bras sait porter l'épée,
Il sait porter la croix!
Ton histoire est une épopée
Des plus brillants exploits.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

[The Mace was uncovered]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Government Motion 7, agreed to on March 7, 2005, I move that the House stand adjourned.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to Government Motion 7, agreed to on March 7, 2005, the House stands adjourned.

I'd like to take this opportunity to wish all of you a very pleasant and wonderful summer, and when you're driving our freeways or our fairways, drive carefully.

[Pursuant to Government Motion 7 the Assembly adjourned at 12:31 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 15, 2005 1:30 p.m.
 Date: 05/11/15
 [The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. I'd ask the members to remain standing after prayers so that we may pay tribute to our former colleagues who have passed away since we were last in the House.

As we commence proceedings today in this Assembly, we ask for divine guidance so that our words and deeds may bring to all people of this great province hope, prosperity, and a vision for the future. Amen.

With our admiration and respect there is gratitude to members of their families who shared the burdens of public office. Members of John Batiuk's and Sheila Embury's family are with us today in the Speaker's gallery.

Mr. George Ho Lem
June 15, 1918, to July 9, 2005

The Speaker: Mr. George Ho Lem passed away on July 9, 2005. Mr. Ho Lem was first elected in the election held August 30, 1971, and served until March 26, 1975. During his years of service he represented the constituency of Calgary-McCall for the Social Credit Party. During his term of office Mr. Ho Lem served on the select standing committees on Law and Regulations; Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing; and Public Affairs. He also served on the Select Special Committee on Foreign Investment.

March 20, 1923, to August 1, 2005

The Speaker: Mr. John S. Batiuk passed away on August 1, 2005. Mr. Batiuk was first elected in the election held August 30, 1971, and served until May 8, 1986. During his years of service he represented the constituency of Vegreville for the Progressive Conservative Party. During his term of office Mr. Batiuk served on the select standing committees on Law and Regulations; Private Bills; Public Accounts; Public Affairs; and the Select Special Committee on Chief Electoral Officer Appointment or Search.

Mrs. Sheila Embury
June 6, 1931, to August 1, 2005

The Speaker: Mrs. Sheila Embury passed away on August 1, 2005, at the age of 74 years. Mrs. Embury was first elected in the election held March 14, 1979, and served until May 8, 1986. During her years of service she represented the constituency of Calgary-North West for the Progressive Conservative Party. During her term of office Mrs. Embury served on the select standing committees on Members' Services; Private Bills; Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing; Public Accounts; and Public Affairs. She also served on the Select Special Committee to Examine the Role of Upper House in Canadian Federal System.

Our prayers are with them.

In a moment of silent prayer I ask you to remember hon. members George Ho Lem, John Batiuk, and Sheila Embury as you have known them. Rest eternal grant unto them, O Lord, and let light perpetual shine upon them. Amen.

Hon. members I would now invite Mr. Lorieau to lead us in the singing of our national anthem. Please participate in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
 True patriot love in all thy sons command.
 With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
 The True North strong and free!
 From far and wide, O Canada,
 We stand on guard for thee.
 God keep our land glorious and free!
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Statement by the Speaker
Sound System Renovations

The Speaker: Hon. members, many of you will have already noted that your desk console is different from when we last sat in the Chamber in the spring. Upgrading of the Chamber sound system has resulted in changes to the console which will facilitate both better sound production in the Chamber and the use of member laptops. You will find on your desks a brief description for the purpose of the varied aspects of the new console.

Experience tells me that during the first week when a new sound system comes into play, minor adjustments may be necessitated or required concerning the operation of the system at its optimum level, so if there are momentary lapses in the next number of days, please bear with us as we work out the bugs. If you have any concerns at all with respect to the system, please advise the Sergeant-at-Arms as we proceed during the Routine.

head: Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: Hon. members, it's an honour for me to rise today to introduce to you guests who are seated in the Speaker's gallery. These guests are family members of our former colleagues, and I would ask them to rise as I introduce them. The family of Mr. John Batiuk, former MLA for the constituency of Vegreville, is represented by John's widow, Mrs. Rose Batiuk, who is here with her daughters Mrs. Marlene Solowan and Mrs. Eleanor Cowan and Mrs. Sylvia Zacharkiw and son-in-law Mr. Harold Zacharkiw and John's brother Mr. Ed Batiuk.

Mr. David Embury, widower of Mrs. Sheila Embury, former MLA for the constituency of Calgary-North West, is here with family friend and former MLA the hon. Tom Chambers.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce two very active representatives of postsecondary students in our province. Ms Elaine Ho is the provincial director of the Alberta College and Technical Institute Students' Executive Council, ACTISEC, and Mr. Duncan Wojtaszek is executive director of the Council of Alberta University Students, CAUS. Both of these individuals have played an integral role in the recent review of our province's advanced learning system. They represented their associations at regional meetings and at the A Learning Alberta minister's forum, which was held earlier this month. Their perspective and input has been invaluable as we develop a new vision and overarching policy framework for advancing learning in this province.

The government has always welcomed feedback from student groups and will continue to do so. I look forward to working with them in the near future so that we can create a system which is even more accessible, affordable, and high quality for Alberta learners in the 21st century. Mr. Speaker, I thank Duncan and Elaine for joining us today, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two guests who are involved in programs dedicated to the prevention of family violence. My guests are seated in the members' gallery this afternoon, and it's my honour to introduce Sister Lucinda May Patterson, the executive director of Lurana Shelter, and Deb Thomlinson, provincial co-ordinator of the Alberta Association of Sexual Assault Centres. Both of these women work tirelessly to give victims of family violence the support and help they need at a difficult time. I would ask Sister Lucinda and Deb to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to introduce to you and to members of the Assembly some special visitors from Qingdao, a city in China. Qingdao is situated on the eastern coast of China about 600 kilometres south of Harbin, which of course many of us are familiar with. They're here to look at waste-water treatment, how to generate energy from that and also to produce clean water. I would ask them to rise as I introduce them: Zhong Wei, the director of the Qingdao municipal overseas investment bureau; Guobang Li, the general manager, Qingdao e-tech development zone; Hong Kun Chu, project manager, Qingdao municipal overseas investment bureau; their translator; and they're hosted by Ken Weenink and Brian Grossen. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you a very special constituent of mine. He holds many titles, and he's been introduced here several times, but currently he is the mayor of Breton, the president of ASCHA, and the vice-president of AUMA. I'd ask that Darren Aldous would stand along with his daughters and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of sets of introductions today. The first is to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Bill and Margaret Kurtze, who I believe are seated in the public gallery, and they've travelled from Calgary to be with us today. Bill was originally born and bred in Saskatchewan but moved to Calgary in 1970. It was there that he and his wife, Margaret, raised three daughters. Bill worked for most of his life in the petroleum industry, on the nonprofit and regulatory side, and through his work he took a particular interest in safety regulations for sour gas wells. Bill and Margaret, a retired school-teacher, are looking for a government that realizes the need for greater community development and support. Please join me in giving our guests the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

My other introductions, Mr. Speaker, are of new staff who have joined us since the last time this Assembly sat. I'd like to introduce to you our new chief of staff, Jacqueline Foord, who has a long career in executive administration in the nonprofit sector; Mr. Chris McLeod, our director of communications, who's got many years of experience as a communications professional; and one of our new researchers, Paul Way. Would they please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly fabulous students from Lago Lindo school up in the north side. They are accompanied by teachers Mr. Peters, Miss Goodall, principal John Eshenko, and parent volunteers Mrs. Salha El Hakim, Ms Mullet, Mr. Lapierre, Mrs. Rodrigues, and Mrs. Bye. If they would please stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly Mrs. Sandi James, a grade 6 teacher from one of Edmonton's finest public schools, Clara Tyner, located in the Edmonton-Gold Bar constituency. Mrs. James is accompanied by 26 of her grade 6 students not only today, but they're here in the Legislative Assembly for the entire week to participate in that very good program that the Speaker has developed over the years for public school students. Mrs. James is accompanied by Mrs. Carmen Koble, Mr. Robert Proudfoot, and Mrs. Damaris Crawford. They have taken time from their busy schedules to participate today with the students. It is interesting to note that yesterday, in order to recognize Alberta's centennial, the students and their teacher dressed up as students and teacher from 1905 in period costumes. They are in the members' gallery, and I would now ask them to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a honour to introduce to you and through you two individuals. The first is Stewart Mawdsley. Stewart is currently enrolled at the U of A, pursuing a degree in pharmacy. He is an academic all-Canadian, maintaining a 3.9 GPA as well as competing as a decathlete for the Alberta Golden Bears.

The second person, Mr. Speaker, is well known to all of us. His name is Kyle Franz. Kyle has recently returned to Alberta after graduating with first-class honours from Simon Fraser University to complete his graduate research in labour history at the University of Lethbridge. Some day Kyle is going to be known for his research work in the mining communities in the Crownsnest Pass, but to all of us he is known as a former president of the PC Youth.

I would ask both of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Darlene Friesen. Darlene previously worked in the field of accounting but has since retired. She is advocating for a fair society where seniors receive the benefits and recognition for their worthy contributions. I'd ask that she rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I have a second introduction. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Bertha Nohr. Bertha is a long-time constituent of Glenora who is also part of the newly formed group called Election Oriented Seniors. Bertha has worked as a deputy returning officer in a number of federal, provincial, and municipal elections but has recently decided to retire from this work to allow the next generation the opportunity to be involved in our electoral system. I ask that she rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Mason: I'm pleased this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Mr. Albert Opstad. Albert has been a tireless advocate for seniors' equality for a number of years. His involvement includes being the first president of Seniors United Now, playing an active role with the Canadian Association of Retired Persons, and forming the group Election Oriented Seniors. This morning his group met with my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. I would ask that he now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Ms Diane Zinyk, who is seated in the public gallery. Diane has been a strong supporter of mine since I first ran in 1997. In the past Diane has worked for HRDC and then subsequently for Alberta Human Resources and Employment. Diane has also been very active with a number of community organizations, including Catholic Social Services, Strathcona Baptist Church, and many arts organizations across the city. I would now ask that Diane rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: 1:50 Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Budget Surplus Expenditures

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta needs a government that makes a budget and sticks to it. If spending on a project is justified, it should be in the budget. To the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: can this minister tell us how far over budget his department is so far this year?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It certainly is an honour to take the first question. My department is absolutely right on budget. We have received another $400 million since the budget was passed, and I want to guarantee that those dollars are being spent in the absolute best interests of Albertans for Albertans' future.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Fiscal hawks turning into fiscal turkeys. My next question to the Minister of Advanced Education: can the minister tell us how much in unbudgeted spending his department has committed so far this year?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question really is not one of how much in unbudgeted spending but how, because of the physical realities of the province and the good management in the province, we've been able to take additional revenues and apply them to the planned strategies and the planned projects that were already in place.

We've been able to announce projects across the province such as the water building at the University of Lethbridge, which is an integral piece of the water strategy for the province. We've been able to announce money for planning at SAIT so that we can renew the platform at SAIT to train and accredit workers in this province that are sorely needed to keep our economy alive. We've been able to announce money at the University of Alberta for the ambulatory learning centre. There have been a number of projects: at Red Deer for an expansion to their trade centre and at Lakeland College. These are all projects that have been in the strategic plan that each of these institutions has put forward in their 10-year plans, and because of the fiscal realities in the province we're able to allocate the resources to do it.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, that minister doesn't have a clue either.

To the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations: can this minister tell the Assembly if his department is on target to finish the year on budget?

Mr. Stelmach: Yes, we are. We completed the opening of the Washington office. We're currently working feverishly with the federal government on a number of initiatives. One of them is the world trade talks, trying to build consensus across Canada. The second task is to find some common ground with respect to the softwood lumber dispute. That's just part and parcel of what we're doing on behalf of Albertans.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let's be brutally honest. This government's budget is barely six months old and has already been blown to smithereens. The government seems to have abandoned all pretense of control of the public purse. It feels like there are more holes in the budget than in a mad cow's brain. To the Premier: does the Premier accept the principle that if an expenditure is well thought out and properly justified, it should be in the budget?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I'm not a leadership candidate, but I'll be glad to answer the question. If the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition was listening during the budget speech, he would've heard these words delivered by our Provincial Treasurer.

It's the responsible course to take. And yes, it means there will be years when resource revenues are higher than expected. That is the nature of oil and gas revenue. When that happens, there are choices we can make about how surplus funds can be used, strategically and deliberately, to invest in Alberta's future.

Obviously, that member was not listening.

We could increase the Sustainability Fund, add to our current endowment funds, or increase funding for capital to meet emerging needs for infrastructure. All of these choices are possible because of our strong financial position. And they will be made throughout the year . . .

They will be made throughout the year.

. . . as our financial forecasts are updated.

Dr. Taft: To the Minister of Health and Wellness: can this minister tell us, say to the nearest million dollars, the total unbudgeted spending she has announced so far this fiscal year?

Ms Evans: Well, yes. Mr. Speaker, the first thing is that I'm not a leadership candidate, and I'll make that very clear.

I would identify that this government announced $1.4 billion worth of health expenditures. For those expenditures that were identified last year in June and again in October, that would give, in fact, the city of Edmonton, the capital region, some $647 million worth of needed bed reclamation on four sites and would also provide us with some support for Eastwood and Fort Saskatchewan and Strathcona county. So, in fact, we have followed through on commitments we made last year, planning that was done last year, and I think Albertans welcome that. Mr. Speaker, there would be none of my constituents in the entire capital region that would say that this is a bad idea.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. If they're such good ideas, why weren't they in the budget that was presented here a mere six months ago? Why is your budget process so full of holes?

Ms Evans: Was that for me?

Dr. Taft: Yes, to the same minister.

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, if we're going to talk about the budget process, maybe I should get into the discussion, and I won't make any comments on candidates or anything.

Clearly, this government laid out a budget in April, and what the hon. member has to try hard to understand is that there is a budget process and that we base our program spending on our best information from the best analysts in revenue of all types. It's incredibly important that that program spending is there and is sustainable. We recognized, as the Premier correctly read from our budget speech, which was presented in this House in April of this year, not that long ago – one could remember it – that there would be a very distinct possibility of in-year spending if there were unanticipated increased revenues in oil and gas. Now, Mr. Speaker, everyone is a good predictor of oil and gas revenues and prices after the fact. I didn't hear anyone saying that we would have $60 or $65 oil or $12 or $13 gas in April of this year.

So we base our budget on good information, good planning, and Albertans are very happy that we are able to follow through on commitments to capital and savings, and they consider it smart spending.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Private Health Services

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The health minister has repeatedly promised that this government will not violate federal health legislation, yet in documents obtained by the opposition, this government clearly plans on violating the Canada Health Act by allowing doctors to be paid from both the private and the public systems. My questions are to the Premier. Given that a violation of the Canada Health Act in 1996 caused the federal government to stop all health transfer payments to the province, will the minister explain why the government is pursuing privatization at any cost?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Klein: Oh. I'm sorry. I thought it was to the Minister of Health and Wellness.

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, first of all, everything that was in the documents is on the website for Alberta Health. You can look at those documents and see exactly what's there.

What we have suggested as a discussion point, which has yet to be ratified, is whether or not doctors can opt in or opt out and work in the private system or, in fact, work in both systems. It is not a contravention of the Canada Health Act. It is, in fact, Mr. Speaker, something that several provinces currently have as an arrangement with their physicians. It's one of the things that we believe we should talk about in terms of how we commit ourselves to long-term sustainability in health.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why is this government planning on introducing a policy that would encourage Albertans to buy private insurance for a wide range of medical services when they admit in their own documents that "Albertans may not qualify because of illness or predetermined condition"?

2:00

Mr. Klein: We haven't adopted anything, Mr. Speaker, other than the policy to pursue the investigation into making our system consistent with the Supreme Court of Canada ruling. Now, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled in the case of a Quebec patient that that person was entitled to alleviate his pain and his suffering if he wanted to buy private insurance or pay for it out of his own pocket.

Mr. Mason: Because the province left him waiting for over a year.

Mr. Klein: That could have been the case, Mr. Speaker, that the province left him waiting for over a year. That could have been the case and legitimately so because his doctor probably said: we can treat you, but you're going to have to wait a year or two or three.

Mr. Speaker, unlike the NDs and the Liberals, this government is not ignoring the elephant in the room. We are dealing with it. The worst thing is to be afraid of change and to do nothing. That's exactly what the Liberals and the NDs want. They want us to do absolutely nothing other than to throw more money at the situation. I've said before that the health system is like a Pac-Man: it gobbles up the money. We don't see a healthier Liberal, we don't see a healthier ND, we don't see a healthier Conservative, and we don't see a healthier Albertan because of it.

The Speaker: I'll now call on the hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Premier: why is this government ignoring evidence presented at their own Health Symposium last spring that indicated that privatization does not improve access to health care and has a negative impact on the public system?

Mr. Klein: Well, Mr. Speaker, that was an opinion. The word "privatization" is a forbidden word to the opposition. It's a forbidden word and not open for democratic discussion, not open for discussion in this Legislature. Well, for us, no option is forbidden for discussion.

Mr. Speaker, I would remind this hon. member that right now, as we speak, people in British Columbia, Quebec, and elsewhere – and the federal Liberals, their cousins, turn a blind eye to it – are in fact paying out of their pockets for some surgical services. Yet they get all flustered and beet red and stamp their feet when Alberta even talks about it. How hypocritical of them. In those provinces the health system has not collapsed.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Premier's Travel

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Between the spring and fall sittings this Legislative Assembly will likely end up sitting for a total of only 50 days out of 365, yet the Premier has once again organized his schedule to avoid being in the Assembly to account for the government's policies and its spending. Billions of dollars are being spent without a financial plan, health care is being privatized, and the Premier is hiding from the elected representatives of the people. To the Premier: why is the Premier deliberately avoiding being accountable for his massive and unplanned spending spree?

Mr. Klein: Well, I don't think it's massive, and I don't think it's a spending spree. It's a tour that was planned some months ago, I think about last May, to be exact. It hasn't exactly been a secret that I would be away next week, touring the rest of Canada, explaining, really, that this is a caring and a sharing province. It is our centennial year, and there will be some interesting announcements along the way. As a matter of fact, we'll be visiting their Liberal cousins in Ontario and some Liberals in Quebec and some Conservatives in Atlantic Canada, so they shouldn't be all that mad about it.

Relative to the question, there are 23 ministers, and in this very, very short time they've proven themselves very capable of answering any question that you may have.

Mr. Mason: So the Premier is superfluous, then, I suppose, Mr. Speaker.

Why is the Premier deliberately avoiding being accountable for the government's policies of pushing more costs for health care onto individuals through the privatization of Alberta's health care system?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, the fundamental question is: what do we do as a Legislature to make our legislation consistent with the Supreme Court of Canada ruling? I can understand the individual in Quebec, the patient who is suffering extreme pain but is told by his doctor that he might have to wait a year or two years or whatever it is – the opposition NDs say that it's a year – that he has to wait a year, and he says: "I don't want to wait. I am suffering pain. I am hurting, and although it's a nonemergency procedure, I want to have it done. I'm hurting." The Supreme Court has ruled that he's entitled to get that service to alleviate the pain. The NDs would rather have him exist in pain and suffering. That's what they're all about.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the Premier was around here a little more, he'd know that that's not true.

Why does this Premier, alone among all the first ministers in Canada, feel that he has the right to govern without being accountable to the Legislature for his actions?

Mr. Klein: I really don't understand that statement, Mr. Speaker, because we are accountable to the Legislature. Indeed, all of the information relative to health care, for instance, will be coming back to the Legislature in the spring. There will be ample time for debate, ample time for the NDs to make their point and the Liberals to make their point and the Conservatives to make their point. There will be an SPC process. There will be a caucus, cabinet process.

An Hon. Member: SPC: what's that?

Mr. Klein: A standing policy committee of government. SPC, standing policy committee; OG, of government.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Continuing Care Review

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you are aware, this past summer myself along with the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka and the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East were members of an MLA Task Force on Continuing Care Health Service and Accommodation Standards. Our mandate was to hold consultation meetings with a variety of continuing care stakeholders, to hold public forums, to tour many long-term care facilities, and to ask many questions in order to gain insight into the quality of continuing care services being offered here in Alberta. A final report was developed and submitted to the government, indicating what we heard during our consultations, and 45 recommendations were suggested in order to improve the quality of services for Albertans and their families who require continuing care services. My question is to the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness. Now that the report is in your hands, when will your ministry implement the immediate actions recommended in order to ensure that residents receive quality health and personal care services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, along with members of this Assembly I think that we should thank every member of that task force for the incredible work that they did throughout the summer.

Mr. Speaker, continuing care is a very difficult and emotional issue. We have received the report. I'm very pleased to work with my colleague the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports to examine what we can do immediately and in the upcoming years to answer the recommendations and to have a thorough discussion of the report and to make sure that we follow through on the recommendations.

Mr. Webber: Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness. During the consultation period the task force heard day in, day out how there is a shortage of health care professionals. What new strategy does the minister plan to develop regarding the recruitment and retention of these health care professionals?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, we will come out with more information on that in a very short period of time, but may I say that after the Auditor General's report we immediately increased the staffing level requirement in all regional health authorities from 3.1 to 3.4. In concert with the regional health authorities we're examining the training component that's recommended in the report, the workforce requirements, the workforce needs, the predominant recommendations about medications. I know that the minister of seniors is also looking at the accommodation needs and may wish to address that as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Given that the needs of seniors living in our lodges have grown more complex in recent years, can the minister advise how she is working to ensure that lodge operators can provide appropriate services to our seniors?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, we have 144 lodges in Alberta, and those lodges, as the hon. member indicated, are providing care for seniors that are more frail. It is one of the first points of entry in the continuum of care that was addressed in the report for our seniors, and being more frail, they have higher needs, especially related to mobility and personal care needs. We do provide a per diem to lodge operators through our lodge assistance program.

I can tell you, hon. member, that based on this excellent report from your committee, I will ensure that lodge operators have the resources that are needed to ensure that their clients have high-quality services, but more importantly I also will ensure that it not affect the lower income and moderate-income seniors.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Postsecondary Education Review

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Advanced Education committed months ago to doing a tuition and affordability review of postsecondary education, but after watching it morph into a huge exercise in blue skying a policy framework for A Learning Alberta, students still don't know how much it's going to cost them to go to college or university next fall. They've heard the minister warn them to prepare for a tuition increase and the Premier say that he's fundamentally opposed to raising fees. To the minister: will students have to pay higher tuition fees in September 2006 or not?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, it would appear perfectly clear that they will not.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, given that the minister has said that he sees equal merit, on one extreme, in two years of free tuition and, on the other, in letting institutions charge students as much as the market will bear, will he advise us as to which way the wind is blowing on this issue today?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, first and foremost, I'd like to thank the hon. member for being a participant in the forum, in which we talked about the vision for advancing education in Alberta and about a policy framework for ensuring that that can happen. We will from that forum be developing game plans relative to access, affordability, and quality in the postsecondary institutions and also foundational learning and literacy issues in our communities and ensuring that aboriginal people in this province have access to and participate in advanced learning in this province. So it was a very important forum. I thank the hon. member and all members of the public who participated because it was a very, very useful exercise in helping us get further down the road.

In the context of that exercise, I was asked what sort of ideas were coming forward, so I put two ideas that basically bookended the tuition question that was on the table. One was that if education is a public good and if you need more than a postsecondary education, then perhaps we should be paying as a public for K to 14 instead of K to 12. That comes with benefits for students, and it also comes with problems. The other end of the extreme was that perhaps you shouldn't regulate tuition at all, but then you have to make sure that there's affordability in place, student finance in place so that everybody can afford to go. Those were two extremes of the discussion.

As the Premier said earlier, we're a party and we're a government that believes that all ideas should be allowed to be on the table and be aired. When we come through the process, we will have in place next spring a tuition policy and an affordability policy for students in this province.

Mr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, while the government decides which way it's leaning on that tuition issue, will the minister commit now to freezing tuition at public institutions until the new tuition policy is ready, however long it takes?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, that's what I indicated our policy was, that the tuition will stay the same for students in Alberta through the next year, and we will put in place in the next year the tuition and affordability policy so that students will know what to expect for the fall of 2007.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Agricultural Assistance

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The grain producers in my riding are in dire straits. The crops started out well, but Mother Nature and other forces united against the agriculture sector. Many crops are only feed grain quality, and the prices of good-quality wheat are poor. The cost of fertilizer and fuel is taking a huge bite out of the producers' margins. My questions are to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Your department addressed the challenges of the beef industry when it was in a crisis. What are your plans to help the grain sector, which is in the same desperate situation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and a very, very good question because our producers in the cereals sector are hurting right now. This spring we did do some support levels on the spring price endorsement. We had hoped that the CAIS program and some of the changes that we might be able to put forward in the summertime with our federal and provincial counterparts would also take it up.

We heard over and over again, Mr. Speaker, that the reference margin on the CAIS program was not working, that the CAIS program was difficult to administer for the producers, so we have taken steps to make the difficulty level a lot less. We have also initiated a pilot project which will recalculate those reference margins from 2003-2004 and, when 2005 is done, recalculate them as well retroactively. This will put this fall close to a quarter billion dollars into producers' hands in Alberta. We're taking the lead to try to fix the problem.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Many of the producers don't believe that CAIS is working for them. How will these changes make CAIS work better?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said, what we heard during our round-tables, during our discussions with producer groups across the province was that the Olympic averaging method of calculating a reference margin, which directly leads to their entitlement, in an era of back-to-back disasters was not working for them. In fact, we were averaging the reference margin down. By taking the approach in this pilot project of actually giving an option of calculating the reference margin based on the last three years or the Olympic average, we believe that that will deal with back-to-back disasters and bring their reference margins up, which will bring their entitlement levels up. By doing it retroactively, we get the dollars in producers' hands right away.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. CAIS is a national program. To the same minister: why isn't it a national solution? Why does Alberta have to go it alone one more time?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's a very, very good question. We presented our proposals in the summertime, we've had discussions with our federal counterparts, we've had somewhat of a lukewarm response, and quite honestly I can't tell you why they're not stepping up to the plate. We decided to put our money where our mouth was in terms of proving out this pilot project. We're going to share the information and the impact that this has on our producers with our provincial and federal counterparts. We would hope that they will come to the table and help us with this program rather than doing some sort of ad hoc program which doesn't work for governments or for producers. But we will continue to support a national program because we believe in the national program. We just want to make it better.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Lakeside Packers Labour Dispute

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The weakness of Alberta labour law was starkly clear in the strike at Lakeside Packers. The strikers settled for a $20 a week increase and a coffee break. More importantly, they now have a contract which gives them protection against assaults on their human dignity. It's a shame that the brutal strike at Lakeside Packers had to happen. My question is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. Why has the minister said that he will delay first-contract law in Alberta until 2007 even though the Premier and the MLA from Brooks support the law as necessary?

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cardinal: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It is, of course, very unfortunate when there is a dispute or a disagreement between a company and the union. You know, it's not something we want to see either. But as you are aware, the labour relations issue in Alberta is really good. To start with, 99 per cent of all the collective agreements last year and the year before were approved without any disputes. There are over 1,300 agreements. Seven hundred and fifty or so are private-industry agreements, and they have been generally settled.

As far as the first-contract binding arbitration legislation, Mr. Speaker, what I indicated to the press and to the opposition was that definitely we will be looking at that particular issue. There are some jurisdictions in Canada that have that particular legislation. I've asked my department to pull that information together within three months, and I'll assess it. If it requires more work, then of course the process will continue, but at this time that is what we are doing.

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier to supplement.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, just for clarification since the hon. member mentioned my name and said that I support first-contract legislation. What I did say is that we will consider it. I also said that for every action there is an opposite and often negative reaction, and the opposition well knows that because they react negatively to just about everything we do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the Premier. We do need first-contract legislation.

To the same minister: will the minister release the many thousands of pages documenting occupational health and safety complaints at Lakeside Packers to the Official Opposition so that at least this side of the House can examine them?

Mr. Cardinal: Well, Mr. Speaker, in relation to that particular issue, you know, I did check to see how many complaints there were in relation to working conditions at Lakeside Packers, and there have been very few calls from the employees at that particular plant to complain about working conditions. In fact, I also promise that mid-December I will be touring the plant.

Mr. Backs: It's 2,600 pages.

To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: will the minister make a move to respect basic human dignity and enact bathroom and coffee breaks into Alberta employment standards law?

Mr. Cardinal: Mr. Speaker, of course, that was a concern where I believe one individual had some difficulties healthwise in relation to washroom breaks. What I indicated was that, yes, we'll have a look at that. But if one individual has a medical problem out of, say, 2,000 employees, then maybe that individual should get a medical certificate from the doctor. Instead of changing company policy entirely, maybe that person should get a medical certificate from the doctor to say that this person needs longer bathroom breaks.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Softwood Lumber Trade Dispute

Mr. Strang: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. I understand that attempts to resolve the softwood lumber dispute are stalled, with no decision currently under way or no immediate plans for a resumption of talks. Can the minister advise the Legislature on the status of the softwood discussions between Canada and the United States?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, just before question period today I learned that the World Trade Organization had released a decision finding that the U.S. was in compliance with its WTO obligations in the softwood lumber case. Once we heard that, we're certainly urging the federal minister to appeal that decision.

We are of the position that we expect the United States to live up to their NAFTA obligations. We expect them to refund the money that they have collected, and once they assure us that they will live up to these obligations under NAFTA, then we will be prepared to get back to the table and negotiate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. Can the minister tell the House when a resolution of this dispute can be expected?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't have a crystal ball. Just to work back a bit, the current softwood lumber dispute started in April of 2001. It's the fourth consecutive dispute. The first one dates back to 1982, and of course it's been a long-standing irritant with Canada and the U.S. I'm not sure how long it'll take for the federal government to appeal the WTO decision. Obviously, that's going to take time because that will be used as a stall tactic, I'm sure, by the Americans in this particular situation. We'll find out soon. I'll be meeting with the federal minister early next week to get a further update on what their plans are and will report back to the House at that date.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Can he advise the Legislature on the impact this dispute is having on the Alberta forest industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As national leaders in forest sustainability our companies in Alberta are working hard to maintain their competitive advantage given the softwood crisis. A hundred and eighty million dollars a year goes into a deposit in order for Alberta companies to continue to export into the U.S. In addition to that pressure, we are very, very aware of current market downturns and conditions that might affect the Alberta economy as well as the communities where our forest-based companies exist. So as a government we continue to work with that industry to make sure that they can maintain that competitive advantage that we're so proud of in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This past weekend the Premier stated that he had pretty much spent all of the projected surplus and that, in fact, there would be no more major spending announcements, yet just yesterday a further $224 million was announced by the agriculture minister for the CAIS program. The Premier says that he has a surplus plan but it's none of the opposition's business. My question is for the Minister of Finance. Is it not true that the only surplus plan this government has is to spend every single penny as it comes in?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, it just depends on how you look at things. I consider the spending that has occurred mid-year, which we clearly outlined would happen in our budget speech, as an investment in the province of Alberta. So I, of course, come from a little bit different tack on this: it's positive; it's dealing with things that are required to be dealt with.

Mr. Speaker, rather than dither like the federal government does on agriculture programs when our producers are in desperate straits, we act. Not six months from now or when we study it; we act today. If these members across the House left the city and went out and visited some of the farms that are facing some of the costs, that are looking at snowed-under crops, deteriorating conditions, they might understand why there was a desperate need for an adjustment to a farm income stabilization program that the federal government assumed a full partnership in not two years ago. Alberta acts; we don't apologize.

Mr. R. Miller: Not even drunken sailors can spend money this fast.

My next question is for the same minister. Given that the minister recently stated her preference for tax cuts over rebates, what changed her mind?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've said that there are ways of giving back, and there are two ways. One is in rebates, and one is in tax reductions. I stand on the record of my statements. My preference and I think the preference of every member in this Conservative caucus is tax reductions. Not only is it our preference; we've acted on it. Because we've acted on it, Albertans today enjoy the lowest overall tax burden in Canada. However, when you have one-time surpluses which are caused by a spike, an unnatural spike, I might add, in oil and gas revenues, and you already have the lowest overall tax burden in Canada – this government trusts Albertans with some of their own money, and we're giving it back to them.

2:30

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: instead of rebates, why didn't the minister extend the funding for the furnace replacement program, as an example, or fund a hot lunch program for every child in Alberta or, for God's sake, at least fund the recommendations of the long-term care review committee?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, we're going to have an opportunity to debate the expenditures in this House – we always have that opportunity – and I look forward to the opportunity for each minister to have a debate on the expenditures in their particular departments. It would never have occurred to me that this member opposite would not have supported $1.4 billion in health facility improvements, particularly when there are over 600 million of those dollars in needed programs to provide access to services in this particular region here. It would never have occurred to me that this hon. member would not have supported the investment that has been made in postsecondary education facilities, particularly at the University of Alberta, in the ambulatory care. It would never have occurred to me that this member would not have supported new-schools building. I'm shocked.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Aon Consulting Inc.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is hell-bent on a massive privatization of Alberta's health care system. It just doesn't want to make public the details of a third way privatization scheme until after the federal election is safely out of the way. A key plan in this privatization scheme is a $1.5 million study on private health insurance being done by Chicago-based insurance giant Aon Corporation. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why is the government stubbornly refusing to cancel this contract given Aon's well-known track record of corporate wrongdoing on both sides of the Canada/U.S. border?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you for the question. The Aon contract is with Aon Consulting in Alberta, and the contract is essential in order to get an actuarial review and costing of anything that we would do or contemplate relative to how we pay for Alberta health. The Aon Consulting contract is one that I believe is being awarded to the group that had the best presentation, the most credible references. In fact, from the security checks the actuaries that are involved with this particular project have done an exemplary job of presenting themselves.

One final point, Mr. Speaker. Aon Consulting is, yes, a part of an international group that employs 47,000 people in 120 countries, 800 of whom work in Canada, and only one charge in Ontario relates to a different part of the company relative to a different part of the service. So to make the link that doing this particular contract with this company is the wrong thing I believe is not correct.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Does Aon's contract contain a provision that would bar Aon's insurance division from participating in any future private insurance scheme that Aon Consulting helps this government design, and if not, why not?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, our expectation is that Aon Consulting is not doing a contract to open the door for insurance; it's doing consulting on actuarial expenses. However, the very fact that they have an understanding of insurance in their corporate body is helpful to us in terms of how we model this, and it does not preclude anybody at Aon in future from bidding on it, but that has not been the experience. I suggest that of all the contracts that have been released this year, this one will be under the greatest scrutiny and will be just one piece of what we look at when we look at how we advance our third way.

Dr. Pannu: Will the minister do a favour to this House and make public in their entirety both Aon's detailed proposal in reply to the request for proposals plus the Aon contract and related documents, and if not, what's she got to hide?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, there was a confidentiality agreement relative to all of the participants in this contract, and relative to the terms of the contract I will follow through as our policy dictates. I'm not sure, in the signing of that final document, whether or not that confidentiality was to be maintained, but we will make very transparent both the results of the contract and how they met their obligations.

Mr. Speaker, one more point. The RFP had been published. All of the terms of that had been on the web and had been published since the summer. I think we're going to get a very credible result from the work that this group will do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Veterinary Profession Legislation

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are for the Minister of Human Resources and Employment, and they are regarding proposed changes to the Veterinary Profession Act. The rationale for changing the VPA document, put forward by the minister's office, states that the Court of Appeal ruling indicates that a change is required. After reading the court ruling several times, it is apparent that no such statement is made by the court. Can the minister please clarify what the real motivation is behind the proposed changes to the VPA?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First of all, let me state that this matter will not be presented to the Legislature this fall. The court states that presently dentistry is not specifically referred to in the act. The proposed change is to simply clarify the definition of veterinary medicine to include dentistry as part of the definition.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you. To the same minister: given that the minister's office indicated that the draft was written after consulting with the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association and associations representing beef, pork, chicken, turkey, and egg producers, will the minister please name the horse industry groups or individuals who were contacted to help write the draft of proposed changes to the VPA?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Feedback was requested from two of the leading practitioners of horse dentistry in Alberta in drafting the proposed changes. We are also reviewing initial input from beef, pork, chicken, turkey, and egg producers, and these associations will be consulted further over the next year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister, my final supplemental: given that Alberta is already critically short of large-animal veterinarians, can the minister please explain how possibly granting a larger monopoly to veterinarians will improve the care of animals, reduce costs to producers and owners, and improve the level of service?

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, there is no monopoly being granted. Government's goal is to simply clarify the definition of veterinary medicine included in the act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Fort McMurray Infrastructure Needs

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past spring a delegation from Fort McMurray, led by Mayor Melissa Blake, put forth a compelling argument for $1.2 billion of provincial support to allow the municipality's infrastructure to catch up with the rapid pace of tar sands project expansion. The unfettered development speed is not only affecting the quality of life of Fort McMurray residents but is leading to labour shortages and development delays throughout the rest of the province. My first question is to the Deputy Premier. When will this government balance its role of promoting sustainable growth in the tar sands with protecting Fort McMurray residents?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is entirely accurate. We had a very good submission from a number of people representing the Fort McMurray area, and we did have a discussion about their total needs in that area. What the hon. member might not understand is that there is already a very large amount committed to that area and to its development, something over $600 million, and the minister of infrastructure may want to supplement to give you a closer figure. In addition to that, we responded with an immediate $200 million, which again the minister of infrastructure could speak to. And in addition to that, our Minister of Municipal Affairs has sat down with them to talk about ways to proceed on their municipal infrastructure such as water treatment and so on. So there is a combined plan including, I might add, the Minister of Energy, who will add input to it because of the importance of the development in that area.

In the interest of accuracy on some of the activities that are occurring, I would invite the minister of infrastructure to respond.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. My second question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Will you commit to providing the necessary infrastructure support grants to Fort McMurray rather than forcing the municipality further into debt through loans?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the municipality of Fort McMurray is in a relatively unique situation in that they're growing extremely rapidly, and for the population base today to invest in the necessary infrastructure for issues such as water and waste-water treatment, solid waste management, the cost and the scale of those developments would exceed the ability of today's citizenry and today's tax base and ratepayers to reasonably pay for those costs. At the same time, the growth that is expected and, frankly, has been predicted as a virtual certainty means that in a relatively short time they will be in a position to be in the same position as any other municipality in the province to deal with this kind of infrastructure on a rate-based formula.

So what the government has done is provide bridge financing to the municipality whereby we provide $136 million interest free for the next four years. In addition to that, we do not require any principal payments over that same period of time, so that much-needed infrastructure can get in the ground today, the work begins, and the facilities are complete by the time the population has reached the point that they're needed. At that point, the municipality will be well able to deal with any additional debt that would be associated with these municipal projects.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. My third question is to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation. How much longer will the thousands of permanent residents and commuting workers in Fort McMurray have to wait until both highways 28 and 63 have been twinned from Edmonton to Fort McMurray?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I find this line of questioning especially ironic after the first question that was posed to me. The hon. member knows full well that $200 million of the unbudgeted surplus was spent specifically – specifically – on the Fort McMurray area for their infrastructure concerns. So on one hand they're questioning why we have these surpluses, why we are spending them. On the other hand, they're asking us to spend more on Fort McMurray. This is very, very ironic. There has been $530 million that has been committed to Fort McMurray over the next five years. There has also been another $70 million in the Alberta municipal infrastructure program that has been given to Fort McMurray. The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs just alluded to a $136 million interest-free loan.

Does Fort McMurray have demands? Absolutely. Do they have needs? You bet. This government is working very hard to meet those demands in a very timely fashion, which we are able to do because we have unbudgeted surpluses.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of six members to participate today. Before I call on that first hon. member, the historical vignette for the day.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: On this day in 1918 RCAF Flying Officer L.W. Powell was born in Pickardville, Alberta. He joined the Royal Canadian Air Force on March 6, 1940, and headed overseas a year later to serve as a World War II pilot. Unfortunately, Flying Officer Powell was reported missing and presumed dead after air operations on June 17, 1943. In 1947 Powell Lake, located 65 kilometres northwest of Grande Prairie, was named after Flying Officer Powell.

Dorothy McDonald

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On November 13 our province lost a very special Albertan after the passing of former Fort MacKay First Nations Chief Dorothy McDonald, whose funeral was held this morning.

Ms McDonald was born in Fort MacKay, which is 90 kilometres northeast of Fort McMurray. Ms McDonald began her apprenticeship as an hereditary chief at the age of 16. When she worked with her father, the late Chief Philip McDonald, she watched her dad fight for her people's rights and followed in his footsteps. As she worked on his correspondence, he talked with her about the decisions, duties, and responsibilities of being the chief, which she took to heart. She followed in the footsteps of her father, and when he passed away as chief in 1980, she was elected as the first female chief in Alberta.

She championed environment and economic initiatives, which included being a key mover in dealing with oil sands development. She took on the oil sands companies so that the people of Fort MacKay would have a fighting chance for employment and contract opportunities. She was successful, although it took its toll on her health. Despite that, her spirit was strong. Recently, the Fort MacKay First Nations honoured her for her contributions to her community with the dedication of a new learning centre.

On behalf of the government of Alberta we wish to express our condolences to Dorothy's family and to the residents of Fort MacKay, who benefited from her unwavering dedication, in the loss of a great leader.

Bow Valley College Prairie College of Applied Arts & Technology

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 18 in Three Hills, Alberta, an historic memorandum of understanding was signed between Bow Valley College and Prairie College of Applied Arts & Technology. This unique partnership, a first of its kind in Canada between public and private postsecondary institutions, will allow Bow Valley College to offer health and child care programs to Prairie College students.

Starting in September 2006, Prairie College of Applied Arts will become the first college to offer two-year vocational programs in conjunction with a Christian education. Graduates of these programs will receive a two-year associate of arts degree that includes Bible theology courses. Within the same two years the students will also have earned a provincially recognized diploma in the vocation of their choice. Those choices may include hospital unit clerk, nursing assistant, lab assistant, or child care worker. Students completing one of Prairie's vocational programs will earn a two-year diploma plus a full-year certificate in Bible; in other words, three years of training in two years for the price of two years. What a bargain that is.

I invite members of this Assembly to congratulate Prairie College of Applied Arts and Bow Valley College for their vision of expanding postsecondary educational opportunities for Alberta students in rural Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Veterans Memorial Highway

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. A few years ago, when I was in the Netherlands, I paid a visit to the Canadian Memorial Park near Arnhem. It was late in the afternoon. My wife, Kim, and I stood in silence looking at the long rows and rows of grave markers. Our emotions rose inside us when we read the names and the ages of these many brave young Canadians.

Standing in front of the cenotaph against the light of the setting sun we bowed our heads, and I whispered my saying of deep gratitude: thanks to your ultimate sacrifices myself, my wife, and our family all have the quality of life we have today. Indeed, in Canada it's thanks to our veterans and our active members of the Canadian armed forces that we can live in peace, safety, and security and the freedom of our nation. It is of the utmost importance to remember the sacrifices those men and those women have made and continue to make for the rest of us.

Mr. Speaker, it's obvious that I share the oriental culture, that has been through thousands of years of practice. Yes, in this long tradition of culture I carry in myself an ancient proverb: when eating fruit, remember its planter; when drinking water, remember its source.

Indeed, from this background of feelings I decided to take on an initiative when a friend, Mr. Bob Gray, Dominion VP of the Royal Canadian Legion of Canada, came to talk to me about the Year of the Veteran. I proposed to our Premier and to our Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation that Alberta should designate a highway to commemorate the Canada Year of the Veteran and the centennial anniversary of Alberta. I want to thank the Premier, the minister, and my government MLA colleagues for making the idea come true. I also want to thank Mr. Harvey Shevalier, Mr. Bob Gray, and Mr. Don Ethell of the Royal Canadian Legion for working with me on this idea.

I'm told that Alberta's Veterans Memorial Highway is the longest in Canada, over 600 kilometres. Its stretching length symbolizes the depth of our gratitude to members of the armed forces of the past, the present, and the future. We will remember them.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Remembrance Day

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Remembrance Day, on November 11, is a day of great importance. We remember and honour those many heroes that have given their lives in the service of our country. An incredible number of Canadians, many, many of them Albertans, made the ultimate sacrifice in the bloody conflicts of the last century. We remember all who died or were injured. We also remember the huge effect that these sacrifices had on so many of the families at home.

Last summer a military centennial tattoo was staged in Edmonton, and thanks is due to the Speaker and to Edmonton Councillor Gibbons for their role in that fine event. Included was a re-enactment of many touching moments in the lives of servicemen and their families. One of the most moving was when the actors recreated the euphoric feeling and celebrations that marked the end of World War II. There was dancing in the streets. Almost everyone was hugging and kissing in the relief and happiness that the great struggle, the great conflict, was finally over. But in the background were the families of those who didn't come home. A tearful and endearing moment ensued as an officer presented the families with a memorial of their loved one in honour of their loss and sacrifice as well as that of the soldier who had been their father, husband, son, daughter, brother, or sister.

These heroes died to maintain our Canadian way of life. We have the freedom to live and to love, the freedom to work where we choose, the freedom to move where we want, the freedom to be entrepreneurs and start a business, and the freedom to join a trade union if we desire: many freedoms. We have the freedom of democracy, which many in this world still die to achieve. It is something we too often take for granted.

There always must be those who bravely put themselves forward to protect our way of life. We must remember those that have come before us, and we must also ensure that those who are presently in our armed forces are properly paid and equipped and deployed in the best interests of our country.

The year 2005 is the Year of the Veteran. Please always remember on Remembrance Day.

Prevention of Family Violence

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to talk about an issue that affects us all: family violence. It's an issue that is often ignored by many people who feel that what happens in someone else's private life is none of their business, but preventing family violence is everyone's business.

It is estimated that almost 7 per cent of Canadians have experienced spousal violence in the last five years. Approximately one-quarter of all violent crime victims are also family violence victims. These statistics are alarming. We must break the wall of silence that surrounds this issue and allows it to continue. Family violence impacts everyone, from children who witness the abuse to families who are trying to cope with a horrific situation. It's a global issue that deserves our attention as individuals and as government.

A few weeks ago our government hosted the first ever World Conference on Prevention of Family Violence. Over 1,000 people from 31 different countries met in Banff to talk about their experiences and share ways in which we can eliminate family violence. This conference showed us what is possible if we work together.

But it is only the beginning. We must continue to address this issue on a daily basis and be the voice for those who don't have the strength to speak up for themselves.

Today, a message of hope and remembrance hangs in the Legislature pedway. The Quilting in Learning and Tribute project is an initiative of the Eagle Women's Emergency Shelter in Black Diamond, the Nanton family and community support services, and the Okotoks family and community support services. The squares for this beautiful quilt came from victims, survivors, and people connected or concerned with family violence. It serves as a memorial and educational tool for rural communities in the Alberta foothills.

We are also wearing purple ribbons today to spread the message that we will not tolerate family violence in this province.

Even though November officially marks Family Violence Prevention Month, we know that family violence happens all year-round. We must talk about this issue with the people in our lives and be part of the solution to ending family violence in our province.

Mr. Speaker, the youth at the world conference committed to taking a stand against family violence. We, too, must take a stand. In the words of those youth: "Together we can make a choice. Together we can use our voice. Put violence in the past."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Lakeside Packers Labour Dispute

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to congratulate the workers of the UFCW local 401 at Lakeside Packers in Brooks. When anti-union employers like Arkansas-based Tyson Foods choose to thwart the democratic right of their employees to join a union, Alberta's labour laws let them get away with it. But this time Tyson Foods underestimated Albertans' sense of fair play. Tyson also underestimated the resolve of the UFCW workers.

A fair deal and a respectful workplace was achieved not because of but in spite of Alberta's unfair labour laws. The strike was only settled because it was turning into a public relations disaster for both the provincial government and Tyson Foods. The Lakeside Packers strike, like so many before it – A-Channel, Shaw Conference Centre, the Calgary Herald – was completely avoidable if Alberta had fair labour laws.

We did not need to launch our beef industry into another economic crisis. We did not need to risk worker safety or divide the town of Brooks. All we needed was a simple stroke of the pen. Alberta could easily join eight other Canadian governments and enact first-contract arbitration if a first collective agreement could not be achieved within a year of a certification vote. It's easy. It makes sense. It's fair. I call on this government again today to pass such a law during this fall sitting of the Legislature.

The workers at Brooks deserve our highest praise. They stood up to an American multinational corporation, one of the biggest food companies in the world, and they won.

We will continue to press this government for first-contract legislation in order to avoid bitter disputes, divided communities, unnecessary economic hardship, and risk to safety and security. We saw all of this at Lakeside. If this government acts now, we do not have to see it again.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition from 103 tradesmen and women from Fort McMurray, Calgary, Edmonton, Vegreville, Leduc, and Gibbons. It reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two notices of motions today. This is pursuant to Standing Order 15(2). I'm providing formal notice of my intention to continue with the point of order that I gave oral notice on on May 18. This being the next sitting day of the fall session, I'm now giving the required written notice concerning the words and/or actions of the Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar in his dealings with the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford on May 18, 2005. I have copies for everyone in the Assembly.

3:00

The second notice of motion that I would like to do at this time, again pursuant to Standing Order 15(2), is to provide formal notice of my intention to raise a question of privilege and contempt of the Assembly regarding the unauthorized release to the media of information contained in the October 2005 Report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Securities Commission's Enforcement System.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I wish to rise on a point of privilege in accordance with Standing Order 15. Notice was given to your office in writing yesterday, Mr. Speaker, and I am proposing to raise the matter at the earliest possible time as per Standing Order 15(2).

Would you like me to proceed now with the point of privilege or just give the notice?

The Speaker: We're just in the notice portion now.

Mr. Mason: Thank you.

head: Introduction of Bills

Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to introduce Bill 43, the Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will create amendments to three pieces of legislation, which are needed to allow the government to provide Albertans with a $400 per person resource rebate. Bill 43 will make amendments to the Alberta Personal Income Tax Act so that the rebate can be delivered as a refundable tax credit to avoid federal and provincial taxes; secondly, the Fiscal Responsibility Act primarily so that payments can be made to Albertans without a change in the contingency allowance; and thirdly, the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act so that the rebate can be provided to children in care of the province.

[Motion carried; Bill 43 read a first time]

Bill 44

Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce a bill being the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

Amendments to the Residential Tenancies Act in 2004 allowed for the creation of an alternate dispute resolution service for landlords and tenants. This service will be known as the residential tenancies dispute resolution service, or RTDRS. Before RTDRS can begin operating, the legislation needs to clarify the role of the new service in relation to the court. Once the legislation is in place, the RTDRS will begin operations as a one-year pilot project in the city of Edmonton.

The RTDRS will provide a more appropriate forum for RTA disputes, many of which are not well suited for resolution through the much more formal court process. It will also help the court system dedicate its resources to more complicated matters.

[Motion carried; Bill 44 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Bill 45

Maternal Tort Liability Act

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 45, the Maternal Tort Liability Act.

The proposed legislation is designed to provide a measure of compensation for a child who sustains prenatal injuries as a result of the negligent driving of his or her mother. This proposed provision relates only to motor vehicle accidents, and it's a very narrow exception to the law. The current common law already allows a child to sue anyone else, including family members. This is just about adding the mother in a very specific situation. The change to the common law would provide protection for mothers by prohibiting claims against them beyond the limits of their insurance policies.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 45 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 45 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Bill 46

Criminal Notoriety Act

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 46, the Criminal Notoriety Act.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is aimed at preventing criminals from making money from recounting their crimes either through books, movies, on television, or the Internet. As government we have a responsibility to protect victims, and it is unacceptable that criminals benefit from the pain and suffering they have caused others. The legislation will apply to people convicted of serious crimes such as sexual assault and sexual offences against children and youth or those that involve violence against another person or endanger others.

[Motion carried; Bill 46 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 46 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Bill 47

Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act.

This bill will create a nonpartisan association of former Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. Membership would be open to all individuals who have been but are not currently a member of this Assembly. This association would be able to use its knowledge and experience to promote the ideals of parliamentary democracy in Alberta.

I'd like to thank the Speaker of the House for his support and encouragement of this initiative as part of the upcoming centennial anniversary in March 2006 of the first sitting of the Alberta Legislature.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 47 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 47 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005

Mr. Stevens: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 48, the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005.

The justice of the peace system was reformed in '99. Reforms included a provision to require existing qualified JPs to be appointed in the reformed system. The amendment clarifies that there are no continuing legal requirements mandating the automatic appointment of a justice of the peace who subsequently becomes qualified. The existing provision was intended to be transitional so is being updated with this amendment.

The regulation-making power under the act is also being broadened. With the amendment the constitutional notice regulation can be issued under this act as well as under the Provincial Court Act.

[Motion carried; Bill 48 read a first time]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies of the Victims Programs Status Report for 2004-2005. This annual report shows a 61 per cent increase in grants for community organizations that provide assistance to victims of crime; $3.2 million was provided to 88 organizations in '04-05, these programs reportedly handling more than 33,000 new cases, over half of which involved assisting victims of violent crime.

I'd also like to highlight the incredible amount of time put into the program by volunteers. Over 1,600 volunteer advocates and board members contributed more than 200,000 volunteer hours in '04-05, the equivalent of about 124 full-time employees.

These are important programs that serve our communities, and we will continue to support them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane and chair of the Legislative Offices Committee.

Mrs. Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies of the annual report of the Auditor General of Alberta 2004-05, which was distributed to all members on October 3, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to table five copies of the Report of the Auditor General on Alberta Social Housing Corporation – Land Sales Systems, dated October 2005. Copies of this report were distributed to all members on October 20, 2005.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table five copies of the Report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Securities Commission's Enforcement System, dated October 2005. Copies of this report were distributed to all members on October 27, 2005.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of documents to table today. First, I have two stories from the Edmonton Journal, to which the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood will be talking about in privilege. They are dated October 13 and 25.

I'd also like to table a news release issued by the Auditor General on October 25. In the release Mr. Dunn says that the premature disclosure of his work interferes with "the integrity of the audit process thereby treating the Legislative Assembly with disrespect."

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Two quick tablings today: five copies of information from the Edmonton Community Loan Fund Society, which has recently changed its mandate – it is to facilitate economic self-reliance for people living with low income through asset building, financial education, community partnership; so these are brochures on that – and additional information on the Stars of Literacy, International Literacy Day, that was held back in September, with a good deal of information on the projects that are sponsored by the participating organization, of which there is a long list included in the documents I'm tabling.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the required number of copies of the address by the Hon. Stephen Harper, PC, MP, leader of the Conservative Party of Canada and Leader of the Official Opposition in Parliament, delivered on November 4, 2005, in Ottawa. I urge all the government members across the floor to read it carefully and to consider its implications on the state of democratic affairs in this province, mainly with issues like transparency and accountability, being accountable to the public.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a letter from my constituent for tabling. She's on social assistance, a single parent of one and two teens part-time. She's urging the government to increase funding not just for her but for all Albertans. She's not getting the basic necessities of life: food, clothing, and shelter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, I have a number of tablings today. Pursuant to the Legislative Assembly Act I table with the Assembly copies of the following Members' Services orders: first of all, Members' Services Committee Order 07/05, dealing with members' allowances, which came into force on July 1, 2005; Members' Services Committee Order 08/05, which dealt with members' allowances, which is deemed to have come into force on November 22, 2004; and Members' Services Committee Order 09/05, which is the transportation amendment order, which came into force on July 1, 2005.

As well, pursuant to section 46(1) of the Conflicts of Interest Act of the Revised Statutes of Alberta, I'm pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Ethics Commissioner. The report covers the period April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005. A copy of this report was distributed to members on September 8, 2005.

I'm also tabling with the Assembly the report by the Ethics Commissioner into allegations involving the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, dated October 20, 2005. This report was previously distributed to members.

I'm doing something which I would not normally do. I'm tabling an internal Legislative Assembly security report relating to an incident in the Legislature's south members' lounge on May 18, 2005. I'm tabling it, which will not be my normal practice in the future, simply because of the interest expressed to me by a number of members who requested such a copy, and if several members are going to get it, then all members should get it.

Hon. members, there was a situation that occurred in the Legislative Assembly on the last day of the last session, and one of the hon. members involved has contacted me with a request to make a statement about that. I'm now going to call on the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmor.

Member's Apology

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With regard to the conversation that took place in the foyer on May 18, I would like to apologize for raising my voice at the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. I did try to contact the member immediately after it happened to set up an opportunity to apologize, but that didn't happen, so I'd like to do it here. I'd like to make it clear, though, that I'm not apologizing for physical assault or molestation as the record states or for uttering profanities as was reported in the media by the hon. member because those clearly did not happen. But what did happen was inappropriate, and I apologize sincerely.

The Speaker: Notice was given earlier in the afternoon by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre dealing with a point of order. It may deal with this matter or not. The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar has now apologized to the House. Normally that terminates matters. If the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has a point of order she wishes to proceed with that's different than that, please proceed.

Ms Blakeman: Well, I find myself in an interesting situation, Mr. Speaker. I recognize that the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar has apologized. My dilemma is that he's apologized selectively.

I believe that there was a point of privilege here in that the ability of the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford to enjoy free speech in the House and for there to be no accompanying intimidation or threats that would carry through, obviously not preceding this act but following it, that was clearly – I think that the threat was intended, and it was certainly perceived. That is a difficult situation for me because I have heard the member apologize sincerely for raising his voice, but then I'm not sure what to take of the second part of the member's statement, in which he refused to apologize for anything else.

I would prefer not to proceed with the point of privilege. It's a serious business, and it does take up this Assembly's time and the Speaker's patience. Could I ask the member if he understands that the effect and consequences of his actions that day were intimidation? Is he willing to understand that and apologize for that?

The Speaker: Hon. member, please. Just a second. When the hon. member gave notice a little earlier, the hon. member – and I wrote this down – said that she was rising on a point of order. She then tabled on a matter dealing with a point of privilege. So this is not a matter of debate, I think, internally in here.

If an hon. member chooses to stand in the Assembly, as was afforded to the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, the hon. member apologizes to the House. That's who the hon. member apologizes to. So it's not really a question of one member saying: I agree or I don't agree. The hon. member has apologized to the House.

Now, if the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has a point of privilege that the hon. member wants to deal with, the hon. member can proceed. She has been recognized, and I'm giving her the opportunity if she chooses to proceed.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did give oral notice of a point of privilege on May 18. I did send written notice of a point of privilege to the Speaker on November 10. This morning I also sent over a notification of my intention to raise a point of privilege. If I misspoke myself earlier and said "a point of order," I'm sure the Speaker would accept that slight misstatement.

The Speaker: Agreed. That's not the issue.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you.

At this point I have conferred with the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. He has instructed me not to proceed, and therefore I will not at this time. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. I am now going to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, the Official Opposition House Leader. She's given proper notice to rise on a point of privilege: contempt.

Please proceed.

Privilege

Contempt of the Assembly

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This particular matter is the second point of privilege. Again there was written notice sent over to the Speaker on Thursday, the 10th of November. I did rise under the Routine of the day under Notices of Motion and gave an additional written notice that was circulated to all of the House.

This is regarding the unauthorized release to the media of information contained in the October 2005 report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Securities Commission enforcement system. This matter is being raised at the earliest opportunity. The report was released in October 2005. The House was not sitting. This is the first opportunity that I have had as House leader to raise the point of privilege.

The issue at hand, Mr. Speaker, is that in the wake of the problems that were alleged at the Alberta Securities Commission, the Auditor General announced that he would be submitting a special separate report on the Alberta Securities Commission. This report and one other were leaked to a member of the Edmonton Journal staff and was reported on prior to being delivered to the Assembly or the appropriate committees. The particular reporter in question did report in his column that "the interim draft of Dunn's report" – that is, the Auditor General – "has been circulating in government circles for more than a week." I believe that this unauthorized release of this information prior to it being made available to all members of this Assembly does constitute a contempt of the Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, what happened and what were the consequences that affected individual members' privilege and, generally, contempt for the Assembly? We had an Auditor General's report that was leaked. We had a situation where media and possibly others had it, and people who should have had it, those being the members of this Assembly, did not. So members of this Assembly were not able to comment to the media as they had not seen the report. The members' ability to fulfill their job was prevented, and I believe their privilege was breached.

The Auditor General's report does make several stops. It is mandated to go through the internal audit committee and a courtesy copy to the branch affected before going to the select standing committee to be laid before the Assembly. But, Mr. Speaker, each of those stops carries with it an expectation of embargoed activity, and the ultimate end is to be distributed to the Assembly before it goes to the public. I would argue that given the sensitivity of the material this leak is on the same level as a leak of the budget; that is, being privy to this information can give an advantage to some and not to others.

This report was concerning the Alberta Securities Commission, which regulates our stock market and which must be credible and trustworthy for all to survive. Therefore, the information that was in that Auditor General's report, depending on what it had said, could have been of tremendous advantage to some and disadvantage to others, and not having the MLAs being privy to it before the public is serious.

I believe that all members of the Assembly and particularly the Leader of the Official Opposition had their privileges breached by this release. We were not able to specifically comment to the media on the important issues.

Mr. Speaker, did this leak constitute under the precedents and authorities of the Assembly a breach of privilege or contempt of the Assembly? I say yes. There are two precedents I'd like to refer to. They are both Speaker's rulings. One is from Speaker Milliken ruling around the Toews bill briefing from March of 2001 – that would be federal – and, Mr. Speaker, your ruling from March 2003 in response to a point of privilege brought forward by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

My final issue on this is: if there is no identifiable culprit or perpetrator, can a contempt still be found? I argue that it can be.

So I've gone over the specifics of the case where the Auditor General did release the report. His act does allow under section 20.1(1) that when the Assembly is not sitting, which it was not at the time, Mr. Speaker, it be made available to the Speaker of the Assembly, and copies would be delivered to each member of the Assembly. Under section 24 of the Auditor General Act the annual report shall be made available to an internal audit committee as well before it is presented to the select standing committee. "After the Speaker has distributed copies of the report under subsection (1)," just mentioned, "the Auditor General may make the report public." The other relevant section here is section 28 because the Auditor General "as soon as practicable" shall advise the appropriate bodies that are involved with it. So a courtesy copy goes to those that are mentioned in the report.

That was what was supposed to have happened, Mr. Speaker, with the Alberta Securities Commission report, but somebody somewhere released this document or released substantial information on it to the media, and according to the media it had been circulating in government circles for a week prior to its public release.

We have the relevant citations and cases, Mr. Speaker. The Legislative Assembly Act, section 10, talks about breaches of privilege and contempts. Our own Standing Order 15(1) talks about: "the rights of the Assembly or of the parliamentary rights of any member constitutes a question of privilege." Beauchesne 25 talks about two key rights: the freedom of speech in the House and the right of a member to discharge their duties. In Maingot, pages 224 to 226, they say that if it's not a violation of a specific defined individual or corporate right, it is more properly a matter of contempt.

So does the Leader of the Official Opposition have a right as an individual MLA to have had access to that report prior to it being made public, and does the leak restrict his ability to discharge his parliamentary duties? I argue yes on both counts.

Does the Assembly as a corporate body have a right to the report prior to it being made public? Well, Mr. Speaker, that's obviously what's intended by the Auditor General Act, but was a specific identifiable right violated here by the leak? Now, Erskine May – the 22nd edition is what I'm quoting throughout – on page 108 says, "generally speaking, any act or omission which obstructs or impedes either House of Parliament in the performance of its functions, or which obstructs or impedes any Member" should "be treated as a contempt." I'm paraphrasing here rather than trying the Speaker's patience by quoting unduly.

Marleau and Montpetit, page 52, also notes that "contempt may be an act or an omission; it does not have to actually obstruct or impede the House or a Member, it merely has to have the tendency to produce such results," which I argue has happened.

Also, Marleau and Montpetit, page 58, notes that it "is causing, or is liable to cause, substantial interference with the performance of their respective" duties, that being the members. I argue that in this case the ability of the Leader of the Official Opposition to respond knowledgeable to the media on this issue, on an issue he originally raised, was impeded. He didn't have the information to be able to do it prior to the media having it.

In Marleau and Montpetit, on pages 66 to 67, "any disregard of or attack on the rights, powers and immunities of the House and its Members . . . is referred to as a 'breach of privilege' and is punishable by the House."

Maingot, page 226, also finds that contempt has no codification and no limit.

When we look at the precedents, Mr. Speaker, we have the Toews incident in the federal media briefing on the bill from March 2001. That is the Speaker Milliken ruling that I referred to earlier. More specifically to this Assembly was the Edmonton-Strathcona precedent around a Bill 19 briefing in March of 2003. In this case, the Minister of Energy held a technical briefing for the media on what appeared to be the final version of Bill 19 after it had been placed on the Order Paper but before it was introduced in the House. As part of his argument it was noted that Speaker Milliken affirmed the confidentiality of a bill on notice so that members could be well informed and to protect the pre-eminent role of the House in legislative affairs.

You, Mr. Speaker, took note of this recent federal precedent and concurred that the House's claim on the bill arises when the bill goes on notice for introduction. In other words, the Assembly should get the bill before the public. That's what that is all saying.

While we have the Auditor General's office as an officer of the Assembly rather than a committee, I think that where it concerns the rights and privileges of the Assembly, the same principles should be applied. More narrowly, the Auditor General's reporting structure does require the report to be laid before the chair of the select Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, who then, in turn, tables it in the Assembly unless we are not sitting. It's also allowed to be given to the audit committee, as I mentioned, and they may possibly have advised the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the results, which appears in section 23.

There are arguments to support that committee reports – and I believe that the Auditor General report qualifies the same – be treated the same as bills, therefore making disclosure of the same an act of contempt. Under that, we have Erskine May, on page 118, talking about premature publication or disclosure of committee proceedings. There's a long dissertation that talks about: "As early as the mid-seventeenth century it was declared to be against the custom of Parliament for any act done at a committee to be divulged before being reported to the House," and it goes on at some length. Erskine May, page 670, says: "Any publication of a draft report which has been submitted to a committee, before such report has been agreed to by the committee and presented to the House, may be treated as a contempt." I'll note that Beauchesne 31(10) does specifically exclude technical briefings. So the Assembly should see the committee reports before the public, and the Auditor General's report is substantively the same as a committee report and, indeed, would be viewed as a committee report had the chair been able to present it were we in session.

Erskine May, pages 118 to 119, demonstrates that there need not be an identifiable person against whom the charge of contempt is leveled. Since there was no identification of the individuals originally responsible, the successful charges of contempt also demonstrate that it does not have to be a member.

That is the situation we have here, Mr. Speaker. We don't know who released that information. Was it a contempt against this Assembly? I argue that, in fact, it was.

Although successive Committees of Privileges have concluded that such interference with the work of select committees . . . are a contempt of the House and damaging to the work of Parliament, in none of the modern cases involving draft [or other] reports has it been possible to identify those responsible for the original disclosure. In the absence of such information, Committees of Privileges have usually not been willing to recommend exercise of the House's penal powers against those who gave wider publicity to the disclosure, and when they have done so the House has not been prepared to agree.

That would have been trying to bring the contempt upon the reporter, and we don't know where he got the information, so that may well be the same case here. I think it also demonstrates that the action in question does not necessarily have to take place within the Chamber or the precincts of the Assembly since we do not know precisely where or when the actual act took place, but certainly in the case of the Speaker's ruling in March of 2003 regarding Edmonton-Strathcona, that action took place in the media briefing room, well out of the precincts of the Assembly, and the Speaker certainly held sway there.

Mr. Speaker, this is not to attempt to stop appropriate public consultation but, rather, to protect the pre-eminent role which the House plays and must play in the legislative affairs of the nation. I think that in respect of the legitimate privileges of individual legislators, this Speaker indicated he could not condone the practice of providing information to the media that is about to come before the House. So, again, even if it wasn't the bill itself, the actual text, that was leaked, you yourself, Mr. Speaker, have already given a ruling that you include the provision of information to the media about something that is to come before the House in the same category as the actual document. There are both collective and individual privileges at stake here, and ensuring that the members of the Legislature have access to the information that they need in order to respond to media questions regarding legislative business is such a right, and indeed the Speaker also commented on that.

I raise the excellent example of Speaker Milliken, at the same time noting that this Assembly is not bound by the federal rulings, to ensure that the privileges of this Assembly and our members are accorded equal protection to that of the federal parliament. We have a situation here that is analogous in every important respect to that situation in March of 2003 that was raised by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. The Auditor General is an officer of the Assembly, and the preparation and presentation of reports is most certainly something which this Assembly has an important stake in protecting. It is our vital business, and the Assembly's rights respecting reports prepared by its officers I would argue is every bit as important as legislation on notice. In both cases the documents ultimately belong to the Assembly.

The Auditor General Act makes it very clear how the report should go, and it is to come to the Assembly before being made available to the public. This leak did interfere with the work of the officer of the Assembly and, further, with the members. It may in fact have been worse since the report of the Auditor General was to bring forth recommendations that would restore the integrity of a provincial agency vital to Alberta's economy. The leak predictably undermined the integrity of the provincial audit process itself, and thus will have the effect of undermining the remedial effects of the report and the subsequent reforms.

I ask the Speaker to find that a prima facie case of contempt took place, whether it was the release of the information or a copy of the actual Auditor General's report or a draft report on the Alberta Securities Commission, in that all members' privileges were breached and that that is seen and held in the same light as contempt overall for the Assembly.

I hope that I've covered all of the relevant points. Thank you for the opportunity to raise this very important issue before the Speaker in the House today.

The Speaker: Other members? The hon. leader of the third party on this point of privilege.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I just would request some guidance. Since my question of privilege also relates in part to the one raised by the hon. Official Opposition House Leader but also covers two similar leaks of reports being prepared by officers of the Assembly, is it appropriate for me to deal with my points now, or should we deal with it separately?

The Speaker: The dilemma I have, hon. member, is that I have no idea where your arguments will lead or what they are based on. I simply do not know what you'll be saying, so I don't know how I can advise, and that would be quite wrong on my part.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, just to provide you with a little bit of information, my point of privilege with respect to the report that was leaked that was referenced by my hon. friend here is very similar, but there were also two other leaks of reports done by the Ethics Commissioner and the Auditor General in a similar fashion that we're treating as a group. My points are similar to those raised by the hon. member.

The Speaker: Okay. We're not going to have a debate here, hon. member, but you can see my dilemma, of course. I may rule one way with respect to the arguments put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and rule a different way with the points put forward by the hon. leader of the third party and then be questioned as to why or what. So I don't know. Again, if you simply say, "The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has given all my arguments, and I want her to be my spokesman for this," then I'll understand exactly the position of the hon. leader. So there's the dilemma. Let's deal with one, and then we'll deal with the second one, okay?

Are there additional comments? The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General, I believe in this capacity as hon. Acting Government House Leader though.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My comments will be very brief indeed. The Auditor General on October 25 issued a news release in which he indicated that on a second occasion there was a premature disclosure of the work of the Auditor General. In the two disclosures referred to in the news release, the one that is being referred to in this particular motion was included.

I think what's important is that the Auditor General, who is well suited to investigation relative to this type of thing, indicated that he was going to seek to find out who it was that had leaked the reports. I think it's fair to say, his comments, that "until the source of the leaks is identified, many groups of people, including our staff and senior management of the audited organizations, remain under a cloud of suspicion."

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the argument being put forward by the hon. member with respect to this contempt application is very much a situation of seeking an order in the dark. We do not have the facts before us. The Auditor General, who was the author of the report, who had control of the report, and who is certainly qualified in all respects to investigate the matter, has indicated that he will be doing that. He is an officer of this Legislative Assembly, and I would suggest that it's quite appropriate that we wait until the report of the Auditor General is available before considering anything.

The fact is that as long as I've been here, any contempt application in front of this Assembly has had a source. There have been some consequences associated with it. There have been circumstances that have been understood and that we could debate. In this particular case we do not know the circumstances. We do not have a source. We do not know anything, for that matter, other than the fact that the Auditor General has clearly indicated that there have been unauthorized disclosures.

Mr. Speaker, it would be my view that the Auditor General is doing the right thing, that it is the right thing for this Assembly to wait until the Auditor General's report is available, and that it's inappropriate at this point in time to consider in the abstract an application of this nature.

The Speaker: Others?

I would like to point out to all hon. members that on October 25, 2005, a very senior official from the office of the Auditor General visited with me with respect to this matter, the matter of the so-called leak, whatever that meant, and advised me directly that he had absolutely no knowledge of the source of such but that they would be undertaking one review, and in terms of something that had happened, they would be undertaking a second one, and subsequently shared with me this draft of the press release that was issued October 25, 2005, when he quoted in the thing:

We will do our best to find out who it is who seeks to gain an advantage by leaking audit results. Until the source of the leaks is identified, many groups of people, including our staff and senior management of the audited organizations, remain under a cloud of suspicion. As a last resort, we may have to change how and to whom we provide draft reports.

Then he advised and we had a discussion about when they would be delivering these reports to me, and they were delivered to me at about one or two minutes before 11 a.m., and then they were released immediately from my office, which is the normal practice, the practice that we've had before.

On this first point, hon. member, I'm going to review the Blues for tomorrow. It's a very serious matter. The difficulty I have as to the point of privilege is that I believe there is a contempt, absolutely, but to whom? Who is the person? Who is the entity we have to deal with? Where can justice come? This is a matter that causes grave concern to me. I'll come back and say something further – well, it may not even be tomorrow. If we're advised that there will be a response from the investigators with respect to seeing if they can find the source of this, we may have to wait, but it will be as quickly as possible.

The hon. leader of the third party on your point, please.

Privilege Contempt of the Assembly

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I apologize if we go over some of the ground that's been covered. I'll try and bridge it if I can, as I go.

I'm rising on a point of privilege in accordance with Standing Order 15. Yesterday notice was given to your office in writing, and we are raising the matter at the earliest possible time.

I believe that the dignity and authority of the Assembly has been breached on three occasions and that these breaches constitute a prima facie case of contempt for this Assembly. Upon your finding of a prima facie case of a breach of this Assembly's privilege, I would intend to move that the standing committee on privileges and elections investigate the matter and recommend a resolution.

In making this argument, I cite Beauchesne's section 33; Maingot, second edition, on page 14 and on page 239; and Erskine May on page 148 of the 23rd edition. I also have reference to the Auditor General Act and section 25 of the Conflicts of Interest Act.

The facts of the breach are as follows, Mr. Speaker. Three reports were prepared by officers of this Legislature and have been leaked to the media prior to their distribution to members of this Assembly and prior to their proper publication. The reports in question are, one, the Report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Securities Commission's Enforcement System, October 2005, Auditor General Alberta; second, the Report of the Auditor General on Alberta Social Housing Corporation – Land Sales Systems, October 2005, Auditor General Alberta; and three, allegations involving the Minister of Environment and Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, October 2005, the Ethics Commissioner of Alberta.

On April 13 of this year the Deputy Premier and Minister of Finance asked the Auditor General to answer questions regarding the enforcement processes at the Alberta Securities Commission.

On May 31 I and the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview asked the Auditor General to investigate the sale of certain land parcels by the Alberta Social Housing Corporation. On June 7 the Auditor General indicated that he would be looking into the Fort McMurray land deals and that his findings would be included in his annual report in the fall. On June 22 of this year the Minister of Environment wrote to the Ethics Commissioner and requested an investigation into whether that member had breached the Conflicts of Interest Act, which the commissioner agreed to undertake. On September 13 senior Auditor General staff informed the NDP opposition that the Auditor General intended to report on the Fort McMurray land sales in a separate report not included in his annual report.

At the beginning of October we were therefore expecting the release of three reports, two by the Auditor General and a third by the Ethics Commissioner.

The procedure to be followed by officers of the Legislature when tabling reports is very clearly laid out in the relevant legislation. Section 20.1(1) of the Auditor General Act states that when the Assembly is not sitting and the Auditor General considers it important that a report presented to the chair of the Select Standing Committee under section 17(3), 19(5) or 20(2) be made available to the Members of the Assembly and to the public, the Auditor General may, on 3 days' notice to the Speaker of the Assembly, deliver copies of the report to the Speaker, who shall forthwith distribute the copies to the office of each Member of the Assembly.

Section 20.1(2) of the act specifies that only "after the Speaker has distributed copies of the report" may the Auditor General make the report public. The spirit of these sections was clearly contravened when these reports were made public both prior to the Speaker distributing copies of the report to all MLAs and prior to the official release by the Auditor General.

Similarly, section 25(7) of the Conflicts of Interest Act requires that the Ethics Commissioner report his findings to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. Section 28(2) then requires that the Speaker make copies of the report available to the general public. Section 25(8) allows the commissioner to provide a copy of the report to the member against whom an allegation has been made and to the leader of his party, in this case the Premier, prior to the report going to the Speaker.

On October 13 the Edmonton Journal printed a story entitled "Fort Mac land deals handled poorly, report says." The story included an overview of the contents of the Auditor General's report on land sales in the Fort McMurray area based on information provided by "sources familiar with the report." The article acknowledges that the report was not due to be released until the end of October.

On October 18, two days before the scheduled public release of the report by the Ethics Commissioner, our office received a number of phone calls from the media, who had detailed information respecting the contents of the report.

About 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, October 20, two hours to the report's public release, the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo and Minister of Environment appeared personally on the 630 CHED QR77 Rutherford Show referencing the report, claiming exoneration, and also demanding an apology from my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. The same morning a column in the Calgary Herald by columnist Tom Olsen also referenced the report. Clearly, members of the media had either been provided with copies of the report prior to its release or had been given detailed briefings on its content.

On October 27 the Edmonton Journal printed a story entitled "Ill regulator passes Dr. Dunn's checkup. No big trouble at Securities Commission: Auditor General." The story provided an overview of the contents of the Auditor General's report on the Alberta Securities Commission based on information again provided by sources "familiar with the report." The report was not scheduled to be released until October 27.

Mr. Speaker, in each of the instances that I have outlined, it is clear that members of the media had been provided copies of the reports in question or had been thoroughly briefed on their contents. I would note that the Auditor General has undertaken to investigate the source of these releases. Notwithstanding the results of the Auditor General's investigation into the leaked reports, I believe that this House has suffered an affront to its dignity and certainly to its authority. The Ethics Commissioner and the Auditor General are officers of this Legislature. Their investigations are fundamentally important tools that the Legislature uses to evaluate the financial activities of the government and the activities of its own members as they relate to ethics and conflict of interest.

In a press release dated October 25, 2005, the Auditor General stated that these unauthorized disclosures to the media interfere with the integrity of the audit process thereby treating the Legislative Assembly with disrespect. The long-established legislative requirement that reports of the Auditor General be made available to all MLAs simultaneously and before any public release is designed to protect the integrity of the parliamentary process, including the independence of the legislative auditor.

Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms, sixth edition, in section 33 states:

The most fundamental privilege of the House as a whole is to establish rules of procedure for itself and to enforce them. A few rules are laid down in the Constitution Act, but the vast majority are resolutions of the House which may be added to, amended, or repealed at the discretion of the House.

The Auditor General Act and the Conflicts of Interest Act are literally resolutions of this House. The acts carry no statutory consequences for breaching the provisions regarding tabling, so the ultimate weight they carry is the authority of this Assembly and the respect held for its resolutions.

Maingot says in Parliamentary Privilege, second edition:

As in the case of a Superior Court, when by some act or word a person disobeys or is openly disrespectful of the authority of the House of Commons or Senate or of their lawful commands, that person is subject to being held in contempt of the House . . . or Senate as the case may be; therefore it will be seen that the Senate and House of Commons have the power or right to punish actions that, while not appearing to be breaches of any specific privilege, are offences against their authority or dignity. These may include disobedience to their legitimate commands or libels upon them, their officers, or their Members. Such actions, though often called "breaches of privilege," should more properly be considered "contempts."

I'll skip over some of the other things, Mr. Speaker, but I've referenced them.

I think that there can be no doubt that the leak of these reports was intentional and for political purpose. Not only does this undermine the ability of our officers to provide objective and dispassionate reports; it also undermines our abilities as members of this Assembly to deal with these reports in a proper and constructive way. Given the seriousness of the implications of the breaches that have occurred and the citations noted here, I would urge that you find that a prima facie case exists for breach of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I think you have already indicated that you believe that there was a breach, but the question was whether or not anyone had been identified, either by the Auditor General or anyone else, to hold to account for the breach. It is my submission that the Minister of Environment, whether or not he released the reports to the media directly, certainly was on the media discussing the contents of the reports prior to their release, and I would submit to you that that is a contempt of the House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My comments with respect to this are similar as to the previous motion as it relates to the Auditor General's reports. They are identical. It seems to me that the situation is that he is investigating them, and we should await that report.

With respect to the second matter, my understanding there is that once again we do not have a source. We don't know. The circumstances surrounding it are unknown. I think it is very difficult for this Assembly to deal with a contempt application where the source is not known. The member opposite has, you know, indicated his opinion of the matter. They expressed their opinion of a matter, which gave rise to the Ethics Commissioner reviewing the matter in the first place.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo in his review with the Ethics Commissioner asked him to conduct an investigation into allegations made against him by members of the New Democratic opposition, and the Ethics Commissioner did that. He said, "As I have not found any breach of the Conflicts of Interest Act, I recommend no sanctions." That was the conclusion of that particular report. They're back at it today indicating that their opinion with respect to the matter falls short of the mark. Once again, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me difficult to deal with a contempt application where there is no one that can be addressed specifically.

I'd also make this observation with respect to findings. It seems to me that this particular Assembly needs circumstances put before it in order to deal with the issue of a prima facie case of contempt, not a matter of contempt per se, and in the end those circumstances may come out if we give an investigation.

With respect to the Ethics Commissioner my understanding is that there is no investigation being conducted at this time, and I'm not aware that there is any intention of an investigation to be done.

Thank you.

The Speaker: It's my common practice on the day of the opening of a session to consult with the Ethics Commissioner and ask a question: is any Member of the Legislative Assembly of the province of Alberta under review? The answer as of 1 o'clock today was: no, there is no Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta under review by the office of the Ethics Commissioner. That's common practice. I do this all the time just to make sure, in the event that certain things happen in this Assembly, that there's protection provided for all hon. members.

Hon. leader of the third party, the first part of your argument dealt with the reports of the Auditor General. I have reported in the previous point that I did have a consultation with the office of the Auditor General on the same day that the news release was put out, and the quotation in it was shared with me. I was advised as the Speaker that one investigation had started, that there would be another one, and the report would be released as has been outlined on that particular news release.

With respect to the Ethics Commissioner it's my understanding in consultation that I've had as well that late in the afternoon of the previous day – and I shouldn't be speaking on behalf of the Minister of Environment, but I think it's important for complete transparency – the Minister of Environment was provided a draft copy of the Ethics Commissioner's report by the Ethics Commissioner. By the Ethics Commissioner. It's further my understanding that the following morning the Minister of Environment did go on a certain radio show and did reference the report, which he believed was his report to do with as he wanted to do. It was later in the day that the Ethics Commissioner report was provided to my office, and it was released at a certain time.

So I have undertaken some investigation of this matter, and I'm being very, very transparent and open with the House with respect to this.

I'll provide further comment with respect to this matter. There is one underlying thing. Whatever we find and whether or not it's a prima facie case, the fact of the matter is that this is really a very terrible situation. You've got a situation where you have two officers of the Assembly. They do not report to the government. They don't report to any particular minister. They don't report to the Speaker. They report to the Assembly. They're officers. We have passed legislation in this Assembly to declare these people independent. We have to respect them, and we have to provide them with the resources to do the job that we have passed legislation to provide them for, and we have to provide them with the opportunity to function in an environment without intimidation, without any kinds of pressure points from members, the media, or anyone else.

There's a process, a time-honoured process that has been set up that these people will consult with affected, impacted people when they prepare their reports. That's a time-honoured one, and it's based on trust. So if someone is leaking information, whether or not it's in the office of one of the officers of the Legislative Assembly, which is a possibility, or another office, either way that's not very good, and in some jurisdictions it's very much punishable.

The difficulty standing here today is that I can't do anything more than agree with the tone put forward by the two members that basically say that the only honourable way for all of this is that Members of the Legislative Assembly must all have access to this information. These are officers of the Legislative Assembly, and we have to all deal with trust, and there shouldn't be any of this other stuff happening. I think this is very contemptuous without any doubt at all, and maybe that sums up what both members really wanted to say in a different way. What I fear is that now these officers are going to go off by themselves, never to come back here until the final report, with no consultation with anybody because there will be questions, and the whole process will become less effective and less efficient, and that is the downside of what may have happened.

Committee Membership Change

24. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that the following change to the following committee be approved by the Assembly: on the Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee that Mr. Elsalhy replace Ms Pastoor.

Mr. Hancock: We are bringing forward this motion to accommodate the wishes of the Liberal opposition, and any explanation for the change I presume would come from them, but I would ask the Assembly to agree to the wishes of the Liberal opposition in this regard.

The Speaker: Opposition House Leader, any comments?

Ms Blakeman: Just my thanks to the Government House Leader for acquiescing to our desire. For various reasons and time constraints we require the switch in membership. We wanted to have as much full participation as possible by the opposition in various committees, and we believe that this will facilitate that.

Thank you.

Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Marz in the chair]

The Chair: I'll call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 15

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005

The Chair: Does anyone wish to participate in the debate? The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Webber: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I rise today to discuss Bill 15, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005. The minister of human resources, the WCB, and I thoroughly considered the various public comments made by the opposition caucuses and by stakeholders. We now have amendments to the bill, and they're being circulated. It is my pleasure to move these amendments.

The Chair: We will refer to this amendment as amendment A1. Would the Member for Calgary-Foothills like to proceed?

Mr. Webber: Again, Mr. Chairman, the members will have received their package of amendments very soon, I hope.

Vesting of these actions with the WCB remains. Subrogation is the wrong legal term given the degree of control the courts say the WCB has. The word "subrogation" has prompted a small segment of the legal profession to challenge the WCB's position in order that those lawyers can charge higher legal fees. The word "vesting" clarifies the intent of section 22 of the Workers' Compensation Act when taken as a whole, even in its preamended form. It removes ambiguity and stops the injured worker from being a pawn when a lawyer wants to charge higher fees than the WCB allows. So vesting remains, Mr. Chairman; however, there have been considerable efforts to reinforce the rights of the worker and to reinforce the checks and balances that the WCB will be obliged to follow within such a framework.

Firstly, any semblance of even perceived retroactive application of this bill has been removed by significant amendment to section 22(2) of the act. These changes will apply only to accidents that occur after proclamation of this bill.

Also, Mr. Chairman, there was concern that even though the Alberta Court of Appeal upheld the ultimate control and legitimate interest that the WCB has in these third-party actions in the current act, measures needed to be taken to ensure that the WCB treated the injured worker like a partner that would be consulted throughout the process and prior to any settlement. As such, the strong language of “solely” and “sole” have been removed in subsections (3) and (5) respectively.

Additionally, consequences for non co-operation, although an element of that must be retained, have been relaxed and clarified. First, co-operation with the required litigation is standard practice in any sort of insurance law. The employers who fund this system should not bear additional cost when there is money on the table or one party is not co-operative. Bill 15 makes the duty to co-operate clear. It balances the rights of workers and employers. So while the necessity to co-operate does need to be protected, it is now made clear that any suspension of income replacement benefits is temporary and lasts only as long as the period of non co-operation.

What will not be suspended regardless of co-operation is any of the medically related services offered, co-ordinated, or reimbursed by the WCB, such as scheduled surgeries, therapy, or prescription medications. Also, the clause suggesting overpayment recovery has been completely deleted.

Mr. Chairman, we have introduced a new clause to this bill that sets out in law that the employer of an injured worker cannot put pressure on that worker not to sue. In reality non co-operation is extremely rare. Most workers have wanted to co-operate because it is in their clear financial interest to do so. Under this practice I understand that approximately $13 million is paid annually to injured workers and their dependants over and above the compensation benefits that they have received.

Also, Mr. Chairman, a clause has been added to the bill – it’ll be 22.1 – that allows for the reverse of vesting. WCB will now have the ability to divest a third-party action. In such an instance the injured worker would own the claim completely but, of course, would also own all the risk that WCB would have otherwise taken.

For example, a young working Albertan was recently injured in an explosion while operating an ice resurfacing machine. He sustained third-degree burns over 85 per cent of his body. The WCB continues to provide him with full benefits in amounts already upwards of $2 million. With the counsel of his choice legal action was brought against the manufacturer of the ice resurfer. After a month-long trial the judge awarded the worker zero. The worker was found to be at fault, so he gets nothing from the court. The court also ordered this worker to pay the defendant’s costs, some $750,000. The WCB paid those costs. The WCB also supported this worker in an appeal of that ruling with success, as a new trial has been granted.

While subsection (5) of section 22 of the act sets out the process for the relationship between the injured worker, the WCB, and private legal counsel if there is any, it was decided to have these rules set out in the regulation rather than just in WCB policy.

In summary, Mr. Chairman, this bill ensures that workers get a minimum of 25 per cent of any settlement or court award. It caps the amount that private injury lawyers can charge at 25 per cent. It ensures that employers do not subsidize private insurers, in most cases automobile insurance companies, through the employer-funded WCB system. It has no element of retroactivity whatsoever. It clarifies and enhances a fundamental principle of insurance law that says that in exchange for us insuring you, you need to help us recover any of our costs if you can. It gives workers on temporary partial disability benefit the same benefit of cost-of-living increases that workers on other WCB benefit streams get. Finally, it gives members of the WCB board of directors the same immunity that virtually all government-mandated board members enjoy.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I’d like at this point to adjourn the debate to give us time to have a look at some of the amendments, and I would ask that the committee rise and report at this point.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 15. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the fact that this is the first day of session and we have little available for discussion, I would ask for unanimous consent of the House to allow us to proceed to second reading of Bill 47 on the same day as first reading.

Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s a pleasure to rise and move second reading to Bill 47 and to open debate on Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act.

This bill aims to create an Alberta association of former MLAs which would be nonpartisan in nature and would be open to all former MLAs regardless of party allegiance. The creation of the Alberta association of former MLAs can be an important part of the celebration of the centennial of the first sitting of the Alberta Legislature, coming up next March. I’d like to once again recognize the Speaker of the House for his encouragement and support of the concept of an association of former members as an initiative to be part of the Legislative Assembly's centennial celebrations.

In 2003 the members of this Chamber debated and passed a private member's motion which I had brought forward concerning this association. At that time I stated my intention to bring this idea forward as legislation, which is now Bill 47 before us.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by giving some background information. The impetus for establishing a former members' association comes from a conference I had the opportunity to attend in the fall of 2002. This conference was hosted by the association of former members in Quebec, and it gave me the opportunity to see the activities and initiatives which are being undertaken by other former members' associations which are currently active. At present, British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and the Parliament in Ottawa have former members' associations. All of these organizations work to strengthen parliamentary democracy, and this is a goal which is worth pursuing here in Alberta I believe.

Mr. Speaker, to that end, the primary goal of this association would be to tap into the knowledge and experience that former members of this Chamber have gained while representing their constituents as MLAs. This experience can be used to help strengthen the system of parliamentary democracy in Alberta and across Canada. In other former members' associations this is being achieved through speaking programs targeted primarily at schools and universities, enabling students to become more aware of the functions and processes of government, which serves all Albertans.

Albertans who have sat and debated issues in this Chamber on behalf of their constituents have a great understanding and knowledge of democracy in the parliamentary system in the province. That knowledge is a resource which can be used to strengthen parliamentary democracy in our province. In addition, the association would be able to serve as a vehicle through which relations with other former members' associations could be strengthened. This could be accomplished through meetings with other former members' associations on both a national and international level.

The United States Association of Former Members of Congress has had a great deal of success with one of their programs, that pairs former Congress members, one from each political party, to speak to university students. The Congress to campus program has been operating since 1976 and has visited over 200 campuses throughout the United States. Attempts to measure the effects of the speaking tour have shown that students react very positively to this program. In their annual report to Congress, May 15, 2003, they presented the following findings:

Those students who have contact with former Members during their Congress to Campus visits have a measurably more favourable view of public servants and of public service as a career option than similar students who do not have the opportunity to interact with the visiting former Members.

Closer to home the House of Commons in Ottawa also has a former members' association. Some of you may remember – I think it was last year or perhaps two years ago – that they had a meeting here in Edmonton, and many of them here visited the Legislature at that time. They, too, are active in educational programs such as sponsoring several academic scholarship programs through their charity, the educational foundation. These scholarships are focused on increasing students' interest in parliamentary democracy.

In addition to serving the interests of the public and parliamentary democracy, the association would act to foster a spirit of community amongst former MLAs as well as create a means for dialogue between former and current MLAs.

Mr. Speaker, last year I sent out a letter to gauge the receptiveness of former MLAs to a former members' association such as this one.

The majority of replies by far were either positive or very positive. So the support for a former members' association from former members is strong, and it would be appropriate and fitting to initiate the association on the 100th anniversary of the Legislature.

There have been some questions raised regarding this bill which I would like to address. One question is that of funding. Who will fund the association? This association would be funded, similar to other associations, through three avenues: membership fees, probably a subscription fee to a newsletter as is the case in all of the other associations, and finally donations.

Another question which has been asked is: why use legislation to create this association? Why don't former members get together on their own? Well, the truth is that this approach has been tried in other jurisdictions, and it has not worked. Involving government legislation adds a sense of legitimacy to the organization, and it is this legitimacy that has allowed associations in other jurisdictions to be as successful as they have been. Further, it is an expression by the members of this Legislature that a former members' association can be a valuable resource to the people of Alberta in promoting our parliamentary system. It is my belief that the creation of the Alberta association of former MLAs would be a great benefit to Albertans on the whole by heightening understanding of our system of parliamentary democracy.

Mr. Speaker, there is one final point I would like to make regarding the formation of this association, and that is regarding timing. This past year Albertans have been celebrating the centennial anniversary of the formation of our province. In a short few months we will be passing another milestone in our province. March 15, 2006, will mark the centennial of the first sitting of the Alberta Legislature. I feel that having a former members' association in place for that anniversary would be a fitting way of recognizing the contributions of legislators who came before us and who had a hand in making Alberta the great province which it is today. A former members' association is a very fitting centennial project for this Legislature to support.

Once again I would like to thank the Speaker of the House for his continued support and encouragement of this initiative. His help has made it possible for this legislation to be debated before the centennial anniversary of the first sitting of the Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I would like to say that by forming this association, we have the opportunity to create an organization which will help to strengthen parliamentary democracy in our province. We have the opportunity to work with former members' associations in other provinces and other countries to strengthen the parliamentary system in Canada. I would ask that all members on both sides of the Chamber please stand with me in support of this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to rise and speak in second reading to Bill 47, which I think was formerly known as private member's Bill 207 as sponsored by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose. I have to admit that my initial reaction was – well, I guess if you looked at this as different times. Given some of the days that I've had in here and the experiences I've had serving in the Assembly, the idea of socializing with other members of this Assembly frankly puzzles me. I can make fun of it now, but I have to make the serious point as well that I think times are different. Times have changed. Certainly, the tone that's in the House today, the level of respect that the two sides have for each other, the extremely adversarial nature of both this process but also our response to it, has not been conducive to friendly repartee. Let me put it that way.

You know, I talked to some members that served in the '80s and early '90s, and they talked about going for coffee with people on the other side. I can't imagine that, frankly. I'll accept that we're dealing with different times here, and this is, I know, a genuine desire and proposal from the Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose to put this together. I guess I sort of say: well, I can see how it would be of use, and certainly there would probably be fairly heavy subscription from people who are already retired, but I'm struggling to see where my place in this organization would be by the time I retire. [interjections] And there we go. There's the typical reaction, with a good deal of heckling: will I please leave now, and, no, they wouldn't want me to be a member of that club.

That's exactly what I'm talking about, Mr. Speaker. I'm being asked to support an association which is essentially an old boys' club, and I'm not old, nor am I a boy. So do I really want to support this? Well, frankly, I'm not sure.

I think to myself: "All right. Well, what are they going to do?" I know with the Retired Teachers' Association they mostly get together for social occasions. They mark special days. They host a tea, I think, for retiring teachers as a sort of special occasion for their comrades and colleagues. Well, there's nothing wrong with that. I don't know why we need to sanction it in this Assembly, but there's certainly nothing wrong with the idea of it.

I know that there's long been a golf tournament that's been organized by retired members. That has existed for some time, so I guess part of this could be golf tournaments.

I'm interested to hear what the Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose is saying that some of the other associations have been involved with. I mean, certainly the idea of a mentorship program: excellent. Or a scholarship program is fine. I mean, this is one of these bills that comes forward in the House and you think: gee, when we only get to sit for 50 days max – I think we're at day 42 or 43 today. If we make it through to day 50, I'll celebrate. Of all the issues that there are out there, good and bad, in Alberta today, I have to admit that I do look at this bill and think: hmm, there are other things that we could be spending our time on here. Then again, why can't this Assembly do some nice things every now and then?

There is a real question. The member has acknowledged that people are saying to him: why on earth does this bill have to go through this Assembly? As best as I can ascertain, what's being sought here is the equivalent of the little gold seal that goes on the jam jars that says, you know: by appointment to the Queen. It indicates that there is some affiliation with a higher power, if you will, or a larger entity that gives it that sort of gold seal, that special bit that connects this organization to this particular Legislative Assembly. [interjections] Given the heckling that I'm hearing from the minister for aboriginal affairs and the minister for infrastructure, I'm sure they'll be commenting later in a full debate, and I look forward to it.

There's nothing wrong with seeking that gold seal of approval, but it is a little curious because we don't do it for other organizations. Perhaps the member would be able to do the research and come back and say: yes, in fact the Alberta Teachers' Association does have it in their charter that there would be a Retired Teachers' Association that's affiliated. Maybe that's a bit more commonplace, and if that's the case, well, I'm not going to refute it.

I was looking at some of the bios of members who have served in this Assembly, and I'm reminded again, as the Speaker gave brief eulogies and descriptions of former members who've passed away since we were last sitting, that we often hear of the names of the legislative committees that the members were sitting on. In fact, I managed to get a little bit of information about what those committees are or have been from 1986 to 2005. Mr. Speaker, I'm really struck that at that time there were many more, first of all, legislative committees, which would be all-party committees, and more participation from members of the Official Opposition. So a different time.

I'm mindful of the sponsoring Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose talking about possible activities for this organization being consideration of democratic renewal. Perhaps one of the first things I could suggest to be on their agenda would be encouraging their colleagues on the government side to go back and have another look at the purpose of legislative committees. I believe that in my time we've had – I know, actually, that we've had legislative committees simply struck from the record. The Law and Regulations Committee, to my mind, was always very useful and certainly could play a very useful role in what we do here and cut down on some of the misunderstandings and the miscues and, frankly, some of that adversarial nature that happens here when the two sides simply come to loggerheads without understanding what each is trying to say. Those kinds of issues get worked out in the committee structure.

The Committee on Law and Regulations, for example, was a particular favourite of my former colleague for Calgary-Buffalo. He often talked about referring amendments, for example, to an all-party Committee on Law and Regulations, which would have allowed us to meet in that sort of a setting and go through both regulations and amendments before they came back to the floor, a very useful process, I feel. Interestingly enough, that committee has been completely struck. It doesn't exist anymore. So I guess that when our time comes and others are looking at our bios, they will see how few legislative committees in fact meet and, more to the point, how few times we have members of the opposition involved in these committees.

This government is very fond of finding work for its backbenchers by coming up with road shows for them to do over the summer. Sometimes those are prompted by real need; for example, the response to the Auditor General's report on long-term care facilities. The Minister of Health and Wellness's answer to that was to strike an MLA committee to tour the province. I have to give credit to my colleague the Member for Lethbridge-East for immediately saying: "Excuse me, but I'm a member of the opposition. I have a great deal of expertise in this area, and you should put me on the committee." To give credit to the Minister of Health and Wellness, she did. I think that having a member of the Official Opposition but also someone with a great deal of expertise in that area on the committee really helped that whole process and, I think, gave it credibility. She was also able to get public consultations involved in that where it wouldn't have been before. So there's a very, you know, quick example of the benefits of involving members of the Official Opposition in these committees.

But this government tends to strike – and frankly, I've lost track. There are probably half a dozen of them out there right now that are out and running, with somebody being paid extra money to run them, that report back at some point to the government, and occasionally there are reports from them which rarely get released to the public. I think that that's an issue for democratic renewal and, again, maybe one that we can have this organization look at.

But back to where I was starting with this. As I looked at some of the past members, their bios, and which of the committees they sat on, you know, one of the ones that's most interesting is the Public Affairs Committee, which has never been called in my nine years here, ever. As a matter of fact, I think that it might have been one of the ones that was struck along with the Law and Regulations Committee.

As I looked through this, I noticed that a certain member for Barrhead-Westlock, who is now the Speaker of our Assembly, when he was House leader was instrumental in commencing a number of select special committees on parliamentary reform and, again, involved members of the Official Opposition on that.

So going back to what's being proposed here, do I have a particular problem with a committee being created by an act of legislation? Not particularly. It's a little curious that it's getting such special attention, which I don't think is accorded to retired members of other professions. I'm willing to be corrected on that one if someone can show me or bring up the other charters in which this is commonly done. If that's the case, then you would need an act of the Legislature to create a retired members' society for this particular job, if you want to put it that way.

I'm glad the member answered the question about funding because that's one that we hear as well. There's always a suspicion that somehow this organization is going to have access to grant money or some kind of government funding or operational money that other organizations don't get access to. There's a concept of fairness here that I think sometimes eludes this particular government. It's one that's important, and it's important in this context. The member has made it clear that the funding for the organization is to come from membership fees, newsletter advertising and, I'm assuming, fees to get the newsletter – subscription fees is a better way of putting that – and donations.

I would be interested in hearing from the sponsoring member or others if there are any plans to apply for any other kind of grant program that is currently available either municipally, provincially, or federally. I think that since it's of such interest to people, I'd like to know if that's contemplated or perhaps if it would be specifically prohibited in the charter of the organization.

The last thing that the member talked about was why under the Legislative Assembly, and I've already dealt with that one.

Again, I have no particular problem with this. I just question why we're spending time on it and also wonder how it's actually going to apply in the future. I can see where it may have worked in the past, but I am at a bit of a loss to see how it's going to work for us, given our relationship in this Assembly now, because I think times are different. I don't think that's a good thing, and I have certainly been vocal about my disapproval of the way things operate in here. I think that it is discouraging for some people to even contemplate being elected to this Assembly because of that tone of rough and ready and roll up your sleeves and get ready to slug it out. You know, I'll be interested to see how this all plays out.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak to the bill in second reading. I'll look forward to maybe getting some responses to my questions. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Shariff: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise and join the debate on Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act. Having heard the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I hope my remarks will help clarify a few more points for her and earn her support for this bill as well.

When I initially saw this bill idea, the first thought that flashed through my mind was: how much is it going to cost the Alberta taxpayers to institute and fund this association on an annual basis? I was very encouraged to see that there would be no direct funding from the province and that the proposed association's budget will be derived from yearly membership fees.

In my remarks today I will discuss the positive outcomes I perceive coming from this piece of legislation. As a representative of the constituency of Calgary-McCall one of the regretful aspects of my job is that I have to decline attending functions in my riding simply because of time constraints. Often these time constraints happen when I am in Edmonton attending the business of the Legislative Assembly while a school requests my participation in a mock parliament debate.

Mr. Speaker, there is undoubtedly a thirst for knowledge of parliamentary process in all corners of this great province and around the world. My experiences have led me to believe that Albertans want to learn more about the system that governs them. They are engaged in the issues that affect not only their own lives but the lives of their fellow citizens. Considering our current resources and time restrictions, it is difficult and, quite frankly, impossible to meet the demands placed upon our current MLAs regarding visiting with and explaining to Albertans and other Canadians the intricacies of our parliamentary system. What can happen and what this bill proposes is to have former members of its Legislative Assembly combine their efforts, knowledge, and experiences through the proposed association and have them tour the province and the country in order to bring a broader perspective of how our government operates in a legislative setting.

Spreading the word and promoting the ideals of parliamentary democracy would be something that I am sure many of us would look forward to pursuing once our time in this Legislative Assembly comes to an end. While the majority of former MLAs are involved in a great number of organizations and projects that are continually improving our province and our communities, the main benefit of this type of association is that it will allow former members to pursue these projects with the help of their other former colleagues, thus allowing them to engage in these efforts through a more collaborative approach.

One of the most successful former members' associations, the United States Association of Former Members of Congress, has been able to accomplish a number of amazing feats. A hundred and fifty thousand students have been spoken to across 207 different campuses. The association leads workshops in emerging democracies, and it continually sends congressional study groups abroad to raise awareness and foster the ideals of representative democracy.

Other jurisdictions in Canada have followed the lead by the United States' former members' association and generated similar results. While not as large as the American counterparts, Canadian associations are continually growing and engaging a large number of individuals in democratic discussions through conferences and guest lecture series.

One of the most important aspects of these associations is that they are nonpartisan, which helps create a friendly and relaxed atmosphere, one that isn't compromised by party politics. With this in mind, there will be no hidden agenda for Alberta's former members' association.

Mr. Speaker, the focus of our Alberta former members' association would be based on the parliamentary system that we practise and not on the issues which bring about disengagement and political differences. I believe that all of us can agree that we have a very good system of governance here in Alberta, and I believe that our experiences and our successes should be shared with the rest of our province and the world.

I feel that it's very important Albertans are educated on the system that governs them. I feel strongly that people in communities across the globe who are striving to gain the same freedoms that we sometimes take for granted are able to learn more about how our system operates through the experiences of those who helped it function in a practical setting.

We have an opportunity here to help form an association that will bring together some of the great minds of this province. I sincerely hope that the intentions of this bill are not misconstrued and falsely interpreted as forming some sort of a leisure club for former members. Promoting the ideals of parliamentary democracy is not a partisan process, and the already established former members' associations in other jurisdictions have risen above any party or partisan arguments. Former parliamentary, congressional, and Senate members have already produced great accomplishments by working together to break down barriers between citizens and their elected officials, and I hope that former Alberta legislators will be able to take part in these admirable tasks.

With this in mind, I will be supporting this bill, and I encourage all other members to join me in doing the same. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, up to the next five minutes is available for questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a) if anyone wishes to participate in that part. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question I would have for the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall is simply this. He indicated in his remarks that no direct funding would be sought from the Alberta government. I'm just wondering whether or not he might be then leaving the door open for indirect funding to be sought from the Alberta government.

Mr. Shariff: In my personal opinion, once the act is proclaimed, it will establish the Alberta association of former MLAs as a nonprofit body corporate. Once that's the case – it's a nonprofit body – then that nonprofit body should be able to access any funding that's available to other nonprofit organizations. So let's say, for example, the election that happened in Ukraine required people to go and observe. Former MLAs could access CIDA funding to go and do that work. There's nothing wrong with that. So I would support that form of indirect funding.

The Deputy Speaker: Anyone else wish to participate under Standing Order 29(2)(a) in the debate?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great honour to rise and speak to Bill 47, formerly Bill 207, Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act. The object of this bill is a nonpartisan, nonprofit association of former MLAs. The primary functions of this association are to promote parliamentary democracy and the interests of former MLAs.

This bill intends to represent a more formal public status or acknowledgement kind of association. It is good to have an association like this one in Alberta. We have one in Ontario and B.C. and the Parliament of Canada, as I heard. But it must be nonpartisan and nonpolitical and nonprofit. We should compare similar associations and check with the other associations' bylaws as well.

I would support this bill with some reservations. I basically commend the idea, but do we really need this bill? Why can't we establish a registered society or association without the interference of the Legislature? Would it fulfill or stick to its mandate? Mr. Speaker, we have unequal distribution of former MLAs in Alberta. The group may have difficulty in engaging in activities or framing their messages in ways that didn't support the status quo. It is unfortunate but not surprising that the government members are more interested in forming this association. The group's mandate should be changed to expressly include looking at needed reforms. Is its mandate appropriate? No. It certainly needs some further reforms. It must be a politically neutral body. There is mounting evidence that such a forum is required and supported by the public.

Public educational efforts around parliamentary traditions are the importance of public service. I think it should be added to their mandate. There is very little reason to believe that former MLAs have a unique set of interests that need not be promoted through this group. What other interests they may have could revolve around pay, pension, et cetera. This association should not be entitled to become a lobby group. There is no provision for it being supported by public funds. So if it were to lobby for these interests, at least it would not be doing so with public funds. If they were able to apply, such as nonprofit organizations, for funding from the Alberta government, from an institution like the Wild Rose or the lottery, would this not be considered conflict of interest?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Anyone under Standing Order 29(2)(a)? If not, the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to join debate on Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act, sponsored by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose. I would like to begin by thanking the hon. member for bringing forward this idea. This is an issue that should be important to all Albertans who value the efficient and democratic function of this House.

The purpose of Bill 47 is to create an alumni association for former members of this Assembly. First and foremost, I believe that the most important aspect of this bill is that it would not require any public money. The association will be entirely self-sufficient and not dependent on taxpayers. No start-up fees, no seed money, nothing, not one thin dime, Mr. Speaker. I think that this point cannot be ignored. The Canadian Association of Former Parliamentarians is a model that this proposed action could be based upon. Although they are supported partially by the House of Commons, the bulk of their revenue comes from membership fees.

In the proposed bill there is no requirement that the Legislative Assembly of Alberta provide finances to this organization. If members choose to join the association, then they are free to do so. This alumni association would be nonpartisan and open to all former members of this House. Being a nonpartisan body is important as it will allow the opportunity for members to continue to work for the betterment of parliamentary democracy after they have retired from official public service. Mr. Speaker, I look forward to someday sitting down with the Liberals and the NDs and the member from the Alberta Alliance Party to discuss possible reforms in a friendly, nonpartisan manner.

Now, knowing the ins and outs of a parliamentary system can be a difficult thing to learn. I would argue that both current and former Members of the Legislative Assembly would qualify as experts. The knowledge that MLAs gather during their tenure is valuable to future generations, and creating this association would give a venue for this knowledge to be shared.

The Alberta association of former MLAs could share their knowledge of parliamentary systems not only with Albertans, but they could share this knowledge with Canadians and others around the world. Just because a member ceases to be an MLA does not mean that they no longer have a contribution to make to the betterment of Alberta and our parliamentary democracy. Establishing such an occasion would give former members another meaningful way of continuing their public service, to give back in a voluntary capacity.

Now, as I know most of you can attest to, being a member of this House is a demanding and rewarding job. It takes a lot out of a person to be a member. In exchange for all that being a member takes, there are many benefits that come with the job. Creating an alumni association is a small way that members can pay back Albertans for the opportunities presented to them because they've been members of this House.

Now, often we hear how people have become apathetic about politics. This general belief has been widely supported by the large reductions in voter turnout during elections at all levels. The story goes that a political candidate knocked on the door of a house and asked the occupant what the biggest reason was for low voter turnout. Was it ignorance, or was it apathy? The occupant replied: "I don't know, and I don't care," and they slammed the door shut.

The alumni association is a body that has the potential to re-engage Albertans with our political process. Freed from partisan ties, former members can travel around the province and provide first-hand accounts of what parliamentary democracy is all about. Without partisan ties people's cynicism toward politicians is diminished. I would ask this House: who would be better at rekindling political participation than former members of this House? You see, current members are likely too busy dealing with urgent matters and constituent concerns to undertake comprehensive examinations of the political process. Also, current members may be viewed as being biased towards one position or the other because of their partisan ties. As a nonpartisan body the alumni association would be able to take the time and engage Albertans without worrying about re-election. Former members will have more time to properly discuss democratic renewal initiatives as they have the expertise to conduct such investigations.

Albertans would value having the opportunity to speak to former MLAs about their experiences and learn their thoughts on the functioning of our parliamentary system. I'm sure, Mr. Speaker, that former members of this House would welcome the opportunity to educate people on politics with the goal of increasing participation in our system.

Now, there's also the opportunity for former members to share their expertise with emerging democracies around the world. Members of the Canadian Association of Former Parliamentarians plan to engage in activities such as these, and there's certainly a role for former members of this House in a similar capacity.

Mr. Speaker, the creation of a former members' association is in line with initiatives that the Legislative Assembly of Alberta currently undertakes. Currently this House is part of a number of interparliamentary associations. We work with the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association to promote parliamentary democracy throughout the Commonwealth and have formed numerous bilateral relations with American Legislatures.

Mr. Speaker, apart from undertaking work to enhance our system, students and charities are also likely to benefit from the creation of this association. This association will contain many influential people and should have no trouble launching a speakers' series that could raise significant amounts of money. These fundraising endeavours could be used to create scholarship funds to promote opportunities for university and high school students to study Parliament both at home and abroad. Such exchanges are currently supported by the Canadian Association of Former Parliamentarians and would be a natural task for an association of former MLAs to undertake.

Mr. Speaker, as I'm sure most members know, the Legislative Assembly of Alberta currently runs the School at the Legislature program. Now, an alumni of this House could possibly speak to students involved in this program and share their knowledge directly with students. Additionally, the presence of such an association could allow Alberta schools a significant distance from Edmonton to experience the program with former local members instructing the students. Who better to be a guest speaker to an eager group of students than a person with first-hand knowledge? Furthermore, students involved in the Forum for Young Albertans pay a visit to the Legislature each year. A former members' association could partner with programs such as these to enhance the educational experience students receive in these programs.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 47 is not proposing an idea that is unheard of. In 1970 the United States Association of Former Members of Congress was formed. This association works to enhance the awareness of the role of Congress both domestically and internationally. An association of former Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta could also fulfill a similar function and help to educate the people of Alberta about the role that the Legislative Assembly plays.

Other Canadian provinces have also developed similar organizations. B.C., Ontario, and Quebec have all created such associations. Each of these provinces' associations plays a similar role to the vision for an Alberta alumni association laid out in Bill 47.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would urge all members to support this legislation and remember that there is no cost to taxpayers associated with this legislation. The people of Alberta will not be funding this endeavour, which is an important fact that all members must keep in mind. We have the potential to do great service to the cause of enhancing parliamentary democracy without imposing costs on Albertans.

After a member's term as an elected official expires, there's still much that they can contribute to society. For a person who cares as much about Alberta as an MLA does, their life of public service never really ends. The creation of an association of former Alberta legislators will allow Alberta to create an arena where former MLAs can effectively contribute to the development of parliamentary democracy in this province.

So I would urge all members to support this bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

5:00

The Deputy Speaker: Are there any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to this Bill 47, formerly Bill 207, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act, sponsored by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose. While I'm not necessarily opposed to the idea, recognizing that maybe I myself many years from now might be a member of this organization . . .

Mr. R. Miller: Not for a long, long time.

Mr. Elsalhy: I'm talking 12, 15 years maybe.

I may repeat or may clarify some of the concerns that were voiced by some of my colleagues. Again, we're not necessarily against it, but we just need to clarify certain things. Is this just a club, or is it more? Is it a social gathering, or is it the launching pad for a lobbying group?

Mr. R. Miller: It could be the Alberta Senate.

Mr. Elsalhy: It could be the Alberta Senate, absolutely. Are we thinking of the establishment of an upper House?

Really the question is: what will this group's mandate be? Will its work include studying ways to rectify or address the democratic deficit that is identified in this province? Will it promote more access to information? Will it advocate more all-party representation on committees, more dialogue?

I am also concerned that when we're talking about the centennial celebrations and how this is fitting to include former MLAs in an organization that they belong to and they become a member of, I'm aware of the fact that it is the centennial year, but it's also the two years leading up to a leadership race within the governing party. One is noticing certain leadership manoeuvres, and people are trying to align themselves with one candidate or another. My question would be: are we establishing this to impress somebody, or are we trying to curry favour?

People are aware of the exercise that's happening across the floor here. We have three leadership candidates who are cabinet ministers, but then we also have three outside who are no longer members of this government. So what's happening?

I listened with keen interest to the comments made by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, and I, too, would welcome the day when that hon. member and the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford would engage in a friendly game of fencing or kick-boxing perhaps. Who said that it has to stop with golf or chess?

Seriously, though, my question would be: who is going to fund this organization? If we ask questions about its mandate and the scope of its work and the membership, who's going to fund it? Are we talking government grants? Are we talking about, like the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall mentioned, them being a nonprofit organization, and it would raise funds on its own? Would they charge membership fees for people to enter? How is it going to work?

Also, I'm concerned with section 3(1)(e), which talks about protecting and preserving and promoting the interests of former MLAs. Why is this needed, and what are those interests exactly? Again, that leads up to my prior question on them becoming or morphing into a lobbying group.

I was officially appointed today as a member of the Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee, but I sat at most of the meetings. During a discussion with the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow she mentioned that once cabinet ministers leave cabinet, they become nobodies, and I'm quoting her. I disagreed with her because they still have a lot of clout. So let me extend this same discussion and this same rationale to the hon. Premier when he retires in a year or two. He would become a member of this former MLA club, and then he might apply to receive some funding for a project.

I would find it very hard to believe that a former Premier, still fresh in people's minds, would be denied his application or that he would find difficulty in getting his approval. We could extend this to former cabinet ministers, and then, by the same token, to everybody in this House, be it government backbenchers or opposition MLAs or private members. We need a cooling-off period like we have discussed in the Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee, and maybe we should extend it to this bill as well and to this organization. On that note, I am hoping to deliver an amendment to this act, hopefully tomorrow, and it will speak to that effect. We need a cooling-off period that would prevent people from joining this organization till after one year has elapsed.

Mr. R. Miller: And a lobbyist registry. Register as a lobbyist.

Mr. Elsalhy: And a lobbyist registry because they should register as a lobbying group, and if they fail to or if they actually have the government's ear and they're not on the books, then we're subject to penalties and we're subject to disciplinary action.

Mr. R. Miller: That means that the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs wouldn't have been a member last year because he would have had to wait a year to join, right?

Mr. Elsalhy: Speaking to that point raised by Edmonton-Rutherford, the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs would have to send back his membership card.

Anyways, my next question is talking about meetings of the board, and maybe I'm early because it's not in committee yet. Section 12(4) talks about "the affirmative votes of the majority of the directors present at a meeting at which a quorum is present" and that being "sufficient to pass a resolution or bylaw of the Association." We know that for the past 34 years the majority of governments in this province were all Conservative, and although we're working to change that, till then the numbers speak for themselves.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre talked about her discomfort because she doesn't think she would be welcomed in that organization, although she's entitled to join it. I am also wary that when we're conducting the affairs of the organization and carrying out the duties of those who choose to join, then maybe the same argument should apply, and we need an extraordinary majority provision that would be useful here in the interest of fairness and in the interest of having all former MLAs from all the different stripes and all the different ideologies represented fairly and equally. With that, tomorrow I am hoping to table that amendment to this Bill 47, and I will invite discussion.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)? Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to rise for the first time in the fall sitting to speak on Bill 47. I find it interesting in some small ways that we are debating this here in the Legislature. Certainly, our caucus doesn't have a great deal of a problem with the proposal to have an Alberta association for former MLAs. I think that ambivalence might characterize our discussions on this particular bill thus far.

There are certain, I think, educational opportunities here with this association to spread the knowledge and understanding of legislative procedure throughout the province, and I would suggest that if this bill does indeed pass and the association is enacted that the focus of such a group would be towards schools and schoolchildren, to teach parliamentary procedure and the various machinations of government and democracy to our young people because, of course, the dearth of sort of interest in voting is perhaps the most pointed amongst young people in this province. You know, it is our duty to ensure that these young people turn out to be productive voting members of our society at some later time. So I think that if this act does in fact get into place, this should perhaps be moved more prominently to the purpose and the reason for this association to exist in the first place.

I think that the ideology of having some nonpartisan group for ex-MLAs to meet looks good on paper. I guess there is some obvious reservation and limitation there, but we can look past those things, I think, if we are looking at specific goals for this association to be focusing on, and as I said, education certainly is amongst the most paramount benefits that this association could work on. As well, the act itself does discuss specifically raising money for scholarships and bursaries, and certainly, again, this would be a great philanthropic sort of endeavour for us to do once we become former MLAs. I mean, I don't think I'll ever be in that position for a long, long time, but I'm certain that many people in here at various times will be retiring or will be defeated and be joining this group, so that's great.

I do have some reservation – and I'm not exactly sure, but I did want to express it during this reading – about former members representing the province of Alberta or even the government of Alberta at certain functions. The influence of past MLAs can loom large in certain situations and potentially compromise the authority of sitting MLAs. I've been at a number of events during the course of the summer where very recently defeated MLAs were in fact taking representative roles for sitting MLAs, and I found that to be okay because, of course, I have a sense of largesse and good nature, but there is some potential for misusing this element of the association of former MLAs to perhaps create an imbalance, a democratic imbalance. [interjection] Yes. Well, that's what my fear is indeed.

As I said, if we can focus the association to work on various philanthropic pursuits, including raising money and educating the public, particularly our children, I think that they could do only a benefit and a service to the province, but if we have this sort of thing that's kind of morphing and changing over time, then the potential for abuse is definitely there.

I heard some member stealing my very clever idea that I hoped that this is not forming the nucleus of perhaps a second Chamber of Senators in the province of Alberta, where this former MLA group in fact becomes a place where appointed Senators come from, in some second Chamber. I would certainly not appreciate that, even if I was appointed myself. Our party does not condone that sort of thing. You know, at the end of the day I suppose former NDP MLAs, a growing group, very slowly of course, present company excepted, do want to have a place to perhaps associate with each other. We know that the Conservatives have a defacto ex-MLA place to meet in a club, which is often something that resembles the Petroleum Club in Calgary, or on boards of directorships for various junior oil companies in our province.

The Liberals as well do have some places to go with the various appointments and Senatorial appointments, particularly that their federal counterparts might give them, but the poor NDP doesn't have such an association to go to. We go back to doing charitable work, I suppose, so we would be happy to be participating in some way with the Alberta association of former MLAs. As I said, my caucus has some small reservations, but otherwise we certainly do support the basic idea.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does anyone wish to have a question or comment under Standing Orders?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my great pleasure to rise and speak on the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act. This bill is not about money. It's not about funding health care or rebating money to Albertans. It is to create an organization of former MLAs. Many would ask: why do we need to debate and spend time on such an organization? I would argue that this bill is about more than just making a club for former MLAs. This bill is about strengthening democracy and promoting the public's involvement in the political process, something that seems to be happening less these days.

We hear people talking about apathy of voters, grassroots democracy, democracy deficit, and so on. Mr. Speaker, the association of former MLAs could help increase the interest in politics because members could help to teach about political processes. They can offer their personal experiences, and they could assist the public by showing them how the government could work for them. More importantly, however, an association of former MLAs could work to increase the interest in the democratic process in our province, right here. By going into schools, by speaking to our youth, and by organizing educational events, they will be able to bring democratic involvement to the forefront.

Mr. Speaker, as MLAs we try our best to visit as many events as possible. We connect with our constituents, and we promote democracy, but we all are very busy, and we can only do so much. An association of former MLAs will be able to assist and do more for us. In this regard the association can work well as a complement to the Legislative Assembly or to the government. It can, however, do even more for the province in general because it can work to promote and restore democracy generally, instead of from a certain perspective of a certain party.

To explain exactly what an association like this is able to do for democracy, I have looked at the United States Association of Former Members of Congress, which is essentially the same type of organization this bill is proposing to form. Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Association of Former Members of Congress is involved with numerous programs, has written several books, and has contributed greatly to democracy in America and other countries, such as Cameroon and Ukraine.

One of their most famous and most successful programs is the Congress to campus program. This program was founded by the association in 1976 and reaches a wide audience of students, faculties, and college communities with its unique story about representative democracy and its special call for public service. The members of the association were worried about the poor state of civic literacy among America's youth and the breadth and depth of the electorate in decline. What worried them even more, however, was that with this reduced interest in the democratic process, the source of informed leaders for the future was in some jeopardy. These were the association's motives behind creating the Congress to campus program.

They designed the program to address several aspects of civic learning and engagement deficit among the country's college-age people. The program sends bipartisan pairs of former members of Congress, one Democrat and the other Republican, to visit campuses around the U.S.A. These former members spend two and a half days conducting classes, holding community forums, meeting informally with students and faculty, visiting high schools and civic organizations, and doing interviews and talk-show appearances with local press and media.

This program provides a distinctive and powerful means to educate the next generation about American government, politics, and public affairs. The members provide solid content, discussing how Congress and government really work and relating their experiences as candidates and politicians, all combined with an appeal to public service and an important message about bipartisan co-operation.

Mr. Speaker, the voter turnout in this past provincial election shows the need for such a program. We need to do more to engage our electorate, and an association of former MLAs could be another way to do this. Former MLAs understand how the Legislature works, understand how policy formation works, and understand the processes involved in both. Their unique experiences are a truly invaluable resource that we should be utilizing.

Mr. Speaker, the United States Association of Former Members of Congress is also involved in other programs. I would like to explain some of these programs as an association of Alberta MLAs would be able to create programs similar to these if the bill is passed. One program, called the international legislative and democracy training program, is a collaborative effort of the association, U.S. government agencies, private foundations, and other organizations. Together this group focuses on legislative training and democracy-building activities around the world. To achieve this with more efficiency and accuracy, the association created a data bank of members' interests and areas of expertise to facilitate matching members with specific requests for assistance. This program has been very, very successful. The association also has arranged 49 foreign policy seminars in nine countries involving more than 1,500 participants to discuss critical issues affecting their nations and the world.

Although the provincial legislators may not be experienced with foreign policy, such seminars could prove to be extremely helpful on the interprovincial level. Such seminars could also be set up between Alberta and the United States to discuss important trading issues that affect both jurisdictions. Although these efforts would not necessarily lead to new policy, ideas would come out as a result of the magnitude of experience within the association that would be very useful to the government. Furthermore, by creating an association through legislation, this will create a higher level of legitimacy for the association.

The purpose of this bill is not to create a feel-good organization for former MLAs to get together to overcome their boredom. The purpose is to create an association of people who have invaluable experience and specific knowledge of the unique world of provincial politics. The purpose for these people is to be able to spread this knowledge and spread the democratic message.

I trust that our elected members have the higher calling of improving our local and global society beyond our low-level political partisan manoeuvring and positioning. When they retire from politics, I trust that their higher calling continues. I believe that these are the members who would join the association and help to promote a higher calling locally and globally.

For the reasons I have provided above and for the purpose of promoting democracy, I urge all of you to join me in voting in favour of this bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I will be very brief. Obviously, the time will ensure that I am very brief. I probably will speak to this again because I do believe there are a number of points.

Certainly, I'm at sixes and sevens with this whole proposition. It really does sort of smack of the old boys' club, and I think that using the word "boys" is in everyone's fantasy as they will obviously go into this group at an older age. Having said that, I don't want to be referred to as the old girl, so I'm sort of putting the House on notice that I would prefer to be referred to as the grand old lady of the Leg. should this pass.

One of the things that does concern me – I'm going to save that for the second time I talk to it, but I will speak to something that actually is in the bill as it's presented that I truly have a problem with, and that is number 10. It says that the honorary president is the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. That would be the honorary president of the association. As I turn the page to 16(1), it also says that "within 3 months of the coming into force of this Act, the Speaker must appoint 7 former MLAs, who [will] constitute the Board." My main problem with this is that I honestly believe that should this pass and you do form this association, it should not have that tight an association with this House. That is a problem that I've picked up through this bill. I believe that it should be, should it pass, a stand-alone organization and not be connected.

The other thing that sort of made me have to think twice was when I heard it was suggested that old MLAs would substitute for sitting members in the particular riding. I could see where that could well be a problem when we actually have ridings change hands. Now, granted that is not a huge thing that happens in this province, but it has been known to happen, and I would suspect that it may happen in the future . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, the background noise is getting too loud to hear the speaker. I know you're very enthusiastic to get back together here and enjoy each other's company, but we have business to conduct.

So, Member, if you would like to continue.

Ms Pastoor: Okay. I'll close debate, and I'll add my further comments in committee.

Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate lost]

The Deputy Speaker: Does the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose wish to close?

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we heard a good debate, and I would move that we call for the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 47 read a second time]

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 15, 2005

8:00 p.m.

Date: 05/11/15

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Marz in the chair]

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005

The Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order. The committee has under consideration amendment A1. Are there any comments, questions offered on A1? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I must compliment the mover of the bill for seeking amendments to deal with the deficiencies found by many when the bill was introduced in the spring. To bring forth two pages of amendments to the amending bill are significant changes, and they do improve the bill substantially, but I still do not think they go far enough on certain issues and do not fully speak to some of the problems raised concerning this legislation in the spring.

First, I will take note of the process here. I did meet with WCB representatives and interest groups concerning this legislation during the summer. Many of the concerns spoken to in this Legislature in the spring were raised again as well as other deficiencies in the present WCB legislation that have either been problematic for a long, long time or have never been acted upon. Chief among those not acted upon is the problem of long-standing contentious claims.

Getting to look at the final form of this amending legislation has been a challenge. I asked the minister to meet and go over it quite some time ago, and a meeting was never granted. We did, however, get a meeting or a short briefing by a WCB representative last week, but the first time we have actually seen the proposed amendments was after, I believe, 3:30 this afternoon. Some of the amendments we expected to see and supported are not in this amendment package. I am told that the amendments providing presumptive coverage for firefighters for heart attacks within 24 hours of an emergency response will come forward as stand-alone legislation in a few days. If that does not happen, the message that it has been withdrawn or will not be going forward will, I'm sure, go out to every firefighter in this province. That provision is properly included in the act and must go forward.

Other clauses, such as section (10), that I was led to believe would be included are not. I had hoped that the legislation would not allow the WCB to withhold necessary medical prescriptions or medically necessary treatments, and I do not see that here in these amendments.

Worst of all today, I find, is the process. To get something like 15 amendments on an amending bill, that's already seven pages long as it was presented in the spring, to amend a very complicated piece of legislation that is 90 pages long and to have an hour or two to dissect that prior to debate is bizarre at best. This can be done much better.

One of the real problems that we do see, I think, is the problem, although it's an advance and although it's an improvement, of the change from subrogation to divested action in section 22.1.

Although it's significant, it still does not go far enough. The proposed amending provision in 3.1 has the wording:

If the Board determines that it is not in the best interests of the Accident Fund or the workers' compensation system to bring an action under section 22, the Board may divest itself of the action and assign it in writing to the claimant, in which event the claimant may bring the action.

This wording continues to give the hammer, so to speak, to the board. The board chooses; the board retains the power to choose. This is not a true choice factor here unless I'm somehow reading this wrong. So this is one question. If I am reading this wrong, I will ask the mover: is it the will of the government and the understanding of the mover that this section does in fact give the power of choice to someone who is dealing with a compensable WCB claim that can be dealt with as an automobile insurance claim to choose which way he or she wants to go? That was one of the key factors: choice.

The interests of workers and the interests of employers, I see, are still not being dealt with fully by the proposed amendments and by the proposed changes. I can't see that the real issues affecting subrogation, for example, have been dealt with. Some of the issues are important and must be dealt with. The immunity from lawsuits to the WCB boards of directors is a good and proper thing. The changing of subrogation to vesting in civil actions against third parties as it does stand is a good way to move although it does not go far enough. The change in the reporting relationship of the medical panels office of the WCB is a major improvement.

The many matters that are dealt with in this bill I think needed much further consultation, and that in itself was one of the great issues that was raised in the spring: the fact that we did not have the time to get it out to interested parties, to interested workers, to interested businesses, to interested Albertans. That we have not done that, again, I think weakens the potential legislation that could have come forward.

The importance of the Workers' Compensation act cannot be understated in the operation of our economy. What it does is it provides the protection for businesses from the hundreds of thousands of claims. I believe the WCB had something like a hundred and some thousand claims last year. To have those potentially go before the courts or some other process would stifle our economy and would hurt the way that our economy works and that in fact our businesses and corporations are run. It would not work very well at all. It does, however, in that operation take away the right of those workers to sue, and it does take away that clear opportunity that we have in every other financial and contractual dealing that we have in our society. It is very, very different.

In so doing, it gives the WCB, the Workers' Compensation Board, which is actually not very accountable because it is removed from government, great power over the lives of many individuals in our society. We have thousands, indeed perhaps tens of thousands of long-standing contentious claims that still do need to be dealt with. We do have a problem, even though I think it's improved quite a bit, and I think there should be some kudos given to the present management over at the WCB for improving the situation that we, in fact, do see at the WCB in terms of its dealing with many of the problems of confidence that it has in general society. But I believe that that general confidence has still not been gained perfectly and correctly in that there are a lot of people who are very, very skeptical about what the WCB is and how it works and how it operates in our province. The skepticism is not good for the operation of our economy.

The particular issue of subrogation or vesting or the transfer of those particular rights when somebody gets in an auto accident, although it doesn't affect a huge, huge number of cases, affects a significant number of people and their lives and the families of those around them.

I believe this legislation can be improved still. I do commend the mover for bringing forth these amendments and that this was delayed to the fall to improve it, but I do think that, in fact, it can be improved more still.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Hon. members, before we recognize the next speaker, could I have unanimous consent to revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I am extremely pleased to rise and welcome five of my young constituents who are sitting in the public gallery. They're here to observe democracy in action, and they're members of a team that I call the Young McClung. I'd ask them to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

Bill 15
Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I, too, would like to commend the member. While I would agree that this is certainly not perfect, it's much better than what came to the Legislature. I think he was probably a little surprised at the reaction on the opposite side because I know he was told that it was a housekeeping bill, and I know that it wasn't just the member that was told that. I have an article from the Journal back at that time where the WCB spokeswoman, Lorraine Lynch-Geisler, said that Bill 15 is a housekeeping matter. So I'm sure that was the message. I hope you sent the message back to them strongly and clearly that they'd put you in a very difficult spot, I believe, by telling you it was housekeeping when you're a new member coming in. To the member's credit he stopped the process and at least got some changes, I think, that are desirable.

I would like to first of all, Mr. Chairman, talk about the consultation again. Many of the changes are good, but the consultation still has not occurred to the degree that it should. We talked to the Alberta Federation of Labour. They weren't aware of the amendments. As the Member for Edmonton-Manning said: you know, we just got them here today. In our quick perusal and in some conversation we had with your office, we had some idea ahead, but I think that with a major bill with the WCB, probably the WCB should have sat down with a lot more of the people ahead of time.

In saying that, Mr. Chairman, the problem is – and I think I'd say it to the member – that the WCB is not held in high regard in this province among workers. Every time we raise something about the WCB, you can expect to get a number of phone calls to your office. There's a great deal of, I would say, distrust of anything that the WCB brings about, and that makes it harder in the Legislature to bring in legislation, whether it's good or bad, because people just don't believe what the WCB is telling them. I think the point I'd make is that the member has had some experience in dealing with the WCB and was told it was a housekeeping bill. I think the member would agree that it was not a housekeeping bill; it was a fairly major bill.

It just is true that the WCB is not held in high regard by many workers. In fact, I've never had a worker come up to me and say: gee, we really appreciate the work the WCB is doing. On the contrary. I think we're still into the culture of denial that was identified by retired Judge Samuel Friedman in his review committee of the Workers' Compensation Board appeal system. What he meant is that most workers, in particular a majority of injured workers, do not trust the Workers' Compensation Board. That makes it, as I say, difficult when we're dealing with legislation here. It is clear, that if there's any story about – in fact, I can't think of a story that brings in more phone calls to our office than one about the WCB. I think it's true of other members. Immediately there is a phone call.

Appeals. I know it's a different part of it, the Appeals Commission. We were told that we're going to try to get it down to 90 days. I've had clients that on the Appeals Commission have been there 14 months. So there's just this, as I say, utter lack of trust in the WCB, and I think it's reflected when we try to bring a bill here in the Legislature.

Mr. Chairman, in saying that, trying to look at the legislation, I think that, generally, there are some positive changes from what we were dealing with to begin with. I'm not a lawyer. Subjugation, divesting – you know, I think that divesting, according to the legal people we've talked to, is better in terms that at least it does allow the WCB to divest the right of action to a worker. The way it was before, they had no choice. Now, I know that there are a lot of people that believe their case is going ahead and that they've got all the right ingredients to make it in the court case. The board is at least allowing them to do that, I guess, with their own resources, and that, I believe, is a step in the right direction. It's not preventing them from independent actions.

Similarly, there are proposed amendments to sections 22(4) and 22(5), which will hopefully make the legal process more co-operative and allow the worker to have some say in selecting legal counsel, both of which are, I believe, a step in the right direction.

Mr. Chairman, we're also happy to see new provisions to protect employees from intimidation or coercion on the part of the employer when action against a third party is being pursued. Now, this is still a very difficult thing to do because you almost have to show an impediment, and a lot of workers would be afraid to deal with an angry employer. Now, in saying that, I'm not sure how you can change that legislation. That's just human nature.

The changes to the medical panels also appear to be improvements, and we're particularly happy to see the explicit removal of retroactivity in section 22(2). When we saw this bill, it appeared to be an attempt to do an end run around the Gutierrez court decision. By removing any possibility of retroactivity, we know that workers can have an idea of what to expect without having that worry that settled cases may be reopened. That was probably the most odious and offensive part of the previous bill.

In saying all this, Mr. Chairman, as I say, the changes that have been brought in are certainly – certainly – an improvement from the original bill, but there are still some problems. The major ones that I see – and I have a couple of questions here, particularly on 22(9) and 22(10). These are the sections where workers could be effectively forced to participate in an action that they do not support. Now, I do understand that the language has been softened, but the fact remains that workers can be forced to participate in this action.

I'm happy to see that overpayments will not be created, but the difference – I think the changes are between withholding payments and suspending them – is a moot point because you're just not getting the payments until the worker complies. So that seems to be marginal at best.

Now, my understanding about the prescriptions and that is that that would continue under this new bill's prescriptions and surgery. I'd like to ask the member just to clarify that that's the case.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that this whole section should be removed. I do not believe that a worker, against their own will, should be forced into an action against their employer if they don't want to be there. I think that's contrary to, you know, even civil society: you're going to do this regardless because Big Brother is going to do it for you. I don't understand why we need to proceed with that. I really would like to have the member, as he's done before, take this particular section back.

Being the ever helpful person that I am, I have a subamendment to the amendment that I would like to bring in. All I'm doing is "striking out subsection (10)." I think if we could look at that and say that that's unacceptable in a democratic society, that a person be forced into something that they don't want to do, then this bill could probably be one that could be supported. So, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to pass out this amendment.

Thank you.

The Chair: Okay. We're going to wait until this is distributed. Then you'll speak on the subamendment. We will be referring to the subamendment as SA1.

Would the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview like to proceed on subamendment 1?

Mr. Martin: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I think it's pretty self-explanatory. Section (10) is the one that I was just talking about. It says that "if a claimant does not comply with subsection (9)," the board can literally force him to do it by withholding compensation. Admittedly, it is an improvement from the past, as I said, where they could actually backspace and try to collect what they call overpayments. My understanding is that they can still continue with prescriptions and surgery, but I find it unacceptable where we say that we will suspend payments of compensation if a worker does not participate in an action that they don't want to participate in against their employer for whatever reason. It may be fear. It may be that they think that their employer is a good guy or whatever. It seems to me that that's a little overkill, that we'd force a person to do something they don't want to do. I'm asking that they take a look at that and just remove, as I said, that whole subsection (10).

Thank you.

The Chair: Does anyone else wish to participate in the debate on subamendment 1? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Actually, we were working on a similar amendment and having some difficulty getting it forward. Finally, I'm pleased to see this amendment here. There's a lot to say for striking out subsection (10) because that is one of the more offensive areas of this legislation. Although it has been improved, to strike it out would be a good move, and I think that that's worthy of support.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I, too, support this amendment. When a person is forced to go on WCB, they're at the most vulnerable time. They've been injured either mentally or physically, and the suggestion that the WCB is going to hold their arm behind their back and twist it by denying them the medications that they require as part of their recovery seems inhumane and intolerable. We have processes that should not involve this type of arm-twisting. How down-and-out do you have to be before you're going to be beaten into further submission?

I would suggest that this is a very good amendment. We should be supporting the workers, not twisting them further.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I, too, would support this amendment because initially I had difficulty understanding that vague reference made to an injured worker failing to co-operate with the board.

The definition of "failure to co-operate." What constitutes failure to co-operate? Who decides what failure is, the parameters, the criteria, and whether, in fact, this decision might be changing from one person to the next or from one adjudicator to the next? We want to have the assurance that all decisions are based on objective and solid criteria and that they don't change with the person adjudicating the case or the person sitting across pleading their case.

So I, too, would support this amendment to strike subsection (10). Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I don't support striking out subsection (10). I think it's a bit unfortunate that we're dealing with this particular amendment in this particular form because I'm sure that the members opposite are probably aware that there was another package of intended amendments to the bill that were deemed to be outside the scope of the bill and therefore have to come back as a separate bill, which we fully intend to do. Part of that was dealing with the question of medication, for example, that the hon. member mentioned. Part of it was dealing, of course, with the heart attacks and so on with firemen, and the other part was an important part, to move the medical panels away from the WCB and give them independence.

I think one has to remember that when you receive compensation from the Workers' Compensation Board in a case where a third party may in fact be liable, you have to be able to proceed to recover those costs. In the event that an employee was not co-operative in that effort, it means that the process probably becomes a lot more costly because, as you know, issues that go to court, first of all, take a long time, but if there's an issue of co-operation and things have to be rescheduled and so on, it becomes even more costly.

So while I agree that items such as medications and so on should not be withheld, I think that there needs to be a way of making sure that these actions that are intended to recover costs from a third party, not from the injured worker but from a third party – there has to be a mechanism to allow those things to proceed in an orderly way.

The WCB has indicated that it's quite prepared to let the Lieutenant Governor in Council make regulations with respect to that because it was an issue that this side of the House was also concerned with in terms of making sure that we do not just simply accept the fact that they say: well, it's our policy; therefore, trust us.

So one of the things that we were talking about was to ensure that the Lieutenant Governor in Council can actually create regulations to make sure that the policy does in fact get applied. For that reason, I think that we ought to leave section (10) as it is, and when the second bill by necessity comes through, then I think the hon. members will be happy with what is proposed.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Economic Development.

Mr. Dunford: Just to speak on SA1. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, who is bringing forward the amendment, talked earlier in his comments before presenting the amendment about the lack of trust that workers have in the WCB. I believe that the bringing forward of this amendment and from what I've heard on the part of the opposition members in support of the subamendment tells me that there's a lot of work to be done in this House in getting people to recognize the tremendous changes and reforms that have been made in the workers' compensation system in Alberta.

There is no question that 10 years ago, in the early and mid-90s, there was a crisis of confidence in the Workers' Compensation Board system. It seemed like there wasn't a day that went by when it wouldn't come up in question period. It didn't matter whether it was opposition MLAs or government MLAs. No one trusted the workers' compensation system. It had been allowed to get into an unfunded liability system the way that others have across this country.

A lot of work was done. Reference was made to Judge Friedman, and there were other subcommittees. Task forces that were put together came forward with recommendations, and a tremendous regeneration, I'll call it, of workers' compensation happened then in this province, but it takes a while for the culture to actually change. It's a lot like coffee shop talk where you sit and you listen time after time after time to old and outdated stories that no longer apply to the new situation.

I think that at some point in time members of this Assembly are going to have to understand that it is going to be incumbent on them as political leaders in this province, as leaders within their own constituency to actually start looking at what is there, promoting what is good, but continue, of course, then, to advocate for and to change what needs to be changed. But this crisis of confidence that we are seeing displayed in the House tonight really is not warranted.

The system has evolved now to I believe a genuine concern of getting a worker back to work as soon as possible, and what that means primarily is that the medical protocol is determined as soon as possible and that medical protocol is actually followed. You would be surprised – and it's been my experience – at how many individuals simply refuse to follow the medical protocols.

There has to be in a workers' compensation system a genuine commitment on the part of the medical profession, on the part of the employer, and on the part of the worker. With the Workers' Compensation Board overlooking all of this, there has to be a genuine commitment to get back to work as quickly as possible, and this should be a nonpartisan issue. The simple fact of the matter is that the longer a worker is separated from their employment, whether it be through unemployment or whether it be through workers' comp or some other kind of situation, the harder it is for them to ever get back.

It seems to me that when we have to weigh a balance here of getting the person back to work or, you know, continuing to collect money from a system based on some individual right, I think we have to take what is in my view the interest of the worker, and that is the medical opinion. At some point we have to put our faith, or at least recognize the decision-making, in the hands of the medical profession. If we don't do that, we go back to the system we had 10 years ago where we have nonexperts with coffee shop attitudes trying to determine what is a workers' compensation system.

This situation in Alberta has been turned around by any measure that you want to make in terms of our system in Alberta versus any other jurisdiction. This system in the last 10 years has turned itself around, and now is the time I think for us to not only recognize that but to give a stamp of approval to that. With that situation, I would urge all members, despite the well-meaning intentions of the mover of SA1 and the supporters of SA1, to actually defeat SA1 and approve the amendment that's here in front of us tonight.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I, too, do not support this amendment. In section 22(10) the remedy provision, where a claimant refuses to co-operate in the pursuit of a third-party action, is now restricted to temporary suspension of wage replacement benefits during the period of noncompliance. Suspension does not affect WCB-provided health care benefits. It does not include benefits such as prescription drugs or surgery. The ability of the WCB to declare an overpayment for benefits paid has been removed. Co-operation is important so that the WCB can successfully recover funds for the accident fund. It does not subsidize private insurers for failing to seek recovery.

Again, the WCB has invested money into this injured worker through benefits paid and wages paid. They must recover their money somehow, and they need the co-operation of the injured worker in order to pursue the third party. This amendment that the hon. member has put forward will eliminate that. So, Mr. Chairman, I do not support this amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I must thank the Member for Lethbridge-West for his comments and say that our thoughts from this side of the House are with you, sir, that your health will have no difficulties in the future, and I hope that that will go well for you.

The issue of the WCB and that it is something that is solved, something that is fully fixed, something that the public should be fully supportive of, and that it's the perfect system is not, in my view, the view of many workers who are dealing with it, and those workers are the customers. Although customer service has improved, it is not there yet.

The WCB is not a social program. It's not something to be cut or to put more funds into, do all those types of things. It's not a corporation to be run at a profit, although it certainly has increased its surplus to incredible proportions in the last year. It should be run well. It should not be run at a loss. That's absolutely for sure. We should be clear that it is an insurance program that gives workers the confidence that when they go to work in many of the difficult jobs that we have in the oil fields, in industrial construction, on the pipelines, and many of the things that are being done to build Alberta, they have that protection to fall back on, some support for themselves and their families when they in fact do get a debilitating injury or something that will put them out of work for their lives.

Many of them that do come to my office and many other MLAs' offices are really put off time and again by being told that even though they might have been a railroad engineer or a journeyman crane operator or any of a number of highly skilled, highly trained jobs – and many of them had been at the top of their trades, their careers, or whatever. They were in something that demanded some physical capacity, and when they were hurt, they ran into difficulty and were told that they had to go back to work as – a common one is a greeter at Wal-Mart or working at McDonald's, something that did not in any way deal with retraining them to do something that was at their former status in society or making them in any way to their former skills, contributing to society to the degree that they thought that they were in the past, and that has brought disrepute in itself to the workmen's compensation insurance system. Very clearly the reality is that it's not there yet.

The moves in this bill to deal with the medical panels I think are a great improvement. There still is a strong feeling that a lot of the actual hiring or whatever you want to call the contracting of those medical doctors that are involved with the WCB should be with a totally independent group that looks to the welfare of the workers. I accept that the minister has strong views on this, but I do not accept that the system is there yet.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just a couple of remarks again about, first of all, the subamendment. The point that I'm trying to make about this particular subamendment – and I don't think it would happen very often – is that there may be a legitimate reason why a worker does not want to be involved in a court case against their employer. There's no appeal mechanism. There's nothing. It's either do it or not, and I think that that's just too dictatorial. It gives too much power to the WCB. As I say, it's probably not going to happen all that many times, but I don't see why we need to have a sledgehammer to knock in a tack, and that's really what I see this doing. At least if there's some other way to do it, some appeal mechanism or whatever – but that's a lot of power. You have to go to court against your employer. We're telling you that. Period. Point blank. It seems to me that that doesn't give that particular worker much option. As I said, I doubt that it would happen that much. Most often the court case is going to go ahead. I don't see why we can't remove that section and move on with it, but I understand the results of the vote here. I think it's pretty clear.

I also would like to say that I know that the previous Minister of Economic Development did some good work, and I know that there is an attempt to fix WCB. But I would say to the Minister of Economic Development – and we talked to people that have been involved, some of whom he would know – that if there was an improvement, it's going the other way now. It has to do not so much, I don't think, with what was put in it; it's a culture that they're talking about there. I know that we can't fix the culture here, but that is happening.

Immediately after, you know, the recommendations that were made in the past, there was, I think, some improvement. At least, people that were around that know more about it than me said that there was. But those same people now – and I know that the minister would know some of them – are saying: it's sliding. They're talking about a culture over there that's a culture of denial again, as it was. I'm not sure that you can fix that always by legislation. When you're dealing with a culture, as the minister said, that happens, but I think he would be surprised at the dissatisfaction that is creeping back, dealing with WCB.

I've always said that a lot of the legislation this member has brought forward – and I gave him credit – is good. It's certainly an improvement from the previous act. I appreciate the fact that this member did listen and came back and made a lot of recommendations. I was just trying to say that I still don't understand why it seems to me to be punitive. Maybe I'm missing something. I know that it's cost and all the rest of it. I honestly don't think it would happen, but if you had a legitimate reason that you didn't want to proceed in a court action – I guess any reason that a person feels is legitimate, at least for them. Maybe they'd lose their job down the way. Maybe they're afraid. There may be all sorts of reasons why they don't want to do it. But we're basically saying: "You have to. You have to no matter what happens to you down the way with your employer."

I think there's got to be a better way to deal with this. As I said, I doubt that it would happen that often where that would be the case, but I think it's a serious enough matter that we should look at it. If we're not prepared to take out section (10), then maybe there's an appeal procedure or something that could make this a little more palatable for a worker that didn't want to involve themselves in this regard. I'll leave that with the member.

That was my understanding, too, that they could still collect prescription drugs and surgery and that. That's why I wanted that confirmation. That certainly is a step in the right direction. I'm glad you got rid of the so-called overpayments. That was a step in the right direction.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I want to start by paying tribute to the former minister of labour, now the Minister of Economic Development. I can understand why he feels strongly about this because he was the guy who had the intestinal fortitude to take on a couple of reviews of the WCB. I know that he believes very strongly in the recommendations that were made.

Let me share with you information that you probably don't know, and that is that since the last election I've been chairing a committee that is looking at how the WCB is implementing those 59 recommendations. I have to agree with the member opposite when he says that it's not perfect. It isn't. In fact, there are a couple of areas that are still seriously flawed. But I can also tell you that the WCB, in the last 11 months or 10 months that we've been working on this, has in fact agreed to take certain actions and certain steps, which they're currently piloting, from what I understand, with quite good success.

There were two main areas. One was that the first level of review was supposed to be an alternate disputes resolution process. Instead, the WCB implemented an alternate decision review process. Well, if the decision is made, you know, you're into an appeal. That's not mediation. We had intended a mediation step in the recommendations originally. So the WCB has agreed that maybe they missed the boat there and, in fact, are now implementing an alternate disputes resolution process instead of a decision review process. They've been doing it now for a couple of months, and the early reports I'm getting are that the satisfaction level amongst injured workers is quite phenomenal with respect to that.

The second major problem area was that only 25 per cent of the medical facts were ever being agreed to by the treating physician, so in 75 per cent of the cases there may have been some disputes with respect to the medical facts. Now, in policy the WCB says: well, we want to ensure that we agree with the treating physician on the extent of the injury and the course of treatment, the treatment plan. But if you could only contact 25 per cent of them, you're going to have an awful lot of cases that have problems.

Consequently, what has been done – and that will be the subject of a report that I will be releasing early in the new year – is that there's now a fee that's been approved by the Alberta Medical Association for a doctor to return the WCB's call. What was happening was that the doctors weren't returning their calls, so now there's a fee associated with that. Is that going to solve all the problems? Probably not. But chances are that if you get paid, say, $30 for 15 minutes, and if it goes longer than 15 minutes, there's another $30, that's as much as seeing another patient. So I would think it's going to help.

I just wanted to share that with you because things are getting better, and they're going to get a lot better. Thank you.

The Chair: Before I recognize the Member for Calgary-Varsity, I'd just like to remind all members that we are debating subamendment 1, not the bill. It's a very short amendment. So on SA1, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I do very much appreciate the clarification by the Member for Calgary-Foothills indicating that medications would not be suspended during this process, and I do appreciate the Member for Calgary-Egmont clarifying where the progress is being made with the WCB. I thank the minister from Lethbridge-West for having taken the WCB to the point where it now is because I agree with him that progress has been made. He has been a large part of that process, and I very much appreciate that.

The problem still exists with section (10) in that it presupposes that the worker is doing some form of malingering, that they have to be used in almost a guinea pig fashion to get back at the employer who through some neglect caused this accident to occur and therefore should be liable for the compensation rather than through the Workers' Compensation Board. I believe that you can seek the truth through the employer by investigating the circumstance without putting that unnecessary pressure on the injured employee, sort of putting them between, you know, a rock and a hard place. I don't think this is the way to go about accomplishing getting that money returned.

The Member for Calgary-Egmont suggested that the whole point of this was to try and get restitution from the third party, but as I've pointed out, I don't think you have to use the worker as a lever to get back this third-party compensation.

Mr. Herard: On this amendment because I think there's a fundamental misunderstanding unless I'm totally out of it. We keep hearing that this puts pressure on a worker to sue his employer. The employer is never the third party. This only happens when you have a car accident, for example, where one driver isn't covered by WCB and the other one is. It's the third party you're seeking, so you're trying to get the cost of the action out of that driver's insurance company. It's got nothing to do with the employer. You know, the WCB act prohibits suing an employer, so what are we talking about? Unless I'm totally out of it, the employer is not involved here. It's a third party, and it's usually an insurance company to which an insured party paid a premium for coverage, and now the WCB is trying to recover from that. So this has got nothing to do with putting pressure on an employee.

The Chair: Are you ready for the question on this?

Mr. Martin: Well, the fact remains: if that was the case, why do we need it in the act? If an employee is not being affected, why would we put it in then? Obviously, the employee is being affected. They're being coerced to involved themselves. This would only come in if the employee didn't want to go forward, right? If that's the case, why do we need it? Clearly, it's to coerce an employee to become involved in a process that they may not want to. That's what it says in section (10), and that's the reality. If that wasn't the reality, we wouldn't need it, seems to me, Mr. Chairman.

[Motion on subamendment SA1 lost]

The Chair: Now we are back to debating amendment A1. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I want to state right from the very beginning that through our office, experience with WCB case managers has been very pleasant and productive. The unfortunate part about it is that we have had to intervene, and our intervention itself shows that there is a problem within the WCB claimant process.

It was mentioned earlier by the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview and echoed by other members that WCB claims and the casework associated with them is one of the most time-consuming parts of our constituency office duties. My area is basically a middle-class area, and it would not necessarily have the same number of injuries as potentially a blue-collar factory type of area. Having said that, the people that come to my office have been basically, through the WCB process, presumed guilty until they can prove themselves innocent.

I want to refer without mentioning names to specific circumstances. By the time that constituents turn to us for assistance, they are at the end of their rope and feel that they have nowhere else to turn and no one else to assist them. We're the gatekeeper. We had a constituent who came to us as one last effort recently, who had attempted suicide the previous week because he felt his situation was hopeless. This may seem extreme, but if it were just that one individual and just that one contemplation or attempted suicide, then this would sound like extremism. The process identified in here is one of a variation of occurrences that happened to citizens that we have encountered who were trying to navigate the WCB system, perhaps at the most vulnerable time of their life.

It was mentioned in earlier discussions that the longer we keep people from getting back to work, the less likelihood we have of getting them back to a productive situation. But quite often there is a combination of both physical and mental injuries that does require that kind of time and that kind of healing, and that support must be there while that healing is taking place. There are very few people who would prefer to sit at home and collect WCB premiums rather than lead active and productive lives and get back to where they were before that loss of livelihood occurred.

What we need to do, and hopefully within amendments such as have been proposed, is to make this a user-friendly, easily accessible circumstance. The WCB needs to take on a stronger role as an advocate for the worker and allow a process whereby they don't have to go through hurdle after hurdle to demonstrate their need for support.

Injured workers are often not physically and/or mentally able to be strong advocates for themselves and often are in fear of repercussions to themselves in the event that they can engage in strong advocacy for themselves. In other words, they're afraid to fight the system for fear that they're going to be cut off or have their payments suspended or that they're going to be worse off by speaking up than having the small amount of compensation that they're receiving. Until the worker has gone through the various levels of appeal within the WCB, the MLA's office is not easily available directly to assist the worker.

A particular concern involves the mental and psychological injuries. The emotional stress of having to wade through the bureaucratic hoops in trying to prove a disability has had severe negative consequences for constituents that we have been involved with. While acknowledging the importance of verifying disabilities, there should be some sort of process that prevents undue and unreasonable repeated requests for medical interviews and reports. In cases where the WCB has requested the worker to attend and receive a report from specified medical practitioners, there should be a strict limit as to the number of times the WCB can request reports from different physicians, medical experts of their choosing.

In one particular case a worker with a well-documented case of posttraumatic stress syndrome who had been seeing the same treating psychologist on a weekly basis for three years attended for an examination for the WCB with a psychologist. The psychologist's report was reviewed by another psychologist some three months later, who concurred with the latest assessment. Three months further on the file was reviewed by yet another professional, a psychiatrist who had never met the worker and who concluded that based on the information he had available, the worker should have yet another consultation with yet another psychiatrist because he did not indicate clear confirmation of the posttraumatic syndrome symptoms and the reasons for his inability to work. He then advised that a social history should be also considered within the context of work-related difficulties. So what we're doing is just beating up people, and we're not recognizing the stress that they're undergoing as they try to get back to where they once were.

I look forward to the discussions that we'll be having, that the Member for Calgary-North Hill brought out, with regard to the firemen. It's these front-line workers who give their all, who constantly put themselves in the face of danger for the benefit of others, that are the most likely to sustain the injuries, that are most likely to be susceptible to posttraumatic syndrome. Whether it's the policeman who responds to a call only to find out that there's a domestic dispute history but that they weren't apprised of that situation, or whether it's an EMS worker going out on a call not knowing exactly what it is that they're going to face: there is a tremendous amount of stress on these individuals.

In the case of the discussions that will be coming up, we're talking about a 24-hour limit to the potential cause of heart attacks. I hope that through a government member or maybe through a private member's bill or something that we'll bring forth, that we'll deal with the effects of posttraumatic stress syndrome because at this point we're still hearing comments like, "It's just in their head," and that devalues the individual who has served us so valiantly up until the point of them no longer being able to conduct their business.

I do thank every member for participating in this Committee of the Whole experience, which is to refine the procedures to get them to the point where we can hand it off to the WCB knowing that we're going to be one step closer to having achieved resolution. Again I thank the Member for Lethbridge-West, who has brought us so far into this process. I thank the Member for Calgary-North Hill, who has allowed firefighters to be recognized for their cancer and the various cancers which have been directly work related. I look forward to the further discussion of the 24-hour heart effect on emergency workers, in this case being represented by firemen.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Hon. members, might we revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It is indeed an honour to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly some guests from the county of St. Paul that are attending the AAMDC convention. They have joined us this evening to watch the proceedings of their government at work. I'd like to first of all introduce the deputy reeve, Mr. Glen Ockerman, councillors Alphonse Corbiere, Maxine Fodness, Tom Kurek, and Cliff Martin. I would also like to introduce Kim Heyman, who is the CEO for the county of St. Paul. If I could ask you to stand.

Thank you very much.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

Bill 15
Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005

The Chair: Back to the debate on amendment A1. The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Chair, for this opportunity to participate in the discussion on the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005, Bill 15. Let me start by saying that although I personally found this piece of legislation and its amendments not easy to read and interpret, to say the least, I have confidence in the abilities and wisdom of my colleague from Edmonton-Manning, who indicated that in general and overall things don't look as bad as when these amendments were introduced initially in the spring of 2005.

Why is this whole business with the WCB important? Why do people worry whenever the Workers' Compensation Board is mentioned? Do some people have issues or concerns with the WCB? I think the answer here is that, yes, people do, possibly because there is a lack of communication with injured workers or those who represent them or act on their behalf, or there could be a bit of mistrust as well.

At this point I need to be clear and emphasize that by far most workers and employees at the WCB are caring and empathetic. We experience this first-hand at the Edmonton-McClung constituency office and second-hand through recounting by constituents and acquaintances. Maybe very few of these employees are bad or incompetent, or possibly their hands are tied by restrictive legislation. The overarching argument that I would then make is that the motivation behind any attempt to amend the WCB Act should stem from the need, desire, and direction to make life easier for our injured workers and to expedite claim resolution and favourable settlement.

With the huge number of outstanding long-term contentious claims, which I understand are in excess of 50,000, and the lack of clarity, where people don't know how long the process takes or what are the time limits involved, we have to realize, of course – and here I am remembering the words of one of my constituents – that an injury affects not only the injured worker himself or herself but also his or her family, the employer, whether directly or indirectly, the insurance company or companies, the health care system, and may have workplace health and safety or legal implications, implications that may extend beyond the immediate parties.

The Workers' Compensation Board plays a very important role, a societal safety valve if I can describe it as such, because if we don't look after our injured workers, if we abandon them, just as if we would abandon our responsibility to the disadvantaged, the handicapped, or the working poor, this would signal a threatening and detrimental shift in policy. Society is built on the care it affords those who need that care. It is a pillar of society that should not only be preserved but, in fact, should be strengthened and empowered. While we cannot mandate empathy or legislate care, we can at least raise the bar and offer our injured all the support they deserve.

There have been various consultative processes to reach these amendments, but in my humble opinion a full, independent public inquiry would not be a bad idea to examine ways to improve the Workers' Compensation Board's performance and improve the relationship between the board and the injured. The injured are not only partners in their own decisions; they are actually directors of how things should unfold as it is their lives we're affecting and the lives of their families and their communities.

As I said on the subamendment, I have difficulty understanding the vague reference made to an injured worker's failing to cooperate with the board. I still have the same concern now after we've discussed the subamendment. What constitutes failure to cooperate, and who decides? How can we make sure that the determination is objective and follows solid criteria and parameters?

Also, I have this other concern, with regard to the Appeals Commission. The Appeals Commission should be at arm's length, and it should be independent and not funded by the Workers' Compensation Board. We are trying to alleviate any suspicion or any worry of conflict of interest, so to keep them at arm's length would be advisable.

However, again to summarize, I don't disagree with the amendments. I think they do improve upon what was introduced in the spring sitting, and I would support any measure intended to make life easier for the injured workers. I'm also aware of further amendments that are in the works by my hon. colleague from Edmonton-Manning, the Official Opposition critic for Human Resources and Employment, which will further make this bill worker friendly and add to the efficiency and timeliness of favourable claim resolution.

I may also go as far as advocating for the inclusion of an injured workers bill of rights or a summary of entitlements, that he or she should be considered to be telling the truth until proven otherwise, that we must afford these injured workers every bit of respect and co-operation to rehabilitate them, reintegrate them into the workforce, or at least allow them to lead their lives with dignity and the assurance that society is looking after them and caring for them.

We appreciate what the Workers' Compensation Board is doing, and we hope it could be improved. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to respond to this important bill, Bill 15, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005. I want to also commend both the minister, Lethbridge-West, and the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill for doing the work on this important legislation. Clearly, we're all here because we care about workers and their rights. This act is supposed to be protecting workers, not only their workplace health-and-safety issues that get addressed through this process but actually the compensation that goes along with unexpected and, hopefully, preventable injuries.

Let me say that as a physician and now as an MLA I bring a certain bias to this, and it's been reflected in some of the comments and recommendations for further amendments. While I see some serious improvements to the WCB, what again I tend to see in my office both as a practitioner before and as an MLA now are the weaknesses and the failures of the system to really, I guess, in a respectful way, in an honourable way deal with the individual and his disability, which may include, as has been said, both physical and mental dimensions.

Many of these are complex cases, and what often happens is a disagreement between the community physician and the WCB physician, and the immediate concern arises: who is acting in the interests of the worker? Of course, the perception from the outside and often by the worker is that the WCB physician is paid by the WCB and carries a bias that is difficult to argue, especially if it's at odds with the community physician. So we certainly have some distance to go in trying to create a more equitable system and a perception of no conflict of interest, and I think that that does need to be addressed.

The issue of having to prove degree of pain and degree of disability is always a difficult one. I don't say that there's an easy solution to that, but I do think that we have to have an independent appeal process if this is ever going to be anything credible within the public medical community and within the workers' community themselves.

Again, I'm pleased to see the amendments that have been made. These were some that were recommended in discussions by the Alberta Liberal Party in the spring session. I think they represent real progress.

As has been mentioned, I really wonder, again, about the objectivity of defining noncompliance. Who's doing it and under what circumstances, and what is a fair appeal process when there is a difference between what the worker defines as compliance and what the board defines as noncompliance? I think we need to do some work there. We're dealing with very emotional and serious financial issues here, and there's a lot at stake for everyone in the process. If it's not seen to be objective and experienced to be respectful by the worker, we end up with very prolonged and difficult issues.

I do support very much the inclusion of the 24-hour postmyocardial infarction support for all emergency workers, and I see that that's being included in these amendments.

Ms Blakeman: That's a separate one, right? It's coming.

Dr. Swann: That's going to be coming. Thank you. Yeah.

I think that definitely should be there along with the provision for firefighters to be included in terms of their cancer concerns.

Ms Blakeman: Also separate.

Dr. Swann: That's also separate.

I like the change from subrogation to vested interest. I think it's much more clear, much less onerous in terms of the power shift that appears to be happening when we talk about subrogation. I think it's more clear and honest about where the vested interest actually lies and why there may be a difference between the way the worker perceives an action and the way the compensation board perceives an action.

I would again like to emphasize the importance of this work and to encourage this process to go further and to address some of the outstanding concerns that I continue to see in the office, where there is considerable bitterness, considerable failure to address mental as well as physical issues, and therefore we are all paying the price for that. I think it is possible to develop a system that has more objectivity, more of a sense of a distant appeal process that can be respected by both the medical community and by the workers themselves.

I think that this is a significant improvement, and I personally will support the changes that have been suggested. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

9:20

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. As I mentioned before, certainly this is a vast, vast improvement, and I again give credit to the member for stopping the process and bringing it back. This is much more palatable for everybody. I thought we could make it better, but certainly this is an improvement.

I want to say that I'm not sure how you deal with this in a general sense. The bill, I think, is worthy of support compared to where it was, but I think we're hiding our head in the sand if we don't think that there are still some serious problems there. Again, you're dealing with culture. I'm not always sure that you can have legislation that can control all of this, but there is that culture of denial that is creeping back, that somehow workers are trying to take advantage. That's how we start operating there.

I think it's especially true in the Appeals Commission. I think that the Member for Lethbridge-West would remember that one of things that was recommended was a tribunal to review longstanding contentious claims. The Assembly passed this legislation, and it's still not really there. At the time, the Appeals Commission were talking about having these things solved within 90 days. We're seeing case after case – as I said, a recent one, for a constituent of mine it was 14 months before it went through the Appeals Commission. You know the old saying: justice delayed is justice denied. So there are major problems within the WCB, especially in that part of it. Now, I know that that's not part of this member's having to deal with that, particularly in this bill.

I think we learned one thing, again from that culture of denial, when the WCB said that this original bill was just minor housekeeping. Well, it was much more than that, as the member realized very quickly in terms of the debate. That was the message that they were giving to the public. Well, again, that sets a tone from the WCB that they were trying to slide something through here quickly that gave them more power than they needed. That's sort of what I'm talking about, this culture of denial on what's happening there at the WCB.

It's a serious matter, and I'm not sure that all the legislation in the world can change all of that. There are probably some changes we have to make, but I really think that we have to look at what the culture is in the WCB. I think it's a serious matter, and I think it's getting worse. The people that operate and have to deal with the WCB on an ongoing basis tell me that it is getting worse, Mr. Chairman. So that's a separate problem.

Again, the bill is much more palatable than it was back in the spring. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Mr. Chair, I've presented an amendment to the Chair, to the table. It is an amendment to Bill 15, Workers' Compensation act, 2005: to be amended in section 3 in the proposed section 22 by "striking out subsection (6)." I've given the required signed copy – it's gone to Parliamentary Counsel – and I've given the 90 copies. I'd ask if those could be distributed.

Thank you.

The Chair: We'll refer to this amendment as amendment A2. We'll just wait a moment while they're being distributed.

Hon. member, do you wish to proceed?

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This section is essentially – I'll just read it. It's on page 3 of the Bill 15 amendment.

No decision made or required to be made by the Board under this section shall be construed as placing the Board in a conflict of interest in respect of a decision made or required to be made by the Board under any other section of this Act, nor shall the pursuit of an action under this section by the Board be construed as placing the Board in a fiduciary relationship with the claimant.

I think that that should be struck from the amending act, Bill 15.

The section is essentially a notwithstanding clause for the WCB. It allows them to not be found in a conflict of interest in any action or decision that they are in fact required to make. This subsection allows for the WCB to never be found that they are in conflict of interest, regardless of the decisions that they have made. Further, they are not perceived to have any fiduciary relationship with the claimant in the pursuit of an action under this section. Generally, this subsection absolves the WCB of any wrongdoing in regard to any action they take in relation to their actions.

The amendment proposed here would see this section struck as it is absolutely beneficial to the WCB and not balanced, not in the interest of the claimant. There is no balance between the rights of both parties, and that is unacceptable. This gives the WCB blanket immunity from any actions taken under this section, while the claimant is placed under numerous conditions that they must abide by in order to have their claim settled. It should be struck. It's a kind of a have-your cake-and-eat-it-too sort of thing, and I'm surprised that this would come out of the WCB. To have this sort of section in there, again, is power tripping. It's giving a huge degree of control to the Workers' Compensation Board to take care of conflicts of interest.

For example, if a worker was to get into a car accident and he was paid and going to work and then found to have an injury, and he made a claim to the WCB, and the WCB found that he was, in fact, not eligible for compensation, the WCB still could take that forward and deal with it with insurance, especially with some of the ways that the vesting clauses still work, and not be deemed to be in a conflict of interest if they took a different position than they originally took when they denied the claim.

For this type of conflict of interest to be in the laws of our province is questionable, and I would urge that this Assembly strike it from this bill and accept this amendment. Thank you.

The Chair: Anyone else wish to participate in A2? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Yeah, this one flagged for me when I was reading through the bill because it did strike me as a get-out-of-jail-free card here. It does read to me as, essentially, a notwithstanding clause. It's trying to say that anything that the board does exempts them from being viewed as being in a conflict of interest situation. Well, that tells me right away that there's an expectation they are in a conflict of interest situation. If that's the case, in my opinion it shouldn't be allowed to proceed. You shouldn't have a situation where a body or an agency with power over anything should be involved in decision-making from which they can benefit. That's the point of conflict of interest.

I was pleased to see my colleague bring forward an amendment to delete this section. I didn't see anyone from the government side get up in response to this, but I hope we do hear from someone because I'd like to hear the justification for why it's in there in the first place. To my reading of it, this does seem a little heavy handed. It does read as a notwithstanding clause to exempt the WCB from responsibility, and I just disagree with that. I think if there's a conflict of interest that's happening, that should be acknowledged, and every effort should be made to reduce the conflict, not to inoculate the organization from having the charges brought against them or the conflict raised and a correction asked for.

I'm glad to see that my colleague from Edmonton-Manning has brought forward amendment A2, and I hope others will follow his guidance and support this amendment. I think it's a worthy amendment.

I'm always a little suspicious when we see large organizations and powerful organizations exempting themselves from things like conflict of interest or lawsuits. But, I mean, there is a standard clause that you see – and I'm pretty sure it's in this bill, actually – that, you know, you can't be sued for doing something that is your job to do. For example, MLAs are protected and ministers are protected from being sued when they're making choices and policies that are their job to do. Just because somebody doesn't like it shouldn't put you up for a lawsuit. They're supposed to be genuinely doing their job.

This is talking about a conflict of interest situation where it's two sides of the street. You get to play both sides of the street here, and that always sets up an unlevel playing field. When the WCB has so much on its side and the worker has so little, I don't want to see the WCB being able to protect itself in that manner. I just think it weights it too far.

So I'm in support of this amendment, and I urge everyone else to do the same. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I am sorry to say that I do not support this amendment that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning has put forth. This suggested conflict of interest does not exist for a number of reasons.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Let's hear 'em.

Mr. Webber: All right. There are two different systems. The damages awarded in the civil action will never be the same as benefits paid under the WCB claim. There are two different systems of recognizing injuries that operate on different principles. For example, the tort system pays general damages for pain and suffering and calculates wage loss based on future earnings. Workers' compensation by law cannot pay general damages and must base its wage loss on retrospective earnings only.

Also, no fault for WCB: application of fault under the tort system. The WCB pays its benefits on a no-fault basis, and the tort system must apply fault to determine the amount payable. In some cases the WCB benefits exceed tort damages because of the application of fault. For example, if fault is assigned as 50 per cent for each party, the damages owed to the worker would be reduced by 50 per cent and may be lower than the costs already paid by WCB on their behalf.

It is also important to note that all settlements and judgments in third-party actions are final, but WCB claims can always be reopened or reconsidered, resulting in additional ongoing costs to the system. Also, the WCB has always pursued third-party actions without limitation to the decisions it has made on the workers' compensation claim. This is because the WCB and the tort systems operate side by side but independently of one another. Each system has separate jurisdictions. The decisions of the WCB and claims adjudication do not bind the court nor do decisions of the court in personal injury actions bind the WCB.

Recently, the Court of Appeal of Alberta expressly declined to find that the WCB is in a conflict of interest in these situations. In fact, the 1996 court case in Lund versus Lauzon, Justice Veit of the Court of Queen's Bench commented on the impact of WCB claims decisions on personal injury lawsuits. She noted that the comments of the WCB's officials on entitlement to Workers' Compensation benefits were of no interest or relevance to the court.

Mr. Chair, I again have to say that I cannot support the hon. member's amendment to the bill. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thanks. That didn't actually persuade me, so let's try this again. Round two. That court finding that you mentioned is really just the court's decline to find. That's not the same as making a determination one way or another. They just basically said: we won't comment on it. Now, that's usually because it's a jurisdictional issue, so I'm not persuaded by your argument that there is no conflict of interest in this situation. If you've got any other notes there that would help to persuade me or anybody else – gee, you've got an expert over there who might have been listening to this and could help with this one.

If Calgary-Egmont is aware of how this comes into play, I'd be interested in hearing from him or the current Minister of Economic Development, who I'll also recognize is expert, but I'm not persuaded by a court declining to comment on whether there is or is not a conflict of interest as being a good enough reason to see why this is in this bill or why it couldn't be taken out of the bill. It's just not a very good explanation, and it doesn't really cover the grounds of conflict of interest and the purposes behind it and why it would be attempting to inoculate itself or exempt itself from having the conflict of interest laid bare in an attempt to remediate it. Anybody? Oh, good.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. Albeit for me to even consider myself remotely expert, but as I see this section (6), it says:

No decision made or required to be made by the Board under this section shall be construed as placing the Board in a conflict of interest in respect of a decision made or required to be made by the Board under any other section of this Act.

The WCB act essentially outlines exactly what it has to do with respect to fulfilling its mandate. The WCB system also has an appeal system that is quasi-judicial, which essentially is almost like saying that it's a level of court. When it gets involved in third-party actions – let's say, for example, that as part of a lawsuit going on, there was an injury that perhaps might have been an old ski injury that got aggravated as a result of this accident. The WCB is under no obligation, as I understand it, to accept the old ski injury, so whatever it does with respect to paying benefits to the injured worker does not create a fiduciary responsibility in this other court case to accept an old ski injury. I think that what this is trying to do is that it's trying to say that the WCB act in and of itself creates all of the responsibilities that the board has with respect to injured workers.

Now, when you get into third-party liability situations, if it didn't accept a certain part of an injury, for example, as part of the benefits that it paid to the injured worker, it doesn't mean that it has to now accept them in front of the lawsuit, so it doesn't create fiduciary responsibilities. I think that, really, what the WCB is trying to do is clarify and comply with the judgment in 1996 that my hon. friend mentioned, where the court indicated that it was not really interested in hearing that because in one case you have a tort system and in the other case you have a no-fault system.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The nature of the differences between the WCB system and tort I think in and of themselves make it necessary to not have this section (6) because of the conflict that we see there. The two different systems, as the mover of the bill quite aptly said, are quite different. By the WCB giving themselves this ability to make a determination through whatever rules – from my experience, and I haven't seen exact statistics on it, more often than not the WCB will reduce or deny claims down the road once they've found reasons to do so and do not too often increase those claims for reasons. Indeed, the one-year rule very much mitigates against that.

The problem with them being able to argue two different ways, to argue through two different sides of their mouth on the same issue, on the same injury case and to argue differently and to speak to it in a different way when they actually get into a tort case, into an insurance claim, into a third-party liability claim is something that is arrogant. It goes beyond, I think, anything that we'd accept in almost any of our other laws in this province and in this country. I don't think we should give that power to the WCB.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm not Catholic. I don't believe in infallibility of either individuals or organizations. I believe section 2 provides the employees of the WCB and members of the board of directors with the same type of protection, basically, that we have as members of parliament within the realms of the Legislature.

To provide further infallibility support, as is the case in subsection (6), takes away any kind of leveling of the playing field. It makes the assumption that under the majority of circumstances the WCB in its wisdom and in good faith will always make the right decision. There's no such support within this bill to give the other side of support or the balance for the worker. Therefore, in order to balance the rights of the worker and of the WCB, either add comparable support for legislation for the worker or, as my colleague has suggested in amendment A2, pull out subsection (6). It's not a level playing field. It has to be made that way.

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

Mr. Backs: I have a further amendment, Mr. Chairman – I guess we'd call that A3 – and that is to amend in section 3 in the proposed section 22(1)(c) by striking out “if the claimant has complied with subsection (9).” The requisite number of copies have been given to the table, and it has been to Parliamentary Counsel and approved. I ask that it be distributed.

Thank you.

The Chair: We'll refer to this amendment as amendment A3, and we'll just pause a moment while the pages are distributing it to the members.

Hon. member, if you're ready to proceed.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I proposed this amendment, and what it does is it takes out the words “if the claimant has complied with subsection (9),” and that deals with (c) on page 5 of the bill and refers back to section (9) on page 4.

By having the claimant have to go through what for some of them is quite onerous and having a legislated onerous number of conditions that the WCB can pull out of a hat to deny that settlement or that amount – and I won't get into arguing the 25 per cent – just to have them say:

- (b) attending at any or all meetings, mediations, arbitrations, examinations for discovery, medical examinations, including independent medical examinations, and the trial of the action,
- (c) providing and executing any or all documents required by the Board to bring the action, including endorsing an assignment or release of the action and providing consents to secure information, in the form and manner prescribed by the Board, in favour of the Board, and (a) “securing and providing any or all information or evidence” – my gosh.

I've talked to a number of these WCB recipients, and they're brain injured. They can't even write their name much less comply with all of these. You know, many of them are workers who have been labourers, and they're not really cognizant, not very much into all of these incredible numbers of systems that are put under section (9). It's an unreasonable burden that is placed on a worker. You know, are we to say that they must all be giving huge amounts of their claims to lawyers or to other individuals to satisfy all these many and onerous and complicated types of processes, that are difficult for them to understand, that I think many of the actual legal experts in the area have to look at twice in order to try and ascertain?

I think that that way of giving this greater power is again something which reflects a certain arrogance and should be struck from the bill because it does not equal the playing field. It makes it much more difficult for the worker to actually make their proper claim.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Anyone else on amendment A3?

Mr. Chase: When I was discussing some of the problems that workers experienced with the WCB, that we're trying to work on removing with A3, it just adds one more in a series of hoops for the injured worker to go through. At some point and, again, in a sense of balance we need to provide the injured worker with the same kind of support that the WCB has in arguing against their case. A worker shouldn't have to go and search out legal counsel on their meagre reduced earnings, depending on what the WCB claims to be an acceptable payment. It's just completely inhumane to put obstacle after obstacle in front of an injured worker and expect them to be able to navigate all the ins and outs and hoops and steps and stages.

We do our best as MLAs in representing the worker, to try and navigate them through what is basically a maze that Skinner would have contrived for his rats. Until we balance the needs of the worker with the restrictions and hoops put forward in front of them by the Workers' Compensation act, we're not providing any type of balance. The system is skewed in favour of the Workers' Compensation Board to deny workers fair compensation, and until we remedy that imbalance, we're doing the workers a disservice.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. The Member for Edmonton-Manning is correct. I think a lot of people dealing with the WCB, knowing the hoops you have to go through, are under a fair amount of stress to begin with. If subsection (9) was there, it would say, "shall not adversely affect the conduct of an action and shall co-operate fully with the Board." If a person that's under stress starts to look at this, they figure: "Well, I've got to do this, that, everything. It takes a fair length of time." It just becomes a way where they could actually cut them back, just something else to be stressed out about: boy, maybe I didn't go to that meeting or maybe I missed that examination or whatever. It seems to me that putting all this in is not necessary.

I think that if they'd left it at they just "not adversely affect the conduct" and realize that you're dealing with injured workers, realize that you're dealing with people under a lot of stress, and as long as they're trying to do the right thing, then they should get the money that's owed them, because this could be a very convenient excuse. I'm not saying that they would do it, necessarily, but it could be a very convenient excuse to say: "Well, you didn't co-operate. You didn't go to this meeting back on May 16 or that meeting or whatever. Therefore, you're only going to get, you know – what? – 18 per cent or 16 per cent. We're going to charge you 9 per cent because we didn't feel that you were co-operative enough."

There are people on the board that are sort of acting this way. I know of cases where if the person just rubs them wrong, they're really getting a bad time from some of the WCB people.

I'm not sure that all the MLAs could get through all this and get our full wage if we had to do everything that's put down here in this little (a), (b), and (c). I just find that that's not appropriate. If the person has tried to co-operate, that should be good enough, and they should get their 25 per cent that's owed them, Mr. Chairman. So I would certainly support this amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I don't know that it's useful to talk about the difficulties encountered under claims management and link it to this because what we have here in section (11) is now proceeds of a settlement. In other words, you've been through the whole rigamarole, and now there's a settlement. What this does is it sets out the priority under which the proceeds of a settlement will be disbursed.

When we get to section (c), which is the one that is being sought to be removed by this amendment, it says, "If the claimant has complied with subsection (9), payment of 25% of the remaining amount to the claimant." Now, let's just assume for a minute that the claimant was not helpful and, in fact, by not being helpful, caused the action to become a lot more expensive. Would that claimant still be entitled to 25 per cent? I would guess that probably not. So by virtue of the fact that there are already under section (9) remedies that the WCB can avail itself of in terms of non co-operation, then I think that when you get to section (c), you have to be able to limit what the claimant can recover in the event that the claimant caused a whole lot of extra expense. Now, as it sits right now, this is a guarantee that the claimant will receive a payment of 25 per cent of the remaining amounts to the claimant. This is before the board has even looked at its own costs with respect to dealing with that claim.

Quite frankly, I think that trying to link this to other difficulties that we've talked about, that are being worked on and improved every day, is not all that useful.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Very briefly. I hear the arguments on both sides of the floor, and I have this novel idea in my mind that I felt a burning urge to lay in front of you. I'm advocating the acceptance of this A3 amendment. However, if the government sees that they are not in support, that they would reject it, that they still want subsection (9) to be there, and that they would still require the injured worker to go through all these hoops to fulfill their criteria to become helpful, as the hon. member said, or to comply, maybe we should also look at providing them with a facilitator, somebody who can navigate the maze and help them with, you know, what's required and what's needed and all the paper work and all the compliance with these tests and these psychiatric assessments and all that stuff.

If the person has been injured or the person is having difficulty emotionally or financially or cannot be at a certain meeting at one point or another, then maybe that facilitator can act on their behalf. If the board is willing to withhold payment, then maybe they can put the suspended funds to good use by having that facilitator act on behalf of that injured worker. This is an idea that maybe should be considered and should be entertained.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The Member for Calgary-Egmont seems to imply that there must be this punitive system in place, as outlined in section (9), that would apply to the area I'd like struck here in (c). The problem that we have to look at here is that there is so much there. There are so many different things, that I think the real cost would be on the worker and certainly on the worker's time rather than on the board to deal with this very onerous list of many, many things that could just essentially give them the power to deal with many, many claims as they saw fit because they could find almost anything in this list or in the requirements that would come under this list to have power over that claimant and to make them do what they wanted, to be able to snap their fingers just so that he could get any sort of a claim. I think that that is far, far too much and far, far too much power for the board to have in this instance.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. This whole business of punitive power makes me think of a court where a person speaks out in their defence and they're held in contempt of court, or a mistake is made and you're ruled out of order. I liken it to a school situation where every kid comes in with a guaranteed 25 per cent, and the first time they appear to be out of line, they're down to 24, and "You're creaking your chair; well, you're now down to 23." So every time something goes against the WCB review board, the person continues to have their percentage of compensation reduced, to the point where the person throws up their hands and says: well, if I don't shut up, I won't get out of here with 17 per cent. This punitive way of dealing with people is not acceptable. There is no support for the person. The board can simply continue to reduce their percentages until the person either gives up in disgust or accepts their reduced claim, and that's not fair.

10:00

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman. I just can't let that go by because really the bottom line here is that we're dealing with a third-party action. Okay? We're dealing with all of what has to be done on both sides in a third-party action. We're not dealing with someone's compensation and "if you don't do this, you get 24 per cent of it or 23 per cent of it." We're talking about a third-party action where the WCB is trying to recover its costs from an insurer. Okay? That has no effect at all on the benefits currently being paid. There may even be a settlement as part of this for future benefits because the condition of the injured worker is such that it's not expected that they will return to work.

So all of those things have to be specified, and all we're dealing with here is third-party actions. That's what section 22 deals with. You know, to do a little of the fearmongering that I was just hearing I don't think is appropriate at all.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you. Well, Mr. Chair, of course we're dealing with third-party reimbursement; that's irrelevant. What is wrong about it is laying out in (a), (b), and (c) specific little things that anybody could slip on: meetings, mediations, arbitrations, examinations for discovery, medical examinations, independent medicals, the trial of the action. If a person wanted to take that and you miss one little thing in there and all documents and the rest of it, I'm saying that anybody might run into a maze there. That's all we're saying.

They didn't have to put all that in, Mr. Chair. That makes it, you know, almost impossible for anybody to follow through. You may have missed a discovery. You might have made a mistake: you didn't bring this particular document. Then with that amount of power, when you can pick anything there and say, "Well, you're not going to get the 25 per cent" – I'm not saying that it's always going to happen – that's the problem: laying out all these onerous little things that people have to do. That's the punitive part about it.

All they had to do is say, as I understand it, that they would not adversely affect the conduct of an action if you co-operate fully. Leave it at that because the minute you put this in, then there's an excuse not to do it. That's the point; the legislation makes it. It's very onerous for anybody to follow all those things at any given time, Mr. Chairman. That's the point.

Mr. Chase: At the risk of being further implicated as a fearmongerer, I would ask the Member for Calgary-Egmont to explain to me: with this 25 per cent and the third-party effect, in your understanding is there any likelihood that the worker's compensation would be reduced by going after the third party? Are you suggesting that there's no effect to this 25 per cent and that the reduction has no effect on the worker's compensation, that it only has an effect on getting money back from the third party, that it's not going to adversely affect the worker? Can you maybe clarify, please?

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Thank you. If you're dealing with section 22, which is really the process under which the WCB currently has subrogation rights and is now changing that over to vested rights, all of those things are probably normal in a lawsuit. In other words, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I believe, indicated all of these things that might happen with respect to a lawsuit, but the bottom line is that this is all in the recovery of what the WCB has probably for many years now been paying to an injured worker. You know, these third-party actions may take years to bring before the courts, so the WCB does not concern itself with fault. It pays the benefits. Right? But at some point if there was a third party who was at fault, they have to try and recover that, and that's what section 22 deals with. So there is no link whatsoever between what is recovered here and the injured person's benefits.

The Chair: Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. Sorry, but I'm going to have to argue with the hon. member because, in fact, the government amendment that just passed, which is amending section (10), is talking about compliance with subsection (9): "The Board may suspend the payment of periodic compensation to the claimant during the period of non-compliance." So, yeah, they can.

You're talking specifically about the amount of the award that the courts may award in this third-party action, and out of that total amount – let's say that it's a thousand bucks – they start hiving it off as is laid out in the bill here. But to say that the behaviour of the worker or of the claimant and whether or not they comply with section (9) doesn't affect their benefits – yes, it does. You just amended the act to make sure that the WCB has the ability to suspend their payments as a retribution for their co-operation or lack of it under section (9). So it is relevant there, not specific to the 25 per cent, but the WCB still has the ability to take punitive action if they wish to or to withhold the regular payment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Herard: Yeah. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I don't know how we got onto that subject again because what we're dealing with under section (11) is now proceeds of a settlement. The proceeds of the settlement are at a different stage.

Mr. Dunford: It means they complied with it in the first place.

Mr. Herard: Well, they may or they may not have. The hon. minister says that that means they complied. Well, maybe they didn't. But at the same time, the settlement now is being made in a court of law.

What I said – and I didn't want the hon. member to misinterpret that – was that what is awarded at that stage, which is now a settlement, does not have any direct link to the person's benefit.

Section (9). We're not going to debate it again because I think the rules of the House say that we've already voted on that, so I'm not going to go back there. That particular section is long before a settlement occurs, it's long before the court case is in process, so I don't think the two are related at all.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Not to belabour the case, I think it is clear, and I wish the Member for Calgary-Egmont would take a look at the word "if" in that section and try not to just take a partisan viewpoint in this matter and to look at this and really see how onerous applying section (9) to that is. That's all I have to say.

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

[The clauses of Bill 15 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

10:10

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report Bill 15, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 15.

I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? That's carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that the House now stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10:12 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, November 16, 2005 1:30 p.m.

Date: 05/11/16

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Guide us all in our deliberations and debate that we may determine courses of action which will be to the enduring benefit of our province of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly some representatives from Alberta's postsecondary institutions that engage in international education initiatives. Joining them are staffers from Alberta Advanced Education's international education division. These people are here today in support of the ministry's initiatives to promote International Education Week. The celebrations this week demonstrate the significant contribution that international education makes in preparing Albertans for the global world. As all members will know, the third pillar in our 20-year strategic plan is: competing in a global marketplace. International education and global education is very important to that.

Here today representing the postsecondary institutions are Rae McDonald, director of international relations at the University of Alberta, and Pat Bidart, associate vice-president, academic services, Olds College. I might say that Pat recently joined us on our mission to Mexico. Staff from the ministry are Dan Rizzoli, director of the international education division; Ken Ohashi, director of international relations for apprenticeship and industry training; Christine Savage; Sandra Zarate; Karin Oxtoby; and Angela Balec. Mr. Speaker, they're seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome and thank you from members of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What a privilege today to introduce 79 visitors from Lakeland Ridge school in Sherwood Park. This public school has the unique designation of being a partner with Holy Spirit school. It's our newest school, and it combines Children's Services and Human Resources and Employment with Alberta Works. So the whole school complex is a brand new example of working together.

Today the teachers that are accompanying the group are Lindy Mair, Sonya Bushell, and Jay Robertson with parent helpers Kerry Van Camp, Sue King, Connie Bishop, Kim Schultz, Melody Schaufle, Lorna Rae, and Wanda Marchand. They're seated in the members' gallery with a wonderful group of students. Please join me in a warm welcome for Lakeland Ridge public school.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly an individual who has recently filled a vacancy in the communications branch of Restructuring and Government Efficiency. I'd like to introduce Tracey Welsh, who has joined our team, from Fort McMurray, where she worked for the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo as their public information officer and most recently filled a similar position for Sturgeon county. Would you please rise, Tracey, and accept the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly a very impressive young man from Calgary visiting our Legislature today, Ravinder Minhas. Ravinder has been recognized as one of Alberta's Top 40 under 40, the youngest of the group at the age of 23. I might add that he's the president of Alberta-based Mountain Crest Brewing company, with the logo of Damn Good Beer!, and he's also been nominated for the Canadian Top 40 under 40. He's spending the day shadowing me to learn more about politics and government, so I've had him running since very early this morning. I would ask Ravinder to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Dianne Pachal. Dianne is a long-standing conservationist in Alberta and has been a resident of Calgary-Fort for 15 years. She was awarded a 125th anniversary commemorative medal by the government of Canada in 1992 in recognition of significant contribution to compatriot, to community, and to Canada. I would like to ask Dianne to stand and receive a warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a fine group of students from Winterburn elementary and junior high school. These students are all enrolled in the Logos Christian education program. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Jacqueline Baker, and a parent, Mrs. Wendy Werstiuk. If they would rise and please accept the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and introduce 45 students from Dr. Elliott school, which is located in Linden, Alberta. Accompanying them today are teachers Ms Lenz and Mrs. Hughes along with parents Mr. Huff, Mrs. Ratzlaff, Mr. Heyblom, Mrs. Megli, Mrs. Penner, Mr. Leinweber, Mr. Vigna, Mrs. Klassen, Mrs. Christiansen, Mrs. Kung, Mr. Ratzlaff, and Mr. Reimer. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly our new director of outreach in the Alberta Liberal caucus. She comes with a great background in education and theatre and organization and promotion. I would ask her to rise. Her name is Jill Roszell, and she's in the public gallery. Please, everyone, give her a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a resident of Edmonton-Rutherford who has become a true friend over the past several years and who I like to think is one of the best darned election sign erectors anywhere. Could I please ask Larry Rowan to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Pat Spady. Pat is a physical therapist who lives near Lamont, Alberta. She has organized a series of vigils here at the Alberta Legislature to help protect public medicare. She's here today to urge the government to halt any privatization plans for a public health care system. I'd ask that she rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted today to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Ms Shirley Barg. Shirley is a former chair of the Council of Alberta University Students as well as a former vice-president external of the Athabasca University Students' Union. She is currently working in continuing care with the Capital Care Group. Shirley is helping to establish an Alberta branch of the national organization Equal Voice, whose aim is to include more women in electoral politics. I'd now ask that Shirley rise and receive the traditional warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me very special pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Mr. Neal Gray, who I hope will be one of the Alberta MPs in the next House of Commons. Neal is the NDP candidate in the upcoming federal election in the riding of Edmonton-Mill Woods-Beaumont. Neal currently works in computer support for the Alberta government. He is here today to observe the proceedings of the Legislature. I would now ask that Neal rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Mr. Jeff Sloychuk. Jeff has recently taken a position with the Communications, Energy and Paperworkers Union. He is the former vice-president academic for the Students' Association of Red Deer College. Last year Jeff received Red Deer College's highest academic and citizenship award. He organized an association at Red Deer College called Community Coalition for Accessible Education and recently completed another campaign to support the striking workers at Brooks. I would now ask that Jeff rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Public Security and Solicitor General.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly five Albertans who are dedicated to reducing the incidence of family violence in our province. They are here today in recognition of Family Violence Prevention Month and in support of the White Ribbon campaign. The campaign is aimed at men, and wearing a white ribbon is a personal pledge never to commit, condone, nor remain silent about family violence. With us today are Inspector Tonia Enger of the RCMP, Staff Sergeant Eric McDonald of the Calgary Police Service, Staff Sergeant Dave Zukiwsky of the Edmonton Police Service, and Jan Reimer and Patricia Poohachoff from the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters. I'd ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure this afternoon to rise and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a good friend and colleague, Eleanor Maroes, from the Alberta Alliance Party. She is currently serving as our interim leader, and she has been involved with the democratic process since 1989, trying to make our province and country better. I would like her to rise at this time as our honoured guest and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask Val Campbell to rise and be recognized. Val is Alberta Justice's face to the public on the issue of family violence. Val is a prosecutor who over the past year has trained over 5,000 people in the crime and issues regarding family violence in this province and is doing a fabulous job on behalf of all Albertans. Please acknowledge her.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Securities Commission

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite indications in the Auditor General's report on the Alberta Securities Commission of mismanagement, breaches of policy, and a lack of documentation within the commission the Minister of Finance continues to downplay and deny the serious problems within that organization. Now even the Auditor General has said that he does not know how this report could be seen as a clean bill of health by anyone and that changes need to be made to protect the integrity of Alberta's capital markets. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. Given the major problems of the Alberta Securities Commission over the last year and the troubling report released this month by the Auditor General, why hasn't the minister taken the time to meet with the Auditor General to fully discuss what he sees as serious inadequacies of the Securities Commission?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member opposite should have sent me a note and asked me if I'd met with the Auditor General because indeed I have had a discussion over the report of the Auditor General. What is most important is the management response to the Auditor General's report and, indeed, this minister's response, which says very clearly that we take all of the Auditor General's recommendations very seriously. We intend to implement all of the recommendations in that report. I believe, if I'm not mistaken, that the Auditor General will be meeting with the commission on progress sometime in the future.

Mr. Speaker, it's clear in this report that the Auditor General has made recommendations to strengthen documentation. It's clear in this report that the Auditor General had an opportunity to review every case file that he asked to see and that he did not find one file, one case, where he found sufficient information that would have him consider reopening any of the files. He did however make many recommendations that will improve the processes at the Alberta Securities Commission, and the chairman and members intend to implement them fully.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As recently as 10:30 this morning the Auditor General said that he had not met with the minister to discuss the report.

My second question to the same minister: given that the Auditor General has found that the Alberta Securities Commission's enforcement practices were handled poorly, has the minister been given any explanation as to why the executive director continues to remain at the Alberta Securities Commission?

Mrs. McClellan: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I don't know in what context and what timing the Auditor General said that he hadn't met with me. I have not met with him since the official release of the report, but I have met with him and discussed the report with him. The Auditor General was away for a period of time and is just back, and when the Auditor General would like to have a meeting with me, I would be most happy to have that discussion with him. However, I have not been in the practice nor will I be in the practice of phoning the Auditor General and asking for a meeting to discuss a report that he has provided to this Assembly and to Albertans.

On the issue of conflict of interest, Mr. Speaker, the commission has implemented processes to ensure as much as possible that this type of inadvertent conflict will not occur again and still protect the integrity and confidentiality of the investigations that the Securities Commission undertakes.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given what the Auditor General today called a serious breach of the code of ethics by the director of enforcement at the Alberta Securities Commission, can the minister explain why that person is still in his job?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I recall that in the spring there was a lot of criticism of some people that weren't in their jobs for breaches.

I can tell the hon. member that the Securities Commission has had a complete review of this situation, believes that it was totally inadvertent, that there was no intention, and, as I indicated, has put in place processes to ensure as much as possible that this could not happen in the future.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care Insurance Privatization

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The inevitable effect of allowing doctors to broadly practise in both the public and private systems is a ratcheting up of health care costs as one system plays against the other to provide medical services. The plan by this government to increase the role of private insurance corporations is absolutely guaranteed to raise health care costs, yet documents that the Alberta Liberal caucus has obtained detail the government's plan to allow, indeed facilitate, exactly this. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Given that government documents repeatedly speak about the need for better access to hip and knee replacements, why doesn't the minister spend the million and a half dollars she's giving to Aon Consulting on providing more hip and knee replacements instead?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, let me be clear. I cited yesterday that on the web for all Albertans the documents exist for Alberta Health, defining the steps that were being considered. Let me address first of all the opting in/opting out. Alberta still, regrettably, has lower physicians per 1,000 than many other places. Opting in/opting out could provide what exists in several other provinces; that is, an opportunity for physicians in regulated and controlled situations to work in both systems, thereby enhancing both opportunities.

It was a discussion point without a fait accompli. We have scheduled, Mr. Speaker, a discussion with both the AMA and the CMA to talk about what the physician's best role is, reminding the member opposite that on August 15 the Canadian Medical Association said that they rejected a proposal that would eliminate the opportunity to look at a parallel private system. All we're talking about is giving doctors an opportunity to do more work in Alberta under certain controlled conditions.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister's own documents, which she has made public after our pressure, admit that the very people on waiting lists, the very people who need hip and knee replacements won't qualify for private insurance, how does she think this scheme is going to help them?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, let's not take an extremist view of a discussion document. We have three pilot projects to enhance the opportunity for people to get hip and knee replacements. Indeed, 1,200 more Albertans will receive those hip and knee replacements as a result of an injection of funds that we have made. Now, we could add more money for hip and knee replacements, but then they obviously have to have a bed to go in. Many of the places are at 100 per cent capacity.

Let's get back to the point that he first addressed, which is, "Why would we do this study?" Isn't it responsible? Wouldn't Martha and Henry out there want to know what it costs before we make any moves? We've asked for an actuarial review of costs and how we're currently paying for Alberta Health and how we might pay in future to enhance Albertans' opportunities for choice and options to gain the health care that they need.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On page 3 of the documents, which the minister has, it says, "Introduce notwithstanding provision to Alberta Health Care Insurance Act." Could she explain, please?

Ms Evans: It means, simply – and this is a summary on step 2, amending the opting-in rule – that we currently have a rule that prevents people from opting out, and it would enable them to opt in under certain conditions. It says, "providing exceptions." It goes further to say, "Any range of exceptions could be made to relieve various system pressure points." In other words, you might not allow all physicians to opt in and opt out. You might allow those in certain disciplines.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it's a discussion document, which I think Albertans will have ample opportunity to review when we bring forward any legislative amendments or intent next spring. It's not part of this fall agenda, but I'd be pleased to discuss it with the hon. members at any time.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Health Care Privatization

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government continues to lurch toward its goal of privatizing Alberta's valued public health care system, known these days as the third way. As with the first wave of privatization, known as Bill 11, the government is planning to mount a PR campaign to convince Albertans that they aren't entitled to their public health care system. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. How will spending tax dollars to shift Albertans' expectations from health entitlement for all to a lower expectation result in better health care?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, let me cite a few facts. I think these are things that Albertans want to know. If you went in for a hip replacement today, just a standard would be $12,000. If you had a stroke, it would be $25,000 if you spent four days in bed. If you had a child that was born premature and spent 42 days in an ICU, it would be $42,000. If you had a kidney transplant, it would be $37,200. Quite simply put, it's up to this government to look at ways to make our health care system affordable and sustainable so that my grandchildren and yours can have help when they need it.

Ms Blakeman: Telling people how much it costs doesn't make it better.

My next question to the minister is: given that the government has assured Albertans that these unpopular reforms would be carried out only after full and open consultation with Albertans, where is the public consultation that was promised?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, right now we're not bringing any reforms before this Legislative Assembly. I've been out talking to every region, listening to community leaders in every part of this province and every health authority about third way initiatives. We're gathering information from Albertans. We're defining what could be a plan.

Mr. Speaker, what I think is remarkable is that people understand today that we can't have things the way we always did. In 1966 the average Canadian spent $34 a year of public money on health. About three years ago that average was $2,685. If you adjust 13 and a half times for inflation, it would mean today, if you took those same indices and applied them to other things and other commodities we buy, that the minimum wage for Albertans would be $80 and a family car would cost $270,000.

Ms Blakeman: Total red herrings.

My final question today to the Minister of Health and Wellness: given that the minister claimed that the plan for privatization released last week was simply working documents and does not represent government policy and that the Premier very clearly stated that paying for private insurance is the policy, who is actually in charge?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's really clear to me that we have the best leader in Alberta, and he is in charge.

Mr. Klein: I would like to supplement, Mr. Speaker, since my name was mentioned in vain. A clarification. The hon. member made an accusation that the health care system would not look after the sick and injured, something to that effect. I don't know her exact words; I'd have to read the Blues. I want to say to this Legislative Assembly that anyone at any time who is sick or injured will get treatment under the public health system as we know it today.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a little counterproductive because the government's answers are making us sick.

Mr. Speaker, on his travelling road show next week in eastern Canada the Premier has promised to tell the truth about his government's plans to privatize our health care system. Now, I'm sure that Stephen Harper is thrilled to hear that, given the result of the last election. It will be quite a contrast to the Premier's performance in the last provincial election, where he denied plans to privatize our health care system and promised to consult with Albertans before any changes were made. To the Premier: when he goes on his grand tour of eastern Canada, will he tell eastern Canadians that his government has hired one of the largest private insurance companies in North America to recommend ways to privatize Alberta health insurance?

Mr. Klein: If I'm asked, I will say that Aon has been retained by the government to do an evaluation of the insurance component of what might or might not be legislation. If I'm asked.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you. When the Premier goes on his travelling road show in eastern Canada, will he tell eastern Canadians that his government has developed a communication strategy designed to convince Albertans to lower their expectations for public health care in this province?

2:00

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I have not heard that. It has never been discussed. It is a figment of the hon. leader's imagination. So if I'm asked the question, I will say that this is a figment of Mr. Mason's imagination.

The Speaker: Hon. member, we can't use names in the House.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, for the Premier's information that report was tabled by my colleagues just yesterday in the House, I believe, so it's available to him.

Will the Premier, when he goes on his junket in eastern Canada, tell eastern Canadians that his government is hell-bent on destroying our single-payer public health care system, something that most Canadians, including Albertans, depend on and cherish?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I will tell people in eastern Canada and I'll tell the Prime Minister following that tour when we meet on aboriginal issues in Kelowna at a first ministers' meeting that we're spending nearly $10 billion annually on health care, that the system as we know it today is not sustainable, and every Premier and every health minister in the country, including the ND health ministers, agree with that. They agree that throwing more money at the system is not the answer. Perhaps it's part of the answer; I don't know. But I can't see a healthier, as I said before, ND and a healthier Liberal for the $10 billion or nearly $10 billion that we're spending on health care. What I will tell them is that we're looking at options to make sure that health care is sustainable for future generations.

But I will tell them and I'll tell this hon. member right now that if he is as sick as he says he is, he will get treatment. We will call an ambulance for him, and he will get treatment in the hospital under the public system. Mr. Speaker, I suspect that he is feigning sickness – he is feigning sickness – and that is precisely what puts pressure on the health care system.

Resource Revenues

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, with all the talk about spending the unbudgeted surplus and the release of the second-quarter fiscal update, some Albertans and many Canadians seem to think that there is no end to Alberta's resource wealth. This view is not only false but dangerous. Resource revenues are volatile. It wasn't long ago that oil prices were only $12 a barrel, and Alberta's reserves of both conventional oil and gas are already in decline. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. How are we ensuring that Albertans understand the volatility of these resource revenues?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, we update Albertans annually on our budget. Secondly, we provide quarterly reports, which we did today of the second quarter, informing Albertans of the current prices, as current as you can be in a second-quarter update. Of course, the second quarter certainly did demonstrate the volatility of oil and gas. I don't think that any energy analyst predicted what would happen with oil and gas prices in the world this summer.

The second thing we have done, Mr. Speaker, to try and explain this to Albertans was to send them a brochure that outlined how we manage surplus dollars. The feedback that I have had has been very positive. People want to have that information, want to understand it, and in fact have asked some very good questions from that. The brochure points out very clearly that oil and gas revenues or natural resource revenues are the most volatile and difficult to predict. We try to ensure that Albertans understand that and understand that our budget is based on what we believe are predictable revenues.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Morton: Thank you. Next week economists at the University of Calgary will release a report predicting that by 2010, in only five years, Alberta's energy resource revenues will be only about half of what they are today. My question is again to the same minister. Is the government using these revenues responsibly to build the foundation for future sustained prosperity, or is it giving in to short-term spending projects?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the response that I've heard from Albertans is that they do believe the expenditures that have been made are an investment in the future, whether they're the $1.4 billion in health care facilities, which will enable us to better look after people in our public health system, or they're education facilities at the primary, secondary, and postsecondary levels, understanding that the success of this province in the future is a well-educated, well-trained workforce. People have responded very well to that.

In the area of roads and transportation, Albertans understand that we are an export province, that we are a landlocked province, and we require good transportation, good economic routes to move our goods and services. Mr. Speaker, in this very capital region we have some 170 companies that process just food and beverage products that are shipped to 100 countries in the world, and that brings home to us how important a good transportation system is. So I think we are investing in the future and the future prosperity of this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Morton: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, since 1961 Alberta has sent $243 billion to the rest of Canada in equalization and transfer payments, over $2,500 for every man, woman, and child in Alberta. My final supplemental to the minister is: how is the government explaining to our friends in central Canada that Alberta's economic success benefits all Canadians?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is important that we understand each province's contribution to Canada. I most recently had an opportunity to meet with finance ministers and some other ministers when we were dealing with securities regulation, and we talked about the economy. More recently than that, in a meeting with the federal Finance minister we talked about this very thing: Alberta's contribution to Canada. One might have listened to the federal Finance minister yesterday when he talked about what they were able to do with surplus dollars that they had garnered and mentioned oil and gas revenues as a prime driver in that. Most recently the Canadian Energy Research Institute put out a report that everyone should read, and it indicates that the federal government is the largest recipient of the tax revenue that will be generated by the oil and gas industry. Ottawa will see $51 billion, or about 41 per cent, of the anticipated $123 billion.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that everyone recognizes that a strong Alberta is good for Canada, that a strong British Columbia is good for Canada. For every province in this country, if they have strength and contribute to Canada, that is a good thing, and we want to be a part of that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Hazardous Material Spill at Wabamun Lake

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On August 3 a CN train derailment near Wabamun Lake caused a massive environmental disaster. This will affect the local ecosystem and the people of Lake Wabamun for decades. Perhaps the most shocking part of this tragic incident was that it was entirely preventable if the government had ensured that it had the capability entrusted to it for on-the-ground intervention. To the Minister of Environment: can the minister explain why this government was so inexcusably unprepared for a hazardous release like Wabamun?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, on that day, as the hon. member has mentioned, for Lake Wabamun and its residents it truly was an ecological disaster. But let me share with this House and the hon. member that the Alberta law that we have under Alberta protection as well as under the Water Act is one of the strongest laws in this entire Confederation of Canada. We hold responsible industries and those who, in fact, contaminate a rich resource that we have, such as water and land. I also want to say that the enforcement orders that the government and the Ministry of Environment, in fact, issued in the first two days of this event were something that was unprecedented as well.

We are working very closely with the residents. It is without question an investigation that is continuing into all of the circumstances, and it's my hope within the weeks to come to report on the investigation to this Assembly. As well, there is an environmental commission that is looking at how we can do better. I will never apologize for saying that Albertans have an attitude, that we represent, that we can always do better.

I want to thank all those who were involved directly on that day, the day after, and the day after that as the cleanup continues, and we are making progress in that cleanup to restore it for not only this generation but future generations as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what is your role in such disasters?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, on that day as Minister of Environment, in fact, my wife and I were scheduled for a week to be at our own cottage on a lake. I've now come to realize that if there ever is going to be an ecological disaster, I know when it's going to be. It's going to be on the day that I schedule to be away for a week.

On that day we left to attend Wabamun and spent the next many weeks there with, of course, the hon. Member for Stony Plain working closely with officials. This Assembly may not be aware that in the first 24 hours we hired a leading expert worldwide, right here from the University of Alberta, Dr. David Schindler, to advise me directly. As well, we hired Dr. Ron Goodman, who in fact was the expert who was dealing with the cleanup of the Exxon Valdez, another ecological disaster, who also was advising me directly as Minister of Environment.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure all members of this House and all Albertans that we are doing our very best in terms of this cleanup and restoring this lake again to the proper order it deserves for its residents.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That wasn't the question, but it was four days before there was any action on the ground.

Since the government has admitted that it failed the people of Alberta, to the Deputy Premier: what funds have been dedicated this year to ensure on-the-ground response to such emergencies in the future?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Environment has a budget that he can deal with these things within. We have emergency measures funding so that we can deal with this, and because of the foresight of this government we have disaster funding available for this. When it is required and the Minister of Environment comes forward requiring dollars for this, this government is prepared and in sound fiscal position to respond.

I'd ask him to supplement.

The Speaker: The hon. minister to supplement.

Mr. Boutilier: Yes, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. member – and a very good question again – essentially, as you know, the Alberta Environmental Protection Commission, which is headed by the chancellor, Dr. Eric Newell, and the very worldwide members of that panel are bringing, in fact, recommendations back to me as minister by the end of this very month. In fact, they provided an interim report to Albertans at the end of September. It is on the website, and I can assure you that we will be taking quick and concise action based on whatever those recommendations are, that the Minister of Finance has referenced too. This government will act in terms of what those recommendations are in restoring that lake to its proper order.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is also regarding the CN spill and the 700,000 litres of bunker C crude oil that spilled into the lake and the 60,000 litres of utility pole penetrating lubricant. My first question is to the Minister of Environment. How long will it be before this cleanup is completed?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I can assure you of this: it will not be quick enough for any of us in Alberta. I know I want to formally thank the hon. member and his wife, who during those days of the original cleanup, in fact, offered their home and, actually, facilities to many of the environmental protection people that were there and dealing with this ecological disaster.

The cleanup work on the enforcement orders that were issued was completed this fall, but well water testing will continue throughout the entire winter months. Of course, I want to also say to this Assembly today that officials from my ministry will be in fact meeting once again tonight with residents of Wabamun Lake in dealing with many of the important issues that have been brought up by members here today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. When is it anticipated that the bans on boating, water usage, and fishing and hunting will be lifted?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, the short answer is that this upcoming spring, after winter passes, based on the work we have done, we'll be in a better position to answer that. That's a very common question for those recreational users and fishermen and Albertans who enjoy this incredible environment that we have. At this point in time we need to ensure that we do a thorough review to ensure that the quality and the safety of the water is protected for Albertans now and well into the future.

Mr. Lindsay: My second supplemental, to the same minister: when does the minister expect the commission that is reviewing this incident to make their final report or recommendations to ensure that this type of catastrophe never happens again?

Mr. Boutilier: As I mentioned earlier to the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, the actual report is scheduled to come back by the end of November. The commissioners and chairman of the commission, Dr. Newell, indicated that they are on track and on schedule to be reporting back to me by the end of November. I intend to in fact be sharing with all members of this Assembly its recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Automobile Insurance

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the end of July the government trumpeted in one of their famous news releases that “good Alberta drivers will see another four per cent . . . reduction in mandatory auto insurance this November.” Many companies objected, not surprisingly, and now we learn that most will not have to honour the reduction. Some have even been allowed to increase their rates. My question is for the Minister of Finance. Will the minister please tell good Alberta drivers why they are not receiving a reduction and, in fact, why some are paying more for the auto insurance than they did before?

Mrs. McClellan: You know, Mr. Speaker, this is a bit frustrating because I am quite accustomed to having questions from the hon. member, and they’re usually pretty well researched and documented, but where the hon. member would’ve got the impression that most Alberta drivers would not see a reduction . . . [interjection] Obviously, a misreading of the website because 90-some per cent will see a reduction.

Mr. Speaker, what actually happens is this. All companies are subjected to a reduction. [interjection] Patience. All companies have the opportunity to make a case for an exemption to the Automobile Insurance Rate Board. They make the case, and they have to provide actuarial information that would show that it would not be reasonable for them to provide a reduction. Now, there are a number of reasons why that might occur. One might be that they had previously put in a reduction that was more than was asked for later on. I can assure the hon. member that the majority of Alberta drivers are not in that position. There are 11 companies, I believe, that have applied for an exemption, and some have applied the reduction to a portion of their insurance, but every company in this province is subjected to the reduction unless they can show with actuarial information that they should be exempted.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that insurance companies use their own actuarial information when applying for an exemption, how can Albertans be assured that the data provided to the Automobile Insurance Rate Board is accurate and complete?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, we don’t have to be worried about that because the Automobile Insurance Rate Board will check their actuarial information, I can assure you.

Eighty-four per cent of the market is applying the reduction. That’s what I take exception to in the first question. Eighty-four per cent. When you stand and say that most Alberta drivers will not see a reduction, I have trouble with the credibility of the question. So I will explain to you that exemptions to five insurers, comprising about 11 per cent of the market, were granted on the condition that they reduce their rate for optional coverage, not fully but for optional. The policyholders of them will see a reduction.

Mr. Speaker, 95 per cent – 95, one more time – of the market will see a decrease in their rates. I cannot have this Legislature believe that the majority of Alberta drivers will not see a reduction when the facts are 95 per cent.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, Mr. Speaker, I’d like to know how many members of this Assembly have received a rebate.

To the same minister: when can we expect the Public Affairs

Bureau to issue a further press release explaining to those good drivers why the flawed insurance reforms have not worked for them and not provided any relief to those good Alberta drivers?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I would recommend to people that do believe that they have been treated unfairly or that did not receive a reduction when they should have is that they would contact me or the Automobile Insurance Rate Board because clearly this member does not have his information correct, cannot read the website correctly. This information is open and available on the Automobile Insurance Rate Board website. It clearly shows that 95 per cent of drivers will see a reduction, not that the majority won’t.

So, Mr. Speaker, to the drivers out there who feel that they should have had a reduction, had good driving records – I don’t want to know how many people in this Assembly got a reduction because I don’t want to know that much about their driving. I want to ensure that people understand that they can write to me and/or to the insurance rate board and ask the question. I’d be happy to respond.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Crystal Methamphetamine

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently I spoke to the superintendent of police in Red Deer and asked him what would be the one issue of most concern for the police in Red Deer. He answered with two words: crystal meth. He then went on to say that what really concerned him is the fact that he didn’t know of one 10-year-old child that couldn’t get their hands on $10, the cost of a packet of crystal meth. A child that uses crystal meth will have their undeveloped brain altered forever. Brain damage is permanent for anyone who uses crystal meth. My question is for the Minister of Health and Wellness. Will the minister outline what we are doing in Alberta to address crystal meth?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think it’s well known in this Assembly that the Member for Red Deer-North has already done a great deal herself to bring this issue forward to this Assembly. I would also say that most of the ministers on the front bench particularly involved with the soft side of the agenda and the Solicitor General involved with the policing are involved in a collaborative cross-ministry effort, working to make sure we bring forward all of the issues within the context of our own area of authority so we can follow through. With the chair of AADAC, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, we’ve been working to fill gaps in programs, namely detoxification and residential treatment for youth, building on our existing foundation. Opening this month the last few beds in Calgary, just on Thursday, we’ll have 24 new youth detoxification and residential treatment beds. Now, while they were not specifically built originally for crystal meth, they will become part of our support network for crystal meth. Our new youth residential treatment programs have initiated a special treatment protocol for meth users.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I’d say that we’re pleased to have a committee of outside assistance with Colleen Klein and Dr. Bob Westbury, who will help address the gaps and link us with the business community and corporate community, who share the concerns of the police in Red Deer and the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Because Bill 202, the Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Act, will help with concerns about kids addicted to crystal meth, could the minister give us a brief update on what we're doing to implement Bill 202?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, we know that by July 2006 this bill is to be ready for implementation. We're working on costing the initiatives of adding yet more treatment beds and now also adding a program that extends from the five-day detoxification, working with counselors, day treatment programs, family programs for support for parents, support groups, and mobile teen services. Mr. Speaker, there is virtually an army of people working in this government, including those from AADAC, that are ready and willing to make sure that we follow up on that legislative framework.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: do we have any plans to expand youth treatment facilities in central, southern, and northern Alberta?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I sincerely hope so, although final determination of other sites for residential treatment beds has not been made. You know about the ones that have been opened in Calgary and Edmonton. We know that there's a significant concern in central Alberta. I think what we have to define is a standard for how far people should live from their nearest treatment bed so that we have some standard of availability to take care of the needs. We won't be able to address them all in the first year, but I do know that there are strong representations from the Lethbridge-Medicine Hat area, from the Drayton Valley area, and from Red Deer itself for active treatment beds.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Natural Gas Prices

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday in this House the Premier announced that next week he will be touring the rest of Canada. This tour confirms that a political lame duck can still fly. One of the Premier's stops is Ontario, where consumers pay less for natural gas produced in Alberta than we do here. My first question is to the Minister of Energy. Why are Alberta consumers paying on average 30 per cent more than Torontonians for natural gas that is produced here in Alberta and is used in both places for residential heating?

Mr. Melchin: Actually, Ontario on average does not pay less than Alberta for natural gas. It is true that some of the jurisdictions in many places, Ontario and other places in the world, will take different positions as to when they hedge or not. Usually when you hedge, that involves a premium, an insurance of sorts, so they will spread that over a longer time. While they might pay less during the winter months, they're going to pay more on average. So Alberta continues to pay less than even that marketplace.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: why are Alberta consumers paying on average 60 per cent more than the people of Saskatchewan for natural gas for residential use?

Mr. Melchin: Actually, once again, you know, you don't give all the information, all the facts. You might select an individual month with an individual bill. It's true that in any one month they may pay less, but on average Albertans continue to pay the least.

The other thing that we have done for Albertans is that there's no other jurisdiction that actually also provides a natural gas rebate. That program likely this year will return upwards of $600 million directly to the consumers as a shield against the high prices of natural gas.

Mr. MacDonald: Even with the rebate, Mr. Speaker, we pay more.

Given that former Progressive Conservative Premier Peter Lougheed, who was never a political lame duck Premier, had a real plan to allow Alberta consumers to have the lowest home heating costs on the continent – the lowest home heating costs on the continent – how come we can't in this province now have a lower domestic price for natural gas that's used for residential heating, like the former Progressive Conservative government used to have?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, Albertans have benefited tremendously by even the deregulation of natural gas. If they would take a look, just look what's happened to this industry as a result of the exploration. I might remind them that natural gas brought in royalties to this province of $6 billion to $7 billion last year, substantially more this year. It has allowed the capacity to likewise provide the consumers the natural gas rebate program. There's no other jurisdiction across Canada that has $600 million that comes to them, where they do actually pay the least cost anywhere in Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Aon Consulting Inc.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Aon Consulting Inc., a company with a clear vested interest in seeing expansion of private health insurance, has been hired by this government to study the wholesale privatization of public health insurance in this province. The medical services being considered for private insurance or out-of-pocket payments include primary care, nonemergency surgery and diagnostic procedures, nonemergency hospitalization, and specialist medical services. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. How can the minister expect to get a credible, objective, and untainted report from its $1.5 million health care funding study when the contractor hired has a clear vested interest in expanding private insurance into health services now covered by public insurance in this province?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that it's fair for the hon. member opposite to impugn motives to Aon Consulting, who have been hired to do nothing involved in providing insurance products for Albertans, in actual fact to do costing on the health system. They will gain no advantage from any decision that this government ultimately makes relative to the analysis they do. They will be providing a piece of financial information on how we would be able to pay for health services if we move under any different model; for example, anything to deal with pharmacare, continuous care, or supplementary health services.

Mr. Speaker, I think it's very clear that they were hired through a competitive process. They illustrated their capacity to do actuarial work. Finance officials and Health officials and officials from Government Services looked over all of the criteria of this company, and they found them to be very competent in the areas in which they have been secured to do the job.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm surprised that the minister is unable to see the vested interest this company has in private health insurance.

My second question to her: why did the government not include in its request for proposals a public-sector comparator that would have compared the total cost, regardless of payer, of providing these health services under a private insurance scheme with the cost of providing these health services through single-payer public insurance. Why did she not include that?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I will have to check the Blues, but I think the hon. member persists in impugning motives or, in fact, deliberately distorting the picture of what Aon has been hired to do through the process of the RFP. They have been hired to do an actuarial model.

There is no Aon insurance company involved with Aon Consulting. There is no Aon insurance company north of the 49th parallel. This is Aon Consulting. This company has 47,000 employees in 120 countries, 800 in Canada. The ones that have been hired from Aon Consulting here have been members of the Reed Stenhouse corporation that were incorporated, and they're eminently qualified to do the job of financial analysis, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary to the same minister: why does the minister refuse to admit that the government's real agenda has nothing to do with making health services less costly for Martha and Henry and everything to do with shifting more of the costs of paying for health care onto average Alberta families by forcing them to buy more expensive private health insurance?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, the trend of these questions seems to lead Martha and Henry to believe that we are going to destroy the public health system. Would a government that put a $1.4 billion investment in the public health system for capital facilities across this province contemplate weakening a public health system because they are looking for alternatives to make sure that we have a sustainable health system for the future? We can be terrorized by the opposition, but we will finally be judged on whether or not we have the foresight to do the right thing in health care.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Crime Rate Reduction

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Edmonton this year has witnessed an unusual number of homicides, and the year is not over yet. Several of these tragic incidents appear to be organized crime related. Evidently our police are dealing with much more sophisticated and much more violent criminals. To the Solicitor General: since one of the allegations is that the capital city does not have the sufficient number of police officers to address the issues of escalating crime in our city, what is the minister doing to assist our police department in dealing with this issue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The homicide rate is indeed, of course, an issue for all of us, for every Albertan, not just in the city of Edmonton but in Calgary and in other areas of the province as well. The province showed a commitment this past spring by adding an additional $24 million to policing, with the largest increase of police officers that we've seen in almost 20 years. Some of those officers were added as a provincial component to the Edmonton Police Service that are working on organized crime, that are working on integrated child exploitation as well as looking at the investigations in and around the city of Edmonton regarding Project Kare.

Yes, there are a number of initiatives the province is working on and working with. We're meeting with the chiefs of police on a regular basis to look at new strategies in policing and new opportunities for the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My only supplemental, to the same minister: what is the minister doing to get law enforcement agencies across the province on the same page when it comes to reducing crime in this province and in this city?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This shows a good example. When IROC was started three years ago or two and a half years ago, that was the first integrated model of policing that we had in this province. We've built on that. Now IROC has approximately 61 officers and analysts working in that office.

The organized crime strategy that was started this past year, Mr. Speaker, has shown a definite asset in a number of arrests in both Edmonton and Calgary as well as in rural Alberta. We've seen some renewed spirit and renewed evidence regarding our dismantling of and our fight against organized crime.

We're also continuing to look this year at other areas, Mr. Speaker, continuing to look at new strategies of how we could be policing. We have, in fact, nine officers from Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Edmonton, and Calgary. They began meeting yesterday for the next few days regarding building an intelligence model that will be providing that ability to have a centralized, analytical location for all officers in Alberta. That's coming. That's going to be starting soon. They're developing that program this week, and then the plans will come out over the next little while.

The last point I want to mention, Mr. Speaker, is that as we move forward, as the minister of health mentioned earlier, the task force on crystal meth is going to be huge for this province. We're going to be looking at stakeholders from a number of different areas right across the province to look at how we can combat that issue, obviously, under the tremendous leadership of Dr. Colleen Klein and Dr. Bob Westbury.

The Speaker: Hon. members, today six members will participate in statements, and before I call on the first of such, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To you and through you to this House I would like to introduce the following guests who have travelled from across the province and the nation to support the Castle-Crown wilderness park initiative. I would ask the guests to please stand after their names have been called so that we can recognize them with the traditional greeting of this House: James Tweedie, conservation director, Castle-Crown Wilderness Coalition; Judith Huntley, executive director; Joe Obad, conservation director, Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society, Calgary-Banff chapter; Jill Sturdy, national outreach co-ordinator for CPAWS; Harvey Locke, national senior conservation adviser for CPAWS; Meredith James of the Sierra Club of Canada; Selena Smith, a post-graduate student at the University of Alberta; Rebecca Reeves, parks watch co-ordinator for CPAWS, Edmonton chapter; George Newton of CPAWS and Federation of Alberta Naturalists. Please, can we give them a round of applause?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: Hon. members, by way of an historical vignette today on this day in 1966 the voice of the New Democratic Party was heard for the first time in the Legislative Assembly of Alberta when the New Democratic member for Pincher Creek-Crowsnest, Garth Turcott, spoke during the debate on the Speech from the Throne. Mr. Turcott was elected in a by-election as the result of the death of a Social Credit member, William Kovach. Mr. Turcott was defeated in the next provincial general election on May 23, 1967, by Social Credit member Charles Drain, and there was not to be another New Democratic member elected until the general election of August 30, 1971, when Grant Notley was elected to represent the constituents of Spirit River-Fairview.

head: 2:40 Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Edson Trail

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One hundred years ago the frontier of agricultural settlement in Alberta extended as far north as Athabasca Landing. By 1910 the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway opened up more country west of Edmonton, and all the best farmland in central Alberta was soon pre-empted.

Accounts from explorers suggested that there were a series of prairies in northwestern Alberta. These had names such as La Grande Prairie, Spirit River Prairie, and Pouce Coupe Prairie. Early accounts suggested that the land was very fertile. Unfortunately, these northern prairies were separated from the south by a nearly impenetrable expanse of muskeg and boreal forest. This area was called the last best west, and pressure to find a route from the south to La Grande Prairie was formidable.

Responding to these pressures in 1911, the provincial government sent a survey team to cut a trail from Edson to Grande Prairie. The trail was noted for its mud and poor conditions, and at times it was impassable. However, for five years it brought thousands of homesteaders to the northern prairies. It was the last land rush to the last best west. The trail fell into disuse in 1916, when the Edmonton, Dunvegan, and British Columbia Railway reached Grande Prairie. Since the days of the Red River settlement this is the only example of settlers preceding the railway into an agricultural area.

The Edson to Grande Prairie trail opened up northwestern Alberta to settlement. The original pioneers built a regional economy to include forestry and energy. Hard work and commitment have now provided a significant regional prosperity. The Edson Trail Historical Society has commemorated the achievement of our pioneers by creating a historical documentary film about this famous trail. This valuable resource, Mr. Speaker, has been aired on public television, receiving very positive reviews.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Métis Week

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure on behalf of the government of the Alberta, and having two settlements in my constituency, to recognize November 13 to 19 as Métis Week in Alberta. Métis people are known as vibrant, resilient, and adaptable. They are a proud nation whose history and traditions date back to the early 1700s. Métis Week not only celebrates a unique culture; it is a chance to reflect on how the Métis have helped shape our great province. Métis culture is vibrant and alive in our province, and you can experience the living history and culture of Métis by visiting Métis Crossing near Smoky Lake in northern Alberta.

Alberta is the only province in Canada to provide a land base of 1.5 million acres for Métis and the only province to provide a governance structure to eight Métis settlements. A framework agreement is also in place with the Métis Nation of Alberta that provides an opportunity for Métis people out of settlements to develop and influence policy and programs that impact their lives. Just last year Alberta signed interim harvesting agreements with the Métis Nation of Alberta and the Métis Settlements General Council to ensure that all rules of the land will be followed.

This morning there was a Louis Riel commemoration ceremony at the Legislature. This ceremony has occurred for at least 20 years and helps to kick off Métis Week. It was our opportunity to enjoy Métis history, culture, and traditions and to recognize a nation that has and continues to make a difference to our province. Many activities will be held across the province, and I encourage you to join in as many as you can.

The Métis are unique aboriginal people, and the government of Alberta is pleased to acknowledge Métis Week.

Vietnamese Cao Daist Society

Mr. Pham: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to pay tribute and honour to those of us in society who without fanfare or personal benefit reach out to the less fortunate in our world and brighten up their lives. While most of us never know hunger, disease, or unsanitary conditions, there are many people on this Earth who do not share our bounty. In a province such as ours with staggering budgetary surpluses and boundless opportunities we are blessed with the ability to directly affect the lives of the less fortunate, especially the abandoned and destitute.

I am very proud and honoured to inform this honourable place that two groups in my working-class riding have recently played a significant role in the betterment of the lives of the poorest and defenceless among us. The Vietnamese Cao Daist society of Calgary teamed up with the Applewood Park Community Association to deliver many humanitarian projects in Vietnam.

As a proud Albertan of Vietnamese descent I am humbled by their combined generosity to raise money from their hard-working members and reach out thousands of miles away through the drilling of many wells to bring potable, clean water to many poor villages in southern Vietnam. They supplied many other basics of human life to these villages. Their contributions provided food and shelter to homeless seniors and children, job training for the infirm and handicapped so that they can lead productive lives. Finally, they provided critical medicines to many charitable doctors who teamed up with these organizations to alleviate suffering and help heal the sick.

I'm very proud to say that they are from my riding of Calgary-Montrose. I'm also honoured to be able to publicly acknowledge their very generous actions.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Castle Wilderness

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On June 1, 2005, an Alberta legend passed on, and I rise today to urge the government to designate the Castle wilderness as a wildland provincial park in the legacy of Andy Russell. This wilderness area just north of Waterton Lakes national park is a sublime landscape of virtually unparalleled natural diversity, home to nearly half of Alberta's plant species and a full complement of large carnivores.

Protecting the area's three underrepresented ecoregions – the montane, the foothills fescue grasslands, and the foothills aspen parkland – will help make this the corner piece completing the province's conservation puzzle. It will contribute to the Yellowstone to Yukon initiative, an international compendium of over 800 conservation groups committed to creating a 3,200 kilometre long protected area network from Yellowstone national park to the Peel River in the Yukon Territory. The opportunities for outdoor recreation and sustainable tourism make this area a Kananaskis south, an economic and social asset to the region.

I can think of no better centennial tribute than to designate the Castle wilderness as Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kòp wildland park. I'tai Sah Kòp references the name used for the area by the Piikani First Nation, who first called this wilderness area home.

Andy Russell was an outstanding Albertan who embodies the spirit of Alberta's heritage. Just some of Andy's accomplishments include being an Order of Canada recipient, the author of 13 books and dozens of magazine articles, and receiving three honorary doctorate of law degrees. Andy travelled extensively on horseback throughout the Rocky Mountains and the foothills, becoming a wilderness advocate as he watched these special places begin to disappear through shortsighted industrial development. Our Premier spoke fondly of Andy's contributions to Alberta at the memorial service for Andy this summer.

Alberta would benefit from remembering people like Andy Russell, respecting the original First Nations inhabitants, and protecting more places like the Castle wilderness. I urge all members of the House to support the creation of the Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kòp wildland provincial park as a legacy for future Albertans to enjoy.

Thank you.

International Day for Tolerance

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today, November 16, is International Day for Tolerance, a day to embrace our differences and to celebrate our diversity. It's a time for promoting understanding between people and for renewing our commitment to be proactive in combating intolerance, bigotry, and hatred. Together we live in a wonderful province filled with cultural, religious, and racial diversity.

Today we should celebrate our diversity by denouncing racism, discrimination, hatred, and ignorance. By promoting tolerance, our society can successfully reach a new milestone on the path towards social peace and harmony. Together we are capable of creating a society in which our children and grandchildren will be free from the injustices that are rooted in ignorance and fear.

I urge each and every Albertan to take on this challenge, beginning at home. Teach your children to embrace diversity, to denounce ignorance, and to seek understanding. Even at work we can explore ways to promote tolerance: be courageous and vocally object to racial jokes, comments, and insults. In doing so, we will tear down the walls of intolerance brick by brick. It is my firm belief that tolerance is the virtue that makes peace possible.

May this international day inspire each of us to open the channels of communication with the understanding that the future of our society, the future of all of humanity is at stake.

Thank you very much.

International Education Week

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. International education makes a significant contribution in preparing Albertans for participating in the global economy. This week, November 14 to 18, is recognized as International Education Week by the province of Alberta and over 85 countries around the globe.

The Alberta government set a course for the province through the 20-year strategic plan, that focused on unleashing innovation, leading in learning, competing in the global marketplace, and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit. International education directly supports all four of these pillars, which are the keys to the province's bright future.

Increasingly, jurisdictions like Alberta and others around the world are recognizing the importance of international education and are developing and implementing a comprehensive series of plans, policies, and programs. Recently Alberta Advanced Education revisited the province's strategy for international education in the postsecondary sector, and as a result a new plan has been developed in consultation with the province's postsecondary institutions. The ministry has identified a broad range of potential programs to achieve the outlined objectives and will implement these based on the availability of resources.

Mr. Speaker, the province's action plan demonstrates the province's awareness and commitment to ensuring that Alberta will be internationally recognized as a leading provider of education and learning experiences. It ensures that Albertans will be well prepared for their role in the global marketplace and as global citizens. More than ever before it is valuable to provide Albertans with international learning experiences, linking them to the world. Alberta companies are increasingly investing abroad, expanding their business activities, increasing the employment of Albertans, and generating more benefits for our province now and in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am submitting a petition which was initiated by a constituent from Edmonton-McClung and signed by a group of concerned Alberta parents from all over the province asking the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to eliminate school fees charged for textbooks, locker rentals, field trips, physical fitness programs, and music classes.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition that says:

The undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to introduce legislation declaring a moratorium on . . . future expansion of Confined Feeding Operations, with a view to phasing out existing operations within the next three years.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition from a hundred Albertans from the Alberta communities of Conklin, Fort McMurray, Edmonton, Alberta Beach, and Stony Plain, and it reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Bill 49 Police Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Police Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to provide first reading of Bill 49. The main purpose of the proposed legislation is to streamline and enhance the Law Enforcement Review Board's effectiveness in how complaints are handled by police and how the police disciplinary process works. The proposed amendments also clarify the role and powers of the board to assess costs and pay expenses.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 49 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have two tablings. I'm pleased to table today five copies of a document showing the cost breakdown of the government brochure on the surplus.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations I am pleased to table the required number of copies of the response to Written Question 6 on the Order Paper.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Government House Leader it's my pleasure to file the requisite number of copies of a memorandum to the Official Opposition House Leader and to the third party opposition House leader dealing with the subject of the supplementary supply schedule for the fall of 2005. That, of course, is filed with the Assembly this afternoon in the event that motions 22 and 23 receive favourable reply from the members.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise on behalf of the Minister of Advanced Education to table the appropriate number of copies of an updated provincial action plan for international education initiatives. This action plan demonstrates the province's awareness and commitment to ensuring that Alberta will be internationally recognized as a leading provider of education and learning experiences and ensuring that Albertans will be well prepared for their role in the global marketplace and as global citizens.

In addition, I am tabling copies of a new brochure to assist international students in choosing Alberta as an educational destination of choice.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings today, all concerned with health care in Alberta. The first is from Tena Wiebe, who writes with her concern about "building more hospitals and increasing bed capacity." She has not heard of a commitment to staff and maintain these new facilities and is concerned that after having the buildings built, the government will say that we don't have money to operate them and will sell them to private companies.

The second tabling is from Donald Sexauer, who writes of an experience he had with a relative in ER and wondering if the slashing that occurred to health care in the early '90s "is now showing its ugly head" and is concerned as well about building more hospitals but without operational expenses.

The final two are related to each other: a very thorough letter from Verna Pollack, writing to the Minister of Health and Wellness regarding the plea to expedite funding for Herceptin. She qualifies for the program but is waiting in line to get funding for it. This is an important program for women with breast cancer, Mr. Speaker.

The final tabling is a letter of support from Robert Pollack, who is the son of Verna Pollack, again with his concern that "it is alarming that a significant medicine such as Herceptin has been apparently placed on the other side of the two tiered Health Care fence."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am tabling the Federal Accountability Act, dubbed Stephen Harper's commitment to Canadians to clean up government. It contains wonderful ideas like ending the influence of money on politics, strengthening the Lobbyists Registration Act, making government appointments an all-party exercise, and whistle-blower protection. I urge all government members to study what their federal Tory cousins are trying to do so that one day they, too, can portray themselves as being pro transparency and standing for openness and accountability.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have received numerous calls and letters in the past concerned about long waiting times for services at the Grey Nuns hospital in Edmonton. Another letter from my constituent for tabling. She's also concerned about long waiting times for emergency services in the Grey Nuns hospital. She had to wait four and a half hours when she was in severe pain in the stomach. She's urging the government to give health care a top priority.

3:00

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society I want to table five copies of a proposed EnCana development in the Suffield national wildlife area that could set a precedent in disrupting a federally protected area.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. It is a document that I acquired on Saturday, November 5, when I was visiting the Artspace Housing Co-operative Ltd. at 9330 – 101A Avenue here in Edmonton. This brochure is an introduction to co-operative housing. It explains how it works and who can qualify for membership in the co-op support system.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have five letters and the appropriate number of copies from five persons in my constituency. They're all members of a group called Falun Gong. They are protesting that there is not prosecution for hate literature that was disseminated against their group.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first one is a brochure titled The Third Way or the Third Hoax? It's a comment on the Premier's proposal for reform on medicare in Alberta, published and distributed by SALT, the Seniors' Action and Liaison Team, a self-financed group of Edmonton seniors concerned about social justice issues in Alberta and Canada.

The second one, Mr. Speaker, is appropriate copies of a letter sent to all MLAs from Mrs. Irene Payne. Mrs. Payne is urging the minister of health to cancel their contract with Aon Consulting.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Klein, Premier, and pursuant to the Premier's Council on Alberta's Promise Act the Alberta's Promise partners report 2004.

And on behalf of the hon. Mr. Stevens, Minister of Justice and Attorney General, and pursuant to the Legal Profession Act the Alberta Law Foundation 32nd annual report 2005 and the Alberta Law Foundation audited financial statements and other financial information for the year ended March 31, 2005.

Privilege

Contempt of the Assembly

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday in the Assembly we dealt with a point of privilege and contempt raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. I offered an opportunity for hon. members to deal with that matter. We did then conclude that submission by hon. members at that point.

Then I recognized the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, who proceeded on a question of privilege of the Legislative Assembly, and at the same time I offered an opportunity for hon. members to participate should they wish. In the latter point there was made mention in the oral presentation of the Minister of Environment. The Minister of Environment was attending a funeral yesterday afternoon, so today I will offer him an opportunity to make comments with respect to this purported point.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to members of the House. Yesterday, as you rightly mentioned, I was attending a funeral, a First Nations funeral, in my constituency and was not here. However, I have since learned that in this Assembly yesterday members from the NDP have linked my name again to accusations about leaking the Auditor General's report and the Ethics Commissioner's reports.

First, on the matter of the Auditor General's report, Mr. Speaker, I did not have a copy of this report, contrary to what was being alleged. I therefore did not, could not, and would not release it. I read about it and its contents in the Edmonton Journal on Thursday, October 13, and as a member of this Assembly I received the Auditor General's finding when it was sent to all MLAs on October 17.

When it was released, this report cleared my name and my family name of any inappropriate action or behaviour in response to the accusations that were made by the New Democratic Party. It proved that they were both false and clearly irresponsible. I was pleased but not surprised by the Auditor General's report findings. I have no knowledge of or any connection to its release. Let me be very perfectly clear here today. Contrary to the NDP allegations, Mr. Speaker, I fully support the respect and the need for high standards when it comes to the handling of these types of reports, and I have always respected these standards in this House.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, after June, when allegations were made against me and my family, I requested the Ethics Commissioner to investigate the allegations that were made by the NDP. I made this request as a member of this Assembly in order to answer in an open, fair, and independent manner any final questions that could arise as a result of the entirely false accusations made against me and my family by the NDP.

Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that I had requested this independent review by the Ethics Commissioner, I was given an advance copy of this report and made reference to it on a radio program the day before. I had no reason to believe it was inappropriate to reference it as I had requested the report myself to clear my reputation and my family name, and it had been delivered to me in response to that request.

I'm afraid that this is just one more example of the NDP refusing to accept and acknowledge that their initial attacks on me and my family back in June were irresponsible, unfounded, and untrue. They don't like the fact that these two independent reports cleared my family name and me on the false charges that they made, so they now are attacking me on another front. Mr. Speaker, I have the utmost respect for this House and its members and its family members, who the members represent here. I will respect today the ruling that is made relative to this very, very important situation.

I want it to be very clear, though, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, that I would not act in any way that would undermine the rules of this Legislative Assembly. I still await the members of the NDP to do the honourable thing: to apologize to my family.

The Speaker: I take it that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview wants to participate on this purported point of privilege?

Mr. Martin: Well, Mr. Speaker, I wish he'd stay on the privilege motion instead of what he was talking about. If he wants a debate about this, let's deal with the privilege. That's not what he's talking about.

The Speaker: Any additional members want to make a presentation with respect to this purported point? Then I will take this information that's been stated in the House. I understand as well that the Auditor General appeared before the Public Accounts Committee this morning, and I haven't had a chance to review the Blues with respect to that. We will review what has been stated in the House with respect to these two matters and report back to the House. I'm not so sure that we'll be able to do it tomorrow, but Monday at the latest.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Transmittal of Estimates

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have received a certain message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, which I now transmit to you.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Lieutenant Governor transmits supplementary estimates of certain sums required for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

Please be seated.

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, prior to moving a number of motions relevant to the supply estimates, I wish to advise that I provided the government's 2005-06 quarterly budget report for the second quarter to all MLAs this morning. At the same time I also made this report public as required by section 9 of the Government Accountability Act.

Mr. Speaker, I now wish to table the 2005-06 supplementary estimates. These supplementary estimates will provide additional spending authority to 13 departments of government. When passed, these estimates will authorize increases of $1,531,247,000 in voted expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $234,150,000 in voted capital investment, and $5 million in lottery fund payments.

Mr. Speaker, I will now table the quarterly budget report for the second quarter pursuant to section 9 of the Government Accountability Act. This amended fiscal plan is also required by section 8 of the Government Accountability Act when a second set of estimates is tabled.

I'm also tabling the second-quarter activity report describing the major achievements of our government during that period.

Likewise, I am tabling the second-quarter update for the Alberta heritage savings trust fund.

head: Government Motions

22. Mrs. McClellan moved:

Be it resolved that the message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, the 2005-06 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply.

Mr. Mason: This is a debatable motion, is it, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Yes, it is.

Mr. Mason: And the time allotment is 10 minutes per member?

The Speaker: Twenty.

Mr. Mason: Twenty? Well, I don't think I'll need all of that, Mr. Speaker, but I will address this question because I think that there has been a very important question that has been raised by the government's actions and certain comments that have been made by the Premier with respect to the role of this Legislative Assembly in overseeing government expenditures.

The role of parliaments and Legislatures in controlling the public purse and holding governments accountable for their expenditures goes back hundreds of years in the British parliamentary tradition, and it forms part of the democratic nature of our society for which our veterans fought in the Second World War. It's not the entire democratic system, but it's an important part of the democratic system. For the Premier to be unaware of the Legislature's primary role in overseeing government expenditures, whether they come from taxes or whether they come from royalties or whether they come from gambling or cigarettes or wherever they may come from, is appalling to me. That the Premier would make statements to the effect that the surpluses are not within the purview of the Legislature, or not within the purview of the opposition, I think he said, by extension means not within the purview of the Legislature and by further extension means not within the purview of public discussion at all.

This government's imperial approach to spending and budgeting is getting more and more troublesome, Mr. Speaker, so much so that I said today, and I'll say again, that when it comes to spending taxpayers' money in this province, democracy is on life support, and it's all the opposition can do to keep the Premier from pulling the plug altogether.

I think the tremendous financial resources that are now flowing to the province require very, very strong and systematic debate. I heard the Deputy Premier and Provincial Treasurer say today that of course everything is going to be debated in the Legislature. It was clear that she was doing damage control, ably so, I think, on the Premier's comments, but the fact of the matter is that it is just damage control. Why would the government, after a brief caucus meeting and a cabinet retreat, promise each Albertan a $400 rebate without any reference to this Legislature if they really believed in legislative authority?

They may say: well, it's all got to be approved before the cheques are cut. Mr. Speaker, they have already spent a great deal of money preparing glossy brochures that advise Albertans that they're entitled to this money. They have done a great deal to communicate a decision that has not yet officially been taken by the Legislature, and that shows, in my view, contempt for the role of this Legislature and an arrogance in their spending that I find unacceptable altogether.

Now, democracy is one thing. Another thing, Mr. Speaker, is vision. There's no vision here. If we look back over the history of governments in this province, we see that previous governments, even Progressive Conservative governments, have had more vision and more sense about what needs to happen in the province economically and financially than this government has. Under the Lougheed government the attitude was that the resource revenues that we have are a windfall on a nonrenewable, declining natural resource and that the value that came from them, the money that flowed from them was just as much the right of a future generation as this generation. That is lost on this government.

It seems to me, fundamentally, that the government has to have a vision for this province's prosperity once the conventional oil and gas revenues are gone and once even the tar sands resources or the nonconventional natural gas is gone. I know that many people opposite don't even think that we'll ever get to the point where we'll be out of nonconventional resources, but I can assure them that that day will come.

It's very important, in our view, that the extra windfall bonus that the government is now receiving from oil and gas revenues because of high prices be invested to ensure that Alberta remains an energy leader into the future once the oil and gas is gone. We've put forward a proposal to create an entity that would essentially be a new energy company and would invest in conservation and in alternative forms of energy and maintain Alberta's position as the energy leader in Canada even when the petroleum and the carbon-based energy resources are more or less depleted. This money could be used to invest not just in Alberta but right across Canada in order to create energy security going into the future for the post hydrocarbon energy economy, and that way we would retain control and ownership of the resources and the wealth that comes from them. We would insulate ourselves from any attempts by other places in Canada to take our wealth, and we would also invest it for the future of Albertans and for the future of Canadians as well.

The government doesn't have a vision, Mr. Speaker, and what is going to happen is that when the oil and gas is gone, all that is going to be left for people in this province are cutlines, empty holes, dried up farms, and ghost towns because the government is not preparing this province for the time when the oil and gas is, in fact, gone. I think it's clear that we need a bigger vision, a broader vision of the economic prosperity. The money that the government is spending now doesn't just belong to this generation; it belongs to the next generation and the generation after. It needs to be invested in a way so as to preserve the quality of life and the economy that we enjoy in Alberta today.

The other point that I want to make is that the government has no long-term financial plan. Again, the Provincial Treasurer goes to great lengths to deny that and to argue that they do have a long-term plan, but it's interesting that this long-term plan changes dramatically from month to month. It wasn't long ago that the Provincial Treasurer was saying that she didn't support rebates to Albertans, but, after a caucus retreat, all of a sudden that was the government's policy. The government had said that tax reduction was low on Albertans' priorities, and that wasn't very long ago. Now they're saying that tax reduction is on the agenda. So it's clear, Mr. Speaker, that this government is in fact changing its so-called long-term economic plan, or long-term financial plan, almost from week to week. That says to me, in fact, that there is no plan.

The Treasurer also spoke this morning a little bit about smart spending. That is a code word, but what does it really mean? My hon. colleague says: jumbo shrimp. Some spending could be smart, but I know that one of the mistakes of the Lougheed era was investment in capital, in bricks and mortar, without ensuring the long-term financial capacity to operate all of the facilities that were built. I've travelled the province, and I've seen hospitals that were built in the Lougheed era, the dark brick that was characteristic of that time, and these hospitals in little towns in Alberta are boarded up – they actually have plywood on the windows in places like Empress, Alberta – because they've been closed because they were ill-advised capital projects or the government was unable to sustain the operating costs that were necessary to keep them going.

Politicians really like to invest in new buildings and things that are under construction, but if it was to be smart spending, Mr. Speaker, then the government would have to put in place a plan that would show that the operating budgets to sustain those things into the long-term future were in place and would also have to show that, in fact, they have training programs and educational programs in order to make sure that there is an adequate supply of professionals and other workers to operate them going forward instead of having shortages of nurses, when 10 or 15 years ago we were sending nurses to the United States because we were laying them off in droves. It's that kind of yo-yo economic planning that makes it very difficult to ensure sustainability. Without an adequate operational plan for new capital expenditures, it's not smart spending – it's dumb spending – and we haven't seen that yet from the Provincial Treasurer.

So in respect of those three points, Mr. Speaker – the government's contempt of democracy and contempt of the Legislature when it comes to expenditures and the Legislature's oversight of government expenditures, the lack of a long-term economic vision for this province that ensures that future generations have the same standard of living that we enjoy today, and the lack of a long-term financial plan that doesn't change from week to week and from caucus to caucus – I cannot support the motion that's been made by the government, and I would ask all hon. members to join me in voting against it.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to participate in the debate this afternoon on Government Motion 22 as presented by the hon. Minister of Finance. Certainly, when we look at the 13 departments that are eventually going to get more money, this is a substantial increase from the budget that it seems like we passed just last week. Incredibly, an entire summer and most of the fall have gone by since we finalized the provincial budget, but this habitual amount that we are now going to debate – and I am grateful for the opportunity to debate this motion and also have a good discussion on further government expenditures.

3:30

There are conflicting messages with the government. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood certainly has every right to question some of the spending habits of this government. Without a doubt. We hear all the time the comment: where is the money going? We heard in question period today, Mr. Speaker, that public health care expenditures are unsustainable, that they're going up and up and up, and they're going to be as high as $10 billion. Well, maybe we should look at how we're managing this money.

An Hon. Member: We're trying to.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, people say that we're trying to, but we don't have an opportunity in this Legislative Assembly, Mr. Speaker, to see where the money that we previously spent has gone. It is amazing to think that in the last two fiscal years the Public Accounts Committee has not had an opportunity to scrutinize the spending of many different government departments that have spent billions and billions of dollars.

So there is the entire issue of the government and its accountability. Money is quite easy to acquire in Alberta at this time because of high North American prices for natural gas and high prices for crude oil on the international markets. These prices are determined by matters that are totally outside the control of this government, and that is something that we must recognize. I would encourage this government to further increase our savings. There have been some very modest efforts being made here.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, how fast is this budget process for this government? Well, in this piece of information that was put out we're looking at a photograph here, and it's the steady hands on the reins. We should have confidence in the stewardship; that's the image that's trying to be portrayed here. That indicates to me that we're going nowhere because if we were really riding that horse and directing that horse, the hands wouldn't be resting on the saddle horn and the reins wouldn't be as loose as they are. This brochure is a lot like the government's budgeting practices; it's about public relations. This may look fine from the public relations perspective, but one only has to go inside this brochure, or this propaganda.

We hear all the time about the smart spending, saving, and giving back. Well, I would certainly encourage you to save a good portion of this extra funding that we have, whether it's in the heritage savings trust fund or any of your endowments. Some of those funds actually were ideas that originated on this side of the House and were gradually adopted by this government.

I think I have to encourage the government even more to spend their money. Don't spend it all at once. To say that this plan is smart – the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood was talking about smart spending – well, it certainly is not smart spending to in one decade blow up a good, sound public hospital and then 10 years later think that everyone should just be so grateful because you're going to construct some new hospitals where, granted, they are needed.

An Hon. Member: Two in Sherwood Park.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, there is a hospital going to be built in Sherwood Park, and there's going to be one built in Fort Saskatchewan, but I would remind all hon. members of this Assembly that there's going to be significant population growth in both those centres. At some point in the future, if I was working out in Fort Saskatchewan or near Fort Saskatchewan and I was injured at work, I would be grateful that there's a hospital handy.

An Hon. Member: And a choice.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, I don't want a choice. I just want a good, sound public hospital, and I want to know that there are going to be trained professionals there in the event that I do get injured or someone else gets injured.

So I'm not necessarily opposed to the construction of these hospitals in needed places, but I find it quite ironic that they can describe themselves as smart spenders when in one decade you want to blow up a perfectly good public hospital and then: ho, hey, we're heroes because we are now going to construct hospitals.

Now, another item in this document that caught my eye was the government's pledge. I'm going to call it a pledge, and I'm going to keep them to it. Hopefully, they're going to increase it even further. I'm pleased to see that they've done this, but the government is putting $226 million from the surplus into the fund – and this is the heritage savings trust fund – to ensure that the fund grows at least as fast as the rate of inflation. Well, I'm pleased to see that this has caught the attention of the Minister of Finance because to date it has not been done.

If we had been inflation-proofing the heritage savings trust fund, today's value would be in excess of $19 billion – $19 billion – not $12 billion. I see in the quarterly budget report that there has been an increase in the amount that's being set aside to inflation-proof the heritage savings trust fund. My information indicates that to date this year in Canada the consumer price index is in the range of 3.3 to 3.5 per cent, but that amount that is indicated here, Mr. Speaker, I don't think even brings that up to cover the consumer price index for this respective year.

I would like to see the government recognize that we are in a unique and unusual position in this jurisdiction in North America in that we can build a society and we can build a province that's the envy not only of the entire North American continent but of the world. When we have this sort of budgeting process that, to say the least, does not in this member's view provide very good stewardship of the tax dollars, it does not increase my confidence in this government's ability to manage.

Now, I know that we went through many different budget debates in this Assembly in the spring, but I had no idea, Mr. Speaker – the debt had supposedly been paid off. There were estimates that the infrastructure debt was 3 and a half billion dollars. That was to improve our roads and our bridges, fix up our existing hospitals, fix up the existing schools, not arbitrarily forcing public school boards to close good, sound schools before they could get money to build new ones. We had no idea that the infrastructure debt was over $7 billion until – and I don't know; I could be in all kinds of trouble here with some sort of point of privilege against me – the leaked document that came from the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation, that became public knowledge here in I think it was June, in regard to the possibility of having to borrow money to pay for this infrastructure debt. None of this information came up during public debate over the budget this spring.

Mr. Mason: It's called smart borrowing.

Mr. MacDonald: This idea of smart borrowing: I believe the interest rate was going to be 4 and three-quarters per cent. There was talk that maybe we'd even have to change the Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act to allow this leadership hopeful to borrow money to build roads and bridges and fix the province up really nice, but that plan apparently is no longer needed. The fact remains that the total infrastructure debt that we are going to have to deal with in this province has doubled.

The hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation confirmed that in that report. I was just glad it was made public. I don't have the opportunity to attend a lot of those standing policy committee meetings except behind that braided rope, and the only thing I can say about that braided rope in room 512 is that at least it's red, you know. I'm not allowed to participate in the proceedings of that committee. But it is a good thing, and I am grateful, no matter how we get that information, to receive it.

When you receive that information and you look at what was proposed by the hon. minister, we really need to improve our budgeting process. The fact that we were going to have this complete 180-degree reversal of public policy by this government and borrow money was certainly, to say the least, astonishing.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are significant increases in the amounts of money that have been collected in this fiscal update. We're certainly spending significant amounts additionally, but one thing that I would like to note for all hon. members of this Assembly is something that I find quite interesting. Perhaps the minister could clarify this for all members of the Assembly. In the second-quarter fiscal update the nonrenewable resource revenue that we're looking at here – the budget for the second quarter had indicated that for synthetic crude oil and bitumen royalty there would be roughly about $400 million collected. But so far the forecast is for in excess of $1 billion. The main reason for the change from the budget, as indicated, is higher oil prices, which is significant. Hopefully, in the debate we're going to get a clarification on whether this is revenue from synthetic crude oil or from bitumen.

We all know the problem that a lot of bitumen producers are having and this notion that everyone is getting close to $60 American a barrel for their product, when I'm sure the hon. minister knows that not to be true. Can we get a breakdown on that? How much of that is from synthetic crude, and how much is from bitumen? Have there been any major developments in the north that have now gone from paying 1 per cent royalty to 25 per cent royalty for their synthetic crude oil production? If there have been any major producers, who are they? I think the public would be very interested to know that, and if the hon. minister or some other member of Executive Council could provide that information during the course of debate, I would be very grateful.

Now, we're taking in a lot of money here. There's no doubt about that. Some of the expenses here – and the hon. member earlier was talking about the Second World War and . . . [Mr. MacDonald's speaking time expired] Oh, dear, my time is up.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. I'd also like to speak to the motion. As mentioned by the two previous speakers: very concerned that so quickly we're having this motion come before the House because of the income.

I guess I'd like to refer to a few things. We continue to hear from the government that we have one of the lowest tax regimes, so that's good enough. They always talk about value added, and they've given lots of incentives in the Fort McMurray area, but they failed to carry those on. One of the big concerns of the people of Alberta that I've spoken to this last summer is that it doesn't seem like there's a possibility of getting the money to where they need it. It's who you know. The programs are very difficult for people to make application, and it's frustrating to them.

A few of the comments I'd like to address with the motion are that earlier this summer when I was up in Grande Prairie, they talked about the fair share program in British Columbia and how those revenues are being distributed to the municipal governments there in order to do their own infrastructure work and not be micromanaged on every aspect, whether it's potholes, tertiary water treatment, or what have you. They're very concerned with the conditional funding that is going out and the struggle that the different areas are having in addressing that.

I would very much hope that as we get to debate these supplies, we can change the stability of the programs that become long term. I've had the opportunity of being in Olongapo, Philippines, when an anti-aircraft ship comes in with 6,000 sailors that hit the beach and think that they've only got three days to spend their money. It seems that that's very much the attitude here, that we've only got six months. Let's get it spent quickly before someone else tries to get it. It doesn't matter about value for our dollar; it's the speed at which we can spend it because it's going to be gone anyway. I'd very much like to see those things going into a savings program and then a five-year plan, or possibly longer, on infrastructure spending being presented.

One particular area in my riding has had a bid of $1.1 million for some infrastructure work that they want to do and are not able to get the funding. Now that's jumped up to $2.1 million because of the huge demand and the short span that these builders are looking at. Many of them seem like they're putting in bids realizing that this is a one-shot program. We've got six months, one year, and we've got to pay for everything in that time. So I'm very concerned that they don't really have a five-year program saying that this much money is going to go out. Construction workers and other ones can look at it realizing that we don't have to get it all in six months, that this is coming over a longer time.

I also very much like the fact that Albertans for years have said: yes, we want the deficit paid off. We've done that, but the second thing they've always said was that we deserve a tax break when we got that. This is the ideal time, when the economy is booming, to give tax breaks. They say that they want to be more efficient and downsize. They had a great opportunity here to eliminate the health care premiums for every working Albertan and to have moved the bureaucracy involved in trying to do that collection and the paperwork there over for their thousand extra people that they needed.

It would be very beneficial, I feel, to the province on a long-term plan if they were to have a formula where they would say that a certain percentage of the surplus every year would go back to taxpayers in the form of property assessment rebates. Those taxes are paid for, the rolls are there, we know the numbers, and it would be a very simple formula. It wouldn't take a lot of bureaucracy to set it up and spend $10 million in order to redistribute the money. Plus that would actually be a tax refund, and there would be no question federally on whether or not it was a rebate.

An Hon. Member: What about the renters?

Mr. Hinman: They'll have the opportunity. It goes into the market.

Anyway, tax deductions are what we need in the province. We need to raise the basic tax exemption to at least $20,000 or $24,000. We have the ability here in the province, and that would help them.

Mrs. McClellan: The federal government is $8,000.

Mr. Hinman: So we want to follow their example? How appalling. They're hypocrites to say that they're worrying about low-income people and taxing them at $8,000. We have the ability here, and it would be of great benefit to those low-income people, more so than raising the minimum wage.

An Hon. Member: A leadership speech.

Mr. Hinman: Leadership. That's already over. It's in the mail.

An Hon. Member: Do you have your caucus' support?

Mr. Hinman: Yes.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner has the floor.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. The point is that we need to take those good programs that we have and the incentives that we've brought in – industry to develop the bitumen and the capital investment that's coming here. We could do it in many other areas. We could be doing it in health care. We could be doing it in research in our universities. It would just be very pleasing to the people of Alberta to see investment incentives come into this province, anywhere from a small family business to the huge tar sands in Fort McMurray.

Anyway, I look forward to the debate on this surplus, and I hope that we'll have prudence and not think that we have to have it all spent in the next six months. It's very worrisome that we're going to be like a lottery winner, and in a year we'll be back wondering how we make ends meet.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in. Any questions for the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. The hon. member just indicated that he would refund the dollars to Albertans by way of a property tax refund. How would he address those who don't own property and rent? Does the member not think that all Albertans deserve the benefit of the revenue that the province is realizing? What about those who can't afford to buy a property and have to rent?

Mr. Hinman: Excellent question. I appreciate the opportunity to get up and answer the question. The thing that we need to look at first in order for things to go forward, to make an economy boom is the tax level. It's critical. It's the barnacles on the ship or the ball and chain. There are many programs that we could have for incentives to help out Albertans in property ownership, but if, in fact, they knew that incentive was there, that would be the benefit. It's an open market for renting, and if people are getting their rebate back as property owners, it only makes sense that they can then compete and that it would adjust the rental accordingly.

The important thing is that it's the people who have paid the tax that should get the refund first, and that would help to boost the economy. To just give out money randomly doesn't make sense when you've taxed so heavily in so many areas. In order to help people buy a house, what we could do with the surplus is set up a deposit in the Alberta Treasury Branch or the credit unions and put it in for a 10- or 15- or, ideally, 20-year deposit. Then those institutions could turn around, using good loan policies, and loan that out, and we could have 20-year mortgages on property instead of one- and two-year open-ended mortgages, which is going to be a disaster for our economy when interest rates rise and people are caught without locked-in mortgages. It was standard practice back in the '60s and '70s to have 20-year mortgages that were locked in.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, this session is supposed to be brief questions, brief answers. We only have five minutes for this portion.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I enjoyed the hon. member's speech and so on. I'd like to ask him, as a representative of another conservative party in this Legislature, whether or not he believes that the current spending habits of this government represent true-blue, small "c" conservatism?

Mr. Hinman: A brief answer. No, this isn't conservative spending. This is drunken sailors, only they're not spending their own money; they're spending someone else's.

The Acting Speaker: Any other questions? Does anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Minister of Finance to close debate.

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, really the debate was to be around the motion for consideration of the supplementary estimates, so I'm not going to get into a lot of the discussions. I did make very good notes, and there'll be great opportunity through the debate of the supplementary estimates and again under Bill 43 to answer some of them.

I want to wish the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner the best of luck this weekend. I think it would be great.

Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I am curious as to whether ring roads in this city are important, whether hospital beds for the public health system are important, whether the investments at the University of Alberta are important for the future, whether those are investments or whether they are drunken sailor spending or whoever's comment that was. I will be interested in supplying him, through the Minister of Energy, with the true information on the life expectancy of the oil sands, where there are centuries of supply in fact.

I had a question about whether or not I supported rebates. It wasn't my first choice, but certainly when we were able to do the things that were important, such as investments in roads, hospitals, schools, and academic institutions plus keep the lowest overall tax burden for Albertans in Canada, I certainly support giving Albertans back their own money and believe that they're well able to decide how to spend it.

I want to remind hon. members that are trying to say that we are not interested in tax reduction – I don't know where that came from. If we taxed at the next closest jurisdiction to us, we would collect $7 billion more in tax revenue. That's how much we have reduced taxes in this province and have reduced them in every budget, not only reduced them but in a way that is sustainable into the future. That's what's important there.

Smart spending is listening to your partners, our partners in the cities of Calgary and Edmonton, the Capital health authority, the Calgary health authority, all of our rural health authorities. Our municipal partners have told us that ring roads were important, that overpasses were important, that roads to export product are important, that schools are important, our classrooms. If we're going to implement fully the Learning Commission's report, which we've been begged to do, you actually have to have classrooms to put those students in if you're moving them out of their present one.

You know, it's an interesting subject. I just had a meeting with the mayor of Edmonton. I just spent a period of time at AUMA, as some of you did. I've been in discussions at AAMD and C and will be back there again, as you will, and what I have to ask you is: do you hear anything that they say? They are considering these as priorities. This is their list. This is the Capital health authority's list that said: we need these beds. It's the Calgary health authority's list that said: we need these beds.

On the other subject of operational every minister that brings forward a capital project has to show that they can operate that project into the future. Just an additional bit of information for the hon. member because I would agree with him. I do not want to have buildings that you can't operate. That has been done.

Sixty thousand new spaces in our postsecondary institutions. We do indeed hope that we have the workforce that's required, and we know we have to work on that.

I will give the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar the formula that we use for inflation-proofing the heritage fund. There is a formula. That's why you'll see a change in it from the first quarter to the second quarter. As the indexes change, so does the amount that's in there.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that we vote on the motion. I look forward to the debate, and I look forward to providing information that members have asked for during the ensuing debate.

[Government Motion 22 carried]

23. Mrs. McClellan moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 58(9) the number of days that the Committee of Supply will be called to consider the 2005-06 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund shall be three days.

[Government Motion 23 carried]

Second Reading

Bill 45
Maternal Tort Liability Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today to open debate in second reading on Bill 45, the Maternal Tort Liability Act.

As many members will know, this bill addresses an issue that's rather near and dear to my heart in that I have a family in my constituency that finds itself in the very situation envisioned and covered by this act. Although this act is not retroactive and will not address that particular family's situation, nonetheless I believe it's a prudent and proper move for the government to address this area, a loophole, as it were, in the common law.

Under the current common law, Mr. Speaker, a child born alive with injuries arising from a motor vehicle accident which occurred prior to the birth has a right of action. That child can sue the negligent third party driver. When and if the child is born alive with injuries, the cause of action can be commenced, and the claim for damages can be made. There is an exception to this common law rule in the cases of injuries to children caused by the negligent acts of the mother prior to birth. Currently a child does not have a cause of action against its mother for injuries caused by the mother's negligence while the child is still a fetus. That restriction was set out in 1999 by the Supreme Court of Canada in the case of Dobson versus Dobson. A child can also sue anyone, including both parents, who negligently causes injuries to that child after birth, whether it's in the car accident or by any other manner.

By way of Bill 45 this government wishes to provide an exception to this common law rule. The proposed legislation is designed to provide a measure of compensation for a child who sustains prenatal injuries as the result of the negligent driving of his or her mother. The proposed provision relates only to motor vehicle accidents and does not change tort law in any way other than to provide for a narrow statutory exception to the common law concept of maternal tort immunity. The change to the common law would provide protection for mothers by prohibiting claims against them beyond the limits of their insurance policies. As these situations arise infrequently, the impact on the insurance industry of this exception would be minimal, Mr. Speaker. The financial compensation will benefit the injured child, the mother, and the rest of the family.

Alberta is the first Canadian province to propose this change, Mr. Speaker. However, other jurisdictions have put this legislation in place. For instance, the United Kingdom provides that a child cannot under any circumstances bring an action against its mother for injuries sustained prenatally unless the injuries result from a motor vehicle accident where there is insurance.

I referred to the Supreme Court ruling on the Dobson case, Dobson versus Dobson, which ruled that a child does not have a right of action in the event of a car accident. They overturned an appeal on that basis, but they invited the Legislatures of the country to invade this space, if you will, to rule in this regard. In relation to the United Kingdom law the Supreme Court said, and I quote from paragraph 65:

Thus, it must be emphasized that the general rule for mothers in the United Kingdom is one of immunity for prenatal negligence with the limited exception of injuries caused by negligent driving. The Act provides that a mother cannot be held liable for any amount of damages which exceeds the limit fixed by statute. This will benefit both the mother and the rest of the family.

The Supreme Court was reluctant on its own to carve out this exception from the common law by judicial ruling because of the fear of precedent and the potential for the precedent to be widened into other areas of women's rights or any other areas beyond the strict limitation of car accidents, in which they determined that in the case of driving a car, the standard of care for a mother is very clear. If she does not exercise that standard of care while driving, she's guilty of negligence.

The Supreme Court suggested that any such exception to the common law rule of maternal tort immunity would best be performed by the Legislatures so that it is clear and limited. I quote again from the Dobson case, paragraph 36.

Although the law of torts has traditionally been the province of the courts, to impose tort liability on mothers for prenatal negligence would have consequences which are impossible for the courts to assess adequately. This development would involve extensive intrusions and frequently unpredictable effects on the rights of bodily integrity, privacy and autonomous decision-making of pregnant women. The resolution of such fundamental policy issues is a matter best left to the legislature. In the United Kingdom, it was Parliament that provided a carefully tailored and minimally intrusive legislative scheme of motor vehicle insurance coverage. It was designed to provide a measure of compensation for a child who sustains prenatal injuries as a result of the negligent driving of his or her mother. Yet, it provides protection for mothers by prohibiting claims against them beyond the limits of their insurance policies.

The court was clear that any such legislation would have to be restricted to the instance of car accidents, and the amount payable would be limited to the amount of the mother's insurance. That's what the government has done in this legislation, Mr. Speaker.

The Dobson case was clear that the law would have to be restricted to those instances, and I quote again, the second half of paragraph 65, referring again to the United Kingdom legislation.

The legislation renders it impossible to argue by analogy that the duty of care should be extended to other tortious situations. A judicial finding of liability in this appeal would not necessarily place pregnant women in Canada in the same legal position, which is why the Supreme Court did not venture into the area and invited the Legislatures to do so.

If such an action were allowed, as in the Supreme Court's action, even in the narrow context of negligent driving, it would have to recognize a duty and articulate a standard of care for the conduct of pregnant women. As a matter of tort law, this carries the risk that the duty would be applied in other contexts where it would impose unreasonable obligations upon pregnant women.

Mr. Speaker, that is why the Supreme Court refused to venture into this area and invited the Legislatures to do so.

That is exactly what this legislation does, Mr. Speaker. It restricts the exception to the case of car accidents, and it restricts the award to the amount of insurance that the mother carries.

I'd like to point out also, Mr. Speaker, that this legislation doesn't assign any blame, determine any negligence or any liability. It only creates a cause of action, which would subsequently be determined by the courts. That cause of action is already available to children that were injured prenatally against other third parties and against other family members. The only exception is with the mother. The Supreme Court has invited, in fact encouraged the Legislatures to venture into this area provided that it's restricted to car accidents and to the level of the mother's insurance, and that's what this legislation does.

Thank you for the time, and I look forward to the debate on the issue.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to respond on second reading to the hon. Member for Peace River, who presented this Bill 45, the Maternal Tort Liability Act. This bill is very brief and concise and carefully worded. Of course, we can deal with the careful wording later in committee, but the issue itself is very complex, extremely complex. There are many different questions to raise. Just looking externally at the Supreme Court case of Dobson versus Dobson, which the hon. member referred to, it's a very complex case with different opinions. Not everyone on the Supreme Court agreed. There was a majority and then there was a minority position. Some were more inclined to focus on the pregnant mother and her right to autonomy and freedom and some on the issue of the liability which applies to anyone getting behind the wheel of a car. So we'll have to look at the different arguments in that case as it applies to the bill that's being presented.

Of course, all the members of the Supreme Court agreed that provincial Legislatures could pass legislation to cover the one particular situation which is not now covered. As the hon. member mentioned, if a pregnant woman is in a car accident and somebody else is driving, if there's a third party involved, then the child that is born later can bring a suit against that third party. That's acceptable. So the insurance company has to pay the compensation but not if the pregnant mother is herself driving and she is negligent. So there is a loophole there that's not covered. The Supreme Court stated that "a carefully tailored solution could benefit both the injured child and his or her family, without unduly restricting the privacy and autonomy rights of women." In effect, the Supreme Court threw it back to Legislatures to develop a carefully tailored solution, in other words a carefully worded bill, which will deal with this situation, this unique example.

But this is a very difficult issue, I find, because what the Supreme Court was unwilling to do was to go in the direction of allowing tort law and a legal duty of care to be imposed upon a pregnant woman in respect to her fetus and in respect to her subsequently born child. I agree with that reluctance, that the courts should not go in that direction. Now, this is quite a challenging issue for me: to get into issues of tort law. Tort has to be spelt t-o-r-t. If you add an e, then you're talking about a piece of cake. So I have gone back to school. I thought that maybe so many years of studying theology was enough, but suddenly I've gone back to school to take law classes and learn something about tort law.

My understanding of tort law is that it deals with persons and their legal rights and legal duties. So tort means a civil wrong, a conduct that the law says is wrong as between persons who are in relationship to each other. Negligence is a tort, so when a person owes a duty to another person, if there's negligence, then that person should be subject to the implications of tort law.

There's a classic statement from an English House of Lords decision of 1932 which says:

The rule that you are to love your neighbour becomes in law: You must not injure your neighbour, and the lawyers' question: Who is my neighbour? receives a restricted reply.

Now, that's interesting. I know what that's a reference to: the parable of the good Samaritan; right? Where the lawyer asked, "Who is my neighbour?" it receives a restricted reply in terms of tort law:

You must take reasonable care to avoid acts or omissions which you can reasonably foresee would be likely to injure your neighbour.

So what we're talking about here is the extent of liability, and there are different viewpoints on that.

Now, just a reference to the parable of the good Samaritan. It's a very important parable, and as all good interpreters know, the way you interpret that depends on looking at what point of view. Do you look at it from the point of view of the priest who passed by or the Levite who passed by or the Samaritan or the victim who is lying in the ditch, the victim of crime? So I think it's very important to look at this bill from the points of view of those involved.

I begin with the point of view of the child because I think this is a crucial issue and why in principle I am inclined to support this bill.

I think the point of view of the child is of utmost importance here. I mean, it's a tremendous tragedy when a child is born with physical and mental disabilities because of injuries suffered before he or she was born. It's like someone being sentenced before they're born, so it's a tremendous tragedy. I think also of so many children who suffer from fetal alcohol spectrum disorder as a result, you know, of negligence of the pregnant mother. That's a kind of sentencing before you're born too, and it's a very serious issue.

It's quite unfair, I think, to have a situation where it's possible for a child who was injured while a fetus be able through a representative to sue a third party because of an accident but who is not able to sue his mother if indeed she was negligent and was responsible for the accident. The child's needs are incredible, and I think that we need to dwell on that. I'm convinced that just going the insurance route is never going to satisfy the situation of need because the child needs incredible assistance, perhaps over a whole lifetime. So even the insurance money that might be coming to the child, surely in terms of the insurance rates and the kind of liability that's covered now, would never be enough to support a child with severe brain injuries, for example, severe physical and mental problems over a lifetime.

Nevertheless, the bill seems to fill a loophole. It enables the child to receive money from the insurance company where the mother is found liable although the bill restricts that that liability can't go any further than just the compensation from the insurance company. I want to come back to that point at the end of my remarks.

You know, from the point of view of the child this is really necessary. I mean, we've had very tragic situations, one in Alberta but throughout the country. We're not talking about something that happens very often, but certainly from the point of view of the child there must be some way of providing compensation.

Now, from the point of view of the mother, though, there are lots of issues to raise, and we probably will raise them in our debate here. The majority in the Dobson Supreme Court case argued that although a born-alive child has a claim against a person who caused a prenatal injury, the mother is not liable for a breach of duty of care to her unborn child or her born-alive child. They were very reluctant to extend tort law and impose it on a pregnant woman given all sorts of things, given the biological uniqueness of a woman and her fetus. There are a number of fine statements in the Dobson versus Dobson case about that. Also, such an imposition would be an intrusion on a pregnant woman's autonomy, on her privacy, and on her freedom. It was especially Justice McLachlin of the Supreme Court that was most forceful in arguing that imposing liability on the mother would interfere with the Charter rights of women to liberty and equality.

Here in this bill what we should worry about is whether there is indeed a slippery slope here. By making this an exception to the imposition of tort law, are we opening up the possibility of other kinds of lawsuits? Are we opening up all kinds of matters? For example, the Supreme Court in section 27 says:

Although the imposition of tort liability on a third party . . . advances the interests of both mother and child, it does not significantly impair the right of third parties to control their own lives.

So in terms of third parties there's no issue there. There's no imposition on them.

In contrast to the third-party defendant, a pregnant woman's every waking and sleeping moment, in essence, her entire existence, is connected to the foetus she may potentially harm. If a mother were to be held liable for prenatal negligence, this could render the most mundane decision taken in the course of her daily life as a pregnant woman subject to the scrutiny of the courts.

We don't want to open up the whole thing where courts would pursue pregnant women for negligence for all kinds of things. We might sympathize with going after the liability of a woman who drinks so much and has a child with fetal alcohol syndrome, but what about a woman who simply doesn't look after herself, who has a wrong diet? What about a woman who carelessly falls down the stairs and so on? I think that we are opening up a huge area that we don't want to pursue. That's why the Supreme Court said: no, we can't allow tort law to be applied to a pregnant woman and her fetus. So that's from the point of view of the mother, and we have to be, I think, very careful.

Now from the point of view of society. I think that's the third interest group, if you like, involved in looking at these situations, not just the child and not just the mother but society. As the Supreme Court states, the pressing societal issue at the heart of this appeal is the lack of financial support currently available for the care of children with special needs.

I mean, that's so obvious in this case. There's not enough financial support.

The imposition of a legal duty of care on a pregnant woman towards her foetus or subsequently born child will not solve this problem.

So they ruled out that. Trying to deal with a social problem through the courts only adds to the pain and the trauma of a tragic situation.

It may well be that carefully considered legislation could create a fund to compensate children with prenatally inflicted injuries.

Now, that's an interesting comment. They didn't leap into the issue of auto insurance but threw it towards Legislatures to look at this as a social problem. It's a social problem which needs a social solution.

So I go back to my statement earlier that auto insurance coverage is not enough – it's not going to cover the injuries of a child like this for a lifetime – that we have a responsibility. We have a responsibility as a society. It's a social problem. We have the responsibility as a society to provide a solution. I like the idea that they're suggesting, that there be some sort of a fund to cover these kinds of situations. It's not the child's fault that he was injured before he was born. Surely, out of our interest in the common good we can set up some kind of social program that deals with this kind of situation.

This is my last remark. We'll have a chance in committee to go through line by line. It's not a long bill, so we can do that and perhaps make some changes. You could call this bill a legislative charade. Let me just point out why I think that. This legislative charade purports to do one thing – namely, impose liability on the mother – while actually doing something quite different, namely, imposing liability on the mother's insurer while protecting the mother against personal liability. Now, I'm not suggesting that this charade doesn't have a worthy purpose – it certainly has a worthy purpose – but surely legislation should say what it means and mean what it says. It shouldn't purport to do one thing by doing another. So it's a very difficult issue.

That's all I want to say in second reading. I hope that the debate will bring up some very interesting issues. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise with some interest to speak in second reading on Bill 45 here this afternoon. As a member of the Private Bills Committee we, in fact, heard quite a lot of information concerning an individual case that I think precipitated the creation of Bill 45, that we're looking at, so I have had quite a lot of opportunity to reflect on a number of issues that both the Private Bills case and now Bill 45 bring forward to this Legislature.

Certainly, I won't preclude the possibility of our caucus supporting this bill, but we do have some serious concerns. I don't often compliment other parties, the Liberals even, but I think the previous speaker did have an interesting metaphor in the sense that, you know, there is more than what meets the eye immediately with Bill 45. It brings up a range of issues that we must be very careful about indeed concerning individuals' rights and the responsibility of the state to look after people in need, particularly people who are disabled by car accidents or for whatever reason. We do have some serious concerns about this bill, and I think my previous colleague who was on the Private Bills Committee, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, also had some reservations.

The first positive issue I would like to speak on is the fact that this does in fact fill an insurance gap that currently exists in Alberta, which has to be a good thing in a way. Certainly, the one case that, as I said, precipitated this public bill was very heartbreaking. Really, the circumstances of any car accident and particularly a car accident involving a fetus and a mother and then subsequent difficulties in caring for that child – it's certainly something that deserves our utmost attention.

However, I question the overall value of just using one's auto insurance to deal with this issue as it comes up. Certainly, you can have damages or injuries from a car accident that far exceed one's car insurance ability to deal with the problem. So I think that one of my first concerns is that Bill 45 does not preclude the responsibility of the province of Alberta to look after a disabled person under these circumstances as described in this bill. If we are going to move and download all of these problems associated with perhaps this very specific sort of accident but maybe disabled persons in general from the responsibilities of the state to the responsibilities of private insurance, well, as you can imagine, this is a very serious departure from what this Legislature is mandated to do, and we would oppose that most strenuously, as I suppose most Albertans would as well.

I think that adequate supports for families with children or dependants with disabilities, some sort of first alternative policy measure in this regard, would go a long ways to helping. I think that if we would increase the benefits for children born with disabilities as a result of car accidents – because this is so rare, it's not a question of fiscal pressure on the government. Indeed, the costing of this Bill 45 would back that up, that in fact this would not be a serious impediment onto the insurance industry, nor would it be a serious impediment for us to ensure alternative measures to look after the needs of a child injured and look after those needs through the state.

As legislators we need to balance the competing claims that are being brought forward here. Let's make no mistake about it: the women's right of access is very much a political issue. Because there are still people who would limit women's right to control their own bodies in terms of pregnancy, I think that we have to keep that very much in mind when we are making decisions on these or other issues. Women around the world, quite frankly, are still vulnerable to restrictions on their right to autonomy over their own bodies, particularly during pregnancy.

This legislation that we see before us here today certainly could create – but I would hope not – a new raft of lawsuits, perhaps spurious lawsuits, in regard to what might be perceived as an expansion of fetal rights here in this province. Because of that, we need to decide whether we are going to potentially compromise the constitutional rights of women when there are other public policy measures at our disposal to address the problem of children born with disabilities.

I would suggest another alternative. If Alberta had no-fault insurance, I think that this whole issue that Bill 45 deals with would be much less of an issue because the person who caused the accident gets some benefits in a no-fault scenario.

There are also a number of important considerations that have been expressed to us by some members of the insurance industry which I would like to bring forward. I'm not usually a great defender of the insurance industry, but certainly it's worth while bringing forward.

When are drivers ever responsible for their actions behind the wheel? In the case that we saw before us in the Private Bills Committee, the mother was not wearing a seatbelt. What if the mother had deliberately – you know, we don't know, but the circumstances could be anything possible. I mean, what if someone was trying to be self-injurious towards themselves and then crashed and failed? How could you sue that person? How would that Bill 45 function in that regard?

People that we have also spoken to in the insurance industry have pointed out that there is something fundamentally unfair about the coverage being limited by the amount of the liability coverage. Right? If people have different levels of insurance, you know, is this the way by which we're going to determine the care of someone who needs care as a disabled person? I think that there's not just a number problem there but also a moral issue as well. I would suggest, based on that alone, that our Bill 45 would be subject to challenges in the near future when one of these rare cases does come forward.

Perhaps Bill 45 would be easier to accept if it contained some sort of a schedule of payment for injuries – for example, so much compensation for brain injury, so much compensation for damage to life and limb, as the insurance industry does – rather than basing it on the limits of the liability coverage of an individual. Therein you can see perhaps some inherent absurdity in the construction of Bill 45 because, really, are we going to be in this Legislature determining individual injuries to different parts of the body and such things as that? I mean, that perhaps brings forward a fundamental problem unto itself.

I would suggest that lawyers would have a field day on this question of whether fetal injury was in fact caused by motor vehicle accidents versus some other injurious activity of a pregnant woman, such as skiing or drinking or using drugs or something like that. You know, you have the development of a fetus over periods of days and weeks where serious changes take place. There is a whole range of things that could go wrong that would limit the development, cognitive or physical, of a fetus. You know, it just leaves us open to a range of challenge, I suppose.

Now, we've been contacting and consulting with different groups and lawyers to give us a broader perspective on this bill. Certainly, there's a lot of apprehension, I suppose, in certain quarters in regard to this bill just asking: why is it necessary to have such a very, very, very specific bill coming up in the Legislature when there are other means by which we could perhaps deal with these individual cases? Some of the arguments that I have heard brought forward include that, you know, this is perhaps limiting the rights of pregnant women and even perhaps looking at other injurious behaviour that pregnant women could be getting up to – right? – such as women who are pregnant and addicted to drugs at the same time, and perhaps limiting or imprisoning those people so that they don't further injure themselves or their fetus.

You know, another legal problem is that some people believe that this might be allowing the fetus to start to look like a person under the law. Again, this is something that we just have to be aware of, that people have that perception in the public, and Bill 45 could be subject to increased scrutiny in that regard. Let's perhaps go through a very careful due process here to make sure that we are clear in our intentions.

Finally, just to sum up very briefly, I think that, you know, a lot of work seems to have gone into making this bill very, very specific, and I'm very happy to see how specific it really is. Certainly, as I say, I do not preclude the possibility of our caucus supporting this bill. However, there are some serious concerns that we would like to have out here in the course of the Legislature.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in. Any questions?

There being none, the chair recognizes the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I normally enjoy very much the debate on the bills. I have to tell you that this is one that I think all of us can be somewhat troubled about for some different reasons, many expanded upon by the opposition.

I know, Mr. Speaker, without question that the Member for Peace River has brought this bill before us with the best of intentions, and I respect that. But I also think that when we're in front of the Law Courts Building or other buildings, they have the balance of justice with a blindfold on. I think it makes it much easier to deal with issues like this when you don't have to look at a little girl in a wheelchair or a little boy on a table hooked up to life support. It tears everyone's heart out not only that that child is sentenced to that life but that someone may be responsible. I'm also concerned that we're confusing a little bit of responsibility with liability, and I don't think you can have it one day and not the next.

The hon. member has said, presented that if the father or anyone else were driving, they could be sued, but we wouldn't limit how much they could be sued for. They might only have a hundred thousand dollars' worth of insurance. They could be sued for a million. They could be sued for 10 million. That would be up to the courts. In this case we're saying that you can only sue for what she's insured for to keep the context that the mother shouldn't be held in jeopardy. But, Mr. Speaker, I can't weigh that as fair. If someone puts liability on a case or says that that's what would be the result of this, then I think it has to be treated fairly, and in our current system I don't think we can, so I'm concerned that we are creating a separate class.

I'm also concerned that you're saying in there that if the woman had $2 million worth of liability as opposed to a hundred thousand or whatever minimums are required, that would be the most of the award. I don't think that we would want to get into a system where we look at what you've got or what you're insured for as the limiting factor in the courts. In a situation in Vermilion that I'm aware of, a prosecutor suggested to the judge: "They're a pretty wealthy family. They should pay more of a fine." Everyone would think that's not fair. The insurance is a creature of our making where we collectively spread the cost around. I don't want insurance amounts to be the determining factor in a judgment. I think that throws the balance of fairness off.

Without getting into more of the bill, the issue around the parental responsibility for the child you're carrying is really difficult. That goes on many of the roads that the other hon. members talked about. I think that we need to deal with those issues in the broader context of your responsibility, your duty as a parent, so that we can address the fetal alcohol problems in this country as much as we have the second-hand smoke, the other issues that people can put themselves in jeopardy for. Those children cost society as much if not more because their numbers are so much greater.

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, there are not a lot of these children. From this very specific incident that's described in this bill, there are not a lot, and thank God for that. I think that the greater awareness of the effect on the unborn child needs to be dealt with in the total context of who will be looking after that child after it's born. I just can't in my own mind justify that we can pick one incident because you have the opportunity to sue, be it the bad old insurance company that we don't like. I just don't think that's the defining factor in how we assess liability from a specific incident that is very rare.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know how you address this specific incident any better than the hon. Member for Peace River is trying to. I can't pick one unborn child over another one. The courts, I think, have very wisely strayed away from this and said: if you legislators want to go there, be it at your peril. I would like the Leg. or the federal government or someone to have a real discussion around fetal rights, parental responsibility, and when that's done, you include this thing in that.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I have a lot of concerns about it, about the unfairness of limiting awards, of limiting judgments if there's insurance or not. I know the hon. member will address these and has. I just appreciate the opportunity to bring some of those concerns today.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions or comments? Hon. member, are you rising to ask a question?

Mr. Flaherty: No. To speak to it, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Yes, hon. member. I do have you on my list, but I have the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore before you.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else wish to ask a question at this time?

Okay. The chair recognizes the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak on Bill 45, the Maternal Tort Liability Act, which is designed to provide compensation for a child born with injuries arising from a motor vehicle accident occurring prior to birth as a result of negligent driving of his or her mother. As well, when and if the child is born with injuries, the cause of the action can be commenced and the claim for the damages can be made. Liability would be limited to the extent of the insurance coverage with narrow sphere of the motor vehicle accident.

This government is assuring all parties that this bill is carefully worded so as not to allow for the door to be opened to further lawsuits. But this Legislature must remember that this is where the bills are introduced. This is a Legislature, where laws are modified or amended, and these laws in some cases are revisited and further amended. So to say that this bill is carefully worded and is against the ability to have any sort of further lawsuits I think is a little bit premature.

If this bill's intent is to protect the unborn and allow for the unborn to sue later on for injuries sustained while in the womb, then why not expand the bill today and allow for children whose mothers are negligent during their pregnancy; for example, mothers that drink and mothers that do drugs?

We all know that fetal alcohol syndrome and drug-addicted children when born, you know, cause all Albertans to pay a heavy price through health care and just overall with our ability to maintain and look after these children from birth to the end of their lives. It's unfortunate, but it does cost all Albertans through health care and education, through health care because of, again, the long-term needed care to help an individual exist in society, depending on the severity of course, and through education with the increasing cost of education, with the small classrooms needed to be able to take care of the individual, which would be in need from the early years right through to the dependent years. That's just a small component, but not all special needs fall into this category. There are two examples that cost Albertans as to the negligence of parents.

Now, the question that comes to the floor is: what is the government doing to protect these children and provide these children with a voice? Why not allow them to sue as well? This goes on each and every day with no charges being laid.

Does the consumers' advocate – who has the choice with utilities? They also have a voice but not on behalf of children, who are being punished as a result of this. I think there are, you know, legitimate concerns being raised through this. Is this government trying to download the duty of care to insurance companies for children born alive with defects? What about other children who are born with defects? What are they entitled to or not entitled to?

The government has a responsibility to ensure that all children born with birth defects are cared for, that there are no undue hardships placed on them and their families. The families should have access to services that enable them to provide for the care of their children no matter what the degree of disability. If the government had an adequate system in place to support children and families who have to deal with these disabilities and had the funds available for these children in care, then there would be no need to sue insurance companies. This government should be providing for these children who are born with any birth defects, not relying on tort law or insurance companies to pay the bills.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions or comments?

Hon. Member for St. Albert, you're recognized.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to compliment the Member for Peace River on the work and explanation of this bill. It really helped me quite a bit. I'm kind of in the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster's camp because I think one of the things here that we're looking for is fairness and equity for a parent and the mother of this child.

The reluctance that I have in terms of fully supporting the bill is because it's turned over to the insurance companies. I have some real problem with that in terms of the legal aspects of it. Will the settlement that is awarded to the particular person, the lady, the mother, be sufficient to look after the child for the period of time in which they are living? That was brought out very clearly in this article from your area of the province, Peace River.

The other aspect I'd like to have commented on. If the Minister of Justice and Attorney General would comment on section 15 of the Charter, on how this would impinge on this particular bill, I'd be very interested in hearing your comments on that, sir, if I could.

So those are very short comments, and with this I would move adjournment of the bill discussion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 46 Criminal Notoriety Act

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to rise today to speak about Bill 46, the Criminal Notoriety Act. Our government wants to make it absolutely clear that crime stories won't pay in Alberta. It is a long-standing legal principle that criminals should not be allowed to profit directly from their crimes. Someone who robs a bank does not get to keep that money. Bill 46 extends this principle to criminals who would profit indirectly by recounting their crimes, like the bank robber who writes a book about the details of his heist. It is our responsibility to protect victims, and it's unacceptable that criminals benefit from the pain and suffering they have caused others.

Currently Alberta does not have legislation that regulates the ability of persons convicted of serious crimes to profit from selling their story. Ontario and Manitoba have this legislation in place, and to make it most effective, we need such legislation in each jurisdiction in Canada to prevent criminals from moving between jurisdictions to make these deals.

Bill 46 applies only to those who have been convicted of a serious crime. A serious crime is defined as a Criminal Code offence with a maximum penalty of five years or more, such as murder, charges that involve violence against another person or that endangers others, serious drug charges, and charges under the Crimes Against Humanity and War Crimes Act. It also includes sexual assault and sexual offences against children and youth. Crime prevention organizations such as Crime Stoppers and the John Howard Society and victims' programs use crime re-enactments and other similar tools in their work. Bill 46 provides for an exception for law enforcement purposes so that these important programs can continue.

Bill 46 applies to criminals who tell the stories of their crimes through books, movies, television, or the Internet. All of the parties who have signed a contract for the purpose of recounting a crime have an obligation to report those contracts to the Crown. Convicted criminals who commit serious crimes are prohibited from receiving money for recounting these crimes. The other parties, such as the publisher, are prohibited from paying these criminals for the story of their crimes. Anyone who contravenes the act would be liable for up to a $50,000 fine. The bill gives the Crown the ability to take civil action to recover money paid for recounting serious crime.

Bill 46 recognizes that there are some circumstances when there may be some value to society in recounting crimes. This value may justify some money being paid. Under Bill 46 the parties may apply to have a judge determine whether the criminal who is providing the information should receive compensation for the story.

Bill 46 will also apply to convicted criminals who sell criminal memorabilia and receive an inflated price because of the notoriety of the crime. If someone sells memorabilia on eBay, for example, and gets more than the market value for it, the government can apply to receive the portion of the cost that is above market value for the item. All money received under both parts of this legislation can be used to benefit victims of crime and their families.

We have taken care to ensure that this proposed legislation is carefully drafted to be as defensible as possible if it is ever challenged under Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms. For example, the act only applies to serious crimes. It will only apply to people who have been convicted. It will not apply to people who are charged but not convicted, and people who have been convicted of a serious crime will be able to apply to the court for payment in accordance with the contract.

Alberta strongly supports the right of freedom of expression. This bill is not intended to violate that right. Anyone has the right to tell their story. Bill 46 is intended to prevent convicted criminals from making a profit by recounting their crime. Bill 46 strikes an appropriate balance between freedom of expression and the protection of victims of crime and their families.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is another very challenging bill, Bill 46, the Criminal Notoriety Act. I lament that so many heavy bills dealing with legal matters have come at us so soon after resuming the fall session. It takes time to get into the details and understand what's really at stake.

On the surface, of course, there will be lots of sympathy. A lot of people will want to support this because it's obvious that a criminal should not profit from writing a book about his life or her life. Criminals should not profit from their crimes. That's sort of a given in dealing with crime over the years.

Ontario and Manitoba have passed such legislation, so I think that there's probably some pressure to have all provinces get on board with this. After all, if there's one province that doesn't get on board, then I guess all the criminals would be welcome in that province to publish books about their life. I don't know what is happening with B.C. because B.C. does have the notorious example of Clifford Olson. I don't know whether B.C. is pursuing this kind of legislation.

I'm not sure about and I have nervousness about a bill that tries to cover with one law all examples. Everyone who commits a serious crime and receives a sentence is different. It's the same issue around the use of conditional sentencing. I think conditional sentencing can be a useful tool for judges to use for particular cases because not all cases are the same. I know it's restricted to serious offenders, offenders that have been sentenced to more than five years, and I know the worry is about people like Carla Homolka and Clifford Olson who will take advantage of publishing books, whatever, and profiting from their crime.

Of course, there are other examples. We could mention David Milgaard. I suppose that the bill wouldn't apply to him because he was found not guilty of the crime that he was originally charged with, so because he didn't commit a crime, then I suppose that he could write a book about his life.

I'm thinking about the example right here in Alberta of the book written by one of Canada's well-known novelists, Rudy Wiebe, in conjunction with Yvonne Johnson, who was incarcerated for a major violent crime, and they wrote a book together. The book is called Stolen Life and is a very fine book which recounts her life, and I think the community has profited from that kind of publication.

What about Susan Musgrave? She's a B.C. poet married to someone who has committed serious crimes, and she has published material about her husband.

I think that I'm nervous about passing legislation that just sort of flatly denies all possibilities of serious offenders publishing anything. I know there are exceptions mentioned in section 2(3), which says that "this Act does not apply to a contract for the recounting of a crime entered into for law enforcement purposes or in support of crime prevention programs or victims programs." Someone who has been incarcerated and has served time can provide valuable input for the government and for agencies like the John Howard Society. So there's an attempt to have exceptions here, but I don't know whether it goes far enough.

Would this mean that somebody who is wrongfully convicted and wrote a book defending their innocence would be able to do that? Or a journalist writing as a co-author with a prisoner on prison conditions: would that be allowed? Or would writing about an unjust law and trying to reform the justice system be allowed? If the motivation is to write an autobiography in order to prevent people from falling into the same life of crime as the person writing the book, why would that not be important? And who decides? Is the Justice department going to have a kind of censor board here to rule on each individual case? Now, we're not probably talking about a lot of cases, but I do have a problem with how this would be carried out.

Of course, this is not something new because in the United States you have that notorious case in 1977 of David Berkowitz, and his retelling the story of his crimes led to the son of Sam law, which was passed by the New York State Legislature, prohibiting criminals from profiting from their crime. It provided that if the criminal offender entered into a contract to receive profits from the recounting of the crime, such as a book or movie or television show, then there was an offence against the law. It's true that almost all states have a similar son of Sam law.

There have been constitutional challenges, and the hon. member mentioned the issue of constitutional challenges and Charter challenges, and I think that's important for us to consider, to talk about whether or not this bill might be considered unconstitutional. Is it enough that an offender has been punished by incarceration? Isn't this bill suggesting that there should be added to that penalty another sanction, an additional sanction? Doesn't it go too far? I mean, if we're not happy with the Criminal Code and the kinds of sentences that are given by judges for serious crimes, we should change the Criminal Code. That's the role of the Parliament of Canada; that's not the role of a provincial legislature.

I'm wondering about the Charter issue because in the Charter of Rights and Freedom, 2(b), it's stated that there should be "freedom of thought, belief, opinion and expression, including freedom of the press and other media of communication." In the explanation of this particular part of the Charter the Charter enshrines certain fundamental freedoms for everyone in Canada. For everyone in Canada. They are freedoms that custom and law over the years have made almost universal in our country. So these freedoms are protected by our Constitution.

I am concerned about the whole area of prisoners' rights. Human rights do apply to prisoners. While I think that in principle this bill is moving in the right direction, I still need to go on record as being concerned about the basic human rights that all Canadians are deemed to have.

Mr. Speaker, those are my comments now in second reading, and I look forward to further debate.

I would like to move adjournment of this debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 48

Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise this afternoon to speak to Bill 48, the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005. The bill has two purposes. The first clarifies that there are no continuing legal requirements to automatically appoint a justice of the peace who has been qualified by the Judicial Council subsequent to the 1999 reform of the justice of the peace system, and the second broadens the regulation-making powers so that the constitutional notice regulation can be issued under the Justice of the Peace Act.

To explain what the proposed amendments will do, it's necessary to provide the hon. members with some historical information about the justice of the peace system in Alberta. The office of the justice of the peace in Alberta was in existence when the province was created in 1905. By the 1950s the higher volumes of cases were creating pressures for a more specialized system of inferior courts, including the justice of the peace system. By the 1970s these pressures had become severe, and in 1975 the first of numerous reports was written on the justice of the peace system recommending changes. Over the years a few minor changes were made, and eventually in 1991 a number of significant legislative changes were made to reflect the recommendations of these reports.

In 1997, as a result of a Supreme Court decision on judicial independence, Alberta Justice re-examined its legislation regarding all of its judicial officers, including justices of the peace. There was a need to ensure that their judicial independence was adequately protected. In 1999 significant reforms to the justice of the peace system were introduced. At that time things like the process for appointments were changed, the complaint process was reformed, and the qualifications for justices of the peace were modified. Also, the categories of JPs were changed. Under the old system there were sitting and nonsitting JPs. Under the new system there are sitting, presiding, and nonpresiding JPs.

Under the old system there were sitting JPs called traffic commissioners. They were legally trained judicial officers who primarily sat trials on most provincial and municipal offences. The nonsitting JPs dealt primarily with intake procedures, including bail applications and search warrants. They also had administrative duties.

At that time there were 23 sitting JPs, four who were full-time in Edmonton and Calgary and 19 who were part-time, and there were 450 nonsitting JPs who were located throughout the province. A few of the nonsitting JPs were legally trained, but most were either employees of the Attorney General's department, called staff JPs, and the rest were fee JPs, who were paid on a fee-for-service basis. There were 15 legally trained nonsitting JPs, 245 staff JPs, including three full-time hearing officers, and 190 fee JPs.

Under the reformed system the category of nonsitting JPs was replaced with two new categories: presiding JPs and nonpresiding JPs. The presiding JPs had the authority to conduct judicial functions such as bail applications and search warrants. Nonpresiding JPs were limited to primarily administrative functions.

The transition from the old system to the new system involved the Judicial Council. The Judicial Council is made up of representatives of the three courts, the Law Society, and the minister. Under the legislation the Judicial Council was required to determine which of the incumbent nonsitting JPs qualified for appointment as either a presiding or a nonpresiding JP.

At that time the Judicial Council decided that for an incumbent nonsitting JP to be qualified as a presiding JP, the incumbent must be a lawyer with five years' experience at the bar. The Judicial Council identified the incumbent JPs found to be qualified and provided a list to the government. As a result of the decision on qualifications by the Judicial Council, the following appointments were made under the reformed system. All sitting JPs under the old system were appointed as sitting JPs in the new system. The 15 legally trained nonsitting JPs were appointed as presiding JPs under the new system. The rest of the nonsitting JPs, including the 242 staff JPs and the 190 fee JPs, were appointed as nonpresiding JPs. The three hearing officers were not appointed at this time.

Included in the 1999 amendments to the Justice of the Peace Act was the requirement that JPs who had been in their positions prior to the reform, that is incumbent JPs, would be appointed in the reformed system as either sitting or presiding JPs if they were found to be qualified by the Judicial Council. These provisions were not intended to be long term. They were transitional provisions intended to ensure a smooth transition from the old system to the new. The transitional provisions were not intended to require the appointment of incumbent JPs under the new system if they were not found to be qualified at the time of the 1999 reforms. If an incumbent JP is deemed qualified by the Judicial Council after 1999, there is no obligation to automatically appoint that person as a sitting or presiding JP.

Let me assure you, Mr. Speaker, that since the 1999 reforms if a JP is found to be qualified by the Judicial Council, he or she may certainly apply for a new appointment at the sitting or presiding JP level. What we are clarifying is when the requirement to mandatorily appoint these JPs applies and when it does not. We are saying that now, six years after the stricter qualifications were brought in, those who now qualify can apply for an appointment along with other qualified candidates, but there is no legal obligation for them to be automatically appointed as sitting or presiding JPs.

The other section of the bill, the second purpose, clarifies the authority to allow the constitutional notice regulation to be issued under this Justice of the Peace Act. Currently the constitutional notice regulation has only been issued under the Provincial Court Act. The constitutional notice regulation provides that justices of the peace are not assigned to determine matters related to aboriginal, constitutional, or Charter rights. The validity of the regulation has been challenged on the basis that such a regulation, to be effective, must be issued under the Justice of the Peace Act. The amendment we are proposing clarifies the authority of the government to do this.

As members have heard, the purpose of this bill is to clarify two provisions: specifically, that the two provisions are transitional only and that the other provision authorizes the issuance of the constitutional notice regulation under the Justice of the Peace Act.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in second reading to respond to this bill, Bill 48, Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005. I appreciate the hon. minister providing historical background to try to understand what is being done in this bill. I look forward to reading it in Hansard to be able to grasp the details of this.

I don't have any real disagreement with this particular bill. Of course, if the changes that are suggested, that section 7(4) and (5) be amended in terms of the words "as of that date," if that makes it possible, then, for the emphasis to be directed to the qualifications of justices of the peace, that those who are qualified now can apply but that they're not automatically appointed – if the whole intention is to ensure that we have qualified justices of the peace, then I think that's very important.

In reviewing this and trying to prepare myself for understanding this bill, I looked at the Justice of the Peace Act, which was passed by this House in the year 2000. Where it outlines the powers and duties of justices of the peace, it mentions that they deal with such issues as

- (a) receiving an information or complaint or receiving an information or complaint from another justice of the peace and granting a summons or warrant on it;
- (b) issuing a subpoena . . . [and so on];
- (c) doing all other acts and matters necessary preliminary to a hearing.

It's very important for the speeding up of the process of justice in our province to have highly qualified justices of the peace, who indeed should have some sort of law degree, and not just because they had experience in other areas of life. I have no more comments to make about that part of this bill.

The second part, I think, is all right, too, in terms of strengthening the jurisdiction and the powers over these justices of the peace. The amendment is to amend section 15(1) of the act and add after "the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations . . . prescribing duties that shall not be assigned to justices of the peace" the words "governing and restricting the jurisdiction and powers of justices of the peace." So it's strengthening the oversight of justices of the peace, and I think that is in the interest of the process of justice in this province.

So in conclusion, we are prepared to support Bill 48. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just very briefly. I'm trying to go through all the numbers and the history – it's a little confusing – but make sure that I understand. I think it makes sense, but it seems to me that there are too many people being justices of the peace. That's part of the problem because I think the numbers are being cut down, and probably it's leading to a sort of patchwork of justice, if I might put it that way, because of people having different credentials. I take it that that's the purpose of the bill, and I want to make sure that I understand it when the minister replies to it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in. Any questions, comments?

If none, the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to close debate.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. member: the one amendment basically establishes that the provision regarding qualification to become a new justice of the peace was transitional in nature. So those who were qualified in 1999 by virtue of having a law degree and five years' experience, as determined by the Judicial Council at that time, were appointed justices of the peace of a certain kind. The rest were justices of the peace of another kind. So everybody kept their jobs, if you will, but there were a limited number who had the positions with the greatest amount of responsibility. The idea at the time was to ensure that appropriately trained people would be doing those jobs, and that remains the case today.

The provision in the legislation was always intended to be transitional, but we are now in a position where the people who get qualified by the Judicial Council today might argue that they're entitled to a job by virtue of being qualified. What we wish to do is to make it abundantly clear that people who are qualified today may apply, like all qualified applicants, for positions as they become available, and they will be determined in accordance with merit and the person who is best able to fulfill those positions but that they are not automatically entitled to a job by virtue of having been a previous JP, an old JP, and now qualified six years later.

It was always intended to be transitional, in other words something that got us from January 29, 1999, to February 1, 1999, and we just wish to ensure that everybody understands that. The number of people who are JPs today will be the same number of people who are JPs next month, assuming that this legislation passes and becomes law, but the process, if you will, of qualification will be clearer.

[Motion carried; Bill 48 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Stevens: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we call it 5:30 and adjourn until 8 o'clock this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:20 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Wednesday, November 16, 2005 8:00 p.m.

Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll call the committee to order.

Bill 9

Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2005

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. At this time I'd like to move an amendment to Bill 9. I understand that you have the necessary copies for distribution.

The amendment would be that section 2 is amended (a) by striking out clause (a)(ii) and substituting the following:

- (ii) by repealing clause (c) and substituting the following:
 - (c) 10 persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, one of whom shall be designated as chair;
 - (c.1) additional persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Minister; and (b) by striking out clause (b)(ii) and substituting the following:

- (ii) by repealing clause (c) and substituting the following:
 - (c) 7 persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, one of whom shall be designated as chair;
 - (c.1) additional persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Minister.

Mr. Chairman, these amendments just fix up a couple of sections of the bill that we had before us previously. That bill that's before committee now has a number of amendments to the Post-secondary Learning Act which are basically minor in nature, but we're trying to deal with issues. We discussed that thoroughly at second reading.

The two pieces that needed to be corrected were with respect to the makeup of the boards. The wording which was put into the amending act unfortunately did not have the clarifying effect that was intended but rather made it more confusing. So what we're doing now is taking out the two sections that previously had said "at least 12" members. What we're indicating in the amendment that's now being put in front of the House is that there would be 10 persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, one of whom would be chair in the case of technical institutes.

Then the (c.1) provision, Mr. Chair, simply provides some flexibility so that if a board wished to expand beyond the 11 members for some reason – those are the 10 persons that are appointed and then the one person who's ex officio – if you wanted more than the 10 appointed members for some good reason, you would have the flexibility to do that. Now, that good reason might be that the board in an area decided that it needed to have a larger board for the operation of its business. It can make a case on that, and then perhaps a permanent addition to the board could be made. Or it might need to recruit some specific talent to the board. Perhaps they're engaging in a major capital campaign and want to have a person from the community that can help deal with that major capital campaign on the board. So that would be the reason why an additional person would be appointed under (c.1). The same thing would be true on a college board, for example, in the next section.

So these two sections are really just trying, again, to clarify the standard number of board members to be appointed as public members to the board for a technical institute and then for a college, and then the provision allowing for expansion if the board wished to be expanded for some particular reason.

I would ask members to consider this amendment for us that would improve the bill which is before the House now. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we shall refer to this amendment as amendment A1.

Before I recognize the next speaker, hon. members, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Cenaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's my great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the Maple Leaf AA Bantam Brickmen hockey team from north Edmonton. The 19 plus their parents are accompanied today by assistant coaches and constituents of the MLA for Castle Downs, Mr. Frank Dienes and Clint Marcotte, trainer Jules Grandfield, and manager Lanny Westersund, who is also the legislative assistant to the MLA for Edmonton-Castle Downs. The head coach, my son Jason, could not be here tonight as he's studying for a major exam tomorrow morning, but he did want the team to have a tremendous opportunity to see the Legislature, see an office in the Legislature as well, and obviously see us hard at work here in the Assembly. So I ask that they all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

Bill 9

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Speaking to the amendment, then, amendment A1, I don't have a huge problem with this. I just want to get on the record the fact that I think that what you see here is a basic philosophical difference between the government side of the House and the opposition side of the House in that I know that the minister is arguing for flexibility, adaptability, the ability to move quickly to do what he feels is the right thing at the right time whether or not all members on this side of the House agree with that.

The overall effect of it, of course, is to create the possibility for additional government appointees onto college and technical institute boards. It waters down the representation on those boards by institutional stakeholders such as students and faculty. It therefore has the potential to undermine institutional autonomy. It has the potential to extend and exert more ministerial control over those institutions.

We don't fundamentally believe that that's the right way to go. We also don't fundamentally believe that we're going to change the government's mind on that tonight. We don't believe that this is the proverbial hill worth dying on. I simply wanted to put it on the record that we think that it could be done a better way simply by not in a sort of open-ended fashion allowing for the appointment of as many or as few additional board members as the minister or the Lieutenant Governor in Council would see fit.

That said, it's not a hill worth dying on. While we don't really agree with this change and this additional ministerial power, we don't think that it's going to utterly and totally upset the apple cart. So it's unlikely that I would go so far as to oppose the bill.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll be brief as well on this amendment, which on the surface looks very minor. I think, like my colleague who just finished commenting on the possible implications of these changes, that I also want to put my concerns on record with respect to the change that is being sought here. That is reducing the total number of persons from 10 to seven, and then any additional persons to be appointed is left to the minister and the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the recommendation of the minister.

As we move to allowing our postsecondary institutions, particularly institutions with college status, to move towards offering an increasing number of degrees at the college level, what we need to do is to bring in changes to the legislation which will make the governance of colleges similar to the governance model that universities use, where faculty and student representation on the board of governors is more significant than has been in the case of colleges and technical institutes.

To me enabling or giving powers to colleges to offer academic degrees requires these colleges to model themselves on the way the best universities, even in this province, have functioned and governed themselves. What's happening here, it appears to me, is a move in the opposite direction. The more you expect colleges to act like universities, the more commitment the government needs to show to encouraging these colleges or allowing these colleges to govern themselves and allow their academic councils, which are not mentioned here, by the way, to have powers which are similar to the general faculties councils at the universities of Alberta.

So this amendment causes concern to me in that it could lead to diluting the presence and therefore the influence of students as a corporate group on the campuses of our colleges as well as the role of faculties in the determination of the policies, the programs, and the . . .

Mr. Mason: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is rising on a point of order.

Point of Order Decorum

Mr. Mason: Mr. Chairman, even though I'm sitting directly behind the hon. member who is speaking, I am finding it difficult to hear him. Perhaps we could have a little more order in the Chamber.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, the noise level in the Assembly is affecting other members listening to the debate. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has the floor.

Debate Continued

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I certainly appreciate your intervention. It allows me time to say what I want to say. I hope my colleagues can hear what I have to say. That's the point of standing up and saying what I'm saying: so that at least one hon. member on that side can hear what I'm saying.

Anyway, I think the concern here is that the changes really are heading in the opposite direction than what they should be attempting to do. We need to increase the role and the significance of student bodies and faculties onto the board of governors on academic councils. This bill and the amendment will do the opposite.

I would certainly ask the minister, unless it's too late at this stage, to consider the concern that I have, which is that reducing the number of people from 10 to 7 and then allowing the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the recommendation of the minister to add additional members will not serve the best academic purposes of these colleges and institutions. If anything, it will in fact dilute and reduce the role and ability to influence the decisions of these boards by two important constituencies in these colleges: the students and the faculty. That's why I would urge the minister to rethink this, unless he thinks that we should put all our faith in his ability to make those judgments.

I think that if you are going to make changes in the legislation, then we should put these things in the legislation, not leave it up to the minister to use his good judgment to interpret these changes, as they're proposing, and to enhance the influence of students and faculty on the board of governors rather than taking measures that will, in my view, reduce that influence.

So with that I will sit down and let the minister respond.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I understand the concern that's being raised by both members opposite. If you look at section 44 as it currently stands with respect to the boards of technical institutes, it provides under 44(1)(a) for a chair to be appointed and then in 44(1)(c), "not more than 11 persons appointed . . . in addition to the chair," which makes for 12 people.

What we're proposing is 10 people, with the ability to expand. You know, you're not talking about expanding by five or 10 people. You're talking about where a board wants to have an extra person for a reason. What's happened with respect to some of the boards and what we're finding, of course, is that some of the boards in urban areas are a little bit larger. The board of, I believe, NorQuest, for example, asked for two additional members a year ago to expand their board size because they have a broader mandate, if you will, a broader area to serve and the need to have different talents on the board, different representation on the board. So they wanted to have additional members on their board, and they asked for them, whereas some of the other boards remain at a smaller level. They can do that, and it is quite an effective governance model for them.

What we're suggesting here is, really, to take the section in the act which right now is 12 persons for a technical institute and make it 10, which includes the chair – so 10 instead of 12 – but with the ability to add. So you could go back to the 12 if you wanted to.

The same way with the colleges. Under section 44(2) as it currently reads, the college board is a chair plus the individuals from the college that you mentioned – the staff, students, nonacademic staff – and then "not more than 9 persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council." So that's, in essence, 10 people appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, including the chair, and the proposal is that the act provide for seven people, with the ability, again, to expand. Now, you're not going to expand it in every circumstance or without valid reason. You would expand it because the board wants additional capacity for a specific reason.

I can understand that you might not have as much faith in me as I have in me, but from where I'm sitting, it's looking good. The reality is that you do have to have a little bit of capacity for variation. The act as it is set up now talks about "not more than 11."

I can appreciate your concern about taking a cap off, but let's be reasonable in what we're talking about. These are board-governed institutions. The government doesn't come in and sort of massively drop people onto boards. This isn't the Senate of Canada, with a new Liberal government trying to overcome an old Conservative majority. These are board-governed institutions with representatives from the community on the boards.

You would expand a board only in two circumstances: one, if the board believed it needed a larger board to do its job – and we have had that circumstance in urban college boards – or, secondly, if you were looking for a particular type of ability to add to your board. I guess the example I used before, and I think it's still the best one, is if a board was embarking on a major capital campaign or some campaign of that nature and wanted to bring in somebody who had particular connections to the community or recruit someone of that nature.

There seems to be this theory that these boards are somehow places where government is going to put people for some reason. Well, the reality is that we have 21 solid public institutions in this province with great board governance, a good board governance model, and community volunteers who come forward to bring their expertise and to serve on the boards. They work very, very well, and nobody is going to play with that for the sake of playing with that. What we're talking about here is putting in some flexibility, setting a standard number on the size of the board but allowing some flexibility so you can differentiate between needs of different boards in different locations.

Now, I did hear the hon. member mention a general faculty council, which is a term I used in the university context, but in the context of colleges and technical institutes, of course, we do have academic councils under section 46. So the role of students and faculty and nonacademic staff is not only governed in the context of the appointments to the board itself, but they also have a role to play in academic councils.

As the hon. member knows, I was hoping to bring forward an amendment which would have dealt with academic councils and allowed some flexibility. We do have a provision in the act now, section 46, which sets out academic councils and provides for each of the college and technical institutes to have an academic council which consists of

- (a) the president . . .
- (b) not more than 4 senior officials, appointed as members of the council by the board;
- (c) subject to subsection (2), not more than 10 academic staff members, elected by the academic staff . . .
- (d) not more than 10 students, elected by the students . . .
- (e) not more than 5 additional members, appointed by the board.

Then there are some provisions with respect to what the academic council does, but obviously they are recommendations with respect to standards and policy with respect to admissions, courses and programs, and academic awards.

So section 46, the academic council section, really provides a lot of the strength that the member is talking about in terms of input by students and academic staff to the operations of a technical institute or college. That is really where the students and academic staff have a great deal of their concern.

I understand where you're coming from about having an ability to expand without a cap, but I would suggest that you're not putting anyone in any danger here. Nobody's going to expand the board just on a whim. It would be done in consultation with the board because they wanted to expand their board size, because they wanted to add a particular talent or ability that they didn't have at the time. So that's the nature of these amendments.

Now, I do hope that we can deal with the academic council side as well because section 46 of the act specifically sets out how an academic council is structured and what it can do. What I would hope is that we would also be able to in some form, perhaps in this Legislature, amend the act by bringing in a provision which would also allow for some flexibility. Instead of the one-size-fits-all academic council structure that is currently in the act, we could have a provision for a board of a college or technical institute, which wanted to have a different form of academic council or needed a flexible structure in some other way than is in the act, which would give it more flexibility, which would perhaps allow it to have a membership, for example, in the AUCC. They could work co-operatively with the minister and say: "Here's the academic council that would work for us. This would work for our college, for our purposes, in the direction we want to go." By doing so, we would be able to bring that in.

So my hope is that we would be able to make, again, some provision in the act under section 47 by adding a section 47.1 to the act, which would allow us that opportunity. What it would do, then, is give us the ability to set up some regulations which would say that colleges and technical institutes have the standard academic council. But in the same way as we're suggesting in this section, if they wanted to have a different composition of the board for some reason, if they wanted to have a different academic council for some reason, they could work with us, and then we would be prepared to if we could come to an agreement that the academic council worked and it didn't abuse any of the needs of the system fit for their purposes and fit for the purposes of the system. We could have that specific academic council for that specific college or technical institute.

In addressing what you're talking about with respect to the board and your concerns about the flexibility, what I guess I'm trying to say is that there is sometimes a need for flexibility. I don't think that the opposition needs to be unduly concerned about that. Certainly, I don't think that this minister or any minister would abuse that flexibility. There's no good reason to add members to the board willy-nilly. It obviously would have to be done for a purpose and would be done with the concurrence and, normally, almost exclusively at the request of the board of a college or a technical institute.

I hope that clarifies it for the member. I'd be happy to answer any questions.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I wanted to rise and specifically say that I am encouraged and delighted to hear the minister talking about the need to build in some flexibility to college academic councils. There is the need to do this. From the way the minister is talking, my understanding is that this flexibility would be open to any public college in the province of Alberta if they wished to take advantage of it and work with the minister and cabinet in sort of custom building an academic council that suited their purposes best.

As one example the minister referenced the AUCC, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. Let me give some credit again to the minister. Despite the minister's best efforts to create a made-in-Alberta national accrediting council here that will actually be an accrediting body for degree-granting institutions recognized across the country, we're not there yet, as I'm sure the minister would agree. In the absence of that specific national accrediting body, the closest thing we have to that is the AUCC right now. A number of us have spoken in this House a number of times about Mount Royal College's desire to some day, presumably some day soon is their hope, become a university, and I know that Mount Royal College views AUCC accreditation as a key step along the road to achieving that.

That's not necessarily to say that that's the only route that a college in this province could go or would choose to go, but it's nice to have that option. It's nice to have that flexibility. I commend the minister for thinking along those lines and for looking to move ahead with some further amendments, further legislation of some sort that would allow this kind of flexibility in academic councils.

I guess the only thing I would say beyond that is to encourage the minister, if and when he does so, to design this in such a way that whatever regulations involving the Lieutenant Governor in Council would be necessary to build into this amending legislation would be created in such a way that the minister and cabinet would work collaboratively, concurrently with institutions or set themselves up as an instrument of ratification, if you will, so that the institutions can take the lead role, with consultation from the minister obviously, in designing and custom-building the academic councils that they feel that they need. Obviously, if they come forward with an idea that stinks, I don't think the minister is going to approve it. The minister knows what works.

So as long as the regulations work in order to allow the minister and cabinet to work collaboratively, concurrently in conjunction with colleges or to come along afterwards and ratify what the colleges have done rather than constricting the colleges in setting too many rules ahead of time, I think that would be a fine piece of legislation, and I would be pleased to support that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by Lethbridge-East.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased that the minister has recognized that one of my concerns is with the lack of a cap on the number of people on the board. He may be right that any increase has to be justified and has to be reasonable and whatever have you, but I want him to put himself in the position of students.

Boards of governors are responsible for making decisions on tuition fee increases every year, and tuition fee increase is something that's the experience of students in postsecondary institutions in this province for the last 12, 13 years or more. You know, consistently year after year after year there have been tuition fee increases. So any increase, any addition to the board of governors, in my view, should be so designed as to enhance the presence of students on boards of governors so that their position with respect to, say, tuition fee increases can be heard by the hand-picked members on the board, that are hand-picked by the minister or by the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

While I recognize the argument that there will be no unreasonable increase in the overall number of board members as a result of this amendment, whatever increase there is, there's no assurance here that that increase will be done in a way which will enhance the presence of students on these boards and the ability of the student representatives to make their point with respect to the tuition fee issue, for example.

The tuition fee is a very major concern. Tuition fees have tripled in this province over the last 12 years, and students ought to have by legislation the ability to have a strong voice on those bodies in our academic institutions that make those final decisions on tuition fees, and boards of governors are those institutions. This change doesn't assure me that student representation will be the one that'll be strengthened and increased if this amendment is passed. That's the point I wanted to make.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Part of this is comment, and part of it would be a question to the minister. I, too, have a concern, as my colleague to my left here. I guess my question to the minister would be: in essence, it doesn't matter in my mind if the number of board members goes up or if it goes down. Would the percentage not change? If you've got so many students, so many publics, however they got on there, would that percentage change? If it stayed the same, it probably doesn't matter how the numbers go up or down. If I've made myself clear on that.

The other thing is that if all of the colleges and the universities are going to have different ways of setting up their academic councils and their boards, then their governances will be different and then have to apply to the particular institution that they have. But with this change, I would hope that governance and the way that it's structured would be taken into effect when students read Maclean's magazine, for instance, when they find out how a particular institution is run and if it's really what they're looking for and would fit in with their academic plans. I would like an answer to: regardless of the numbers, would the percentage of whatever the representation is stay the same?

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, do you want to respond?

Mr. Hancock: If I may, Mr. Chairman. Clearly, the bill itself or the amendment to the bill doesn't provide for percentage representation; it provides for fixed representation. So if the board numbers went up in either the existing amendment that's in the bill or in the one that's proposed tonight, there wouldn't be an up and down based on the numbers of the student and faculty and nonacademic staff.

But, clearly, the concept here in 44(1) and 44(2) is that students, staff, and nonacademic staff ought to be represented on the board. In the course of the technical institutes it says: two, two, and one. In the course of the public college board it's one, one, and one. The concept is that they're represented on the board. They're never going to have a sufficient voting capacity to run the board. It's representation, and there's clearly representation on the board provided for. So if the board goes up by one or two members, the fact that the percentage interest is diluted isn't going to affect the fact that they have representation on the board and that representation is as strong as the people they recommend for appointment to the board.

I don't see a real concern from that side either from your comments or the comments from Edmonton-Strathcona because clearly the concept is for representation. The proportion of representation isn't sufficient to give them control of the board or an ability to significantly change the way decision-making is on the board, but clearly their interests have to be represented to the board and represented on the board. So I don't think that that concept is damaged at all. In fact, it's clearly in place, clearly understood that there's a role for students, a role for faculty, a role for nonacademic staff on the board governance of a college or technical institute, and that should continue.

Now, I would be concerned, however, if students in this province got their information about which college or technical institute to go to from Maclean's magazine. That would be a problem.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to participate in the debate this evening and specifically discuss amendment A1 to Bill 9. Certainly, I have listened with interest to all the hon. members who have participated in debate this evening and with disinterest to the chatter that is constant in this Assembly. This chatter seems to be a regular Wednesday evening occurrence, this loud chatter in the Assembly.

Mr. Chairman, for the hon. Minister of Advanced Education I have the following question, and this is regarding the Auditor General's report for 2004-2005. I'm sure the hon. minister has had time since the second week in September to have a good look at two of the recommendations. Actually, they're recommendation 1 and recommendation 2 in the cross-ministry section of the Auditor General's report, and they're dealing specifically with appointments to boards.

Now, certainly, there are many boards appointed by the government in this province. One has to keep track of them through the Alberta Gazette or through one of the very good newsletters that come out on a weekly basis reporting on the activities of this Legislative Assembly. As I understand it, there is no formal list. Would the minister – and I'm just going to be specific for his department – be willing to list publicly, downstairs in the library and on the Advanced Education website, all the individuals who are appointed through this ministry to various boards, how long they're going to be there, how much, if anything, they are to be compensated, and list the vacancies as well? Perhaps if there's a student in the city or one in Calgary or maybe one attending Mount Royal that would be interested in applying for one of these directorships or seats on the board, well, then they would certainly have that information present, a comprehensive list of who is serving, for how long, for how much, and if there are any vacancies.

Now, I would be a lot more comfortable with this amendment if the hon. minister was agreeable to that. Certainly, we have to be cautious about allowing – and I don't want to use the term “willy-nilly appointments” – additional persons appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council upon the recommendation of the minister. It concerns me when the Auditor General states the following, and this is recommendation 1, Mr. Chairman.

We recommend that the Deputy Minister of Executive Council update Alberta public sector governance principles and guidance so that they are consistent with current good practices for recruiting, evaluating and training directors.

Now, recommendation 2 is this, Mr. Chairman. “We recommend that the guidance include a statement that governing boards evaluate and report publicly their own performance against both Alberta public sector principles and their own board governance policies.” I could discuss these two recommendations at length, but I don't think that at this time it is necessary. It certainly does concern me that the hon. member is proposing to have additional persons appointed upon the recommendation of the department, or himself in this case, and these are red flags by the Auditor General in regard to the whole process.

In conclusion, I would like to note for all members of this Assembly whenever they consider this amendment A1 that the Auditor General also had this to say, and this is in regard to guidance for director recruitment and the need to have a better system. Now, in the audit sample, it is noted here in the report, half of the organizations did not have a memorandum of understanding. The Auditor

General also saw that the directive for recruitment should be enhanced and that the commitment made to its guidance should be reinforced since it was not consistently being followed. It goes on to say here in the Auditor General's report that about half of the organizations had deficiencies in their processes for evaluating boards and directors. Through this amendment we want to have this sort of credit card for directors with an unlimited amount.

Now, it also goes on to state here: “Orientation training for directors was provided,” and I think this is a good thing. “However, the establishment of continuous training programs was inconsistent.”

The Auditor General's staff in this audit go on to state here:

In our literature search, we noted that the amount of guidance on good governance has grown substantially in the last few years.

That is good to find out. However, this was largely in response to governance failures in the private sector which is why the guidance is expressed in private sector terms. Nevertheless, this new guidance provides important and relevant insight to opportunities to improve governance in the Alberta public sector.

There are also other recommendations here, Mr. Chairman, but certainly I would urge the hon. minister to have a second look at recommendations 1 and 2 in the cross-ministry report before appointing any additional persons in the manner that is being suggested with this amendment A1.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: Does anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Chairman, I hesitate even to respond to those comments only insofar as the hon. member has taken what is clearly a discussion of the Post-secondary Learning Act and board governance into an opportunity to draw in the Auditor General's report on appointment to boards. I do want to speak to it for the purpose of indicating that we have 21 public institutions in this province, board-governed institutions, ranging from the University of Alberta, which would be the largest both in size and in budget, three other universities, two technical institutes, the rest colleges, and, of course, the Banff Centre, which is a public college as well but governed by its own governance structure outside this act.

I want to assure the hon. member and every member of the House that appointing members to public governance boards for colleges and technical institutes and universities in this province is not something that's taken lightly. The positions are made known. The boards themselves normally have a committee of the board which is concerned with board governance and with board membership. When there's a vacancy, they tend to look at the competencies that are available to them on the board, the skills, knowledge, and abilities that are available to them on the board. Most often I will get a letter from the board indicating the type of individual, whether it's someone with an accounting background or someone with a legal background or someone that represents a particular geographic area that they don't have on the board. So I can assure the hon. member that his concerns are entirely without basis in this circumstance.

When it comes to our publicly governed educational institutions in this province, governance is very thoughtfully considered. It's very thoughtfully considered by the boards themselves in terms of the capacities that they need, the people that they need to represent the communities that they represent, both geographic and demographic communities that they move into, and they take a very active role in board member search. In many circumstances the positions are advertised within the local community. Certainly, when it comes to a chair position, they're advertised in the local community. When recommendations come forward, they go through a screening process, so an assessment is done as to whether they meet the qualifications for the board, and then, of course, it comes forward to the minister for a recommendation to be made.

So the process is a good one. The quality of board members has been exemplary. The individuals that serve their communities on our public institution boards are a stellar group of people, and they do good service. I don't think it would serve us well to undermine them in any way by indicating that there was not a proper process in place for appointment, because there is.

With respect to your suggestion that they be listed on the website, I'll take that under advisement. There's certainly no secret as to who's on the boards. If you go to the website of any of the public colleges, you'll find listed the names of the people who are on the boards. Their financial statements every year, which are compiled and filed in the House here, I believe – I don't know this for sure; I haven't looked specifically – would indicate how much is paid on board governance. I can tell you that it's a pittance. I can tell you that it's a mere honorarium that in many cases, I know for a fact, the board members sign back to the college.

You don't have to worry about members volunteering to serve on boards for our public institutions in this province being overpaid. In fact, the Member for Lethbridge-East, behind you, served with me for seven years on the Students Finance Board, and she can tell you that the compensation, if any, that was received for that service did not in any way make one able to forgo whatever prosperity bonus might come her way.

The Deputy Chair: Anybody else?

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

8:50

The Deputy Chair: On the bill, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to participate today in the debate on the amendment. One area of interest that I have, obviously, having worked and taught at the university, is a tuition policy. To quote the Auditor General's report from 2002-2003, a number of concerns were raised, but the most urgent, I guess, that I wanted to hear in relation to the new amendment was whether the requirement for postsecondary institutions to comply with a tuition fee policy will now have new teeth. The criteria identified were:

1. Data collected by the Department should be reliable, timely and calculated in accordance with the requirements of the Policy.
2. The Department should ensure public post secondary institutions comply with the Policy.

Some of the findings were that there needs to be more clarification about how that calculation is carried out, that there needs to be perhaps a little more ease in administration of the policy, that there needs to be a more timely calculation instead of up to 18 months after the institutional year-end that the calculation is completed and the recommendation then addressed, and, finally, repeating that in one instance a college exceeded the limit for three years in spite of the policy.

So what kind of enforcement capacity is there to address the policy itself? Could you discuss that, hon. minister, in relation to the amendment and how some of those concerns will be addressed?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Chairman, it's hard to see how the issues that were raised by the member actually relate to the amendment other than there is an amendment to clarify section 61(2)(b), so I presume that's where he's coming in with the Auditor General's report. But this isn't Public Accounts. This isn't the budget. This isn't really the place to do that.

However, I can assure the member that we take the Auditor General's comments seriously. The Auditor General's comments have been provided not only to the minister and to the department but also to the institutions involved. We always indicate that we make every effort to accept and to implement the Auditor General's recommendations where it's possible to do so. So outside the context of the bill that we're debating, I can say with some assurance to the hon. member that when the Auditor General raises concerns about an issue relative to how things are calculated or done, we take it very seriously, we follow up on it, and we make every effort to comply.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We have dealt with the amendment that the minister has brought forward, so we are now back to the discussion of the various clauses in the bill itself, Bill 9, the Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act. With that in mind, I'd like to make a few comments.

This is overwhelmingly a piece of housekeeping legislation. Most of the changes proposed in Bill 9 are not overly problematic to us, although they do raise some concerns. I think I've indicated already that perhaps we're giving too much control to the minister through orders in council, upsetting the balance of membership on institutional boards of governors and a number of other minor issues.

One of the changes that is proposed is a repeal of section 49, listing four nonprofit private colleges receiving funding from the government. In fact, we have a number of nonprofit private institutions operating in this province now, exceeding four. I believe the intent of the minister, primarily, was to address that reality, address the eventuality that there could be more nonprofit private colleges coming down the pike later on. The ministry is seeking flexibility again as more institutions are granted authority to offer degree programs and will receive funding according to regulations. Historically the ministry has given assurances that for-profit institutions will not receive public funding, and I would certainly like to hold the minister to that going forward. It is, again, I think primarily housekeeping, but we will be watching the implications play out from this in the years to come.

I want to make a very quick comment about this tuition fee policy. It's good on one level. It's good that the minister is modifying the tuition fee policy to provide an additional academic year before the newly calculated limit applies because, as my colleague from Calgary-Mountain View pointed out, according to the annual report of the Auditor General there have been colleges that have been out of compliance and one college that exceeded the limit for three years, et cetera, et cetera. It's good that he is doing something about that, but I can't help but note, because we were talking about this in the House in question period yesterday, that there is a new tuition policy in development for colleges and universities across the province. The minister committed yesterday to holding the line on freezing tuitions in this province until that new policy is developed. I asked him whether he would do that no matter how long it took to develop the policy, and in his answer he assured us that the policy would be developed within a year, if I recall.

So we're left with a situation here where, well, good on the minister for doing what he's doing, but you almost have to wonder if this couldn't have waited. If we've had a problem with this for two or three or four years, even though it's been identified now by the Auditor General – and, yes, the minister likes to take the recommendations of the AG very seriously, likes to be in compliance and all the rest of that, likes to do the right thing, and loves his mother too, I'm sure, as we all do. But you kind of wonder: couldn't this have waited? I've never met your mother, but I'm sure she's a lovely woman. Couldn't this have waited until the new tuition policy came down the pike?

It's rather like the horse having bolted the barn, coming along closing the barn door after the horse bolted, but knowing that you're just going to tear that barn down anyway in a few weeks, and good thing that you are because the barn is falling apart, otherwise the horse probably wouldn't have gotten out in the first place.

I'm in a bit of a conundrum, I suppose, about this. Yes, you're doing the right thing by making these changes, by modifying the tuition fee policy, but, you know, it hardly seems to make much difference in practical terms given that you're going to change the policy anyway and we're going to have to go through this all over again before too much longer.

One other thing that I want to talk about – let's see – is sections 4 and 9 in the bill, I believe. They repeal section 53(a) in the Postsecondary Learning Act, regarding the Private Colleges Accreditation Board. Again, that's fairly obvious because the Campus Alberta Quality Council is designed to replace it. However, what this does is highlight the fact that there are still no serious reporting requirements for the Campus Alberta Quality Council. One has to wonder when those are going to be coming through. Soon, I hope, because that's important.

In sections 110 to 115, also sections governing the Private Colleges Accreditation Board that are being repealed, we note that the PCAB had an explicit budget, records, and reports section that, among other things, mandated establishing a budget and providing annual reports. No similar sections are included for the Campus Alberta Quality Council. They should be. Accountability and transparency require publicly available annual reports. Now, I said publicly available annual reports. We all know in this business how many annual reports land with a great thud on our desk on a fairly regular basis, and I dare say that we don't all read every single page of every annual report, but it's important that they be available. So I would urge the minister to address that issue where the Campus Alberta Quality Council is to make it accountable and transparent.

The only other real concern that I have – I don't know the degree to which I have a concern. I suspect that like many other sections in this bill, it's something where the intentions are good; there's unlikely to be abuse. But because of the inclusion of this section or the way that section is worded, there is, however unlikely, the possibility of abuse, the potential of abuse. That is in section 10 of the bill, the additional powers to collect information for applicants and alumni in addition to students. I think that's section 10. Yes, it is. It's primarily so that the minister can conduct surveys, I think in accordance with Bill 1, really, around accessibility, affordability, quality issues in postsecondary education.

I can well understand the need and the desirability of being able to conduct those surveys. I'm pleased to support good data collection and good analysis to support system policy, to identify areas where system policy needs change and improvement and then to act on that. But in my view this government does not have the best possible record when it comes to the protection of personal information. As a rule, the less personal information that is collected and stored – and, yes, under section 10 we don't really have any time limits on the amount of time that the information can be kept. We have time limits governing how much time the minister has to request information about a particular applicant. I'd like to see some time limits or some limits on the kind of personal information that can be kept, how long it can be kept for, and what purposes it can be used for.

I'm not accusing anybody of anything here, but I do note with interest, and I've certainly heard this from a number of my constituents, that students in postsecondary institutions, especially as they near and pass graduation, have this funny way of being inundated with credit card come-ons from various banks. Now, where do the banks get that information from? Where do the banks get the list of college and university graduates from? I can't provide that answer myself, but I certainly have my suspicions. It brings up the question of whether there are sufficient safeguards on that information.

You know, I think that anybody who's bright enough, qualified enough to get into a postsecondary institution in the province of Alberta, especially at the university level considering how stringent the entrance requirements are now as a result of the access problem that the minister and I have talked about both in this House and at the minister's forum early this month and in various other venues together and separately, who is bright enough to get into the system and succeed in the system and graduate from the system is also bright enough to decide for him or herself when or if he or she wants to apply for a credit card and what institution they want to go see. You know, once they've decided whether they'd really like a Visa card or a MasterCard or an American Express card, they don't need all this junk mail coming from every bank and credit card company in the free world saying: "Hey, you graduated. You're a great prospect. We know we can get our hooks into you for years. Why don't you sign up for one of our credit cards?"

It's but an example of what I consider, and certainly what some of my constituents who have talked to me about it consider an abuse of privacy, an invasion of privacy, an abuse of personal information that's collected and stored at some level in some location on them. I would urge the minister to put some time limits and other limits on the collection, storage, and use of that information so that it's used specifically for the purpose intended, which is so that the minister can survey people like students who have applied to a particular institution, been accepted by that institution or not, but for whatever reason have then decided not to go ahead and enrol in that institution, so that the minister can find out why Johnny or Janie chose to go to university A versus college B or something like that. That's the purpose for which the minister wants this information.

Let's tighten up the regulations around this. I suspect that this is something that perhaps you could do in regulations. It would be nice to see it in actual legislation, in some kind of overarching, governing legislation around privacy at some point in the future, to tighten up the rules around the collection, storage, and use of personal information so that it's used for the purpose for which it was intended and only that purpose.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Certainly, starting from the last point, I believe that the privacy laws in this province, particularly as it relates to public information but also even now to information in the private sector governed by the two acts that we have, clearly make it an offence to use information other than for the purpose for which it was collected and under the exceptions provided in the act. Obviously, the information that we're talking about here under section 10 is needed for some very, very good reason. For example, we often have discussions about student debt in this province, and when I talk about student debt as minister, I talk about the student debt owed to the public because that's what we have information on, but there is anecdotal evidence to suggest that a considerable number of students are going out to some of the nefarious banks that the hon. member was talking about and taking out a line of credit, which boggles my mind. For the life of me I don't understand why anybody would go to a bank to get a student line of credit when we have a student finance system. [interjection] The hon. member was making some comments which are not on the record.

The bottom line is that in order to get a good handle on information like how much student debt there actually is out there in all areas and to find the people who are not taking out student debt from the Student Finance Board but taking out student debt elsewhere and to find out the real reasons why they're not doing it, what their barriers to success were – in many cases when I talk to students who anecdotally tell me about their student debt and the reason they couldn't get it, I find out they didn't avail themselves of the appeal processes so they actually could have potentially had student finance debt, but they didn't go that direction. Now, that's a useful piece of information because what it tells us is that we're not letting people know of the appeal process well enough, or we're not doing something to make it as accessible as it should be. But unless you have that kind of information, you can't make the changes necessary to make the process work.

So you do need to be able to collect information from students. You need to know who's applying where, and if they're not getting in, are they getting in somewhere else? We have, for example, in Calgary in the last couple of years reported student numbers of people who applied but didn't get into institutions. Now, I know from research data that most of those students did get in someplace. In some cases there were duplicate applications: they were applying to two or three or four programs and they got into one program, or they applied in Calgary and they also applied elsewhere and they got into one of their other programs. I don't have solid data on that because I can't go to the individual students. We do have a student identifier number, so we're able to do that better.

This particular section just allows us to have access to the information necessary to get that management-type data and follow-up data to improve the system for the benefit of students. I can assure the hon. member that we will protect that data. We're not in the business of selling data to credit card companies. I'm not sure what that allusion was, but I don't believe any of our public institutions would be in the business of selling their data. It would be against the law to sell the data to a credit card company or anyone else unless the students had specifically said that they could. The data isn't collected for that purpose. Under our privacy laws, both public privacy laws and private-sector privacy laws, you're not allowed to use information that's collected except for the purpose for which it was collected. So I, too, am sometimes very interested in how companies get hold of the names.

This section will not make that type of data publicly available in any way. This section will simply make it easier for us to get the information that we need to make the system better for learners in Alberta. Certainly all of my efforts will be towards that. If there needs to be some guidance in regulation or something more strict put in place to ensure the protection of the data, I would be the first to want to do that.

With respect to tuition policy I certainly have to agree with the hon. member that it seems rather unnecessary to amend this section at this point in time. This came forward through a process. Most often legislation is done very carefully, so the policy goes through a process. The recommendation comes forward. There's consultation. It's a one or two or sometimes three-year process. This happens to be the end of a long process, and if we were to start it now, we wouldn't start it now. It's here, and it's not that it doesn't make sense to do it; it makes the existing law more understandable. But the hon. member is right: we didn't use the existing law this year, we're not planning to use the existing law next year, and by the time we use the existing law again, it won't be the existing law. So I'm not sure if the horse and barn analogy is correct, but I do agree with the hon. member.

With respect to reporting requirements for the Campus Alberta Quality Council, I think that that's a very interesting comment and one that I do need to follow up on. The quality council has been up and running for a little over a year now. It has met, it has done its first business in terms of reviewing programs and approving programs, and now we do need to take a look and see: okay, how do we make it accountable and reportable and deal with those issues?

I hope to be meeting with the quality council soon on those very sorts of issues, and maybe we'll be able to advise the hon. member at some time in the near future what might come forward in that regard. It's not in this particular bill, but I do take his comments. I believe it's valid for the public. Not everybody in the public is going to know or care what the quality council is, but those that do ought to be able to have access to understand its workings and to understand what it's doing.

With respect to section 3, the repeal of section 49, section 49 is a bit of an anomaly. No other public institution is actually named in the act. Section 49 names four institutions that are defined as not-for-profit colleges and then goes on to provide for mechanisms for public payments to be made to private not-for-profit colleges. This amendment is simply to delete the list of names because we have an ability to add to that list by regulation and, in fact, have added to that list by regulation.

We no longer define not-for-profit colleges in the way the act defines them in terms of those four particular colleges. In fact, one of them is now part of the University of Alberta. The other three are still in existence and still fit the bill and still actually get public funding. So repealing this section doesn't take away their public funding.

In fact, we also have Taylor University College, St. Mary's University College, and at least two others that now have some, not all but some, of their programs funded publicly, so they should either be added into the act or these should be taken out so that there's a consistency. We felt it more appropriate that these be taken out so that there can be some flexibility as new colleges come along as there may be private not-for-profit colleges that offer programs that we do fund publicly that we could add by regulation. We've added Taylor. We've added St. Mary's. We've added a couple of other colleges this year, in fact in this budget year, and fund some of their programs. So this just cleans up the section and makes it clear that not-for-profit private colleges are not limited to those four.

I think that addresses the concerns that were raised.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I've been listening to the debate carefully, and the minister has addressed some of the concerns that have been raised with respect to section 5 on tuition fees.

While he has conceded that we are discussing something that perhaps is already out of date because his new policies are in the process of being considered, I suppose, the minister had his forum a couple of weeks ago, and he had some time to think about what kind of amendments that he wanted to bring to this bill to perhaps assure students with respect to their concerns. We should have seen, in place of the minister maintaining the provisions here that speak to tuition fee policy, in fact amending these by bringing in a tuition freeze at least to indicate, to show, to make a statement that the minister has listened and that he's willing to take action, and the minimum action he's going to take is to amend the existing piece of legislation to commit the government to freezing tuition fees at the present level.

I wonder why the minister hasn't chosen that option rather than leaving what he now clearly recognizes as an obsolete provision in the act because it may be overtaken by events by the time these changes become legislation and are ready to be translated into policy. So I wonder if the minister would like to comment on that.

His explanation with respect to all the information that he thinks the department would like to have on students' personal information. This is in section 10. Some of the comments that he made about what use that information may be put to do have a ring of plausibility, but I'm not convinced that this sort of very broad mandate that he is seeking by way of legislation to have access to information collected by colleges or universities is going to be of much use.

Secondly, if there are identifiable uses to which the information will be put by the department, then maybe those are the ones that should be identified before this broad mandate is sought to have access to information that students in good faith provide to colleges and universities in order to seek admission and for no other use. What the minister is asking here is for the institutions to in fact act in what might be considered by students bad faith because students give that information, fill in the applications on the assumption that that information will be used strictly for the purposes of selection and admission.

What this piece of legislation does is to redefine the uses of that information and oblige institutions to allow the minister to have access to the information that wasn't collected explicitly for purposes other than admissions and selection. So I think there's a problem here as I see it. The institutions will or could be accused by students of acting in bad faith. The information was collected by institutions for a certain purpose and now, since the minister has legislated for the institutions to provide that information to the minister, the information is being used for a purpose for which it wasn't surrendered by the student, there is a concern that I have there.

It's an ethical issue here. There's a matter of institutions being put in a very difficult situation where they will have to perhaps address students' complaints. I don't know if this matter is justiciable or not. Students could take institutions to the court in a worst-case scenario because it is really about the use of information that students give to institutions based on certain assumptions, what the information is going to be used for. They don't give a carte blanche to institutions to use the information to do whatever they want with it unless my understanding needs to be corrected. If so, the minister will perhaps do that.

One other provision here has to do with going back three years. The information not only that is current but "information is requested by the Minister no more than 3 years after the date that the applicant applied." Oh, I see. It is that after three years the minister will not be seeking the information, if the information is more than three years old.

I think the principle issue that I take with this part of this section is this piece of legislation calling on the institutions to create another use post facto for the information that they collected only for reasons of selection and admission. So that is a concern. It does deal with the issues of privacy. That matter has been raised, but in addition to that, the concern that I've raised I think needs to be addressed, and perhaps the minister would like to put himself on record on that one.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On the information issue I'm just going to have to agree to disagree, I guess, in that, I mean, we can discuss the value of information and the right of individuals to have an understanding of the protection of their privacy. I think the hon. member and I would agree that people are entitled, unless there's good reason, to expect that their information will only be used for the purposes for which they've disclosed it. Most people making application to a university or college believe that the reason they're disclosing their information is to grant admission to a college. But there are also supplementary reasons for which information might be used, whether it's – well, I won't go into that. I was going to say whether it's health information or other information, but let me not stray into that area. That could be dangerous.

There are valid public policy reasons for which you need to be able to access personal information. As long as that information is protected, as long as it's used for an appropriate public policy purpose – and in the case of the act here we're talking about a public institution system of advanced education for which the public pays a very, very significant cost, investment so that we can have a system which will increase opportunity for Albertans to advance their education, and that's a good thing. In order to do it properly, we need to know who's going to school and who's not going to school. In the case of those who are not going to school, why, so that we can find ways to encourage them to go to school; for those who are concerned about finances, for example, what their concerns are. Those are valid things for public policy reasons to have information on.

Nobody is going to take student information and sell it on the street. That's not the purpose of this. That's not allowed by this. I think most if not all students would understand that there's a public policy reason why information that they might give on an application might be accessed to determine not only their admission but for what reason they might not have been admitted to one or two or three of the places they applied to or whether, in fact, they didn't get admitted to any of the places they applied to, and therefore there's a hole in our system because there needs to be a place for them. Those are valid reasons to gather information. I think most reasonable people understand that, even though they want to make sure that their personal information isn't used for invalid reasons.

I don't believe that it is an ethical issue at all. In fact, I stand to be corrected, but I believe that the provision of this would have been run by the Privacy Commissioner before it was brought in. It was brought in last spring, and I don't remember specifically, but I'm sure that we did that because that would be our normal practice. So I don't think there's an ethical concern at all in this.

I do understand the issue being raised, but I think most reasonable people understand that there is a need to gather information of this nature. This is a public investment. It needs to have the benefit of good information. Sometimes that information has to come from the people involved, and therefore you have to be able to find them and ask them. So I think section 10 is well founded and has a good basis, and I would ask the Legislature to support it.

With respect to the tuition policy, quite frankly, I do not believe that you make legislation rashly. The Premier indicated in February of this year that by the fall of 2006 there would be a new tuition policy, and there will be. I've indicated that we hope to have that available for public review by as early as March of next year. That doesn't put it in place for the budget discussions that postsecondary institutions are having right now for their fall 2006 tuition fee policy. They have an obligation to consult with students. They have an obligation to bring in their budgets. Putting a new tuition policy in place and having it available by fall 2006 doesn't assist in that process.

The Premier has made the commitment publicly that tuition fees would not go up. There was the $43 million that was put into the system this year to pay the increase this year. The Premier has indicated that that will be sustained until the new tuition fee policy comes in, and I've indicated that that will be early next year. So you may well be right: this section may never have efficacy again. But rather than eliminate it and put in a freeze provision, which we then have to come back and tinker with – I'm not a believer in doing legislation rashly. I think that we will go through the process of developing the policy, there will be a good public discussion of the policy, and then the policy will be brought forward to the Legislature, presumably for necessary amendments to the Post-Secondary Learning Act at that time. In the meantime we can give effect in the same manner as we have this year to the intention, which is to keep tuition fees affordable for another year while the discussion is going on.

The Deputy Chair: Are you ready for the question?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I thank the minister for responding specifically to some of the concerns that I raised here. With respect to the personal information on students and the ability of the minister to access that information, for public policy purposes I agree that that information is needed, but that should be in an aggregated form. If the minister wants information, he should ask for it in aggregated form. If he wants to know whether low-income students are walking away from universities – they're not completing their programs more so than students coming from high-income families – then that information can be had in that form: low-income versus high-income family background of students. Aggregated information does protect the personal nature of that information yet provides useful information for public policy purposes.

This kind of information I think would be sought by creditors, people who are trying to chase, I suppose, some debt defaulters. If that is one of the intentions of collecting this information, then I think that's a matter that should be left – when banks are the creditors, banks are lending money to students, then it is the responsibility of banks, not of this government, to collect that information. Students are going to banks to seek loans, not going to the government. Insofar as the public dollars are concerned in the form of student loans, the Students Finance Board should have that information, and I'm sure it does. Why would the minister want that kind of information collected or have access to that kind of information? As I said, the minister's claims for why he wants information sound plausible, but they're not terribly persuasive.

The fact that the government is a sort of benign big brother and therefore any information that it seeks is safe I think is a perilous assumption. I think governments make mistakes. Governments don't necessarily always use the information in the right way. Therefore, it is appropriate to put safeguards in the legislation so that the purposes for which the information is being sought are clearly outlined, the kind of information that's required is appropriately outlined, and proper safeguards for the use of that information are also there. I don't find them here. I think there's a bit of a carte blanche: give us all the information, and then we'll know what to do with it, and that will be decided later on after we've got the information in hand. So I continue to have concerns on it.

Thank you.

[The clauses of Bill 9 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee rise and report Bill 9.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 9. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

head: Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 43

Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes
Amendment Act, 2005

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 43, the Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in the introduction of this bill, this bill will create amendments to three pieces of legislation: first, the Fiscal Responsibility Act; secondly, the Alberta Personal Income Tax Act; and thirdly, the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act. These amendments will give the authority to provide the rebate, a one-time program that provides $400 to each and every Albertan.

The Fiscal Responsibility Act will be amended primarily so that the cost of the resource rebates is not a charge to the contingency allowance. The Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act will be amended to ensure that children in care of the province will also receive the $400. The Personal Income Tax Act is being amended so that the rebate will be treated as a refundable tax credit, and that makes it exempt from provincial or federal taxation.

A highlight of the rebate program, if anybody needs reminding, is that Albertans 18 years and over will receive a cheque, including students attending school in other jurisdictions who still consider Alberta home for tax purposes. Recipients will have to file a 2004 Canadian tax return and be resident in the province of Alberta as of September 1, 2005.

Rebates for children who are under 18 as of December 31 of this year will be paid to their primary caregiver, which in most cases is the mother. All babies born in 2005 will be eligible for the rebate. Parents of children born late in the year will receive a delayed payment. We expect that that payment could be delivered in March.

The province will administer benefits to the 7,300 children in provincial care. Children's Services will have the discretion to use the $400 for the benefit of the child where appropriate. Otherwise, children in care are eligible for $400 plus interest when they reach the age of 18. This will not affect benefits for other provincial programs. Deductions on the rebates will be made for money owing under maintenance enforcement only.

I want to certainly thank the agencies and individuals who have volunteered their time to ensure that all that are eligible for this rebate have the opportunity to receive it, particularly those who have no fixed address or who may have difficulty in filing or filling out a tax return. Many people have worked hard to figure out the logistics of this program, including the legislative amendments needed, and we appreciate their help. We have a dedicated staff, who have been so helpful in answering queries from Albertans about the details of this initiative.

I know that this rebate has come under some criticism, and I may hear some further on that here tonight. There are some who say that the money should be invested. I would say that this money is being invested. By giving it back to Albertans, this is a huge investment in them. Each Albertan is free to spend, save, or invest their portion as they see fit, and I have the utmost confidence that Albertans know what's best for them and will make wise choices. What's best for each Albertan will be good for us as a province as a whole. There is an economic spinoff, of course, in so many people having an additional $400 to invest or spend, and there are economic benefits down the road for those who choose to put the money away.

Many have told me that they intend to use these dollars for their children's education fund, and that's just great. Many have said that they are going to use it for something special for their family, and that's just great. Many have told me they're going to give it to a favourite group or charity in their community, be it their library, their food bank, the local Lions Club, whatever is most important to them, and I say that that's just great as well.

Some critics have said that rebates are not what people wanted, and certainly I've had letters from people who have said that this was not necessarily what they would have done with the money. However, nobody disagreed that it is their money, and they have the choice to do what they want with it. Interestingly enough, I had a conversation with a gentleman who happened to be from Calgary and was in my constituency, and he said: "You know, Shirley, I don't need this money. You don't need to send it to me." His wife spoke up and said, "You may not want it, but I'll tell you that our daughter and her three kids are most happy to be getting it, so watch it, Dad." That's just the way of the world. To some people it's very important, to some it may be less, but the fact remains that it is their money, and it is their right to use it in any way they wish. It's your future: yes, it wasn't number one in the survey, but it definitely was there.

The number one choice was to make long-term investments, and we're going to have the opportunity over the next days to talk about some of those investments in schools, hospitals, other health facilities, academic institutions, and of course roads, which are always important to all of us in this province. Less than one-quarter of the anticipated surplus this year is dedicated to rebates. Of course, a significant portion of this is going into savings through the heritage fund and various endowment funds.

I would close by saying to those critics who dismiss $400 per person as an insignificant amount that it may not be significant to you and I, but to a lot of Alberta families it is very significant. To families who earn a modest income, $400 per family member is a tremendous benefit. These rebates will do a lot of good for individuals, for families, and I believe for our province as a whole.

I look forward to the debate. I look forward to being able to answer any questions that any members have on this bill. Thank you.

9:40

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to open the debate on behalf of Her Majesty's Official Opposition tonight on Bill 43, the Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005. This bill, as the minister has just outlined, will provide $400 in the form of a prosperity bonus, as they're calling it, to all Albertans over the age of 18 who resided in Alberta on or before September 1 of this year.

I want to say right up front that I will be recommending to my colleagues that we support this bill with some serious qualifications. I'm not so naive as to think that I want to be the Grinch who steals the $400 – I can't say Christmas cheque because I gather that it won't be a Christmas cheque – New Year's cheque. However, having said that, it's clear from the response of many, many Albertans, many that the minister and the Premier have heard from, that for many Albertans this rebate idea is not necessarily the first thing that they would have done with the money. It's clear that if it's going to be done, it could have been done so much better, and that's going to be the thrust of my comments tonight.

Certainly, as the minister has outlined and I've acknowledged several times over the last few months, once the Premier announced that this was his choice, not necessarily the choice of his caucus colleagues but his choice, that this is something he wanted to do, many Albertans need the extra $400. I've heard from many constituents in Edmonton-Rutherford who have serious concerns about how they're going to address their utility costs this winter, largely due to the deregulation of natural gas. I have had constituents coming to me with serious concerns about their electricity rates doubling in the last few months, again thanks largely to the deregulation that this government has undertaken.

Certainly, there are students who have suggested to me that the $400 will go a long way towards helping their tuition costs. Many people are saying that they will invest the money in their children's education or in an RSP or put it towards home ownership, perhaps auto repairs – I had one fellow telling me that he needs a new engine in his vehicle, and this is a good start towards that – household needs, and it goes on and on. There's no question that in this land of plenty, when we're experiencing some of the most prosperous times ever, there are more people than ever being left behind. Seventy-five food banks, if you can believe it, are operating in Alberta today despite the prosperity that we're experiencing. So I'm not going to stand here tonight and say that we should not be giving Albertans that $400.

However, as I said, there are many concerns as well. I think that there is a very real concern about how to make it fair and equitable, and that is one of the problems, quite frankly, with a rebate cheque or a rebate program. How do you decide who gets it and who doesn't get it? I was at a function last Saturday evening, and I happened to be sitting at a table with some very bright young people working for a software company in Edmonton, one of whom has moved here this summer from Toronto and another who moved here this summer from New York City. I think it's wonderful that we're able to attract people from across the country and, in fact, from across the continent and even, in the case of that particular company, a number of people from around the world that have come here to work. That's a tremendous credit to the spirit of Albertans and the spirit of entrepreneurship that we have here.

These people were thrilled. In fact, they asked me about the rebate cheque when they heard that I was the Finance critic, and they shared their thoughts with me about it. They said: it really doesn't matter to us because we won't be getting it, but these are thoughts we'd like to share with you. Then I was able to inform them that in the case of the young lady from Toronto she would in fact be receiving the cheque, and certainly the fellow from New York. As long as he has permanent residency status, he'll be getting it too. He said to me: well, what about the couple that I worked with when I first came here in August, who lived and worked in Alberta for 35 years and moved to Kelowna to the retirement home in August? So, quite clearly, it illustrates the problem with a program like this. There will always be those who fall through the cracks, and it's one of the concerns I have.

Now, the minister referred to the homeless. There's no question that there are a lot of people that even with the tremendous assistance of the social agencies in this city may still fall through the cracks. If anybody's unsure about that, I'm happy to take them to a business lot that I own in south Edmonton where there are a number of people every night that literally sleep underneath a trailer on our lot. We've gone out there and talked to them and tried to make sure that they're aware of this and so forth. Obviously, we can't touch all of those people, and I have no doubt in my mind that there will be many who are missed. I think that it's a tragedy that there are going to be some in this province who need this more than any of us can imagine, and they're not going to benefit from it. That's unfortunate.

There will be frivolous spending. I know that the minister and the Premier and others have talked about the fact that they trust Albertans to know how to spend this money wisely, but the simple reality is that not everybody is capable of making those wise decisions. We've all, I'm sure, spent time working for various organizations in the casinos and bingo halls and have seen people who, quite frankly, are not capable of making those wise decisions. At the same time, I've watched, particularly in the bingos where I work for the various charities that I'm involved with, the workers in those bingo halls, who are suffering right now due to a downturn in the number of players, rubbing their hands together at the thought of those $400 cheques coming out because they know that they're going to see a tremendous increase in the month of January or February, when these cheques come out, in the amount of business that they see in the bingo hall.

So despite the fact that I certainly agree with the minister that the majority of Albertans are quite capable of making very wise decisions in terms of how to spend this money, I do have concerns that there will be a lot of people who, unfortunately, are not going to make those wise decisions and in some cases simply are not capable of making the wise decisions.

The minister spoke about the fact that this rebate program will spur the economy. I agree: it will spur the economy. That in itself causes me a little bit of a concern. I think that everybody understands that right now Alberta is experiencing unprecedented growth, and the economy is roaring along at break-neck speed. In fact, we're probably riding the top of that crest, and I'm hoping that it doesn't crash any time soon. Things are going as well as any of us can remember, I'm sure. I'm not going to say adding fuel to the fire, but certainly I don't think that there are too many people who would reasonably argue that this economy needs to be spurred on any more than it already is at the moment. So if that's an argument that's being used for rebate cheques at this time, it doesn't wash with me.

The minister has said, and I would concur: rebate cheques would not have been my first choice. I know that they were not her first choice. She's been quite forthcoming with that. However, as I said earlier, right from day one, right from the time this first came out and even before that, back in the summer when the minister was being asked about rebates and she was saying that she was no fan of rebates and would rather see something else done, my argument has always been that if you're going to give a rebate, do it wisely. If you're going to give money back to Albertans, do it in a way that is sustainable.

All of us watched with a certain amount of pride, I believe, when the oilfield workers from the Sedgewick and Killam and Wainwright area won the lottery. The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright may even know some of those gentlemen and ladies. As much as we watched with pride, I'm sure we all had just a twinge of envy as well, but there isn't one of us in here who would wish to see them just go on a spending spree and blow all of that money. We're all hopeful, I'm sure, that they will invest some of that money wisely and live off the interest. My argument has always been with the rebate cheques that you could do exactly the same thing.

I'm going to point to the heritage savings trust fund as an example of that. In the second-quarter update, which the minister made public today, it was announced that again the heritage savings trust fund is currently sitting at a book value of $12.3 billion, which is just about exactly where it sat in 1989, when we stopped making contributions to it. Now, I'm not going to suggest that we haven't benefited from the fact that money was taken out of it because we all understand that the government has paid down Alberta's debt. I think all Albertans have benefited from that. However, having said that, we continue to take money out of the heritage savings trust fund to this day.

The minister announced today a $5.8 billion surplus. When you add in the rebate cheques and you add in the extra spending that's already been announced, we're up to about an $8.7 billion surplus this year. Despite that incredible surplus we're still taking nearly a billion dollars out of the heritage savings trust fund and putting it into general revenue. I've yet to hear a reasonable explanation of why we're doing that, why we continue to raid the heritage savings trust fund when there is so much money coming into this province unexpectedly.

When you look at that heritage savings trust fund, even though we haven't protected it against inflation, it would be almost $20 billion today if we had at least protected it against inflation. Even though we've not done that, that fund is generating almost enough money today to fund a $400 rebate cheque year after year if that's what you decide to do.

The Finance minister and the Premier have referred to this as a one-time event, a special occasion, a one-off, indicating that this isn't likely to happen again. Yet the simple reality is that over the last six years, not counting this year, which admittedly is exceptional, Alberta has experienced $22.2 billion in surpluses, and more than $15 billion of that has been in unbudgeted surpluses. So we're averaging nearly $3 billion a year for several years now in unbudgeted surpluses. Even in the year 2001, which was, admittedly, a tough year with 9/11, and I know that there were some capital projects that had to be scaled back, we still came in with a $1.2 billion surplus.

So it's clear to me that as the opposition has been saying for years, the government likes to lowball and come in with a bigger surplus than expected. That's not just us saying that. It's not just politicking. This is a pattern that's been going on for many years, year after year. Quite frankly, there's no particular reason why we should expect that to change any time soon.

I think perhaps this is the point that I've been trying to make, and clearly I haven't managed to convince the minister of it yet, so I'll try again tonight; that is, while I have no particular beef, and I may have in some instances, in general I'm not going to say that we shouldn't be spending money on hospitals or on new schools or investing in the heritage savings trust fund or any of the other things that have been announced. As I say, there are certainly instances that I disagree with, but the concept of spending money in those areas I don't have a problem with. In fact, as the minister pointed out, those were the results of the It's Your Future survey. That's what Albertans want, and I'm not going to disagree with what Albertans want. My argument has and will continue to be the way in which we're doing that.

I just outlined the fact that we've experienced surpluses year after year for many years. I'm confident that that will likely continue for a number of years. My argument is: let's have a plan now, today, not for just the $7 billion, $8 billion, $10 billion that we're going to realize by the end of this year but for the $3 billion or $4 billion or $5 billion or $6 billion or $8 billion or $10 billion surplus that we may have next year and the year after that and the year after that and the year after that. I think Albertans deserve some planning and some forethought for how those future surpluses are going to be spent. I'm not going to say forget about this year. I'm not going to say forget about the $8 billion or $10 billion surplus this year. But let's be cognizant of the fact that there's a very real possibility that this might happen again next year and the year after and the year after.

If that's that case, let's be planning now, today, for how we're going to invest that money so that, in fact, not only will Albertans have their concerns addressed about the immediate infrastructure needs, which we all recognize and which are being addressed right now, but let's have a plan for what to do when that's done. Quite frankly, the way that spending is taking place right now, there may not be any need for further spending of that magnitude a year or two years down the road.

That's what I've been trying to say all along: let's make a plan not just for today, not just for this surplus but for the ones that are almost sure to come.

An Hon. Member: How many speakers to come?

Mr. R. Miller: Lots. Twenty or 30 speakers. I'll adjourn debate in three minutes if the members would like, but I'm going to take my full 20 minutes.

The Alberta Liberal policy – it's kind of funny – is a surplus policy. I didn't mention it at the press conference after the minister gave her second-quarter update today because I thought I had mentioned it enough times already, and the media was well aware of what it was. In fact, the minister even said: the opposition has a plan, and I'm sure he'll tell you about it in a few minutes. I chose not to because I've talked about it and talked about it and talked about it. Sure enough, afterwards one of the media said to me: "Well, I thought you guys had a plan. How come you didn't talk about it?" So I guess I'll take a minute to talk about it.

Our surplus plan would allocate 35 per cent of any budget surplus to the heritage savings trust fund. This year alone under our plan that would be $3 billion that would have gone into the heritage savings trust fund. Three billion dollars would have gone into a postsecondary endowment fund. I'll give the government credit: they've decided to add another $500 million to their fund. It started off at $250 million. You might recall during the budget debate in the spring and during debate on Bill 1 in the spring that I actually said that I thought that the floor, the base level of that fund should be set at $3 billion as opposed to capping it at $3 billion. In fact, surprisingly enough, under our policy that's where it turns out it would be today.

Twenty-five per cent of all surplus would go to address the infrastructure deficit, which this year would have been $2.2 billion. Interestingly enough, last year during the election we talked about that total value being somewhere in the order of $7 billion, and earlier in the year the infrastructure minister conceded that, in fact, it was $7.2 billion. More recently I was at a function where he spoke, and the minister of infrastructure said that in reality that infrastructure debt is more likely $10 billion and perhaps even $12 billion and that if we don't address it quickly, it could be $14 billion or even bigger. So, clearly, there's a need to be addressing that, and under our plan it would have been addressed.

The remaining 5 per cent of any surplus would have been allocated to an endowment fund that would address the humanities, the social sciences, and the arts. This year alone that would have been nearly $500 million, or half a billion dollars.

So, in fact, the Alberta Liberal opposition does have a concrete plan that's been well spelled out for some time now as to how these surplus dollars would be addressed. I'm not going to say that it's the perfect plan. It's a very good plan, I believe. There are other plans out there. Certainly, you can look at Norway and their petroleum fund. You can look at Alaska and their permanent fund. You can look at some of the very, very good work that's been done by the Canada West Foundation this year, where they also espouse the idea of resource revenue plans, and their particular plan is 50-50.

I'm so disappointed that I've run out of time, Mr. Speaker, but I look forward to continuing debate in committee. At this time I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that the House adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Thursday, November 17, 2005 1:30 p.m.
Date: 05/11/17
[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon and welcome.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

head: Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sitting in your Speaker's gallery today are two very special guests, Mr. Rocky Hanson and his wife, Cathy Hanson, from Edmonton-Mill Creek. They are both very well known for their enormous volunteer contributions at Jackson Heights school, on the Burnewood community league executive, and for their work with several other benevolent groups.

Today, however, I'm particularly proud to salute Mr. Rocky Hanson for his very heroic efforts in assisting several seniors to escape to safety as a life-threatening fire ripped through the Veterans Villa seniors complex only a few days ago. Mr. Speaker, one person died in that fire. Many others were injured. But I shudder to think what might have happened if Rocky Hanson and fellow hero, Brad Smith, hadn't been there to rescue so many vulnerable seniors.

In this international Year of the Veteran, as we look back at the many sacrifices of all of our veterans, I'm humbled to salute a contemporary hero, Mr. Rocky Hanson. Rocky and Cathy and their family have since gone so far as to even open up their home for the victims of the fire. Please join me as I ask them to rise, and let's salute Rocky Hanson and his wife, Cathy.

Thank you.

head: Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a number of visitors from the CFB Edmonton official language group. I believe they are seated in the members' gallery. I'd like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour today to introduce two incredibly vibrant and intelligent classes from Woodbridge Farms school. The 50 students are accompanied today by two teachers, a teacher assistant, and seven parent helpers. I am going to welcome on your behalf teachers Sheila Busch and Sheryl Ackerman, teacher aide Sushila Nakhwa, parent helpers Wanda Westwood, Pat Turner, Sarah Gaymer, Julie Porter-Anderson, Vanore Voaklander, Mr. Fraser Gerrie, Tara Barnes, and all the students. If they would please rise, we would give them a thunderous welcome to the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Lougheed: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise to introduce to you and to the members assembled a grade 6 class from Fultonvale school. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Karin Bittner, and also parents and helpers Ms Sylvia Flannigan, Mrs. Shelley Chalifoux, Mr. Bruce Paterson, Mrs. Carolyn Levey, Mrs. Georgina Dreger, and Mrs. Sue Perry. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly the new executive director of the Northern Alberta Development Council, Mr. Dan Dibbelt. Dan has a long and varied background in municipal and provincial governments as well as economic development that includes work with cities, towns, and rural municipalities throughout the Peace region. His experience in marketing, communities, and freelance journalism will be greatly beneficial to the valuable work that the NADC undertakes. As chair of the NADC I look forward to the energy that Mr. Dibbelt brings with him to his new office. Dan Dibbelt is seated in the members' gallery this afternoon, and I'd ask him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly nine students from the Faculty of Law at the University of Alberta who are enrolled in a course on legislative process and legislative planning taught by Mr. Rob Reynolds, our Senior Parliamentary Counsel, and Mr. Peter Pagano, our Chief Legislative Counsel. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly visitors from the Paul Band First Nation school, a school in a very progressive aboriginal community. I believe they are in the members' gallery. There are eight students, two teachers, Mr. Paul Jespersen and Mr. Reg Kastelan, and their bus driver, Mr. Billy Adams. I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce a special guest in the public gallery. He's a young man who just graduated from Strathcona high school, a high school I attended just a few years ago. He's recently returned from a Rotary exchange in Finland. He's a good athlete, an all-round great kid. He also happens to be the son of the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. His name is Chris Miller, and I'd ask him to stand and receive our warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and members of the Assembly Ireen Slater, the acting president of SUN, very active in helping the constituency of St. Albert in a recent Visions workshop on seniors and health. She's just arrived, and I wish her to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly the newly minted president of my constituency association, Jennifer Krauskopf. Jennifer is one of the thousands of Albertans who volunteer their time to advance the political process, and it's safe to say that none of us would be here today without their help. I would ask Jennifer to please rise and accept the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My introduction today is Ron and Lynda Jonson, and I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly both of them. Lynda and Ron are tireless advocates for seniors' issues and improving conditions in Alberta's long-term care facilities. Lynda is a former registered nurse and Ron a retired engineer, both living in Hinton. Together they helped form the group Seniors I Care. Last year they visited over 100 long-term care facilities in this province and collected nearly 5,000 signatures from Albertans seeking better long-term care. I would now ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House eight student leaders from the University of Alberta Students' Union. They are here today to remind the government of its commitment to an affordable and quality postsecondary education system that's accessible to all Albertans.

1:40

Mr. Speaker, some of the guests are seated in the public gallery and some may be on the other side in the members' gallery. I would now ask them to rise as I call their names and ask members to hold their applause until all of them are on their feet: Sam Power, vice-president external; Graham Lettner, president; Mat Johnson, vice-president academic; Jason Tobias, vice-president operations and finance; Justin Kehoe, vice-president student life; Catrin Berghoff, arts councillor; Kyle Kawanami, law councillor; and Prem Erubetina, engineering councillor. Please give them a warm welcome.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, is Richard Hopkinson. Richard is a first-year student in the social work program at Grant MacEwan College. He has been assisting with casework in our Edmonton-Strathcona constituency since September. He has been of great assistance to us, and we appreciate his hard work for my constituents in Edmonton-Strathcona. I now ask Richard to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head:

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care Utilization

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year the Premier drew the ire of Albertans when he claimed that there was a major problem with undeserving recipients getting AISH payments. Now, just yesterday in this Assembly the Premier stated to the leader of the third party that he was feigning sickness and then said, "That is precisely what puts pressure on the health care system." To the Premier: can the Premier tell this Assembly the basis for his position that Albertans feigning sickness are putting pressure on the health care system? Does he have examples?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, I find it strange, to say the least, that the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition would allude to what the leader of the third party said to try to make a point. This is like Pinocchio. The point is being stretched beyond all reasonable limits.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Again to the Premier: does the Premier hold the position that Albertans feigning sickness are putting pressure on Alberta's health care system?

Mr. Klein: No. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the Blues in front of me because what I said was that, first of all, the hon. leader of the third party opposition said that he is sick.

Mr. Mason: Of your answers.

Mr. Klein: He is sick of our answers.

I said that if he is really sick, then we'll call an ambulance for him, and he will be treated under the public health system, but if he is feigning sickness, then that is one of the problems that we face with our health care system, people who are not sick attending emergency wards. If he is truly sick, we'll call an ambulance for him.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Well, given that the Premier just said that he thinks one of the problems in Alberta's health care system is people feigning sickness, does he have examples? Can he tell us the basis for that position?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, again he is stretching, stretching, stretching, and it indicates to me that they have nothing else to criticize.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Continuing Care Funding

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again my question is to the Premier. Given that people across this province are sitting right now in short-staffed, substandard long-term care facilities, how did this government decide that everything from a zoo to a movie is worth funding this fall but not extra staff in long-term care facilities?

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, it's too bad that the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition didn't stay around at the AAMD and C conference today, where we made an announcement relative to $140 million, that hopefully they'll support, being spent for seniors and affordable housing around the province, primarily in the rural areas.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the Premier can tell us how much of that $140 million is going to extra staff now to support people in long-term care facilities.

Mr. Klein: Mr. Speaker, the question is specific to the departments of health and seniors, so I'll have the appropriate ministers respond.

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, the recommendations from the task force came forward, were collaborated on, and they did in fact identify staffing as an issue. Presently through the standing policy committee the report that's been finalized by our members for Lacombe-Ponoka and Calgary-Foothills – we also had input from the Member for Lethbridge-East, who served on the committee. We have taken that report and taken a very serious look at what any interim implementation costs would be for staff. I think, if the hon. member listens for a few more days, in a very few weeks, hopefully before Christmas, we'll have some very good news about the staffing and some of the other recommendations that were, in fact, part of that report.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. These are urgent, urgent human issues.

To the Minister of Health and Wellness: why did this government choose in its recent spending spree not to allocate funding for front-line staff in continuing care given that the Auditor General and the MLA task force and friends and family and staff and industry all recommended it? Why are they waiting?

Ms Evans: Relative to the unbudgeted surplus, as the hon. member opposite knows, there are definite rules surrounding how we expend that. In terms of getting this report . . . [interjections] Mr. Speaker, maybe they're not interested in the answer. Maybe they're not interested. The answer, in fact, is that we have to take a look at it. It's very responsible to come forward. We asked for what the regional health authorities currently have in staffing. We upped the staffing from 3.1 hourly support for long-term care to 3.4 hourly support for long-term care this year. In many facilities where that was not available, we have been looking at accelerating our training for staffing. If the hon. members opposite will be patient for a few more days, I'm sure that we'll be able to illustrate to Albertans that our number one priority is looking after the long-term care and following through with the great work that was done in assessing needs.

One more point, Mr. Speaker. The Broda report talked about the shift to keeping people in their homes. We also are looking very seriously at how we support home care to make sure that that is compliant with the more recent trend to keeping people in their homes.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and certainly along the same lines. As has been mentioned, I was a member of that task force. This summer I heard from the people in continuing care and their families about the loss of care, dignity, and respect in our continuing care facilities. The Auditor General pointed out those same deficiencies. As has been mentioned by the Minister of Health and Wellness, there were hours changed. Since last spring I think it's been 1.9 to 3.4, which were being put forward in stages. My question to the Minister of Health and Wellness would be: what stage are we at right now, and has there been an evaluation on those hours?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, in most of the regional health authorities they have been able to comply with a move to 3.4 hours per patient. There are, however, some places where that staffing was not available or some other reason that the organization of the facility, in the view of the regional health authority, had not met that requirement. They've all assured me that by January 1, 2006, they will in the current budget year with the current budget dollars meet and comply with that.

Relative to further additions for staffing that might be implicit with the long-term continuing care report done by the MLAs, as I say: more news to come.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you for that answer. It pretty much covers my second question. I really do need to know when we are going to get those dollars because we need them now.

I'll jump to my third question. What is the timeline for that short-term strategy and the long-term strategy given the division between housing and care?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I think the questions are very good because it does profile what has to be done and it does profile the work that we have been doing in government. When a report was done by the MLAs, when it went out for more consultation in September, we had yet to put it through the process of standing policy committee, also to cabinet, caucus, and Treasury Board. Recognizing the need to improve on the hourly supports for staff and also to try and work to make sure that we've got the proper staff trained, when we make an announcement, I think it will be very clear that we have an interim strategy, and the new budget year will see yet more progress being made to fulfill the obligations of all 45 recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Securities Commission

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On March 10, 2004, the Alberta Securities Commission's director of enforcement signed an order directing his staff to investigate insider trading allegations against an unnamed public company. On the same day the director of enforcement bought shares in the very same company. Three and a half months later, on June 21, 2004, the director of enforcement sold all of his shares, realizing a significant gain. Martha Stewart went to jail for less. My question is to the Minister of Finance. Given the Auditor General's finding that the director of enforcement was in a conflict of interest in transacting shares in a company that he was responsible for investigating, why is the Minister of Finance allowing the ASC to cover up this corruption?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, to suggest that there is a cover-up is quite a stretch because the Auditor General on pages 29, 30, and 31 covers all of this issue and lays it out very clearly. That's why, probably, the hon. member knows about it.

What I can tell you is that the Alberta Securities Commission, upon learning of this, had a complete investigation of it. It was determined that it was inadvertent, that the shares were bought through a broker. What the Auditor General has done in his report is put in recommendations that will ensure as much as possible that this doesn't happen again.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you have to understand that under investigations of this type you don't put a list on the wall and say: these companies are under investigation. You rely on a process, that when the case comes in, these are handled very confidentially because they are investigations, and you don't harm a company through an investigative process. You deal with it if you find that there is an issue with that company. So I ask the hon. member to understand that.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would ask the minister: what did the director of enforcement know about this company when he bought shares in it, and has she bothered to ask that question?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, frankly, it's outlined here very clearly what happened. The director of enforcement through his broker bought and sold shares in a company. It was found that this company was under investigation. The Auditor General clearly lays out in the report all of the process that happened. What the Auditor General is saying is: improve that process to ensure that when any person in ASC purchases shares, there is a methodology that as much as possible ensures that the shares purchased, which must be disclosed within 10 days of purchase, are not in a company that is under investigation. You cannot expect a person to know that unless you have that process tightened up. That's what the Auditor General recommended, and that's what the Alberta Securities Commission is doing.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In refusing to take action to enforce the Auditor General's recommendations to take action against the ASC and force them to deal with the director of enforcement in this matter, what is the minister covering up, and who is she protecting?

Mrs. McClellan: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I'm protecting no one. Let me point out to you that the Auditor General found this breach because it was well documented in the Alberta Security Commission's files, which he had complete access to. That does not suggest to me any cover-up. Then the chairman of the commission met with the Auditor General. They discussed timelines and how to put processes in place as recommended by the Auditor General, and it was agreed on what those would be. I asked if the chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission had requested a meeting with the Auditor General. The answer to that was no. The chairman of the commission phoned the Auditor General and asked him if he had an issue, and he said that he was simply responding to calls that he was getting, because he was away when the report was released.

You know, I'm struggling with this. The Auditor General put out a report, in three pages clearly outlined all of this, outlined the procedure. The Alberta Securities Commission have agreed with the recommendations of the Auditor General, have investigated it thoroughly. Mr. Speaker, this is the way this should be dealt with.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Flood Disaster Relief

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Across the province and in my constituency people are still drying out after the worst flooding in recent memory. People's lives and homes were severely affected by this flooding, and some are still trying to recover from the damage that their homes and businesses suffered in June. My question is to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs. How much longer will these people have to wait to receive some badly needed dollars for their badly needed repairs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the outset let me say that nothing that I could possibly say would diminish in any way the tremendous loss, both financial and personal, that literally thousands of Albertans experienced during the flooding that we had this spring.

That being said, I have to note that this disaster recovery program is the largest such program that this province has ever experienced. In fact, at 11,000 applications, it exceeds the total sum of all previous programs in the last 10 years, so it has been a huge undertaking to administer and deal with all of the claims from this program.

Mr. Speaker, at this point nearly 90 per cent of all files have been completed and cheques issued. There are some 10 per cent that have not been completed, most of those due to a need for some further information, either information from insurance companies or invoices. I can assure the hon. member that for anyone who has all of the necessary paperwork in place on those files, we will be doing the very, very best that we can to have those cheques issued immediately.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what am I supposed to tell the person who calls me up and tells me that they only received a few thousand dollars from the program when their damage totals in the tens of thousands of dollars? Is it just a case of tough luck?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, it's very important that Albertans and members of this House understand that the disaster recovery program is not an insurance program. It's a program that is designed to assist Albertans who have suffered significant loss to restore their lives as best as possible to pre-flood conditions. The program, however, is a regulated program that deals with compensation to individuals based upon what is deemed to be reasonable. It doesn't cover losses for items that would be deemed either unnecessary for day-to-day living or considered luxury items.

What I can tell members, Mr. Speaker, is that our staff is working diligently to ensure that every applicant to this program receives 100 per cent of the compensation that they're entitled to under this program.

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since this flooding has occurred twice in the last 10 years, what is the government doing to help Albertans avoid this type of flooding damage in the future?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that's the key to this entire situation. We have programs in place both provincially and federally to deal with floods and such events after the fact. We don't have programs in place to deal with the mitigation to prevent them from happening in the first place. I'm very pleased to say that Municipal Affairs is participating in a Flood Risk Management Committee, which is examining ways of preventing future large-scale flood damage in the province. I understand the committee will be looking at a number of things such as flood forecasting and adopting measures that curtail development in flood-prone areas. The Member for Highwood is leading the committee, and we look forward to seeing his report early next year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Legal Aid

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Access to justice is a fundamental right for all people, including the poor. It is the province's responsibility to properly administer and fund a legal aid system for poor defendants. This involves allowing a person with low income or no income to choose a lawyer who they feel would best represent their interests, not who the government chooses for them. My question is for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Would the minister explain why the government is moving toward an in-house system in which the government has complete and full control over both sides, the prosecution and the defence, thus undermining the independence of the legal profession?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When I became Minister of Justice and Attorney General about a year ago, I had occasion to meet with the chair of the Legal Aid Society, and the first words out of his mouth were: Mr. Minister, I want to tell you how excellent things are. The legal aid system in Alberta, if not the best in Canada, is certainly among the best. It is, admittedly, like all legal aid systems across Canada in the last year of funding relating to the federal government, and we're working with them to ensure that it is ongoing and that the term is for five years and that the amount of coverage is expanded.

Mr. Speaker, we have nothing to be ashamed about. In fact, we should be very proud of the legal aid system that we have because it provides the best access for the people in need to legal services in Canada.

Dr. B. Miller: To the same minister: is this government changing the rules to exclude lawyers in private practice, even those who would serve pro bono for poor people?

Mr. Stevens: The concept of pro bono, Mr. Speaker, is an individual obligation on the part of any lawyer. It simply means that what you do is provide services to people who have need of legal services without charging for them, and of course that's an individual obligation. It has nothing to do with the government. It's something that lawyers do. It is something that the Law Society of Alberta encourages their members to do, and it is something that this minister encourages lawyers to do.

Dr. B. Miller: Given that an in-house public defender system, that we see elsewhere, especially south of the border, limits access to justice for the poor, what assurances do we have that difficult, hard-to-handle cases will not be simply just swept aside?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, there are in-house legal aid systems in Canada, particularly in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, two of our sister prairie provinces. I can tell this hon. member that if you go to those particular provinces and ask the justice minister, as I have, in those particular provinces, "Do those particular programs work well?" the answer will be, "Yes, they work very well."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Contaminated Sites Cleanup in Calgary

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that our Calgary-Fort constituency covers the largest industrial area in Calgary and that our living environment – the air we breathe, the water we drink, and the ground we live on – is of critical importance to our daily living, my questions today are to the Minister of Environment. Given that the cleanup in Lynnview Ridge in my constituency has not been started, dragging on too long, missing too many construction seasons, can the minister update us on his action for this speedy cleanup?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First and foremost, as the hon. member has mentioned on behalf of his citizens, this has been quite a long process, but I am very pleased to report to this Assembly that there has been an agreement that has been reached, in place in terms of the cleanup for Lynnview Ridge and all of its residents, who are going to benefit from this.

Since day one our primary concern as Ministry of Environment is, of course, the safety and protection of residents but also with the protection of the environment because it is the resident's home that we have to assure based on laws that we approved in this very Assembly, that members have approved.

I want to say that the work is going on, and I also want to say that the work is commencing, and I will report back to the House on the good work that is being done to restore the communities back to the way it should be based on what it was before this terrible event took place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. Given that another situation in the southeast corner of the community of Ogden, where a seepage of cleaning fluid from the big rail yard shop flowed into underground water, can the minister update us on the cleanup there?

Mr. Boutilier: The hon. member lives in an area where, of course, environmental protection has clearly impacted many of the constituents that he represents. My ministry is working closely with the Calgary health region and also ensuring that CP Rail protects the health of its residents.

We are taking concrete action, to the hon. member, relative to this cleanup. They are upgrading a barrier to prevent any further contamination, Mr. Speaker. Also, the indoor air quality of all the homes and other potentially affected buildings is continuously being tested by the ministry officials. I can assure the members of this Assembly that those responsible are being held to account for a complete and full cleanup of the contamination that took place and due to the very strong laws that this very Assembly and its members have approved in the past in protecting the environment here and the citizens we represent.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is also to the same minister. Given that yet another situation in the northeast corner of my riding, where an oil recycling plant was completely demolished by a tragic and devastating fire, can the minister update us on this site cleanup?

Mr. Boutilier: Once again to the member, I can assure him and members of this Assembly that Hub Oil, under the strong laws that we have in place, has been required in terms of a plan and executing that plan to the standards that we have of course set up in this very Assembly – that is being carried out. I can assure the member and the members of this Assembly that we will, again, hold to account to remediate and get back to the full order of what citizens enjoyed well before this, again, ecological disaster took place as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Restructuring and Government Efficiency

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Order in Council 506, dated November 2, 2005, and referencing the Government Organization Act, removed the cross-ministry responsibility for the human resources services program from the Ministry of Restructuring and Government Efficiency and transferred it back to 19 out of the other 22 ministries. So it would appear that RAGE has even less work to do now. My questions are all to the hon. Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency. Can the minister explain why this particular responsibility was taken away from his department?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, we have human resource people right across government within all the ministries. We had done a review of how they were all looked after. There were managers in each one of those ministries, and we also had people in those ministries that were answering to us, and we felt that it was just a lot more efficient to leave those people in the ministries answering to the managers that were there.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So can the minister tell us, then, if RAGE is still responsible for these same services in the three remaining ministries: Aboriginal Affairs, Gaming, and International and Intergovernmental Relations?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, we do still have some HR people, and we still do help any ministries we need and allow these people to work in any ministries.

Mr. Elsalhy: Okay. Given that even the Auditor General is unsure of what RAGE actually does anymore, can the minister explain to this House and to all Albertans exactly what programs or deliverables RAGE is engaged in right now to make this government more efficient? I'm assuming that this is his mandate.

Mr. R. Miller: SuperNet is gone.

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I keep hearing things about SuperNet, and whenever I hear that word, I have to say: that's one of the best initiatives this government ever brought in to help in rural development.

We have 1,300 employees in our ministry, and we do a number of cross-government initiatives throughout this government. It's not a flashy, sexy, fancy ministry. We do everything behind the scenes to make sure that all the mail is delivered, that all the computers are working. We have 27,000 desktop computers that we have to look after, and that's just one of a number of things. We do have initiatives that we're working very hard on today. We've got an ICT initiative that's coming out that will form one system right across government, that will save this government all kinds of efficiencies, and we also have a regulatory review process that's going to be coming forward shortly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Waste Management Strategy

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For many years, over 20 to be precise, Vulcan county council has looked at, investigated, and continues to explore the concept of incinerating our garbage to cogenerate power, and I have a couple of questions that I'd like to ask the Minister of Environment. The first one to the minister is this. After a recent trip by our colleague from Whitecourt-Ste. Anne to investigate different methods of disposing garbage, would the minister be able to inform us how your provincial waste management strategy is progressing after this recent tour?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Boutilier: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to say to the members of this Assembly that I look forward, with the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, to reporting back to this House.

Alberta has been and remains a leader when it comes to recycling programs, be it in terms of recycling tires, regarding bottles, used oil, and electronic waste, but we can do better because I believe that's an attitude that all Albertans and members of this Assembly have when it comes to protecting the environment. I was very pleased, though, that the Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne and a delegation of officials travelled to Scandinavia and to parts of Europe to learn what things are working well that we can incorporate into our strategy here pertaining to incineration as well as other things.

Let me conclude by simply saying this. Relative to the issue of garbage and waste, I believe that Albertans clearly have a view regarding this important resource, that it's simply too good to waste.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A semipuffball to the minister: will our progressive county councils who wish to consider alternate methods possibly be able to incinerate our garbage in the future rather than burying it under prime real estate and good, agriculturally productive land?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I believe that North Americans, if you look at the issue of incinerating garbage – first of all, it is a terrible admission in terms of North Americans that North Americans I believe are the most wasteful people on this planet. Part of that, if you examine the situation, is this: what is being done regarding landfill is that it's simply buried. That's not good enough for Albertans. We, of course, are formulating regional landfills in terms of less landfills. It is my hope and prayer that someday there will no longer be any landfills in this province.

I want to say that incineration is just one of a variety of efforts that we need to seriously look at from a technological perspective for ensuring and protecting our environment today and well into the future. Let me assure you, to many of us in here whose our garbage ends up in a landfill, hold onto your hat because ultimately each and every one of us is going to have to have a greater responsibility in terms of having less waste, number one, recycling more, and at the end of the day no landfills because of the fact that other options will be available for protecting Alberta's environment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. From a rural development point of view, Mr. Minister, is it feasible that smaller, more numerous cogeneration incineration sites will be more advantageous than large central ones?

Mr. Boutilier: As the technology continues to develop, I think that is so critical. The opportunities both economic and environmental, I think, are absolutely at the cusp in terms of what we will be able to achieve. Not only will this province be the energy capital of Canada. I am convinced that with the initiatives this government is taking, we can be the environmental capital of this country as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Water Quality in Ellerslie Elementary School

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. School water quality is not something parents should have to worry about when they send their children off to school. In my constituency Ellerslie elementary school has had its water trucked in for decades. When the water truck is late, there is no water for the children. My question is to the Minister of Education. Why is the minister allowing some Alberta children to have to wait for water in their school?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I haven't been made aware of this particular issue, but it sounds like the member does have something that is worthy of pursuing. I'd be happy to learn more about it. We do require school boards under section 45(8) to provide a safe and caring environment for their students, and I think this issue would fit right within that. So we should find out from the school board if they're aware of it and what they are doing as well.

Mr. Agnihotri: I think I already discussed that with them.

My question to you again: will this minister investigate the situation in that school to ensure that clean water, clean tap water, is available as a Christmas present for them?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's been a long time since I played Santa, but I will tell you this: I will have someone look into this immediately. I can assure the member of that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you. To the same minister: given that the government funds water wells for schools overseas, when will this minister get city water to this Edmonton school?

Mr. Zwozdesky: I think the process would require the principal to inform the superintendent and the superintendent to inform the board, if necessary, and then ensure that some process is put in place. Quite frankly, I'm surprised that this hasn't already happened, but if it hasn't, I will certainly find out why not, and then we'll get some action moving.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

First-contract Labour Arbitration

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This fall Albertans witnessed a bitter and unnecessary strike at Lakeside Packers. The Lakeside strike was settled in spite of – and I stress: in spite of – Alberta's weak labour laws and only because of the resolve of the union and the fact that it was becoming a public relations disaster for Tyson Foods. My question is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. It should be self-evident that first-contract arbitration is a necessity. My question is simply this: why are we not bringing in first-contract arbitration in this fall sitting?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First of all, before I answer the question, I'd like to table five copies of a report on collective agreements settled in Alberta.

The Speaker: There's an appropriate time in the Routine to do that, so just answer the question.

2:20

Mr. Cardinal: Okay. In relation to the question itself, Mr. Speaker, yes.

An Hon. Member: It's his first day.

Mr. Cardinal: Just the other day, in fact, two days . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Martin: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is one of the more interesting question periods I've had. I'd like to continue because the minister has said in the past that he needs time to study this. It's a lot of time to study first-contract arbitration. I have in front of me copies from eight different jurisdictions about first-contract arbitration. My question to the minister is simply this: why is the minister still claiming that he doesn't have enough information to act on first-contract arbitration? I will table it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to indicate that in relation to labour relations in Alberta – and this is very, very important – with the very hot economy out there, thousands of jobs, labour relations in Alberta are probably the best in North America – the best labour relations – and we have proof of that. Ninety-nine point nine per cent of the last two fiscal years the collective agreements were settled in Alberta without any labour interruption.

Mr. Martin: Mr. Speaker, tell that to the people that were on the picket line at Lakeside/Tyson. Tell it to the Finning people and all the other people that are on strike in this province. My question is simply this to the minister: when there are eight jurisdictions that have first-contract arbitration, why is this minister not moving so we do not have another Tyson? It should be done immediately, in this session.

Mr. Cardinal: Mr. Speaker, to start with, the labour dispute was not with our government. The labour dispute was with private industry and a union. There are over 1,300 collective agreements; 750 of them are private company/labour agreements, and most of them have been settled.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Teachers' Unfunded Pension Liability

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Speaking of collective agreements, many teachers in my constituency continue to raise concerns about the unfunded liability in the teachers' pension plan. While this liability is of concern to all currently active teachers, it is particularly a concern to those teachers who began their careers after '92-93. My question is to the Minister of Education. What are you doing to address the teachers' unfunded pension liability, that has grown to over $6 billion?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think the short answer is that we as a government are honouring our commitment to an agreement that was signed in 1992 whereby the government of Alberta assumed two-thirds of the unfunded liability and teachers, the other partner, assumed the other third. Prior to 1992 that particular pension fund that's being referred to, unfortunately, was underfunded by both sponsors. It was underfunded by the teachers; it was underfunded by the government. I have heard about this issue, and I hope that within the next several months I'll be able to visit it again and see if there is any room to reopen some chats or negotiations or whatever it might be.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that about a year or two ago we almost had a 10-year contract signed with the ATA if we took over the debt, have there been any new discussions around government assuming responsibility for the entire amount of this unfunded liability?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's true that an offer, albeit a verbal one, had been made in 2004 by my predecessor to both the Alberta Teachers' Association, the ATA, and to the Alberta School Boards Association, ASBA. Now, that did call for a 10-year labour peace framework, but unfortunately neither ASBA or ATA or the minister of the day were able to consummate, if you will, that offer into an actual deal. However, it's important also to note that in the '02-03 year, hon. member, this government did pay the entire amount of the teachers' portion, which was about $60 million. That was done on a one-time basis.

It's unfortunate, I think, that the '04 agreement wasn't offered to all the teachers to actually vote on because what teachers out there are telling me is that they may well have gone for it. Now, I understand that there were some downsides to it – those have been expressed – but, still, overall it was a pretty generous offer by this government because it amounted to about $1.9 billion.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Rev. Abbott: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess, again, given that Alberta's Commission on Learning has recommended provincial bargaining, will the minister consider either buying down the unfunded portion that the teachers are responsible for or perhaps buying out one of more years to try to keep things moving along here?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are probably three options that would need to be considered should this come back onto the government's radar screen. One would be to do nothing and leave it the way it sits because there is an agreement in place. The second would be to either take over the teachers' portion totally, which would impact us in a very significant way, to the tune of almost $2 billion dollars, and the third might be to look at some creative option in the middle of that, which might well be a possible – and I stress the word "possible" – consideration of a partial buy-down or a partial buyout or perhaps a one-time buy-in.

It's a very sensitive issue out there, Mr. Speaker, and I want to just say that this is beginning to impact young people wanting to come into the teaching profession, so we have to deal with this sensitively. We will open up some discussions at the appropriate time. Unfortunately, I can't do that right now.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Casino Construction

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since the provincial government lifted the moratorium on casinos in 2002, there's been a building boom in casino construction that rivals anything going on in Fort McMurray. Alberta's 17th casino opens in Calgary next week, and if all of the casinos that have been approved or are close to being approved are built, Alberta will shortly have 26 casinos, one of the highest number of any jurisdiction in North America. In keeping with this government's endemic lack of foresight, this explosion of legalized gambling is going ahead without planning or thought to the future. My question is for the Minister of Gaming. Does the minister have any limit in mind on the number of casinos that will be allowed in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Graydon: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's true; there is a wonderful new casino opening in Calgary next week and others that are under construction. The board of the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission has an eight-step process. It's a very detailed process. When they open up a region for applications, people interested in building a new casino survey the neighbourhood and the region, if you will. They consult with existing casino operators in the area to see that they're not stealing from one casino, basically, to fund another one. They check with the charities. There's no point in having too many casinos and having a charity work twice as hard and make half as much money. So it's a very detailed process, and when approval is given, you can rest assured that the board feels that there is a market there and that it's not going to influence the existing casinos.

Mr. Tougas: I'll ask the same question, Mr. Speaker. Is there any maximum number of casinos that you have in mind for Alberta?

Mr. Graydon: There's no number, Mr. Speaker, but I would anticipate that the board will be moving cautiously along now with any new applications. I'm not sure that there are any in the process at the moment, but they will wait and see the influence that the ones that are already approved have on the market, if you will. If they deem that there's no room for any more, there won't be any more.

Mr. Tougas: Will the minister consider reinstating the moratorium on casino construction and expansion in Alberta?

Mr. Graydon: No. It's market driven, Mr. Speaker. As I said, we survey the market and the municipality very carefully to make sure that it's market driven. We do maintain our cap of 6,000 video lottery terminals in the province, and we've reduced the number of locations where those VLTs are available by 14 per cent in the last year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Anthony Henday Ring Road

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was pleased to see that a new portion of Edmonton's ring road was opened recently on the south side of Edmonton. However, my constituents in northwest Edmonton are wondering when they will be given the same consideration. My question is to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation. Mr. Minister, when will we see the north section of the Anthony Henday ring road?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We recently opened six kilometres of the southwest portion of the Anthony Henday, which is an absolute excellent bonus to the citizens of Edmonton.

2:30

Mr. Speaker, we are also presently working on a very small section of the northwest leg of the ring road, and the rationale behind that is that it will connect up with the St. Albert bypass, which will help the citizens of St. Albert as well as the citizens of Edmonton. We anticipate that this will be done in the fall of 2006.

Mr. Speaker, when it comes to the whole Edmonton ring road, we're currently on schedule and are anticipating that it will be done by 2011, all things being equal. We are certainly optimistic that we will be able to meet that target.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. My first supplemental to the same minister: in completing the north section of the Anthony Henday freeway, is the minister considering a P3 modality of financing?

Dr. Oberg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The very short answer to this is yes. When you take a look at the ring road and the extensive amount of dollars that are available for it and that are to be used for the funding of that road, you're probably looking at somewhere in the $500 million to $700 million range. For us to essentially sterilize those dollars within one or two years would be very, very difficult.

Mr. Speaker, as a P3 we would be able to extend out the payments over a period of time as we have done on the southeast portion of the Anthony Henday. Obviously, every P3 goes through an extensive business case. It goes through an extensive assessment to ensure that taxpayers are getting the best benefit of the dollars. Each P3, regardless of the project, still has to go through that particular process.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. My last supplemental to the same minister: can Edmontonians, then, be assured that this process will be faster and cheaper?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Yeah. Mr. Speaker, one of the great things about a P3 is that we're able to guarantee when it will be done. On the southeast portion of the Anthony Henday, for example, I can tell the Assembly and the people of Edmonton that it will be finished in October of 2007. The reason I can say that is because on November 1 of 2007 the contractors will be fined a million dollars. On December 1 of 2007 it will be another million dollars and will continue on with a million dollar fine per month until it is done. So it's an excellent way to get projects done on time, on budget, and hopefully as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: Hon. members, today in a 50-minute question period we had 84 questions and answers, which was quite good.

I will call on the first member to participate today, but might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly three gentlemen in our members' gallery. The first gentleman is from Winnipeg and is, in fact, the president of the Winnipeg firefighters' association. The second gentleman, from Edmonton, is the president of the Edmonton firefighters' association, and the third gentleman is the VP of the Edmonton firefighters' association. These three gentlemen have been instrumental and tireless advocates on behalf of firefighters' issues not just this year but over the last number of years and not only in Alberta but, in fact, because a representative from Manitoba is here, right across the country.

It's my pleasure to introduce Alex Forrest, Ken Block, and Greg Holubowich, who are in our gallery. I'd ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe my guests are here, students from Windsor Park school accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Maureen Irvine, and parents Mrs. Lynn Parish and Ms Cathy McPhalen. Windsor Park is a long-established school in my constituency which routinely achieves remarkable academic results. It's absolutely one of the top schools in the province. If they are here, if that's the school from Windsor Park, please rise and receive the warm welcome from all members.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mrs. McClellan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great honour on behalf of the Premier to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of grade 10 students who are here from the Clear Water Academy in Calgary. Clear Water Academy is an independent Catholic school located in the Premier's riding and is one of the province's top private schools. We have students visiting us; we have chaperones and teachers. They're here to learn about our legislative process and to tour our beautiful winter Legislature Grounds. I would like them to stand and would ask all members to give them a very warm welcome to our Legislature.

The Speaker: I mentioned that we had a 50-minute question period in this Assembly. Next year a certain member in this Assembly will surround herself with that number, but it's not at that point. It is her birthday today, and she advises me that she would never, ever reach that number which I can't mention. But happy birthday to the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

head: Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Centennial Celebrations in Bonnyville

Mr. Ducharme: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on an immensely positive note to commend the many volunteers, participants, and particularly the municipal governments in my constituency of Bonnyville-Cold Lake. Over the summer and indeed throughout this entire year the many activities celebrating Alberta's 100 years were well received. These celebrations culminated on September 1 with the Party of the Century, where Albertans joined together across the province to celebrate our centennial. The town of Bonnyville in my constituency was one of the 10 host locations, and we stopped at no means to truly make this the biggest 100th birthday party ever.

I would like to take a moment, Mr. Speaker, to share with you and all others the unparalleled co-operation demonstrated by the hosts of the Bonnyville party, who are the town of Bonnyville, the municipal district of Bonnyville, the city of Cold Lake, and the village of Glendon. This party was such a success because of this outstanding display of regional co-operation.

Constituents and visitors alike enjoyed a celebration that included superb local talent, cultural performers, free food and refreshments, and ended with a dazzling display of fireworks. My thanks also go to the many volunteers and community organizations who willingly became involved in this presentation. I know that many worked tirelessly in preparing the grounds, cooking, serving food, performing, or cleaning up.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to extend my personal congratulations to the people of my constituency for this most impressive presentation of Alberta pride.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Federal/Provincial Relations

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In October we observed the 25th anniversary of the national energy program. Once again in some parts of our country the pressure is on to redistribute our resource revenue and wealth. They are promoting it as protection for our environment, and the acronym is Kyoto, which stands for "keep you oppressed through overtaxation."

Albertans believe it is time for this province to stand up against Ottawa's intrusions in many areas before they strike again. Many say that it is time we put forth a resolution to amend our Constitution to protect many areas from the dictatorship of the federal government. An example of how this should have worked recently is if this government had the leadership to push for a constitutional amendment tied to a referendum on marriage last fall. Alberta could have set an example for other provinces by forcing it onto the federal agenda. We should have fought the tide, but this government did not take all legal means within its powers, as it indicated it would. This can and should be done.

Albertans can protect all Canadians by stopping federal intrusions, by opting out of federal government social programs which are provincial responsibilities. Just looking at two federally mandated programs, daycare and the CAIS programs, shows just how bad the management of the federal government is when it intrudes in provincial matters.

The time has come for Alberta to take a leadership role – to act, not talk – to protect the family's rights in all the provinces and territories in Confederation. It is time to show Ottawa that we are serious in a democratic process, unlike Paul Martin's talk, and pass a resolution that in conjunction with the next federal election we have a referendum on the definition of marriage here in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

National Child Day

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today and recognize that November 20 is National Child Day. November 20 was designated National Child Day by the government of Canada to commemorate Canada's signing of the United Nations convention on the rights of the child. This day celebrates children and all things that make them special to us. It's a day to realize how precious youth are and to recognize their importance and contributions. It is a day to celebrate the promise of their future.

2:40

Albertans take the health and safety of children very seriously. It's important that children are given every opportunity to grow up healthy and secure, especially during their developing years from zero to six. This government actively supports families and communities, enabling them to provide nurturing, safe environments for their children. We work with families and communities to break the cycles of family violence, abuse, and poverty. Across this province communities and all levels of government work together to ensure that Alberta's children are safe from harm, are given every opportunity to grow up in safety and to realize their full potential.

I encourage all of you to use National Child Day as an opportunity to make this day special for children in your life.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Minable Oil Sands Strategy

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Three weeks ago the government quietly announced a new strategy for northern Alberta. It's called the minable oil sands strategy, and its goal is simple. MOSS, as the government refers to it, places oil sands mining above all other environmental or social considerations in the Wood Buffalo region. It takes 2,600 square kilometres of boreal forest, wildlife habitat, lakes, and rivers and declares them essentially free of environmental regulation. MOSS relieves oil sands companies of the duty to conduct environmental assessments or to protect wildlife. In their own words, they are shifting from considering the environment and development on equal footing to placing a higher priority onto oil sands exploitation.

MOSS is a dangerous precedent. It allows companies to disturb navigable waters and even allows them to reroute tributaries of the Athabasca River. MOSS would sacrifice decades of environmental regulation and responsibilities for the convenience of several oil sands megaprojects. This gold rush mentality that underlies oil sands development should not give us a licence to make poor choices. With this MOSS proposal the provincial government is absolving its responsibility to steward a huge section of northern Alberta. They seem perfectly willing to sacrifice the environment for energy practices that are clearly destructive and unsustainable.

Oil sands are the single most greenhouse gas intensive form of oil extraction in the world. Three barrels of river water are required for every barrel of bitumen in a time when water shortages are a reality in Alberta. Oil sands use massive amounts of natural gas for their extraction and refinement, the same resources that are now in steady decline. As the president and CEO for Dow Canada said earlier this year about our reserves of natural gas, we're lighting the candles at the dinner table with hundred dollar bills.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Prevention of Bullying

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This week communities across the province are recognizing Bullying Awareness Week. Bullying happens every seven minutes on the playground and every 25 minutes in the classroom. Bullying leaves scars that last a lifetime, making prevention an important government priority.

Last June the government launched a three-year province-wide bullying prevention program. I encourage children to learn how to handle bullying by playing an interactive game at teamheroes.ca. The game teaches children to find their own hero within by introducing them to the S-Team heroes. These heroes are a team of bully-proofing champions that help kids protect themselves and others from bullying. Parents need to learn about bullying, too, and I encourage them to sit down and play this game with their kids.

Parents can also learn more about bullying prevention through a web resource called bullyfreealberta.ca. This website provides useful tips on what to do if your child is a victim of bullying, if your child is the one being the bully, or if your child is a witness to a bullying situation. Schools play an integral role in bullying prevention and are making a difference. This is one of the many reasons Alberta is recognized internationally for its outstanding and caring education system.

However, making bullying history also requires the combined efforts of government, school boards, teachers, students, and communities. Last June more than 6,000 key community partners including schools, libraries, parent link centres, and sports associations received a starter kit to help eliminate or reduce bullying in their community. These kits contain a series of posters, fact sheets, and a comic book based on the online S-Team heroes game for communities with limited Internet access. These materials are also available online at bullyfreealberta.ca.

Mr. Speaker, everybody has a role to play in bullying prevention, and anybody can make a difference.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Foster Parents

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Foster parents are an under-recognized treasure. Theirs is one of the longest-standing parts of Alberta social services. Their service is one reason we have more kids that make it and fewer tragedies, failures, and young offenders. They are not highly paid, and they receive less attention and recognition than many newer and smaller sectors of our social infrastructure.

In the past 20 years we have accredited many kinds of mentors and caregivers: midwives, special-needs assistants, many kinds of therapists and counsellors, paramedics, and practitioners. Some, like midwives, are long-standing professions. Others are relative newcomers. All are receiving a higher profile.

Foster parents bring together the skills of a counsellor, private nurse, tutor, massage therapist, mentor, and corrections officer. It is time they be recognized and paid as the homemakers they are. It is significant that a government that talks so much about traditional families and values has not done more to support foster parents.

Foster parents have shared their own homes and provided a long tradition of care for those children who through no fault of their own lack the kind of family experience so many others enjoy or take for granted. Foster parents should be recognized for their contribution to our society and our province. This means fair remuneration and adequate sources for support.

As we hear of tragedy throughout the world and needs around the globe, we understand that we are called to support our global family. I believe this must begin at home, and I salute our foster parents. They are champions of compassion.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am submitting a petition which, again, was initiated by a constituent from Edmonton-McClung and signed by a group of concerned Alberta parents from all over the province, in this one in particular from Edmonton and Camrose, asking the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to eliminate school fees charged for textbooks, locker rentals, field trips, physical fitness programs, and music lessons.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition that says:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to introduce legislation declaring a moratorium on any future expansion of Confined Feeding Operations, with a view to phasing out existing operations within the next three years.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition from 100 Alberta tradesmen and women, and it reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

They're from Fort McMurray, Athabasca, Edmonton, Calgary, Devon, Leduc, and Ardrossan.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

head: Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East on a Standing Order 30 application.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise, after having provided your office with the required written notice earlier this morning, to give the full Assembly notice of my intent to move the following motion under Standing Order 30: be it resolved that this Assembly adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the failure of the government to provide additional resources required to reduce the grave and immediate risks to the health and physical security of seniors living in Alberta's long-term care facilities as identified in the May 2005 Report of the Auditor General on Seniors Care and Programs.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader and Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(2)(a) to give notice that on Monday I will move that written questions appearing on the Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of written questions 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, and 42.

I'm also giving notice that on Monday I will move that motions for returns 44, 45, 46, 47, and 48 be dealt with that day. There being no additional motions, Mr. Speaker, no motions for returns other than those, there are none to stand and retain.

head: 2:50 Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Bill 50

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

The purpose of Bill 50 is to provide workmen's compensation benefits to firefighters who suffer a myocardial infarction, which in laymen's terms is a heart attack or heart event, within 24 hours after attendance at an emergency response. The myocardial infarction will be presumed to have arisen out of and occurred during the course of employment as a firefighter unless the contrary is proven. The bill also changes the reporting of the medical panel's commissioner, making the panel's independence of the WCB very clear.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 50 read a first time]

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd move that Bill 50 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first one that I'd like to table is another letter, this time from Dale and Anne Watson of Westrose, Alberta, that's part of a growing chorus of Albertans who demand that the Minister of Health and Wellness cancel her ministry's contract with Aon Consulting and stop wasting time and money on dangerous health care privatization.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is another letter, this time from Rod McConnell, which was sent to the Premier and all MLAs. Mr. McConnell expresses frustration that the health minister's office would provide no information on public consultation on health care privatization.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling this afternoon, and it's a letter that I received dated November 7, 2005. It's from Shirley R. Howe, the public service commissioner. This letter is in regard to Mr. Murray Smith and his activities at TUSK Energy Corporation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three documents to table today, two fax sheets prepared by PollutionWatch. One highlights national pollution facts. The other provides pollution facts specific to Alberta. PollutionWatch has found that Alberta produces the most air pollution of any province in Canada, including one billion kilograms of pollutants released from industrial facilities in 2003.

I would also like to table copies of a news release from the Pembina Institute dated October 26 of this year. The release warns that the proposed minable oil sands strategy would have serious and negative environmental impacts on 2,800 square kilometres of boreal forest.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a letter from one of my constituents, a teacher with 16 years of experience who is extremely upset about the issue of unfunded liability; also, a letter from one of my constituents about the prosperity cheques. She argues that there should be three other checks before the prosperity cheques come out, namely a democracy check, a societal check, and a human resources check.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two documents to table today. First, I would like to table a memo from Angus McBeath, a former superintendent of schools for the Edmonton public school board. The memo draws attention to the dramatic reduction in learning resource personnel and counsellors that the school board has suffered over the last 10 years.

I'd also like to table for the hon. minister of human resources copies of labour code provisions from across Canada. These provisions will provide the Minister of Human Resources and Employment a template for developing long-overdue first-contract legislation for Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to table this e-mail letter on behalf of my constituent whose son is drug addicted and needs immediate help. She's concerned about AADAC here in Edmonton. Edmonton treatment centres, according to her, are full and useless and need to look at changing this. We have a huge addiction problem in Alberta. I believe our government must face this issue. We should have a separate ministry for mental health and addictions like B.C. She had to take her son to B.C. for treatment . . .

The Speaker: With all due respect, hon. member, please. This is tablings, not reading of tablings. We'll accept that it's tabled.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk on behalf of the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness: pursuant to the Mental Health Act the Alberta Mental Health Patient Advocate office 2003-2004 annual report; pursuant to the Nursing Profession Act Alberta Association of Registered Nurses 2003-2004 annual report with attached financial statements for the year ended September 30, 2004; pursuant to the Opticians Act the Alberta Opticians Association annual report 2004; pursuant to the Dental Disciplines Act Alberta Dental Hygienists' Association 2004 annual report; pursuant to the Pharmaceutical Profession Act the Alberta College of Pharmacists annual report 2004-2005; pursuant to the Health Professions Act College of Alberta Denturists annual report 2004, the Alberta College of Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists 2004 annual report, the Alberta College of Optometrists annual report 2004; pursuant to the Regional Health Authorities Act the Alberta Mental Health Board 2004-05 annual report, Aspen regional health 2004-05 annual report, Peace Country health annual report 2004-2005, Calgary health region 2004-05 annual report, Capital health annual report 2004-05, East Central health region annual report 2004-2005, Palliser health region annual report 2004-2005, Northern Lights health region annual report 2004-05, David Thompson health region annual report 2004-05, and the Chinook health region annual report 2004-05; as well, the Alberta Cancer Board annual report 2004-05 and response to Written Question 5 asked by Mr. MacDonald on behalf of Dr. Taft on April 11, 2005, and return to order of the Assembly MR4 asked for by Dr. Pannu on behalf of Mr. Mason on April 4, 2005.

head: Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Government House Leader please share with the Assembly the projected government business next week?

The Speaker: The Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's pretty clear from the agenda that next week we will be discussing supply. On Monday, the 21st, in the afternoon we would advise that we anticipate the introduction of Bill 53, the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2005. In the evening at 9 o'clock under Government Bills and Orders for second reading we would proceed on Bill 49, the Police Amendment Act, 2005 (No.2); Bill 45, the Maternal Tort Liability Act; Bill 43, the Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005; and as per the Order Paper.

On November 22, Tuesday, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders, Committee of Supply, supplementary supply, day 2 of three days: Advanced Education, Gaming, Infrastructure and Transportation, Seniors and Community Supports, and Municipal Affairs estimates in Committee of Supply. Time permitting, second reading on Bill 44, the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No.2), and third reading on Bill 9, the Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2005. In the evening at 8 o'clock under Government Bills and Orders for second reading Bill 50, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2005 (No.2), and Bill 43, the Alberta Resource Rebate Statutes Amendment Act, 2005; for third reading Bill 9 and Bill 15; and in the Committee of the Whole Bill 48, Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2005, Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act, Bill 43, and as per the Order Paper.

On Wednesday, November 23, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders, Committee of Supply, the departments of Health and Wellness, Sustainable Resource Development, Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, Community Development, and Environment. For second reading, time permitting, bills 46 and 43. In anticipation of completion of Committee of Supply, there may be a request to revert to Introduction of Bills for the introduction of Bill 51, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2005 (No. 2). At 8 p.m. under Government Bills and Orders for second reading bills 46 and 43, committee anticipated on bills 50 and 43, third reading on bills 48, 47, and 43, and as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, November 24, under Introduction of Bills, Bill 52, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2), Committee of the Whole on bills 49, 45, and 46, and as per the Order Paper.

head: 3:00 Request for Emergency Debate

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East on a Standing Order 30 application.

Continuing Care Funding

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise at this time to move the following motion: be it resolved that this Assembly adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the failure of the government to provide the additional resources required to reduce the grave and immediate risks to the health and physical security of seniors living in long-term care facilities as identified in the May '05 Report of the Auditor General on Seniors Care and Programs and further explored by the MLA task force this summer.

I understand that the case I am required to make respecting this motion revolves around urgency. I'll do my best in the next few minutes to explain why this matter is so urgent and merits this Assembly taking some time today before we move on to other business. The case for urgency, however, is not, in my view, a strictly technical one since it's hard to imagine an issue requiring urgent attention that doesn't in itself have intrinsic importance. Significant things can wait. The dignity and lives of our seniors cannot.

It is worth recalling that just over six months ago the Auditor General released his report on the state of long-term care in Alberta. It was a damning report and exposed real risks to the health and well-being of Alberta's senior citizens; for example, the inappropriate use of medications, as documented in a study done by both the U of L and the U of C. Shortly thereafter the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood moved a motion for an emergency debate. On this, the Speaker ruled that there was, indeed, a case for urgency. Six months after that report and three months after the report of the task force and my own adjunct report all of the underlying conditions that gave rise to the ruling on that day I believe continue.

Today, however, we face a new challenge: what to do here in this sitting when the government has failed to solve the problems. The introduction of the government's supplemental estimates yesterday revealed that despite the introduction of previous legislation enabling resource rebates and the creation of associations for former MLAs, this government has not, at least not so far, taken the opportunity of this sitting and the abundance of resources available to devote any additional dollars to respond to the most pressing problems in long-term care. This inaction represents real risks to the lives and dignity of Albertans.

I've seen the crisis first-hand, and it's hard to overestimate my astonishment that there was no response in these estimates. We must have an urgent discussion around how we mitigate these risks in the short term and before this spring. This Assembly does not know when the next opportunity for supply is, but it could well be as late as next March. Seniors in care cannot wait, nor can we wait until these estimates are debated in Committee of Supply next week. This, I submit, is to misunderstand the nature of the crisis and the reason for my motion. The reason to have this debate is not simply to listen to each other talk nor is it merely to be seen talking. It is to ensure that the government is advised by this Assembly of the urgency of this matter so that they can take immediate action.

Further, Beauchesne, section 950, for example, sets limits on the ability of these estimates to be increased in Committee of Supply. They can only be reduced. Clearly, there is no opportunity for any kind of effective action stemming from the committee debates themselves. To be sure, not every problem identified and not every piece of the solution involves additional funding. There are important measures to be taken about openness, accountability, monitoring, and other policy issues, yet here, too, there was nothing on the Order Paper to indicate that the government is introducing legislation to deal with these important matters.

The conversations between the minister responsible and myself and my colleagues regarding any other forthcoming legislation has led me to believe that no legislation is planned for this fall. My own private member's bill, 213, seeks to establish some independent oversight and accountability for the system, but this side of the House is not in control of the government's agenda, and we have been led to believe that there are only a few days remaining in this session. Given the meagre opportunities afforded us for private members' business, this bill will almost certainly not be coming up for debate this fall. Given that there are only a few days left in this sitting, it is my contention that the government still has a chance, if they direct their departments to begin working on it today, to introduce an additional supplementary supply bill for long-term care that could begin to mitigate the identified risks to seniors and provide real relief to the overburdened families and health professionals who care for them.

While I certainly respect the importance of the legislative schedule and even respect the prerogative of a duly elected government to govern, surely nothing on the agenda today supercedes the importance of this Assembly discussing this urgent matter. While I'm aware that a motion under this standing order does not entail any action by this Assembly, I am moving this motion with the hope that a renewed consideration of the risks identified to seniors' well-being and the recognition that we are literally running out of time to take meaningful measures in a timely fashion will prompt the government to take some action now. Mr. Speaker, I truly believe that this is the right thing to do.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I'm going to allow very, very brief comments on this, but the hon. member in pushing this thing has failed to tell me why this does not violate 30(7)(d), which is the most important rule that we have in the Standing Orders with respect to dealing with this. There's no debate on this matter whatsoever. [interjection] Sorry, but the hon. member has already talked. Somebody's going to have to convince the chair that this does not violate 30(7)(d).

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to attempt to convince you that it doesn't violate that. I think it does violate that.

The nub of the motion is the failure of the government to provide additional resources. This afternoon in Committee of Supply we'll be talking about resources. Tuesday in Committee of Supply we'll be talking about resources. Wednesday in Committee of Supply we'll be talking about resources. In fact, Health and Wellness will be up on Wednesday, Seniors and Community Supports is up on Tuesday, and then we will have on Thursday the introduction of the appropriation bill, where we will be talking about supply of resources. I think that under Projected Government Business I indicated that the bill would be introduced either Wednesday or Thursday. It will be debated the following week in two stages in committee, so the foreseeable future in this House is all about the supply of financial resources.

I don't want to make light of the issue. I think we're all concerned about seniors who need care and the ability of our mothers and fathers to live in dignity. Those are all very important issues, but with respect to the nub of this motion, the failure of the government to provide the additional resources necessary, that is the substance of every discussion in the House every day for the next six days at least. Therefore, the urgency to move off the Orders of the Day to have an urgent debate on the very subject that we're moving into in Committee of Supply is beyond me.

The Speaker: Again, hon. members, we clearly have Standing Order 30(7)(d). On May 10 during this First Session of the 26th Legislature the House provided the opportunity for debate on this same issue. Standing Order 30(7)(d) prohibits this happening twice in the same session, so I don't know what compelling argument there is. We're into a basic filibuster.

Who wants to participate then? I'm sorry, hon. member, you've already made your statement.

Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, you're deferring to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning?

Dr. Taft: Proceed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The requirement of Standing Order 30(7)(d), which precludes reviving discussion "on a matter which has been discussed in the same session" pursuant to this Standing Order, as you've said, could be looked at in this particular matter. But the matter on which my colleague from Lethbridge-East rose today, while touching on the care of Alberta's seniors . . .

The Speaker: That's not the issue, hon. member, please. This is a question for urgency. Once there is an agenda for the session, the Standing Orders provide that there's an opportunity to have an urgent matter come before the Assembly if it's urgent and there's been no opportunity for members to discuss anything. Then the rules provide that if it has been discussed once and we waive the whole Routine for the afternoon to deal with a particular matter once during a session, we do not do it twice on that subject. That's 30(7)(d). We've already done it once. We've had this. We did this on May 10, which was during the First Session of the 26th Legislature. So that's the pertinent point for the urgency: how would this not be the same? I haven't heard any additional arguments with respect to this. I'm sorry. I'm not putting the question. We're going to move on.

Privilege Contempt of the Assembly

The Speaker: I'm now prepared to rule on the purported questions of privilege raised on Tuesday by the Official Opposition House Leader and the leader of the New Democrats. Although there are some distinguishing factors between the two matters that have been raised, the general subject of early release of reports of officers of the Legislature is the same. Therefore, the chair will be addressing the matter in one ruling.

To be clear, the matter raised by the Official Opposition House Leader deals with the early release of the Auditor General's report on the Alberta Securities Commission, and the one by the leader of the third party in the House deals with the premature disclosure of the Auditor General's report on the Alberta Social Housing Corporation and the disclosure of the results of the Ethics Commissioner's report on the Minister of Environment. These are the allegations that we'll deal with together.

As a preliminary matter the chair confirms that both parties fulfilled the two hours' notice requirement under Standing Order 15(2). The chair received written notice of the Official Opposition House Leader's purported question of privilege last Thursday, November 10. The leader of the third party provided his written notice this week on Monday, November 14. Given that Tuesday was the first day of the fall sitting, both parties have raised their respective questions of privilege at the earliest possible opportunity. The key argument underlying both purported questions of privilege is that there has been a contempt of the Assembly. As members are well aware, breaches of privilege and contempt of the Assembly are treated in the same manner, and therefore the procedure outlined in Standing Order 15 applies.

At the outset the chair would like to note for all members that the leak of a report from an officer of this Legislature has never before been raised in this Assembly as a matter of privilege. In fact, over the course of the past few days the chair and the table officers have undertaken a broad review, consulting with parliaments from across Canada as well as the United Kingdom. To the best of the chair's knowledge it is unprecedented for this type of matter to come before the Assembly as a purported question of privilege. So we are in uncharted territory.

The chair has listened attentively to the arguments raised, and it appears that the material facts are as follows. The contents of three reports from two officers of the Legislature were disclosed to members of the media prior to the reports being distributed to Members of the Assembly and being made available to the public. The reports in question are: one, the Report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Securities Commission's Enforcement System dated October 2005; two, the Report of the Auditor General on the Alberta Social Housing Corporation – Land Sales Systems dated October 2005; three, a report to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta on the investigation by the Ethics Commissioner into allegations involving the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo dated October 20, 2005.

Although it is clear that the contents of all three reports were disclosed prematurely, it is not clear who is responsible for prematurely disclosing the two reports from the Auditor General. With respect to the third report, the one prepared by the Ethics Commissioner, the Minister of Environment indicated in the House yesterday that he referred to the contents of that report in a radio program prior to it being made available to other members and the public. As he indicated at page 1676 of yesterday's Hansard, he was unaware of anything that prohibited him from doing so.

As the chair indicated on Tuesday when these matters were raised, it is a very serious matter when reports of officers of the Legislature are released or the contents are prematurely disclosed. While these disclosures may be contemptuous behaviour, the chair's view is that they do not amount to contempts of the Assembly.

Accordingly, the chair does not find that there are prima facie questions of privilege. The lack of both parliamentary and statutory authority concerning early disclosure of officers' reports leads the chair to this view. This conclusion does not diminish the fact that the leaks of these reports should be taken very seriously and that this type of conduct shows disrespect to the Assembly and demonstrates a blatant disregard for the statutory provisions that entitle members of the Assembly to view such a report before it is made public.

Because this is a matter that has never been raised before, the chair wants to provide some explanation for this finding. First, it is important to note that the two officers whose reports are in question operate under specific statutory regimes, as do the Chief Electoral Officer, the Information and Privacy Commissioner, and the Ombudsman. Both members raising purported questions of privilege want the chair to find that the statutes do not form complete codes and that certain elements of parliamentary privilege must be, and I quote, read in, end quote, to them.

The chair wants to be very clear that this ruling is on the issue of whether an early or unauthorized release of an officer's report constitutes a prima facie question of privilege. This ruling should not be taken to address the broader issue of whether and to what extent the activities of officers of the Legislature are cloaked in privilege.

As the distribution of the reports is fundamental to the arguments of both members' questions of privilege, the chair wants to address the requirements. As was noted in the arguments, the procedure for distribution of a report from the Auditor General when the House is not sitting is outlined in section 20.1 of the Auditor General Act. This section provides that the report must be made available to the members of the Assembly upon three days' notice being given to the Speaker who shall forthwith distribute copies to the office of each member. The report is available to the public after the distribution has occurred. To the chair's knowledge the only parties that are authorized under the statute to have advanced copies of the reports are members of the Audit Committee, pursuant to section 24.

The Conflicts of Interest Act has a slightly different procedure for the distribution of reports from the Ethics Commissioner as outlined in sections 25 and 28 of that act. These reports are provided directly to the Speaker, who in turn lays the report before the Assembly or if the Assembly is not sitting distributes the report to members and then makes it available to the public. The act authorizes certain persons to receive advanced copies of a report; namely, the member against whom an allegation has been made and the leader of that member's caucus, section 25(8), and it is pursuant to this authority that the hon. Minister of Environment received the Ethics Commissioner's report prior to its release to other members.

There are provisions in the Auditor General Act that require both the Auditor General and his staff to maintain confidentiality in fulfilling their duties. The Conflicts of Interest Act has similar requirements, and this statute also provides for a fine up to $20,000, section 40, for a commissioner, former commissioner, or person employed or engaged by the office who releases confidential information. However, neither of these acts specifically addresses whether the premature release of a report from the officer or discussion of their contents is an offence or contempt of the Assembly. The Legislative Assembly Act provides provisions dealing with the Assembly's jurisdiction and expressly deals with the matter of breaches of privilege and contempt. There is nothing in this act that would suggest that a leak of a report from an officer amounts to a contempt.

Finally, in comparing the leak of a report from an officer to the leak of the other types of documents cited in the hon. members' arguments, there are a number of distinguishing factors. Clearly, all three types of documents referred to in the arguments of the Official Opposition House Leader – bills, committee reports, and the budget – are more directly tied to a proceeding of this Assembly. The matter of a budget leak, which has been cited in the arguments, is not typically considered a matter of privilege, and the chair cites Beauchesne 31(5) for this point. The premature disclosure of bills has been held by the chair to be a prima facie case of contempt, as was held on March 15, 2003, at pages 57 to 60 of the Journals, as belonging properly to members once they appear on the Order Paper.

On the subject of leaked committee reports the authorities are very clear that questions of privilege will not be considered unless a specific charge has been made. The chair would like to quote from Marleau and Montpetit's House of Commons Procedure and Practice on this point.

Speakers have ruled that questions of privilege concerning leaked reports will not be considered unless a specific charge is made against an individual, organization or group, and that the charge must be levelled not only against those outside the House who have made in camera material public, but must also identify the source of the leak within the House itself.

Found at pages 884 and 885. Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice also supports this position in its 23rd edition at pages 140 and 141.

So even if the chair were to treat the leak of an officer's report the same as the leak of a committee report, this still would not meet the test for a prima facie case of contempt with respect to 2 out of the 3 reports because the source of the leak has not been identified.

With respect to the Ethics Commissioner's report the hon. minister indicated that he was not aware of any prohibition on the premature disclosure of the contents of the report on the basis that he not only requested the investigation but was the subject of that investigation. In the absence of a specific statutory provision or a recognized parliamentary precedent the chair cannot find a prima facie question of privilege. Furthermore, if the chair were to find a case of contempt, this could cast a cloud of suspicion on those persons who have legislated right to receive advanced copies of these reports prior to the distribution to members, and that is definitely something that this chair does not want to do. The chair might have a different view if there was a clear indication in the legislation how a premature disclosure of a report was to be treated.

Finally, the chair would like to emphasize that when a report is destined for members of the Assembly, prior to it being made available to the public, the utmost care must be taken in the printing and the preparation for distribution. The Auditor General has undertaken investigation of the office's practices, and the chair is confident that this matter will be given serious attention and that due care and attention will be given prior to the release of subsequent reports from that office.

head: Orders of the Day

head: Committee of Supply

[Mr. Marz in the chair]

The Chair: I'd call the Committee of Supply to order.

head: Supplementary Estimates 2005-06
General Revenue Fund and Lottery Fund

Education

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm indeed pleased to rise to request some supplementary estimates for the extremely important ministry and departments working within Alberta Education. The request is specifically for $75.1 million. These funds are very necessary in order to support a number of important initiatives that will benefit our students and enhance their learning environments.

Mr. Chairman, of the $75.1 million some $42.1 million is needed this fiscal year, '05-06, in order to help facilitate delivery of new modular classrooms and the relocation of portables during this year, which, in turn, will allow us to begin planning for the construction of 21 new or modernized school projects in 14 different communities so far across the province. Those are in keeping with the announcements I made earlier this fall.

The second largest component of this request today is for a $24 million increase to the plant operation and maintenance funding scenario to school boards for schools in their jurisdictions. The annual school year increase will actually be $43 million once it is annualized, and that will cover the period of September 1, '05, through to the end of August 31, '06. However, the $24 million, which was part of the $43 million that I am requesting today, represents the amount required to take us through to the end of the government's fiscal year, which, as we all know, ends on March 31, 2006, but of course the school year goes on until the end of August.

Mr. Chairman, the increased plant operation and maintenance funding utilizes a new formula now that is based on the number of students, also on the number of students with severe special needs, and, finally, on the need to keep several small schools open because of distance and necessity. It is a formula that has improved the funding scenario for almost every school board, and we are pleased with that. However, during my recent tour of the province when I met with all 62 school boards for the second time this year, I know that there are some issues with this scenario, so I did undertake to look at it more closely in preparation for the next year's budget.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, today's supplementary estimate includes a request for $9 million in additional funding which school boards need in order to offset the sudden higher costs of transportation that have resulted from very sharp increases in the price of fuel. The current student transportation budget of $210 million annually includes $23 million for fuel costs based on an average pump price for diesel fuel, for example, of 60 cents per litre. Now, I cite diesel fuel prices in particular because they are the ones used for this calculation since approximately 80 per cent of Alberta's school buses operate on diesel fuel. That being said, I wish to remind all members that the price for diesel fuel has been as high as $1 per litre in recent weeks, which is an increase of 67 per cent from the base budget price of 60 cents that I referred to earlier.

Mr. Chairman, almost 45 per cent of our Alberta students, which, by the way, represents about 250,000 children and youth, use school bus transportation to get to and from school every day. They ride over 70 million kilometres every year. So this additional money, $23 million in this category, will ensure that school boards don't have to dip into money that would otherwise be intended for classrooms in order to pay the extra costs for transporting students to schools throughout Alberta.

The supplementary estimates, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, are required because they are ministry specific, and they give that particular ministry, in this case Alberta Education, legislative authorization to increase their spending above amounts approved by the Alberta Legislature as part of Budget 2005. I look forward to answering any questions that anyone may have, but mostly I look forward to everyone's support for these very necessary additional supplementary dollars for K to 12 education in the province of Alberta.

The Chair: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. These increases are generally to cover important capital and operating costs, and I think that's significant. Dealing with the actual learning of a student, I was a little disappointed that we didn't see some indication for support services such as counsellors, speech pathologists, educational psychologists, et cetera. The support services for our students are lacking. I think that the issue of the family and schools is becoming very important. I think that when we lack these services, schools are being burdened with trying to deal with them.

Let me be very specific on some of the issues in the estimates that I see. Portable classrooms referred to in the document as modular classrooms. This government continues to spend $22 million in buying new portables and moving existing portables.

Mr. Zwozdesky: What year is that?

Mr. Flaherty: This year, 2005, I guess. In many cases this shows a lack of planning and avoids a commitment to what we really need, which is stable, sufficient, and predictable funding to meet the school districts' long-term capital plans.

3:30

If there isn't enough money for permanent schools, did the minister create a plan for building schools before providing emergency funding? Were school district capital plans and enrolment projections consulted before paying for the new portables that he's bought? Is enrolment predicted to decline in the areas where portables were built? If not, why aren't actual brick-and-mortar schools planned, e.g. not more emergency portables? Has he got a long-range plan for schools in Alberta with set criteria so that school districts can get an idea of what he's expecting from them?

In many cases emergency portables last well beyond their intent and lifespan. We have an example of that at Alexander Forbes in Grande Prairie, where the portable is 25 years old and suffering from mould and is causing health hazards. This district is still asking for more emergency portables to handle enrolment growth. Also, the question with portables is a lack of proper bathroom facilities, which we have at Father Jan in St. Albert. Very sad.

Plant operation and maintenance: let me just comment on that, Mr. Chair. The plant operation and maintenance plan of this government, specifically the Department of Education, in my opinion is a mess. The Minister of Education moved to per-student funding in '04, and our response to this has been that this has been a recipe for school closures. As such, they regularly need to add supplemental dollars to this program in order to deal with funding shortfalls.

Funding for schools should keep a school in the community, which means paying for the operating costs of the school. Why was budgeted plant maintenance and operation funding not sufficient, Mr. Minister? Is there a special development that justified the additional $24 million? Is this a sign that the new funding formula is not working? [interjection] Well, answer it, please. Will we evaluate the system in light of providing $24 million in additional emergency funding?

Let me move to transportation. I'm glad you're smiling, Mr. Minister; it makes me feel good. Transportation: school districts across this province were taking money from other program areas to pay for this, so the government was forced to respond. What was the basis for this increase; e.g., how did they arrive at this figure of $9 million? Nine million dollars: that is a 67 per cent increase from the budget estimate amount by his own numbers. Why did the press release announce $15.5 million increased funding? Has something changed? How did the minister decide how to distribute the money to the districts? Can he be sure that extra money for transportation was not a result of a backlog of capital projects? Did the minister evaluate the business case for spending more on the busing of students versus building or maintaining local community schools?

My final comment is on capital facilities. What new capital facilities are there, and how are they being chosen?

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, for allowing me to speak to this.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Chair, if the hon. critic would just address the issues and take all of that rhetoric and garbage out of it, it might be actually helpful to listen to it. Nonetheless, I've got the gist of what it is that he's trying to say, albeit there are a lot of incorrect comments there that I would take some exception to and I'm sure the school boards will as well.

Nonetheless, here it is. With respect to portable classrooms, the additional monies that are required here are not only for some portables or modulars, actually, which are the new ones that we're putting out there, that are required on a permanent basis, but in many cases, Mr. Chair, several of them are required on a temporary basis. I think where the hon. previous speaker misses the boat completely is not understanding that we have fluctuating enrolments throughout the province, and these are changing. If he had done some homework, which clearly he hasn't, he would have noticed, for example, that some parts of the province are expanding very rapidly, and they need a sudden bit of help. That can be accomplished with some portables. Now, in other parts of the province we have declining enrolments. As those enrolments decline, we will perhaps move some of the portables.

With respect to this fluctuation, generally speaking, let us recognize that the new modulars are being built as fast as they possibly can be, and we're getting them out to the schools as fast as we can possibly get them, Mr. Chair. The new ones have a far longer lifespan, they are built in a more durable fashion, and they are much more easily transported. They can be done virtually overnight once the mechanisms are in place.

What we're asking for here is for some help this year to deal with some of the emergencies that are out there. I would remind the hon. member again that I just came off a tour, the second tour where I've met with every school board in the province now twice, and I think I've got a pretty good feel for what their needs really are. We don't have all the money to address all the needs. I mean, education is becoming just like health care: there will never be enough money. But we must find enough money to accommodate some of the serious situations that we have with respect to some overcrowding, and that's what this money is needed for.

With respect to the other comments that he made, Mr. Chair, and respecting the time of day, I will review them and, if necessary, I'll see if I can find some semblance of sense in some of those questions and try and provide him with some answers where they might be appropriate.

With respect to the transportation questions, please understand that these particular sudden jumps in diesel fuel prices were not understood to be happening back in the time that the budgets were being developed, hon. member. You should know that. These prices jumped up very suddenly in about June, July, August, September. We responded very quickly. Every single school board I met with thanked us for doing a proactive thing in this regard. I'd ask you to please consider that as you speak for or against these estimates.

I'm frankly surprised that you're not supporting them, because we know that we need these monies out there. This is your opportunity to provide some help in that respect.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's not these particular estimates that I'm particularly worried about, but I'd like to take the opportunity just to perhaps look briefly at the future for these estimates and whatever ones come forward.

The minister, I think, would indicate to the public that with the extra money coming in, all the problems in education are basically solved. But it's just not washing with the public. As the minister is well aware, back in September Ipsos-Reid did a poll and 72 per cent of Albertans still believe the education system is not adequately funded. Now, if that's the perception, it's more important what they say and, especially, what parents say.

I want to just throw out to the minister four different areas that I think require some urgent attention. The first one: nobody is questioning the new schools that were announced, that we need new schools. Obviously we do, Mr. Chairman. I don't think the minister or any of us can decide the priorities of a particular school board. They have to make those decisions about where the new schools should go.

But we do have a serious problem. If I may use my experience of being a trustee with the Edmonton public school board, it's not only the new schools; it's the ones that are there. I think I'd be pretty close saying at this time that almost 50 per cent of the schools in Edmonton public – I expect it's similar throughout the province – are 50 years of age or over. So there are some serious problems there in terms of maintenance and operation. While it's important to get new schools in some of the suburbs, it's also equally important because some of the schools – I'm sure the minister has been aware going through some of the schools. One of his, of course, Victoria comp, he would know a lot about. That's another story. There are some serious problems there, and there's absolutely no doubt that we're going to have to put money in there in the future.

That ties in again to the process. I honestly believe that this minister does care about education. I know that he has to deal with the caucus, but I don't want him to be caught as a new Mr. Dithers because of some of the problems that are occurring. I'm thinking about the school closure process. The minister, I believe – correct me if I'm wrong – said that they would be looking at the utilization and whether a school closure process was the right way to go in the province. I haven't heard anything about that. I'd be interested to know what's happening because there are two problems.

I've alluded to one school that's been closed down, North Edmonton school. I know the minister is aware of this: the variations of construction just didn't make any sense for old schools. In Edmonton public I'm talking about schools built before 1950. The province's rate of what could be in that class is a lot different than what the school board thought because, you know, the halls and bathrooms and everything else were included. I take it that they'd be looking at that. North Edmonton, for example, they said the current formula generated a capacity of 448 – I'm just using that as an example to add the figures – and the 14 classrooms rated at 25 students would generate only 350. So that's a serious problem dealing with those schools that I'm talking about, and I would like an update on that.

I would also like an update on the school closure process. We went through a very unfortunate situation, Mr. Chair, in the Edmonton public, which ended up in the courts, about the whole school closure process. Last spring I brought forward, and others did, about maybe we should be looking at province-wide how we do school closures. It's a very divisive process, especially the way the Edmonton public did it with the school cluster group. It played off one group against another, one principal against another, parents, and the whole thing. It was ugly, and I think the minister would agree with that. It ended up in court. We don't want that to happen.

Again, he said – I brought it up at the time – that Ontario went through this process and changed their school closure process. I would remind the minister, not that he was the minister at the time, that this was put forward by the government, that they should close schools down to get new schools. Remember, I sent this over to the minister at the time. He asked for it, minutes from a trustee retreat where it was pretty clear. It said:

The Edmonton School District is currently not eligible for new school projects due to sector utilization below 85%. Approval to proceed beyond schematic design on the three projects will require your board to submit a comprehensive plan to address surplus space and utilizations.

It's clear. They're saying: close schools down, or you're not going to get new ones. Then you're again playing off one part of the city against the other. I would remind the minister – and I know that he's probably looked into it – that Ontario went through that process and said: we can't do that. So they've got that you can't close schools to be eligible for new replacement schools. You have to consider a school valuation first of all: its value to the student, its value to the community, its value to the school system, its value to the local economy. I'm interested to know from the minister where that process is in review and when we might look forward to something in that area.

Secondly, counsellors and librarians. The school board, as I'm sure the minister is well aware, saw that the counsellors in Edmonton public – and I expect it's true in other areas – have dramatically decreased over the last 10 years, I think down to in total in Edmonton 48 counsellors and less library techs. That came from a memo from the school board just a month or so ago. That was Angus McBeath's memo.

I know that the minister has alluded to the high dropout rates. I hope I'm not putting words in his mouth that maybe he said that we need more counsellors, for example. He probably meant also library techs. So what's been happening is that it's going the other way in the province, and I wonder what the minister is doing there in the future. I know that it's not going to come as these estimates, but we'll be dealing with some other estimates very quickly, Mr. Chairman.

The third thing is the Learning Commission, and this is an important one for me because I've represented high-needs schools. The two recommendations that we haven't dealt with that we're studying – the Learning Commission is over two years old now and we're still studying, especially in high-needs areas. I'm not saying that we have to do it all across the province, but in high-needs areas it's absolutely crucial that we have full-day kindergarten and we have junior kindergarten. The evidence is clear from the costs of studies, and I know that the minister of health knows something about this, too, from the city centre project. It absolutely works. It's necessary for those kids, and I would hope that the time for studying that would be over and we'd do it. Edmonton public, again because I know the situation there, actually has 18 high-needs schools where they put in full-day kindergarten and took from other areas of the budget, and I think that's unfair. So I'd like some idea of when we might look forward to progress in that area.

I have the counsellors. I should go back to that. In 1990-91 we had 99 counsellors in Edmonton public; in '96-97, 60; and now there are 43.8, only 3.4 in all the elementary schools in Edmonton. Learning resources FTEs: 81.7 in '91; in '96-97, 38.7 and now 12.1, only 3.5 in elementary schools. Those are significant figures. That's a significant decline. Again, I had those figures and I wanted to give them to the minister.

The final thing that I just wanted to bring up, Mr. Chairman – and I know that the minister has been talking about it. I wonder when there might be some action on school fees. Clearly, when you have a couple of kids in school and you're paying over $700, that's unacceptable. We can argue whose fault it is or whatever, but having been a trustee, I just think that the school boards need the money, and that's part of the funding. I'm suggesting that we have to maybe start with elementary. I'll just throw this out to the minister. It costs money, yes, but I think we can look at education as an investment rather than as just a cost, and I think the minister would agree with me on that.

We need that stable, predictable funding for boards on a three-year cycle. I think we have to cap class sizes, not average them. I think that with the school fees one of the things we could start with is perhaps eliminate school fees at the elementary level and then conduct a province-wide review of compulsory fees. I think that would give us a better handle. It seems to me that at elementary school we should not be having fees at all. Maybe there's some need for some extracurricular activities, you know, which could be part of a fee – I'm not sure – but we should review that and take a look, especially for junior high and senior high.

I think that if we could move in the next budget year – because that's a lot of money for parents that are struggling to make ends meet. If they have two kids, it could be over $700. If you have three or four kids, it's almost insurmountable, and some of those schools can't even collect those fees because the parents don't have the money.

Mr. Chairman, I'll conclude there by saying that I have no major problem with the estimates that we're bringing forward here, but I really want the minister to look at those four areas and give us some idea of when we might look forward to dealing with those areas.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you and thank you to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview for providing a very good critique. I will read it through more carefully. I had some interruptions, as you probably saw.

I'll make a few brief comments to your observations. First of all, I do agree with the comments in general about aging infrastructure. Having spoken with all the school boards, as I indicated earlier, I know that we have schools that are not only 40, 50, 60 years old, but we also have schools that were never built with computerization in mind or with SuperNet or video conferencing suites in mind. So that's another issue that's very large on my radar screen, and as we see more of the infrastructure piece coming over to Education from the Department of Infrastructure and Transportation, hopefully then when we sit down to chat with school boards, we'll be able to talk about the whole nine yards of education. Right now, as you would know given your former role as a trustee, you'd be speaking with one minister about the K to 12 programming needs for educating the kids, and you'd be talking with another minister about the facilities that are required and so on.

I'll just give you one quick example. When we brought in the small class size initiative, a good initiative, recommended by the Learning Commission – and we'll be funding it to the tune of about 160 million new dollars over the three-year span, and we're just finishing the second year now, as you know. But when you talk about class size reduction, and you're talking about hiring 2,250 brand new teachers, you have to talk about the impact on the facilities. There was some discussion, I know, but I think we can have better and more deep discussions on that now moving forward, and that's part of what the $207 million is in fact starting to do.

The issue about the school closure process. I don't think I'll take up the House's time today, but I am looking at how that is working. It was never intended that the utilization rate of old would wind up being the culprit, if you will, that forced school closures in order to get new school funding monies for new construction projects. That was never intended. In fact, the old formula was based on area of the school space, as you know, the utilization rate, which divides the educational capacity of the school by the number of students taught. Sparsity and distance was part of that for the remote boards especially and travel time.

The new funding formula that we've talked about, the per-pupil funding formula, may not be one hundred per cent exactly bang on just yet either, but it's an improvement to the other one. When I spoke with school boards about this, they clearly indicated something that we had already concluded, and that was that if you have a lot of students, then clearly per-pupil funding helps you, but if you have a dwindling student population, which reflects the majority of locations in Alberta, then per-pupil funding isn't going to help you at all. So we do have the stabilization thing, as you know, the extra money in the renewed funding framework. So that's an interesting point to consider, and I am aware of some other jurisdictions, as you mentioned.

The final couple of things quickly, Mr. Chair. With respect to counsellors and teacher-librarians and the Alberta Commission on Learning recommendations in general, I don't know if the hon. member has had a chance yet to read in great detail the update I provided about a month ago, but there's some information in there, and there will be more, and there will be clarity of our position, perhaps even some final decisions by December 31 of this year insofar as I'm able to make them.

Now, clearly, that's going to be a decision that I will lead one way or the other, be it on the possibility of junior K or not, be it on the possibility of mandated full-day kindergarten or not, some of those kinds of decisions. We will have a clearer position or a final decision by December 31, and if we get pushed back a little bit, then it'll be as soon as possible after that, but I'm anxious to have decisions one way or the other on those remaining ones.

The school fees is my final point that I'll just comment on briefly. That, in fact, hon. member, was the first item that I put on the agenda for this last round of meetings. I had about eight specific items, and then the school boards had some for me. But the first item that I had on there was about school fees. It was about fundraising, the question of basics versus extras, or what we might call essentials for education versus nonessentials – I know that you know this area very well, hon. member – and also on whether or not they thought a provincial policy would be needed with respect to both fundraising and school fees in general.

I'll make this observation, and then I'll take my chair. Almost every single school board said and acknowledged how difficult it might be to come up with a one-size-fits-all model in either of the school fees applications or the fundraising policy, what can be fundraised for, what cannot be fundraised for, and so on. They also said: if you're going to come forward with a policy like that, then please don't penalize us as a school board by taking away a potential revenue stream unless you as a province are prepared to step in there and make it up. I understand that very well. In fact, I was one of the first to mention it to them because I'm cognizant of that. You can appreciate that that would impact our budget to the tune of millions and millions of dollars, because I asked them all how much they receive from those kinds of revenues.

The last thing is simply this. These are the words of the school boards in a general sense. The parents tell them that they don't mind doing some fundraising. They really don't. Most parents don't mind being involved in the school system that way provided that there's not too much fundraising demanded of them and provided that it's not for so-called basics in education. I know that you know what I mean by that.

I think that we need to try and tighten up the definition of exactly what is now meant by basics. One example is computers. I would think, unarguably, that we can look at computers as becoming more and more an essential in the schools. Then the next question is: if they are essential, well, how many should it be? One computer for every three kids, or should it be one computer for one kid? So there's a lot of that ongoing discussion, and I'm looking at all of those issues right now as we strive to arrive at more stable, more predictable funding for a variety of these purposes. All I can do, hon. member, is try my best to address those issues, and that's what we're doing today.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is my great honour to rise again and respond to the supplementary budget estimate for education. I'm really glad that gross amounts have been increased, but these increases were generally to cover important capital and operating costs. I hope the government will keep this promise this time. Hiring new teachers is good news. My question to the hon. minister is: why was this not budgeted for during the budget process? I hope it's not a recipe for school closures in Edmonton and somewhere else.

How this money is going to be allocated is not so clear to me because of the time frame. I mean, I got this budget estimate just a couple of hours ago, and it's not a reasonable amount of time to go through these papers. I'm not prepared to ask you questions. Maybe I will ask you questions some other time. Just to make a note, the time is not enough for us to respond on the budget estimate.

I asked you in question period about one school in my constituency. The infrastructure, the condition of that elementary school, Ellerslie school, is so poor. I visited that school a couple of months ago. I had mentioned to you, I think in the last session, that the carpet inside the library may be 20 years old. At the elementary school – and I don't know what you call the other school – the conditions are really bad. Some students are disabled. They have special needs, and they are spending money from their own pockets. They are always complaining. I am going to see them. They have a parents' meeting tonight. That's the reason why I keep on requesting you to please come there and listen to their complaints. They need help.

That school is a very important part of the riding. It covers a big area. I know that it's already in the plan. I have that capital program. There's a new elementary school coming maybe in three years' time, but I don't know whether that old school should be demolished or if it needs some renovations. I know that in two years' time the government is planning to spend a million dollars on infrastructure. I think somebody should look at it, whether we should spend a million dollars on repairing that building or they should demolish the whole building and make a new school there.

City water I have already discussed. The kids have to wait for the truck, and sometimes that truck doesn't come there, and they have to wait for a long time, especially when they are in the school field and they are thirsty and they're waiting for the truck. I mean, this is not a good thing. When we are donating lots of money overseas, when we have some projects outside this country, it is a shame that our own children here in Alberta have to wait for tap water. This is a very serious issue. I discussed this with their parents, and they are not happy, so please consider this as urgency, as I requested of you many times. Please make a note, and somebody should go there and investigate the problem they have.

Another question I wanted to ask you because we are still going through the centennial year. I was surprised that during the centennial year the children from the schools were not bused to, you know, the big celebrations like we had outside the Legislature Building. I think it's a very good idea that whenever we celebrate something, we should involve children because children always remember. You know, when they grow up, they remember that during the centennial time they were there. They really enjoy the parties, especially for the centennial year. That was special. So just to make a note – I mean, I'm not criticizing the centennial. Lots of things were done really well. I appreciate, to you and the Minister of Community Development, that lots of things were done really nicely. I commend both of you because you were the minister before him.

I'm glad and commend your efforts on Punjabi language introduction in the public schools. I urge you once again to make sure that they get enough funding, and I'm really glad. I know you understand that it was badly needed.

Please keep in touch with all schools in Alberta. I'm not asking for one particular school, but you should contact other schools, in the south or maybe in Calgary. They might need some repair, maybe, on the school's condition.

I'm really happy that the government is planning to hire some new teachers, which is good news. We all know that the future of our children is the future of Alberta and the future of us.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. There are some excellent comments in there that I want to comment on, but first I want to clarify the first question that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie asked, and that's with respect to why these supplementary estimates amounts weren't anticipated and part of the regular budget process back in April. The simple answer is because in the case of the bus fuel costs, for example, nobody expected the bus fuel costs to jump as much as they did and to stay at that level. You know, sometimes you'll get spikes in prices and they come right back down. But as you know from the truckers' strike that was held down there – you remember that – we didn't know back in December, January, February, when we were putting the budget together, that diesel prices would jump and stay there as long as they did. So I hope that satisfies that part.

With respect to the additional monies that I'm looking for for the plant operation and maintenance, the new amount of money that we're asking for, as you know, is going straight out to school boards to help them, primarily because of the new funding formula that we have. This is money they will appreciate having, but it's precipitated largely by this new funding formula that we have, the per-pupil funding formula, hon. member, and also because we do recognize that there are increased costs for operating and maintaining our schools.

[Mr. Lougheed in the chair]

On that point I should also advise the member that the natural gas rebate program, which we have now as a government extended to cover even the month of October, that particular program will be rolled out for the benefit of schools for their operations budgets, that are impacted by natural gas prices. We'll have that process be similar to what was done in 2003, which is when we provided the last major round of natural gas cost increases to offset their impact at the local level.

With respect to your general point, though, on the final point, which is the school infrastructure money, the construction monies for in this case portables or, as we call them now, modulars, please understand that that amount of money for that sector of the estimates as well as the first two that I've talked about is coming, rather, entirely from unanticipated surplus dollars. So rather than pass up the opportunity to address some of the pressures that I know I have and, in turn, school boards have, I asked Treasury Board and cabinet and caucus and so on for support so that I could get some additional monies out to our school boards for those purposes. They all came out of unanticipated surplus dollars.

Again, back when the budgeting process occurred in January, February, March, and so on, nobody expected oil prices to jump up over 60 bucks a barrel and stay there for as long as they did. They're still hovering in that area. No one expected natural gas prices to jump to $10, $11, $12 a gigajoule, such as they have just done, and to stay there for as long as they have. You can't anticipate those things when you do the normal budgeting process, and that's one of the beautiful things about the system of parliament that we have. We're allowed as a government to bring in these supplementary estimates from time to time and address certain cost pressures.

I want to just indicate quickly, Mr. Chair, with respect to the elementary school that you have alluded to now, that I'm not sure if you're talking about the very same one that you asked about in question period, but I want to say this to the hon. member: I apologize if I didn't recognize that as the same school you talked to me about. I'm sorry; it didn't twig on me just immediately. However, one of the reasons that we have locally elected school boards is so that they can deal with local issues, and that's really where this issue needs to go first and foremost.

Now, I'm sure that some of our staff and friends are listening to this discussion today and that they will immediately find out something for you on this. I don't know if it will be possible before your meeting tonight. I've helped a lot of MLAs, both opposition and government MLAs, over the year that I've been here and addressed as quickly as I could some of the issues that their constituents brought to my attention. We'll try and do the same thing here, but it has to be done through the process established, hon. member, and in this case it's the Edmonton public school board.

I should tell you, regarding specifically the water issue, that I was thinking about that a little bit, and I was in fact chatting with some former mayors and reeves in our caucus just since question period. It was mentioned to me that perhaps there's an issue of annexation that has gone on or is being contemplated. I don't know, but I do know that the school board working with the city of Edmonton, if that's the jurisdiction within which it actually lies – and I suspect that it is – might have some sort of an issue with the annexation difficulty or where the boundary is drawn. But, again, we'll try and find that out a little more clearly for you.

Should schools that are in disrepair, such as you've described, be repaired or be demolished? That is also a local school board decision. I honestly don't know, hon. member, if they are contemplating something like that for – is it Ellerslie school? Yes? You're nodding your head yes? Okay. I'm sure they'll be reading Hansard and looking at your comments.

The last two things, Mr. Chair, quickly. With respect to the centennial year I think you asked something about: why weren't all the children bused to the Legislature or wherever during the day? I want to tell you that some school boards likely did something like that or some individual schools might have done that, but the decision is entirely at the local level. The reason for that, hon. member, is because different parts of the province and the school boards who represent those different parts have different start times for the school year.

Now, for some it may have been more convenient to do; for others it may not have been. You see, here's the deal though. You know how you need parents to sign slips? Now, a lot of parents may have been away in the last two weeks of August and couldn't get it done, so you couldn't take half the school and not the other half, and those were the reasons that they gave me. It had nothing to do with me, hon. member. It had to do with local school boards. Those who were contemplating it likely got permission slips signed by students back in June just to make sure that when September 1 came around and they only had one or two days – and you know how confusing things can sometimes get around the start-up of school – they wouldn't be caught short footed.

As you may recall, I tried to make September 1 a big holiday, and I had some support for that and so on, but the business community and others thought that if we moved some of those celebrations to the evening, we could accommodate everybody. So most communities had large celebrations after the school adjournment hour of 3:30. In fact, we encouraged them to do that, and they did. Here we ran all day and all night because of the significance of the Legislature Building and the capital city and so on.

The Punjabi language comment that you made: thank you for that. In fact, there is going to be a full language and culture program developed for Punjabi. We have nine of these programs already. This morning I did speak with the curriculum director from one of the school boards, who indicated to me that they are feeling very good and very strong about this, and it will be a very large enrolment that takes up the Punjabi language. As you know [remarks in Punjabi], which translates, hon. Hansard folks, as: I am learning Punjabi.

So that having been said, we're very proud of all of the languages in this province. If a school board wishes to undertake the development of a language and culture program course other than one of the nine – or now we'll have the 10th, being Punjabi – they are certainly welcome to do this, and we will help them where we can.

Thank you.

Mrs. Mather: I'm really supportive of this request for supplementary money, but I do have some concerns I'd like to mention, and I'm going to try not to repeat what's already been said.

I think the best legacy we can leave behind is the best trained workforce in the world, and that only happens with education. We need all kinds of education, and it costs money to tool up to the 21st century. The minister and I heard this morning at a wonderful event that's forward-thinking, a partnership with Edmonton public schools and the Canadian Space Agency, about the need for us to make sure that we are competitive in the future.

Unfortunately, insistence on results has forced an emphasis, I think, on support for students who will not pull the average down, with the result being that more kids are dropping out of high school because we no longer provide a broad range of learning opportunities. I've witnessed wonderful results with students in beauty culture, building construction, and automotives. Where would these people be now without those programs? We seem to have it upside down. We measure the wrong things. How do we measure self-esteem, and how do we measure what it means to be a useful member of society? How do we measure happiness with one's work?

We have to spend money to change the system, I believe, and make Albertans competitive. We live with a global market and economy now, and only the best trained workforce will be able to compete. It costs money to train people, but the benefits far outweigh the cost. Working people pay taxes; they don't get sick as often. The cost of ignorance is higher than what we need to do to prevent it.

Of the concerns that I have, some have been mentioned. Of course, school fees and fundraising are major concerns in my constituency also.

Taking a look at the need for early intervention, where it should be most effective, of course, is in the elementary schools, yet elementary schools get the least amount of money. That's the place where I think we can make the most difference. With the latest recommendations for class sizes it's become even tighter. When you're told to have 17 and 22 students in division 1 and 2, it's tough to give the extras.

The extras I'm talking about are counselling. There was a time when we could be proud about the number of counsellors that we had. Edmonton public school district, actually, had elementary counselling and offered wonderful preventative programs that I know made a difference because I see adults now who were in those programs who tell me that they still remember those sessions.

Reading recovery is a Cadillac reading rescue program. At $3,000 just to train the teacher, who would be working with eight to 10 students a half-hour a day every day, it is a program that can make a difference for children without the support systems at home. I think that this is a program that in the end can make a huge difference because of the trickle-up effect to high schools. We get students coming in with a better sense of esteem. Because they can read and they understand what they're reading, high school is going to be a much more successful experience.

I also want to mention libraries. Most of the libraries that I'm aware of are in a state where they need money to bring them up to par because of the cuts over the last five years. With curriculum changes going on in all the sciences, for example – and the socials are just starting, I think – the support for these curriculums cost dollars. That money needs to be there for texts and for the library supports that the curriculum demands so that students can do the research and so forth. Science books change almost every three years. It's a huge cost to schools.

Then, of course, there are vandalism costs that have to come out of plant operation and maintenance, and often there just isn't enough money there for the unexpected spray-painting and so forth.

With high school funding it seems like there's been another change in the operations and maintenance grant funding that I don't really quite understand, but I'd like to learn more. It doesn't seem that it's sufficient to operate schools. Modernization money is desperately needed.

In high schools course completion funding continues to be an issue. We don't get paid for students who have poor attendance, yet many, many hours of hard work by professionals will go into trying to make those students want to be in school.

Another area of concern is the lack of funding for career planning and apprenticeship programming. I think we need to expand those. Those need to be augmented in our schools, going back to the need for more trained workers. There are not enough staff in these areas, and we just need the support there.

Transportation has already been mentioned, so I won't go there.

I am disappointed that there's no apparent plan for dealing with the unfunded liability for teachers' pensions, which I believe is at about $2 million, the minister mentioned earlier today.

Finally, a personal question in terms of portables. I think the word "portable" is misleading. At least, it was in the past. You know the problems in Mill Woods, where we had tremendous overcrowding. I can recall being at Grace Martin school, where we had 19 portables to cope with the crowding. So this has to do with planning. You know, how can we say that that would have been unexpected, that there would have been that need to accommodate so many students?

Then a few years later at J. Percy Page high school we were in the same situation of overcrowding, but we couldn't get portables because, Mr. Minister, apparently it's too costly to move the portables. You were talking about an improvement in that. That would make a whole bunch of sense to me. The reality is that you talked about fluctuations in population throughout the province. That happens in the cities too. If there was some way whereby we could avoid the unanticipated overcrowding problems by moving portables or by planning better, that would be good.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Clearly some well-spoken and well-researched comments within the hon. member's statements. Having been a former teacher, I know that she speaks from the heart, and I'm delighted that she started by saying how supportive she is of these additional monies because I am too. In fact, we were together this morning at the J. Percy Page high school, where I believe the hon. member once taught, and we witnessed the signing of an agreement between J. Percy Page on behalf of Edmonton public schools and the Canadian Space Agency to bring that form of learning into that classroom and to others. So it was a great, great day.

I agree with you, hon. member, that there are some wonderful results that are coming out from our students and that we need to pay a little more attention to the CTS area, be it beauty culture or be it automotives or be it woodworking or electricity or welding or whatever it is. I think that if we were able to do that – and I don't have the money right now to do it – we would also help address the skilled labour shortage that we have in this province. So there are some tremendous benefits to that.

I also think that if we structured it properly, hon. member, we would also see an increase in high school completion rates, and we would see a decrease in the dropout rates because not everyone as a student is destined for academia land. Some are destined for tradesville and some are destined for other locations, but the point is to keep them at least through to grade 12 so that all of those doors might be open to them later on. So I'll read through your comments more carefully in that respect.

With respect to what we're measuring and if we're measuring the wrong things or not – I was trying to keep up with you and take some notes – suffice it to say that we put a lot of effort into designing our own performance measurements as a government, in this case in education, and we put a lot of thought and emphasis and best practice type of research work into designing performance measurements or benchmarks or targets or whatever you want to call them for school boards to consider in their local jurisdiction. It's true: we are moving into more and more of a global market economy, and we need to be ever cognizant of that, which I think you alluded to.

On the fees and fundraising piece and the comments that you made, I understand that there are difficulties in this area. That's why I engaged all the school boards in a very one-on-one frank discussion about it. I just haven't yet got the final analysis of it all because the final tour day was just last Thursday, but I will be making some comments on that at the appropriate time. I wish I could give you a date, and right now I just can't.

The early intervention comment with respect to elementary schools. I agree and think that if we could do earlier early intervention, we would be benefiting a lot of the children. The comment with respect to elementary students being the lowest funded, I think, or something to that effect, you said: in fact, the new formula under PO and M elevates them to the top of the class. They will be the highest funded. Now, that's just for that one area, PO and M. That's a good thing. In fact, it'll be the highest rate in the K to 12, and perhaps we can take that lead and look at other issues that you've referenced.

On the comment about class sizes still being too large. You know, when the Learning Commission made its recommendations, it said: address class sizes over a five-year period. Now, we in our wisdom as a government said: no, we should try and do it in three years. So we have been trying to do it in the three-year window, and we've got one more year to go. So far, from September of '04 through to the end of September of '05, I believe we have hired about 1,600 brand new full-time equivalent teachers. By this time next year we will have helped school boards hire 2,250 brand new full-time equivalent teachers, and that will at that point make a dramatic difference to class sizes. It's the final shoe to fall or to drop. That will allow us to hire 500 more teachers next year.

That having been said, we're very cognizant of the pressures it's putting here on infrastructure because some parts of this province are just absolutely booming along, and we're having some trouble keeping up, in fact. No one could have planned for what's going on in some parts of the province.

The issue with respect to counselling and librarian teachers and so on I commented on in response to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, so I won't repeat other than to say that I am aware of the ever-growing needs for libraries that are needed, which I think was a fresh point you mentioned, and also how curriculum changes and technological changes in our schools are driving some of those needs. So we're looking at a lot of this.

In fact, I appointed a ministerial advisory committee probably two or three weeks ago to review the renewed funding framework. The new one that came in last year was a living model, and the new one that just came out in September is also a living model. It's improved and it's clearer. I just knew before we even went out on the tour with the school boards that there would already be issues because I've received letters from some of the chairs and so on. So I immediately said: look, let's get out in front of this; let's get a ministerial advisory committee going. So we have. My deputy minister is chairing it, and I think there are about 12 Albertans from across the province who are working on that with him. A lot of the issues that you talked about, and some of them that came out of the ACOL, the Alberta Commission on Learning, report are going to be covered in that review.

The plant operation and maintenance funding changes. I think I've talked to those already, but suffice it to say that the new formula will in fact look at per-pupil funding for the K to 6 group as one level, for the grades 7 to 9 group at another level, and the grades 10 to 12 group at yet another level. The second major component of the new funding formula will deal specifically with the area of severe special needs, recognizing that there are some students who have severe special needs that simply physically require more space. The third part of the new formula will be somewhat of a repeat of the old utilization formula, and that's with respect to sparsity, distance, and travel for school boards, which is still a major concern. Finally, the issue of small schools by necessity will also be factored into the new funding formula.

We've got a lot of work to do there. For example, the 25-kilometre rule, as you're well aware, is one that needs some review. Perhaps the 290-student rule within the small schools by necessity formula needs review. Perhaps even the 2.4 kilometre walk rule needs some review. In rural Alberta in particular, not that urban Alberta is that much different, there are some children who are having to cross some dangerous intersections, and parents made that very clear to me in some of the receptions I hosted for them and for teachers just over the last six weeks. There is a lot in that review, hon. member, and I hope we'll be able to address everything to the satisfaction of the majority, at least.

The final two points, Mr. Chair. One, the vandalism costs. Obviously, those are unexpected costs, and I know that most school boards do carry a contingency to deal with that. But occasionally there are severer things that happen either by deliberate acts of vandalism or sometimes by so-called acts of God, such as the explosion in Redwater just a week or two ago. Maybe it was a little longer than that but nonetheless within the last month. I've just seen the pictures from that recently, and who would ever have anticipated that at 5 in the morning on a certain day that CTS lab would blow up? Well, it just happens that it did, and there was a fire, so how does that get paid for? We're looking at that right now.

The 19 portables at one school site caught my attention. I want to just make this closing comment in that respect, Mr. Chair, for the hon. member. First, thank you for raising the issue. I know exactly the school you're talking about. But I want to indicate to you that one of the reasons we're looking at a new design for schools is so that they would in fact be constructed in what I hope will be a very clever and esthetically pleasing yet efficient and effective way that will accommodate them not only looking good and functioning well, but it would also allow the new style of modular units to be added to or taken away from without impacting the overall functionality of the school. They wouldn't look like an add-on or a take-away. They wouldn't be 14 different colours and all of those practical kinds of things.

The single largest thing about this is the fact that the new modulars, formerly known as portables, will be so strongly built, steel fabricated with improved ventilation and approved attachability to the core of the school, that we're really hoping that they are going to catch on in future designs because I think that is one way that we can deal with the issue that I think you wanted to bring to my attention. Costs of moving them are expensive. Typically we spend probably a quarter of a million dollars on building and moving and site preparation and so on. I don't remember the transportation costs exactly. It's probably in the $30,000 to $50,000 range, and it is expensive, but at least the new ones can be moved without danger of them falling apart en route.

Thank you for those comments, and I hope that I've been helpful in addressing some of them with answers.

4:30

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just want to make some brief comments on the supplementary estimates for Education. I, too, would like to express I guess some sense of hope that there is, in fact, a moving in the right direction in terms of education here in this province. There are some promising signs of that. I do thank the minister for probably assisting in that endeavour.

There are a number of issues, though, that have come across my path, both in my constituency and then travelling across the province. I think that categorically you do have some of these on your supplementary budget list, but I just want to emphasize the importance of dealing with some of these things. So in no particular order, but perhaps something you were just speaking about previously is the use of portables as a way to build the schools in the future and incorporating portables from the beginning in the design of a structure. I certainly do applaud the possibility of doing this, but I can't emphasize the importance of changing the essential design and how this goes about.

One school in Grande Prairie that I visited not so long ago comes to my mind. Portables were part of the structure of the school from the beginning, but this was a temporary measure, I think is the way they were looking at it. Now, 25 years later these eight or 10 portables, incorporated into the hallway and the rest of the school, are still there. I would say that the essential problem was one of drainage. The rest of the permanent structure was sloping away, and these other structures I think for 25 years had moisture passing under them. So, you know, being brave enough to stick my head down there was enough to tell me that there has to be a limit on how long portables are in place. If we are in fact going to this new model, as you suggested, which does sound promising, then the management site development has to be very clearly defined.

This particular school in Grande Prairie – and I'll talk to you about it; I'll send you a note on it – certainly is among the sort of, I guess, emergency situations that I've seen for structures in various places, as I say, in my constituency and around the province. I'm very happy to see that Infrastructure dealing with the infrastructure for education has indeed moved back to Education. I think this is where people can make the most intelligent decisions about the needs of individual schools: in school boards, you know, the people who are using these structures every day. So that certainly is something to applaud as well.

Again, speaking about structures, I know that you are reviewing and revisiting the utilization rate. My colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview did mention, I think, the importance of recognizing the different ages of structures. How that does factor into how the utilization rate will affect the school, older schools with larger hallways and different storage spaces and what have you, has really been an unfair disadvantage to these older schools because, of course, the utilization rates would make it so that you could never really appear to be full when you have hallways and unusable space factored into the formula.

As well, we are seeing always a dynamic of population change and different neighbourhoods moving up and down in terms of the amount of children going to school in an area. I think that it's very important for us to be more flexible in how we're using our neighbourhood schools so that we can perhaps incorporate extracurricular activity or, in fact, community activity into the utilization rates for those structures. The city planners and school board people who put community schools into our older neighbourhoods many years ago did so to meet a need for higher student populations in the past, but that does not preclude the possibility that we will see those utilization rates in the future as well.

In the interim the existence of a school in a neighbourhood, particularly in an established neighbourhood, is absolutely crucial to the viability of that neighbourhood to come back and revitalize itself and attract new young families to continue the cycle of using the school and having a vibrant community and otherwise keeping the community from sliding into less desirable sorts of utilization. So community schools are something we have to fight for, I think, in the most strenuous possible way and be creative and work together on both sides of this House to find ways in which we can use the structures that we already have that were built and are there and use them as centres of communities in the future and not just giving a shelf life to a school of 30 or 40 years. I find it a bit disconcerting to see a school being shut down when it only is, perhaps, as old as myself. You know, I think that we have to have a more permanent sense of what a structure it is and what sort of future are we building for that community much longer past, say, a 40-year period.

I know that the student-teacher ratio initiative is a three-year plan, but I think that it would be nice to review the success of that next year in as extensive a way as possible with input from all levels of schools, each division of schools, as well as input from people on the ground to see how it has in fact affected the teaching quality and the actual student-teacher ratio in classrooms. Sometimes I know that teachers in classrooms fail to see these changes immediately. When we did endeavour to reduce the student-teacher ratio in this province a year and a half ago or almost two years ago, I think that teachers were hopeful and parents were hopeful and administrators and school boards too. But often they're not necessarily seeing that ratio decreasing on an individual basis. So I think that a collaborative review of the success of the student-teacher ratio initiative in this province after next year would be very much appreciated by all of the stakeholders involved.

I would like to put in a plug for full-day kindergarten. I think that we're seeing in general that education is an investment. Early intervention, reading recovery programs, and just a focus on children at their very youngest stages of formal learning in a public school environment are absolutely crucial. We confront those results and the success of those results all of the time from jurisdictions across North America, even right here in Edmonton with our inner-city school initiative. We can see that the results were quite astounding, and I believe that what's good for one area must be good for everywhere in Alberta. I think that with a full-day kindergarten program we would be rewarded with increased results on all levels of schooling. I believe it would be perhaps the most important lasting legacy that we could provide the next generation here at this juncture.

I just want to make sure that I'm covering all of my bases here. I would like to bring up one last point, and this is something that was brought to my attention from some administrative colleagues that I know. This was a proposal perhaps or it's actually happening now; I'm not sure. It was the provincial government charging a fee for assessment of students when students move from one school to another. Now, I've been approached with this as a concern in regard to it costing a lot of money for school boards. I was given the figure of $2.5 million to $3 million for Edmonton public to basically pay back – it's like a clawback – to the provincial government to provide this assessment fee.

Now, the details of it I'm not entirely sure about, but it sounds problematic. I think we do want to have a clear indication of what a student's level of achievement is at each stage along the way, and we want to have some unification in those numbers to know that, let's say, a student's performance can be equally measured in all parts of the province. That being said, I think that the professionalism of individual schools and teachers to be able to execute something like this and to meet standards that would be applicable across the province certainly is there already, and to have, say, a separate agency doing this or charging an administrative fee might seem onerous or, as I say, something that resembles a clawback from the school boards to the provincial government.

Just in conclusion, I'm very pleased with some indications that our public education system is moving in the right direction. Let's make sure we can work together to ensure that that will continue in the future. Thank you.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. Once again some very insightful and measured comments, and I'm grateful for that. It's actually a pleasure to listen to speakers who aren't here to lecture other members, and I think the last three speakers in particular have done that very well. So thank you. It's just nice to have a pleasant discourse on this. The sky is not totally falling, as you know. In fact, I don't think that it's falling at all in most areas. There might be some improvements we need to make, and I've indicated already that I'm willing to do whatever I can to address those.

There is a sense of hope, which I think was your opening comment here, and it's a greater sense of hope. It's all about our students, and as long as we continue to make decisions surrounding what is best for the education of our children, I think that we will always make the right decision. So thank you for the kudos that you expressed in that regard.

Now, the issue that you raised with respect to portables. You know, it's not the intention to use portables – the new word for them is modulars because they're a different type of portable – to build schools. It's a modular design concept to build a core school around which modulars can be injected. It sort of reminds me of that trivia game, you know, where you have those little wedges. Now, that may not be exactly how they all look. There will be different designs to choose from. If you have that concept in mind of something being added and then being brought together so that it looks like it's still part of the whole or expanded so that it still looks like part of the whole but the core concept around which it's built essentially stays the same, that would be a bit of a mental picture that I hope you can conjure up as to what is being discussed in some circles.

With respect to the comment about changing the essential design and how it might impact future decisions, I want to tell you, hon. member, that in my discussions with the school boards just over the last few weeks one of the issues that was brought up to me in the context of aging infrastructure and the need for rightsizing or modernizing or upgrading or evergreening or whatever term you want to put to it was this: the older schools were built with entrances and exits that didn't necessarily require visitors to go past the central office. So they have concerns about safety and security and monitoring and that kind of thing. That's where we need to put some attention as well, and the new designs do in fact do that far more effectively, hon. member, than some of the older designs did.

The other point you mentioned is something about moisture passing underneath some of the old portables, and I know exactly what you're talking about because I've studied a couple of these issues.

I want to just tell members of the House that one of the things that I don't think we'll ever do again is what was necessitated to be done perhaps 30, 40, 50, 60 years ago – I'm not sure of the date but long ago – when concrete foundations were poured directly onto the clay ground. That has caused some moving and shifting and slipping and sliding of some of our aging infrastructure, for example. That may not pertain specifically to the portables because they're settled in different ways. Still, some poor schools were built on slabbing, I think they call it, or something along that line.

The Grande Prairie urgency. If there's a way that you can remember the name of the school that you have in mind and let me know about it, chances are that it's the same one I'm looking at. I'm well aware that there are some significant pressures at Alexander Forbes, and we hope to be addressing those very, very quickly and soon.

On the old utilization rate that you referred to, my comment in that respect would be this. The utilization rate, such as it was, which looked at a couple of the factors that I've already put on record, may have worked back when it was first brought in, but it has certainly not functioned as well as one would hope in the modern-day sense, and that's why we brought in this new per-pupil funding rate, but I think I've already indicated, hon. member, that that isn't the total answer yet either. It's an improvement in the right direction, and it's brought in with the right intentions – please, believe me – but I'm acutely aware that there's still a little bit of other relooking that has to be done.

I'll put it this way. Perhaps there's an opportunity for us to look at some per-program funding. Now, we're not quite there yet, and I say that because whether you have five children in a classroom or you have 15, the heating cost is going to be the same, the lighting costs are going to be the same, and the teacher costs are going to be the same. So when you fund on only a per-pupil basis, you're really somewhat penalizing some of the smaller classrooms across the province, and that takes me to your point about community schools.

We have community schools in the cities, and we have them out in the country spots and so on, as we all know. Community schools are a critical concept to remember because community schools tend to work with community agencies and with our student health initiative partnership, for example, where we work with health authorities, with child and family services authorities, and the school board. Now, I shouldn't say we as a government so much as those three entities working amongst themselves. But you get the point, I'm sure.

That takes me to the issue of community schools and community agencies working to tackle the Premier's recent initiative to combat crystal meth, which is another issue that I discussed with virtually every board back in January, when I first met with all 62 of them, and again just now in October and November when I met with all 62 again. So the concept of community schooling is one that I do support, but I do know that in some cases school boards have some very difficult decisions to make when your school is down to a handful of children.

It's particularly acute in two areas: one, some of the smaller areas of our province in the rural sector and, secondly, in some of our cities where the population is aging and staying. The kids have grown up and left, so the community school, which was once bustling and bubbling with bright young minds, virtually has a very small group of young people that are still in the age range that they're able to attend. So the community school has sort of outgrown its use in that area, and closing it is one of the most divisive things, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview pointed out, that a school board has to do.

The final couple of comments are on the class size initiative and the teacher-student ratio that you referred to. I appreciate your comments on what you were saying. Can we review its success next year? Hon. member, we review this on an ongoing basis, I mean, literally almost every day, and if not, then every week because I'm particularly interested in how the Learning Commission's recommendation to address class size on a jurisdictional basis differs from addressing it on a per-class basis.

Now, we're not going to go down the path of capping class size, such as I think B.C. did. The reason for that is simply because if you mandate, for example, that the largest class in kindergarten to grade 3 should be not more than 17 children, well, okay. So what do you do when the 18th and the 19th child arrive and you've got a class of 19? See, you have no flexibility to bring in an aide to address the added teaching requirements. You automatically have to hire another teacher and get another classroom for the two students. Now, obviously, they would split into a nine and an eight or whatever, but that's not the answer.

We're trying to work with this jurisdictional average thing. But I know that even in my own constituency I have some challenges and problems. Oddly enough, they seem to be more at the K to 6 level, which baffles me because that was the first area that class size initiative funding, the $110 million, for example, that's in that portfolio this '05-06 year – it's at that level that we thought we would be addressing the needs first. Yet I'm finding that all the others have been addressed, and in some cases K to 3 in particular has not been yet sufficiently addressed. I do know that the school boards are trying their best with the funds they've been given to do that, and I think you'll see more movement than ever as we complete it with the funding next year. In fact, Edmonton public schools, I think, hired something in the neighbourhood of around 180 new teachers. That's a pretty significant group of new hires.

The full-day kindergarten. I've noted your comments and the assessment fees comment. I'm puzzled by this one a little bit. I think I heard you say that assessment fees are being charged by the government of Alberta whenever children transfer from one jurisdiction to another or something to that effect. Whatever it is, hon. member, I'll look at it; I'll read it more closely. I appreciate your bringing it to my attention because maybe that is one area that we do need to review.

So thank you for those calm and measured comments.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Chairman, I was hoping that we could move on to Children's Services if that's at all possible.

The Chair: After considering the 2005-2006 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and the lottery fund for the Department of Education for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Agreed to:
Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases $75,133,000

The Chair: Shall the vote be reported?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Children's Services

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to present the 2005-06 supplementary estimates of the Ministry of Children's Services. In total, Alberta Children's Services 2005-06 supplementary estimate is $38.4 million: $35.9 million in operating expenses, which included 19 new full-time positions, and $2.5 million in capital investments.

Part of these supplementary funds will support the implementation of Alberta's new, innovative early childhood development and child care plan. The plan was developed through consultation to ensure that it met the needs of Albertans. Our plan increases child care, family day homes, and kin child care subsidies for low- and middle-income families.

We have also raised income eligibility thresholds, so families can earn up to 25 per cent more and still be eligible for maximum subsidy. We estimate that the number of families receiving this subsidy will increase by 45 per cent. To successfully implement this part of the plan, we require an additional $13.9 million.

We've created a new subsidy of up to $100 per month to assist stay-at-home parents with their early childhood development fees. This will support the early childhood development of over 16,000 preschool children across Alberta. We've included an additional $10.8 million in our supplementary estimates to help with this part of the plan.

We've doubled funding support for children with disabilities. This means more spaces, improved staff training, and enhanced quality care for these children. To achieve this, the supplementary estimate includes an additional $2.1 million.

We're providing funding to improve the quality of child care services by increasing staff wages and training opportunities. This means that the average salary for child care professionals with two-year early childhood development diplomas who work in an accredited program will increase from $11.50 to $14.46 per hour. We've also increased professional development funding for eligible centres to a thousand dollars per staff member to support additional training. To successfully implement this part of the plan, we require an additional $7.2 million.

We've given families easier access to early childhood development screening and assessment services and supports to ensure that children are reaching their developmental milestones. We've also started a toll-free parent information line. By calling 1-866-714-KIDS, parents now have easy access to the information they need. We'll require an additional $1.9 million to implement this part of the plan.

In order to effectively implement our new five-point plan, we'll need to improve our information systems. To do this, we require an additional $1.3 million.

The $37.2 million we require to successfully implement the early childhood development and child care plan will be fully offset by federal revenue transfers. In addition, we need $1.2 million for system enhancements to support two important pieces of legislation: the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act and the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act. This funding will allow us to continue to provide Alberta families with quality programs and services. It will enable us to implement our plan and continue to lead the way in early childhood and development and child care programs.

Mrs. Mather: I've got a number of comments. I guess I'd like to start with, first of all, the recognition that as we look at the 21st century, we need to revisit the idea of child care. If we really want to succeed, our children must succeed. The science of child development tells us that there are many things that we can do to invest in early childhood learning experiences and developmental experiences that will pay off many times over by having children do well. When children succeed in school, they become more productive, they become higher income earners, and they become more contributing members of society.

When parents want to go to work and want to choose to send their children to facilities, we must make sure that these facilities are of good quality and of the best quality possible. So I'm really pleased that we've got the good news that we finally have an agreement with the federal government.

As I look at what the $37,200,000 is going to do in that regard, it's encouraging. We're going to increase the maximum child care subsidy and boost the income threshold to allow more families to be eligible effective November 1. We're introducing a new benefit of up to a hundred dollars per month to help eligible stay-at-home parents pay fees for licensed nursery schools and other approved early childhood development programs. That's effective January 2006. We'll increase funding to improve access to specialized child care for children with disabilities. We're increasing funding for wages and training opportunities for individuals working in accredited daycare and approved family day-home programs. Of course, we're providing parents with more information about parenting and available programs through the new parent information line. These are wonderful things.

It's essential that daycare staff receive financial support and professional development grants. It's good to see that the ministry has provided funding to support programs and staff working together with children. However, income in the child care sector is about half the national average for all occupations and less than half as much as elementary school and kindergarten teachers. We need to recognize that well-paid, trained child care workers are at the heart of building a quality system and a healthy community. The federal funding is a start, but this government needs to do more.

One of my questions is: why aren't any supports provided for out-of-school care services that aren't eligible for accreditation? I'm hearing from out-of-school care services that they can't keep their staff because daycare workers are now making more than out-of-school care workers with the same qualifications, training, and experience. I'm wondering: why wasn't any of the surplus allocated for out-of-school care services to assist centres in recruiting and keeping staff?

The $13,900,000 of the Alberta early learning and child care investment plan, put towards supporting "low and middle-income families through increased day care, family day home, and kin child care subsidies," is good, but I'm wondering. As we look back to 2002, the department received a report supporting daycare professionals' issues and options with the exact same recommendation. Why did parents have to wait for funding from the federal government for subsidy supports to increase? What has taken so long? Would parents still be suffering to make ends meet if the federal government hadn't given this money to the province at this time?

There's a request of $1.2 million for equipment/inventory purchases for information systems enhancements to support program delivery under the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act and the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act. I'm wondering why this was not budgeted for during the budget process in the spring. More importantly, how is this extra money actually going to be allocated? Can you give us some details there?

I notice also that equipment/inventory purchases for early learning and child care initiatives cost an extra $1,300,000 on top of the $68,577,000 for child care already budgeted for. Again, why was this not budgeted for initially? Can you tell us in some detail how that extra money is going to be allocated? What are those dollars going to do for us?

My other priority concerns. I don't see any increase for youth shelters. This is specifically harmful to the agencies that provide these services because there's no guarantee of funding past one year. The ministry needs to look at better ways of contracting so that we have sustained, predictable, and stable funding for shelters.

Another question: why hasn't any of the surplus been allocated to inspect daycare facilities and family day homes, especially since nothing was allocated during the spring budget?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member has asked many, many questions. I think that first of all she needs to understand that the agreement we negotiated with the federal government was for the ages zero to six. So when she starts talking about the support for out-of-school care, that wasn't part of the negotiated agreement or any part of the discussion that the hon. Minister Dryden wanted to even discuss. It was brought up at the negotiation tables about: while we're getting this agreement between zero to six, what about six to 12? We had lengthy discussion with him also on a particular discussion about tax relief for stay-at-home parents. The support for the out-of-school care comes under the auspices of FCSS, and that's delivered by the municipalities. I think we're giving the municipalities about $62.9 million. They make that decision on how to distribute the money for the out-of-school care.

We talked about the income of child care workers and some of the other things that we brought into the agreement. I think the hon. member has to understand that all of the things that we negotiated in the agreement were all things that Albertans wanted. We took a huge consultation process on this. The parents and daycare workers/providers that responded to our online consultation – their letter writing, their phone calls, accessing our website – all indicated all of the points and the plans that she currently sees, that we negotiated. That would have been some of the things that she's already alluded to, in fact: the raising of the subsidies, the accreditation program, the regulated childcare to low- and middle-income, more support for stay-at-home parents, all of the things.

I must tell her that with the $100 per month, or the $1,200 per year, that we're providing for stay-at-home parents, we're the only province that put that, and we were pushing our envelope on that when we were negotiating with the federal government. The access to child care for children with disabilities: all part of the consultation as well as the quality child care and the wages to the workers.

I can only tell her that what I'm receiving in my office are kudos right across the province and from all over. Daycare workers are very excited about the wages, and we're getting e-mails, we're getting faxes, we're getting letters from people within the child care industry that are honestly very, very pleased with what's happening in Alberta.

The $1.2 million that she talked about: why wasn't it originally in our budget? This was money that we needed because of all of the work that we have to do to put this child care program into place. Youth shelters weren't part of this negotiated agreement. Again I want to emphasize that this was an agreement that we made with the federal government and included only zero to six, so youth shelters weren't part of the negotiations. I can let the hon. member know in regard to youth shelters – I know that it's one of her passions – that we are reviewing youth shelters at this time. I spent the entire summer travelling right across the province meeting with all the regions and visited many, many youth shelters and spoke to the directors at the youth shelters. They were very, very pleased with, one, our taking the time to stop in and, two, that we're looking at a review about the bed capacities and the dollars and if we can help them at all.

The inspection of the day homes. She also should know that we're reviewing the social care facility act, which is being done by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort. It hasn't been reviewed in 26 years. We've determined that the child care inspections and that will stay under the ministry. The seniors part of it will move over to the ministry of seniors, and we will bring in a new act in regard to recognizing this.

I think I have answered most of your questions. If I haven't – and I know we haven't got a lot of time – I will give the commitment to the member, as I have in the past, that for any questions I haven't been able to answer for you, we will, like we have previously, provide it to you in writing. I've got some of my staff taking notes, and we will continue to provide you some information.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm so impressed in recent years by so much research going into the issue of child care in Canada. I assume that the hon. minister was at the November 20, 2004, gathering of ministers from federal, provincial, and territorial governments when you adopted the four principles for a new national system of early learning and child care, important principles known under the acronym QUAD: quality, universally inclusive, accessible, and child care with a developmental focus.

Now, I'm not going to talk about all of those aspects because I want to relate my question to the actual funding that has come from the federal government, $37.2 million, increasing, I understand, to $85 million next year and to $100 million in years to come. My question is around the universality aspect. I know there are differences in viewpoint between the approach to daycare that the government is taking and the approach of the opposition. I realize that, but I am just concerned. For example, statistically in Canada in terms of regulated child care spaces the average is no more than 12 to 15 per cent of children under the age of six, so Canada lags way behind other developed countries. I mean, if you look at other countries, like Belgium and Sweden, it's closer to 100 per cent and 60 per cent in terms of three year olds in Norway and Denmark and so on.

My concern is that child care is, for me, a basic human right, so we ought to be increasing the number of spaces and the amount of money that's providing for spaces in daycare. I want to ask the minister: how many regulated spaces does this amount of money represent? What can we say in Alberta about what percentage of regulated spaces we have for daycare given the $37.2 million that's coming from the federal government to the province? Will those spaces increase in the future? What kind of development are we on? What kind of route are we on?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, I think what's interesting about this province, Mr. Chair, is that Alberta seems to always be uniquely different. It's about parents' choice, and if parents choose to put their child in daycare, they'll make that choice. What is different about this province and a first in Canada is that we're the only province in Canada that has an accredited daycare program. In fact, Minister Dryden came to visit us several months ago and did a tour of the accreditation. We've got 97 per cent of the daycares in this province that have applied to be an accredited daycare, which is an incredible – incredible – amount of daycares applying. That means that with all of the daycares in this province, once they get through the preaccreditation and the accreditation, we will have the top daycares in the country because of the process that they have to go through to get to that particular process.

I think it's a matter of supply and demand always, and if daycare spaces are needed, then businesses will have to determine if they want to increase. I can tell the hon. member that in the farm areas we're the first province in Canada to provide kin child care. For the farm people that live in this area that are in a financial situation where they have to go back to work and there's no daycare around there, we will pay a caregiver within the family so that their daughter or son can go back to work. That has been accepted within the rural communities. They are quite appreciative of the fact that this government has recognized that sometimes farm people get into a situation where they have to go back to work. We've recognized that, and if grandma and grandpa or an auntie and uncle have to babysit, then we'll recognize that and pay them.

To the member, I think that more important is that this whole agreement was signed on what Albertans asked for, not what the government wanted, not what I wanted. It was truly put together by what Albertans wanted, and they were very, very clear when they were calling us, writing us, and on all those things they chose to get hold of us on. They wanted parents' choice. That's exactly what this agreement was brought forward on.

You referenced the November 20 meeting, I believe. The former minister was at that particular meeting. I can tell you that in the meetings after the election we also accepted the QUAD principle. We think it's important. Alberta's agreement was negotiated in good faith. It was negotiated on behalf of – again, I keep repeating this: it was Albertans and what Albertans wanted. It took us some time to get our points across, obviously, to the federal minister. I can tell you that what we're hearing now is that other provinces are wanting the same agreement as Alberta has. You know, parents in this province are very, very pleased.

When you're negotiating an agreement of $489 million over five years, there are going to be some bumps and hiccups in the road, but we're going to be listening to what parents have to say and how we can address it. We're in year 1 of the agreement, and we've got four more years to go on that particular agreement. We'll listen to what they want and what they have to say about this agreement.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to speak on these supplementary estimates for Children's Services. One of the first points that I would like to make – and again it's certainly welcome to see some additional funding for children's services. I think this is an area in which this province has chronically underfunded their obligation to people in need, and particularly children and people with a low income. So it's always welcome to see some extra dollars there.

It does give me some concern to wonder why we are putting $38 million in new spending in now. I certainly can see some of the things that needed to be done in regard to matching or to complementing the new federal money that has come in regard to affordable daycare services. You know, I'm wondering why we couldn't have tacked this onto the initial budget estimates that we debated and worked with in the spring. It seems like quite a significant amount of money.

You know, this is speaking to a general problem that I think we have in this Legislature where the budgets are changing very significantly in these supplementary additions. I question whether or not we are able to debate those adequately in this House as a result of sort of these add-ons. So, categorically, I find that difficult, although certainly, as I say, this is an area that was so chronically underfunded that any penny we could certainly use.

First, in regard to child care it was brought to our attention that a forensic accounting firm, KPMG, completed a study on daycare facilities in 2002 entitled Supporting Day Care Professionals: Issues and Options. The study found that a subsidy for low-income Albertans paid about a quarter of its own costs directly by offsetting welfare costs, yet the maximum daycare subsidy available for low-income Albertans is $475 for youngsters ages zero to 18 months, $380 for children 19 months and older. Given that the daycare costs can be up to $880, clearly I think this subsidy is not sufficient.

Further, the report said something called a quality gap – and this was a study of nonprofit and then commercial child care centres in Canada. It found that nonprofit child care was significantly higher in all areas, including areas of diapering, use of materials, activities for teaching, and overall interaction between staff and children. My first question in regard to child care is: why is the minister providing more subsidies to for-profit child care services when clearly nonprofit child care services are superior in most areas?

Second of all, a couple of incidents have taken place in Alberta that deserve attention. In May the Road Runner child care program in Calgary was found to have been negligent in their duties regarding the death of an infant in their care. In February, as you probably know, Edmonton's Bear's Paw centre was closed after staff there inadvertently left a child out in the cold. So I would like to ask: what measures are being put into place from child services to reduce the possibility of these sorts of incidents happening in the future?

Third, in regard to child care again I believe that there is a great boom in new child care services being provided with extra funding, mostly from the federal government. But we're hearing word that the accreditation process for new child care facilities in Alberta is causing some difficulties for daycare centres, and they're finding the process somewhat onerous, and it seems to take away from the actual child care that they can do. So I would like to ask, perhaps, what the minister would suggest to streamline, or at least look at the possibility of streamlining or changing, that accreditation process to make it not easier by any means but make it function better.

In regard to talking about safe houses. Now, this is always a controversial area. These safe houses, of course, were set up to implement the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act of 1999. Police and child welfare officials can apprehend and confine children for up to five days. There are some other amendments to that as well. Protective safe houses are effective in making some changes for some clients as well as providing the opportunity for safety, information, and reflection. Most staff and stakeholders considered the change in this legislation in 2001 to have been positive because of the previous shorter period that was usually only sufficient for client detoxification. Staff and stakeholders especially noticed increased exposure and awareness on the issue of child prostitution in general, decreased availability of children for johns and for pimps, and steering of children into more appropriate resources, keeping children safe, et cetera.

Clients of the PSHs identified positive impacts in many areas. However, this report does, I think, raise some serious concerns about the overall effectiveness of the program. Number one, the safe houses are not functioning with consistently high occupancy rates, although the problem of child prostitution is not widely believed to have been solved or even reduced significantly in the province of Alberta. The report calls for increased awareness of this program on the part of police officers and child welfare officials in order to increase the clients in safe houses. No one is disputing the effectiveness of this program, but we should perhaps investigate how widespread the problem of child prostitution really is in Alberta and address it in a more specific sort of way. Is the minister investigating just how big a problem child prostitution is in Alberta? How is the ministry improving the awareness of the police and child welfare officials of this legislation and how might we address this problem in a more general way?

Those are my comments in the most general way. Again, I would conclude by suggesting that if we could perhaps have more accurate budget estimates when we are debating the budgets in the first place, it would be easier for us to assess and then evaluate the progress of how monies are being spent and the effectiveness of those programs over a longer period of time.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I think the first thing that I would like to say to the hon. member about the supplementary estimates of $37.2 million is that this is going to be fully offset by the federal dollars that we're going to be receiving. So while we're here before it, he needs to understand that all of the money is going to be fully offset by the federal dollars that we're going to be receiving, but time is of the essence.

All daycares will qualify for all of the subsidies and incomes whether they're nonprofit or for profit. Again, the daycares that we're hearing from are all very, very excited about what's happening, and the daycare workers are excited about the salary increases. We've been very, very pleased.

The daycare closures that he alluded to show that the system is working. When we come to a point where we're closing a daycare, they've had some serious infractions. We realize the situation that the parents are in by all of a sudden coming in. A lot of times we've tried to work with the daycares prior to that in regard to some of the infractions that they're doing, or people from our department try to work with them on some of the complaints we're getting. It gets to a point . . .

The Chair: Hon. minister, I hesitate to interrupt, but pursuant to our Standing Order 58(1), which provides for not less than two hours of consideration of estimates, I would invite the Deputy Government House Leader to move that the committee rise and report.

Mr. Zwodzdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I would now move that the committee rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions and reports as follows. The following resolutions relating to the 2005-06 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund have been approved.

Education: expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $75,133,000.

The Committee of Supply also reports progress on the Department of Children's Services and requests leave to sit again.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a list of those resolutions voted upon by the Committee of Supply pursuant to Standing Orders.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.
The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been a very invigorating day of debate. In fact, it's been a great opening week of the fall session of the Legislature and a nice conclusion, in a couple of days, to Métis Week. I want to extend special congratulations to all of our Métis friends, and on that note I would move that the House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; at 5:26 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, November 21, 2005

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. At the beginning of this week we ask for renewed strength in the awareness of our duty and privilege as members of the Legislature. We ask for the protection of this Assembly and also the province we are elected to serve. Amen.

Hon. members, we'll be led today in the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieau, who's in the Speaker's gallery. I invite all members and all those in the galleries to participate in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Dr. Lorne Taylor, a former member of the Legislature. Lorne was first elected to the 23rd Legislature on June 15, 1993, and served in the 25th Legislature until his retirement on December 22, 2004. During that time he held various ministries. It surely appears that life as an MLA must have at that time taken its toll because now that he's again a private citizen, people are telling me that he looks better than ever. Would you please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

head:

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly six honoured guests from the Alberta Association for the Accreditation of Early Learning and Care Services. This organization administers Alberta's unique daycare and family day home accreditation program. A first of its kind in Canada, this program is helping to ensure that parents and children experience the highest standard of quality child care. My guests are seated in the gallery this afternoon. It's my honour to introduce the executive director, Sandra Beckman, and her team: Natasha Webber, Wendy Reid, Diane Langner, Tracy McFarlane, and Nadine Forsyth. That's no relation. Please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly two hard-working people from southeastern Alberta working on behalf of southern Albertans and the Palliser health region. I'd like to introduce the chair of the Palliser health region, Carol Secondiak, as well as the CEO, Mr. Tom Seaman. I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of all the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce a good friend of mine from Onoway, Mr. George Jendyk. George is a former mayor of Onoway, a former educator, and now the president of ATA local 43. He's here to visit us. He had a great lunch with the Energy minister and me today. It gives me great pleasure to ask George to stand and be recognized by the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of 19 visitors from the Tomahawk Silver Tops: leaders Mrs. Joyce Goerz and Mr. Wilfred Goerz, Mrs. Margaret Crowhurst, Mrs. Alma Schadeck, Mrs. Dora Millenbacher, Ms Greta Pryor, Mr. Frank Fowler, Mrs. Phyllis Fowler, Mr. Joseph Petrunia, Mrs. Evelyn Thompson, Mr. Ed Thompson, Mrs. Frances Gilbert, Mr. Edward Trautmann, Mr. Oscar Lemke, Mr. James Robb, Mrs. Gwen Petrunia, Mrs. Jacqueline Kuetbach, Mr. Reg Pearce, and Miss Marie Pearce. In our centennial year we have recognized those who have made significant contributions to our province. I would ask that the Tomahawk Silver Tops stand to be recognized and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have the great pleasure of introducing to you and through you to members of this Assembly some really interesting people who are always on the cusp of doing things. They're from the Bigstone Cree First Nation. They're seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask that they all stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly an outstanding group of students from my own neighbourhood school, Lymburn elementary school, in Edmonton-McClung. Today we have 57 students, who are joined by their teachers, Mrs. Susan Galloway, Ms Jeanne Commance, and Ms Kim Olmstead, and parent Mr. Don Kolotyuk. They're seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you 27 bright and shining students from St. Justin Catholic elementary school in Edmonton-Meadowlark. They're participating in the School at the Legislature program, so they'll be with us all week. They're accompanied by Mrs. Doreen Neuls, Mrs. Sharon Roy, and parent helper Mark Coates. Would they please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to give a proper introduction to the members of the Bigstone Cree nation. They're here talking about the forestry management agreement. There are Chief Francis Gladue, Albert Gladue, Marcel Gladue, Constant Auger, elder, as well as Russell Auger, Darrell Anderson Gerrits, and Gordon Gladue. If they would please rise and receive the warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Barret Weber. Barret is a first-year master's student in the department of sociology at the University of Alberta, specializing in social theory. Barret was very active at his previous campus, Red Deer College, where he served on the board of governors for two years. He's seated in the public gallery. I would now request that Barret please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature members of the Coralwood academy. They have 22 students here today along with teacher Mr. Colin Forde and parent helpers Mr. Gordon Dykstra and Mrs. Joan Hager. They're seated in the public gallery, and I'd like them to rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and to members of the Assembly Miss Andrée Morier, who is seated in the members' gallery. I'm pleased to announce that Andrée is currently finishing her degree at the University of Alberta. She is trilingual, in fact, being able to speak French and Spanish, which she learned down at the University of Colima in Mexico. She was also a student of my ministry's chief executive assistant, and despite his teaching, she has been able to do very, very well. I would like to ask her to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Securities Commission Chairman

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission was a partner in a major law firm that does extensive business with companies regulated by the commission. My questions are to the Minister of Finance. Can the minister assure this Assembly that the Securities Commission chairman no longer receives payments from the law firm he left to take this position?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. member that the chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission is under contract to the Alberta Securities Commission. What arrangements were made with his law firm on the conclusion of his employment there are a matter that he should take up directly with the chairman.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: would the minister agree that it is a conflict of interest for a chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission to accept payments from a law firm whose business depends on dealings with that commission?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that when a person terminates employment with any employer, there is a determination of whatever funds are owing to that person. I think what the hon. member is questioning is a transaction that would occur between a member of a law firm and that law firm on how they pay out their employees. I think the question that is more appropriately asked and answered here is whether the chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission has severed all ties with that law firm on the basis of working for them, and I can tell him that, in fact, is the case.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: as the minister responsible for the Alberta Securities Commission, does she not see it as part of her role to ensure that the new chairman is completely free of any ties to his former employer?

Mrs. McClellan: I think I just answered that, Mr. Speaker. The chairman has severed all ties with his previous law firm. How the final financial arrangements have been determined between the now chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission, who has no working ties with the law firm, and that law firm is private business. If the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition is wanting to know that, he should ask the chairman of the Securities Commission and/or the law firm. I am sure that the hon. member is not naive and that he does understand how law practices work and how payments of funds owing to members work. If he has something more that he'd like to put on the record inside this House or outside, I'd welcome him to do it.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister on the same issue: is she not concerned about the chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission's possible ongoing financial ties to a major law firm doing business with clients of the Securities Commission?

Mrs. McClellan: I am concerned with this hon. member's question because rather than coming out and asking a direct question, we're going around an issue. I think I've made it clear. The chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission has severed all working ties with the law firm, Mr. Speaker. He is under contract for a certain sum with the Alberta Securities Commission. If he wants to know the private business of that member and his law firm as to how his final salary or partnership arrangements are made, he should direct those to either the honourable chairman of the Securities Commission or the honourable law firm that he was employed with.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that in this particular position as chairman of the Securities Commission the chairman's private business is of public concern, my direct, clear question to the minister: is the chairman still receiving payments from the law firm with which he was employed?

Mrs. McClellan: Again, Mr. Speaker, he is asking me to comment on his private business. Now, you may wish to do that, and there is an avenue for you to do that. Pick up the phone, phone Mr. Rice, and ask him that question. What is my business is whether the chairman of the Securities Commission has severed all working ties with the law firm. The answer is yes. Is the chairman being paid under contract for the job he's doing with the Alberta Securities Commission? The answer is yes. As far as the disbursement of income, whether it's salary or partnership agreements, that is private business and is certainly not something that I believe I should be in any way involved in.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Again, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the very public position as chairman of the Securities Commission makes that person's private business of public concern, will the minister ask the chairman of the Securities Commission if he is continuing to receive payments from his former employer?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I've said that my responsibility, as the Alberta Securities Commission reports to me, is to ensure that the chairman of the Alberta Securities Commission has severed all working ties with his previous law firm. I hold again that the private business of completing the financial arrangements between that law firm and a partner in that law firm is their business. I invite the hon. member to do the right thing: pick up the phone, phone the chairman, and ask the question.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Children in Care

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the spring the Minister of Children's Services announced that she was going to release all reviews conducted when a child who has had contact with Children's Services dies. Six months later the minister still hasn't released any of the information on Nina Courtepatte's death, how her case was handled by the ministry, or any recommendations made. My question is to the Minister of Children's Services. Given that the minister has had almost six months to put this incredibly important process into place, can the minister explain why the public is being forced to wait so long?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, yes, Mr. Speaker, the minister can explain. The individual that the hon. member has mentioned – all of the proceedings are still before the court. We will not be posting anything about that particular individual until the court procedures are finished.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When it is possible, will the minister make this information public immediately and post these details on the Children's Services website?

Mrs. Forsyth: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will. Once everything is done with that particular individual's court case, I will post it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister support a recommendation that the Alberta children's advocate become an independent office with the power to conduct independent investigations and ensure that children receive the care and protection they deserve?

1:50

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, the child advocate in this province is probably one of the biggest advocates in regard to children's issues. We have a wonderful working relationship with the child advocate. In fact, he's part and parcel of the special case reviews.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Securities Commission Investigation

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Securities Commission director of enforcement is the top cop policing the Alberta securities market. It's absolutely unbelievable that he's still in his job after the Auditor General found him in flagrant violation of the ASC's code of ethics by trading in shares in a company under investigation by the ASC and making a tidy profit in the process. The investigation was into an allegation of insider trading. To the Finance minister: has the minister done anything to cause an investigation as to whether or not the ASC's director of enforcement may have engaged in insider trading himself?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, again, this whole issue is well documented in the Auditor General's report on pages 6, 7, and possibly going on to 8. The Auditor General obviously learned of this through a review of files. There was nothing hidden in this. It does lay out the chronological set of events that happened. The Auditor General did recommend in recommendations 6 and 7 ways to improve the system to ensure that as much as possible this could not happen. In fact, the Securities Commission themselves changed how they handle conflicts of interest in May of 2005 after this happened.

They are continuing to review how they do this in view of the Auditor General's report because really what they dispensed with was similar to the recommendations the Auditor General has put in. What they put in they thought was a better way of ensuring that this can't happen. It is my understanding – and, in fact, I've asked the Alberta Securities Commission to make a statement on all of the chronological events and the actions that have been taken.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That was a very unrevealing answer.

Given that on the very same day the director of enforcement authorized the investigation into the insider trading allegation he bought stock in the company that was under investigation, will the minister tell us what information was contained in that file that may have led him to purchase those shares?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, I think the hon. member knows very well that I can't tell him what was in those files. That would be a breach of confidentiality of information that the Alberta Securities Commission holds on behalf of companies. What I can tell him is that I have asked the Alberta Securities Commission, because this continues to be a question, to lay out directly the chronological events, backed up by fact and documentation, and what steps have been taken prior to the Auditor General's report and since the Auditor General's report to ensure that this cannot happen, as much as possible to preclude it from happening again.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that the ASC's top securities cop made a significant financial gain on a short-term speculative investment he was supposedly investigating himself, why does the minister not do her job and admit that there may in fact have been a crime here and that no one else can investigate it unless she's prepared to do so?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Auditor General had full access to all of the information. I think that had there been a question of a crime, he would have raised that. What he did say was that it was important that the processes at the Alberta Securities Commission be tightened up to ensure that this cannot happen.

I asked the hon. member to review the statement of the times, dates of activities that occurred there and, perhaps, come back. I'd be happy to discuss it with him further after he reviews that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw. [applause]

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you. That was very kind.

Constitutional Referendums

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, in the free world the role of government is to protect rights and freedoms, not grant rights and benefits. In Canada our rights are protected by our Constitution and our Charter of Rights and Freedoms. However, after 20-plus years we see that the Charter has not been respected, and its weaknesses are being exploited. My question is directed to the Deputy Premier. Has this government considered putting a resolution for an amendment to the Canadian Constitution before Albertans by way of a referendum?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I will take that question under advisement for the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations and have him respond at the earliest possible moment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. I guess I'll try again to the Deputy Premier. Would 50,000 names on a petition for a resolution for a referendum to enshrine property rights in the Canadian Constitution be enough reason to use the Constitutional Referendum Act during the next federal election?

Mrs. McClellan: Again, Mr. Speaker, our Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations I'm sure would be pleased to give a full discussion on this item, and we will take it to him and ask him to respond appropriately.

Mr. Hinman: I guess, for the third time, Mr. Speaker, to the Deputy Premier: instead of misleading Albertans into believing that there is nothing they can do, will this government allow Albertans to vote on a resolution for an amendment to the Canadian Constitution to enshrine the Alberta definition of marriage in conjunction with the next federal election?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, again, I'll take his question under advisement. I'll take it seriously, give it serious consideration, and give him a response at a future date.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Centennial Gifts to Canadians

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While in Ottawa this week the Premier announced a new nation-wide postsecondary scholarship program totally funded by the Alberta government. This program is intended as a centennial gift from Alberta to all Canadians. My question is to the Minister of Advanced Education. As the minister responsible for implementing the program, can you tell us when it will be up and running and what Alberta is hoping to accomplish with this national scholarship program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The concept is to have the first set of scholarships in time for the start of the next academic year in 2006.

In terms of the concept, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has always been a proud member of Confederation, and we've always appreciated the way the rest of Canada has responded – for example, the severe drought conditions and the need for hay, when we needed people to rally around in the beef crisis.

In our centennial year it was felt appropriate to make an indication to the country, a gift to the country, if you will, which indicates how important we think it is to celebrate our centennial and to include the rest of Canada in that celebration. So the Premier made the announcement today, I believe, of the $20 million endowment to the Alberta heritage scholarship fund, which will allow for 25 scholarships for each provincial and territorial jurisdiction in the amount of $2,005, hopefully in perpetuity.

Mrs. Ady: Mr. Speaker, my second question is to the same minister. A centennial gift to Canadian students as a thank you may be a generous offer, but why not establish a centennial scholarship program for Albertans instead?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, we have done that. This year under Bill 1 we made a commitment as a government – and this Legislature passed Bill 1 ensuring that commitment – to add a billion dollars to the Alberta heritage scholarship fund so that we can enhance scholarships to Albertans.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, Alberta funds more scholarships than any other province on a per capita basis. This year we'll spend $48 million more on 50 provincially funded scholarship programs. We have the Rutherford scholarships with a maximum of $2,500 a year and 9,000 recipients this year; the Jason Lang scholarships with a thousand dollars each, 15,000 recipients this year; the Louise McKinney scholarships with $2,500 each, 950 this year.

So this scholarship program is a small but enduring way of celebrating the province's centennial with the rest of the country and involving the rest of the country in our celebration on an enduring basis.

2:00

Mrs. Ady: My final question is to the Minister of Community Development. Can the minister please outline for this Assembly the nature of the Alberta artwork that the Premier also announced today as a gift to Canadians during his visit to the National Gallery? [interjections]

The Speaker: The minister has the floor.

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, while in Ottawa earlier this morning our Premier visited the National Gallery of Canada, and he unveiled a painting by an Alberta aboriginal artist named Joane Cardinal-Schubert. Ms Cardinal-Schubert has art that has been displayed both privately and at public galleries and is part of collections around the world. This gift is intended to be a symbol of Alberta's proud history and the heritage of its aboriginal peoples. The National Gallery already has a number of her works of art. Her works of art also appear in galleries in places like Regina, Michigan, Prague, and Vancouver.

Mr. Speaker, this work is, in part, a way of saying thank you to Canadians for their support of Alberta during tough times. It is very much a way for Albertans to express their feelings for being part of Confederation for the last 100 years.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

School Infrastructure Funding

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question on the minds of 1.2 million parents is: where will their kids go to school? The problems are diverse, but the solution is simple: create a plan with stable, predictable, and sufficient capital funding so school boards can implement their capital plans and maintain existing schools across the province. To the Minister of Education: how long will the 330 students in mouldy 25-year-old portables at Alexander Forbes elementary in Grande Prairie have to wait for an expansion of their school?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was in Grande Prairie just a few weeks ago, and I did meet with the chair of the parent council there, as I did also with the boards from that area. The issue of Alexander Forbes school did come up. We had a very good discussion on it, and I did undertake to pursue fixing what some of those needs are. As soon as I am able to, I will be commenting further.

I should add, Mr. Speaker, that we've just put I think around the $20 million mark worth of funding into new schools and related matters for school infrastructure in that area. I'd love to read them all to you right now if you wish, but perhaps to save time, I'll just refer people to the website.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Calgary public schools received too little of the unbudgeted spending on this province's students, are these the sorts of mistakes we can expect with hurried, unbudgeted spending?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think Albertans across the province are pretty grateful that this government was able to provide $207 million for infrastructure needs. I haven't heard any complaints about the fact that we provided $207 million as part of phase 1 funding from unanticipated surplus dollars. However, I have given an undertaking to the 62 school boards, as I met one-on-one with them for the second time this year, that in the foreseeable future I hope to discuss with them again and with my colleagues the need for some additional funding that would possibly comprise phase 2 out of unanticipated dollars, should some come available, and also to look at longer range planning objectives within the more stable funding envelope, which is coming our way through Alberta Infrastructure.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will this minister set up fair and equitable criteria to prioritize capital school projects across the province?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we have had the so-called utilization formula, which I think most members here are familiar with. At the time that the utilization rate formula was used to determine various infrastructure needs, it seemed to suffice. However, as our province has evolved and as infrastructure projects for schools have evolved, we revisited that formula. So the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation did bring in a funding formula more on a per-pupil basis, one that I supported. Most of the school boards out there who have already tasted that new formula like it, but we do recognize that funding strictly on a per-pupil basis may not be the total answer. So Alberta Education is now reviewing that, and through our Renewed Funding Framework Ministerial Advisory Committee, that I just appointed, we will indeed be doing more detailed work in that regard.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Nutrition Programs for Schools

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Societies are judged by how well they look after and treat their poor, vulnerable, and the underprivileged. Surveys have shown repeatedly that 1 in 10 Calgary school kids goes to school without breakfast in a province as wealthy as ours. It took the efforts of a group of Calgary judges and lawyers to collect $15,000 and donate it to a northeast Calgary school so the school can provide breakfast for their children. My question is to the hon. Minister of Education. Is the minister aware of this situation, and what is he doing to rectify it?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, the responsibility for feeding children, sheltering them, clothing them, and otherwise rearing them first and foremost lies with the parents or legal guardians. We must never lose sight of that. However, I am aware that it's not a perfect world and that there are a few circumstances, perhaps several circumstances, where some of the children do need some additional nourishment or perhaps nourishment, period, to start their day or to continue it. We have a number of community agencies who partner with the school boards in that respect.

Those parents who are in those unfortunate circumstances of perhaps needing help to feed, nurture, and clothe their children could certainly turn to some of the community agencies for help or perhaps to one of several social programs that exist in the Department of Human Resources and Employment. Perhaps they could talk with Children's Services and try and find some of the help that they need.

Let me just conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that our school boards have shown some tremendous leadership in this area, and a number of them are providing hot lunch programs or breakfast programs as we speak.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since the cost of a breakfast program works out to about $12,000 per year, would the minister commit to a review of this program and provide the money immediately to all needy schools in the province so kids can feel the Alberta advantage? [interjections]

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, it is a good question and a tough question too. I should indicate, Mr. Speaker, that I did hear from a few school boards about some of the nutrition programs that they are providing when I met with them just over the past few weeks. I know that the school boards are in town this week, and that's a good question for them to address as well.

That having been said, I am aware also that through Alberta's Promise, for example, there is a website that talks about the breakfast program. I just forget the exact title of it, but I will provide it to the hon. member, perhaps at the end of the day, because there is good information on that website where community agencies, perhaps other eligible applicants can apply for some assistance if they are eligible to do so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [interjections] Geez, I must be doing something wrong; the Liberals are happy.

Mr. Speaker, would the minister commit at least for now to matching the money raised by private donors?

Mr. Zwozdesky: I'm sorry. I think I got the question: something about matching the funding. Is that what it was, hon. member? There was so much cheering and clapping from all sides of the House for your question that it was distracting.

You might say, Mr. Speaker, that in a way we are already matching some of the programs because we as Alberta Education, with monies provided by the government, provide funds to school boards. School boards in turn provide their monies to the individual schools. The schools, therefore, are recipients already of considerable provincial dollars, about $4.5 billion in this year alone. Within that envelope I would think that they probably are using some of our funds already to do some of that matching or perhaps to do some creative leadership projects in the nutrition area on their own.

They also work with some community agencies, where they are available, and perhaps even with some private funders, and I want say thank you to those agencies and thank you to those private citizens who have stepped up to become partners with our schools throughout the province to address this socioeconomic issue.

2:10 Natural Resources Conservation Board

Mr. Bonko: Mr. Speaker, a closed-door review of the Natural Resources Conservation Board stated that the board's actions were not impartial, not transparent, and not fair. Amazing, considering the board describes itself as providing balanced decision-making in the public interest. To the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development: how will this minister restore faith in an organization that is – and I quote from the report – undermined by a sense of fear and paranoia?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, the Natural Resources Conservation Board came into being in this province in the late 1980s as an initiative of the then Minister of Environment and now our Premier, the Hon. Ralph Klein.

The Speaker: We don't do that, hon. member.

Mr. Coutts: I apologize, Mr. Speaker.

That particular board has served the public interest successfully and very, very well on major developments across this province for over 14 years, and it will continue to do that. If the question from the hon. member is about a process that was put in place regarding governance of the board, yes, there was a review regarding governance. It had nothing to do with legislative changes to the board because the board has done everything it possibly can do to make sure that it looks after the public interest, which is the original intention that it was set up to do.

Mr. Bonko: Given that the report criticizes a lack of staffing and training in legislation, will the minister commit to adding more field staff and more professional development?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member brings up a very good point. What we've done with the Natural Resources Conservation Board as it pertains to AOPA legislation and the application processes and how those applications can be adhered to within the legislation of AOPA is set up a chief operating officer. That chief operating officer will take a look at the process and decide exactly the appropriate levels of staffing that need to be done. That's their responsibility in the operations: to make sure that they're effective not only for the industry but also to make sure that we continue to protect the public interest.

Mr. Bonko: Third question, Mr. Speaker. Given that the report expresses serious flaws in the decision-making process, will the minister commit to reviewing past decisions to ensure that all affected parties were treated fairly?

Mr. Coutts: Well, Mr. Speaker, the interim board chair and the interim chief operating officer have the governance report that was put out there. They will continue to look at the recommendations within that report, and they themselves will try to implement those recommendations as it pertains to the respective duties of not only the board and its responsibilities but also the chief operating officer and the responsibilities as it pertains to confined feeding operations. I've given them 60 days to do that and bring a report back to me. They're the ones that will make the recommendations. They're also the ones that will make sure that the operations continue, make sure that they're there for the interests of Albertans as well as the industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Highway 43

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Highway 43 runs through Whitecourt-St. Anne and is increasingly becoming a very major transportation route to the north. Progress is being made on the twinning of this route, but some sections remain untouched, and some sections remain in dire need of some repairs. My questions are to the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation. When will my constituents and all Albertans see more progress on this project?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This year we had a very good year on highway 43 in that we finished twinning approximately 50 kilometres of that road. This leaves about 52 kilometres yet to be finished on highway 43 of the total of 432 kilometres. We are scheduled to finish the rest of the 52 kilometres by the fall of 2007. We've had some issues with weather this year. We have also had some issues on obtaining the land. We feel that these have now been figured out and worked out, and we fully anticipate it to be the fall of 2007 at the latest. I would certainly like to accelerate that though.

Mr. VanderBurg: Again to the same minister, and I thank him for that answer: with around 10 per cent of this project left, why does it take two construction years to do it? Why not just do it next year?

Dr. Oberg: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would love to do it this year. It comes down to a budgeting process. It also comes down to having the land available. We have not yet fully got the land available although we are certainly anticipating that that negotiation will be done very, very soon. If it does get done, if I do get the money, I can assure the hon. member that this is a definite priority on my department's list and that we'll be done sooner as opposed to later. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Social Housing Corporation Land Sales

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In his October 2005 report the Auditor General found that the Alberta Social Housing Corporation was involved in a series of sweetheart land deals in the Fort McMurray area. The two biggest land giveaways involved a local developer who is a friend of the PC government. Land was sold below appraised value, sales were untendered, there were sweetheart financing arrangements, and the prime real estate was literally given away. My question is to the minister of seniors. Has the minister found out why these sweetheart deals occurred not only once but twice at the expense of provincial taxpayers and homeowners in Fort McMurray?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the minister responsible for the Alberta Social Housing Corporation I'm fully aware of the actions of the corporation in 1999, six years ago, that the member opposite is referring to. As the member said to you, this report of the Auditor General was a full report. I support the findings. I support the recommendations of that report.

Mr. Speaker, I can tell you and I can tell members of this Assembly and members of the opposition that this issue will not happen again under this ministry. In fact, the land that we have put on the market recently through the Alberta Social Housing Corporation has been placed on the market with a very open process through requests for proposals. It is open. It's transparent. It's accessible. I can tell you this: it is working, and we are going to meet the needs and the mandate not only of the Alberta Social Housing Corporation but, more importantly, of the people living in Fort McMurray. [interjections]

Mr. Martin: The members can pound all they like, but these Fort McMurray land deals make the federal Liberals look clean, Mr. Speaker.

My question to the minister is: why is no one being held accountable for millions of dollars of public dollars being given away, taxpayers being hosed, and the people in Fort McMurray being hosed? Why is no one accountable?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, I go back to that the Auditor has investigated this fully. He has reported. I support the findings of the Auditor's investigation, and I would expect that the opposition do as well. Also, we are moving forward. We're moving forward with a process through the Alberta Social Housing Corporation so that it is accountable, it's transparent, it's open, and it is working.

Mr. Martin: Well, Mr. Speaker, my question is then to the Deputy Premier. Given that the Premier recently was yammering that an Adscam couldn't happen in Alberta, why is this government doing nothing about finding out why and how these sweetheart deals occurred?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, I have to reiterate what the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports has stated. The Auditor General had full and unfettered access to all of the information. He has reported in detail. In fact, in his detailed reporting he does give some clarity to why transactions were made as they were in that time period. The very important thing that the hon. minister said is that we fully supported the Auditor General's review, we fully support his report, and we fully intend to implement all of his recommendations and put a process in place that he is recommending that will reduce the opportunity for questions on clarity and transparency.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Peace River.

Sour Gas Leak

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On July 2, 2005, a critical sour gas leak occurred approximately five kilometres outside of Innisfail, Alberta. Nineteen per cent sour gas was released into the atmosphere for approximately 45 minutes, spreading to the nearby communities. Luckily nobody was seriously injured or killed in the incident; however, serious questions remain. My question is for the Minister of Energy. Can the minister confirm or deny if the licensed well operator failed to report the critical sour gas leak to the EUB?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to first state that in this instance the public was never in danger of any harm to anyone. He stated a certain percentage, but for it to be critical in that stage, it also has to be measured by the rate of release, in this case very low. So even in the reporting I want to assure all Albertans that there was never any risk at this stage of anybody being harmed.

Dr. Swann: Again to the minister since he didn't answer the question: was the EUB only aware of the leak as a result of residents' complaints?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, as in anything like this matter sometimes investigations come from a variety of sources. I'm not specifically aware of where the original source was. I'd be happy to report that back when I get the information from the EUB.

Dr. Swann: Again to the same minister: what message does this lack of accountability send to residents of southeast Calgary, living in the shadow of Compton's proposed sour gas well?

Mr. Melchin: Mr. Speaker, once again put out of context. The public was not at any time under any risk of injury at this stage. The Energy and Utilities Board has investigated this incident. Companies are responsible to a very high standard of regulation. They are not left without standards. They are not left without a requirement to report, and they do. The energy industry supports that, and we certainly support a strong regulator, the Energy and Utilities Board, being able to fulfill that mandate.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mountain Pine Beetle Control

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The mountain pine beetle continues its onslaught in British Columbia, where more than 7 million hectares of pine forest have been lost, about an eighth of the productive forest land base. The impact of this epidemic will have far-reaching implications and could spell the end of many forest-dependent communities in British Columbia. My first question is for the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Can the minister inform this House as to the current extent of the beetle in Alberta given that another breeding season has passed?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Yes, Mr. Speaker. We know that the situation in British Columbia is very, very serious, and of course we keep a very close eye on the beetle as it moves east. It continues to move eastward through mountain passes, particularly where there's mature pine forest. We're taking a very proactive approach to making sure that we stop the pine beetle as best we can at the British Columbia border. We continue to use aerial and ground surveys and work with our industry partners to identify trees that may be infected on the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains. In fact, this summer we found individual trees and a huge infestation in the Willmore wilderness area. It's probably the biggest infestation that we have found on the Alberta side at this point in time, but we're taking a very proactive approach in trying to deal with that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again for the same minister: could the minister share with us what specific control actions were taken in Alberta this past summer?

Mr. Coutts: Well, certainly, Mr. Speaker. We're working very closely with our Community Development partners in determining how we can best combat the beetle in the Willmore wilderness area. We've so far cut and burned 5,000 trees in that particular area. If you flew over the area, you would not be able to see any trace. What we're trying to do is minimize the impact on the land. We know that it's a sensitive area. We understand the need to minimize that impact and keep the area a park. We have cut individual trees, but we're preparing to do a prescribed burn in other areas that have been infested, and that's in the Meadowland Creek area. We find that that area is a natural highway for the beetles as they travel eastward into Alberta.

I'd like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that we are fortunate in dealing at this point in time with individual trees and not the millions of hectares that they're having to deal with in British Columbia. Because of these actions we're definitely making sure that we're taking this proactive approach in dealing with the pine beetle in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Final supplemental to the same minister: can the minister inform us if the government has any contingency plans in the event that these single-tree actions or very localized actions are ineffective in stopping the beetle in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it's important that the effort of Parks Canada, the effort of Community Development, the effort of the government of Canada and certainly of the industry that is in Alberta here works together to combat what Mother Nature may bring forward to us in the future. If there is a huge infestation, if we have a mild winter, we know that the beetle is going to make some headway here in Alberta, so what we've done is that we've also looked at having extensive discussions with our industry to look at approved harvesting sequences on mature forests in case the pine beetle targets those particular areas.

We've fought this beetle before, and through all of the partnerships that we're putting together and being proactive, we will beat this beetle again.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Applewood Park Community Association

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wild Rose Foundation is an important organization, and we must protect its integrity. An Auditor General's report has led to the Minister of Community Development demanding that the Applewood Park Community Association repay its $20,000 grant to Alberta taxpayers. However, the Applewood Park Community Association is now refusing to pay back. The 30-day government deadline is gone. My question is to the Minister of Community Development. What is the minister going to do now?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I agree with the hon. member when he says that it should be our goal to be accountable with the money to protect the integrity of the Wild Rose Foundation but also, specifically, the international development fund that Applewood accessed in obtaining the monies in question here. It is unfortunate that the accountability of one grant has suspended the program and put in question much of the good work that this program is doing. I should note by way of background that for every dollar of foundation funding Albertans themselves donated $14 to foundation-supported projects in developing countries, which means that while we place a great deal of interest in this area as a government, Albertans themselves also support these same projects.

Now, to bring the member up to date on what's happened most recently, the Applewood community association requested a meeting with the Wild Rose Foundation. That meeting took place within the last couple of weeks, Mr. Speaker. There was new information that was provided by Applewood at that time, and they are intending to forward documents to us, I'm advised, that will arrive some time this week that need to be reviewed with respect to their belief that they've demonstrated that the money that they requested was in fact spent in the areas that they made the application for the grant for.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the same minister. Given that the Auditor General's report found that Applewood transferred Wild Rose funds to another organization removed from the corporate registry, how can the minister assure this House that other organizations are not breaking similar rules?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we have taken into account the Auditor General's recommendations. We will follow them to the letter. It is our intention to ensure, most of all, that the money that was applied for by Applewood has in fact been spent in accordance with the grant that was applied for. That is our endgame with respect to this.

With respect to moving the money through an organization that may have been struck from the registry, we'll continue to look into this matter. Again, Mr. Speaker, the endgame is to ensure that the integrity of the program is maintained by ensuring that the money was in fact spent for what was applied for.

Mr. Agnihotri: To the same minister: has the minister looked at other government caucus MLA-assisted grants to see if they were accurate and in compliance with the Wild Rose Foundation guidelines?

Mr. Mar: In fact, Mr. Speaker, we did ask the Auditor General to look at other grants. From his review of the same we found that they have been in compliance with the rules as established.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in just a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of the hon. members to participate, but in the interim might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you constituents that travelled on highway 43 to get here to Edmonton to visit us. We have with us 78 visitors from St. Joseph Catholic school. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: Hon. members, by way of a historical vignette for the day on this day in 1932 Aspen Beach, located on the shores of Gull Lake, west of Lacombe, was designated Alberta's first provincial park. Today we have nearly 500 sites covering roughly 27,500 square kilometres.

The Speaker's 26th Anniversary As an MLA

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize an important anniversary for someone who has made a great contribution to the people of Alberta. For his entire life he has diligently worked to make Alberta a better place. Dedicated to his community he has consistently promoted volunteerism and has been a passionate advocate for francophone Albertans. From his early beginnings as a schoolteacher to his current position within the Legislative Assembly of Alberta he has never faltered in his commitment to others.

Today this special individual is celebrating 26 years as an MLA. It was 26 years ago today that this member was first elected in a by-election. During the past 26 years the hon. member has served the people of Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock admirably. He has served under the leadership of three Premiers and has kept order and decorum in this House since first being elected Speaker in 1997.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all your colleagues it gives me great pleasure to rise today and congratulate you on 26 years of outstanding service as a member of this Assembly. [standing ovation]

The Speaker: That's very, very kind and very, very much appreciated. In fact, I got up this morning and I hadn't recognized or realized it myself, but 26 years goes flash, flash, flash. Somebody said to me the other day: you know, there's nothing wrong with having anniversaries or birthdays because that means you're just living that much longer. So 26 is good. Thank you very, very much.

Order of Canada Awards

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, it's my great pleasure to rise in this House and acknowledge six outstanding Albertans whose accomplishments have earned them this country's highest civilian recognition: investiture into the Order of Canada. The achievements of these Albertans have promoted medicinal treatment and understanding, instilled Olympic pride, set an example of quiet philanthropy, developed our energy industry, and championed human rights.

On behalf of my constituents and colleagues I am pleased to congratulate one of Canada's most distinguished medical physicists and one of the founders of the Canadian College of Physicists in Medicine, Dr. John Robert Cunningham of Camrose.

Congratulations to the fastest woman on ice, Ms Catriona Le May Doan of Calgary, winner of double Olympic gold.

Congratulations to entrepreneur, philanthropist, and founder of the Calgary International Organ Competition and Festival, Mr. Ronald Neil Mannix.

We congratulate cardiologist and researcher, former dean of medicine and professor emeritus at the University of Calgary and member of the Premier's Advisory Council on Health, Dr. Eldon Raymond Smith.

We congratulate the former president, director, and COO of Petro-Canada, president of Stanford Engineering, and long-time philanthropist, Mr. James M. Stanford of Calgary.

We also extend congratulations to a founding member of the Alberta Human Rights Commission and founding president of the Institute for the Advancement of Aboriginal Women, Ms Muriel Stanley Venne of Edmonton.

Mr. Speaker, these Albertans have set an example of achievement and commitment to their communities, to their province, and to their country. Please join me in congratulating these six outstanding citizens of Alberta and Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Edmonton Eskimos

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising to introduce a new bill, the get Calgary a new football team amendment act. Sorry, wrong notes. Wrong notes.

Mr. Speaker, I'm rising today to say that the Edmonton Eskimos went to British Columbia last week to take on the B.C. Lions in the western final.

An Hon. Member: Go Eskies.

Mr. Lukaszuk: That's right.

To the satisfaction of their fans here in Edmonton they beat the Lions in their hometown in what was an exciting football game that ended in a score of 28 to 23. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Edmonton Eskimos, their coaches, and all members of their organization for their victory against B.C. this week and for a victory against Calgary the week before.

The residents of British Columbia were forced to watch their team's season come to an end. Now they will have to watch the Edmonton Eskimos and the Montreal Alouettes battle for Canada's oldest professional sports trophy in their city next week.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Dr. Brown: It's Calgary-Nose Hill, Mr. Speaker.

University of Calgary Centennial Projects

Dr. Brown: Can you remember, Mr. Speaker, that one special teacher who influenced your life and perhaps your child's life in a memorable way? This is the question that was asked of Albertans earlier this year, and the result culminated in a centennial project entitled My Most Memorable Teacher: 100 Stories Celebrating 100 Years of Alberta Teaching Excellence. It was published by the University of Calgary's Faculty of Education with the assistance of Alberta Education.

The book, which was launched in Calgary yesterday, provides stories about special teachers who have made a difference in the lives of Alberta students.

Throughout our history of Alberta we've had thousands of outstanding teachers who have guided and inspired students in our classrooms and beyond. From the old one-room classrooms on the prairies to the wired urban schools of today teaching has evolved and classrooms have gone high tech, but the caring teacher remains at the head of every classroom.

I'd like to acknowledge the hon. Peter Lougheed, our former Premier, who served as honorary chair of the centennial book project and provided inspirational leadership to the members of the project team from the Faculty of Education at the University of Calgary, including Dr. Annette LaGrange, dean; Jennifer Diakiw; Maureen Washington; and Robert Stamp.

During our centennial year we are also celebrating 100 years of teaching at the University of Calgary. Heritage Hall at SAIT Polytechnic is the former home of the Calgary Normal School, the first teacher-training institution in Alberta, which later became the Faculty of Education. One hundred years ago it began educating teachers who would go on to prepare young Albertans to reach their full potential and to become leaders of tomorrow. Last year the University of Calgary granted 766 education degrees, including 224 graduate degrees. Today the students of Alberta benefit from one of the best education systems in the world, and they're fortunate to have outstanding teachers preparing them.

MLA Invitations to Public Events

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On November 8 the Anthony Henday Drive crossed over the North Saskatchewan River linking the constituencies of Edmonton-McClung and Edmonton-Whitemud. A six-kilometre section of Edmonton's southwest ring road connected Lessard Road and Terwillegar Drive. In preparing for that ceremony, the Ministry of Infrastructure and Transportation and/or the Public Affairs Bureau made sure that they invited the minister, the MLA for Edmonton-Whitemud, Edmonton's mayor, and the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, who happens to be the head of the capital region government caucus.

I am disappointed that those same people for some reason chose not to extend the same invitation to the MLA for Edmonton-McClung. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, in so doing, the government has sunk to a new low. For them it is only a hollow public relations stunt, a photo op. For me it really meant being prevented from performing one of my constituency duties, one which I take very seriously.

There appears to be an orchestrated effort to exclude opposition members from certain events, and this has grown steadily worse since last fall's provincial election. Those who took that decision did not just exclude an opposition MLA; they spurned the constituents of Edmonton-McClung, who should have been represented at that ceremony.

What they have done is pathetic, pitiful, and preposterous. How's that for a P3? Had I been invited, I would have conveyed my constituents' pleasure with this positive development. It would have allowed me the opportunity to report to my constituents on the progress of this project in a newsletter that goes out to 16,000 homes in Edmonton's southwest. But, alas, this government continues to insult people's intelligence. The public understands this and will remember it.

So to the government. Last year I was elected the MLA for Edmonton-McClung, and you have to accept and respect the people's decision. Also remember that 21 opposition members received between them 15,000 more votes than all 62 of you combined. Listen to what the people told you. Get the message.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Gaming As a Source of Revenue

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government's concept of promoting diversification is to allow an unlimited number of casinos to be built. The Alberta government has spent over $100 million on sprucing up VLTs. It is a sad commentary that the group most addicted to gambling is the provincial government itself. What is equally deplorable is how the government has created a dependency on its casino and slot revenues by underfunding a whole host of programs, from arts to recreation to education. Due to the lack of funding for basic educational essentials school councils have been forced to hold their noses and ethical concerns and apply every 18 months for a casino licence.

This is a win-win situation for the government, which continues to underfund education and is the recipient of an endless stream of frequently coerced volunteers who donate their time to increase the government's gambling greed profits. I say coerced because when a child's education or participation in a recreational activity is dependent upon the thickness of his or her parents' wallet or the required sign-up for a casino shift, a tremendous amount of pressure is placed upon parents to volunteer their time for fear that their child will not be able to participate.

One of my constituents, who with her husband had participated in 45 casinos and bingos over the past five years, including schools, sporting activities, and choir, broke down in my office because she could not financially or morally continue to support this government's forced gambling addiction. As a result, her children have had to withdraw from enrichment activities.

This conflict of conscience is one of the main factors contributing to volunteer burnout. Without the volunteers this province and country would come to an abrupt halt. Revenue can be positively generated through a highly educated and healthy workforce. Rather than investing in VLTs, casinos, and slots, which proliferate addictions, I urge this government to invest in its most important resource: Albertans.

head: Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I table a petition which, again, was initiated by a concerned parent from my constituency and signed by similarly concerned parents, this time from Camrose, Beaumont, Edmonton, Stony Plain, and Sherwood Park, calling on the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to eliminate school fees charged for "textbooks, locker rentals, field trips, physical fitness programs, music classes."

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have 216 signatures petitioning the government of Alberta. These are from residents of Onoway, Thorhild, Pincher Creek, Plamondon, Black Diamond, Millet, Tofield, and other Alberta communities. It says:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aborigines; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition that says:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to introduce legislation declaring a moratorium on any future expansion of Confined Feeding Operations, with a view to phasing out existing operations within the next three years.

Bill 53 Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2005

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, the current situation in Alberta is that if a reclamation certificate for a private company, an energy company operating on private land is rescinded, the company has no rights of entry onto private land to conduct remedial work. This amendment would allow for a right of entry, yet still the landowner is protected in that they have avenues of appeal to the Surface Rights Board for compensation for disturbance, damages, or other costs.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 53 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 53 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, on November 16 I tabled the 2005-06 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund. In the preface on page 1 it should have stated that the supplementary estimates "will authorize a $1,531,247,000 increase in voted Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases." This tabling does not affect the supplementary appropriations being considered by the House, and accordingly I am now tabling five copies of the revised page 1.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to table with you a copy of a letter of congratulations which I'm sending out to Dr. Annette LaGrange, dean of the Faculty of Education at the University of Calgary, congratulating her and her team on the publication of this book, My Most Memorable Teacher, which I was pleased to officially unveil in Calgary yesterday with the Hon. Peter Lougheed and several other dignitaries. In short, this is a wonderful book, and I'll be donating a copy to the library downstairs so other members can see it. We'll also be providing copies to all the schools in Alberta because it recounts all 100 excellent stories that celebrate 100 years of teacher education in Alberta this year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to table in the Assembly the requisite number of five copies of the Seniors Advisory Council annual report for 2004-2005, ended March 31, 2005.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is from a constituent, Ronald Rowswell, noting that he finds the government's "stance on exempting civil marriage commissioners from performing same-sex civil marriages to be offensive."

The second tabling is from Yohana Rihana commenting on the $400 rebate and noting that she felt that a specific amount of that, a hundred dollars, should be invested for the benefit of Albertans and suggesting a high-speed train link between Edmonton and Calgary as an excellent opportunity for that investment. I must say that I agree, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a resolution signed by the Treaty 8 First Nations, with all 23 nations represented. It basically raises a concern with the lack of consultation with First Nations people on forest management agreement renewals.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In this tabling two valid points are raised by an instructor in postsecondary education: that if the government is considering free tuition fees, to get the refund, number one, the student must have “completed their last two years of study” and, number two, must have been a resident of Alberta “for a minimum of 5 years.”

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I’d like to table a document on behalf of the leader of the NDP opposition. It is called the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Agency, and it is a detailed report on our vision for reining in the cost of prescription drugs.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, I’d like to table today appropriate copies of a brochure produced by the Legislative Assembly of Alberta titled Page Biographies, First Session, fall sitting, 26th Legislature. There are some really remarkable young people whose biographies are attached, and I hope hon. members will have a chance to review them.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Cardinal, the Minister of Human Resources and Employment, a report, undated, entitled Collective Agreement Settlements in Alberta, prepared by Alberta Human Resources and Employment.

On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Fritz, Minister of Seniors and Community Supports, a response to Written Question 9 asked by Mr. MacDonald on behalf of Ms Pastoor on April 11, 2005; a response to Written Question 32 asked by Mr. Eggen on behalf of Mr. Martin on May 9, 2005; and a return to order of the Assembly MR 23 asked by Ms Pastoor on April 18, 2005.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Renner, Minister of Municipal Affairs, pursuant to the Government Organization Act the Alberta Boilers Safety Association annual report 2004; the Alberta Elevating Devices and Amusement Rides Safety Association annual report, April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005; the Petroleum Tank Management Association of Alberta annual report 2004; pursuant to the Safety Codes Act the Safety Codes Council 2004 annual report; and the authorized accredited agencies activity summary, April 1, 2003, to March 31, 2004.

Written Questions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been given on Thursday, November 17, it is my pleasure to move that written questions appearing on today’s Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of written questions 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, and 42.

Information Technology Security Awareness

Q33. Mr. Elsalhy moved that the following question be accepted. What measures has the Ministry of Restructuring and Government Efficiency taken to improve the information technology security awareness of government employees as recommended in the Auditor General’s 2003-04 annual report?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Restructuring and Government Efficiency.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This question from the member opposite is indeed most welcome. I’m pleased to rise and accept this question because security of information is of critical importance to the government and to all Albertans. My ministry has recently undertaken a number of activities to address this matter, of which I’ll be happy to provide a written response.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung to close the debate, or should I call the question?

Mr. Elsalhy: Call the question, sir.

[Written Question 33 carried]

Species at Risk

Q34. Mr. Bonko moved that the following question be accepted. What development management plans does the government currently have for protecting species at risk such as the grizzly bear and the peregrine falcon?

The Speaker: Does anyone from the government want to deal with this?

Mr. Coutts: Mr. Speaker, I’m pleased to accept Question 34 on behalf of the government.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore to close the debate, or should I call the question?

Mr. Bonko: Question.

[Written Question 34 carried]

SuperNet

Q35. Mr. Bonko moved on behalf of Mr. Flaherty that the following question be accepted. What is the total value of all spending by the Ministry of Education related to the completion and/or operational status of the Alberta SuperNet over each of the fiscal years 2000-01 through 2004-05 inclusive?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased with the question and pleased to convey that Alberta Education through my ministry will accept this Question 35.

The Speaker: Shall I call the question?

[Written Question 35 carried]

ATB Regulatory Requirements

Q36. Mr. R. Miller moved that the following question be accepted.

What steps has the Department of Finance taken in 2004 since the receipt of the Auditor General's 2003-04 annual report recommending that ATB Investment Services Inc., ATB Investment Management Inc., and ATB Securities Inc. enhance their control processes to ensure that they meet regulatory requirements?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. According to the most recent Auditor General's report, '04-05, there has been some progress in this regard. However, there appears to still be some work to be done, and I would look forward to the government's response.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Finance I'm pleased to inform the member that she is prepared to accept Written Question 36.

The Speaker: Hon. member, should I call the question?

[Written Question 36 carried]

Forest Protection Budget

Q37. Mr. Bonko moved that the following question be accepted. Which reports, consultations, and stakeholder reviews have indicated to the government that $75.6 million was the total amount needed to be allocated to forest protection for the 2003-2004 fiscal year when the actual amount spent was $204 million?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Coutts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will also accept Written Question 37 on behalf of the government.

The Speaker: Shall the question be called?

[Written Question 37 carried]

AUMA Convention Open House

Q38. Mr. Taylor moved on behalf of Dr. Taft that the following question be accepted. Who attended the minister's open house for the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association fall 2004 convention on November 17, 2004, in Edmonton that cost $6,711.11?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to move an amendment to the question as follows, and I believe the amendment has been circulated. I will move that Written Question 38 be amended by striking out "Who attended" and substituting "What groups were given invitations to." The amended written question will now read as follows: "What groups were given invitations to the minister's open house for the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association fall 2004 convention on November 17, 2004, in Edmonton that cost $6,711.11?"

3:00

Now, Mr. Speaker, the reason for the amendment is simply that there are not records kept of those that attend these kinds of receptions. Generally speaking, all the participants in the conference are invited, and the amendment is self-evident. We'll be more than happy to supply the information on who was invited. Whether or not they showed up, unfortunately, we're not able to advise.

The Speaker: On the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, that will hardly answer the question that was asked, and one might suggest that the government start keeping records like that. Nevertheless, I suppose that we should accept the amendment.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie to close the debate, or should we call the question?

Mr. Taylor: Call the question.

[Written Question 38 as amended carried]

Economic Development Hosting Expenses

Q39. Mr. Bonko moved that the following question be accepted. How much money has been spent by the Ministry and Department of Economic Development on hosting expenses for the fiscal years 1992-93 through 2004-05 inclusive broken down by function and year?

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague the Minister of Economic Development I would indicate that we will not be accepting this question. The reason for this is that the vast majority of information requested is publicly available through the Alberta Gazette currently. I'm advised that information current to June 30, 2004, is available, and the remainder of the information being sought will be available through the Alberta Gazette within the next month.

The Speaker: If I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, it will close the debate, so that's why I am waiting just momentarily.

Mr. Bonko: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm disappointed with the information and the minister's statement there. Apparently, maybe we could have it in written, then, instead of verbal.

[Written Question 39 lost]

Provincial Achievement Exam Costs

Q40. Mr. Bonko moved on behalf of Mr. Flaherty that the following question be accepted. What is the total cost associated with administering the provincial achievement exams over each of the fiscal years 2000-01 through 2004-05 inclusive?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to indicate to the House that I'm prepared to accept Written Question 40 on behalf of my Ministry of Education.

[Written Question 40 carried]

Department of Energy Service Contracts

- Q41. Mr. Taylor moved on behalf of Mr. MacDonald that the following question be accepted.
How much money in total did the Ministry and Department of Energy spend on service contracts in the 2003-04 and 2004-05 fiscal years broken down by organization?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I reject Question 41. The service contracts could be broadly or very narrowly interpreted by definition, so I'm not really certain how far or how little or how much information is required. I would be happy to facilitate that if it was more precise. We do list payments to outside parties that are made by the department, and they're identified in the public accounts, and they're certainly available in those documents if the member wishes.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie to close the debate.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I will just express my disappointment in the answer given and call the question.

[Written Question 41 lost]

Truck Driver Supply

- Q42. Mr. Elsalhy moved on behalf of Mr. Chase that the following question be accepted.
How does the government calculate that there is a shortage of truck drivers in Alberta?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague the hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment I'm pleased today to rise and accept Written Question 42.

Thank you.

[Written Question 42 carried]

Motions for Returns

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Proper notice having been served on Thursday, November 17, it is my pleasure to move that motions for returns appearing on today's Order Paper do stand and retain their places with the exception of motions for returns 44, 45, 46, 47, and 48.

[Motion carried]

Disaster Recovery Program

- M44. Mr. Taylor moved on behalf of Dr. Taft that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a breakdown of the distribution of funds from the provincial $74 million disaster recovery program announced on July 27, 2004.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to report that the government is prepared to accept Motion for a Return 44.

[Motion for a Return 44 carried]

Economic Development Grants

- M45. Mr. Bonko moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a detailed breakdown of grants distributed by the Ministry and Department of Economic Development in the 2003-04 fiscal year broken down by organization.

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague the Minister of Economic Development I would indicate that we are not accepting this motion for a return. The reason is that this information is forthcoming and will be tabled in the Assembly in General Revenue Fund: Details of Grants, Supplies and Services, Capital Assets and Other, by Payee.

[Motion for a Return 45 lost]

Seniors' Benefits Program

- M46. Ms Pastoor moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a breakdown of how much money each senior recipient receives through the Alberta seniors' benefits program after the July 1, 2004, changes went into effect compared to before July 1.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd be pleased to accept the motion for a return if it was amended and also to let you know that this amendment was previously shared with my colleague opposite and circulated to members of the House as the protocol for Motions for Returns requires.

I'd like to move that Motion for a Return 46 be amended by striking out "how much money each senior recipient receives" and substituting "threshold levels and maximum cash benefits available," by striking out "compared to" and substituting "and a comparison to those in place," and by adding "2004" after compared to "before July 1."

Mr. Speaker, the amended motion would now read as follows: "A breakdown of threshold levels and maximum cash benefits available through the Alberta seniors' benefit program after the July 1, 2004, changes went into effect and a comparison to those in place before July 1, 2004."

I'd like to comment on the rationale for making this change. The original request was to compare how much assistance each client received before and after the income level and benefit amounts changed on July 1, 2004, but it is against the freedom of information and protection of privacy legislation to release the personal information of each of the program's 142,000 clients, which would be needed for the comparison. The amendment I've brought forward would allow us to provide similar information and still protect client privacy and comply with FOIP.

Also, this information will still show how seniors benefited from the increased thresholds in cash benefits on July 1, 2004, which made the program one of the most generous seniors' provincial benefits in the country. As well, Mr. Speaker, by adding the year, we can clearly indicate the time frame for when the changes came into effect and how our seniors benefited.

Having said that, I would like to move that Motion for a Return 46 be accepted with these amendments.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The amendment is debatable if anybody wants to participate.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East to conclude the debate.

Ms Pastoor: Question.

[Motion for a Return 46 as amended carried]

Correspondence with Enron

M47. Mr. Taylor moved on behalf of Mr. MacDonald that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all correspondence between the Ministry and Department of Energy and Enron Corporation, Enron Canada Corp., and/or any affiliated companies regarding electricity deregulation from January 1, 1990, to January 1, 2005.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We reject Motion for a Return 47. This process is not intended to be used to circumvent, I would say, the processes that are there to protect Albertans' access to information and protection of privacy rules. The hon. member is aware of the requirement to ensure the protection of privacy of any potentially affected individuals or entities. For the wide-ranging information being sought through this motion for a return, the hon. member should be using the process as exists under Alberta's freedom of information and protection of privacy legislation. This would allow any potentially affected third party an opportunity to review and respond to the request.

I'd like to mention, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member who placed Motion for a Return 47 has actually also followed that procedure and has received a substantial amount of material on this specific topic already.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie to close the debate.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I trust and hope that those who crafted our freedom of information and protection of privacy legislation when they crafted said legislation did not expect it to be put to the purpose that it is repeatedly put to by this government. It is not freedom from information; it is freedom of information, I would remind the minister.

Thank you.

Traffic Safety Report

M48. Mr. Elsalhy moved on behalf of Mr. Chase that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a breakdown of the total costs related to the production of the McDermid report, Saving Lives on Alberta's Roads, including the costs of all remuneration, administrative and research support, space rental or leasing, equipment and supplies, travel expenses, document design and printing, and advertising or promotion.

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation we will accept Motion for a Return 48.

Bill 205

Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005

[Adjourned debate May 16: Mr. Webber]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise in the House this afternoon to speak to Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005, and to add that I do not need my furnace cleaned, I do not need my carpet cleaned, I do not wish to participate in your survey, and I'm quite capable of making up my own mind, thank you, when I need the services of the firms that hire telemarketers.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is about time that we saw a piece of legislation like this – and I know that I will be pleased to vote in favour of it on second reading – a piece of legislation that does put additional restrictions, above and beyond what the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission's telemarketing rules state, to keep us safe and sound in our houses at dinnertime and allow us to have some quality time with our families. Lord knows, it is increasingly difficult to do that these days as both adults in a household in Alberta typically work, the children are engaged in any number of activities, and we all live very, very busy, multitasking lives.

I've long believed and, if I may be boastful for a moment, I think one of the reasons why, in my opinion anyway, the young Taylors have turned out as well as they have as young adults is that family dinner hour is incredibly important, a vital time for family members to reconnect in their busy days and their busy weeks and to remember that, in fact, they are all part of the family. We have a rule in the Taylor house: if the phone rings during dinnertime, the answering machine gets it, period. That's it. We don't pick up the phone. Mr. Speaker, if you call the Taylor house during the Taylors' dinner hour, with respect, you'll get our answering machine. We haven't had to do this to screen out friends or family or neighbours calling. We've had to do this to screen out telemarketers.

The only objection that I would raise to this bill, really, is that it doesn't extend its restrictions on telemarketing to persons conducting polls or surveys. Frankly, I think that in the months and years to come, we are going to have to grapple with this, too, because more and more often when you pick up the phone, it is somebody conducting a survey rather than somebody trying to sell you something or clean your carpet or whatever.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah, but is it a real survey?

Mr. Taylor: My hon. colleague from Edmonton-Centre asked, "Yeah, but is it a real survey?" Well, in the Taylor household we wouldn't know because as soon as they say the word "survey," we're out of there. "No, thank you. We don't wish to participate." At least, that's the answer they get when we're feeling polite, and we don't always feel polite in the Taylor household, as some of my hon. colleagues might already have surmised, I suppose.

I think the restrictions in hours – and I refer to the bill here – that

(3) no person may engage in telemarketing

(a) on a weekday except between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m., restricted hours on weekends, and none of those darn calls at all on general holidays under the Employment Standards Code will be a welcome relief to an awful lot of Albertans who, frankly, are sick and tired of getting calls from people wanting to sell them stuff.

You know, we're a fairly highly educated people in this province, and it's long been my belief, Mr. Speaker, that fairly highly educated people, maybe even moderately educated people, maybe even people who didn't finish high school are perfectly capable of deciding for themselves when they need a product or service and going out and acquiring it for themselves when they do, hopping in the car and driving over to Canadian Tire or wherever to get the thing they need. We don't need to be phoned and reminded or solicited or come on to. You know, we'll go buy that stuff when we need it.

Actually, there is one other objection that I have to this bill, not a strong enough objection to make me vote against it, certainly, but one thing that I wish we could change. Perhaps when we get to committee, we can visit this. Another exemption goes to organizations that have "a pre-existing business relationship with the person who is being called or faxed." You know, I can think of one financial institution, which shall remain nameless, and one telephone company, which shall remain nameless, who in both cases I had to tell after the fourth and fifth calls: "Listen, I'm perfectly happy with the service you're providing me the way it is. Trust me; if I need call display or a line of credit, you'll be the first to know. I'll call you."

So when we get to committee stage, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the House will consider removing that exemption. It might be a worthwhile thing because, as I said before, I think intelligent people with pre-existing business arrangements with companies can still make up their own minds when they need added services, added doodads. In the case of the Globe and Mail, the Sunday New York Times, I don't know how many times I've told the Globe and Mail that I don't have time to read a newspaper on Sunday.

Mr. Speaker, I think that that covers the basics of what I wanted to say. I will be supporting this bill in second reading. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Overall, I'm actually surprised it's taken this long to get this bill in front of this House, seeing as, I think, the annoyance factor from having telemarketers approaching our residential phones has been going on for some time. But we have it in front of us now, and in principle I'm willing to support it.

Just a couple of questions that I have for the sponsor of the bill, if he'd be so kind as to answer them, maybe when we go into Committee of the Whole. I'm pleased to see that there is an exemption for charitable organizations registered under the Charitable Fundraising Act or the Income Tax Act.

One clarification that I'm seeking. In the past there have been organizations that made their money – they were for-profit businesses – by marketing tickets to events, usually sort of an all-star event, and some portion of the proceeds of the ticket would go to a charity. They were very successful. The one I'm thinking of often dealt with the firefighters' burn unit. They would have some sort of – it was always a bit weird because they would have baseball players playing hockey or hockey players playing baseball or somebody doing something other than they usually do. But they were a big-name sports person, and therefore people would fork out for tickets. This business would phone up and say, "Well, if you bought tickets, then we could send these underprivileged kids to this," or if you bought tickets, a certain amount off each ticket would go to support X group.

I'm wondering if organizations like that, who, in fact, are a for-profit business but are assisting – and they may well be registered as an agent under the Charitable Fundraising Act – would be captured in the prohibitions underneath this act or if, in fact, they would fit under the exemptions that are offered by the act.

The second question that I have is around section (5)(c), "an organization that has a pre-existing business relationship with the person who is being called or faxed." My question is: how is that pre-existing relationship determined? Does it mean that there's been phone contact of a certain period of time to indicate that there may have been a verbal exchange in the past? So if there's a phone record showing that you'd been on the phone with this group for more than five minutes, you'd now have a pre-existing business relationship? Or does it require that there was actually a financial transaction in the past that would make that relationship happen or that they could prove that you volunteered your information to them?

Part of what I'm thinking of is that you go to those trade shows, and everybody has a free draw. Of course, it's a way to harvest information about people. You put your name and address and telephone number in. Yes, indeed somebody does get a day at the gym, but everybody else gets their information kept for contact purposes. I'm wondering if that slip of paper, that chit, is enough to say that I have a business relationship with them because I gave my information voluntarily to the group. What I'm looking for is: what is the criteria? How does the pre-existing business relationship get determined, under what criteria, and who decides that? Is it just there until it's challenged by the individual and then the business organization has to prove the relationship through whatever means that it can, or is there somebody that keeps track of all of this? I'm just looking for how all of that is determined.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to speak in second reading on Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005. I'm sure that there'll be many people who are pleased to see this pass, and I look forward to getting answers to my questions and to more debate in Committee of the Whole.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Not on Bill 205, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: You don't want to participate on this one?

Mr. Mason: No.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise and join the debate on Bill 205, brought forward by the Member for Calgary-Montrose, which would create a provincial telemarketing licence registry as well as set up the guidelines for telemarketers in the province of Alberta.

I'll try and speak verbally, Mr. Speaker, because I've not deciphered yet how hand signals show up in Hansard.

Anyway, when I first saw this legislation, the first thing that came to mind is the jurisdiction of this issue. However, it has come to my attention that section 42 of the Fair Trading Act does allow for regulations to be created respecting the marketing of goods and services over the telephone. That poses a question: what if a telemarketing business is operating out of Saskatchewan or, indeed, British Columbia? Would section 42 apply to it, or is it more reasonable to leave the world of telemarketing up to the federal jurisdiction?

Telemarketing is one way for businesses to advertise their products and offer their services. More often than not these businesses use professional telemarketers or call centres to make telephone calls and send faxes to potential customers on their behalf.

Other groups that use this service are charitable organizations. To generate funds, charitable organizations will sometimes contact potential donors directly or through a telemarketing firm using unsolicited telephone calls or faxes. Although this, too, is an unsolicited action performed by an organization, Bill 205 proposes that nonprofit organizations, registered charities, and calls made for the strict purpose of polling or surveying be exempt from this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this draws a line in the sand, so to speak, as to what is an unacceptable unsolicited telephone call or fax and what is an acceptable unsolicited telephone call or fax. Ultimately, however, I believe that any unsolicited communication between any organization or company and an individual needs to fall under a blanket approach to ensure that there are little to no loopholes at all for this type of action.

I also think it is important to clarify that current federal legislation does not adequately produce the necessary control mechanisms that are required to properly influence telemarketers to respect the rights of the individual. However, as I mentioned, the best way to address this issue is through a blanket approach.

One of the most disturbing instances an individual can encounter when dealing with telemarketers is when he or she receives a telephone call where there is no one on the other end of the line. It can be annoying and, at the least, frightening. Some telemarketing organizations use automatic dialers to perform telephone calls or send faxes. A dead air or hang-up call will occur if a telemarketing representative isn't available when the call is answered. Generally, companies allow sufficient time between calls for a representative to be available. However, if the telemarketing representative is on another line longer than expected, the result is dead air. The result of this action is Albertans being disrupted from whatever they are doing for no particular reason. This serves no purpose, and the end result is a disgruntled customer, who would much rather not be bothered by these types of annoyances.

3:30

There is little argument against enforcing more stringent restrictions on telemarketers, and I for one am in favour, but I also think that it is important to look at what is currently being done and build on that. Restrictions are currently in place which apply to all telemarketers, although they may differ depending whether they use a fax or a telephone. As a minimum telemarketers must maintain a do-not-call list or a do-not-fax list. Telemarketers must also provide customers with a fax or a telephone number where the responsible person can be reached.

It is often joked that when a telemarketer calls, an individual should ask for their number so that they can call them back at a more appropriate time. Usually it is hinted that that will be while they are eating their lunch. More often than not a number is not given, and the telemarketer explains that they are unable to provide such a number.

Mr. Speaker, it is options such as do-not-call lists and contact numbers where individuals can be reached that should be more thoroughly enforced through federal legislation, and I think that is something that provinces can work together towards. The federal government lays out a list of actions one can take to deter telemarketers from calling. Although these may not always prove effective, it is important that we recognize them as mechanisms currently in place and encourage other jurisdictions to work towards a blanket approach which strengthens the current legislation.

As a first step an individual is asked to call a telemarketer directly and ask to be removed from their fax lists or tell them that they want to be placed on their do-not-call list. As well, an individual can contact the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, in which case they will pursue the matter on behalf of an individual. Another possible solution is for the individual to have their contact information removed from any directories made available by their local telephone company to publishers of independent paper and electronic directories.

Mr. Speaker, according to federal legislation, telemarketing refers to the use of telecommunications facilities to make unsolicited calls for the purpose of solicitation where solicitation is defined as the selling or promoting of a product or service, or the soliciting of money or money's worth, whether directly or indirectly and whether on behalf of another party. This includes solicitation of donations by or on behalf of charitable organizations.

The current rules in place apply to all unsolicited calls for the purpose of solicitation. They apply to business-to-business telephone solicitation and calls from businesses to existing customers. However, these rules do not extend to calls where there is no attempt to advertise a product, offer a service; for example, calls for emergency purposes, calls to collect overdue accounts, calls for market or survey research, and calls to schedule appointments.

The specific guidelines for facsimile solicitation. Calling hours are restricted to weekdays between 9 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. and weekends between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. The faxer must identify the person or organization on behalf of whom the fax or call is made, including a telephone number, fax number, name, and address of a responsible person to whom the called party can write. This rule also applies to organizations sending unsolicited fax calls on behalf of another organization. They must also display the originating calling number or an alternate number where the call originator can be reached. Sequel dialing, or having a computer dial all possible numbers in a sequence, is not permitted. Fax calls are not permitted to emergency lines or health care facilities. Names and numbers must be removed within seven days of the called party's request. Do-not-call lists are to be maintained by the calling party and remain active for at least three years.

The specific guidelines for telephone solicitation. Callers must identify the person or organization they represent. Upon request callers must provide the telephone number, name, and address of a responsible person whom the called party can write to. Callers must display the originating calling number or an alternate number where the caller can be reached. Names and numbers of called parties must be removed within 30 days of the called party's request. Do-not-call lists are to be maintained by the calling party and remain active for three years. There are no calling hour restrictions on live-voice calls. Sequential dialing is not permitted. Calls are not permitted to emergency lines or health care facilities. Random dialing and calls to unpublished numbers are allowed.

The specific guidelines for the use of automatic dialing and announcing devices, or ADAD. These devices used for the purpose of a solicitation are prohibited, including calls on behalf of a charity, radio station promotions, or calls referring the calling party to a 900/976 number. Weekday calling hours for permitted calls are from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturdays from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. These hours do not apply to emer-agency situation announcements. Calls are to begin by identification of the person or business on behalf of whom the call is made, including a mailing address and a toll-free telephone number. ADAD calls must display the originating calling number or alternate number where they can be reached.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, but I think we now have to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have an opportunity to speak to Bill 205 in second reading. Mr. Speaker, I share the sentiments of my colleague from Edmonton-Centre, who indicated that she was somewhat surprised that a similar bill hadn't come before the Legislature sooner given the amount of concern that I think all of us have heard at one time or another from constituents regarding these unsolicited phone calls, faxes, and in fact, of course, the infamous e-mail spams that we're all subject to.

Certainly I'm supportive of this bill. I do have a couple of questions or concerns that I would just like to get on the record. First of all, I guess I'd like to say that I really believe that we should have extended this to a do-not-call list as well because although the steps taken in this bill will go some of the way towards addressing the concerns that I hear and I'm sure we all hear, I don't believe that anything short of a province-wide do-not-call list will really, truly provide the relief that many of us would be looking for.

Under clause 5 we talk about persons conducting a poll or a survey being exempted. As a small business owner I have been on the receiving end of far, far too many of these calls. I think that it's imperative to point out that while much of the discussion in this Assembly has taken place around residential calls and people's dinners being interrupted and that sort of thing, the reality is that those conducting small businesses in this province are literally bombarded by these calls and impacted at least as much, if not more, during their business hours as residential homeowners are during their private recreational hours. As a result, I think that we have to pay as much attention, at least, to the businesspeople in this province.

As I said, many, many times I would be on the receiving end of these calls and often – often – they're disguised as a poll or a survey, even though the real intent . . .

An Hon. Member: That would be us.

Mr. R. Miller: Oh. Is that you guys? That would be the NDP opposition, apparently, disguising themselves as a poll or a survey. What was it that you were trying to sell then?

An Hon. Member: Liberalism.

Mr. R. Miller: As an example, Mr. Speaker, you'll be asked several questions regarding the type of photocopier that might be used in your business establishment or the type of fax machine that's used in your business establishment. These questions will go on and on, and if you allow yourself to be strung along long enough, eventually it will come to the point where you find out, in fact, that they are selling or attempting to sell.

Likewise, with the following exemption that talks about "a pre-existing business relationship with the person who is being called or faxed." Again, this is a very common strategy for these telemarketers to represent themselves as having done business with you in the past. I would like to think that I was a relatively astute businessman and didn't fall for this particular scheme, but certainly I've spoken to many over the years who have when they get a call from a company representing themselves as having done business with you for so many years or "We've sold you this product before." In reality, once again, if you're unfortunate enough to stay on the line long enough, you will eventually find out that, in fact, you have no existing business relationship with these people. Perhaps you may not go into the fact.

Certainly, they, I believe, tend to focus on the medium- to large-size businesses where, perhaps, particularly in the medium-size businesses, there are several people that might be involved in purchasing, and one wouldn't necessarily know whether or not another purchaser has dealt with that company. So they really are in effect preying on an unawareness of the practice that they use.

I mentioned as well, Mr. Speaker, the e-mails and the spams. Unfortunately, most of us, I don't believe, have the resources available to us that the Alberta government has available to it. The government-provided computers that I'm fortunate enough to use in my office and the laptop that I'm provided with by this Assembly are very well protected. There's not a lot of spam that comes through those, but most of us don't have the resources to protect our personal computers to the same extent. I'm sure we've all been bombarded to an unbelievable extent by unsolicited sales of everything from toner supplies to the little blue pill that some members in this Assembly might know more about than I do. As I say, even with the great security that is put in place on the government computers, I know that there is a concern in the constituency offices about a number of spam e-mails that somehow manage to find their way through. So I would have liked to have seen this bill address that as well.

Certainly, as I said, Mr. Speaker, it is a step in the right direction. Hopefully, it will at least begin to address some of those concerns that we have heard, as I said, not only from residences but from small business as well.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for giving me this opportunity to join the debate on Bill 205, the Fair Trading (Telemarketing) Amendment Act, 2005. Before I begin, I would like to thank my colleague for Calgary-Montrose for bringing forward this piece of legislation and for allowing the House the opportunity to consider this important matter.

Without a doubt, most Albertans and most Canadians, for that matter, aren't too keen on having their privacy disturbed by companies or individuals trying to sell them products or services over the phone. I imagine there are very few of us, if any, who jump with excitement at the opportunity to pick up the phone from someone who is trying to sell us something. Even worse, most of the time the products or services that they try to sell us we may already have or don't have a need for. In other words, the phone calls are likely to become a complete waste of our time and, if they occur frequently, can become an unnecessary nuisance.

Over the past decade or so the telephone has become one of the favourite tools of communication for companies trying to market their products or services. Telemarketing has become a large industry generating billions of dollars in revenue. It's an efficient, cheap, and effective mode of marketing that allows companies to reach potential customers world-wide at a very low cost.

One of the major advantages of telemarketing over other modes of direct marketing is that it allows companies to market their products to a very large number of customers without having to have a large presence at the destination market. For example, if I run a bank and I would like to market my services to customers in the U.K., I don't have to hire staff in the U.K. to advertise and sell my services. I can easily do this from any location in the world where telephones are available and where labour costs are, preferably, cheap. The added benefit of resorting to this type of marketing is that I don't have to provide retail space or have a large presence in the destination market. However, while telemarketing can be business friendly, it definitely is not privacy friendly.

With this in mind, Bill 205 proposes to limit the amount of such calls by making it illegal for telemarketing companies to solicit Albertans unless these companies have obtained a marketing licence and have agreed to abide by the telemarketing rules and regulations. In order to accomplish this, Bill 205 calls for the creation of a government-maintained telemarketing licence registry that would issue provincial telemarketing licences to companies wishing to solicit Albertans over the phone. In addition, Bill 205 proposes to incorporate more stringent rules and regulations concerning telemarketing to ensure that Albertans are not overly inconvenienced by telephone solicitations.

Consequently, the bill introduces restrictions pertaining to when telemarketers would be allowed to solicit the general public. Under such restrictions telemarketers would be restricted to placing their phone calls between the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. during weekends. No telemarketing phone calls would be allowed on general holidays. The advantage of such measures is that it would not only forbid telemarketers from contacting customers during the proposed times, but it would also establish a set of consistent rules and limitations concerning telemarketing practices within the province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, while I agree in principle with the concept that Albertans should not have their privacy disrupted by unsolicited calls, I envision some issues concerning the measures proposed in Bill 205. I feel that Bill 205 is perhaps impractical and could also be viewed by our business community as unfair. While Bill 205 would protect Alberta consumers from unwanted phone solicitations from Alberta-based telemarketers, it could potentially send a wrong message to existing and potential investors regarding the openness of Alberta's free-market economy. Many companies world-wide consider telephone sales and advertisements as a commercial right and freedom and, as I mentioned before, a cost-effective medium for retailing their products and services. If we forbid companies within Alberta from utilizing this medium, we could potentially limit their ability to stay competitive and generate revenues.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to predict that enacting Bill 205 could have the unintended consequence of driving some of these companies out of Alberta, but it could potentially discourage others from bringing their business and investment to our province. While perhaps I'm being overly cautious in my analysis, I do think this is an issue that we should consider.

From the fairness and precedent perspective I believe that we should examine the acceptability of other mediums of retail advertisement before we start looking at limiting telemarketing. As an example, Mr. Speaker, Alberta currently permits salespeople and sales representatives to come to our front door to market their products and services face to face, which, I would argue, is a far more intrusive mode of solicitation and advertisement than telemarketing. At least, over the phone one has less hesitation to hang up if they do not wish to speak to a salesperson, while at the front door and in person this can be trickier as people tend to be more polite. With this in mind, I would argue that if we are not ready to do something about door-to-door soliciting, then we shouldn't be looking at limiting telephone marketing, which is by far the lesser of two evils.

From the practical point of view, Mr. Speaker, I am also not convinced that enacting Bill 205 would accomplish the results we desire. The reason is because there are very few telemarketing companies that are based strictly here in Alberta. For instance, if you have call display on your phone, you can avoid pretty well all the telemarketing by simply not picking up telephone calls from outside of the province, which tells me that all of these telemarketing calls that we're getting are already from outside of the province. So if we add these regulations, we end up with no fewer telephone calls during dinner.

The vast majority of telemarketing companies that contact Albertans tend not to be based in our province, and therefore any potential provincial legislation that imposes a limit on telemarketing would simply not apply to them. This would not only create a situation where the few Alberta-based telemarketers would be placed at a significant disadvantage in relation to their competitors who are based in other provinces but would actually do very little to limit the number of unsolicited calls Albertans receive.

Since we cannot apply our laws to other provinces, I would suggest that the best course of action would be to consider working with the rest of the country in order to create a consistent policy coast to coast that would not only protect Albertans from unwanted telephone solicitation but Canadians as well. We should consider working with the federal government in regard to this issue and urge them to pass legislation similar to Bill 205. This would mean that there would only be one law regulating telemarketing in the country and would also be a far more effective measure than enacting only province-wide legislation.

With the introduction of Bill C-37, An Act to Amend the Telecommunications Act, in December 2004 the federal government has already demonstrated its willingness to tackle the problem of telephone solicitation. While Bill C-37 does not mirror Bill 205 in its approach to resolving the issue, it does offer a viable and effective means to an end. The advantage to a do-not-call list as proposed by Bill C-37 is that it gives Albertans and Canadians the option to contact the CRTC and request to be placed on the do-not-call list. By doing so, these individuals would ensure that no telemarketing company would be allowed to call their residence again.

While the proposed federal legislation seems to be far more restricting than Bill 205 in its approach to addressing the problem of unwanted telephone solicitation, I feel that if we must tread down this path, we should concentrate on finding a Canada-wide solution. I am of the firm conviction that a unified Canadian policy that addresses the matter of unwanted solicitation would be far more successful and fair than an Alberta-only alternative, as proposed by Bill 205. Currently C-37 is before the Senate for second reading, and all indicators are at this time that it will pass and become law. While it's not perfect, Mr. Speaker, I believe that it will be a much more effective tool in the regulation of telemarketing. It offers a Canada-wide solution that's fair and effective for everyone in the country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak to Bill 205 today. There's no doubt that telemarketing is a nuisance for many Albertans, and I think everyone in the Chamber can say that they've encountered these particular types of phone calls.

The Speaker: Unfortunately, I must inform the hon. member that the time has now passed us on this one, but there is an opportunity for the sponsor to conclude the debate.

I think we'll call the question then.

[Motion for second reading of Bill 205 lost]

Bill 206

Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure to propose Bill 206, the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, for second reading. This is a bill that we've given some considerable thought to or the concept behind it.

Mr. Speaker, the bill is, of course, a process for the development of a pharmaceutical agency and does not purport to lay out in detail how it would be structured, rather to establish a commission that would be charged with bringing it about. The function of the commission would be to "investigate and report on how the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Agency should be established and how the objectives in subsection (2) can be accomplished."

Subsection (2) indicates that it is responsible to

- (a) co-ordinate purchasing of prescription medications distributed by regional health authorities and pharmacies;
- (b) implement strategies for achieving savings through reference-based pricing and least-cost alternatives;
- (c) implement public education programs aimed at prescription drug users about the appropriate use of pharmaceuticals;
- (d) investigate proven, science-based alternatives to prescription drugs;
- (e) develop strategies to reduce direct marketing to physicians by pharmaceutical companies.

Mr. Speaker, just a little bit of background on this bill. The government, of course, has been proclaiming for some time now that they believe that the costs of our health care system are becoming unsustainable and that something must be done. Of course, the government's approach is to introduce changes or so-called reforms to the health care system that would simply increase the costs of that health care system, and that involves a second tier of privately delivered health care and private health insurance.

We've taken a different look at the situation, Mr. Speaker. We agree that steps need to be taken in order to control costs in the health care system, and we also believe that by innovation within the public health care system we can improve it, change it, modernize it, make it more responsive, and ultimately control the increase of costs. We had a look around the world at different systems and different approaches that might be useful, and we looked at a situation in New Zealand.

Now, prescription drug costs are perhaps the biggest driver of increased health care costs in our system. Alberta's costs increase an average of 15 per cent per year. This is not unlike the cost increases for prescription drugs in other parts of the world. At $1.6 billion in 2004 drug costs are the second-largest component of health care expenditure, second only to hospitals. It's interesting to note that prescription drugs are the most privatized component of health care, and they are the fastest growing cost. We believe that it is time to take action against drug costs.

Now, this would establish a commission, as I mentioned earlier, called the Alberta pharmaceutical savings commission. Its mandate is to work out the details and the formal mechanisms for a province-wide pharmaceutical savings agency. With minimal upfront investment an Alberta pharmaceutical savings agency could begin realizing savings within 10 months. With those savings, we can begin to invest in other innovations such as drug coverage for catastrophic illness and eventually a universal pharmacare program. As I mentioned, our program is inspired by the achievements of New Zealand's Pharmaceutical Management Agency, or Pharmac. Since 1993 drug costs have only increased by 3 per cent annually in New Zealand compared to Alberta's 15 per cent. The Conference Board of Canada has found that in one year New Zealand saved $624 million on drugs.

The Alberta pharmaceutical savings agency would initially consist of the following core businesses: first, co-ordinating purchasing for prescription medications which are distributed by regional health authorities and by pharmacies; second, developing and implementing strategies to reduce demand-side costs; third, developing and maintaining a pharmaceutical formulary to identify those medications that offer comparable therapeutic outcomes for lower costs – in other words, a reference-based pricing or therapeutic substitution strategy – and fourth, it would phase in comprehensive public insurance for prescription medication to gain full advantage from the bulk purchasing and reference-based pricing strategies.

The APSA would work closely with regional health authorities to forecast demand for prescription drugs and then purchase those drugs in bulk. A monthly reporting system would be developed requiring RHAs to report monthly usage of pharmaceuticals to the APSA.

[Mr. Shariff in the chair]

Following the lead of Pharmac in New Zealand, the system should not have an onerous requirement for data coding requirements. It would, however, provide invaluable information to aid in purchasing prescriptions on the RHA's behalf. The APSA would use a number of strategies for negotiating the best possible price for prescription medications, including capped expenditure contracts, rebate arrangements, price and volume arrangements, package deals, and tendering for sole and preferred supplies. RHAs would maintain the primary responsibility for identifying quantity of purchase requirements and would pay for the drugs from RHA budgets.

Mr. Speaker, the cheapest pharmaceutical is the one that is never needed. Numerous studies have raised concerns about overprescription patterns and a reliance on brand name medications where generic alternatives exist. Several strategies would be employed to reduce consumer demand for prescription drugs, including education campaigns, prevention, alternative therapy, and a review of pharmaceutical marketing strategies, including direct-to-consumer advertising and physician-oriented marketing. We would seek to better integrate pharmacists into the health care system to make full use of their knowledge and skills.

Now, a third objective is to develop and maintain a pharmaceutical formulary to identify those medications that offer comparable therapeutic outcomes for lower costs. This approach of reference-based pricing has been successfully used by jurisdictions such as New Zealand to reduce costs. The formulary would identify medication that combines optimal therapeutic outcomes with the lowest costs. Therefore, where brand name and generic drugs do not produce comparable results, the higher cost, generally the brand name drug, would still be used. Where results are comparable, however, RHAs would be encouraged to make use of the lowest cost alternative. As the pharmaceutical savings agency expands its co-ordination of pharmaceutical purchasing to those dispensaries outside the RHAs, insurance providers will also be encouraged to make use of the formulary to cover only the lowest cost alternatives.

Now, one of the most important pieces, Mr. Speaker, is to develop and implement the capacity to become a clearing house for all prescribed medications which are distributed in Alberta. In order to best combat escalating drug costs, all pharmaceuticals purchased in Alberta would make use of the savings negotiated by the pharmaceutical savings agency. The APSA will therefore extend its role from core businesses to non RHA pharmaceutical dispensers. Pharmacists would retain their role as front-line providers of pharmaceutical information and would still be allowed to charge dispensary fees. However, instead of negotiating with pharmaceutical companies directly, pharmacists would make purchases through the APSA. This would require development of important capacity but should be kept in mind as we begin negotiations under core business 1.

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta pharmaceutical savings agency's activities would cost approximately $6.23 million a year, and if Alberta reduced its prescription drug costs to New Zealand levels, it would garner an annual saving of $113 per capita, for a total annual savings of 346 and a half million dollars on drugs paid for out of the public purse.

Mr. Speaker, the rapidly escalating cost of prescription medication poses a serious threat to the ongoing viability of our health system, but fortunately Alberta has the resources to make an initial investment in an agency such as the Alberta pharmaceutical savings agency. Such an investment would bring benefits within a single fiscal year and free up additional cash in the years that follow. Bulk purchasing, reference-based pricing, and public-insured medication will have the potential to greatly reduce the human and fiscal impacts of high-priced pharmaceutical care.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, the allotted time has run out.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to speak for a long time, but what I would like to say is that I thoroughly respect the fact that the member opposite that's introduced this particular piece to the Legislative Assembly I think is very much on target with a lot of the thinking that we have been applying in Health and Wellness to examine our drug costs. While I responded at the time he first presented this to the public and said that it was likely not appropriate or not necessary because those are all issues that we're taking very seriously and taking action on, I'd like to in this House commit to the hon. member that the elements of what he proposes are very appropriate. Many of the elements I think are design features that we're currently looking at, and I'm absolutely thrilled that he and his colleagues have taken this amount of time to put together something and are very mindful of the drug costs.

The drug costs that we face and the costs of technology are rising at a rapid rate, as has been noted, and becoming more efficient and effective in our management of that sector of our budget would do a great deal to putting the dollars in front of the patient and in patient care as opposed to putting them in areas which have been inflationary and, at best, escalating beyond what seems to be control. So both the New Zealand model and what they've been doing in B.C. are elements that we're looking at. Between the ministries and the government, where support is given for drugs and technology which is affiliated with health care concerns, I would have to say that much of what the hon. member has suggested are things that we're quite mindful of.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In my capacity as Health and Wellness critic for the Official Opposition I'm happy to get up and participate in the second reading of Bill 206, the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act. This is interesting because we are getting some agreement in three ways on what's being proposed by the third party. I'm interested because some of the things that are suggested in here exactly reflect the position of the Alberta Liberals. In the document that we created called Creating a Healthy Future our policy position 22 is to "institute a more extensive public pharmacare program, based on models in other Canadian provinces, to help curb rapidly rising pharmaceutical costs and to ensure proper access to medications." Our policy 23 is to "work more actively, in co-operation with the federal government and the other provinces, to test and evaluate new drugs and medical technologies."

So I think that we seem to all be agreed that we do need to do something, that there is a need to contain costs and to be reasonable about how much we're paying for pharmaceuticals, but I want to hasten to add here that we also have to be careful to balance that. Yes, pharmaceuticals and technology are the fastest rising areas in health care today. That's where all the money is being spent, and that's where all the new money is being spent.

We also need to balance that. I mean, we now have drugs that enable people with chronic illness, for example, to go out and live a fairly normal life: to work, to pay taxes, to raise a family. Before, they would have been in care for a good part of their life and, certainly, would have likely been in a care facility with all of the accompanying costs both to the individual and to the taxpayer that are ensued therein. So you balance that, and often there is a cost savings that we gain from the pharmaceuticals as well as . . . I'm going to stop here and say that health care shouldn't just be about the money. It should be about the health. If we are able to achieve better health for our citizens through the use of pharmaceuticals, then I would encourage both my colleague in the opposition and the minister of health to seriously pursue that.

Now, one of the interesting things is that of the other programs that are under consideration right now, and I'm thinking specifically of B.C., if I'm right, all of them contain some kind of copayment or advanced deductible with their pharmaceutical programs, yet the National Forum on Health from their 1997 document had recommended that there be – and they have a particular phrase for it – first-dollar coverage; in other words, there would be no deductible or no copayment right from the first penny of a cost on a pharmaceutical. People would have coverage for it.

I'm interested that we always seem to feel that, well, if people pay for something, then they'll recognize the value of it. But, Mr. Speaker, no study has actually ever shown that. What it shows us is that people with limited means and lower income or who are receiving some kinds of government assistance just don't expend the money in the first place because they don't have very much of it. What we end up with is their conditions becoming worse, more chronic, and more expensive by the time they actually do enter the system. There's nothing that ever shows us that, you know, making people pay something up front for a health service or a pharmaceutical in this case actually saves the system money because if the person doesn't spend the money, they just end up being a far more expensive patient in the long run.

So I'm interested in supporting my colleague from the third party in what he is proposing here. I want to talk about the idea of the reference-based drugs, or the generic-only drugs, which is another thing that's been looked at to try and save money. We would basically say: "Here's what the system will pay for. Here's the generic drug cost." It becomes the reference. I'll just pick numbers out of the air for the point of this argument. Let's say that pill costs a dollar through the generic one, so the government says: "Okay. That's the reference, so we will pay a dollar for this kind of a drug." Now, if you want to have the name brand drug or a different version of the drug, and it's $1.25 or $1.50 or $10, you pay the difference, but the government or the Blue Cross or the assistance program or the health care insurance or whatever is only going to pay the buck.

I think for a lot of people that does work, but we always have to have an appeal system in place. I have to say that the appeal system can be onerous because we have a system something like this in place in Alberta right now. I've had constituents come forward and say: "I'm being forced to take this generic drug, and it doesn't work for me. It makes me sick." Well, the first couple of people you phone, everybody goes: "No, no, no. They're all exactly the same. That's the point of the generic drug. It's exactly the same. It's not brand name, and they're exactly the same."

Well, you actually start to dig and you say, "What else is in this drug?" Yes, indeed, other things can be in with it. The active drug is the same between that pill and other pills, but they can put other stuff in with the drug that can affect people, and that can differ between the original generic drug and others. Also, the base, for want of a better word, can be different from pill to pill. Where you have people, for example, that are allergic to animal products, they can't have the gelatine pills because that's usually some kind of animal gelatin. It would make them sick, so they wouldn't be able to take that pill. They'd have to find the same drug in a different kind of form, like a tablet. It takes you an awfully long time to work your way through that system, finding out what the differences are and then campaigning on behalf of your constituent to make sure that they can actually get the drug that works for them and doesn't make them sick.

It's important to have the appeal process in place, number one. But, number two, we need to be aware that in fact generic drugs are not all exactly the same. There is a difference, and we need to make sure that that process is not onerous. My office had to spend an awful lot of time on that. I'm thinking of a couple of cases where that happened, and we knew how to do it. If the individuals had been on their own, they may not have been successful at all, or it would have taken them even longer.

The other thing that I think is interesting here in what's proposed in the member's bill is recognizing that all levels of government need to come together and work on this one. I would say that particularly around the issue of bulk buying it becomes really important. There's an opportunity for us to learn on best practices and evidence-based decision-making from other provinces, to work with other provinces, and I would also really encourage looking at a bulk buying process, which is in fact anticipated in this bill.

One hesitation that I have here – not specific to what's in this bill, but I see it repeatedly – is that when you talk about establishing a commission, the question is always: who chooses the people that sit on the commission and by what criteria are they chosen? That is how things get skewed. I'm sitting in this House looking across the way at people who are experts in that and who can basically produce any result they want by the people that they appoint to the commission or encourage to apply or facilitate or however you want to phrase that. You know, when that deck gets stacked, it's going to produce a certain result. So I'm always concerned in getting a very clear criteria of how people are chosen and, frankly, who decides because those two factors make a huge difference.

The other thing, just as a part of this whole idea of going to generic drugs and bulk buying. A long time ago I worked for the Licentiate of the Medical Council of Canada. [Ms Blakeman's speaking time expired] I'll have to wait until Committee of the Whole.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Rev. Abbott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise in this House and join the debate on Bill 206, Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act. The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood has brought forward a bill which he feels would have the effect of containing the rising costs of prescription drugs. Given the current increases in health care spending, this sounds like an initiative worth looking at. However, upon closer examination of the bill it is quickly realized that the only thing this bill will accomplish is to waste taxpayers' money, setting up a committee to examine issues already being addressed by our very capable Minister of Health and Wellness, as we've just heard.

We are only beginning to debate this piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, and it is already obsolete. The true irony of this situation is that just a few short months ago the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood was calling the government caucus a bunch of dinosaurs unable to keep up with the times. While the Gary Larson cartoon that the member referenced attributed the extinction of dinosaurs to smoking, it is very possible that the extinction of the NDP caucus will be due to being chronically out of date.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 outlines what the role of the proposed Alberta pharmaceutical savings agency, or APSA, would be. However, if you look at the five primary functions of this proposed organization, it's easy to see that these roles are already being filled by the Department of Health and Wellness. For example, the second function of the APSA would be to achieve savings by implementing reference-based pricing and least-cost alternative methods for drug prescriptions.

Now, the least-cost alternative price is the lowest unit cost for a drug product which is interchangeable with another. For example, it's the difference between purchasing a bottle of Aspirin or the generic brand of acetylsalicylic acid. Both drugs in the bottle are exactly the same; it's just that one is cheaper. Under least-cost alternative the cheapest product would be used to fill a prescription.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has utilized the least-cost alternative system since 1993. For over a decade this method has been in use in this province, yet Bill 206 seeks to implement this measure. I see no reason to create a committee to implement a policy which has been in place for over a decade.

The second part of this function discusses the implementation of reference-based pricing in Alberta. This policy identifies groups of drugs which have a similar effect and then pushes these drugs into a single category. A maximum price is then determined for each category, and only that cost is paid. If the drug prescribed costs more, it falls to the patient or their private insurer to pay the balance.

Now, this policy is currently being used in several other provinces, including British Columbia and Saskatchewan, but not in Alberta. The reason for this is that Alberta Health and Wellness is currently monitoring the impact of this policy in other jurisdictions to see if it's a good idea for Alberta. Again, the actions suggested by Bill 206 do nothing but duplicate work already undertaken by the ministry.

Mr. Speaker, this is only the tip of the iceberg. The rest of this bill is more of the same: creating a committee to duplicate work already being addressed by a ministry. This would not appear to be a way to contain the rising costs of health care.

Mr. Speaker, I do appreciate this opportunity to speak on private members' bills, and as discussed in a meeting earlier today, it's very, very important. Again, I commend the member for having the courage to bring forward the bill. However, for the reasons which I have cited above, I will not be able to support Bill 206, Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, and I would urge my colleagues on both sides of this Chamber to stand with me and vote against this bill.

Thank you.

An Hon. Member: Question.

The Acting Speaker: It doesn't apply at this stage.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am very pleased to rise and contribute to the debate on Bill 206, the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, as sponsored by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. I would like to start by making the statement that rising prescription drug costs are easily explained or attributed to three factors. One, the fact that we have an aging population and people are growing older. Second, these people are growing older with multiple morbidities, or concurrent diseases. They need attention, and sometimes you try to fix one of those afflictions, and then you end up creating a secondary problem, which has to be looked after as well, and it sometimes is a cascade that we cannot intercept or stop. Third, there is also an argument that some of these individuals have unhealthy lifestyle choices and that it might actually aggravate their existing conditions.

My second statement would circle around the fact that newer drugs are typically more expensive because of the R and D costs, the research and development. Some people may not know that out of 10,000 molecules only 20 or so are considered promising. Only one or two of these 20 advance to the advanced or the premarketing phase for potential marketing. It just costs more to get these few new drugs on the market.

Some people even suspect that the escalating cost of pharmaceuticals may be attributed to pharmacists' greed, but today I'd like to take this opportunity to emphasize that this is not the case. This could not be farther from the truth. As a matter of fact, practising pharmacists in the community more often than not reduce or discount their own professional fees to accommodate those patients who may not be able to afford those expensive treatments on their own.

Also, as a practitioner I would like to see a more extensive or wider pharmacare program in this province and maybe potentially across the nation to cover more Albertans for more treatment modalities. An agency like Alberta Blue Cross, for example, should co-operate with this government on developing new plans for Albertans who are not senior citizens or widowers or those who qualify for their nongroup insurance, often referred to as group 1 insurance. Blue Cross and the government should get together and devise a plan to include more Albertans under their umbrella.

This bill is useful for discussion purposes. I question the rationale. Are we here talking about saving money for the government, or are we talking about saving money for average Albertans? Are we concerned that government is paying more for health services, including things like ambulance transfers, hospitalization, and maybe potentially prescription drugs, or are we concerned that the people cannot afford their medications if they're deemed necessary?

If we are, then why not urge the government to eliminate health care premiums, which are a form of tax. The money that is collected enters into general revenue, and it is not earmarked or set aside to be spent on disease management or health promotion. The millions of dollars collected through the health care premium tax could be put to good use to extend pharmaceutical coverage to more Albertans by lowering premium rates for insurance or by offering incentives to small and intermediate business owners to offer or extend coverage to their employees and their families. What novel ideas, eh?

There has to be some emphasis as well on greater collaboration with the federal government and the other jurisdictions. If this province is willing to go that way, then maybe we should discuss it with the other provinces and the federal government to see if a nationally accepted standard model is adopted and if it could be implemented with ease. We have to look at the best decisions for these patients, and we have to look at the best practices and the best evidence that is out there. Keep in mind, again, that our goal is to promote health and to alleviate suffering, not to cut the bottom line.

Prescription drugs are already subsidized in Canada, and this is emphasized and exemplified by the fact that the U.S. government and some jurisdictions there are buying prescription drugs from Canada because drugs cost less in Canada. Someone told me that the pharmaceutical companies in Canada or throughout the world operate through a, quote, charge what you can get, end quote, model. Maybe this is where the federal government comes in. They have to come in and say: you only charge what's fair and what's reasonable so that these companies can recuperate their R and D costs and not exaggerate their profit margins.

We also have a 20-year patent protection in this country, which basically means that generic drug companies cannot copy those molecules for 20 years. When I was a student, Mr. Speaker, I remembered the debate. The debate was extended from 10 to 17 to 20 years, and there was a lot of resistance because now people would have to wait longer for those newer drugs to become generic. There was the argument that R and D companies actually get their money back in about 18 months, and then they have 18 and a half years of pure profit.

The idea is useful, the idea is good, but we have to have safeguards to clarify the role of this agency once it's established, if it's established, and also make sure that reference-based pricing doesn't supercede judgment and good calls on the part of physicians and also on the part of pharmacists when they get prescribing rights.

Concerns were raised with reference-based pricing, that it would restrict drug choice and it would limit access to new medications by encouraging the prescription of older medications because they just tend to be cheaper. It's also a disincentive or a deterrent for drug companies to develop new modalities because they don't know when they'll be covered, and they don't know if they'll be covered, so why invest in research. Also, I don't think it would reduce the overall drug expenditure because people are growing old and people are getting sicker anyway. We can probably arrest it temporarily, but you probably cannot look at the same effect over the long term.

I don't question the motive behind this private member's bill, but we just need more clarification. If we can do it with the federal government and the other provinces, then I'd probably have more support for it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak to Bill 206, Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, sponsored by my hon. colleague the leader of the third party opposition and MLA for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

I've been listening to the debate very carefully. The debate seems to range far and wide, while the bill is very specific and attempts to address two things: the concern that this government has had over a long period of time about the so-called unsustainability of the health care system unless the costs of the system are controlled, and secondly, the concern that national organizations such as the Conference Board of Canada have expressed and put their finger on, the components of the health care system that seem to be experiencing a very, very rapid escalation of costs. To give you an example, the Conference Board of Canada has identified drug costs in Canada as the fastest growing component of the Canadian health care system during the last 25 years. So it's a problem that's chronic, a problem that has been growing, a problem that needs immediate response to it.

We know that there are solutions. We're not trying to invent a wheel or something absolutely new. We know that some practices have been adopted elsewhere in other parts of the world, and they have indeed worked. New Zealand is a case in point. Many of the questions that have been raised by members in this House, from both sides of the House, have already been addressed quite effectively over the last 10 years by the practices related to how to control the drug costs as they have evolved in New Zealand. It's about time that we learned, paid attention to those practices, those policies that have been developed there and take advantage of them.

For the benefit of the House and the members of the House I would draw attention to the NDP opposition's document called The Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Agency, a document that we released in October 2005. It's very, very current and is accessible on www.newdemocrats.ab.ca. Not only the members of the House would like to have access to this information, but many Albertans who are going to watch the discussion would like to have access to the facts and detail, and that's where they're to be found.

Mr. Speaker, the Conference Board of Canada has drawn attention to the fact that this is not a recent problem. It is a problem that's been growing for the last 25 years. The document to which the Conference Board of Canada draws attention is called Understanding Health Care Cost Drivers and Escalators, and it's March 2004. Payment for prescription medication accounts for approximately 80 per cent of all drug spending in Canada, representing an estimated $14.6 billion in 2002. In Alberta alone prescription drugs cost us about $1.6 billion a year, and they're increasing at the rate of 15 per cent every year. Fifteen per cent of $1.6 billion is a large sum of money, that we could save if we could bring it down to a level which is comparable to the New Zealand level, and I don't see why we can't do it. If it can be done in New Zealand, it certainly can be done here. We can bring it down to about a 3 per cent annual increase as compared to the current rate of increase, which is 15 per cent.

The Alberta health care system has certainly not been immune to this chronic increase. Twenty years ago spending on drugs represented in this province only 8 per cent of the health spending. In 2005 Alberta spent $1.6 billion, as I said, on prescription drugs, an expenditure that represents 11.5 per cent of total health expenditures for that year. So from 8 per cent to 11.5 per cent, a huge increase over the last 20 years.

This bill is designed specifically to address one particular facet of the health care costs in this province, the ones that have to do with the prescription drug costs. When it comes to eliminating health care premiums, no doubt we should eliminate them. The policy of the NDP opposition in this House has been that that's an unfair tax, and it should be eliminated as soon as possible. But it doesn't address the question of how to contain and reduce the concurrent costs of health care provision, whether they come from public dollars or from private dollars.

While the Conservative government here has claimed to examine the best practices of jurisdictions from around the world, they have made no progress in incorporating innovative measures being used elsewhere to reduce rapidly escalating costs of drugs. The Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar did talk about, you know, how this government has been already busy trying to cut costs, but if that is the case, the evidence doesn't show up in the rate of increase of the pharmaceutical drug costs that this province experiences from year to year. The latest figures indicate that the cost increase here is close to 15 per cent. So clearly the policies and the practices that the government has in place are ineffective in making a dent on the rate of increase in the costs of pharmaceutical drugs. Both we as government and Alberta citizens as the users of the drugs jointly pay for these increasing costs.

We need to act and act immediately and urgently on this matter. It's not a partisan issue. I was encouraged by what the minister had to say here. She says that she'll pay attention to the provisions of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw attention to the facet of the bill which deals with the composition of the commission. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre expressed some concerns about who gets appointed to these commissions. I think it's important that we put on record, as we are discussing this bill, how this commission will be appointed. Will it be charged to do the actual work, hold public hearings, and listen to Albertans and specialists?

- (3) The people appointed to the Commission must consist of
 - (a) a chair who must be
 - (i) a judge or retired judge of any court in Alberta, or
 - (ii) a person whose stature and qualifications are, in the opinion of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, similar to that of a judge;
 - (b) one person who is not a Member of the Legislative Assembly nominated by the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition;
 - (c) one person who is not a Member of the Legislative Assembly nominated by the leader of a second opposition party in the Legislative Assembly;
 - (d) one person nominated by the Alberta College of Pharmacists.

So pharmacists will be represented on this commission. I want to assure the Member for Edmonton-McClung that the experience, the expertise, the opinions of the pharmacist community will not go unrepresented and unheard if this commission is constituted.

- (e) one person nominated by a certified union representing health care workers in Alberta.

A very large number of Albertans work to provide these health care services, and they certainly should find a place on this commission.

- (f) the dean or other faculty member of a Faculty of Medicine [from Alberta universities].

We've got two faculties of medicine in this province. Surely, we should have the faculties of medicine academic community represented on this commission.

- (g) one person nominated by the Consumers' Association of Canada, Alberta chapter;
- (h) one person nominated by the Alberta Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association;
- (i) one person nominated by the ABC Benefits Corporation;
- (j) 3 people nominated by groups representing the interests of seniors, post-secondary students, persons with disabilities, persons with mental illness and recent immigrants to Canada.

Now, this last provision for membership on the commission, Mr. Speaker, is very, very significant. My hon. colleague from Edmonton-Centre drew attention to the fact that seniors, who are increasingly users of prescription drugs and have to use them on a more regular, ongoing basis than the rest of us, would have concerns about drug choice. Surely, their representation on this commission will alleviate the concern that the member has expressed here.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure, also, this afternoon to rise and join the debate on Bill 206, the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood I, too, am concerned about the rising costs of prescription drugs. However, unlike the hon. member I do not believe that Bill 206 will do anything to help stem the rising costs of pharmaceuticals.

The proposed commission would be charged with a duty to implement strategies to reduce costs through reference-based pricing and least-cost alternatives. I agree with the intent, but I have a couple of concerns with this statement. The first is that the commission's hands are clearly tied. The mandate of the commission is not to investigate methods of reducing drug costs but to implement a strategy. No consideration is given to the best way of reducing costs as the commission has already been directed on how to act. Mr. Speaker, that is backwards. It is like beginning your research with an answer and working backwards to find an appropriate question. The proper method of inquiry is to discover what the problem is, then research the best way to solve the problem, and then develop a strategy to implement it. However, the NDP appear to believe that you should put the cart before the horse.

Mr. Speaker, this type of one-sided, ideological approach to health reform is becoming commonplace from the opposition. For example, when the hon. member's party wanted to conduct public consultations – and I use that word loosely – they made sure to go to areas where they would hear what they wanted to hear. Their tour of Alberta never left the urban areas of the province, completely discounting the views of rural Albertans.

Let's contrast that to the approach that the hon. minister of health took in her attempt to initiate health reform. The minister held an international health symposium that featured experts from around the world. [interjections]

4:40

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka has the floor. The same courtesy was extended to anybody else who spoke before, that members were quiet and listened to the debate.

The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health and Wellness held an international health symposium that featured experts from around the world in the field of health policy. The experts came from diverse backgrounds and presented a balanced, nonpartisan approach to health reform. The government was interested in what would actually work and not what was ideologically expedient.

If the hon. member recalls, even he was, and I quote, pleasantly surprised that there was a mix of views and experts at the symposium. The conference did not contain, quote, all right-wing jerks, as the hon. member originally expected. In fact, the conference contained many important messages that provided the government with balanced advice that will actually help improve the health care system. Albertans prefer honest, thought-out solutions. When you are constructing public policy, Mr. Speaker, it is important that you look at all options and not just those which suit your own short-term political goals.

Mr. Speaker, that brings me to my second concern with Bill 206. As I mentioned earlier, the hon. member said that during a symposium he learned a great deal, but perhaps he stepped out of the room for a moment and missed the presentation by Mason Durie. Mr. Durie indicated that one of the biggest benefits of the symposium was the ability to discuss the system as a whole, which was very important. Mr. Durie indicated that the system is only effective if it leads to better health outcomes. Bill 206, however, does not focus on the system as a whole. Bill 206 attempts to segregate pharmaceuticals from the health system.

You cannot take one piece of the system in isolation and attempt to fix the problem. Cheaper drugs mean nothing to a rural farmer in Alberta who is unable to find a doctor in his community or to the transplant patient who is waiting for an organ. Cheap prescription drugs will not help people get hips replaced faster. You cannot take a piecemeal approach to health reform.

Mr. Speaker, in formulating this legislation, the hon. member seems to have ignored the advice given by Janice McKinnon, a former NDP cabinet minister in Saskatchewan. Ms McKinnon indicated that the problem with health reform had been that politicians focus on short-term issues and not long-term improvements in health. With Bill 206 the hon. member has clearly decided to set aside long-term systemic reform, like the Minister of Health and Wellness is proposing with the third way. He is actually going for a quick headline in the paper in shameless self-promotion.

Mr. Speaker, for many reasons but especially because of the two that I've outlined above, I cannot support this inadequate legislation, and I would urge all others to do the same. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to have been given the opportunity to speak on the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, and hopefully I'll get to do more than one line. I feel that the idea is a good one. However, the provincial government is already working to ensure that Albertans are protected from rising pharmaceutical costs.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 suggests that the commission be responsible for the development of strategies in order to reduce direct marketing to physicians by pharmaceutical companies. Although this may in fact be an admirable goal, it is something the provincial government is really limited in doing. Currently the federal government regulates direct-to-consumer advertising. It is Health Canada under the authority of the Food and Drugs Act that regulates the advertising of pharmaceuticals.

The role of Health Canada is to set regulations and such on the standards for drug advertising and to inform the Pharmaceutical Advertising Advisory Board what these standards are so that they can put them into their own code. This board looks at advertising by pharmaceutical companies before those in the field of health care are exposed to it. However, manufacturers' submissions of their planned advertising is done voluntarily.

Under the Food and Drugs Act the rule is basically that an ad may not mention both the name and the function of a drug. You can mention one or the other in the ad but not both. There also has to be a break between an ad mentioning the name of the drug and another illustrating its functions. They're also supposed to be reasonably different so that the consumer cannot connect the two. This is how the advertising of pharmaceuticals currently works. It's not perfect.

There are several instances where ads have run that are in violation of the act.

Why, then, bother creating yet another board or in this case a commission to be in charge of advertising to physicians? The Pharmaceutical Advertising Advisory Board obviously does not have a great deal of power when it comes to monitoring the advertising aimed at physicians by pharmaceutical companies. Why create another group like the PAAB on the provincial level?

Of course, we all know that these ads affect people, that they are more likely to ask their doctors for a drug brand that they've seen advertised. There are numerous studies that show this. We also know that physicians are affected by advertising from drug manufacturers. There was a study conducted by a researcher at the University of Toronto that found a link between the amount of money spent advertising antidepressants to doctors in Canada and the number of prescriptions written for them. We know this. However, as much as changing the rules for the advertising done by pharmaceutical companies may save money, the commission as proposed will not be effective. Therefore, I cannot support this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Strang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pleasure that I rise today to contribute to the debate on Bill 206, the Alberta Pharmaceutical Savings Commission Act, sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

The cost of pharmaceuticals is rising very quickly. Recently we have seen an increase between 13 and 17 per cent annually. Obviously, these increases are not sustainable, and we'll need to address them in the context of health reform. I'm sure that the minister will address the rising costs of drugs as she progresses in the third way evolution.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is problematic because it's repetitive and ineffective. For health reform to be effective, it must be system-wide. You cannot take one component and try to fix it in isolation. The health system is interconnected, and change in one section will affect others.

The international health symposium taught us many valuable lessons about how we should proceed with health reform. One of the most consistent messages that we heard was about the need to focus on quality. I know that the member learned a lot at this symposium. I also am confused about why this bill does not focus on quality. Everything that the member has suggested seemed to focus on cost control. There is more to health reform than curbing rising costs. We have to ensure that the health of Albertans is protected through our processes of health reform. The approach the minister is undertaking, the third way, is not only looking to see that costs are controlled but that quality is enhanced.

I have been worrying that if Alberta were to adopt reference-based pricing, Albertans would actually end up paying more for their prescription drugs. A paper prepared as part of the University of London health policy review in 1995 found that in European countries with reference-based pricing programs it accelerated the growth in prices compared to those countries without reference-based pricing. In 2005 a review of reference-based pricing in the pricing system in British Columbia, cited by a study conducted at McMaster University, found that some of the savings attributed to reference-based pricing was a result of costs being shifted from government to patients.

I am surprised the member would seek to undertake health reform that would result in a system that would cost Albertans more money. If the drugs that Martha and Henry are currently using are not chosen as reference drugs, then Martha or Henry would have to pay a premium the next time they go to refill their prescription.

The member also suggested in section 3(2)(a) of Bill 206 that the regional health authorities co-ordinate the purchasing of prescription medications that they distribute. I think this idea is fantastic. It's so good, in fact, that the minister has informed me that the regional health authorities are already doing it. The purchasing of prescription medication is co-ordinated by the Capital health region through the use of a group tendering process. In addition to this, the Alberta Cancer Board makes sure of sole-source tendering for cancer drugs.

In addition to co-operation in the purchasing of pharmaceuticals, patented drugs are already controlled by the federal government. The Patented Medicine Prices Review Board determines a range for patent medication by using a median price for drugs based on seven comparative countries. This means that there are already measures in place to help control costs of patented drug medication.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned above, I cannot support this bill because it is both ineffective and repetitive. Health reforms should not solely be based on cost control, as the member is promoting in this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood to close debate.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise and conclude debate on Bill 206. I want to respond first of all to some comments that have been made by some other hon. members.

The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, who began his tour of public input on our long-term care by saying that everything was fine with our long-term care system, has no lessons to give to the Alberta NDP on having an open mind or listening to the public; I can say that.

The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar made somewhat more substantive criticisms, and I'd like to address them. He basically gave the argument that everything that we're proposing in this bill is already being done by the ministry of health, and that echos the comments of some other members of this Assembly. It certainly echos comments made by the minister herself after we announced this proposal. I do appreciate that the minister took the time to meet with me prior to bringing this forward because the question I had for the minister is exactly that: what is it that you're actually doing in this area compared to what we're proposing to do? I found from that meeting that it's quite different.

The government seems to be working on the area of orphan drugs, or drugs for orphan diseases. Those are diseases that are rare, with very expensive drugs that are not profitable often for pharmaceutical companies. They are looking at that. There seems to be little action on the national front other than doing a little bit of information gathering across the country. In fact, Mr. Speaker, based on my understanding of the discussion I had with the minister, the government is not doing many of the things that are proposed here.

We never claimed in this bill that all of this was new. In fact, some use of generics and lowest price alternatives is already built into the Alberta health care system, and we acknowledge that and have from the beginning. It's the bulk buying, Mr. Speaker, if we want to get down to it, that is going to produce the greatest savings. Using the combined negotiating power of the entire province, and hopefully of the entire country, to negotiate with drug companies to get bulk buying costs for drugs will serve to dramatically decrease the drug bill that we pay.

Now, I don't know about other members opposite, but when I go and buy tomato sauce at the grocery store, I buy big cans, not a bunch of little cans, and that's exactly the principle that that is applying. It's just common sense. The fact that this has not been applied systematically to pharmaceutical purchasing for our health care system speaks to the need for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, a lot of members opposite have said: well, you can't deal with just one piece. What we're attempting to do through this bill, I think, is to show two things. One is that there are ways that we can reform the public health care system in order to control costs, and this is being done elsewhere. We can strengthen our public health care system and make it more cost-effective without getting into private health care delivery. The second thing we wanted to show is that the government is not interested in doing so. By the comments that have been made by the members opposite today – some of them, I think, show considerable ignorance – I think we've demonstrated, in fact, that the government is not interested in making the public health care system work in this province.

They are interested in using increasing costs as an excuse to foist a private, two-tier health care system on the people of this province, which ultimately will cost considerably more than the current health care system. The United States, which has the most privatized delivery system in the world, has over double the cost per person under its health care system as we have in Canada. There are over 40 million Americans without coverage, and that is the direction that this government wants to take us whether they say so or not, whether they hide behind the slogan of a third way, which is, of course, really just the same old private two-tiered care way.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for allowing me to respond to this debate. I urge all members to support Bill 206. Thank you.

[Motion for second reading of Bill 206 lost]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, on the Order Paper the next order of business could likely be Bill 207. However, I think all members here are well aware that there is another bill that has already been confirmed in its principles that is at second reading in the House, and it has the same thrust and spirit and gist as Bill 207. Therefore, Bill 207 would not come available under the normal business of the House. I think all members here understand that.

On that basis, then, and since there is no early consideration that anyone here is aware of to go to committee on Bill 204, I would move that we call it 5:30 and adjourn until 8 this evening.

[Motion carried: the Assembly adjourned at 4:58 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Monday, November 21, 2005

Net Metering of Electricity

510. Mr. Marz moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to adopt net metering of electricity for producers of all sizes, thereby allowing them the opportunity to sell any excess electricity they produce back to the grid at the same rate as the purchase price.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Good evening, colleagues. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce Motion 510, which calls on the government to adopt net metering as an option for small electricity producers, or microelectricity generators, to be more technically specific.

I think it's important that I take this opportunity to describe net metering and highlight some of the advantages it would provide for Albertans. Net metering is an electricity policy for consumers who are capable of generating electricity through smaller renewable energy sources such as biomass, wind, or solar power. Under net metering a system owner receives retail credit for at least a portion of the electricity they generate. Under ideal circumstances the consumer's existing electricity meter would be certified to spin backwards, effectively recording production and usage, resulting in a net meter reading which would be used in the billing process.

Throughout other jurisdictions the rules vary significantly by country, state, and province. Variations include the availability of net metering, if and how long banked credits can be kept and how much credits are worth, retail versus wholesale, and the like. The practice of net metering is increasing rapidly in North America, specifically in the United States, where a large majority of states have some form of net metering in place. In Canada there are a number of provinces instituting net metering policies and moving forward with initiatives which support that policy.

Currently, Mr. Speaker, there are two main roadblocks that are slowing the progression towards the net metering option in Alberta's electricity market. The first obstacle is the certification of residential electricity meters to flow in reverse. Basically, Measurement Canada has not approved the basic residential meter that the majority of Albertans use to measure backwards electricity flows as it does measure forward electricity flows. The solution to this problem is in the hands of the federal government and Measurement Canada. As I'm to understand, there is a current project under way to certify residential electricity meters to measure reverse flows; however, a completion date for that project has not yet been set. There are some optimistic results through preliminary tests which show that meters do measure correctly in the reverse direction with little or no miscalculation.

The second obstacle, Mr. Speaker, is that Alberta's electricity market is designed for large producers. The policies in place are geared towards corporations that have the resources and know-how to successfully participate in Alberta's electricity generation market on a large scale. The issue is that small producers need to have a set of policies and guidelines that allow them the opportunity to effectively and affordably participate in Alberta's electricity market.

I'm pleased to hear that Alberta Energy is currently conducting a comprehensive consultative review of policy and practices respecting small-scale generation, including net metering. I look forward to the recommendations of the review. I'm confident that the support received for Motion 510 will help to encourage a policy change that is positive for net metering.

Mr. Speaker, once these obstacles are overcome and Albertans are provided with the opportunity to participate in net metering, the province's electricity market will become stronger and more diverse. This will be accomplished through an increase in the supply of electricity and with an increase in the use of renewable energy sources for electricity. Net metering programs serve as an important incentive for consumer investment in renewable energy generation. This incentive is achieved as net metering enables customers to use their own generation to offset their consumption over a billing period.

Mr. Speaker, net metering is a low-cost, easily administered method of encouraging customer investment in renewable energy technologies. Although Alberta is not currently experiencing shortage in the supply of electricity thanks in part to the deregulation of the electricity market – [interjections] I thought you'd like that – providers will also have the opportunity to benefit from net metering. This is because when customers are producing electricity during peak periods, the system load factor would be improved. I also think it's important to note that an increased supply of electricity would allow for an increase in the net export of electricity to other jurisdictions.

Mr. Speaker, there are numerous examples from jurisdictions in North America and Europe. I'm confident that some of those examples will be discussed this evening. Instead of talking of what has been done in other jurisdictions, I'd like to take the opportunity to discuss an area of limitless potential for net metering in Alberta. Recently the government has been promoting Alberta's rural development strategy. A recommendation of this strategy is to encourage economic growth in rural Alberta. What better way to encourage economic growth than through diversification? A rancher in rural Alberta has a better chance of sustaining a solid economic base if he or she has the opportunity to diversify and expand that base, which they're dependent on for their family's well-being.

Net metering speaks directly to that initiative. Providing the opportunity for rural Albertans to invest in renewable energy sources not only reduces operating costs through electricity bill reductions but increases revenues through the sale of electricity to the provincial grid, and that's precisely the economic growth incentive that the Alberta rural development strategy is alluding to. Imagine for a moment a rancher in southern Alberta with wind turbines or an acreage in central Alberta with a roof lined with solar panels or another ranch in northern Alberta which successfully operates a small-scale biomass facility. These are the types of investments that Albertans want to make. They want to diversify, and they want to take that next step toward a strong, diversified provincial electricity market.

The possibilities of net metering aren't limited to rural Alberta either. For example, there's a house in Edmonton which has a 2,000-watt solar power system mounted on a garden trellis that feeds the house. This system generates 1,850 kilowatts of electricity a year and exports 1,130 kilowatts per year, or 61 per cent. The export value at full retail price would amount to only $102 per year. The owner of the operation has to pay about $80 a month in various charges and costs to become a participant in Alberta's Electric System Operator energy trading system and to have their meter read. These costs are not conducive to an investment in renewable energy. This is the main reason that a net metering policy that is reasonable and fair for microgenerating is needed here in the province of Alberta. The technology is affordable and becoming more affordable each day. The safety standards are already in place and work in numerous other jurisdictions without danger to maintenance personnel or consumers.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the debate surrounding Motion 510, and I look forward to the recommendations of Alberta Energy's review of policy and practices respecting small-scale generation. I encourage all members of the Assembly to support Motion 510 and, in doing so, support the idea of adopting net metering as a policy option that supports the development of renewable energy and the diversification of electrical generation.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to get an opportunity this evening to participate in the debate on Motion 510 on the net metering of electricity, sponsored by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. Certainly, that neighbourhood south of Red Deer is on the leading edge of a lot of developing technologies in this province, including east of highway 2, in that part of the constituency, the development of coal-bed methane.

This is certainly an idea that I'm pleased to see that we are again discussing in the Legislative Assembly. Net metering of electricity has been proposed by members on this side of the House on at least two occasions. I'm not going to certainly do an historical review of Hansard and cite as to why as short as three years ago it wasn't suitable. The government at that time was not interested, but I'm very pleased that the hon. member has brought this motion forward, and I certainly will be supporting this motion. It's a good idea. We will be joining the western Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and also Ontario, I believe, in initiating legislation that allows small power producers to easily connect to the grid.

Now, if we review the prices of power and electricity, if we had stayed to the regulated industry, perhaps it wouldn't be necessary for so many people to invest in alternate energy sources, but it is now because of the uncertainty over electricity deregulation. Prices have really gone through the roof, and many people want to invest in their own sources to generate electricity, and if they do have surplus, why not allow them to move it into the grid?

The questions I have always had and will continue to have – and hopefully the hon. member is correct. I know that the cost of the metering devices themselves has gone down, but it was still quite a cost here two years ago. Eventually, if we have a good look at this Motion 510 tonight and it is incorporated at some point in the near future into government policy, hopefully we would see not only in urban areas but certainly in rural areas many locations where there would be net metering used.

I have to say that there is a shortage of supply of electricity in this province. The amount of coal-fired generation has actually decreased. The base load coal-fired generation in this province has actually decreased in the last four years, Mr. Speaker. Coal-fired generation in some cases is less than 2 and a half cents all-in costs for electricity. We need to ensure that we have a steady growth in base load generation, and that hasn't happened because of the uncertainties of deregulation. The price has gone up, and this is an ideal opportunity for people to come forward, generate their own electricity.

Let's use, for example, farmers. Farmers have three costs these days that they are very concerned about. The first one, of course, is fertilizer, the second one is fuel to run their machines, and the third is the cost of electricity. I'm always hearing concerns and fielding calls from farmers in southern Alberta, particularly irrigation farmers, who are quite upset not only about how the billing for electricity works but about the cost of the electricity itself, and many have expressed an interest, if this continues, in generating their own electricity, whether it's solar or whether it's with some of the turbine technology that's on the go these days. They would benefit from this. They would benefit from this idea presented by the hon. member.

There are other benefits to net metering as well, Mr. Speaker. I think it would have a direct impact on consumers' electricity bills, as I said. By producing a percentage of the energy that they consume, Albertans can decrease their reliance upon larger facilities on the grid, whether it is the hydro power, whether it is coal-fired power, whether it is the natural gas or the cogeneration or even the bit of wind power that we have. When you combine all this electricity, from the cheapest form of generation to the most expensive, unfortunately with the power-by-the-hour system that we now have at the Power Pool, we have very, very high costs for our electricity.

Now, when this power goes through the Power Pool, of course our ISO, or Alberta's Independent System Operator, monitors the electricity grid and is responsible for ensuring that the province's electricity demand is met. We have to be very careful starting out with net metering because demand and supply have to be in constant balance. That's what makes electricity an essential service, not a commodity. It's because suddenly you can't turn on a generating unit and put out 400 megawatts of electricity. It has to have somewhere to go. You can't store it once you produce it. So that's why we have to have this instantaneous balance between supply and demand. Certainly, a farmer or a homeowner or an acreage owner with a modest surplus, particularly at the peak times, whether it's early in the morning or between 5 and 7 o'clock in the evening when many people are returning to their homes from their work and our demand is just about 8,000 megawatts in the province – there would be a need at that time for this electricity.

I'm certain we can work this out, and the hon. member has an excellent idea. Many jurisdictions in America already have one form or another of net metering, and there don't seem to be many complaints. I'm sure that the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View has some thoughts on reducing our need for base load generation by not only encouraging conservation but encouraging more environmentally friendly ways to generate the power that every one of us consumes and every one of us enjoys because it certainly adds to our quality of life.

Before we get too hard on the coal-fired generators, I think eventually this Assembly and this province will see the use of CO₂ sequestration to enhance oil recovery, and a major source of this CO₂ will come from our coal-fired generators. I think it would be a win for the environment, it would be a win for our mature oil fields, and it would be a win for our electricity consumers as well. Certainly, that discussion is not part of Motion 510, Mr. Speaker.

In conclusion, I would urge all hon. members of the Assembly to take a good, close look at Motion 510 and please consider supporting it. It had merit before, it does now, and the hon. member is to be commended for bringing this forward. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise and join the debate on Motion 510, focusing on the net metering of electricity. Alberta's electricity market is one that provides reliable and affordable energy across the province. Alberta's restructuring of the electricity supply industry in the mid-1990s has led to a number of companies developing new sources of power in our province. Since 1998 there has been an increase in electricity generation of 3,200 megawatts in Alberta. This increase amounts to 40 per cent of all new power capacity in Canada during this period. What this increase means for Alberta is that even though our province has experienced record levels of population growth, thereby increasing demand for electricity, we have experienced none of the power interruptions, brownouts and blackouts, that other jurisdictions have had to cope with.

Electrical generation in our province is provided from a variety of origins. The majority of power generation in Alberta is provided by coal and natural gas, but power is also supplied through renewable resources such as hydro, wind, and biomass. The diversity of generation is a strength of our electrical market and also for Albertans. Motion 510 urges us to consider removing barriers to another source of generation. Small, independent energy producers are what are referred to as microgenerators.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with the initiatives which are proposed, but I feel that the wording of the motion can be worded more clearly to clarify the intent of the motion. To that end, I have with me the appropriate number of copies of an amendment I would like to propose to this motion.

8:20

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, you may proceed.

Mr. Groeneveld: Okay. Mr. Speaker, these amendments strike out "producers of all sizes" and substitute "microelectricity generators." In addition, they strike out the words "at the same rate as the purchase price."

The first amendment is being brought forward to clarify the intent of this motion to open up the market for microgenerators. At present Alberta's electricity market is very much geared towards large producers. By specifically highlighting microgenerators in the wording of the motion, we can be more specific as to the goals of the motion.

I am introducing the second amendment because I believe that the intent of this motion is to raise awareness of this issue and, hopefully, to show that the Legislative Assembly supports providing the option of net metering to Albertans. With the phrase "at the same rate as the purchase price" included in the original wording, this motion is too definite in how the government should address the issue of net metering. By removing this phrase, we do not restrict government in developing policies surrounding this issue.

Mr. Speaker, net metering is an initiative which has the potential to benefit all Albertans. If Motion 510 is passed by this Assembly, there would be substantial support for greater financial incentives for people to invest in the necessary equipment to generate their own power. They would be able to sell back to the grid energy which they do not use. This changes the cost of setting up a solar panel from being a prohibitive obstacle to a long-term investment. Currently the cost of instituting a system whereby a microgenerator can sell power back to the grid completely negates the revenue they receive from the sale. If we adopt a policy that reduces these financial barriers, more Albertans may choose to become microgenerators. This has the potential to reduce the current impact on our environment by lowering the fiscal barriers to installing home solar panels, windmills, or other electrical generators which rely on renewable resources. If we reduce the barriers, which we are able to in our own province, we can bring this initiative one step closer to reality.

I fully support Motion 510 as amended, and I hope that my colleagues will support both the amendments and the amended version of 510. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: This is debate on the amendment. I had indicated that I would recognize Edmonton-Calder earlier on. Would you like to speak to the amendment?

Mr. Eggen: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Okay. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was certainly interested from the beginning to see where Motion 510 was going to go. I was very heartened that the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills had the vision to put something such as this forward, and the original motion I was certainly very excited to support.

Now, in regard to the amendments I think that there's some merit to what the hon. member was saying in regard to his amendment. However, let me put forward a couple of ideas here that might alert members to the situation of how we can maximize the use of net metering in this province not just with microelectricity generators but with larger sized generation capability as well.

The means by which individuals or businesses would contribute to this net metering accumulation of power back into the grid, so to speak, would be through solar energy, through wind generation, or through cogeneration techniques. At the end of the day, really, cogeneration might represent the most substantive source of energy that we have yet to tap into in any large way in Alberta. I know that there are many projects that are being put forward as we speak to make better use of our cogeneration capability here in this province.

I'm questioning – and perhaps you can provide some more illumination on this for me – why we would exclude larger producers in regard to net metering because, really, even when we're talking about wind power, people need to have a fairly substantial wind farm or wind operation to make it worth while. While an individual on a farm or a ranch might set up a small windmill – you can buy windmills that aren't much wider than six or eight feet across, and they can provide the needs for your own home. You know, I would venture to say that we should try to encourage small- or medium-sized wind farms on farms and ranches. I'm just hoping that this definition of micro will not exclude those people from producing electricity in that way.

We see cogeneration across the country now and, indeed, across North America, but not a lot of people are signing up for the offer at this juncture. I see that Nova Scotia has a very ambitious plan to try to encourage 10 megawatts of electricity from customers, but the last that I was able to find out is that they've only signed up a few dozen people to in fact participate in the net metering project. Again, in British Columbia, which has a net metering program, there's only a handful of people that have actually signed up to do so.

I would suggest that we could encourage more people to take advantage of this offer, which I think is the key to the future, part of the basket of solutions that we can produce here to meet our energy needs in Alberta, by being more flexible in how and who can actually participate in net metering endeavours. I know that other countries certainly have more liberal views on this, where the factories or, let's say, the oil sand projects – these people will produce large amounts of cogeneration electricity. You know, I don't want to exclude the possibility of having larger operators participate in such a net metering proposal.

What I would look for is some clarification, particularly in the second amendment: "at the same rate as the purchase price." Are you suggesting some sort of subsidy, then, for people where they are actually getting more back if they do participate in a net metering operation, or is that amendment there for another purpose? I would seek clarification on that. Like I say, I certainly enjoyed the motion as it was originally stated, and I do have a problem with the first amendment for Motion 510.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Highwood for bringing forward the amendment. I believe it's a friendly amendment, and I would agree with it. Basically, the original wording includes all producers and alludes to specific pricing regulations.

The amended wording allows Motion 510 to speak to and support small producers or microgenerators. The change in the wording also takes out specific regulations, leaving details up to the regulators while supporting the need to look at net metering as a viable option for Albertans. I believe that the current policies that we have are already adequate for large generators in Alberta, and that is pretty much borne out by the increased generation over the past few years that was spoken to by the hon. Member for Highwood and, I believe, by myself.

So Motion 510 is about bringing attention to the issue and showing that there is significant support for the concept of net metering. As I mentioned in my original remarks, Alberta Energy is currently undertaking a comprehensive consultative review of policies and practices respecting small-scale generation, including net metering, which I understand will be completed in 2006. I believe the amendments that are proposed will allow this motion to support that review. I believe that the support for 510 as amended will speak volumes as part of that whole process while at the same time bringing much needed attention to the policy idea, whose time has come.

I encourage all members to support the amendment.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This amendment to Motion 510 as proposed by the hon. Member for Highwood is interesting. I think we are taking a good idea and we are making it worse, significantly worse. But perhaps I would change my opinion if another hon. member of the Assembly could answer these questions for me.

When we are talking about microelectricity generators, what are the limits of electricity that these generators could or would produce and be able to sell into the grid? I'm not satisfied that these limits are necessary. The fact that you are buying power for X number of cents per kilowatt, in some cases 9 cents, 10 cents, in some cases 11 cents and going a lot higher, and you wait – you wait – until we get the full effect of the flow-through pricing. Who knows what the price is going to be? [interjection] The hon. minister of agriculture is talking about that, but the full effects of flow-through pricing are going to occur for some consumers starting as soon as July 2006, and it's going to be hold on to your hat then, Mr. Speaker.

Anyway, specific to this amendment to Motion 510, if we adopt this amendment and get rid of this idea of having the same rate as the purchase price, we are once again allowing the big generators complete dominance, complete control. I don't know how this would work when we have this power-by-the-hour set-up that this government initiated with electricity deregulation. How would this work? Who would determine the price? Certainly, if the market is going to determine the price for one source of electricity, why is it not doing the same thing at the Power Pool. When you have the highest cost electricity generation setting the price for all the electricity that is generated, this amendment simply doesn't make any sense.

I think we're taking a good idea here from the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, and we are ruining it. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Rev. Abbott: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the hon. members for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills and Highwood for bringing forward the motion and the amendment. I believe that the amendments proposed for Motion 510 tighten up the wording and make it even more appropriate for the purpose of a motion other than a government motion. By changing the wording to reflect small producers, or microelectricity generators, the motion speaks more to the process of net metering as the practice of net metering is a utility resource usage and payment scheme in which a customer who generates their own power is compensated monetarily. It is apparent that it pertains to consumers, not to large generators, and the wording change provides that necessary clarification.

Mr. Speaker, net metering originated with electric companies as a way to encourage consumers to invest in renewable energy sources such as solar or wind power. In a net metering program the electric company allows a customer's meter to actually run backwards if the electricity the customer generates is more than they are consuming. At the end of the billing period the customer only pays for their net consumption, the amount of resources consumed minus the amount of resources generated. Again, it is clear that the practice of net metering is based on small consumer production and even small business production but clearly does not pertain to large producers, which currently provide Albertans with electricity. I believe this change is necessary and appropriate.

The removal of the phrase "at the same rate as the purchase price" is just as necessary and appropriate. The purpose of a private member's motion is to bring light to possible policy initiatives that members believe would be beneficial to government. However, I believe that by alluding to specifics of that policy within the motion wording, the motion may be overstepping its boundaries, and debate may therefore be concentrated on the specifics of the policy rather than the proposed idea brought forth, as we are seeing currently. Removing any suggestion toward specifics of a net metering policy other than saying that the government should take a close look at net metering is essential to a productive and supportive debate this evening. Therefore, I believe that the removal of the phrase "at the same rate as the purchase price" is also necessary and appropriate, and I support that amendment as well.

While we are discussing the necessity and appropriateness of all things net metering, I believe it is a good time to bring attention to work presently taking place in other jurisdictions. Mr. Speaker, ultimately I would prefer a made-in-Alberta approach because that will be the best approach to net metering and believe that that is what we will get. However, I also think it's important to look at what other jurisdictions are doing and see if their policy may complement our work.

For instance, in October the Ontario government passed a regulation that permits net metering, which allows homes, farms, and businesses to generate their own power from renewable sources such as wind and solar power and send any excess electricity back to the grid for credit. According to the Ontario government this regulation will make it more attractive for small generators such as farmers to produce green power by allowing them to receive credit for the excess electricity they produce. The government believes it's time to reward those who want to increase the supply of clean green energy for the province.

With net metering customers use their own renewable generation to offset their consumption over a billing period. When customers generate electricity in excess of their demand, they can send the surplus back to the grid for credit on their next bill. At the end of the billing period the customer gets a credit for the excess power that was put into the grid, and the customer will pay only for the net amount of power consumed.

Mr. Speaker, the Ontario government believes that this expanded approach to net metering could provide farmers with the opportunity to substantially cut their power bills while providing Ontario with another valuable sustainable green product. Until now in Ontario net metering had been available only at the discretion of the local energy distribution companies and usually only up to 50 kilowatts. The new regulation eliminates this inconsistency and requires that the distributors permit net metering for all eligible projects that produce up to 500 kilowatts. Projects that produce electricity from clean sources such as water, wind, solar power, and farm biomass are all eligible.

Mr. Speaker, Ontario is the first jurisdiction in Canada to implement net metering on this scale. California has used net metering for years to promote the use of solar and wind power. It is time to bring net metering to Alberta and allow consumers the opportunity to become microelectricity generators. I believe the limits could be applied by regulation, and they could vary by jurisdiction. Again, we need a made-in-Alberta approach. Certainly, a review should help us establish the amount of electricity that you would want to generate.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, the proposed amendment is both appropriate and necessary to ensure a productive debate on the idea of bringing net metering to Albertans as a general concept. As I feel that this is an important issue that needs to have as much debate time as possible, I think it's necessary that we spend our time debating the main motion rather than these amendments. For this reason I would like to call for the question on the amendment.

Thank you.

8:40

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, Motion 510 as presented I didn't really have a lot of issues with, and I thought it was very progressive. We have opportunities across this province, whether they be large or small, to help strengthen our grid and to bring new players into the market.

When I look at Motion 510, part (a) may be limiting, and it may limit some farm operations. I'm concerned about some of the people that might feel left out of this discussion if we want to just talk about the microelectricity generators. I have absolutely no problem supporting part (b), striking out "the same rate as the purchase price." Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I think this should be separated into two parts, and we could vote on (a), and we could vote on (b). I think that might be a good way to make this thing move on.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the Minister for Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am also very encouraged by this motion. I would support the recent suggestion by the member across that we separate the two suggested amendments. It's not clear to me where microelectricity stops and starts. If we're going to restrict to one particular type of generator, it's not clear who would define this and how and why you'd restrict people from this. It's an important innovation, the amendment in itself, and I think this would worsen the motion.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess that I'm going to echo some of the more recent comments on the amendment to Motion 510. We are on the cusp of bearing the fruit of our deregulation exercise. We are creating energy from a variety of different sources all over the province. Certainly, in agriculture creating value on the farm has a direct relationship to creating energy on the farm or regionally on farms. I feel that by substituting "all sizes" with "microelectricity generators" it may limit us in terms of how big a regional agricultural energy biofuel facility might be that creates electricity: certainly, waste energy, as the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne has mentioned.

I, too, believe that this amendment (a) I cannot agree to, but (b) I would actually support, Mr. Speaker. It would be wonderful if we could separate the two of them.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think this actually speaks to how the grid actually operates. In other words, if you are a small microproducer, you can get onto that grid, and you can sort of use that grid to transmit a small amount of electricity without actually impacting how the grid is operating whereas if you are a large producer, then there is a need for you to be a part of what is called the balancing pool, which is for the large producers and which is part of what is already available to anybody who wants to sell into the grid right now. Generally it just has to do with the technicalities of how the grid operates that it is important that we look in terms of micro versus macro. We've already looked after the macro side, and this is how we would look after the micro side.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I've been advised that because of the desire to vote separately on the two parts, we will entertain that. So we will first vote on the amendment (a) portion, and then we'll vote on the (b) portion.

[Motion on (a) lost]

[Motion on (b) carried]

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else on the motion itself?

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, a point of clarification, please, in regard to the Speaker's ruling.

The Acting Speaker: Yes, go ahead.

Point of Order
Clarification

Mr. MacDonald: Could you clarify for this member and all other members the procedure for the splitting of that amendment on a motion into two votes?

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Very well. Hon. member, the chair has been advised that there is precedence; we have done this in the past. It is possible for us to divide the amendments into different portions. Is that okay?

Mr. MacDonald: For now, thank you.

Debate Continued

The Acting Speaker: On the motion itself, the hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Melchin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to add a few comments to the discussion. I do compliment the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills for bringing forward this motion. Certainly he has been working on this for some time.

I concur that this is the right approach as to how we ought to consider the development of our electricity industry. I certainly do support that we would look at allowing all people to bring electricity in whatever form and whatever innovative way onto the grid. It would be beneficial that we constantly look at how to best use, how to best conserve, and how to best incent people into accomplishing just that.

The hon. member did refer to our department conducting a comprehensive review of all the policies that may affect microgeneration, including net metering. On October 4 a stakeholder discussion paper was released, and consultation on the topic covered in this paper is ongoing. We do expect to gather information from that consultation and over the next number of months bring that back for further discussion.

There are very technical aspects of this that have to be considered, so I'm pleased to see that even with things like striking out "at the same rate as the purchase price," we allow some of that detail to be fleshed out when we work through the mechanics of how it would best be accomplished.

In principle we're very supportive of the motion.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to be back on the original motion. I think we're quite clever in looking at some of those amendments but not all of them.

This net metering concept – and I know that this is just a motion – does encourage the development of policy, and I know that there are some plans in the works to expand the capacity for us to net meter and, certainly, to look at different sources of energy to meet the needs of Albertans. So this is an important step as part of a basket of ways by which we can approach our energy challenges in the future. It just makes natural sense that we should encourage people to produce energy at the source where it's being used as much as possible within the constraints of environmental reasonableness and also, you know, in regard to other laws and statutes and best practices towards your neighbours as well.

Certainly there is a great interest in generating electricity, as I said, from either solar or wind power or making use of cogeneration capacity from other industries that are producing energy. This is just a great way to encourage those individuals and companies, to say that this provincial government is interested in assisting them in any way possible. I'm glad that we took out the larger producers from this motion. Certainly, there has to be regulation in regard to who might be considered to be a producer to do net metering. Certainly, TransAlta might, you know, not be included in that scenario or the people who are traditionally producing electricity because they are the ones who are running the grid in the first place.

A couple of questions or items that I wanted to just put forward here. One is the question of the cost of the meters themselves. Net meter systems are more expensive, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, in British Columbia, probably here in Alberta as well, I think a standard residential meter is running maybe $40 or $45, while a net meter, bidirectional meter, is running more like $250. So B.C. Hydro I know has picked up the cost of this, while the individual or the company has to pay for the application and installation. I think, you know, that we can look for small ways like this to help encourage people to sign onto such a program as this in the future and make it more affordable.

As I said before, in other jurisdictions – Ontario, Nova Scotia, and British Columbia – there is a problem with the number of people who are signing onto these programs. You must have a sustained way by which to encourage and give people the knowledge that they will be part of a program that is here to stay. I know that in Ontario the enthusiasm for net metering was severely curtailed when the market was deregulated, and fewer than 10 people signed up for the program. By contrast, in Washington state a very highly publicized system called Whatcom 1000 solar rooftop project – I love that name – had more than 2,000 people sign up within the first couple of years. California, the state that has the most success and encourages net metering the most, has more than 5,000 net metering installations across the state. But, you know, let's keep everything in perspective. That's producing less than one-half of 1 per cent of the state's peak electrical requirements.

So, as I said before, Mr. Speaker, this is part of a basket of solutions that we must put out there to change the way by which we produce and consume electricity and all forms of power in this province. We simply cannot continue to be so reliant on one single production system. Particularly, coal burning generation is not only limiting us in the way by which we produce electricity, but it also is a very polluting way of producing electricity. I know that it's necessary because of the history of the system that we have built up here, but let's try to break that pattern to some extent. This net metering proposal is probably a step in the right direction.

So, Mr. Speaker, certainly, representing the NDP caucus, I would be in support of this motion, and I look forward to seeing great things in the future in regard to other means by which we use our imagination and sense of ingenuity to produce electricity here in Alberta.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again I rise enthusiastically supporting the motion on net metering of electricity. This is a long overdue motion, and I hope that we won't wait as long for the bill to follow, that this will help to stimulate significantly the important distributed generation of electricity, decentralization, and renewable clean energy, which Canadians have been waiting so long for. This will promote local innovation, clean renewable energy, and conservation initiatives. This is clearly a win-win-win for the environment, for health, and for the economy, including the climate change challenges that we now face.

I think that the challenge for us as government is to move quickly forward on this and to recognize that two fundamental principles need to operate in the formation of a bill: one, in which the incentives for clean, renewable energy are clearly apparent and, secondly, where we stop incenting the fossil fuel industry, which hasn't been able to produce the same level of win-win-win for health, the environment, and the economy.

The fossil fuel industry has made tremendous contributions to Alberta, and it's time now to begin phasing away from that source of energy. I think that for many Albertans the next steps, where there are incentives for clean renewables and stopping the incentives for the nonrenewable fossil fuel industry, can't come too soon.

So I very much support this initiative and hope to move forward towards a bill. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Anybody else on the motion? The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Okay. Could I have a question? I don't know whether I can speak past 9 o'clock.

The Acting Speaker: No, you cannot.

Ms DeLong: If I stop before 9 o'clock, will there be a vote?

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, what will happen is that at 9 o'clock the Speaker will rise and interrupt you, and then the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills will have five minutes to close debate. So you have a few minutes if you'd like to speak to it.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to have the opportunity to speak to this motion as I believe that net metering is a good opportunity to encourage the use of green power, something that will undoubtedly be important to us as a province and as a country.

The technology that allows Albertans to take part in an electricity generation system is here, and it is affordable. I know this, Mr. Speaker, because I have had the opportunity to view net metering at work. I visited a business in my constituency around four years ago. At that time the equipment was installed, and the company was both consuming and producing electricity. Not only was the company able to produce electricity, but they were able to do so safely and easily.

To expand, Mr. Speaker, the argument will be made by the federal government that resident meters won't run backwards as they are not certified to do so. Well, they're wrong. Not only do they run backwards; they do so seamlessly and accurately. I have seen them myself.

Others may argue that having consumers send electricity back to the grid would put electrical repairmen or current electrical infrastructure at risk. This assumption is false as well. I know this for two reasons, Mr. Speaker. The first is because I know of at least one location in Alberta that has successfully been net metering for four years safely. The second reason is that there are numerous jurisdictions across Europe and North America that actively participate in net metering with no increased danger placed on employees of the electrical grid or of infrastructure.

Net metering is not a new concept. I feel that it's important to stress that there are several cases where it's already working well in jurisdictions that have chosen to put it in place. California is one example where net metering legislation has been passed and where it is working to the benefit of Californians. In this state any residential or small commercial electricity consumer who generates some of their own electricity with solar panels, wind turbines, fuel cells, biomass, or a hybrid system of these and whose system capacity is no greater than one megawatt is eligible for net metering.

Net metering customers can carry excess electricity generated for up to 12 months. At the end of the 12 months the excess generation is granted into the utility. Customers can however sell excess electricity generated back to the system. This means that when a customer consumes power . . .

The Acting Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, but under Standing Order 8(4), which provides for up to five minutes for the sponsor of a motion other than a government motion to close debate, I would invite the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills to close debate on Motion 510.

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all those enthusiastic colleagues who stood up in support of this motion. I've often said that when you think you're ahead, perhaps you should be quiet and sit down, but it's never been my style.

There have been a couple of questions that were asked, and I think they were answered. Edmonton-Calder was wondering why we'd exclude large-scale producers, and I guess that was subsequently answered by the passing of the amended motion. I did make a comment earlier that I think large-scale producers have adequately been addressed in the current policies of the government, but it seems that with the amendment, it will be also included in this motion.

Edmonton-Gold Bar asked about the cost of these different microgenerating systems. I don't have specific costs for each one because they change and vary by type and size, whether it's biomass, whether it's solar, whether it's wind generation, and how much electricity you actually want to generate.

You also asked about the limits that could be allowed to go on the grid. Again, that varies in various jurisdictions across North America from 50 kilowatts up to California, that allows for a thousand kilowatt hours of electricity. I really feel that the review that's being undertaken by the Department of Energy will provide us with information to more adequately address what would be a good fit for Alberta at that time, so I specifically didn't put a limit on in this particular motion.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, again thanks to all that participated in the debate, and I would ask that you all support this motion.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, before I call the question, since the amendment that was before us had two parts to it – the first part was rejected; the second part was accepted – the motion as we will vote on it will read as follows:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to adopt net metering of electricity for producers of all sizes, thereby allowing them the opportunity to sell any excess electricity they produce back to the grid.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 510 as amended carried]

Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 49
Police Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Cernaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 49, the Police Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

The main purpose of the proposed legislation is to streamline and enhance the Law Enforcement Review Board's effectiveness in how complaints are handled by police and how the police disciplinary process works. Specifically, it's proposed that the chair of the LERB be given the authority to appoint one board member to deal with preliminary or procedural matters. The amendment also gives the board the authority to establish subpanels with the same powers of the full board which would sit simultaneously in different regions of the province.

An amendment of this bill that will directly benefit Albertans concerns the change to the rules of evidence. Currently when Albertans complain to the LERB, they must follow the rules of evidence used in judicial proceedings. These rules are too stringent and unnecessary. The amendment would see the board use the principles of natural justice, which follow an approach based on common sense. This change will help Albertans understand the process without having to obtain legal counsel.

The proposed amendments also clarify the role and powers of the board to assess costs and pay expenses.

Mr. Speaker, the Police Amendment Act also covers the minister's responsibility for policing standards. This amendment is a minor wording change to clarify that standards for policing include police commissions and committees, not just police services.

I encourage all members to support these amendments. With that, Mr. Speaker, I'll now call the question. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to respond to that brief introduction by the hon. Solicitor General on Bill 49.

Of course, we need standards for policing, and the act begins by amending the Police Act to mention not just policing in general but police services, police commissions, and policing committees. In our open, democratic societies the capacity to arrest, detain, search, and otherwise restrict an individual's freedom represents a formidable expression of power. The police are authorized to intervene but, of course, always within the constraints of the rule of law and in accordance with standards and protocols. This emphasis on standards is extremely important.

For example, on the recent tragic death of a police officer which involved the police deciding to ram the truck of a mentally disturbed man who was backing up in his driveway, I'm not going to judge the rightness or wrongness of the action taken but just point out that there are certain standards and protocols that the police are always involved with. In this particular case the subsequent internal inquiry of the police led to many recommendations which will lead to changes in standards and protocols.

Standards are necessary to guide the actions of police and also to hold the police accountable to society. It is important that such standards be uniform because in the province of Alberta we have different police forces: municipal police forces in Calgary and Edmonton and, I believe, in Lacombe and Taber but also the RCMP in rural areas. So in order to attain and maintain uniform standards throughout the province, that is where the Solicitor General comes in. It is the province which under the Canadian Constitution is responsible for the administration of justice, which includes providing policing services.

This is a good amendment to the Police Act to emphasize standards. They especially mention the police commissions as well as police services. Having standards for the police commissions obviously is important, especially given recent problems with the police commission in this city, so it's of the utmost importance that we have proper training of people that belong to police commissions.

It's also important to distinguish political influence from the carrying out of the responsibilities of police commissions. It's important that police commissions be free from undue political influence, whether that comes from the municipal government or from provincial government, that they be able to freely carry out their responsibilities with respect to the police force.

Given that importance of their independence, I just want to say that I think it's important that we do not proceed in the direction of having a provincial representative on police commissions and committees, as I think the Solicitor General suggested. Perhaps he's had second thoughts and withdrew that suggestion. To have a representative of the provincial government on the police commission I think would be in the direction of too much political influence.

I'm not going to say anymore about this aspect of this act. I think that it's proper and something that I would support.

Now, as for the Law Enforcement Review Board, that's an elaborate process when a citizen objects, has a complaint about police, or sometimes police have objections and complaints also.

I'll just take a concrete example. If a citizen is intoxicated and finds himself during arrest lying on the ground handcuffed and while he is being restrained, the police officer tases him a couple of times, then that person may have reason to complain. There is a process. The person can complain about what has happened to him to the police chief, and there is an internal police investigation with a report to the aggrieved citizen, but if the citizen is not satisfied with this report, then he can appeal to the Law Enforcement Review Board. He has 30 days after he gets the report from the police to give written notice that he wants to appeal to the Law Enforcement Review Board, and he has to state his reasons why he is dissatisfied with the police report.

Then the citizen appears before the board and gives evidence, and he is entitled to be represented by a lawyer or have a lawyer or someone else go with him. The police service can also give evidence. As the Police Act says, all testimony offered at hearings is given under oath, is subject to cross examination, and is electronically recorded.

In the carrying out of this process the amendment is suggesting a change. The act up until now required that "the rules of evidence applicable to judicial proceedings apply." I mean, essentially it's creating another court, so I can understand what the Solicitor General is saying, that it may speed up the process if they don't have to follow the rules of evidence but can just follow the principles of natural justice. The principles of natural justice simply require that a person has the right to be heard and that a person has the right to be judged by someone who is unbiased. There are all kinds of procedures involved in terms of natural justice: that the person who is bringing the complaint and the person who is accused should be present at the same time. In other words, justice should be done and be seen to be done.

I have no problems with that, but at the same time I'm a bit concerned that the rules of evidence are there to safeguard certain problems. But I don't see that there's a difficulty here. Other boards have the same statement. For example, the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board Act says that the AEUB "is not bound in the conduct of its hearings by the rules of law concerning evidence that are applicable to judicial proceedings." I think the Legal Profession Act has the same kind of statement, that the rules of law concerning evidence do not need to be followed. So I don't think there's any problem with this aspect too.

Now, just one other comment, and that is that towards the end of this amendment act is a reference to frivolous and vexatious matters that are brought before the board. There are some changes, amendments here to deal with such frivolous and vexatious matters that apply to the party involved but also to the counsel of the party. I find that a bit curious, and perhaps the Solicitor General might explain to us, maybe before the Committee of the Whole, what has prompted this change. Is it somehow the attack of criminal trial lawyers? Are they being a nuisance and bringing all kinds of issues before the Law Enforcement Review Board that are trivial and do not need to be dealt with? I'm not sure where this is coming from and why there is the need for this amendment.

Mr. Speaker, those are all my comments. I would be prepared to support this bill, but I would be open to hearing other people comment on it.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to rise and speak to Bill 49. My understanding is that much of this bill does seem fairly innocuous, and when we spoke to the original version of this in the spring, I did outline some of my concerns in regard to this bill.

There are still perhaps a couple of questions that I would like to ask the minister, just to explain more about these changes, particularly under section 5. In particular, why are these panels necessary? I would like to hear more elaboration on that.

Subsection (3) appears to give the chair direct decision-making over preliminary and procedural matters. This is a very important set of decisions to be made, in my view. It's more than just making sort of an innocuous change. You're setting up important parameters for an appeal, for an inquiry, or for a review. I would just like to know why those changes or the panels are necessary. As well, is it appropriate, then, to allow the chair to designate himself or herself as a panel of one to make those decisions in the first place? Again, it's just, perhaps, good practice to have other means by which those things are determined.

It's likely good that the board will have a broader capacity to receive evidence that it considers to be important as per section 6, which is amending section 20, and section 9, which I think goes back to section 47 of the original act. The broader capacity to receive evidence certainly seems like a reasonable change.

However, the same criticism can still be made of this bill as I had made in the spring sitting. You know, there seems to be some tinkering about the edges, but the fundamental concerns about policing in this province seem to remain, and I don't see that these changes through Bill 36 are going to address that as directly as I would like to see.

Certainly, I'm not disparaging in any way the hard-working women and men who are in our law enforcement business here in Alberta, but, you know, there are some very real questions being raised at this juncture, particularly in Edmonton, about the police investigating themselves. We are all party to and I believe it's coming up to the one-year anniversary of perhaps the most famous case of this problem here in Edmonton, and we would like to put it behind us, certainly. This legislation I think does not do much to reassure Albertans that the Law Enforcement Review Board has both the capacity and the will to thoroughly police the police. What I believe and our party as well believes and many Albertans believe is that we need a provincial civilian commission to oversee police activities such as they have in Ontario. They've got the Ontario Civilian Commission on Police Services, and indeed it does have some lasting merit and value.

So, Mr. Speaker, I do put forward these concerns although I wouldn't preclude the possibility of supporting this bill with perhaps some changes. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in. Any questions or comments for the hon. member?

Does anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

Hon. Solicitor General, this is your opportunity to now close debate and call the question.

Mr. Cernaiko: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I knew the opportunity was going to come.

Actually, I'll be very brief before I close debate on second reading. I did want to just respond to the hon. members' concerns from across the floor. Really, when this legislation was drafted – and, again, additional consultation occurred throughout the summer and the fall – we wanted to ensure that the process was fair to members of the public when they were going before a quasi-judicial board. To ensure that that would take place, we wanted to ensure that the legislation was easy for them to understand but, as well, that the process was easy for them to understand, yet ensure that the rights of both a member of the public and the rights of a police officer remained intact.

The issue of providing that for them was one of the reasons behind it as well as the number of appeals that we have in place right now because the present process has created a backlog of a number of appeals. It's those issues that we wanted to deal with. Some of the backlog issues deal with the fact that our Law Enforcement Review Board contains members from across Alberta. Presently, in order to have a board get together, they have to have two or three members. Dealing with preliminary or procedural matters will allow the opportunity for one board member or chair to look at the procedural issue and possibly set dates for the future versus gathering three members together, which may be difficult to do at times. One member could do that, set the dates up for the future.

The other comment I wanted to make, Mr. Speaker, with regard to that was the fact that in section 20 we're striking out "that a party" and substituting "that a party or counsel to a party" could be in fact awarded costs. This really is to ensure that the lawyers for either the city representing the officer or the union representing the officer or a lawyer representing a member of the public is there and doing their due diligence in representing that member and due diligence in the fact that this is a Law Enforcement Review Board hearing – it's a disciplinary hearing, not a court case – ensuring that the process moves along smoothly and in a timely, consistent manner.

So that's why these changes have come in. They will be there to provide less intimidation for a member of the public but, as well, expedite the whole process of the appeals that go before them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to call the question on Bill 49.

[Motion carried; Bill 49 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, before I recognize the next speaker, may we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise tonight and introduce to you and through you to all members to this House Ms Rosanna Saccomani, who is the counsel for the Rewega family. Of course, the Rewega family are constituents of mine and were instrumental forces behind the public legislation and, of course, Bill Pr. 4. Many members in this House have their constituents attend on occasion to watch them in the House. Apparently, mine send their lawyers, and I don't know what to make of that. I would ask Ms Saccomani to rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

Bill 45
Maternal Tort Liability Act

[Adjourned debate November 16: Mr. Flaherty]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for St. Albert, did you want to finish your time?

Mr. Flaherty: To the tort bill here, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker: You were speaking the last time, and there is still some time left for you if you need to speak to it.

Mr. Flaherty: Well, there's one matter I'd like to speak to if I could. Basically I support the bill, but I struggle with a bill that deflects the issue of the two insurance companies. That bothers me terribly. It also begs the question: how much are we talking about in this particular bill? I was looking for it today. I think it's around $250,000.

In light of what has happened today with the $20 million that the Premier has announced for across Canada, I think it's important, maybe, that we relook at this bill in light that the government of the day should demonstrate a social conscience and provide a special fund for incidents of this nature. I was thinking – and I don't know much about this, Mr. Speaker, but maybe someone could clarify – there could be amendments to the risk management fund to take into consideration in this particular portion the government providing funds of their own for this matter.

The other thing then. I would suggest that maybe there could be amendments made that there be a special fund set up for incidents of this type for people that have this difficulty.

So with that, I support the legislation. I think it's a good move, but I struggle with the particular aspect of it going to insurance, and I would hope that the government would consider looking at an alternative for this particular matter.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions? Comments?

There being none, the Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to start by thanking the interest of the hon. members in this legislation. While it is short, only being two pages in length, it has an interesting history, and it certainly is unique in Canada from a public policy perspective. I appreciate the interest and attention that they've been paying to it.

There have been two private bills with respect to Brooklynn Rewega, one last year, in 2004, which ultimately did not get considered because there was no fall session as a result of the election. Then there is Bill Pr. 4, which was brought into the Private Bills Committee earlier this year and, I believe, has received first reading and is under consideration by the committee or has been under consideration by the committee.

As Justice minister and Attorney General I said earlier this year that I thought it was appropriate that the government consider the policy issue that is raised in that private bill. As a general proposition, Mr. Speaker, private bills are not to affect public policy in a material way, and the reality is that Bill Pr. 4 would, without consideration by the government, affect public policy in a material way.

Essentially, the situation in Canada as we speak, Mr. Speaker, is that there is a maternal tort immunity. Specifically, there is immunity for a mother "at common law from actions in tort by her child for injuries suffered by the child on or after birth as a result of the mother's actions prior to the child's birth." Bill Pr. 4 purports to create an exception to that particular rule, and that is what is addressed in Bill 45. The exception that is created in Bill 45 reflects what is raised in the private bill.

So it is being proposed that a mother may be liable to her child for injuries suffered by her child on or after birth that were caused by the mother's use or operation of an automobile during her pregnancy if, at the time of that use or operation, the mother was insured under a contract of automobile insurance evidenced by a motor vehicle liability policy.

That is the essence of Bill 45.

Then there is a limitation in the bill so that the mother's liability is limited to the amount of the insurance monies payable under contracts of automobile insurance indemnifying the mother.

9:30

The importance of what we have done here, Mr. Speaker, is this. There was a public policy issue addressed in the private bill. That was, in my view, not an appropriate place to deal with the matter. Rather, it was important for the government to consider whether or not the principle should be reflected as government policy, that is reflected in Bill 45, so that with the support of government caucus and, hopefully, members opposite there will be an exception in the province of Alberta with respect to maternal tort liability, as specifically outlined in the bill. It is very express to a very unique situation. It is a situation that was dealt with by the Supreme Court of Canada in a case called Dobson in 1999. I can tell the hon. members that this exception that we are talking about in legislation here is the same exception that has been put into place in the U.K., has been in place for some time and has been operating very well there without incident.

What we are doing here essentially, Mr. Speaker, is this. We are providing an opportunity for an action to be commenced on behalf of Brooklynn Rewega against her mother for alleged injuries arising out of a motor vehicle accident that occurred while Mrs. Rewega was pregnant. If, in fact, this bill becomes law and if, in fact, the private bill comes forward and is passed, that opportunity will occur. But the fact is that if the unfortunate situation of Brooklynn Rewega had occurred as a result of someone else driving, anyone else driving, Brooklynn Rewega would have a cause of action that could be advanced on her behalf, and that claim would allow her to either prove or not prove her case, as the case may be. What we are doing through this legislation is ultimately establishing the principle that a child in that situation will be like all other children in that situation in being able to advance a case against the person who caused the injury. So all we're doing, really, is providing that opportunity. We are limiting it to the amount of insurance that's available because that was a specific comment and direction by the Supreme Court.

Let me tell you this about motor vehicle accidents, and I have some experience with respect to this because when I was practising law, I did a fair amount of it. Firstly, as a matter of policy, insurance is one of the best things that society has created. What it does is it allows for people to put into a pool and ultimately spread the risk among all of us. So insurance is a social good.

Secondly, in our province and I believe probably in all provinces in Canada automobile insurance is mandatory if you are going to be the owner and operator of a motor vehicle. So we know that if people are obeying the law, there is automobile insurance associated with the use and operation of the automobile.

Thirdly, we have a well-defined duty of care and a well-defined standard of care with respect to the use and operation of automobiles. There are, unfortunately, too many motor vehicle accidents. We have a long history of litigation with respect to automobiles, and establishing the duty of care and the standard of care is a commonplace occurrence in our society. It is not something that is one-off. It is not something that is unique. It is common. So we are familiar with this.

The situation that we are dealing with is a familiar situation where the law is, generally speaking, well known. We can argue about the facts of a particular case, but the law itself is relatively well known. We know that as a general proposition people will have insurance because people are required to have insurance. What we have is a minimum amount of insurance that people must carry, and people may carry more than that.

Now, when an action is commenced against somebody, yes, the action is going to be commenced for the full amount of the claim, and it can be more than the amount of the insurance that is available. So the comments that people have made with respect to an arbitrary cap based on the amount of insurance appearing at first blush unfair have a point. But in practice I may say this: people who have assets typically have automobile coverage that protects their assets. If I actually have something, I buy more than the minimum amount of insurance. In fact, I might even get excess insurance, and you can get excess insurance, and many people have that.

My experience, once again having done a fair amount of this over the years, is that generally speaking claims are settled within the amount of insurance that is available, and if they are not settled within the amount of insurance available, more often than not the claim is settled for the maximum amount of insurance and little or no more because typically the defendant is prepared to take that and not advance a claim against the individual for an amount that would come out of the individual's pocket. But there is that possibility.

In this particular situation, one, it is a comment and direction, if you will, from the Supreme Court that has provided for that cap on the amount of the claim because the Supreme Court said that it is not appropriate that a mother in these circumstances be personally exposed, and I think that that is a reasonable position to take.

Essentially what we are doing is filling a gap which currently exists in the ability of a child in this situation to advance a claim for insurance. There is absolutely no intention to make this as a substitute for whatever public programs are currently available. The fact of the matter is that there are going to be more children like Brooklynn Rewega that can advance claims today, because I imagine statistically there are more situations where that type of claim has arisen as a result of someone other than the pregnant mother driving. These situations occur today, hopefully not too often, but social programs continue to be available. The health care system continues to be available. So this is in no fashion a substitute for social programs which currently exist.

I found the comments of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder to be quite ingenuous to be concerned on behalf of the insurance industry with respect to this particular claim and then suggest that a solution would be no-fault insurance. I think he listened to the insurance industry – they're maybe concerned – but didn't bother running the solution past them. But I may be wrong. Perhaps they've changed their mind as a result of this legislation.

I noticed that the hon. member in his comments said that lawyers would have a field day and would be issuing lots of lawsuits. Well, the fact of the matter is that, as I indicated, lawsuits like this do occur already. The legal issues surrounding this kind of lawsuit are not new. They exist today. All we are doing by this legislation is allowing for a party who is born after the accident to sue the mother where the mother is the one who may well have been responsible for the accident and who may well have caused the injuries. Those are points yet to be proven in a lawsuit. It's not a fait accompli. It is simply giving the opportunity to advance the claim.

I don't think that there's anything novel about it other than the fact that we are giving the cause of action in that very situation. This will not be a field day for litigation lawyers. This is a very narrow exception to the rule, and there will not be a flood of lawsuits because the legislation is very express as to what is covered.

I guess with respect to the issue of whether or not it's the kind of system that we want, where we limit the amount of the claim to the amount of coverage, depends on how you see it. Personally, I would rather give an opportunity to a Brooklynn Rewega to have an opportunity to sue and recover damages if the claim can be established for the amount of the insurance available than not to have a claim at all. So you ask yourself: which is the better situation or which is the worst situation? And I say in fairness, on balance: you have to go with allowing the opportunity for a Brooklynn Rewega to commence a claim and if proven have a right to the amount of insurance that is available. That is better than saying: no, you can't.

So there is judgment involved in this without doubt. There is judgment in what we do. Exercising judgment is what being responsible is all about. But I can tell the hon. members that this particular bill is narrowly crafted. Read the words. It specifically says that there is maternal tort liability immunity and then creates a very narrow exception, and we can discuss the words more expressly during Committee of the Whole. I can tell the hon. members that this is a bill that arose as a result of the private member matter being before us on two subsequent years and the need for this Assembly to establish public policy.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions or comments for the minister? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In regard to your statements I just want to clarify the matter. Tomorrow is a meeting of the committee. If this bill becomes law, is it retroactive to the Rewega matter, or is it something that we have to deal with tomorrow? I'm wondering if you could maybe clarify that for me.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Yes. Thank you. The public bill, Bill 45, has no retroactivity. The intention of this bill is to bring it forward for discussion in this House and ultimately, hopefully, passage of the bill so it becomes the law, goes forward in Alberta. That allows the Private Bills Committee and then, hopefully, subsequently this Assembly to review the private bill and say that we have established as a matter of public policy in Alberta that this kind of claim is appropriate, and therefore we can address this one-off situation which has retroactivity now at its heart, which really is the only issue that one has to deal with at that point in time. So we're establishing public policy in Bill 45 going forward, and the issue with respect to Rewega will be the retroactive nature of it.

The Acting Speaker: Any other questions or comments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a very interesting and challenging bill indeed. It strikes me that – and this may have been discussed before . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, are you rising on questions or comments, or did you want to speak?

Dr. Swann: I wanted to ask a question.

The Acting Speaker: Go ahead.

Dr. Swann: The question I have is whether or not the same capacity to insure oneself could extend beyond automobiles? I mean, are we now going to deal in the next session with a woman who decides to insure herself in case she does something that harms her child? I know that this is very specific to automobile injury, but why would we reject a woman who makes application for similar insurance coverage in relation to, say, some indiscretion that she followed during an early pregnancy?

Mr. Stevens: Let me start out by saying that there's absolutely no intention to go down that particular road. The bill was brought forward in response to the private bill, as I have indicated. There is no intention of changing this. Now, you say: well, you can have that debate. You're quite correct about having that. I would say this. First of all, the situation of motor vehicle accidents is commonplace. There is mandatory insurance. It is a very specific situation. Other insurance is optional. The circumstances surrounding other situations are less well known and less common, and candidly it probably is problematic to find, as you put it, insurance to cover indiscretions that someone might indulge in which might give rise to damage to a fetus and, hence, a child upon birth.

So if you take a look at the Supreme Court decision, they make a distinct point of saying that this is a unique type of situation; that is, the motor vehicle accident and the mandatory insurance. I can tell you that in the UK it's now been in place for many years, and they have maintained the very narrow exception without difficulty. That is the intention with this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Minister for Health and Wellness, are you rising on a question?

Ms Evans: A comment, really. I have never heard such a fine and eloquent dissertation about why we should support a bill, and I thank the hon. member for that. It was exceptional.

I would also ask, because he has presented such a positive view and I intend to support it, if there was anything that he saw as, perhaps, a precedent or a downside to this in the future of insurance and Albertans.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister, in less than 40 seconds.

Mr. Stevens: The situation already exists today for every situation but for the mother who was pregnant at the time of the accident. So to the extent that there is a history, it is out there to find. I don't know what it is. The insurance industry indicated that there may be some modest increase in premiums as a result of potential additional claims. Candidly, from where I sit, that is the only so-called downside. But, as I said, insurance is a social good. It spreads the risk and allows for recovery in appropriate circumstances.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great honour to rise and speak to Bill 45, Maternal Tort Liability Act. As the hon. minister mentioned, the purpose of this proposed bill is to provide compensation for a child born with injuries from a motor vehicle accident occurring prior to birth as a result of negligent driving of his or her mother. When and if the child is born with injuries, the cause of action can be commenced, and the claim for damages can be made. Liabilities would be limited to the extent of the insurance coverage within the narrow sphere of motor vehicle accidents. He just mentioned this. How limited insurance coverage is this? I don't know, but I would like to know. How narrow is this?

The bill has its origin from Bill Pr. 4. I'm a member of the Private Bills Committee, and we had a few meetings. We've discussed this case. This Rewega case is a very, very sensitive and touchy one. This arose from the vehicle accident that occurred when a mother of a child was in a single vehicle accident on December 31, 2000, near the town of High Level. Four months following the accident, a girl was born with cerebral palsy. The father and legal guardian of the girl then presented a petition to the government requesting a bill to be passed to allow her through her legal guardian the right to bring or maintain a civil action in the courts against her mother for compensation for the injuries that arose resulting from the accident.

Under the present federal law an unborn child is not a person and, therefore, not the subject of rights and duties. A pregnant woman and her unborn child are considered to be one entity. This has since been called the born alive rule. The fetus has no status; consequently, a pregnant woman cannot owe a duty of care to her fetus any more than she can owe a duty of care to herself. Now the government is trying to open up the debate on the legal standing of a fetus. How can an unborn child have standing to sue in one instance but not in another one?

It is logical to assume that this bill could easily be challenged under section 15, Equality Rights, of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Even with the specific exceptions to allow this type of duty of care to apply only to motor vehicle accidents, it is still subject to the provisions of the Charter, and the argument can then be made that placing this burden of care upon pregnant women that is not applied to women who are not pregnant or to men infringes upon the equality rights of women.

It is the responsibility of the government to care for the children who are born with disabilities. Is the government shifting responsibilities to the auto insurance industry? The legislation is not clear about who should be responsible for the damages. What about other children who are born with disabilities? Can they turn around and sue their mothers as well in order to get more funding for their own care? The government has a responsibility to ensure that all children born with congenital disabilities are cared for and that there is no undue hardship placed upon the families. These families should have access to services that will enable them to provide for the care of their children no matter what their degree of disability. If the government had an adequate system in place to support children and families who have to care for the children with disabilities, then there would be no need to sue insurance companies to have the funds available to care for their children. This government should be providing the funding for the care of children who are born with any congenital disability. They should not be relying on tort law and insurance companies to pay the bills.

I'm not supporting this bill because if the legislation is passed, the child will not be suing his or her mother personally but the mother's third party. The views of the general population who will be forced to pay higher premiums must be taken. Some people support this case saying that similar legislation exists in the UK and that similar legislation would also work in our province. They should provide sufficient evidence to prove that. The government fails to recognize that the issue is very complex, and even with clear and precise language the legislation may lead to many, many lawsuits. The government has neglected to pursue women's rights, which may open doors to other forms of litigation against women for lifestyle choices made during pregnancy such as drinking, smoking, or playing sports.

This bill has not taken into consideration the possibility of uninsured women or about some women who are not aware of their pregnancy when they are involved in the accident. Moreover, this legislation is not even clear about how they would monitor such accidents. What about the disabilities that are not visible; that is, ADD? Would children sue their mothers in the event that they discover they have a learning or mental disability?

This legislation is not fair for the general population as one type of negligence is to be open for litigation while others will not. The law should have equal status for all fetuses regardless of the action of the mother.

I think that this legislation is not about children suing their mothers. It is about who is responsible to pay the health care costs when a fetus is injured in its mother's womb. A woman who allows her child to sue her is clearly in desperate need of financial resources to care for her disabled child.

That is all I have to say. Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions or comments for the member.

Anybody else wish to participate in the debate?

The hon. Member for Peace River to close debate.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate this opportunity to rise and respond in part to the comments. There are quite a few, and we'll cover some of them in more detail later.

I need to comment immediately on the remarks of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, whose reading of the federal law that an unborn child is not a person is in my understanding correct. He's also correct to say that an unborn child has no right to sue, which is specifically why this legislation is crafted around if and when the child is born. This is a born live child with a handicap not an unborn child, Mr. Speaker.

I'm a little surprised as a member of the Private Bills Committee that the member doesn't appear to have read the Dobson case very thoroughly because it's crystal clear why it's restricted to car accidents and why it's limited to the amount of car insurance: specifically, to avoid infringement on the mother's rights, which is what this bill is all about.

Mr. Speaker, that member and a couple others have spoken about their concern of limiting the child's compensation to the amount of insurance and also spoke of their concern that there are other areas of negligence not addressed by this bill. These concerns were perhaps most forcefully, I suppose, addressed by the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster. The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster forcefully asserted that this wasn't fair, and I suppose at one level I'd have to agree with him that limiting the amount of compensation to the amount of insurance carried by the mother is in one sense unfair. The expenses for care for a handicapped child might well exceed the amount of insurance available, and the member even spoke of his concern that we are creating classes of citizens based upon how much insurance they carry.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not designed to address all the potential ill effects of how mothers behave during pregnancy. The Supreme Court has been crystal clear. The only shortcoming or loophole that can be addressed without infringing on the mother's rights are those relating to car accidents caused by the negligent driving of the mother. The room available for legislators relates only to car accidents, where the standard of care is clear, and the coverage is limited to the amount of insurance available to prevent infringement upon the mother's rights and to prevent damage to the mother/child relationship. Now, this is indeed a very narrow area of occurrence out of a very wide range of possibilities, and I suppose in that sense it's unfair. But the Supreme Court was clear. This is the only place that the Legislatures could venture.

Now, I would ask my hon. colleague the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster to perhaps view this from the other side, the side of the child. Children in this situation currently receive nothing. They are handicapped as a result of negligence yet cannot receive compensation purely because of who it was that acted negligently. Is that somehow more fair?

This area of law is delicate, Mr. Speaker – I agree with my hon. colleague – because there is a conflict between the woman's rights and the rights of the child. We have an opportunity, however narrow, to strengthen the rights of the born child without infringing upon the rights of the mother. I would suggest that it's prudent for us to do so.

I also believe it was my hon. colleague who referred to the idea that this is law based on emotion. I agree wholeheartedly that law based on emotion is likely bad law, ill considered and hastily crafted. Indeed, we sat on the Private Bills Committee, and we saw a severely handicapped child in an emotion-filled presentation, but that does not mean that this law is based on an emotional reaction. It is based on a very clear Supreme Court ruling, on the 29-year existence of a smoothly functioning law in the United Kingdom, and upon our ability to move to protect the rights of children without infringing upon the rights of the mother.

I believe we are focusing on the larger societal implications of this law, Mr. Speaker, not on the emotions generated when meeting one particular family. I believe that this well-considered, very carefully crafted bill does exactly what the Supreme Court invited us to do: strengthen the rights of the child without infringing upon the rights of the mother.

Mr. Speaker, just one additional comment. The Member for Edmonton-Calder spoke in tentative support for this bill but expressed his concern that the bill entailed an expansion of fetal rights. Again, same as the comment to the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, I would strongly suggest that this bill has no such effect. It contemplates no rights whatsoever save those of a born child.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, I'll call the question and close debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 45 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the hour I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; at 10:02 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 22, 2005

1:30 p.m.

Date: 05/11/22

[The Speaker in the chair]

head: Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

head: Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mrs. Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly a gentleman who is no stranger to many of us. He is Mr. Gord Button. He's the seventh Ombudsman of the province of Alberta. He is sitting up in the Speaker's gallery, and I'd ask that he please stand and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

head: Introduction of Guests

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly nine members of the Prairie Land regional school division board of trustees who are in Edmonton for meetings with the Alberta School Boards Association. Seated in the members' gallery are John Neill, chairman of the board; Linda Danielsen; Bill Lee; Bev Lee; Gloria Nelson; Elaine Horner; Duane Roy; Sheila Taylor; and Sharon Orum. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the very warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two residents of my constituency, Brent and Craig Korte. Craig is a grade 6 student from St. Marguerite school in Spruce Grove and is currently studying the government. He's very active in his school as a class representative on student council and is currently working on a leadership project in which he's chosen one of our former Premiers, Premier Peter Lougheed. Craig is also active in several sports in the community. He is accompanied today by his father, Brent, who works in government relations for Janssen-Ortho. Brent is also quite involved in sports in the Spruce Grove community as a coach of minor football and minor hockey. They are seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Resources and Employment.

Mr. Cardinal: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly six members of my department who are here today for a public service orientation tour. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I'd like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Lougheed: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville and the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members assembled a group of students from James Mowat school in Fort Saskatchewan. They're accompanied by Mrs. Maureen Kondro and Mr. Ted Fellows and also by parents and helpers Mrs. Jennifer Proctor, Mrs. Donna Bruce, Mr. Brian Pearce, Mr. George Spindler, and Mrs. Frances Mangold. They're in both galleries, and I would ask that they please stand and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two fantastic and tireless workers from the Alberta Liberal Party office. Justin Archer, who is seated in the public gallery, graduated from his studies in law and society from the University of Calgary last year. He's since relocated to Edmonton to work as an administrative co-ordinator at the party office. He's interested in the Alberta political landscape and is an advocate for the renewal of democracy and good government in Alberta, which is why he fits so well with us.

Our other guest is Mike McLaughlin, who works in the accounting department at the Alberta Liberal Party. Believe it or not, he is busy there. He's originally from Toronto. He spent many years in the banking industry and also a decade in television program distribution. He's a proud father of two daughters. One is a student adviser at Grant MacEwan student resource centre, and another just graduated from the public relations program at Grant MacEwan. Mike is thrilled to be working for a better Alberta.

I'd ask the two to rise and please receive the warm welcome of all MLAs.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Zwodzsky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure for me to rise and welcome 69 of Edmonton-Mill Creek's brightest and best young students. They are here from Velma Baker school, and today they are accompanied by their teachers, Mr. Brent Kapicki and Mrs. Kimberly Devereux, and some parent helpers, Dave Eriksson, Vicki Moore, Trina McCloy, Kendra Black, and Marla Phillips. May I ask all of them to rise and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In my former profession as a teacher, similar to yourself and many others of this Assembly, it is indeed my pleasure today to introduce through you to members of this Assembly two distinct representatives of Fort McMurray who capture our city slogan and spirit of We Have the Energy. They are the chair of the public school board, Jeff Thompson, and also his lieutenant of wisdom, Rhonda Reich. I would like to ask both of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly Mariette Sutton of Sherwood Park. Mariette has been a friend of my wife, Angie, since the '70s, when they met at Mount Royal College. Mariette was a very long-time downtown Edmonton businesswoman and is a recent cancer survivor. She's an energetic person and focused on continually helping, motivating, organizing, and encouraging people around her in an effort to make this world a better place. She's accompanied by my wife, Angie. I would ask both of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly some very special people. Our visitors are from Suncor Energy and are partners with the Alberta Conservation Association and this government in a newly established boreal habitat conservation initiative. Through this initiative privately owned land in our northern forests will be bought and donated to the province's publicly protected land base for conservation. Already more than 400 acres of shoreline around the Winagami Lake have been purchased and boreal habitat added to Alberta's network of parks and protected areas. In the members' gallery representing the private partner in the boreal habitat conservation initiative are David Byler, the executive vice-president of Suncor Energy, and staff members Pat O'Reilly, Gord Lambert, and Cathy Glover. If I could ask them to rise and I would ask this House to extend its usual warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased today to introduce to you and members of the Assembly Marty and Linda Rybiak. Marty received his bachelor's in engineering science at the University of Western Ontario. Linda also graduated from Western university with a master's in chemical engineering. Both Marty and Linda are the proud parents of two young boys, Samuel and Andrew. Marty volunteers in a number of organizations, including Habitat for Humanity, and coaches basketball. He and Linda are active members of the Southminster-Steinhauer United Church. Marty is also the NDP candidate in Edmonton-Leduc for the upcoming federal election. I'd now ask that Linda and Marty both rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a group of very enthusiastic, bright young scholars. They are grade 6 students from Garneau elementary school, a very well-known school and one of the oldest ones in my constituency. They're accompanied by their teachers, Ms Susan Kosanovich and Ms Tara Calver, and by parents Ms Karen Dyberg, Lauren Beaupré, Linda Tennesen, and Ms Bev Wilson. I believe they are sitting in one of the two galleries. Wherever they are, I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

head:

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Children in Poverty

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Across Alberta the so-called Alberta advantage is not for everyone. In recent conversations with homeless shelters in both Calgary and Edmonton we've been told that at times shelters must even find space for mothers with newborn babies. It's shocking to think that in this province children and even moms with newborn babies can end up in homeless shelters. My question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Can the minister explain how it is that in a province as wealthy as Alberta this government tolerates situations where little children and even moms with newborns end up squeezed into homeless shelters for adults?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased that this question has come forward, actually, to the Legislature because I have had the opportunity over the past week to two weeks to discuss with my staff the contingency funds that are in place for the homeless shelters, especially in Calgary. Having said that, you're aware that with homeless shelters what we look for are people who are at risk of being homeless, and we add funding to transitional housing.

Now, with the homeless shelter situation, in the Assembly over the past year we've brought forward budgets where we've increased the funding for that, Mr. Speaker, by 42 per cent, which is a very large increase. We provide over $20 million a year to homeless shelters throughout the province of Alberta. I think that 42 per cent is significant.

I also think that what we've discussed with transitional housing, what we've discussed in the Legislature with affordable housing for low- to moderate-income people, Mr. Speaker – it's important that the opposition recognizes that we are working toward this regard for people at risk.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, the shelters are bursting at the seams.

To the Minister of Children's Services: will the minister admit that this government is failing its responsibility to ensure that children, impoverished and struggling children, are properly supported when children and even babies end up in shelters for homeless adults?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that our ministry takes care of those who are vulnerable. For anybody who comes in seeking help in any of our authorities here, we do the best we can. We provide the services that we can under the ministry, and we'll continue to do that.

Dr. Taft: To the same minister: can the minister explain to the over 100,000 impoverished children in Alberta what the Alberta advantage is and where they can find it?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell this member that any child or family that needs help under our ministry is helped.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Nutrition Programs for Schools

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Poverty in the midst of plenty. Today as we speak here now, 1 in 5 Alberta children is living in poverty and is at risk of poor nutrition, yet when asked yesterday about hot lunch programs in schools, the Minister of Education shrugged off the issue and pointed people needing a meal to a website. This morning while the Minister of Education was having his breakfast, 3,000 children in Edmonton alone were going hungry, stuck on waiting lists for oversubscribed school lunch programs. To the Minister of Education: why won't this government commit now to a hot lunch program for all Alberta children at risk?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much. I think that as I was having a bit of breakfast, the hon. opposition leader was enjoying a breakfast as well, and I don't recall him having raised this then.

The short answer to this question, Mr. Speaker, is simply that we do see several school boards already who provide hot lunch programs or who provide breakfast programs, and they do it in a very nice way with the community agency partners in some cases and in other cases with parents who are showing up as volunteers to assist. I did indicate in my answers yesterday what it is that we were planning to do by way of looking at this issue, and I would just refer the hon. leader to please refer to yesterday's Hansard.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that there are 3,000 children on waiting lists for school hot lunch programs in this minister's city, is it this government's position that it should stand back and let Alberta children go hungry because their parents can't feed them?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I did indicate as part of the answer yesterday that if there are members in this House who know that there are families in need, we have support programs either through Children's Services or through Human Resources and Employment. For heaven's sake, please let those families know what those programs are, and if you won't, then direct them to us, and we will.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that there are 3,000 kids on waiting lists right now, what ideology is this minister standing on that justifies his openly accepting that thousands of impoverished children are going hungry in Alberta schools today?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a serious issue, I'm sure, and I don't appreciate the inflammation that is being given to it, the tone of it. We have locally elected school boards. There are some members of those school boards in our galleries today, and they do have flexibility to address these policies, and many of them do. I'm sure that once the Edmonton public school board or the Edmonton Catholic school board see these issues coming forward, they do their best to help out and address them or direct them to places where help is available, and that program seems to be working relatively well. If there are some improvements needed toward it, then surely there are ways of addressing those particular problems as well.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Employment of Children

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The United Nations convention on the rights of the child states: "Parties recognize the right of the child to rest and leisure, to engage in play and recreational activities appropriate to the age of the child." This government has lowered child employment restrictions to 12 years old for work in restaurants. It has asked in its recent review if this should be extended even further. We're not talking paper routes and farm chores here. My question is to the Minister of Human Resources and Employment. How far is the minister prepared to go in putting 12-year-old grade 6ers into the workforce?

Mr. Cardinal: Mr. Speaker, of course, part of the review of the minimum wage, for an example, which was increased recently, also dealt with youth employment. We made sure when the program was announced that the youth were well protected, giving the parents the opportunity to determine if it is safe for their children to work at certain places. It also gave the employer the opportunity to assess the situation as far as safety. What will have to happen is that both the parent and the employer have to sign a form, which is a checklist to show that the place is safe and that the parent has agreed that the young person should be working in an environment like that. The responsibility is up to the parent to determine that, and I think that's a good move.

1:50

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: does the minister expect 12-year-old grade 6ers to be contributing to the upkeep of the family household even if they are foster children?

Mr. Cardinal: That is, of course, not the plan, Mr. Speaker, to force children to work. There are lots of jobs out there. It's only fair to give the opportunity for any youth that wants to work, the opportunity for any employer that wants to hire youth, and the opportunity for the parent to decide – for the parent to decide – if the youth is in a position to work by going through this process that is really complicated to fill out and sign. They take the responsibility.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A supplementary to the same minister: will this minister tell us how many Albertans both in his department's surveys and letters, e-mails, and calls have complained about the initiatives to increase child labour in our province?

Mr. Cardinal: Mr. Speaker, I don't have that figure in my hands here right now, but I will provide it in writing to the member.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Securities Commission Investigation

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Securities Commission director of enforcement is the top cop policing the Alberta securities market. As such, his conduct needs to be beyond reproach, but he was caught red-handed by the Auditor General making a significant profit trading shares in a company that he was responsible for investigating. My question is to the Minister of Finance. Given that the ASC's top securities enforcer made a significant financial gain on a short-term, speculative investment in a company under ASC investigation, why does the minister refuse to acknowledge possible violation of the rules against insider trading and that this should be investigated?

Mrs. McClellan: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member infers that this was only noticed because the Auditor General caught it. In fact, the reason that the Auditor General caught it is because it was documented in the files. There was nothing hidden about that.

Mr. Speaker, on the same line of questioning yesterday I informed the hon. member that there will be a complete statement outlining the events, the chronological occurrence of those events. I did check before I came into the House today because I know how important this matter is, and I know that the hon. member wants the answer. I was informed that it wasn't ready today, but it is their hope that they will have it tomorrow. I made the commitment that when that statement that outlines all of the events surrounding this is available, I'd be happy to discuss it further.

Mr. Speaker, I have never suggested that this was not a breach of the conflict-of-interest policy of the Alberta Securities Commission.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, if the minister has never denied that it was a breach, why is she asking for chronology instead of taking action to ensure that either discipline occurs or, in fact, a criminal investigation into insider trading occurs?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, as I said, I think that if you have all of the events before you, you would be better able to question what should happen. There has been a full investigation on this matter by the Securities Commission. There is a sequence of events that occurred, and I again invite the hon. member to ask me further questions when he has the opportunity to see that in its fullness.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, maybe we're getting somewhere, but it remains to be seen.

What does the minister think will come about as a result of the chronology? If the chronology shows that, in fact, as she says, there were serious breaches of the internal policies of the ASC or a prima facie case of criminal activity, insider trading, then is she going to commit to this House that she will take prompt and decisive action to make sure that wrongdoers are brought to justice?

Mrs. McClellan: Mr. Speaker, as I've outlined over and over and over again, the Auditor General in his report clearly lays out this issue, three pages, in fact, on this. The Auditor General in my review of the report – now, he may have read something different, and I'd look forward to his sending me something over – has not suggested criminal activity.

I remind the hon. member and all members of this House that it was I who asked the Auditor General to perform this audit as speedily and efficiently as he possibly could, which in fact he did. What the Auditor General did do in his report is provide two recommendations on processes that would be put in place to ensure as much as possible that this could not happen again. The Securities Commission, prior to the Auditor General's report, had not only put stronger measures in place but have committed to have those measures suggested by the Auditor General reviewed and in place by January 1, 2006, which is about 30-some days from today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Avian Influenza

Ms Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian Food Inspection Agency recently announced positive test results for avian influenza in two separate cases: the first regarding the H strain found in wild ducks in Manitoba and Quebec and the second being a duck testing positive on a commercial farm in British Columbia. These announcements will certainly heighten awareness and concerns for avian influenza right across Canada. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. Could the minister please explain what kind of plans the province has in place to protect our poultry industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. A very good question. Alberta's poultry industry and all of our feather industry in the province have learned some valuable lessons from the experiences in B.C. of 2004. I would like to in this forum congratulate the poultry industry for a well-defined plan of action that they have in place.

We've taken a number of steps, and we have a number of protocols and plans in place to mitigate any type of outbreak that we might have in the province. We have a surveillance system ongoing right now on commercial poultry and backyard flocks, where we test dead birds that might be at a higher risk of having avian influenza, or AI. We also work with the veterinarians across the province, Mr. Speaker, under a surveillance network and an early warning system, if you will, to report anything that might have a zoonosis aspect to it or to detect animal diseases. As well, we are part of a new program, a national surveillance program, to detect the prevalence of avian influenza in Canada's wild waterfowl population. Our preparation and planning are ongoing and change as required.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Haley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental goes to the same minister. Given that test results on wild birds have been announced for Quebec, Manitoba, and British Columbia, when can we expect the announcement of results for Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned previously, we are participating with the Canadian Cooperative Wildlife Health Centre as part of a national surveillance program to determine that prevalence. As the hon. member mentioned, there have been some announcements of results in some of the other provinces. We have completed 580 tests of the 800 samples that we have. To date we have not identified H5 or H7 strains. We do expect that the work on the rest of the tests will be done either by the end of this week or very early next week.

It is important to note that the recent positive test results found in Quebec and British Columbia and Manitoba of the wild waterfowl weren't unexpected. There's no increased threat to public health. Various types of avian influenza have been found in healthy waterfowl for well over a hundred years, for as far back as we know.

As the federal and other provincial counterparts have mentioned already, the H5N1 strain that was found in two Manitoba wild ducks is not the same Asian strain that we hear so much about. It is what they would consider low pathogenetic, which means that these viruses would only cause a mild disease, if any, in the waterfowl.

Ms Haley: My last supplemental, Mr. Speaker, is for the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Since wild birds, especially waterfowl, seem to be the source of the virus, is there anything being done to make sure that waterfowl hunters are safe when they handle or consume this meat?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Coutts: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's really important to note that there are no new threats to waterfowl or to hunters as a result of the recent reports of the influenza virus in Canadian wild birds. These viruses typically are present in wild birds and have very little effect on the health of wild birds. So that's important to note. Alberta has good information on the viruses in wild birds, and we certainly are a key partner in the current national survey. To answer the question directly, to protect hunters, it is recommended that careful handling, cleanliness of course, and proper refrigeration as well as proper cooking precautions be taken in handling wild birds. That is definitely our recommendation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Aboriginal Issues

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first ministers' meeting on aboriginal issues begins in Kelowna on Thursday, and aboriginal peoples right across the country are looking forward to this event with great anticipation and hope for a better future. My question is for the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development. The federal government is prepared to spend billions of new dollars on aboriginal issues to help break the cycle of poverty. What is your ministry prepared to bring to this meeting?

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to thank you for that question. I really appreciate it. As you know, the Premier and I are going to be attending the meeting, the FMM, on the 24th and 25th of this month. That's actually Thursday and Friday. To be able to prepare for that, I have met with First Nations across this province and the Métis community and their organizations, and they have certainly provided us with some information that we could utilize as we're dealing with the issues as they come forward from the first ministers.

For your information, the First Nations and the Métis people of this province have indicated that no one speaks on their behalf but themselves. They do have a spokesperson, Grand Chief Sandford Big Plume, whom they've requested to be at the table so that he can also bring the message that the Premier and I will be bringing to the table.

It is very important for us to be able to look at what's coming down. As you know, the money that supposedly is coming down: we have no information as to what amount it will be; we have no information as to how the delivery process will be. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we are making every attempt to make sure that what the First Nations and the Métis people of this province want is going to be at the table.

Mr. Tougas: So the answer is nothing then. Thank you.

Why has not one cent of the government's unbudgeted surplus gone towards addressing the specific needs of Alberta's aboriginal people?

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, this is really a fantastic question. I'm going to ask all those ministries that have provided some guidance and some dollars that will be going towards the First Nations and the Métis people of this province. I'll just give you an example. First of all, we have had what we call traditional land-use studies. As a result, we have spent about $1.5 million for traditional land-use studies, which the First Nations of Alberta have been requesting so that they can map historically where they've been.

We've also looked at economic initiatives, Mr. Speaker. On the economic side we have put I think about another million and a half to see how we can identify where the First Nations can begin to be involved and how we can help them to ensure that business plans can be developed.

Mr. Speaker, on the tourism side we have also had an aboriginal tourism council established mainly to look at the tourism aspects of what's possible in this province with the help of the First Nations and the Métis community, not the Liberals but the Métis and the First Nations community. I'm going to ask some of my colleagues . . .

The Speaker: Well, may I ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark to proceed with his third question.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So it's nothing then. No new money. Nothing at all.

With the Alberta economy experiencing unprecedented resource-based prosperity, why is the aboriginal community still not enjoying the benefits of the so-called Alberta advantage?

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, first of all, we on this side of the government and that side certainly understand the needs of the aboriginal community, and that's the reason why we believe that working with the aboriginal community is probably the number one priority of this government. As a result, what we have done is work with that community to be able to identify, first of all, the capacity issue within the First Nations and, secondly, the economic possibilities with the First Nations so that they can take advantage of the Alberta advantage, as you have identified, and, thirdly, to make sure that government has the capacity to be able to work with the First Nations and the Métis community so that we can begin to see the economic possibilities that this province has to offer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Calgary Ring Road Southwest Portion

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The province and the Tsuu T'ina nation need to have a land transfer agreement in place in order to start building the desperately needed southwest portion of Calgary's ring road. A draft agreement was to be in place by November 1 of this year, but the deadline was not met. My question for the Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation: why was the deadline missed?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Through to the hon. member, the extension of the deadline should not be viewed as a setback in this particular negotiation. The Tsuu T'ina nation and my department, the chief and myself, are actually working very closely together to come to this particular agreement.

What happened, Mr. Speaker, is that we had an agreement where we each would pick an appraiser if we had to and then a third appraiser would come and rule on what the two appraisers said. What we did, which is actually quite unprecedented, is agree on the same appraiser. So even though we are seeing a little bit more delay on the initial side of the project, we are hoping, because of this particular feat that was accomplished, that we will see an expedition of the particular project in question, the ring road. It's actually very, very positive.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this is a bilateral deal between the province and the Tsuu T'ina nation and because of the enormous impact on the city of Calgary, have the mayor and council been active in these negotiations?

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Speaker, the mayor and council have not been active in these particular negotiations. These are negotiations purely between the province and the Tsuu T'ina. However, we have been keeping the mayor and council completely up to date on everything that is occurring. These negotiations are between us and the Tsuu T'ina nation. They truly impact the city of Calgary, and therefore we are keeping them absolutely up to date as to what is occurring.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental to the same minister: when will construction start on the southwest portion of Calgary's ring road?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much. Our prediction is that we should be able to get started by the fall of 2007. There are some wild cards in this, Mr. Speaker. One of the issues, of course, is that they have to go to the federal government to get a decrease in the size of their reservation. What we're looking at doing is actually purchasing some land from the Tsuu T'ina nation, and for any change in the boundaries they have to go and have an OC at the federal government. We anticipate that this could actually take a year, although if there tends to be a different government in place in Ottawa, who knows?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Health Care Costs

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the health minister listed for the Assembly the costs of treatment for certain procedures.

If you had a stroke, it would be $25,000 if you spent four days in bed. If you had a child that was born premature and spent 42 days in an ICU, it would be $42,000. If you had a kidney transplant, it would be $37,200.

This government rationalizes that advertising the price tag of a procedure will affect the use of health care. My questions are all to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Does the minister honestly believe that a patient would look at the price of a kidney transplant and decide to go with a cheaper therapy?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, as has been duly noted, it's about accountability. It's about making people sensitive. On the floor of the AAMD and C just last week I was asked why we don't provide everybody an itemized costing of what they've actually spent. I have always responded in two ways. One of the reasons why we don't usually do that is because of the privacy issues and the legislation we have around privacy and the freedom individuals have to protect their own privacy. If we, for example, sent a notice to a dad, and the mother and the daughter and the son were on that notice, what they had spent on healthcare, it may not protect the privacy of the individuals also on that card.

The second reason, Mr. Speaker, is that in different communities, in different regions it's very hard and it's very elaborate to cost out exactly how you represent that cost, whether it's facility costs and some of the other measures that could be costed.

What I am actually responding to is not only a public request for information but a request from several people to know what we're spending, how we're spending it so they can judge for themselves if they're getting value for the dollars that are spent. It's nothing more than that.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: how does knowing the cost of an operation shorten a wait list or make a procedure more successful?

Ms Evans: Oh, it has nothing to do with procedures being more successful. What it actually does, though, is enable people to understand what value they're getting when they go to the doctor. Many people today, Mr. Speaker, are looking forward to our electronic health record. Why? One of the biggest complaints I get is that if they have a test in Lloydminster and come into the city and have to have another test, they're conscious that it costs money. Many of these people, particularly seniors, want not to waste our system but to use our system in the very best way possible. That's why we're talking about costs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. To the minister again: how does knowing the cost of a procedure make health care better? It doesn't shorten the wait list. It doesn't make it better.

Ms Evans: You know, there are several things that can make health care better. One is the individual's duty and responsibility to themselves to look after their own health care, and that's important. The second responsibility is for a government to support that person in executing their duty to be well. Mr. Speaker, there wouldn't be billions of dollars spent in North America if people weren't concerned about . . . [interjections]

Mr. Speaker, why should I answer? They're not even interested.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Learning Assessment

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Teachers in my constituency have raised some questions and concerns about two initiatives known as GLA and CAA. My first question is to the Minister of Education. Can he please explain what grade level achievement is and what computer adaptive assessment is, and what's the difference between the two?

The Speaker: Hon. member, we're dealing with questions on government policy here, not interpretation of words.

Now, hon. minister, with a great deal of trepidation, go forth.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, actually, the hon. member has hit on a couple of contentious issues in the communities, and these were raised today in some private discussions with school board members. I'll be very brief. Basically, GLA, or grade level achievement, is simply a method by which a teacher will indicate to a parent whether or not that child is performing at grade level standard or not whereas CAA, a completely different initiative, computer adaptive assessment, will simply be a computerized assessment vehicle that will be available for teachers to use with students on an optional basis if they wish.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the minister: could you explain why your department is pursuing these initiatives?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, in a nutshell, Mr. Speaker, GLA is going to be an important way for parents to know whether or not their children are performing to a grade level expectation and, if not, at what grade level they are in fact performing. CAA, on the other hand, is necessary to pursue because this is a method of helping teachers assess students. It's simply another tool in the assessment package, in the tool chest, if you will. It provides immediate results on certain aspects of the curriculum, which will tell a teacher in almost an instant how that student is doing in that particular area. So those are two reasons why we're pursuing those.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the minister: could you explain to us your implementation timeline and what costs we can anticipate?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, GLA is actually an initiative that has been worked on by ministry officials and by the ATA and by the Alberta School Boards Association since about the year 2000. About a year and a half ago or so a couple of schools were identified to pilot it – six or seven schools I believe was the case. This year we hope to have every school board identify only one school where GLA reporting will be done. Then perhaps a year or two after that we should be able to implement it system-wide so that teachers will have it and parents will know what grade level their kids are at. The costs are negligible. They're absorbed in the department.

CAA, on the other hand, will roughly be a million dollars per year over the next three years. It's an advanced state of computer technology used by many entities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Centennial Project Funding

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This summer the Mill Woods Presidents' Council was denied a centennial grant to help support its centennial and Canada Day celebration. Sixty thousand people attended a real celebration there. I personally spoke to the minister, who informed me that there were no centennial funds available. Very recently this government awarded $5.5 million for a centennial grant to a prominent filmmaker after a private meeting with the minister and the Premier. My questions are for the Minister of Community Development. How was the deal brokered?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, the $5.5 million that was put towards the project regarding the film Passchendaele, which is Paul Gross's film, was an extraordinary opportunity for two reasons. One, it's the centennial year, and Passchendaele is a significant element of Canada's history. There's a particular Alberta story with the four regiments from Alberta that participated in the battle of Passchendaele, which was part of Vimy Ridge and largely viewed by historians as being a place that was Canada's coming of age. Secondly, it is, of course, the Year of the Veteran.

The combination of these two things made good sense for us through a program that we have where we support film development in the province of Alberta. Currently that program is worth $13.5

billion. But this was viewed as a particularly valuable addition to the celebration of the centennial and the Year of the Veteran together, to put $5.5 million over and above our existing budget for the film development program.

Mr. Agnihotri: To the same minister: does this mean that only prominent artists deserve provincial support or the ear of the Premier?

Mr. Mar: The reality, Mr. Speaker, is that we've supported artists throughout the entire centennial year, as we often do through the Alberta Foundation for the Arts each and every year. As an example, the member opposite would be well aware of Alberta Scene, where approximately 600 artists went to Ottawa, put on some 95 different presentations in several dozen venues. The reality is that through the annual budget of the Alberta Foundation for the Arts hundreds of artists, thousands, in fact, are supported throughout this province. This is a very important part of the quality of life in the province of Alberta and something that Albertans appreciate greatly.

Mr. Agnihotri: To the same minister: did the minister consult any stakeholders before handing over public dollars for private films, please?

Mr. Mar: Mr. Speaker, we're constantly engaged in the consultation with stakeholders not only in the arts but in all areas of government enterprise.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Public Accounts Committee

Mr. Eggen: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, there are a number of changes needed to improve this Legislative Assembly's oversight of over $27 billion in public expenditures. These changes include allowing the Standing Committee on Public Accounts to meet outside of session and to question the heads of public bodies like health regions. The federal government and other provinces have already implemented these kinds of changes to improve legislative oversight. My question is to the chair of the Public Accounts Committee. Can the chair outline the difficulties the current restriction on committee meetings poses for the effective oversight of public finances in this province?

Speaker's Ruling

Questions about a Legislative Committee

The Speaker: We have a tradition and methodology for dealing with such questions, and the chair has allowed questions to the chairman of select standing committees dealing with agenda items. That's about it. All other matters should be dealt with in the committee. Failing that, various House leaders might want to come together and review the Standing Orders.

So second question, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Martin: Point of order.

The Speaker: Absolutely. I surely expected that.

Public Accounts Committee

Mr. Eggen: I'll ask my second question, directed to the Government House Leader then, please, Mr. Speaker. Given the interest in the government caucus for improvements in the oversight function of the Public Accounts Committee, does the government support making such changes, and if so, when and how?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Government House Leader is accountable to the Premier and the government caucus, not to the Legislature. I am accountable to the Legislature in my capacity as Minister of Advanced Education and would be pleased to answer any questions from the hon. member with respect to accountability for public policy in Advanced Education.

Mr. Eggen: To the Government House Leader: would you be interested in supporting, if the opportunity arose, increasing and diversifying the powers of the Public Accounts Committee to help for a financial oversight here in this Assembly?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what I am personally interested in is of absolutely no relevance to the House. I'm here in my capacity as the minister responsible and accountable for public policy of Advanced Education, and it would be inappropriate and improper for me to answer a question with respect to my personal interests.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora.

English as a Second Language Programs

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently our government announced a long-term and short-term strategy regarding human resource development for Alberta. We encourage people to come from all over Canada and the world, and according to Statistics Canada 17 per cent of our population indicate that English is not their mother tongue. This number is growing to 25 per cent in the next 10 years. The ability of the English language is very important to our economic development and our social harmony. So my question to the Minister of Education: given that our hard-working minister has spent time with 62 school boards across the province, can you tell us what you are going to do to address the ESL issues?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, this is a very important issue and a great question because ESL needs are growing in many parts of our province. It's true that we are actively recruiting more immigrants to our province to help fill skilled labour shortages, and others are coming here because of the tremendous economic climate and so on and so on. Of course, many of those children do present with language needs, specifically English as a second language. So as part of my meetings with all 62 school boards over the last few weeks we did talk about the renewed funding framework, and the member will be happy to know that I recently appointed a ministerial advisory committee to study the renewed funding framework and the ESL pieces within that. So it will get a very thorough review, and I expect to have those results I hope by the end of February.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the same minister. Given that the Coalition for Equal Access to Education did a comprehensive study and made a specific recommendation on ESL to the government last August, can the minister tell us how he plans to respond to this specific report?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that was indeed a very passionate presentation by that coalition group on a very important issue to them and to us and I'm sure to all Albertans. As I've just indicated, there will be this review done of the renewed funding framework, but I should also let the member know that there is a review going on as well of the entire K to 12 system with respect to what it might take to help give students that extra hand up, that extra boost if you will. One issue that surfaced is the issue of the cap. At the moment five years of ESL education is being provided, and I think they were advocating for it to be increased to seven, so we will look at that. I should also just conclude by saying that there was an adult review group who did some similar work, and we're looking at those items as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given, as an example, that the Calgary board of education indicates a huge increase in ESL students, from 3,870 in 1995 to 15,493 in 2005, and the parents of these students are working very hard for our economy, what is the minister doing to help in such a situation of increase?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I am very sharply aware of Calgary's need in this area and Fort McMurray's and a few other places that are really bustling with more immigrant workers and so on. In particular, with the Calgary situation, as I recall, their budget would have increased by about 75 per cent over the last year or so. In fact, ESL program funding throughout the province over the last couple of years has increased by about 68 per cent. I will acknowledge that there is some additional work to be done there, and that's why I called for the review.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Glenora, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mental Illness and the Criminal Justice System

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The criminal justice system in Alberta is becoming a warehouse for mentally ill people. Prisons and the police are not equipped to deal with people suffering from mental illness. Failure to address this problem can have tragic results. My questions are for the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Given that the fatality inquiry into the death of an RCMP corporal and mentally ill gunman in Spruce Grove has clearly indicated that police feel powerless when dealing with the mentally ill, will the minister immediately implement special training for all police officers to effectively and safely deal with the mentally ill?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cenaiko: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That is a very good question. During recruit training in both Calgary and Edmonton and I believe the RCMP as well they have a number of individuals that come from the community. Some of them come with disabilities to speak to the officers regarding their culture. Some come from the gay and lesbian community. Some come from the seniors' community. As well, we have individuals that do come with a mental health illness or issue. So our officers are trained. They are aware of it.

This member states that additional training should be required. Mr. Speaker, our police officers throughout this province receive continual training in a number of different areas, and from the fatality inquiry obviously this one will be placed on the agenda as well.

Dr. B. Miller: To the same minister: given the fact that at least 12 per cent of inmates across Canada are seriously mentally ill, what steps is the minister taking to implement treatment programs in our prisons?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Cernaiko: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We strongly support initiatives within our correction centres that provide for programs for individuals with mental health illnesses. The issue is that one of the reasons why they may be in the justice system is the fact that they may have a mental illness. We have programs throughout the province through the Alberta Mental Health Board, which received funding this year to assist in the diversion services, but these are also addressed when they are going through the court system. The Crown prosecutors are very well aware of what some of these issues are. So, yes, we have facilities that we have to place offenders in within the correction system, but we do provide programs for them because of the fact that they do have mental illness issues.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. B. Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. It's been reported over and over again that funding is the main obstacle to viable treatment programs for the mentally ill. Can the minister tell us when this government will provide the necessary support to treat the mentally ill in the prison system? The safety of the public and the police is at stake.

Mr. Cernaiko: Mr. Speaker, I'd just like to clarify. The average length of stay in our corrections facilities in Alberta is 33 days and 13 days in our remand centres. During that period of time, when they do come in and they are incarcerated in a corrections facility, we assess them through the caseworkers that we have, psychologists that are employed by us, nurses that are employed by us, and we look at the program that they may need. If they do have a mental health illness, obviously they're going to be placed in various programs so that we can try to assist them in that short period of time that they are with us.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

2:30 Red Deer River Water Transfer

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, my constituents in Red Deer are very concerned about a project that proposes taking water from the Red Deer River and diverting it south to the special areas. They are concerned about the transfer of raw water from one river basin to another. They are concerned about a report that says that the project is neither an efficient nor effective use of this resource. My questions are for the Minister of Environment. What is the minister doing to ensure that there is enough water available for this project in good times and in bad and that the soil that is to be irrigated will be productive?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, it's such an important issue any time that this Legislature by law under the Water Act considers transferring from one basin to another, as the hon. member has mentioned. Presently the top priority of this ministry is to, number one, ensure that water is provided to the existing, those with licences and users, and second of all to protect the environment but also to meet our provincial commitments in the water licences that we have already issued.

In fact, at this particular point in time I want to say that we have an approach, what is called first in time, first in right. To the city of Red Deer and its residents, I want you to know, Mr. Speaker and members of the Assembly, that the current licences would also have a higher priority than any proposed new project that would come forward. So it's very important that this transfer would end up in this Assembly if, in fact, determined.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. To the same minister: I understand that this project has received support from the communities it will serve, but what kind of consultation was done outside those special areas?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is absolutely correct in the fact that this project is well supported in the special areas. In fact, they have held 11 open houses, which impacted over 700 Albertans. I also want to say that citizens from the Red Deer area were part of that consultation. But before this project proceeds, I want to confirm a complete, concise consultation. It will be thorough, it will be complete, and everyone that has an interest will be consulted. Just to give you, finally, an example, presently the Special Areas Board is consulting with our First Nations. Of course, their views are equally important on this issue as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Environment: given that this project will cost hundreds of millions of dollars but only benefit hundreds of people, will this minister present a cost-benefit analysis of the project before it proceeds?

Mr. Boutilier: I think, Mr. Speaker, that the suggestion of a cost-benefit analysis is very important. Part of the rural development strategy, as you know, in this area – it's a very dry area. Before any dollars or any type of situation of transferring water from one basin to another is determined, a complete, concise consultation will take place. But I can assure you that if any decision is brought back to this Assembly, clearly a cost-benefit analysis would demonstrate that there is definitely a need and a purpose for it in benefiting Albertans, who require this blue gold resource that we call water.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds from now I'll call upon the first of six hon. members to participate in Members' Statements.

Hon. members, one year ago today, on November 22, 2005, an event occurred in the province of Alberta which saw a member return to this Assembly. We want to congratulate the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview on his second, I guess, return to this Assembly and to congratulate as well 27 other members who were elected to this Assembly for the first time.

To the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, the Member for Edmonton-Manning, the Member for Edmonton-Decore, the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, the Member for Calgary-Varsity, the Member for Edmonton-Calder, the Member for Edmonton-McClung, the Member for St. Albert, the Member for Highwood, the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, the Member for Calgary-Hays, the Member for Calgary-West, the Member for Stony Plain, the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, the Member for Edmonton-Glenora, the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, the Member for Foothills-Rocky View, the Member for Peace River, the Member for Lethbridge-East, the Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, the Member for Calgary-Lougheed, the Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, the Member for Calgary-Currie, the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the Member for Calgary-Foothills, it is now your first anniversary. All excuses now end.

International Students

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Whenever the subject of international students is mentioned, most likely we think of college and university studies. Today I rise to speak about international students in our Alberta's school system. I want to use the international student program of the Calgary board of education as a typical example. The Calgary board of education offers to international students from all over the world the Alberta world-class education system, that includes ESL, high school credit courses, academic preparation for university, college, and technical institutions, with their highly trained and experienced staff.

The CBE founded its International Bureau on the belief that international students are appreciated as assets academically, culturally, and financially to CBE students, staff, and the Calgary community. CBE staff and students benefit from the cultural, intellectual, and economic resources international students bring. Currently over a hundred international students study in CBE elementary and secondary schools. Nearly 130 international students who are 18 years and older study at Chinook College, and teachers from Japan, Mexico, Korea, Taiwan have participated in professional development offered by the CBE.

Mr. Speaker, the story of international study can be found in other school systems across our province. International students in our school system help to pay for the cost and more and help to make the space utilization more efficient in some schools, but most importantly they are the future of their countries. They are Alberta's long-term investment for our valuable international relationship in the global network. The Alberta government needs to capitalize on and develop further and faster this international student opportunity as many other jurisdictions are already ahead of us.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Edwin Parr Education Awards

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year the government of Alberta will invest $4.7 billion in support of kindergarten to grade 12 education. It's a huge investment that returns huge dividends. Alberta's kindergarten to grade 12 education system is among the best in the world, and our students are head of the class in national and international tests. Our centrally developed curriculum is acclaimed around the world, and we have outstanding teachers, teachers who help our children and youth to grow as individuals and to acquire the skills and capabilities that they need to make informed choices and become good citizens.

In short, teachers are integral to the excellence in education, and each year the Alberta School Boards Association recognizes six exceptional first-year teachers with the Edwin Parr awards. The award recipients demonstrate excellence in using instructional strategies to reach students who have different needs. Last week the Edwin Parr recipients were Shane Clark of Roland Michener secondary school in Slave Lake, Kristy Purcell of Father J.A. Turcotte school in Fort McMurray, Fred Wilkes of Parkdale school in Edmonton, Erin Bodnar of St. Francis Assisi middle school in Red Deer, Stephen Kotkas of Tom Baines junior high school in Calgary, and Brandon Fletcher from Lethbridge Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Speaker, let us all thank and congratulate these outstanding new teachers.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Centennial Events in Airdrie

Ms Haley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to address the House briefly about the centennial. I have always loved my province. It was ingrained into me by my father. He was the guy who would stop his truck on the border of Alberta and get out and kiss the ground whenever he would return from B.C. or Saskatchewan. He taught me that if you work hard and you look after this province, this province will look after you. He would have been very proud of Alberta this year as we reached our 100th birthday.

A highlight this year was the visit from the Queen. I had a chance to invite my mom to have lunch in the presence of the Queen. It was just a great day for both of us. Amidst the lineup of parades and functions throughout my constituency organized to celebrate the centennial, there were three that stood out the most.

First was being able to present Eva Wagner with a gold medal for her 100th birthday. Truly an amazing lady, still talking about getting married if she can just find the right man. I liked her immediately.

Another memorable event was the celebration at the Jones Hereford ranch. Their family received the centennial family farm award, a family like many others that have been here since we became a province and have had a huge impact on the economic diversity of Alberta.

The best night of all, Mr. Speaker, was just a few weeks ago, when we had our centennial medal presentation. All of the recipients were nominated by various community organizations in my constituency. Everyone who received an award that night has made a mark on Alberta and mostly because they volunteered for everything from the local 4-H to local community committees to make their province a better place to live. It was an incredible honour to be able to meet with and present medals to this group of outstanding individuals. We had a high tea at the legion in Airdrie, and as part of our evening Staff Sergeant Garth Patterson was there to present medals with me.

The medal nominees that night reflect only a small portion of the worthy Albertans who should have received a centennial medal, Mr. Speaker. There are just so many of them. We have a province built by great entrepreneurs who also understand the importance of giving back to the community and getting involved.

Mr. Speaker, it truly will be a year that I will remember forever. I am very proud to be an Albertan.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll make my comments in the spirit of our esteemed colleague from Airdrie-Chestermere. During this centennial year in this House, in Calgary-

Lougheed, and across this province as chair of the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission I've learned a great deal about what makes this province so great. Later today as an example of this I'll be tabling the AADAC annual report. Right now for the information of our members and their constituents I'll list just a few of AADAC's good works in the recent past with a very quick glimpse to the future.

Last month AADAC partnered with the Lung Association and the Canadian Cancer Society to launch a new online smoking cessation site, albertaquits.ca, and a thousand Albertans have registered since its launch as they access support in their attempts to quit smoking.

Last week AADAC launched the Alberta drug strategy. It's a five-year plan that sets a vision and an action framework for a co-ordinated, collaborative approach to prevent and treat the harms caused by alcohol and other drug abuse. At the same time, AADAC opened new residential addiction treatment programs in Edmonton and Calgary that fit within the framework of the Alberta drug strategy. These programs include 24 beds which serve youth aged 12 to 17.

In addition to services such as these provided by AADAC, government has developed a co-ordinated response to methamphetamine that reflects provincial priorities for health renewal, and the co-ordinated response includes TV commercials targeted at youth and parents, strong support for local drug coalitions, educational materials, and curriculum-aligned school resources.

Yesterday we kicked off National Addictions Awareness Week, the goal of which is to provide information and promote activities that generate awareness of substance abuse and gambling problems and solutions.

Mr. Speaker, as we look forward, it's worthy of note that on Canada Day 2006 Bill 202 will become law. This bill will give provincial authorities and parents the power to place children under the age of 18 into drug detox and assessment programs.

Thank you to all members for your assistance with AADAC and its initiatives.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Vocational Education

Mr. Flaherty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to address vocational education in Alberta's future. As Alberta's economy charges forward in the next hundred years, I pause to reflect on the important role an education system should be playing in preparing future workers. I'm particularly concerned about preparation for careers in the skilled trades. I don't believe we are taking the right steps now to ensure that high school students can assess the rewards of a vocational career.

Our future depends on the contribution of skilled workers, a process that begins in the publicly funded school system. I spent a career in education. I've spoken to many Albertans in my role as the Education critic. I've come to the conclusion that a number of changes are necessary. Vocational education must be seen as equal and not the lesser cousin of academic learning. The current system is focused on students who continue to go to university, but the reality is that only about a third of high school students choose that route and fewer than that graduate.

As I talk to teachers, school boards, parents, and schoolchildren, I hear similar stories everywhere I go. The schools need greater funding for vocational teaching facilities. There need to be more teachers trained in teaching vocational skills.

Lastly, there is a vital shortage of career counsellors in junior high schools. Grade 9 is vital. Students should be meeting with their counsellor two or three times in this crucial year to discuss their options for the future. The registered apprenticeship program is a start, but it needs to be critically evaluated, it needs to be better funded, and it needs to improve its completion rates. There are rumblings of change, but we need leadership from this government. That is why I rise today, to urge this government into action in the support of vocational education.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Resource Revenues

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Premier is currently touring Canada trying to show that Alberta's good fortune is Canada's good fortune. No one doubts that, but there's so much more we could be doing if we had a real vision of our province's place in Canada and the world.

The resource revenue we're now receiving, not to mention all the forgone revenue we should be receiving through fair royalty rates, is merely a down payment on our future. These are windfall, one-time returns on a rapidly depleting capital asset. That's how we should think of it when we invest it. The Alberta NDP's vision for Alberta is that it must become the leader in Canada for renewable energy. In this way we can make sure that this province retains its economic and social advantages long after the oil and gas are gone.

The NDP's plan for a greener, more diversified provincial economy is built on a foundation of fair royalties for oil and gas. Our current royalty regime was established for $10-a-barrel oil. It's six times that now, and Albertans need to receive a fair return on their resources.

The NDP believes that the resulting additional resource revenues must be invested in a public enterprise that would help transition this province into a world leader in energy efficiency and clean, renewable energy. We should establish partnerships with municipalities, other provinces, the federal government, and the private sector to explore new ways to diversify our economy.

Alberta must invest in an energy strategy that will benefit the entire country while retaining full ownership of its resources and the economic benefits that flow from them. An investment in renewable energy will be a way to use Alberta's energy wealth to benefit the entire country. We can again be leaders and nation builders with a visionary approach to building a renewable energy strategy for the country. Such an opportunity comes but once in a generation. We can leave our children and grandchildren with the same advantages we enjoy today if only we act. Let's seize the opportunity, Mr. Speaker.

Vignettes from Alberta's History

The Speaker: By way of an historical vignette for the day hon. members might appreciate that a special session of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta wrapped up on this day in 1938. That session was called primarily to deal with legislation regarding oil and gas conservation in the province. The sitting lasted from November 15 to November 22, and eight bills were passed, the most important of which was Bill 1, an Act for the Conservation of the Oil and Gas Resources of the Province of Alberta, which gave the Oil and Gas Conservation Board the power to enforce its regulations. That was in 1938, and that came about after an almost 10-year debate in the province of Alberta, from 1928 to 1938, about oil and gas conservation.

Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Standing Committee on Private Bills has had a certain bill under consideration and wishes to report as follows. The committee recommends that the following private bill proceed with amendment: Bill Pr. 4, Brooklynn Hannah George Rewega Right of Civil Action Act. As part of this report I will be tabling five copies of the proposed amendment to Bill Pr. 4.

Mr. Speaker, I request the concurrence of the Assembly in this recommendation.

The Speaker: Will those members in the Assembly who concur in the report please say aye?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Speaker: Opposed, please say no. The report is carried.

head: Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mrs. Mather: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table a petition signed by 20 constituents requesting an immediate increase to AISH rates "based on the feedback received during the Government's low-income review."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise to present a petition from 106 Alberta tradesmen and women from the communities of Airdrie, Alix, Caroline, Bonnyville, Lethbridge, Fort Saskatchewan, Stony Plain, Spruce Grove, and others, and it reads:

We the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to prohibit the importation of temporary foreign workers to work on the construction and/or maintenance of oil sands facilities and/or pipelines until the following groups have been accessed and/or trained: Unemployed Albertans and Canadians; Aboriginals; unemployed youth under 25; under-employed landed immigrants; and displaced farmers.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table a petition with 509 signatures on it. This petition is calling for "a moratorium on any future expansion of Confined Feeding Operations, with a view to phasing out existing operations within the next three years."

Thank you.

head: Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Finance I'm pleased to table today the response to Written Question 36.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission it is my pleasure to introduce these five copies of AADAC's 2004-2005 annual report summarizing AADAC's leadership in delivering services that assist Albertans in achieving freedom from the harmful effects of alcohol, other drugs, and gambling.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. The first one is a letter dated November 15, 2005, that I received at our constituency office in Edmonton-Gold Bar, and it is from Kane Veterinary Supplies Ltd., which is a business that is writing in regard to the proposed amendment to the Veterinary Profession Act. Thank you.

My second tabling is information that I received through access to information from the Department of Energy. This is a series of e-mails going back to November of 2001. They are from Robert.Hemstock@ENRON.com, and they're addressed to Ricardo Shillingford, <Ricardo.Shillingford@gov.ab.ca>@ENRON. This is a dedicated government address to Enron, and it outlines close links between Enron and our provincial government.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Agnihotri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a letter tabling from constituent Janice Radloff. She's concerned about family law. She has suggested some very valuable points. She believes that these laws are sexist against fathers' rights, that no one parent should have all the rights and others have none, that this is discrimination against men. She is urging the government to have a full discussion on family law.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got two tablings today, which I'd like to table on behalf of my colleague from Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. The first is a letter from Alice Williamson, who is very concerned that the government's so-called third way on health care will increase costs, particularly for seniors.

The second document is a letter sent to all MLAs from Reverend Lynn Maki on behalf of the Alberta and Northwest Conference of the United Church of Canada. The church recently passed a motion urging the government of Alberta to recognize the social determinants of health and to do a better job of supporting people living on low incomes.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to section 28(1) of the Ombudsman Act I am pleased to table with the Assembly the 38th annual report of the office of the Ombudsman for the period April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005.

head: Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the Hon. Mrs. McClellan, Minister of Finance, pursuant to the Conflicts of Interest Act and the Legislative Assembly Act the report of selected payments to Members and former Members of the Legislative Assembly and persons directly associated with Members of the Legislative Assembly for the year ended March 31, 2005. Also on behalf of hon. Mrs. McClellan a report entitled General Revenue Fund: Details of Grants, Supplies and Services, Capital Assets and Other, by Payee for the Year Ended March 31, 2005.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Cardinal, Minister of Human Resources and Employment, the Alberta Dental Association and College 2004 radiation health and safety program annual report January 1, 2004, to December 31, 2004, with attached Alberta Dental Association and College radiation administration program financial statements; the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association radiation protection program 2004 annual report; the College of Chiropractors of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the year ended June 30, 2005, with attached College of Chiropractors of Alberta financial statements dated June 30, 2005; the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the period April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005; the University of Alberta authorized radiation health administrative organization annual report 2004-2005; the University of Calgary radiation health administration organization annual report for the period April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005, with attached University of Calgary authorized radiation health administration organization financial statements for the years ended March 31, 2004, and March 31, 2005.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Horner, Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, pursuant to the Agriculture Financial Services Act the Agriculture Financial Services Corporation annual report 2004-2005; pursuant to the Marketing of Agricultural Products Act the Alberta Agricultural Products Marketing Council annual report 2002-2003; pursuant to the Brand Act, the Livestock Identification and Brand Inspection Act, the Livestock and Livestock Products Acts, and the Stray Animals Act the Livestock Identification Services Ltd. manager's report April 1, 2004, to March 31, 2005, with attached Livestock Identification Services Ltd. financial statements for the year ended March 31, 2005.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Melchin, Minister of Energy, return to order of the Assembly MR 8, asked for by Mr. Eggen on April 11, 2005.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview on a purported point of order.

Point of Order

Explanation of Speaker's Ruling

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 13(2) I'm curious. As the Speaker has pointed out, I've not been in the House for some time, so I'm probably missing something, but Standing Order 13(2) is just an explanation. I'm really trying to get clarity about question period and who we can direct questions to because I'm thinking of Beauchesne 405 and Erskine May 345, the 23rd edition.

I think the Speaker would recognize that when I was here up to '93, these questions did go to the chair of Public Accounts at least a couple of times. I've found out – I'd forgotten – that I'd actually directed one to the chairman of Public Accounts on March 26, 1991, to the chairman, who was Mr. Pashak at the time. Obviously, there have been some changes, so I'm trying to get some clarity in terms of the ruling. Can we clarify who can accept questions, then, in the House?

The Speaker: Well, hon. member, nothing has changed, so it may be something else.

If the hon. member wants to quote Beauchesne, he can look at section 411(3). It basically says that a question may not "seek information about proceedings in a committee which has not yet made its report to the House." That perhaps is one. But, more importantly, I think that the hon. member would like to go to House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 429, Questions Concerning Matters before Committees.

Questions seeking information about the schedule and agenda of committees may be directed to chairs of committees. Questions to the Ministry or a committee chair concerning the proceedings or work of a committee may not be raised. Thus, for example, a question would be disallowed if it dealt with a vote in committee, with the attendance of Members at a committee meeting, or with the content of a committee report.

So nothing has changed with respect to that. I did make a ruling in this Assembly on May 1, 1997, with respect to the form and the relationship with respect to committees.

Now, out of interest today was a good example of a report coming from a committee chairman. The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill presented a report to the Assembly coming out of the Standing Committee on Private Bills. That report is debatable, could have been debated. So the question was, as the member moved, that there be concurrence in the report. No debate, but the question was called, and the question was passed.

Presumably when and if the chair of the Public Accounts Committee were to bring a report of that particular committee to the Assembly and the chair would be reflective of the operation of the committee, then there would have to be concurrence asked of that. There would be a debate. But other than agenda and scheduling, no. That applies to all committee chairmen, by the way.

Speaker's Ruling

Bills Containing Similar Provisions

The Speaker: I do need to just update the Assembly with respect to two bills. One, Bill 47, the Alberta Association of Former MLAs Act, is now at the Committee of the Whole stage, having passed second reading in the afternoon of November 15, 2005. Members will note that the bill is virtually identical to Bill 207, which has the same title, which has yet to come up for second reading. The authorities are clear that no two bills that are virtually the same can proceed after the House has made a decision on one. The House has already made a decision with respect to second reading of Bill 47, so Bill 207 will not be proceeded with and will come off the Order Paper.

Advanced Education

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Might I start by saying what a wonderful team of people I have the opportunity to work with in the Department of Advanced Education. We are joined by some of them in the gallery today, and I'd just like to briefly introduce them: the deputy minister, Bill Byrne; the assistant deputy minister, Phil Gougeon; Marg Leathem; Gerry Waisman, who's in charge of the student assistance area; Blake Bartlett; Solomon Quarshie. Rai Batra and Michael Shields were going to be there; I don't see them, but that might just be my eyesight. I'd ask them to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House because they do a fantastic job on behalf of Alberta students.

Mr. Chairman, on April 19 we presented Advanced Education's supply estimates for the year. On that day I presented a new vision for our postsecondary system and the actions that we have taken as a province to achieve new vision. That day we received support to move forward with our vision, mission, goals, and strategies, and I believe we've achieved a significant degree of progress during this fiscal year.

There's still more that can be done always, and as the opportunities present themselves, we listen to partners. We consult with stakeholders. We've consulted with Albertans, and when opportunities come up, we take action. As a result of opportunities having come up, we have now before the House supplementary supply in the total amount of $99 million, I believe. That $99 million is made up of a number of component parts; $8.1 million of that is a grant to Grant MacEwan College.

As a government we've made a commitment to increase access to postsecondary education for Albertans. The commitment is expected to add 15,000 new postsecondary spaces by 2007-08, 60,000 spaces by 2020. We've been encouraging and working closely with institutions to implement changes that will increase opportunities for students.

One of the significant outcomes of these efforts was Grant MacEwan's application for and receipt of degree-granting status starting 2006-2007. We made a commitment to support institutions with initiatives that will increase accessibility. To that end, we have provided Grant MacEwan with a one-time grant of $8.1 million, which covers the start-up costs for two degree programs. That $8.1 million is used for curriculum development, for the hiring of additional staff members, and will go towards facilities; for example, library upgrades and facility upgrades which were required in the review of the program.

As members will know, any new program has to go through the Alberta quality council, and the Alberta quality council will indicate if there are areas that they think need to be upgraded. In this case there were, and we were pleased to provide support for that.

Fifteen million dollars for the University of Calgary. We indicated in the spring of this year – in fact, the Legislature passed in Bill 1 the provision to set up the access to the future fund and to endow it with $3 billion, and then in subsequent years $135 million would be available in each year when it's fully funded to support or encourage individuals to contribute and the community to contribute to postsecondary education for quality, accessibility, and affordability.

Well, almost immediately upon tabling the bill, I had a phone call from the University of Calgary's president indicating that a donor had come forward who wanted to make a pledge of $25 million to the University of Calgary engineering school to set up some very significant scholarships and to fund a chair and to fund some programs at the University of Calgary's Faculty of Engineering, which would be of significant benefit to engineering students. In order to assist the University of Calgary in achieving that donation, we agreed to move forward with a $15 million matching contribution, actually a $25 million matching contribution, but the $15 million matches the money that's already received. Mr. Schulich's additional $10 million will come later and will be eligible for matching later.

Although the access to the future fund was not fully funded as yet and we didn't have the resources in place out of that fund to do this, we felt that it was a significant gift that ought not to be passed up. So we made the commitment to assist them in being able to deal with that.

Those two initiatives represent the first two items on our supplementary estimate list. The government contributions totalling $23.1 million will not increase total government spending, Mr. Chairman. These initiatives are funded through a reallocation of $4.6 million in voted spending as well as a reallocation of $18.5 million in uncommitted funds from our statutory budgets into voted spending. So we need the supplementary estimate to be voted on to allow that reallocation although it does not increase government spending.

The additional $80.5 million is for postsecondary facility infrastructure, and I'm sure the House would agree that when the opportunity is there to move ahead with the plans that we have in place for postsecondary infrastructure – and we have 21 public postsecondary institutions, all of whom are putting together their plans, know what their direction is or are looking at their direction for the future and what their infrastructure needs are going to be, and also, of course, have a number of areas in which they need to do some remediation or there needs to be some maintenance done. So we're very pleased that we could move ahead with $80.5 million in that area.

The original budget for the 2005-2006 projects has remained in Infrastructure, where it was voted, but funding for new projects will reside with Advanced Education. Since April 1 $185.8 million has been approved for new high-priority capital projects at postsecondary institutions, which is part of our plan to invest the surplus. Now, that money, Mr. Chairman, of course goes into the capital fund. But what we're asking for is for the Legislature today in supply to give approval for 80.5 million of those dollars to be voted for expenditure in this year to increase access to postsecondary education, increase research capacity, strengthen capacity in rural locations, respond to situations where infrastructure conditions and functionality affect program quality or program delivery, and contribute to the success of Campus Alberta initiatives, cross-ministry initiatives, community partnerships, et cetera.

I won't go through the myriad of programs that that involves, but I will indicate to the House that that involves $15 million to assist the University of Alberta to purchase and renovate the Bay building, which is a partnership that they've created with the city of Edmonton and Edmonton Economic Development and will help them to relocate the learning transition facility that they have on the university campus; $10 million of the commitment that was announced to Olds community learning campus; $10 million which was announced to the University of Calgary and which assists them with this year's portion of the work towards the new space for the faculty of veterinary medicine and some other remedial work that they're doing and some planning work that they're doing relative to four major projects that they've talked about publicly; $4 million to the University of Lethbridge for the Water and Environmental Science Building – the total approved funding for that building is $12 million but $4 million in spending this year – and additional projects right across the province, projects which will enhance the capacity and ability of the postsecondary learning institutions to make space available for students and faculty and advanced learning in the province.

I'd be happy to answer any questions or to deal with any of the subjects that have come up.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased and intrigued to rise today to discuss supplementary estimates for the Department of Advanced Education. We have much else to do today, so I will attempt to be brief because we have a lot of ground to cover. We've already been informed that there is no opportunity to extend debate on supplementary estimates whatsoever, leaving at least a couple of departments already in some jeopardy of being discussed. We are talking about an awful lot of money here. We're talking just $99 million for this department alone, the Ministry of Advanced Education, which at my allotted time if I take it all – and I promise I won't – works out to about a debate of $5 million a minute. So let's get down to business here. I have essentially five questions for the minister.

Regarding the $8.1 million in one-time funding to support implementation of the new Grant MacEwan College baccalaureate degree programs, many universities across Canada have clearly stated that they will not automatically accept a MacEwan degree as equivalent to a university degree for the purposes of postgraduate study. Would the minister explain how this money, this $8.1 million, will ensure that MacEwan attains national recognition as a degree-granting institution so that MacEwan grads can enjoy the same access as graduates from the U of A, the U of L, the U of C, or Athabasca to a master's program at the institution of their choice anywhere in this nation? If this money won't, will he explain how he intends to achieve that? A baccalaureate degree, after all, is only worth having if it's the equal of the comparable degree from any other university.

Regarding the $15 million to match the Schulich donation to the University of Calgary, would the minister confirm that this is off-budget spending from the unanticipated surplus versus dollars from the access to the future fund, one of whose purposes, of course, is to match private donations? When will the minister put the advisory council and other regulations into place regarding the access to the future fund that will transform this fund, absent those regulations, absent the existence of that council right now, from something that could be seen as being akin to the minister's personal piggy bank into an accountable decision-making body with clear rules and regulations?

Question 3. Regarding the $80.5 million for additional postsecondary facilities infrastructure, would the minister please show the House specifically how this spending links to improving access to postsecondary education in Alberta? I'm looking for some hard numbers of spaces, of students, of FLEs here. Given that the current budget projected access growth or expanded system capacity of just over a thousand spaces, do these dollars merely contribute to that projection, or do they actually increase the projection, and if so, by how many spaces?

Still on access, the Campus Calgary group of institutions indicate that they need an additional 19,700 spaces in Calgary alone within five years, by the year 2010, in order to meet demand and support that city's growth. The government's commitment to Calgary in terms of FLEs as of September of this year is 390 spaces. Is it just me, or are those two figures just a little out of whack?

Finally, does the minister support the University of Calgary having to borrow $113 million in order to move ahead on its library expansion, which is one of the U of C's access initiatives, in a timely fashion? If debt is bad for the government of Alberta, how can debt be good for a publicly funded institution of higher learning?

Those are my questions, Mr. Chair. I look forward to the answers. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Very quickly, on the $8.1 million for Grant MacEwan and degrees not automatically being accepted, to the best of my knowledge graduate programs don't automatically accept anyone. They look at the credentials to determine whether the credentials are appropriate and whether they're acceptable for the program. The understanding that I have – and I've delved into this quite significantly – is that the rigour of the program that Grant MacEwan will be offering is one which will stand up to scrutiny among universities and colleges across this country for going to the next level if somebody is applying for a master's program. The Alberta quality council is set up as an accreditation process, I think I could say the most rigorous in the country, the only accreditation process of such rigour in the country although there are others in two other provinces that are set up similarly, and other provinces across the country also have ways of doing accreditation. One of the things that Alberta is leading is a process for national accreditation standards, which are extremely important.

Now, some would suggest that membership in AUCC is an accreditation process, but it's actually not. It's membership in AUCC, which is an important thing for those that want to join it, but it's not the be-all and end-all of accreditation. So it's important for Alberta institutions for recognition nationally and internationally and for Canadian institutions for recognition internationally to have an appropriate national accreditation standard. Alberta is leading the way in helping to prepare that, and the Alberta quality council, if I may say so, is at the leading edge of accreditation both in terms of its quality and process. So I'm very confident that graduates of Grant MacEwan's new programs will be seen to be of a quality in nature that any university in this country will want to have their best and brightest.

With respect to the Schulich gift to the University of Calgary, as I indicated in my opening remarks, the revenue is not yet coming out of the access to the future fund, so that $15 million is being proposed to be matched out of monies that are available by reallocation from within the department's existing funds. It's not the way I'd choose to do it necessarily, but that was a gift which did make and will make a very, very significant difference and was one that we couldn't allow to be passed up. The University of Calgary was very keen on making that arrangement. That's exactly what the access to the future fund was set up to do, so we felt that it was appropriate to move forward with that particular process.

In terms of the $80.5 million, all of those postsecondary infrastructure dollars are intended to improve access quality for students in this province. Some of them are being used with respect to maintenance projects, which are necessary to keep existing facilities serviceable or to improve them; for example, $3 million to the Grande Prairie college to replace some portable trailers that they have that they've been using for a significant period of time which are no longer really habitable and ought to be replaced. I can't say that all of those dollars are going to add space, but a significant amount of those dollars are going to add space, and certainly all of those dollars are going to make sure that we have quality spaces available for students to learn in and for professors and teachers to teach in. That's a very important part of making sure that access is there for students.

With respect to Campus Calgary I think the hon. member asked: is he the only one who thinks there's a problem with the numbers? I think he probably is. So going on to the fifth question . . . no. I think what he intended to ask was about how we're going to get to the number of spaces we need for Calgary students to access opportunities for education. We're working very closely with Calgary institutions and all the institutions in the province to make sure that there is a place for every Albertan who wants to advance their education. We've set some ambitious targets; we're working very quickly towards those targets.

I think the number that the member referenced in terms of the number of additional spaces being 390 is very significantly lowballing the number of additional spaces made available to students. I think he's probably referencing the recent access growth fund announcement which, of course, talks about some specific additional spaces being paid for. He should be aware – I hope he's aware – that there's been a 30 per cent increase proposed in this year's budget and the next two years in the business plan. That money, the increase of 6 per cent to the base grants plus additional grants that bring it up to about 10 per cent on average, is money which institutions are using to expand access for students in programs.

There's a significant increase in capacity into the system, not the least of which, I might say, are probably close to 4,000 and perhaps as high as 4,500 new apprenticeship spaces, new apprentices recruited into the system, many of which, I am certain, will be studying in Calgary. So lots of additional spaces in the system, lots more work to do in that area. I would certainly appreciate any support that the hon. member and his colleagues in caucus will give in terms of ensuring the additional resources. When we bring Budget 2006 to the floor, I'm sure he'll support additional resources going into accessing more spaces in that area.

We're working very closely with the institutions, as I said, to make sure that the capacity is there. There is right across the system some capacity already in terms of the physical space, and we have to make sure that we make best utilization of that. We're moving ahead with the colleges and universities, leading a design of a single point of entry, for example, so that we can make best use of space.

I think there was a second question with respect to the Schulich donation, a second question with respect to when the rules and regulations might come in with respect to the fund. I can tell the hon. member that we had an interim committee review the issue of how we can best allocate resources and deal with it. They've reported. We've now sent that report out to stakeholders for comment, or it's in the process of going out. It probably hasn't left my office yet, but it will be going out in the next day. I'm anticipating comments back from institutions and other stakeholders and interested parties with respect to that report. When we get those comments back, we will be then bringing forward a form and structure for the application of funds.

There's a basic rule with respect to application of funds which should assuage any concerns the hon. member has. In fact, I think he referenced it as the minister's personal piggy bank, which is really quite an offensive way to talk about public money. I can assure you that I would never treat public money in that way, and no member of this government would consider that. It's very clear that the access to the future fund is there to encourage both the contributions from the community, commitment from the community, stepping up of the community to improve access, quality, or affordability in our public education system and to provide for resources for ingenuity or, as the committee's report calls it, a renaissance, a way of developing projects which would transfer knowledge or develop knowledge.

Those two aspects of the fund, I think, are very clear. It's very clear that any public comment that's been made by this minister about the fund to date about potential projects are all areas where people have stepped forward, making a commitment to a public institution in a manner which the institution has confirmed will be utilized for access, quality, or affordability. Those are the basic rules and guidelines. Of course, the only payout in the context of the fund so far is the $15 million that we're proposing here for the Schulich monies.

The last question was with respect to the $113 million for the University of Calgary's digital library project, an excellent project which I hope will be going ahead very quickly. It will in fact free up other space around the campus for expansion of academic space and other necessary space for the University of Calgary to add access in that area. So that's a project which is a very important project.

We do need to look at how we build postsecondary facilities across the province, and when I say we, I mean the system, not just government. If you take a look out over five years and perhaps as long as 10 years, there's a need of $1.5 billion to $3 billion worth of facilities that either have been proposed or are being part of a conceptual plan or are under what I would say might be expected after institutions have studied their go-forward process. Obviously, not all of that is going to be funded in any one year, nor can we commit to funding it. We've moved aggressively and, I think, appropriately on the highest priority areas.

I welcome the opportunity and have taken the opportunity to sit down with institutions to talk about how they might plan their 10-year strategic horizon for providing space, making space available to students, improving quality, making academic space available so they can attract the best and brightest professors and teachers to the province. Certainly, we'll work with them in any appropriate format to see how we can put space in place as quickly as is appropriate to move forward and make that space accessible. So I'm not going to shut the door on a proposal that's legitimately made by a legitimate board-governed institution with respect to how they might legitimately finance postsecondary projects to get them going faster than we might be able to put the resources out.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. For the record the minister knows that I am eager to work co-operatively and collaboratively in making the system better. He and I and everybody else in this House and in this province have a direct stake in excellence in postsecondary education access, affordability, quality, and sustainability. I think we're all on the same page of the program as far as that's concerned. He's asked for my support, and of course although I cannot ever offer unconditional support, the minister should know – and I think he does know – that he can count on a supportive attitude from me as long as I get straight answers to my questions.

One of the areas in which, of course, I'm looking for straight answers is in hard numbers having to do with how many spaces we are creating. There have been many promises made around that by the minister in terms of 15,000 spaces across the province over three years, 30,000 over six, and 60,000 by the year 2020. By comparison to that, we have a very hard target from Campus Calgary of 19,700 spaces in the city of Calgary alone by 2010.

Those are goals in both cases, and what I'm interested in in terms of access are hard numbers as measures of performance in terms of how many spaces have been created, are being created, and how they relate to the money spent here.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm interested in those very same numbers, but I think the hon. member has to understand and appreciate that the campus of the 21st century is not the campus of the 19th century. We're not just talking about adding traditional space to traditional universities and counting individual students coming in for the traditional semester. What we have in Alberta today, and very appropriately so, is a wide range of student opportunities, learning opportunities for Albertans. Some of those Albertans, even Calgarian Albertans, are going to be attending at Athabasca University electronically and online. Some of them are going to be attending . . .

Mr. Taylor: They can still be counted?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, they can still be counted, and we need to be able to develop counting mechanisms to do that and to make sure that we're doing it.

The important question is: does every Albertan that wants to have access to a learning opportunity get that access to learning opportunity? That's the common outcome that we're trying to do. I agree with the hon. member that there need to be measurables, and we're going to be developing those measurables. We're going to be finding the ways to best account for the way in which we increase capacity. But it's not quite as simple, and that's the only point I was making in saying: well, we need 19,700 spaces. I appreciate that institutions look forward and strategize and have a strategic plan to achieve numbers like that. I certainly appreciate the work that went into that. Unfortunately, it's not quite as simple as that.

Again, if the hon. member has any advice or ideas with respect to this area, I'd be open to them. I can indicate to the hon. member that we are developing formats to be able to properly assess progress along the process to achieve those 60,000 spaces that we're talking about. As long as he recognizes that those spaces come in many different ways and for many different students and many different Albertans who want to learn and move. Some of them will be moving to literacy, others will be moving to a PhD, and that's a very complex system.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I take this opportunity to join debate on supplementary estimates for 2005-2006 on the Department of Advanced Education. I thank the minister for being quite open to receiving questions and broader comments with respect to the future of the system and how we can get where we want to get over the next 15 to 20 years.

I was listening to the minister with some care when he talked about the expansion of the capacity of the system to have more spaces in it, the accessibility issue. That certainly has been one of the key issues that everyone in this province, including the minister and our sides of the House, has been talking about.

3:30

I just want to give some figures here that will provide the context for the debate. Mr. Chairman, in 1994-95, about 10 years ago, there were 106,000 full-load equivalents at universities, colleges, technical institutes, private universities, et cetera, and at the Banff Centre. There were about 106,000 full-load equivalents available in the system. In '99-2000 – five, six years later – the number went up to 119,574 full-load equivalents. So over five years the number of FLEs in Alberta went up by 13,000. Between '92-93, with 105,000 FLEs, and 2004-05, with about 139,000, the number of Alberta full-load equivalents increased by 34 per cent.

The government is proposing an increase of 60,000 spaces altogether over the next 15 years. My question to the minister is: if the rate of increase and growth over the last 10 years is any guide to the rate of growth in future years and, in fact, to expedite the rate of growth given that we know that the participation rate in the postsecondary system in Alberta is one of the lowest in the country, how is that commitment that he has made to 60,000 spaces over the next 15 years going to lead to addressing effectively the problem of accessibility for Albertans over the next 10 or 15 years?

That's one key question I think we should never take our eyes off. It's an important issue. When we are debating these issues in the House, I think we should pay attention to the numbers and to the commitments that the government makes in relation to the information that I have on the rates of increase and the demand for spaces in the system.

Similarly, Mr. Chairman, another question that I have. I was hoping that the minister in the supplementary estimates request would pay some attention to addressing the ongoing concerns of the postsecondary students of this province with respect to convincing this government or having this government act on their concerns with the increase in tuition fees.

The government has over the last year made a commitment for the coming year to continue with the so-called tuition rebate program, about which students express a great deal of concern. They would have liked to see, at least, a firm commitment on the part of this minister and this government that it will not remain a rebate but will become a freeze and that, in fact, the government will present a schedule of reduction of the fees, rolling the fees back if we are to induce students, who are presently qualified to take advantage of postsecondary education but don't, to seek admission and participation in the system. If we keep the tuition fee issue the way it is now, that the students continue to worry about the annual increase in tuition fees forever, we will not be able to get the students who are presently staying out of the system to come into the system and become participants in it.

To the minister: why has he not taken this opportunity in bringing forward the supplementary estimates to ask for more money, to at least say that the postsecondary institutions will receive from this government an increase in funding added to their base budgets or whatever so that they don't have to continue to assume that they'll be called upon to increase or they'll be allowed to increase tuition fees two years down the line when this rebate is gone? I think there's a need for the government to make a clear statement to institutions that the base funding will be adjusted in a way that postsecondary institutions can assure their students that there will be no further increase in tuition fees and, on top of that, that there will in fact be systematic, properly scheduled rollbacks in those tuition fees.

The government is proposing in the next budget, if I may use a reference to that, to move forward with $1.4 billion to $1.6 billion in corporate tax reduction. If the government reduces the tuition fees by 50 per cent starting next year, it will cost the Alberta Treasury only about $250 million. Imagine this. This government talks about postsecondary education being its highest priority. It talks a great deal about that. The minister talks about this and certainly conveys the message to students and faculties and management of our postsecondary institutions that he means business on this issue, yet the words which the minister uses and the government uses to put priority on postsecondary education are not followed up in action by making a commitment of, say, reducing tuition fees by 50 per cent, which will cost no more than $250 million a year, and proceeding with a permanent loss on an annual basis of $1.6 billion to the public finances of this province if it proceeds with its reduction of corporate taxes come next year.

I would have hoped that the minister would have indicated his intention by way of the supplementary estimates that he's going to take concrete action that will assure students that the government has been listening, that it is planning to take action that will deliver goods to students that will deliver a reduction in their tuition fee loads as well as other costs.

Having said that, let me ask the minister another question. I notice that there is a $4.6 million reduction in the student loan relief-benefit program. This money is going to be switched over to some other expenditure as part of the supplementary estimates presented here today. I think this warrants some explanation. What information is the minister able to give to the House with respect to why it is that the student loan relief-benefit will in fact go down by $4.6 million this year when we know that more and more students are in need of that relief, more and more students are feeling the pressures of unbearable costs of going to a college or a university or an institute and staying there? Many of them are of course dropping out without completing or, rather than four years, taking six years, perhaps, or seven years to complete.

I think we need some explanation as to why this money is being saved and how come this is happening when, in fact, we do know that the need for relief is ever-increasing and is growing every year because of the increasing burden of the costs of going to school in this province, whether you go to university or college or whatever.

The third issue is the minister's response to the question of the quality of four-year degrees being granted at our colleges. Grant MacEwan College, certainly, has been given the go-ahead to do that in certain areas. Mount Royal may be another institution which is proceeding with that. There may be other colleges that are in a similar situation.

Now, it is true that we have the Alberta quality council, which must vet all the applications that come forward from colleges requesting the powers to grant these degrees, so there's some quality assurance in the work that the Alberta quality council does. But let me share an example with the minister on this issue because the Alberta quality council is a mechanism which tries to provide a certain standard, a certain benchmark, a kind of standard that must be met before colleges can begin to offer degrees. A niece of mine, going to one of the well-known two-year arts colleges in Vancouver, decided after finishing a two-year program at one of those colleges in Vancouver to go to Toronto and seek completion of the following two years at Ryerson University in Toronto. She did get the admission, but she has to do all four years. The two years' work that she had done on the assumption that those two years would be treated as the first two years of a degree program, regardless of where in this country she transfers to complete that program, did not prove to be true.

While the minister is saying that there's no guarantee provided by any university that a four-year degree, whether earned at a university or college, means guaranteed admission to a graduate program, I think the problem is more serious than that. It is a question of whether or not that four-year degree is considered equivalent to a four-year degree earned at a university, not merely a question of the next step, you know, in the student's pursuit of their program at the graduate level.

Employers make those distinctions. Those data are available. That is why the AUCC, Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, is an institution that many colleges who want to proceed with granting four-year degrees want to look up to and try to meet the expectations of and the standards set by this national council on the kinds of facilities and faculty qualifications and other infrastructure that must be in place in order for the institution that's aspiring to offer a four-year degree to be able to produce graduates whose degrees will be respected at other places, not only within the province but across Canada. So there is a problem there, Mr. Minister, and I want you to address that.

Related to the $8.1 million going to Grant MacEwan College, it's a one-time cost, as the estimates document states. Now, some of this $8.1 million is supposed to be spent on recruiting faculty. I'm having difficulty understanding how a one-time grant, which will include hiring additional faculty to provide the coursework and supervision and lab work and all of that for a four-year program, can be sustained by a college. Is it going to become part of the line budget and then be funded by the ministry? How is it going to happen? I have some concern about asking a college to go ahead because the ministry is making a one-time grant to hire faculty. What happens the following year to the faculty? How are they retained on the college payroll if this is a one-time grant and a one-time only grant? So that's another question that I have for the minister, that I hope he will try to address.

The fourth question: "$80,500,000 for additional post-secondary facilities infrastructure." Now, the minister knows and it's public information that postsecondary institutions certainly have huge deferred maintenance costs and deficits that run into hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars. For the University of Alberta alone, I understand that those estimates – and you would have, perhaps, more precise figures than I – run to about $250 million in deferred maintenance costs. We have a large postsecondary system. Of this $80.5 million, what percentage or how many millions of dollars from this sum are going toward deferred maintenance and what portion is going toward installation of new facilities or setting up new labs or setting up new classrooms? I think that part of your observations on how this money is to be spent had to do with increasing the number of spaces available at some of the receiving institutions. I understand that the U of A's portion of this amount goes to, I suppose, making changes to the Bay building downtown. No? No.

Anyway, so these are some of the questions for the minister to comment on, and then we'll see what happens. Thank you.

Mr. Hancock: I can indicate to the member that $37 million of the $80.5 million is directly for infrastructure maintenance although in some of those projects there might be a replacement as opposed to a repair. I would reference in that regard Grande Prairie Regional College. Three million dollars is going to Grande Prairie Regional College, which would replace the portables rather than repairing them. But most of that money, that $37 million, is going for major projects like redevelopment of a shop or replacement of a roof or those sorts of repairs, the deferred maintenance item that you're talking about. The $15 million for the Bay building is part of the $80 million as well but supplemental to the $37 million, not included in it, so that's not part of what I would consider to be renovation or an infrastructure maintenance program.

About half of the money is going directly to infrastructure maintenance programs although if you took a look at the rest of them, you might find some of the money in the rest of them; for example, the $10 million that's being allocated this year for the veterinary medicine and project planning. I believe, subject to correction, that part of that veterinary medicine money is remediating some space or changing some space, which might deal with some of the deferred maintenance. Sometimes a new project actually reduces the deferred maintenance because it replaces a building that would otherwise have had to be redeveloped. So I would say approximately 50 per cent of that is going to what you might have included in your deferred maintenance numbers.

Going back to your first question, addressing the issue of accessibility, I appreciate the numbers that you brought to the table. I think those are very informative. You ended up suggesting – and I'm not sure where you got your numbers – that there were 139,000 students in 2004. So if we were to add 60,000 spaces, one might say: well, that's a 50 per cent increase in student spaces. Now, that would be counting traditional student spaces, of course, and I already indicated in the answer to the opposition Advanced Education critic that what we're talking about in Advanced Education is the opportunity for every Albertan to advance their education. It's not just postsecondary in the traditional way that you talk about. It's not just university, college, technical institutes. There need to be opportunities for more adult Albertans to get literacy skills. There need to be opportunities for Albertans to have other learning opportunities. So while I appreciate the numbers, they don't tell the whole story.

Nonetheless, we do need to move to create those spaces, and those spaces are going to be created in a number of different ways. Spaces is probably a bad way to describe it; they're actually learning opportunities. There are a number of ways of doing that: by increasing community learning programs, by increasing the accessibility to trade skills programs. We're increasing apprenticeships by adding spaces in the traditional way. We've committed a lot of resources and will continue to commit resources to building the water building at the University of Lethbridge and redoing the Cousins Building at Lethbridge Community College and those sorts of areas.

So we're addressing the issue of accessibility, but I think the hon. member really in his remarks hit at the real nature of the issue, and that is that as we move to increase the participation rate to have more Alberta students finish high school and transition to postsecondary and more Albertans participate in the postsecondary system, we get those numbers up, and that's the real issue. Then we have to make sure that the learning opportunities are available for them. So we have to be talking about all three aspects of the system – access, quality, and affordability – and it all fits hand in glove. But we are moving very, very strongly to make sure that there are places available right across the spectrum.

Some of those will be electronic learning opportunities: a lot of colleges and universities working together in eCampus Alberta; Athabasca University working very hard to make sure that learning opportunities are available that way; Northern Lakes operating to make sure that in all of the communities they serve, there are learning opportunities. So a number of different ways of making sure that those spaces are available. I think the numbers are very interesting and put an interesting perspective on it. I can assure the hon. member that that's really one of our very important tasks.

The second question he raised was with respect to why we weren't bringing forward a budget with respect to tuition fees. The hon. member will know that we're in the middle of the year, that the postsecondary grants have gone out to the postsecondaries. Yes, we could, I suppose, give them a supplemental grant in the middle of the year, but it's much more appropriate to budget that sort of process as part of the ongoing budget process. That would be my intention, to deal with the broad-based grants to institutions in that way rather than trying to shoehorn it into the 1 per cent contingency allowance that we have on the operating side of our budget.

What we really have here is an opportunity, because of the surplus revenues that go by law into the sustainability fund unless they're allocated to the capital fund, to allocate some of those surplus revenues into the access to the future fund, into the scholarship fund. We've done that. We've allocated, I think, a billion dollars so far into those two funds and additional revenues as well into the ingenuity fund and into the AHFMR fund, which enhances educational opportunities for Albertans but also moves on the infrastructure that the hon. member indicated was so important. So I think it is more appropriate at this time, you know, coming forward with supplemental estimates, to deal with the monies that are available, the nonrenewable resource revenues that are available, in terms of allocating those dollars to the capital fund and to the endowment funds rather than to deal with the ongoing operational side, where we're limited to 1 per cent of the contingency allowance.

Now, the hon. member's seatmate yelled out "prosperity bonuses," and I think the hon. member as well alluded to the context of a tax reduction in the amount of about $1.4 billion. I assume that he's alluding to the prosperity bonus as well. That, indeed, is going to be done in accordance with the act that's before the House as a one-time tax refund because as the hon. member knows, you can't reduce tuition fees on an ongoing, every-year basis with one-time money. It doesn't work. But every student in Alberta will get a $400 prosperity bonus, so there is some assistance to them with their living costs, their cost of gas and utilities and, perhaps, the cost of tuition. So in some ways we have assisted students by doing the prosperity bonus.

Taking that $1.4 billion, which is, again, nonrenewable resource revenue, which is not consistent, year-to-year revenue, and talking about it in terms of an operational budget just means that you haven't quite got the picture of how budgeting happens. So I'd say it again. We have nonrenewable resource revenue, which if we don't allocate it – we allocate $4.75 billion of nonrenewable resource revenue to program spending, that's the limit under the Fiscal Responsibility Act. The rest of it goes into the sustainability fund and can be allocated to the capital fund, which we've done. It can be allocated to savings, and we've put about $1.4 billion, by my recollection, into savings in terms of the access to the future fund, in terms of the scholarship fund, both very important investments for Alberta students.

I think we are giving a message to students that postsecondary is important. I think he said: why don't we put something behind our words? We have. A 30 per cent increase in the operating budget this year, next year, and the year after is huge, absolutely, fundamentally huge in terms of the process. Is there more work to be done? Absolutely. Words are followed up by commitments. Those words have been followed up very, very strongly by commitments not just to continuing the tuition rebate but to funding appropriately institutions so that they can provide quality learning opportunities for students.

In terms of the numbers that the hon. member used, he suggested that it would cost $250 million to cut the tuition fees back 50 per cent, I think, and my quick math is slightly different than his. My quick math suggested that it would be more like $860 million, perhaps even a little higher than that, if you go by the fact that about an average 5 per cent increase, which we rebated last year, cost $43 million. If you made that 10 per cent, that would be $86 million. That was about a $250 rebate. The maximum increase for tuition fees last year was somewhere around $250. Closer to $284, actually. So that $284 increase cost us $43 million. That was just in the public institutions. That didn't include the private, not-for-profit institutions. Anyway, I don't want to quibble about numbers, but I'd suggest that he's way low on the estimate.

With respect to the $4.6 million reduction in student relief benefit, that is a puzzle. That is something that we do need to get to the bottom off, and we're doing it in the affordability review and the affordability policy for next spring in accordance with tuition. What that basically means is that we've had to make a smaller allocation for future costs of student loans, which means among other things that perhaps the default rates have gone down. What this is is a provision for future cost. It's an accounting entry which allows us to book the future costs to government of the loans that have gone out, and those future costs to government come in loans that are not repaid. They're future liabilities for loan relief completion payments and defaults. That's basically what it covers. There are some other areas that fall into that.

The long and short of it is that what that may suggest is that students are not taking up loan funding at the same level we might have otherwise expected them to. Or perhaps it's a more positive thing and says that they're actually paying loans back at a higher, faster rate and that there are fewer losses. There are some interesting things to look into there, and I can assure the hon. member that we are looking through that to find out what's going on there and to find out if we can redeploy those monies in future years, perhaps, into other types of assistance or support or other types of opportunities for students.

Now, just so the hon. member will know, student relief was about $35.4 million. Student loans and financial assistance was in the nature of $483 million. So there's a significant amount of money going out to students. This $4.6 million is basically an accounting. It's in essence what you might in other circumstances call an allowance for doubtful accounts, and we've been able to reduce that allowance and thus free up some of the resources to be able to use in the current year for other important spending opportunities.

Quality of four-year degrees: absolutely an important, important issue. The hon. member touched on the other aspect of that, which is equally important, and that's transferability. First of all, we're very, very comfortable that the quality council of Alberta has been constituted well. It's got some stellar people on it, and it's going to be recognized as being leading edge in terms of quality assurance in terms of the degree programs.

Yes, any institution that's offering a degree is going to have to get degree respectability. They're going to have to earn that degree respectability, but fortunately we have some great platforms to work off. Grant MacEwan has been doing great work and is recognized in the business community and the community at large as having top-notch learning opportunities for students. So their existing programs are well received, the existing quality of their work is well received, and we fully expect that that reception for their programs will be translated into the new programs that they offer, so they will have respectability in our community.

We also expect that they will have acceptability across the country. I know that the president is making it his priority to talk to other institutions across the country and work with them to make sure that they know of the quality of MacEwan degrees. So I am very, very confident that students with those degrees will be accepted, but as you point out, most people are not necessarily transferring to a further degree program. The degree acceptance in the community is extremely important. Luckily, Grant MacEwan, Mount Royal, and our other institutions all have stellar reputations in our community and are well known for the quality of graduates that they have.

Transferability is a very important issue. Alberta is well ahead of the pack in terms of our Council on Admissions and Transfer. But there's always more work to be done to ensure that there's a seamless opportunity for students, that prior learning can be assessed. For example, people going into the trades should know that after they've had a career in the trades, if they've amassed knowledge and experience, that knowledge and experience should count for something if they want to go back into the learning system to pick up another credential or to acquire other knowledge, skills, and abilities. So we work very hard on that area. We've got a stellar group of people, again, in counselling, admissions, and transfers, headed by Mrs. Lucille Walters, and doing a very good job. Always more to be done in that area.

Certainly, within the province it works a lot better than it does across the country, so Alberta again will be working across the country to make sure that our transferability, not just on our degree programs but even from one college to another, works a lot better for students. That's very important.

Grant MacEwan. I dealt with the quality issue, but there was a reference to the $8.1 million. I'm sure the hon. member will understand that when we talk about the one-time costs of recruiting staff, we're not talking about the ongoing salary of staff. There's a difference. But there are costs of recruiting staff: setting up offices, making space available, all those sorts of things. Those are the one-time costs of recruiting staff, and that would be in on this side.

We have indicated to Grant MacEwan that they will receive funding for the student spaces they make available and that that funding is what will go into their ongoing operational funding, which will be used to pay for consumables and for staff salaries and those sorts of things. In setting up a program, there are one-time costs. Because we want to encourage institutions to do this, we agreed to participate in helping to pay some of the one-time costs rather than have them take them out of their normal operating budget.

I dealt with the $80.5 million in infrastructure, so I'd be pleased to answer any other questions you might have.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you. I want to thank the minister for the detailed response to my observations and questions. The issue of accessibility and the number of spaces that are needed in this province is a critical one, and there are some numbers here that the minister might find helpful, although I'm sure his very competent department staff do have some of those numbers.

Alberta has the lowest university participation rate in Canada. It's about 15.8 per cent. These are from the government's own numbers. Only 43 per cent of high school students move on to postsecondary education in Alberta, the lowest rate in Canada. A major contributing factor, obviously, is the cost of education, not just tuition but the overall cost of education. The minister is quite aware of that. While absolute numbers have been rising with the population increase, on a per capita basis the number of bachelor's degrees awarded in Alberta is 17 per cent below the national average.

Alberta has the highest high school dropout rates in Canada. Only 66.5 per cent of students earn a high school diploma in three years in Alberta compared to a 75.6 per cent national average. Imagine if our high school graduation rate moved up to the national average. There would be even greater demand and pressure on the accessibility side of the equation in this province.

Getting more students who graduate to college, university, some sort of technical program does require financing. Many students do take advantage of the Students Finance Board provisions for loans. To get more of them there, I think that if we moved to grants more than to loans, it would certainly make a difference and would encourage more students to come in.

This decrease by $4.6 million in the student loan relief benefit program can be interpreted many ways, and I appreciate that the minister has tried to speculate on why it might be that we are projecting a drop in the need for providing relief to the tune of $4.6 million to the end of this fiscal year. One possibility is that, in fact, more and more students who find it extremely hard to take advantage of education – some are not turning up to enter the postsecondary system – are dropping out sooner than they need to. But we do need a more firm explanation of why it is that the need for loan relief is going down. It can't be because the costs have become more bearable. We know that the costs have been going up exponentially. We have been hearing that from students. The minister himself has heard about it at his forum and from many other sources. So I think we need some firmer and more clear answers to the question.

To me it's worrisome unless we get clear answers as to why it is that that need seems to have dropped this year. I don't know what happened over the last few years, if this is the first time it's happened, or if there's a pattern over the last few years that we need to look at. The minister has the resources to do that kind of research, and certainly it will be very helpful for us to know why it is that it's happening.

The one last comment that I want to make, Mr. Chairman, has to do with the overall deferred maintenance costs bill. It's close to a billion dollars, according to my numbers here. This comes from a submission of the Confederation of Alberta Faculty Associations, August 2005, to Alberta Advanced Education as part of the Learning Alberta exercise that the minister has just gone through. Only about 45 per cent of postsecondary education facilities are in good condition; 55 per cent are not in what is rated as good condition.

So these are some of the numbers that I hope the minister will take another look at and see how we need to respond to that.

I'll conclude, Mr. Chairman, my comments.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Well, of course, I certainly appreciate, again, the homework that the hon. member has done. I'm certainly well aware of the deferred maintenance issues. I understand from the hon. member's comments that he is excited about the fact that we've been provided with more resources, asking the Legislature to confirm that provision of more resources so that we can deal with some of the deferred maintenance issues and ensure the quality of learning spaces and teaching spaces for students and for professors and teachers in our province. We have work to do in that area. We know we have work to do in that area, and I'm sure that the hon. member, then, won't mind one bit if, as a result of the third quarter we find additional revenues available, we make some announcements with respect to additional programs and come back to the Legislature again for approval of those.

There has been some real and implied criticism of the government for moving ahead and governing and providing resources to deal with just those issues that the hon. member has raised. I'm really pleased that he has indicated indirectly, if not directly, his support for our continuing to govern in that way and to make those commitments as the resources are available and to move ahead with those dearly needed projects as and when we can acquire the resources to do so. So thank you for that.

With respect to the drop, I don't think it helps, really, to speculate. I think the hon. member is right. We should do more research and get the detailed information with respect to why the change, but understand, again, that that's an accounting provision equivalent to a loan loss type of provision or an allowance for doubtful accounts. There could be some aspect of that that is as a result of a decrease in the number of students requiring financial assistance, and that could come for a number of reasons. It could even be as a result of a stronger economy, perhaps, that fewer students take up loans.

The interesting thing is that we do need to do more work, and that's why we will be working through the winter, taking some of the information and certainly the visions and the frameworks that we got out of the summit process that we've just gone through and coming forward with an affordability in tuition policy in the spring. We will be doing the research to see what we need to do to make sure that finances are not a barrier to any student getting an education.

That's the mantra we have. I believe it's in place. We've got a very good group of people in student learner assistance. There's always a glitch on an individual basis, and they work very, very hard to deal with those when they're brought to their attention, but for the most part the system works well for the students that apply and need assistance to get an education. It's a decent system. It's a very, very good system, as a matter of fact, and it works well for most people, but we have to make sure that it works well for all people who need it, and we're working very hard to make sure that that is the case.

I'm not sure that I can accept at face value the member's assertion that the major contributing factor to a 15 per cent university rate or a 43 per cent transition to postsecondary or the highest dropout rate in the country is because the cost of postsecondary is too high. I'm sorry. That's not the reality that anybody is aware of. There's no research to back up that assertion.

In fact, we do need to work very, very hard. Moving to the national average of high school completion and transition to postsecondary is not acceptable. We need to move to a point where every Albertan or a very significant number graduate from high school. If 70 per cent of the new jobs in a knowledge-based economy in the future are going to require some form of postsecondary, then that's what we need to aspire to, for Albertans to reach those levels. That's going to take considerable resources and considerable work.

So again I thank the hon. member for his support in our getting those resources so that we can continue to do the work both budget to budget and in year, as and when resources are available.

Dr. Pannu: I never made the assumption that the low rate of completion of high school can somehow be explained by the cost of postsecondary education. What I said was: imagine if our high school completion rate went up, if we succeeded, using whatever means, in increasing that rate to the national average, to 70 per cent from 66 per cent, how much more demand there will be for spaces and opportunities at the postsecondary level. That's the point that I made.

The second point that I want to make to the minister – there's some confusion in the minister's mind. When I referred to $1.4 billion, I wasn't referring to the actions that the government has taken now but to the projected cuts in corporate taxes that the government has already stated its intention to bring back in the new budget. What that means is a minimum of $1.4 billion annual loss to the public Treasury if those corporate tax cuts are introduced in the coming budget. I juxtaposed the readiness of the government to lose that $1.4 billion on an annual basis with what it'll cost to roll back the tuition fees by 50 per cent.

My numbers are $250 million. The minister disputed that. Certainly, we can look at those numbers if they want. But I juxtaposed the government's reluctance to go in the direction of increasing costs of funding postsecondary institutions by $250 million to achieve the 50 per cent reduction in tuition but, at the same time, its willingness and readiness to lose $1.4 billion on an annual basis, every year, from the public Treasury if it proceeded, before it does anything about postsecondary education, with tax cuts to corporations.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd be pleased to discuss next year's budget when next year's budget is presented. If there is indeed a $1.4 billion corporate tax cut at that time, I will be pleased to discuss that in the context of what, if any, increase there might be for postsecondary education. I think that would be an appropriate discussion for that point in time.

Right now we're talking about supplementary estimates, and I was explaining the difference between our ability to budget out of the contingency allowance and what was available on the surplus side. That's why I assumed that he was on the same page as I was and was talking about that side. I apologize if I misapprehended him. But I will be here, hopefully, to discuss supply next February, March, or April when it comes forward.

With respect to his assertion that we would need more space if we got up to national graduation standards and transition standards, oh happy day that we could get there. I think that's what we ought to aspire to. All of us ought to be working towards encouraging our young people to complete their education and to move to postsecondary in whatever their passion might be, whether it's welding, whether it's art, whether it's political science, economics, building houses, whatever it might be. We need to encourage more of our young people. If we could get not to the national average but to a point where every young person graduates from high school, that would be a great day. I'm sure every member of this House would be more than happy to foot the bill that would be required to provide the spaces for them to move to postsecondary.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Just one very brief note because I'm anxious to move on. I would like to offer a revolutionary suggestion to this minister and the House. Consider discussing the budget in this House before approving projects and spending the money rather than seeking after the fact rubber-stamping approval.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, no provincial Legislature in this country sits every day of the year. If you compare it to other comparable jurisdictions, some states in the United States sit every two years, sit once a spring session every two years. Different budgets are done in different ways.

One of the things the hon. member ought to understand is the difference between the government and the Legislature. Governments are taxed with the opportunity and the responsibility of governing, and they are accountable to the Legislature. We have been governing, and now we're accounting.

The Chair: After considering the 2005-2006 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and the lottery fund for the Department of Advanced Education for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Agreed to:
Expense and Equipment/Inventory Purchases $99,000,000

The Chair: Shall the vote be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Gaming

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Gaming.

Mr. Graydon: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Good afternoon. It's a pleasure to answer questions on behalf of the Minister of Finance requesting a supplemental amount of $75 million for Gaming. The government has announced the uses of this $75 million, but I'll be happy to recap. It's very brief. It's only three items really.

Seventy million dollars is requested to provide funding assistance for two of our well-known and far-reaching agricultural societies in the province. Northlands Park and Calgary Exhibition and Stampede will each receive $35 million for capital redevelopment projects. This funding is part of the province's investment in centennial projects.

Northlands plans to build a new exhibition facility to meet the increasing needs of a growing region. They'll continue to host millions of visitors at numerous events for years to come. The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede will use the funding for upgrades to the Roundup Centre as part of their major expansion plans to continue holding world-class events throughout the year.

Northlands and Stampede, both rooted in agriculture, have demonstrated community spirit and continue to enhance the lifestyle of Albertans. Mr. Chairman, we are very fortunate in Alberta to have these facilities and an overall wonderful quality of life, but as we've seen recently, other countries have not been so fortunate. The additional $10 million is being requested for two disaster assistance payments. The province committed $5 million each for urgent funding assistance for relief efforts following Hurricane Katrina and the devastating earthquake in Pakistan. Alberta Gaming has provided the disaster funds and now needs to increase our spending authority accordingly to continue with the Gaming ministry's program delivery.

In total, the funding commitment outlined previously amounted to $80 million. However, Gaming is only asking for $75 million in supplemental spending as the ministry has identified $5 million in our budget that will not be spent this year and will be used to partially offset the planned incremental spending.

Those are the few things that I have in my supplementary estimate request before you today. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Tougas: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the minister's brevity here, since we have a limited amount of time and a lot of questions to ask on the following. So thank you very much.

Just a few brief questions about Northlands and the Stampede. These are very large organizations that know well in advance that they need money, so I'm not quite sure why they need supplemental funding. I'm sure they knew years ago – or they've been working on this for some time – that they're going to need this money. Why isn't it in the budget from last year or the next year or something along those lines? These are big organizations. We're not talking about little guys who are just making it up as they go along. These are major organizations. I think they should be required to plan a little bit better rather than just going to the government and saying: can you give us a certain amount of money? This is a very large amount of money that we're talking about here. Yes, they do a lot of good work, but I think they should be held to a standard that the others are held to as well.

As for the money for Hurricane Katrina and the earthquake in Pakistan, nobody can argue with that. I just wonder if in the future you might want to establish a disaster relief fund using lottery money. It seems like we're getting more and more disasters all the time. If we could have a chunk of lottery money just held there and the interest used over several years – put in $20 million, $50 million, or something like that that can be used instead of putting it into supplemental budgeting all the time because we are seemingly in an endless string of disasters, and we're going to have a lot more requests for money along those lines.

4:20

Briefly, I need a quick explanation: "Offsetting these increases is a $5,000,000 reduction in lottery funded programs consisting of $4,000,000 from the First Nations Development Fund grant program and $1,000,000 in grants for Bingo Associations." I'm not quite sure where this money comes from. Are they losing their funding? Maybe you can just explain that to me because I'm really unclear as to what that's all about.

I'll sit down so you can answer my questions. Thank you.

Mr. Graydon: First off, Mr. Chairman, with Northlands and the Stampede these requests have been in for many years. They were just beyond our capability to fund in the normal course of events. We certainly have helped them out over the last few years. I believe that in this year's budget there was $10 million to those two organizations, but their requests far exceeded what we were able to do in a normal budget year. However, with the unanticipated surplus and unbudgeted surplus that we're seeing right now and it being centennial year, it was felt appropriate that we could finally step up to the plate, if you will, and fund the requests that they had been making for several years.

The question of disasters. I did have the pleasure of presenting the $5 million cheque to President Clinton along with the Premier in Calgary, and I have to tell you that he was so grateful and so appreciative that a province of our size would come to the aid of that particular disaster. It happened to be the same day that we'd also announced that we were giving $5 million to the Pakistan disaster, the earthquake there. I believe he had a tear in his eye, and he said: you know, I can't believe how generous you are. The world is getting disaster burnout. As you've said, there have been three this year, I believe. The first one was the one in the Philippines and now Katrina and Pakistan. He said: you know, the people in Pakistan, a huge disaster, probably more children affected in that one than anything else. People weren't at that point, a month or so ago, really stepping up to the plate the way they had been with the previous ones. He said: for the province of Alberta to make this significant contribution very early on shows the heart of the people of Alberta. He recognized and everyone was recognizing that we are getting disaster burnout.

Since that time we have had some discussions and we will have more discussions about doing something through the Wild Rose fund. It's lottery money, but it deals with international events such as this, and we are looking at and exploring exactly what you've said, that maybe we should establish a disaster relief fund, if you will, under the Wild Rose guidelines so that it could be sitting there and we could access it without doing the process that we're doing now with the supplementary estimates.

The lapsed funds for First Nations and bingo halls. Basically, for the First Nations it was money that we thought we would take in, but obviously we're not going to because their projects aren't along far enough, so we won't be seeing that revenue. Revenue counts as an expense in the lottery fund. It's kind of a different way. Always hard to get that through my head, but it does. So we will not be seeing revenue from the First Nations fund this year. Bingo revenues are down considerably because of the smoking legislation enacted in Edmonton and the surrounding region, so that's revenue that we don't see coming in this year because of that legislation, which took effect on July 1, I believe.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to have this opportunity to discuss with the hon. Minister of Gaming the reasons why some organizations would receive money under these supplementary requests and others would not. Certainly, this member would like to commend the department for their initiatives regardless of whether it's to Louisiana or to the earthquake which unfortunately occurred in Pakistan.

But there are disasters occurring daily not only in this city but across the province. I would consider disastrous our treatment to date of homeless people and the whole issue around homelessness. I would encourage the hon. minister and his department to be much more generous in the future in funding initiatives that will reduce – we will never eliminate, but we certainly can reduce – the amount of homelessness that is unfortunate in both the city of Edmonton and the city of Calgary. I would remind not only the minister but all hon. members of this Assembly that charity begins at home, and we have a lot of work to do in this province. If we do have surplus money in the future, I would plead with the hon. minister at this time: let's not forget the people who live in this province, regardless of their age, who are homeless.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister?

After considering the 2005-2006 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and the lottery fund for the Department of Gaming for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Agreed to:
Expense	$75,000,000
Lottery fund payments	$5,000,000

The Chair: Shall the vote be reported?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Infrastructure and Transportation

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure and Transportation.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. We have a very large sum of money that I am going to be asking the Legislative Assembly for approval of today. There's roughly $527 million that is there for operating expense and equipment and inventory purchases. There's another $231 million for the capital investment vote. I'm going to attempt to give you broad outlines as to what those dollars are used for, and where appropriate or where the opposition would like me to delve down into it, I certainly will.

First of all, the allocation of the $527 million for operating. Thirty and a half million dollars of this is required to address operations and maintenance pressures. It is broken down as follows. Six and a half million dollars for property operations. Mr. Chair, property operations is responsible for day-to-day operations and maintenance of government-owned facilities. What we're seeing in our own facilities is something that's very similar right around the province; that is, we're seeing costs escalate. To date, up until now, we have kept cutting back and cutting back on these facilities, but there comes a point in time when we do need to increase the costs just to keep them running, and that 6 and a half million dollars is for that.

There's also $6.2 million for lease of government space. What we've seen is an increased demand around the province for facilities, and I'll give you an example. There's planning and study for the replacement of Henwood, which is an AADAC facility, for a hundred thousand dollars. There are lease positions to AADAC in Cold Lake. There are ARC upgrade ventilation hoods and so on and so on, Mr. Chair. That goes right throughout the massive amount of government buildings and space that we look after.

There's also $10 million for capital and accommodation projects. This is also for changes that have occurred in government. Again, there are various locations around the province where we are looking at finding new lease space, doing some rental upgrades, basically doing management of the properties, Mr. Chair.

There's also $500,000 for the Caroline highway maintenance yard, which we have to complete. Remediation is required. There was a spill of some gas and oil over the past 25 or 30 years, as has happened in numerous places. We're looking for $500,000 to remediate that, which, obviously, is of critical importance to our environment.

There's also $5.4 million for the provincial highways system, and this quite simply is for operation and maintenance. The same trucks that are going on the road are seeing the same increase in fuel costs, the same increase in labour costs that everyone in Alberta is, and this is simply to accommodate that.

Lastly, we have $1.8 million for transportation safety services and the traffic safety initiative. This is involved with the impaired driving and child traffic safety programs, that I'm sure everyone in this House supports.

Mr. Chair, there's also $50 million in operating for something that we have classified as small infrastructure requirements. I'll give you an example. In Camrose there was a seniors' lodge that has seen a huge amount of inflation. They had the lodge basically about half up, yet they were $500,000 short in the amount of money that they received, and they couldn't finish it. That $500,000 went to the Rose City disability society, I believe, or something along that line, so that's operating. We also helped finish off a lodge in Athabasca, and exactly the same thing had occurred. A lot of these volunteer facilities, in essence, have seen huge increases in their costs because of the same inflationary pressures that we've seen right across the province, and we've given grants to these people under operating.

There's also $54 million for water and waste-water infrastructure projects and Water for Life projects. Mr. Chair, these have not been allocated out. We're requesting permission from the Legislative Assembly to use this $54 million. There's also $17.2 million included in this number from the federal government, which is the federal funding for the cities and communities program. Quite simply, it comes in to us and simply flows through. We do have to put it through a supplementary estimate because it does come into my budget, but it is federal dollars that come forward.

Lastly – and I think that this one, certainly, probably does not even deem a question – is $375 million for the natural gas rebate program. What we've seen is the amount of dollars go up hugely from the original budgeted amount. We initially budgeted for $1.50 a gigajoule, which is based on a market price of between $5.50 and $7.50. With the current prices we're budgeting with this $375 million for rebates of $3.51 per gigajoule in October, $4 per gigajoule in November, and a forecasted rebate of $3.25 per gigajoule for the months of December to March. Obviously, that's averaged over that time frame.

We also have an estimated $231 million in the capital side of my department. There's $3 million for remediation to the Turner Valley gas plant, and I think everyone in this Assembly has heard the issue about the hydrocarbons that are potentially leaking out.

There's $180 million for provincial highway systems, and $50 million of this, again, is what we call small projects. I'll give you an example. In Okotoks, when I went to the town of Okotoks, the most critical issue there was a set of traffic lights. It was a turn lane and a set of traffic lights, and the total cost for that was around $200,000 or $300,000. So, Mr. Chair, we're looking at doing a lot of these irritants around the province. We've got traffic lights. We've got interchanges. We've got all these different types right around the province that we're doing. We're looking at purchasing an AADAC building in Calgary. So that's where those are.

There's also $30 million that we have built into this budget purely to accommodate inflation and cost escalations on road projects. We have not spent this money. This money has not been spent yet, but it is there because we all know the cost escalations. We all know the impact of these road projects. If needed, we will be using these dollars. This is a very important and a critical issue when it comes to road building because we are seeing close to a 20 per cent inflation this year.

There's also $100 million there for provincial highway projects, and this varies right across the province. It's highway projects from one end right to the other, almost dead on, bang on at $100 million.

There's $48.2 million that is there for the strategic economic corridor, and this includes $30 million for the Wood Buffalo resource region. I know the hon. member had asked me about this in a previous question period. The reason for $30 million when $200 million has actually been put forward is that this is all that we can spend this year. We have had some issues with weather. We've had some issues with not enough engineering, and obviously on these projects we have to do the engineering before we can follow with the project. We're putting on an extensive push for engineering projects this winter in a hope to really accelerate what is happening in Wood Buffalo and Fort McMurray in particular.

There's also $18.2 million for cost and scope changes to the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. And before the opposition jumps and leaps and does all of these other things, this is not the P3 component on the Anthony Henday. This is the part that we did conventional financing on, and we have actually added some interchanges. We added one interchange in particular where the developer put in $3 million, so we sped that up. We had some increased costs to develop the road in Edmonton, and the combination of that was basically $18.2 million. It's money that is well spent because it enables it to be more of a free flow on both of these roads.

Mr. Chair, that pretty well summarizes the amount of money that we're asking for. It is a very large amount of money, but I feel that it's money that is extremely well spent and will be well spent in the future. The advantage of my particular department is that we have a lot of projects on tap. There's been a lot of talk about unbudgeted surplus, but when surplus dollars come in, my department is an excellent place to put those dollars because we have projects that are ready to go tomorrow. If we get unbudgeted surplus in July, we can still do road projects up until October, November. If we get unbudgeted surplus in November, we cannot build roads in December, January, February. We have to wait until the next summer. So it makes sense that we get an extra three or four months of road building when that unbudgeted surplus is allocated to us in July after the first quarter. If we were to wait until this particular time when the Legislature sits, we would not be able to build these roads until next year, hence adding a full year for people to wait on these road building projects.

So, Mr. Chair, that's a summary of how we're spending the money. I know that there's a shortage of time, so I'd be more than happy to take any questions and/or get any information that the opposition is looking for. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I would highly recommend seasonal sittings for this House so that we could approve the budgets so that when spring does arrive, we can have the dump trucks, graders out there doing the road building.

I'm very aware that we are discussing millions of taxpayer dollars every minute. I don't expect the minister to on the floor at this time orally respond to the questions I'll raise. I would very much appreciate a written response following the receipt of Hansard.

We have witnessed the interim budget, the spring budget, the napkin ad hoc surplus billions budget, and now the supplementary estimates. With the exception of acts of God, such as two once-in-a-lifetime twice-in-a-week flooding costs this spring, budgets should be predictable. This particular budget in general has gone three-quarters of a billion dollars beyond the spring budget. We sometimes wonder: what was the point of the spring budget? I would like this government to be looking in a more visionary, sustainable manner and, rather than one-time rebates or one-time projects, consider creating capital endowment funds, as it has done with the heritage fund and the medical endowment funds, that would provide for sustainable funding when resource revenues drop, as they will in the future. I would reference our website, where the details of the 35/35/25/5 plan are spelled out.

I would like to thank the minister for recognizing the importance of transferring a degree of the infrastructure control back to the departments of education and health, supporting those two departments in seeing projects dealt with in a speedy, approved fashion. I think that was a very good move, and I thank the minister for that. Would the minister commit to providing my office with a detailed list of the projects regarding the $54 million for addressing small, emerging capital expense needs?

Regarding the new deal for cities funding, while this initiative is a step in the right direction, this will not be enough to satisfy the growing stresses on municipalities. We need to continue to look at sustainable funding opportunities such as making room for municipalities by reducing the school property tax. This has been brought forward by the Minister of Municipal Affairs. I would certainly support going that route; however, I don't want it to happen at the expense of education funding. If we're going to give that taxing ability back to the municipalities, then please fund education out of general revenue.

[Mr. Johnson in the chair]

This spring and summer I sent out requests to municipalities, school boards, health regions, and parks and protected areas staff asking them to list their top three infrastructure priorities. I received a large number of responses from cities and towns, health regions, and school boards. Unfortunately, the Ministry of Community Development didn't permit employees to respond.

I will quickly highlight some of the areas that I hope are addressed in these four pages, but due to the extremely brief, generic, very few municipality name or district references I have no way of telling whether these infrastructure concerns have been addressed in these supplementary estimates. Again, I would refer the minister to Hansard. If he could, please, by reading the Hansard, respond in writing to these questions.

I want to bring out the problems that were brought out by school districts in terms of their infrastructure needs and the problems of the municipalities. If these have been addressed within the supplementary budget estimates, I'll be very pleased, as will the local municipalities. One of the biggest problems in school districts is portables. In Calgary there are 507 portables, of which 90 per cent were built pre 1997 and do not conform to current building codes. Calgary Catholic, Calgary public, Parkland, and Wild Rose listed them in their number one priorities. I'm not sure whether they have begun to be addressed in the supplementary estimates.

Audit upgrades. Apparently, the government completed facility audits in 1999 and 2000, yet many facilities have yet to complete upgrades. Prairie Rose regional division lists installation of sprinkler systems, replacement of fire alarm systems, lab ventilation systems, installations and upgrades, and electrical system upgrades as still outstanding. Six schools in Northern Lights have not had audit upgrades completed.

With reference to structural, mechanical, and electrical maintenance most divisions that have responded have noted that deferred maintenance costs have contributed to increased overall costs and that current amounts are simply not adequate to address current needs, let alone deferred work. The Calgary boards, public and separate, have a deferred maintenance debt of more than half a billion dollars.

There's the issue of new schools. Calgary public would require 24 in the next three years if we used the provincial utilization rates formula. These are needed. There are 40 communities without schools currently in Calgary. As well as replacement or modernization of four major schools Grande Prairie requires three new schools and modernization and redevelopment of four others. Northern Lights requires four new schools.

Modernization. Almost all districts listed outstanding modernization and redevelopment of existing facilities as a priority. This goes hand in hand with outstanding audit upgrades and also preventing districts from accomplishing best utilization of facilities.

Funding for admin and support facilities. Two districts noted that they did not receive any funding for their facilities.

Utility costs. This is a tremendously large concern, and I'm glad the minister referenced that $30 million because hopefully this will go toward covering these utility costs. As costs continue to increase over time, this must be addressed in the long term. Costs have climbed from about 7 per cent of total budget in 2000 to about 15 to 16 per cent last year. Rescue funding makes budgeting difficult – this is rescue funding: supplementary estimates – and funds are drawn from other priorities to address utility costs. We need long-term solutions. Address inflation. Build it in.

Municipalities have a number of concerns. I will not take up the House's time with all these concerns. I'd like to highlight a few. Water, sewage, and waste water: Drayton Valley, Grande Prairie, Okotoks, Olds, and Wetaskiwin all require substantial funds for these projects. While funds have decreased, regulations have become more onerous, particularly for potable water.

Funding is also not adequate to address the needs of fast-growing communities. Deferred maintenance for municipalities is a major concern and a very costly one. This, again, is a common theme. In areas such as Drayton Valley, Grande Prairie, and Fort McMurray there are comments about more rapid deterioration of existing roadways due to heavy commercial traffic and increased use by same. This requires increased dollars for maintenance, yet funding does not address this issue.

Another common theme is that the lack of funding for maintenance and rehabilitation for aging roads means that the costs of the same roads, et cetera, keep increasing as they deteriorate even further and faster. Funding does not seem to adequately address the growing traffic infrastructure needs of areas associated with or affected by strong economic industrial growth particularly due to the number and size of resource-industry vehicular traffic.

This spring I had the opportunity to drive out to Drayton Valley, and I crossed a large, two-lane, undivided bridge. Local Drayton Valley residents are extremely concerned about using this bridge when it rains or during the winter because of the huge logging trucks that go through the area and the huge gas and oil servicing rigs that pass this area. I would very much for Drayton Valley's sake like to see this bridge twinned. I know that lives could be saved as a result.

New traffic infrastructure. The minister referred to some of the new funding that he is providing, and I am pleased to hear that that is in place in Edmonton and in Calgary. We need funds to upgrade and build new infrastructure to meet new demands because currently that funding is inadequate. Long-term capital planning requires long-term commitments. Grande Prairie, in particular, has detailed the massive funding shortfalls even from what their acceptable capital planning shows is necessary.

Lastly, I'll not go into the health areas. Some of the concerns have been sort of addressed in an ad hoc fashion, but I just want to say to the minister: I will give you my complete support as soon as you wish to bring forward the implementation of the McDermid report. I will cheer for you in the same way as I cheered for the Member for Calgary-North Hill with regard to the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, Bill 39. This will save lives. It's a great initiative. Let's go for it.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much. I'll keep my comments very, very brief as I know that there are other people that probably want answers. Thank you for the support of the McDermid report. We're currently looking at how that can be implemented. Obviously, it is a report that is multifaceted and has a lot of issues with it. It's a very good report, and it's a report that I feel very strongly for. So we are currently looking at how that can be done.

Drayton Valley. The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar has made me fully aware of the issues out there on the bridge. Two things I will comment on. First of all, the road down to the bridge is what the main issue is, and we're certainly looking at what we can do to ensure that that road down there is much safer. The hon. member raised a very good point, and this was brought home to me by the logging trucks that are going through there.

The second point is bridge construction. I would ask the hon. member, if he has any connections to the federal Liberals that he will admit to, that we look at some rationality when it comes to building bridges. These people in Drayton Valley need a bridge. The problem we have is that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans is so onerous when it comes to building a bridge. It takes such a long time to get the approvals in place for building a bridge that it becomes very, very difficult. Our traffic patterns changed significantly over a very short period of time, and unfortunately we don't have the ability to respond by building a bridge when the DFO takes two, three, five years to give approval for going across any new waterway. So I quite simply ask the hon. member, if he admits, to talk to his federal counterparts and see if there is some rationality that we can get to that because there are people's lives that are at risk here.

Apart from that, Mr. Chair, I certainly will get back to the hon. member with the other questions that he has. I'll get back to him in writing, as requested.

Thank you.

4:50

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I want to thank the minister for specifically addressing the Drayton Valley bridge. I also want to thank the Ministry of Infrastructure and Transportation. I think the example that you've put forward in terms of the Stoney Trail bridge in Calgary – I really believe that this type of bridge is what is needed over the Tsuu T'ina area. This would be in the wetlands there by the Glenmore Reservoir. I think this type of bridge would receive quick federal approval. It's the type of infrastructure we need.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I will not go on too long, just three or four points. I know that the minister in the past has been a big advocate of P3s. I think the history of P3s – and we've had this discussion – has not been very favourable, whether it be in Nova Scotia or other places it's been tried, Britain and the rest of it, and I know the minister is well aware of the Calgary courthouse. I know he's trumped the Henday project, and even the Auditor General talks about it. It's hard to get a handle on these figures because the minister first announced, I think, $493 million. I think he stated at the time that traditionally it would be $497 million and they were saving $4 million. Then in the memo that we saw that went out, there was a wide range. So it gets very confusing. There was a $50 million difference there.

The point that we want to make and, I guess, one question is that – and the Auditor General talks about it – we have to have some handle on these figures much better than we do even to evaluate because over the long haul, when you're paying $30 million over a period of time, whether that's a debt or not, it's still money that comes out of the Treasury. So we have to evaluate these, I think, much clearer. My own assessment is probably that the traditional way works well. I think you just alluded to the fact that with a major project in Calgary you've gone back to what we call traditional financing. So I guess the question just in the very broad sense is: where do we stand with P3s as far as going into the future?

The other areas that I want to get some handle on – the minister used to have full control over schools, hospitals, universities, colleges, these sorts of things. Now it's a partnership, my understanding, but I'm not sure how the partnership works. Who is really in charge? I mean, I'm sure that the minister will say that there's co-operation between the ministers. For instance, to go into school buildings and utilization, I think both ministers of education and the minister of infrastructure in the spring session said that they were looking at the whole utilization, school closure, these sorts of things. So I'm wondering how much clout his department has in that area now. Really, who does call the shots in terms of what's happening in terms of hospitals, colleges, universities, and schools?

The last point I'd try to make, that's fairly clear, is – I'm trying to remember the infrastructure deficit that the minister brought to cabinet. I think it was something like – correct me if I'm wrong – $7 billion or $8 billion. That shouldn't have surprised us. I mean, the point is that if you don't put money into your infrastructure – and we haven't done that for a long time – you're going to have an infrastructure deficit. We worry about the economic deficit. There's a human deficit, that I've talked about, in terms of education and the rest of it. But you cannot catch up all at once. I think that's the problem that the minister is facing. This, again, has to be part of an overall budget over a five- or 10-year period. It's not always great to try to catch up when the economy is booming because then, as we know, you're dealing with inflated numbers, and the costs of government are much more.

I hate to sound like an old Keynesian economist, but we probably should have been putting some of that money in when we started to hit the skids, back in the lower '90s, because we would have had these programs, and they would have been much cheaper. I also recognize that you can't turn the clock back and you can't say: we're not going to do infrastructure now because roads are falling apart, schools, hospitals, the rest of it. So we're going to pay a premium price, but we have to balance that over a period of time.

I'm wondering, if it's a $7 billion deficit, when we will see sort of a long-range plan of that coming in the provincial budget rather than sort of hit and miss so that we can get some idea over a five- or a 10-year period what we're looking at in terms of dealing with that deficit.

There's a shortage of time, and I know that there are other groups coming up, Mr. Chair. I will sit down and either wait for the answers or get them later.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'll make the answers very brief. First of all, the hon. member has some reasonable comments about the P3. The $493 million public-sector comparator was not a very good figure. It was a figure that was shown in the Auditor General's report. We certainly could have done a better job, and on future P3 projects we'll ensure that the job done is better.

This was the first blush at it, and by all accounts the job that we got done, the deal that we got given to us or that we were involved in is something that is very, very positive now. That doesn't mean that we stop our due diligence on this one. The same process will take place. We will put it through Treasury Board to a committee of independent people to take a look at it and so on and so on, as the hon. member is well aware.

We are going to be looking at other P3s, but again each one is going to be on an individual basis. Quite simply – and I'll allude to the hon. member's last question – we do have an infrastructure debt and/or deficit in this province. There's probably somewhere close to $7 billion of work that could be done at this particular point in time. There's no way that I can sterilize my budget by simply saying: "Here's $500 million for the ring road. I'll take it out of my budget this way. Oh, by the way, Fort McMurray, you don't get anything. By the way, Brooks, Cardston, Calgary, you don't get anything because we've done it all this way."

So we do have to look at this type of financing in order to get the economic advantage that infrastructure gives to the province of Alberta. If we want to keep Alberta moving – no pun intended – we have to have the transportation routes to do this. We have to have the transportation available. By far the most important one, although there are lots of other ones such as air and rail, is our roads right now. The road to Fort McMurray, for example, has to be done. We've got to take a look at that. These are new roads; these are not upkeep of existing roads. They have to be done. So we have to find other ways in order to ensure that our roads are looked at, that our roads are done right around the province. We can't take $500 million for one large project and say to Edmonton: "Good on you guys in Edmonton. We're doing your roads. By the way, the rest of the province, no thank you."

The schools and hospitals. It's a good question. What the OC stated is that the schools, hospitals, postsecondary facilities are being co-managed between the departments of Education, Advanced Education, and Health and Wellness with the Department of Infrastructure and Transportation. To simplify this, what occurs is that the departments of Education, Advanced Education, and Health bring forward the requests to me, to my department. We then have input into it, and both ministers sign off on it as it goes forward. So the approval is mutual. One cannot go ahead without the approval of the other on either side. Mr. Chair, that's a very critical component of this.

The rationale behind it, I think, is very very sound, especially in health care facilities. When you build new facilities, there are also increased operating costs that go along with it. There has to be a recognition that there are the increased costs when you build a new facility. The best way to do that is to actually have you as a line department put out the money for the capital, and then you have to account for the operating expense as well.

So again, not being a hypocrite, Mr. Chair, that was one of the things that I put forward when I was minister of learning. I think that is going to work well. It probably has a little bit of growing pains, but I think that ultimately it's the right thing to do.

The hon. member asked about utilization. We essentially took out utilization when we put the operation and maintenance formula into a per-student basis and put it over to the Department of Education.

The infrastructure that needs to be built in the province, whether it's $7 billion, whether it's $10 billion, whether it's, you know, more than that – and I think the amounts could be argued depending on how you look at it. The bottom line in this province is that we need to see that number go down. That number can no longer go up; it must go down. It's critical. The infrastructure and transportation in this province are absolutely critical to the economic success, and we have to see and show that the transportation component and the infrastructure component are essential cogs in the wheel of the economic capability of this province. We cannot have an exporting province not have good transportation routes out. As everyone in this Assembly knows, Mr. Chair, we are an exporting province.

So it's my job, quite simply, to ensure that the number that I talked about goes down as opposed to goes up. I will do whatever is needed, whatever I can do to ensure that that happens. That means making deals with municipalities. It means looking at potential oil companies or forestry companies investing in our roads. It means getting the job done, and that's what has to occur in this province.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's with interest that I rise this afternoon to participate in the discussion on the supplementary budget for Infrastructure and Transportation. I realize that time is limited.

The minister did talk earlier about the $18 million for cost and scope changes to the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. My question is specific to the Edmonton ring road. I appreciate the hon. minister's willingness to provide any other information in regard to these projects. I would like to ask him through the chair: why is there a reported $43 million cost overrun on the ring road on the south side, the Anthony Henday Drive? What's costing this extra amount of money?

I'm astonished to hear that there is actually a shortage of cement powder. The economic activity is so intense that there is a shortage of cement powder, and sometimes the cement companies are on a quota system for the day for residential construction and for some of the road construction, so the cement powder that is going to Fort McMurray is an amount that keeps the activity going around the clock. If I could have some information on this $43 million cost overrun, I would be very grateful.

Also, the flyway that intersects – I've got to think about this. The Queen Elizabeth highway, the old highway 2, and the underpass that was constructed and opened just before the IAAF games in 2001 – hopefully, that portion of the underpass is temporary. I can't believe that the department would not be going after the contractor for inadequate work. There are at right angles to the traffic flow considerable dips and heaves in the pavement both in the southbound and northbound lanes on the east side of the highway and the west side of the highway.

That road, in my view, Mr. Chairman, is relatively new, and that should not be happening. It's to the point now where it is unsafe. I would like to know what is being done about that because I think it is shoddy work – it's only four years old – unless, of course, it's a temporary road and the compaction was done rather quickly because it was going to be ripped up to facilitate a new interchange or a new surface when everything is connected.

If I could have an answer to those questions, I would be very grateful, Mr. Chairman. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Dr. Oberg: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. First of all, with regard to the Q.E. II overpass, I will look into that. I have not been asked that question before, but if there is shoddy work, we certainly will look into that.

With regard to the cement the hon. member is absolutely right. What we saw this year is a huge increase in the cement costs. As he knows, the roadway is made out of cement because in doing the tender, we built in a time limit on it. For example, a cement road lasts 50 per cent longer, so we actually built that into the cost, and we paid for a road that is going to last 50 per cent longer.

One of the things that we didn't anticipate, though, was a lack of cement. That came out of the blue, and we didn't really see that one coming, and it has cost us more dollars. There's $18 million in this estimate for it. Whether or not the number is $43 million can be argued, but certainly we did get caught on inflationary prices. Another thing that we got caught on is gravel, and we got caught on cement.

The point that I'm leading to, though, is that the hon. member has just made a wonderful case for P3s. If what has occurred is with a P3, any of those problems that he just alluded to are all the responsibility of the contractors. The contractor has a legal obligation, and we have the legal right to go after them if there is shoddy work. If the price of cement goes up, it is the responsibility of the contractor; it is not our responsibility. The other very key component to the P3 is that we have a timeline, and I've mentioned this in the House before. In October of 2007 if that road is not done, on November 1 the fine is a million dollars, on December 1 the fine is another million dollars, and so on and so on. So, Mr. Chair, the hon. member has made a very good case from not a dollar point of view but from a quality point of view as to why P3s are beneficial to the citizens of Edmonton.

The problem that we have with the Q.E. II, because it's been four years, if it is rolly like that, we have no recourse back to the contractor because typically there's only a one- or two-year guarantee on these roads. On the Anthony Henday P3 we have a 30-year guarantee, so we have the ability to go back to the contractor within the first 30 years, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. You've brought some new issues to the table that I guess I'll address first. I don't see any reason why the government can't make the same contract with a private company you've hired as with a P3, why you cannot have a 30-year contract. As far as fines and quality, as you're well aware, they didn't meet the deadlines on the highway going through Magrath at a great cost to the community. Your letter stated that you weren't responsible for reimbursing those areas. I would think that what we should be looking at is that the government then definitely needs to be making better contracts and asking for 30-year ones, not one or two years and letting them off the hook.

Anyways, we definitely have an infrastructure problem here in the province, and one of the frustrations, I guess, in talking to municipal governments in some of those areas is that it seems like we're losing our common sense on some of these approaches, and we've almost monopolized the road maintenance to big corporations that aren't being as efficient as they could, and because so few can bid on it, the costs are going up.

I'll give you one example down in my area where two secondary highways – there's a 10-kilometre stretch between them that isn't secondary and isn't paved, so the municipal government has to go out 20 kilometres to do 10 kilometres because neither of the big contractors will do those. The reeve there has asked to get permission to do the 30 kilometres all the way out there at a substantially lower cost than what the current contractors have it at. It just seems like some common-sense approaches would be better.

Another question that comes up in my area specifically is the takeover of secondary highways with the promise to be paved. I understand from the minister that some answers are coming forward on highway 501 going east of Cardston. I'm looking forward to that.

Going back, it just seems like we need to have a longer term plan and priorities going out to these municipal areas so they know and understand what's there, also, more importantly, so that the contractors can realize that when they're buying equipment this year, they do indeed have a five-year plan that they can be looking at and not just covering the cost on a one-time effort. Perhaps putting some of that money into a trust fund or something to say, "Well, we don't have to spend it all this year because of the shortage of equipment, shortage of contractors," would be to the benefit in the long term even though we might have to tighten our belts for another year or two to get that good benefit.

Another area I want to address. You mentioned the DFO and the great struggle that we have trying to get bridges with the closing down of the Hines Creek mill. Twice I've been up to the northwest area and the Dunvegan bridge. Both times only one lane of traffic was going through, and it's not a great place to be. I have great concerns there and would like to know what the priorities on doing that are because there's been a huge increase in traffic. The government knew that those mills were closing down and that resources were going to be trucked down to the south. So have you applied to the DFO to look at starting to get a secondary bridge in that area? If you've got long-term planning, perhaps part of the problem is knowing that the DFO is so slow that we need to be proactive. Maybe we won't put a bridge in, but let's please try and address it.

Another area I've talked to the minister several times on, and I'll bring it up again today. We heard some good ideas here today. I was pleased to hear the Minister of Community Development referring to $5.5 million for this I'd call a heritage film for the veterans. We just had our Premier throwing out a $20 million bursary fund to students in other places in Canada. I still think that we have a golden opportunity here in the little town of Warner to have a girls hockey school that not only attracts people from across the province but those from outside our country. I wish that the minister would please look at that. I've read that there have been several small schools set up for francophones in other areas, up to $6 million for 55 students, but I wish that he'd put that on the priority list again and realize that this is a benefit for Alberta and for Canada and that we can have this value-added school, a unique school, here in the province with the amount of money that seems to be being disbursed around the area.

The one other problem that we have is the grants that you talk about for the inflationary energy costs. It seems like there needs to be a formula. These people shouldn't be held at bay wondering if a grant is going to come when electricity or natural gas shoots through the roof, wondering: oh, do we have to cover and cut other maintenance or infrastructure in order to cover our gas bill? I feel that there should be a formula in there so that they know that we're not going to hold them short when the energy costs go through the roof. The province does receive the benefit of those royalties and could offset those for our public areas, such as our hospitals, our libraries, our education areas. So I would hope that that would be part of the minister's plan as well.

Thank you.

Dr. Oberg: Mr. Chair, I understand that I have until 5:15? Thank you.

Very quickly, the francophone schools that we talked about are constitutional rights ingrained in the Charter under section 23. You cannot compare the small francophone schools to a small school in Warner because of that particular issue.

The Dunvegan bridge will cost roughly $300 million to replace or to add another one. The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace has been more than cognizant of this and has been working diligently to ensure that his constituents get improved access to that bridge. We're currently in the process of putting lighting on both ends as well as assessing the hill coming down to the Dunvegan bridge to ensure that it is safe for those particular logging trucks.

The other quick point, Mr. Chair. The hon. member alluded to having a fund where you could actually put money aside and sit and wait and then do it later on so that it didn't qualify in the budget year. We have that fund; it's called the capital fund. And that's exactly what we do. I alluded to it in these estimates, where we're only spending $30 million for Fort McMurray because that's all we could spend. We actually have $200 million that is being put into the capital fund.

The Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. minister, but pursuant to Standing Order 58(1), which provides for not less than two hours of consideration of estimates, I would invite the Deputy Government House Leader to move that the committee rise and report.

Mr. Stevens: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that we rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions and reports as follows. The following resolutions relating to the 2005-2006 supplementary estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund have been approved as follows for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006.

Advanced Education: expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $99,000,000.

Gaming: expense, $75,000,000; lottery fund payments, $5,000,000.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply also reports progress on Infrastructure and Transportation and requests leave to sit again.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to table a list of those resolutions voted upon by the Committee of Supply pursuant to Standing Orders.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps we could call Bill 44.

Second Reading

Bill 44

Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to have the opportunity this afternoon to move second reading of Bill 44, the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

This act is a way of streamlining the whole dispute resolution process between tenants and landlords. Currently there are in excess of 5,000 of these disputes that end up going through the Provincial Court or through the Court of Queen's Bench. This process that we're putting in place through this act will simply streamline the whole process. Basically, the way the process would work is that a hearing officer would hear the cases. If there is a dispute, then either the tenant or the landlord could take the dispute and file to the hearing officer. If, in fact, the tenant is the first to go, then it binds the landlord. If it's the landlord that's the first to go there, then it binds the tenant.

Of course, we could have a situation where one goes to court and one goes to the dispute resolution committee all in the same day. That could happen. If that did happen, then in fact it would proceed through the court. However, the only other way that it could happen to go to court would be if, in fact, the hearing officer, when it comes to him or her, says that it is outside their jurisdiction. Then they could refer it to the court.

Of course, if the hearing does proceed, and it's determined after the hearing that, in fact, it was outside the scope of the hearing officer, then either one could take it to court. But there is similar to a privy clause, which basically means that the hearing officer is quasi-judicial. Therefore, the decision at the end of a hearing could not be taken to court. Of course, the reason for that is because if we didn't have that in there, then it would destroy the purpose of this resolution hearing process.

The only other thing that I would want to comment on would be the fact that it's a pilot project. It would be set up here in the city of Edmonton. Currently there are about 2,100 of these disputes annually. So we would have it as a pilot to start with in the city, and if it worked well, then we would expand it to other parts of the province.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, I would move adjournment of debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, if we could call Bill 9.

 Third Reading
 Bill 9
 Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2005

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move Bill 9 for third reading.

We explained the purpose of the act in second reading and discussed it in principle at committee. Really, it's a very short piece of legislation. There's very little more to say. I would ask the House for support at third reading.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is the most brief I have heard the minister in my entire time in the House.

I'll go no further. We've discussed this at second reading and in committee, and I think we've worked through it. I don't think that we need to take it any further. We can call the question, in my opinion.

[Motion carried; Bill 9 read a third time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that we adjourn until 8 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:24 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

Title: Tuesday, November 22, 2005

8:00 p.m.

Date: 05/11/22

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would be in order to ask for unanimous consent of the House to allow members to remove their jackets as though we were in committee, it being fairly hot in here this evening.

The Deputy Speaker: Apparently, this has been done in the past, and if the Assembly feels that the temperature is warm enough and stuffy enough, I will ask for unanimous consent of the House.

[Unanimous consent denied]

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, I'm wondering if we could revert to introductions.

The Deputy Speaker: Might we have the unanimous consent to revert to introductions?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview and the Leader of the Official Opposition I would like to introduce some guests in the public gallery tonight. We have 10 members of the Edmonton Volunteers group, who are joining us in the public gallery. The parent helpers are Jerry and Lenora Penner and Bernie and Bernice Isaac. Please rise as I say your names. Thank you. With them are Miriam, Jamie, Gayla, Melinda, Yolanda, and Carolee. If you would please join me in giving the traditional warm welcome to our guests.

Bill 44

Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Lund]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Elsalhy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am happy to rise and participate in the debate on Bill 44, Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2), as proposed by the hon. Minister of Government Services.

Let me first convey my appreciation to the hon. minister for agreeing to meet with myself and my researcher ahead of time to go over this bill and to discuss its scope. At first look I must admit that I agree with the direction that it's taking, whereby an alternative conflict or dispute resolution model is established parallel to the courts, where tenant and/or landlord can initiate an arbitration process to resolve issues without having to go to court; thus, saving money and time. This is beneficial for both tenant and landlord and will also free up court time to deal with more serious matters.

The fact that twice in one year we're discussing amendments to the Residential Tenancies Act is in itself a strong statement as to how delicate this relationship is between those two parties and how the decisions we make here affect not only the place where people live but also their lives and the lives of their families. I mentioned before that one has to be extremely careful when venturing into this tenant/landlord arena and that a balance has to be struck between the rights and obligations of both parties.

So again, in general, as the Official Opposition critic responsible and if I speak for my caucus colleagues, we are in support of this bill in principle. Having said that, however, we still have a few questions to put on record, and I would appreciate some clarity from the hon. minister.

Number one, with respect to the dispute resolution service administrator and the dispute resolution officers the Official Opposition strongly suggests an open and transparent appointment process to alleviate concerns stemming from the appearance of patronage or cronyism, as is the case with other boards or agencies, especially with this board's suggested quasi-judicial mandate.

The administrator can be a retired judge, for example, someone who can understand the legalities and technicalities and has the expertise and training to adjudicate or to pass rulings as objectively and as fairly as possible. The dispute resolution officers must also be qualified individuals before they join and must receive professional development and continuing training to further their abilities. Recruiting them must be conducted openly, and the criteria for selection, remuneration, and benefits are to be made public for all to see. To that effect, the Official Opposition will be presenting an amendment to address the issue of minimum qualifications these officers should have.

Tenant/landlord conflicts are rarely simple and frequently involve complex issues relating to things like child welfare, health, disability, language barriers, et cetera. Courts are qualified and usually take these issues into consideration. The same has to be guaranteed for this new structure that we're trying to set up. I must say, however, that I like section 54.7(g), which calls for "the establishment of a code of conduct for tenancy dispute officers," a document by which they understand what is expected from them and which helps guide them in carrying out their duties. The decisions rendered or remedies stipulated by those officers are going to be legally binding, so again these people must have a minimum level of knowledge and training before they take on this critical role, and continued support and upgrading has to be offered to them to ensure that they constantly improve and stay on top of what similar bodies are doing in comparable jurisdictions.

My second point, number two, will focus on how this dispute resolution board will be funded. Would it only rely on the fees collected from those applications it receives, or will the government fund it? What happens if the board only gets 50 or 60 applications in a certain year? How will it sustain itself and its employees? Are we going to pay them on a per claim basis? Will these dispute resolution officers be hired on an on-call basis? That is to say, they're only paid if there's a claim they're working on. I need to know, and I don't think I'm prepared to leave this for the minister's sole discretion to be put in the regulations without debate, as is customary.

I don't want people's rent to go up unnecessarily just to fund this board either. By the same token, I also don't want the application fees to be exaggerated. The whole purpose of this exercise is to offer an affordable and simple mechanism for tenants and landlords to reach agreements and resolve their issues not to add further financial burden to the load they're already carrying. This argument may appear to be representative only or mostly of tenants, but I strongly feel that it also applies to small- or medium-sized landlords whose profitability and earnings may be so that it won't warrant or support a process which is financially restrictive, so it goes both ways really.

Three. My next question would be: how much will an application to the dispute resolution board cost? It is my understanding, from my initial consultation with the hon. minister, that the fees are going to be reasonable, at least initially, but there is the potential that they could be increased in the future to a level which may not be comfortable for some. Is the fee paid entirely by the party initiating the application, or will it be shared by the two parties involved, and if yes, what will the formula be? If a landlord initiates multiple concurrent applications against a number of tenants at once, will they be treated individually and each assessed a separate fee, or will they be lumped together and the landlord is allowed to pay a reduced fee? Also, will some or all of those fees be recoverable?

Four. Under section 54.6(3) and (4) the dispute resolution service can refer matters to the courts. Which courts are we referencing here? From our own consultation as the Official Opposition we were told by many stakeholders that it would be better if we were talking about the Provincial Courts, not the Court of Queen's Bench, which would be more expensive.

Five. My next question is with respect to information I received from the hon. minister that initially the dispute resolution service is going to be implemented as a one-year pilot project. Is this still the case? Will the minister share the findings from this pilot project with the Legislature?

Six. I would like to gauge the hon. minister's response or support for a second amendment, which I'm working on, which will empower him and his department to pardon or waive application fees for those people who may not be able to afford them. This essentially allows the minister or his designate to exercise his or her power and judgment to cover the application costs for those people who may not afford them otherwise. I think this is useful and positive. We don't want those fees, however low, to act as a deterrent or an obstacle to access.

So, to summarize, we're ready to support this bill and value its anticipated effect on tenant/landlord relations. It couldn't have come at a better time. Offering answers to our questions would be greatly appreciated. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Backs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to speak to this Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2). I also spoke to the one that was offered forth in the spring. In the spring I mentioned some cases that had happened in my constituency and were brought to my attention: one where a landlord thought it was in his right to use the bathroom of a tenant and others where tenants were very, very difficult. There are needs to take care of disputes both when you have difficult tenants and you have difficult landlords. To have a process which does not go through the cumbersome and costly process of our law courts I think is a great step forward.

The alternative conflict resolution process put forward here in this bill I think is worthy of merit. I think having it as a pilot project so that we see how it works in a year is wise: the necessity to look at how rights are balanced, to see how we have the ability of both parties in that contract to protect their rights, and to do it in a way that doesn't cause them financial hardship.

You have financial hardship sometimes on the part of small-apartment owners sometimes as much as you do with tenants. Quite often when you have tenants with big-apartment owners, there is certainly a very difficult time for them to take on the huge-apartment owner, especially when they own thousands of units. Having this process I hope will prove to balance that and to make it so that these rights are more equal.

The flexibility that we see in this residential tenancies act does hold some promise. My colleague that has just spoken, Edmonton-McClung, was very clear that there must be some questions answered, and those will be dealt with when we get into Committee of the Whole. I look forward to the answers to those questions.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to ask some questions in second reading of Bill 44, the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2).

We've had a lot of action on the Residential Tenancies Act this year, which is a good thing. I think it was a bill that needed updating, needs to recognize current realities. Certainly it's an important act for my constituents. Eighty per cent of my constituents live in high-rise apartment buildings or condominiums. Out of that 80 per cent, I think substantially more than half are renters, so this legislation is very important to them because it protects them, but it also confers, as always, responsibilities at the same time as the protection.

A couple of questions that came to mind for me. Could the sponsoring member, the Minister of Government Services, clarify for me what happens? Right now in the city of Edmonton the city funds the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Board. It strikes me that what's being anticipated here with the dispute resolution service could be a duplication. Now, I know the city of Edmonton has talked about revoking the funding to landlord and tenant, but I'm wondering where the minister sees this particular agency working along with local ones, municipally-funded ones like the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Board in Edmonton.

I commend the minister for looking for a nonjudicial mechanism for resolving disputes. Very helpful to people. Court is expensive, it's time consuming, and for a lot of people it's intimidating and they just won't even try it. They just give up and walk away and forfeit whatever. That's true on the landlord side, as well, particularly when you talk about small landlords that maybe own a small building or maybe are just renting a suite in their house, for example. They just give up and walk away because going through the system seems daunting. Therefore, a mechanism like this is very helpful to them, and I thank you.

One of the issues I have is around payment to mediators. I'm sorry; let me clarify for the minister first. Who does he anticipate being the officers working for this dispute resolution service? Does he anticipate it being trained and accredited mediators? That's question one. Question two: what is the minister anticipating would be a fee scale for these mediators? I know that this is a group of people that more and more we're relying on because they do save us from the court costs and all of that added expense, but for some reason we impoverish these people because the government in particular, when it uses their services, doesn't pay them very much.

If I can, I'd like to encourage the minister to set the fee structure at something reasonable, where you're attracting a quality, a level of experience, and an accreditation that is of the highest level. I would prefer to see that in this situation. I would encourage the government to go in that direction. I'd be interested in what the minister anticipates as a fee scale – he’s likely going to set that under regulations if I know this government – if he can give me some indication of what have been the discussions or what he was anticipating there. I think my colleague was talking about whether they should have a legal background. I don’t know that you would need to have that. Certainly, a trained mediator would be able to accomplish all of that.

I also wanted to check with the minister – once again we’re bandying around that incredibly elastic term called “reasonable fee.” What does the minister see as a reasonable fee for this service? Those tenants and landlords who apply to the dispute resolution service are going to pay some sort of a fee. What does the minister see as reasonable? Is it $5? Is it $25? Is it $75?

He’s looking above me for hand signals. Should I look too? No. He’s going to get up and tell me.

I’d be interested in that because I think there can be, again, quite a scale there of what people would consider reasonable. I know that for many of my tenants who are living in the older housing stock and for many of them on assistance, particularly AISH, you know, a $15 fee starts to look difficult when you’re on a budget of a thousand bucks a month or in some cases less. I’m interested, again, in what the minister feels is reasonable and whether there will be a fund set aside to assist those that find that it’s a barrier, or whether: “Tough beans. If you can’t come up with the amount, well, you’re out. Go to court and have the court pay all your fees.” So I’m trying to figure out where he’s going to come down on that.

I’m also wondering, in order to keep this on a friendly level, if I could put it that way, if people involved in the disputes would be allowed to bring people in with them, whether that is, in fact, a lawyer or more likely a friend or a moral support or an adviser or a parent perhaps. Can they bring somebody else into this system, or is it the two individuals that are at odds, with a mediator in the middle or an arbitrator in the middle, and that’s it? Just interested in that.

Mr. Speaker, I know that we don’t get into the nitty-gritty and the detail, clause by clause, word by word, until we’re in Committee of the Whole – which we’re not right now; we’re in second – but I did notice that section 54, to my reading of it, actually started to get a little confusing. This is the section where it talks about if somebody goes and applies to the dispute resolution board first, then that’s where it’s all going to get worked out, but that actually starts to sort of contradict itself here. One of them says that if the tenant chooses the dispute resolution board, then that’s where they go, but no application to the dispute resolution service would be accepted if an application has already happened to the provincial courts by either party. Okay. That seems to contradict what was just said.

Once you work your way all the way through this, it looks like if anybody goes to the courts, the courts trump the dispute resolution service. Is that what the minister was intending with the legislation, and why? Or do you have to go with your first choice? So if the first person in the door goes to dispute resolution, that sets the stage, and that’s where everybody has to go. If the first person in the door goes to the courts, then that’s where it’s going to get played out, and you can’t change it. According to what I’m reading here, you are bound to that forum for pursuing a resolution, to quote from 54.3(1), not that I’d be doing that, Mr. Speaker.

I’m wondering, as well, if we could see the regulations that are being anticipated to support this act and if the minister would be willing to table that. It’s getting close to Christmas. Wishes come true every now and then, Mr. Speaker. I just thought I’d put it on the table and see if that might be a possibility. I think particularly with this act it would be very interesting to see those regs, even understanding that they’re in a draft form, or I in particular would be interested in seeing them. Maybe some of my other colleagues would or would not – I don’t know – but I certainly am.

In the final section it looks to me like some regulatory authority is being transferred to the Lieutenant Governor in Council, and I’m wondering why that was necessary. It looks like it was taken away from the minister and given to the Lieutenant Governor in Council, and I’m wondering why that choice was made. It strikes me as a bit of an odd one.

As I said and as my colleague the Member for Edmonton-McClung has said, we’re very interested in the bill on the Official Opposition side and at this point are looking to support it, but I’d like to get the answers to my questions, if I could, because this is a bill that so much affects so many of my constituents.

Thank you for the opportunity to put those questions out on the floor, Mr. Speaker. I will give way to others that wish to participate in the debate. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, I’d like to remind everyone that Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for questions and comment following every speaker.

I have a request to revert to Introduction of Guests. Could I have unanimous consent for that?

[Unanimous consent granted]

head: Introduction of Guests
(reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Magnus: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Legislature five friends of ours, in fact, five friends of all Albertans, for there are, indeed, firefighters in our gallery tonight. I’ve introduced them before, but I’d love to introduce them again. I’d ask them to stand up one at a time as I call their names so that they can receive the warm welcome of this House. They are all members of the Alberta Fire Fighters Association as well as some of our local unions. They are: Ken Block, head of the Edmonton Fire Fighters Association; Greg Holubowich, who is the vice-president of the Edmonton association; Gord Colwell, head of the Alberta Fire Fighters Association; and Bud McCarthy and Dale McLean, also VPs with the Edmonton fire fighters association – again, all of them on the executive.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

Second Reading

Bill 44
Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. R. Miller: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My comments will be brief. I believe that my colleagues in the Official Opposition have pretty much covered the points that I wanted to make. I do want to reiterate a concern that we often bring up in this House, and that is the fact that members of these boards are appointed by, in this case, the Lieutenant Governor in Council. We talk a lot about accountability and transparency, and it causes me great concern and, in fact, causes the Auditor General great concern when these board appointments are made by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, sometimes without the proper training.

My colleague from Edmonton-Centre indicated that she's not as worried about the training as some of us might be. Well, she was referring to myself and, in fact, my colleague from Edmonton-McClung, who did indicate that he does have a bit of a concern there as well. So based on the Auditor General's comments regarding board appointments and lack of training and accountability and transparency, that would be a concern that I would like to make the minister aware of, and certainly I know that there are many others who share those concerns with me as well.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Pannu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 44, the Residential Tenancies Amendment Act, 2005 (No. 2). I want to start by thanking the minister for the invitation and the subsequent briefing that he provided to me and one of our staff members. We went over some of the provisions of the proposed amendments in some detail.

I would like to first of all express my general agreement with the principle that informs this attempt to amend the Residential Tenancies Act; that is, that a more convenient, a cheaper, and a more tenant/landlord friendly procedure perhaps is worth trying to resolve disputes that arise between landlords on one hand and tenants on the other.

I think that historically the local landlord and tenant advisory boards that cities have used in the past are also based on the premise that mediation of these disputes through locally-based arrangements probably limits the sort of orientation to long, stretched-out litigation and brings parties into conciliation with each other and seeing each other's point of view and coming to some sort of agreement. Unfortunately, certainly the city of Edmonton, for reasons of cost, seems to be ready to withdraw from offering that kind of service. In light of that, I think these amendments will certainly create an alternative dispute resolution arrangement which is worth trying.

The minister I think indicated that this will be a pilot. It will be tried here in Edmonton, I understand, for a year or so. I think my colleague from Edmonton-McClung raised some interesting questions about: how do we learn about the results of the mechanism that we establish in Edmonton as a pilot project? Will the Legislature have the opportunity to receive those results and then study those results before this arrangement goes forward and becomes generalized and used across the province? Clearly, if it's a pilot project – and that's the understanding based on which we all will agree to support these amendments – I think it's only appropriate for us to expect that the results of the pilot project will be brought back to the Legislature for us to look at, and then a more permanent form of the amended act will be put in place. That is something that I would like the minister to perhaps comment on.

There are several other issues that have been raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung. The questions of appointment procedures. Who will make the appointments? What will be the qualifications of people who get appointed? Will there be training requirements and opportunities? Will there be some sort of accreditation for people who in fact preside over these dispute resolution exercises?

The matter of fees. Since only one of the two parties has to go and apply to the alternative dispute resolution service, will both parties be required to pay fees, and would those fees be equal? Or will one of the two parties be assessed their fee based on the outcome of the dispute resolution service decision? I mean, we need to have some idea about this. I know that the minister is proposing to have an extensive set of regulations, and perhaps under those, the provisions of section 54.7, he might have the ability to address some of these questions. These questions are substantial enough that the House would like to know – it's not only I who would like to know – what the minister has in mind so that we can at least have an idea of what might go into the regulations dealing with some of these questions. So the issue of fees, the issue of waiver of fees.

Certainly, in my constituency office we have received over the years that I've been MLA, for more than eight years now, many requests and complaints from tenants. I also have a very large number of low-income people living in the constituency, including, of course, people who are on AISH. They often come to us with some concerns and complaints. Their ability to pay fees is severely limited. I think it's important for me as MLA for Edmonton-Strathcona and for our NDP opposition caucus to know because we as a group do represent a fair number of low-income Edmontonians and Albertans who have similar concerns.

If the minister would be kind enough to address the issue of fees. What's the scale of them? Who is going to be assessed? Whether there will be provision to waive those fees, and if so, how? The questions of who will be the people who'll be appointed and how they'll be appointed, what qualifications and training will be expected and required, and whether or not these will somehow be people who get certified.

One other question that I have for the minister. Given that the alternative dispute resolution mechanisms are intended, in fact, to reduce the amount of litigation, the amount of expenses not only to the courts and through the courts to the government but also to parties in dispute, I think the best alternative dispute resolution mechanism would be one which, of course, reduces the cost for every party involved: for the tenants and for the landlords as well as for the public agency, whether it's the alternative dispute resolution authority or the courts.

The idea I think of reducing litigation and making this whole process less costly for every party involved is a good one, but to require here, as is presently provided for in the proposed amendment, that only one party has to choose to go to the dispute resolution service and the other, therefore, will be compelled, will have no option but to follow, seems to me somewhat taking away the choice from the parties to choose to go to a less expensive, less costly, and perhaps time-saving mechanism, which I hope this alternative dispute resolution service will be, or to go to court if it so desires.

Alternatively, I think I would wonder what the minister thinks about making this option available but only if both parties agree to go through this procedure. It seems to me that it would be only rational for the parties to go through this voluntarily if they see that their interests are better served by going through this route. So rather than coercing one of the two parties to follow because one has already chosen to do so wouldn't seem to serve the purposes for which this alternative dispute resolution system seems to be proposed and be designed.

These are some of the questions that I would hope the minister would also address as he tries to address questions raised by my other colleagues.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there others?

The hon. Minister of Government Services to close debate.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the members that commented on this bill. I know that it's not customary to specifically answer all the questions in second reading, so I'll try to phrase my comments around the questions so that we're still talking about the principles of the bill.

Certainly, we want this process to work, so of course the hearing officers are going to have to have training. They're going to have to be people with experience in this type of mediation and this sort of thing. We don't believe that it will be necessary that they have a law degree or for that matter be retired judges. However, if there was one of those individuals available, we're not saying that they wouldn't fit the bill because certainly they probably would, but they must also, of course, be very familiar with the Residential Tenancies Act and be able to interpret what needs to be said.

The funding, of course, Mr. Speaker, for this pilot project will be done through my department. We've budgeted some $195,000 for it. The fee that will be charged would be, we're proposing, about $75. I heard the hon. members talking about whether it's affordable to everyone. We would hope that it would be affordable, but one of the things that the hearing officer does have under section 54(7)(j) is the ability is to include "orders providing for costs." So, in fact, if at the end of the hearing it's determined that somebody should be awarded costs, the hearing officer would have the ability to do that. So we would handle it in that area.

The idea is that whoever files first, if they file with the dispute hearing service, then, in fact, that brings in the other party. The party that files is the party that pays.

Now, what may happen would be that on the same day as one party is applying to the dispute resolution service at the same time somebody is applying to the courts. In that case, the courts will take precedent. If, in fact, the time has elapsed, we will be in the regulations setting out a system where the clerk in the court would refer first to the dispute resolution service to see if the other party has filed with the dispute resolution service. It simply would not work if we were to allow choice all the way through. It simply wouldn't work.

Currently with the court system it's a hundred dollars to file, and then if you go to the Court of Queen's Bench it can be even more. Of course, some of the tenants that the members spoke about likely couldn't afford it. We think that we're making it more accessible. But if you think about if you allowed the people to choose either one and then the courts take priority, in many cases one party is not anxious to have it settled. It's to their advantage that it's not settled. So what we are trying to do is three things: make it affordable, make it accessible, and make it fast so that it doesn't hang out there for a long period of time and so that the issue would be settled quickly.

We propose that, yes, this is quasi-judicial and that it will be in public. Of course, to make it work, if someone feels that they need to bring assistance along to the hearing, they can do that. There's no problem doing that. The findings will be in writing, and those will be made public as well.

The ability to assess whether this is a success or not. I'm sure that if it's not a success, members will be hearing about it, and I'm sure we'll be hearing about it.

In section 54.7, I believe it is, we're having the regulations go to the order in council process simply because it involves the Department of Justice as well, and we didn't think it was right that those regulations would be simply done by the minister.

The relationship between the landlord/tenancy agencies in Calgary and Edmonton. Now, Calgary has disbanded their landlord/tenant agency. In Edmonton there is talk of abandoning it. But those are not quasi-judicial bodies, and this is a quasi-judicial body that we're proposing to set up. So there is quite a bit of difference there, and that is the reason that we believe that it's not a duplication. In fact, we'll see how it works out with the resolution committee.

As far as the regulations I will make the commitment that I will endeavour to work with my opposition critics as we develop those regulations. If they can offer help that improves them, I'm very open to that.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 44 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: I recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the outset of the session this evening in the steering of the Chamber I was not aware of hearing very well the question put before the Assembly. I understand the question was whether the Assembly concurs with removal of the jackets. Inadvertently I had raised my voice indicative to that of no. I would like to retract that vote and put a motion forward before the Speaker for unanimous consent allowing the members to remove their jackets if appropriate.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Well, hon. member, the onus is on all members to pay attention in the House at all times. But it is at the pleasure of the House, and I will allow the question to be put again. Do we have unanimous consent in agreement to the hon. member's motion? Those agreed, say aye.

Some Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Those opposed, say no.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Deputy Speaker: The motion is passed. [interjections]

Hon. members, if there was a no, the chair did not hear it. Let your yeas be yeas, and let your noes be noes, and let them be heard.

The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.
