Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, May 23, 2012

[The Mace was on a cushion below the table]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! All rise, please.

[The Clerk read the Royal Proclamation dated May 8, 2012, summoning the Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to convene on this date]

The Clerk: Please be seated.

Entrance of the Lieutenant Governor

[The Premier, the Clerk, and the Sergeant-at-Arms left the Chamber to attend the Lieutenant Governor]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! All rise, please.

His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, his party, the Premier, and the Clerk entered the Chamber. His Honour took his place upon the throne]

His Honour: Pray be seated.

Mr. Denis (Provincial Secretary): Hon. members, I am commanded by His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor to inform you that he does not see fit to declare the causes of the summoning of the present Legislature of this province until a Speaker of this Assembly shall have been chosen according to law. He therefore is pleased to retire from this Assembly, to return at a subsequent hour tomorrow to declare the causes of the calling of this Legislature.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: All rise, please.

Election of a Speaker

The Clerk: Hon. members, pursuant to the Lieutenant Governor's direction and section 16(1) of the Legislative Assembly Act nominations are invited for the Office of Speaker of this Assembly for the 28th Legislature. Pursuant to Standing Order 11(1) the Speaker shall be elected according to the procedure set out in schedule A of the standing orders.

Nominations are now invited. Mr. Quest.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Clerk. I'm pleased to nominate the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, Mr. Gene Zwozdesky, for Speaker. He has experience as a minister in six portfolios, including health, education, culture, aboriginal relations, capital planning, and wellness. He served as Deputy Government House Leader for 12 years and most recently as Deputy Chair of Committees of the Legislature.

He knows and respects the rules and proceedings of the House. He has a great track record of assistance, fairness, and balance in this Assembly. He is eloquent, passionate, and multilingual and will be a great ambassador for Alberta at international events.

In conclusion, let me just add that he has received more than 40 awards and lifetime memberships for his community service, including four medals.

Our Assembly needs a person of his stature and experience, so I would urge all members to elect Mr. Gene Zwozdesky as our Speaker.

Thank you.

The Clerk: Mr. Zwozdesky, do you wish to accept the nomination?

Mr. Zwozdesky: I do, Mr. Clerk.

I want to thank the hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park for his wonderful nomination.

Thank you.

The Clerk: Mr. Hehr.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much. To start, I'd like to say what a great honour and privilege it is to be in this House, serving with all of you in this legislative session.

It also gives me a great deal of pride to nominate Ms Laurie Blakeman for the position of Speaker of this honourable House. She has been a five-time representative of the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. As you are well aware, she has represented our party as our House leader for virtually her entire time here. She understands the rules and procedures of this honourable House, I would suggest, better than anyone else. She is dedicated to openness and transparency and fairness in this process. I know that for a fact. She has even told me from time to time: you are far offside of the rules and regulations, and you should change your questions. I understand her commitment to fairness.

I know that she's had 17 years working in administration for nonprofit agencies. She has a professional background as a public speaker and events organizer.

She is committed to seeing this Legislature held in the esteem that it deserves. She wants to build on Speaker Kowalski's commitment to education about the role of the Legislature by taking the mock Legislature on the road to constituencies that have travel as a barrier to participating.

She wants to get the provincial legislators together to advocate with Canada Post that ad mail be delivered to all households so that provincial politicians can send annual reports, householders, get the information out to the public at their doorsteps. Currently Alberta's MLAs do not enjoy the same service as municipal and federal politicians to have this ad mail delivered. She is committed to seeing this democratic process through.

Like I said at the start, I am proud to support Laurie, to nominate Laurie, and I would respectfully submit that all members of this House should strongly consider her for the position of Speaker of this honourable House.

Thank you very much.

The Clerk: Do you wish to accept the nomination?

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Clerk, and my thanks to my hon. colleague the Member for Calgary-Buffalo for that really nice nomination. Thank you very much. I can't tell you how pleased I am to see all these fresh and eager faces, all this new energy in the Assembly.

Yes, I accept with pleasure. Thank you.

The Clerk: Are there further nominations? If not, I declare the nominations closed.

The nominees for the position of Speaker are Ms Laurie Blakeman and Mr. Gene Zwozdesky.

Voting will commence after the list of nominees is posted in each voting booth.

[The lists of candidates were posted]

The Clerk: The voting will now begin. Members will vote by printing the first and last name of their preferred candidate on the ballot paper, then placing their completed ballot in the ballot box on the Sergeant-at-Arms' desk. Please start with the first row at this end, the first row at this end, and proceed row by row. Voting will now commence.

[Members voted from 1:47 p.m. to 1:55 p.m.]

The Clerk: Hon. members, have all voted who wish to do so? We'll now count the votes.

[Ballots were counted from 1:56 p.m. to 2:06 p.m.]

The Clerk: Hon. members, the number of ballots cast for the election of Speaker, 86; the number of spoiled ballots, one; the number of votes required to achieve the 50 per cent plus one majority, 44. The member having received the majority of votes cast, Mr. Gene Zwozdesky, Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek. [Standing ovation]

[The Speaker, with apparent reluctance, was escorted to the chair by Ms Redford and Ms Smith]

The Clerk: Hon. members, Mr. Gene Zwozdesky is hereby declared the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta for the 28th Legislature.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. I'm both humbled and privileged by your vote and by your support, and I will do my very utmost to ensure that we maintain that level of support in the Assembly. I will comment more on that at a later time.

Let me just say very quickly that I have four or five main areas of focus that I would like to leave with you to ponder over the next couple of days. Number one is to be as impartial as I possibly can in the delivery of my duties with which you have charged me today; two, to maintain and, where possible, improve the civility and decorum in this House that we all know, love, and respect; three, to encourage more community interest and participation in Legislature proceedings and Legislature events; four, to increase student learning about the workings of government, the opposition, the democratic process, and the work in general that you do as MLAs; five, to help promote as positive an image as possible of our beloved province, Alberta, both nationally and internationally and, of course, locally. I'll be pursuing other priorities as well, and we'll get to those at a later time in some of my comments.

I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre for putting her name forward. [applause] Laurie, we've known each other a long time, and somehow I just know that if I need help, it'll be there. So thank you for that.

I also want to thank our outgoing Speaker, Mr. Ken Kowalski. He did a truly outstanding job. I could make an impromptu speech here for many, many minutes just on his role, but we will thank him at another time and in a more appropriate way than today's time allows. [applause]

In any event, more comments soon to come.

Sergeant.

[The Sergeant-at-Arms placed the Mace on the table]

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, I would invite all of you to please stand for our daily prayer.

Let us pray, each of us in our own way. Dear God, our great Creator and Author of all wisdom, on this day of a new beginning we ask for Your guidance in the responsibility we have undertaken, and we ask for Your help in fulfilling our duties. As Members of this Legislative Assembly of Alberta may we faithfully serve all Albertans, and in the process of serving them, may we also serve You. Amen.

Please be seated.

Election of a Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

The Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to section 17(1) of the Legislative Assembly Act and Standing Order 58(1)(a) nominations are now invited for the Office of Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees of this Assembly for the 28th Legislature. Please note that this is one position to be filled by one person with two duties, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees.

The floor is now open for nominations. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to nominate the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, Mr. George Rogers. I've served with Mr. Rogers since he became an MLA in 2004. I know him to be a person of integrity and honesty. He's never been shy about expressing his opinions in this House. I must say he does have a flair for fashion, and I think he'll look great in a black robe and a tricorn hat.

The Speaker: Thank you, Dr. Brown.

Hon. member George Rogers, do you accept the nomination?

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am humbled and honoured to accept the nomination from the Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any other nominations? Dr. Swann.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a rare honour and pleasure to stand before you and nominate the peerless Member for Edmonton-Centre for the position of Deputy Speaker.

Ms Blakeman: Fabulous.

Dr. Swann: The fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. I'm sorry. She's peerless, and the Centre is fabulous.

Ms Blakeman's knowledge of parliamentary process, faithfulness to the rules, precedents, and previous Speaker rulings as well as keeping those of us in the opposition caucus in line prove that she is the right person for the job. She is committed to public service, and she has always sought the best for her constituents and for all Albertans.

I therefore enjoin all members of this Legislature to do the right thing, the honourable thing, the unprecedented thing in Alberta and elect an opposition member as Deputy Speaker.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Dr. Swann.

Ms Blakeman, would you like to accept the nomination?

Ms Blakeman: It would also be unprecedented to have a woman, I think, but thank you. Yes, I do.

The Speaker: Are there any other nominations? Seeing no other nominations, I would then declare the nominations closed.

The nominees for the position of Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees are Mr. George Rogers and Ms Laurie Blakeman. Voting will commence as soon as the list of nominees is posted at each voting station.

Thank you.

[The lists of candidates were posted]

The Speaker: Very well. The voting shall now commence.

[Members voted from 2:18 p.m. to 2:25 p.m.]

The Speaker: Hon. members, have all those who wished to cast a vote now done so? All done? Thank you.

Could we proceed with the count, please?

[Ballots were counted from 2:26 p.m. to 2:37 p.m.]

The Clerk: Mr. Speaker, the number of ballots cast for the position of Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees, 85; number of spoiled ballots, one; the number of votes required to achieve the 50 per cent plus one majority, 44. The member having received the majority of votes cast, Mr. George Rogers, is declared Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta for the 28th Legislature.

The Speaker: Congratulations, Mr. Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees. I would invite you to make a comment at this time if you wish.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. members of the Assembly: it is indeed an honour and a privilege, and I thank you for bestowing on me this great responsibility. It is my intention to be fair and diligent in my duties as your Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, and congratulations once again.

Election of a Deputy Chair of Committees

The Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to section 17(1) of the Legislative Assembly Act and Standing Order 58(1)(b) nominations are now invited for the office of Deputy Chair of Committees for the 28th Legislature. The floor is now open for nominations.

The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed my honour to rise and nominate Mary Anne Jablonski, the hon. Member for Red Deer-North, for the position of Deputy Chair of Committees.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member was recently elected to her fifth term as a member of this Assembly. She has continuously earned the support and confidence of her constituents with the same qualities that I believe would make her an exceptional Deputy Chair of Committees. Over the past four terms the hon. member has served in many capacities. She has advanced private members' bills and motions, served as minister of seniors and community supports as well as serving on both standing and special committees too numerous to list.

You see, Mr. Speaker, Mrs. Jablonski has many good qualities – honesty, fairness, generosity, humility, and kindness – all things we wish for in ourselves and hope for in our friends.

Mr. Speaker, my nomination of Mary Anne Jablonski is without reservation, and I encourage all hon. members of the Assembly to support her. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mary Anne Jablonski, do you accept this nomination?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to congratulate you on your new position as Speaker and congratulate my colleague from Leduc-Beaumont as our new Deputy Speaker.

Then I would like to say to the hon. Member for Red Deer-South: thank you very much for that nomination. Mr. Speaker, I am honoured and pleased to be able to accept this nomination.

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there any other nominations for this position?

I don't see any other nominations for this position, so I'm very pleased to declare that the Deputy Chair of Committees of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta for the 28th Legislature shall be Mary Anne Jablonski. Congratulations. Would you like to take a moment?

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you to all my hon. colleagues. I'm very pleased to be able to accept this position. I, too, would pledge fairness within the Assembly, impartiality, and to treat all members of the Assembly equally within this House. Thank you, all, very, very much. I'm very honoured.

The Speaker: Thank you. Congratulations once again.

Hon. members, it's been a very great first day of this new sitting, and I'm very humbled by it myself, obviously. I also want all of us to remember this day. That would be wonderful from my perspective.

I also want to thank our Premier, Alison Redford, and the Leader of the Official Opposition, Danielle Smith, for having persuaded me out of my chair into this position. I'll just make a brief comment, more so for our guests who are listening or watching today, on why there is always some traditional reluctance to accept this position. In a nutshell, it turns out that some Speakers over the history of parliament, going back hundreds of years, might have made some decisions that were in disfavour with the king or the queen of the day, and as such those Speakers were beheaded. Ever since that time there's always been a bit of reluctance – we can understand why – to assume this chair. Nonetheless, I'm grateful for the opportunity.

Also, might I just remind all of us that this is the last time that we'll be able to use full proper names or names of any kind in addressing any members. From here on in it will be ministers or it will be opposition members or it will be their particular constituency referenced by name.

May we all enjoy many more such days. In conclusion, I just want to thank my family who are here today: to my wife, Christine, who's been with me for 37 years, thanks, Love; my son Myron, who's been with us for almost 26 years; and my new son, actually son-in-law – but he's my son just the same – who is here from England, Joseph Whitlow, who is married to our daughter Ariana. I would ask all three of my family members to please rise and receive a warm thank you.

Lastly, we have two former members who are here with us in my gallery – now I can call it my gallery; it's a nice thing – former ministers of the Crown Dennis Anderson and Mel Knight. If you would rise and receive the welcome.

There being no further business, I would declare the House adjourned until 3 tomorrow afternoon.

[At 2:44 p.m. the Assembly adjourned to Thursday at 3 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

3 p.m.

Thursday, May 24, 2012

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! Mr. Speaker.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the Speaker, accompanied by the officers of the Assembly, entered the Chamber and took the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members and honoured guests, we begin our day with a special prayer. I invite each of you to pray in your own way.

Almighty God, as we gather here today in governance, we ask for Your blessings on all who are present here today. We ask for Your guidance in order that truth and justice may prevail in all of our judgments for the benefit of all Albertans. Amen.

Ladies and gentlemen, I would now invite Mr. Paul Lorieau, accompanied by a quartet comprised of members of the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra, to lead us in the singing of our national anthem. Please join in in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members and Guests:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Well done, all. Please be seated.

Entrance of the Lieutenant Governor

[The Premier, the Clerk, and the Sergeant-at-Arms left the Chamber to attend the Lieutenant Governor]

[The Mace was draped]

The Speaker: Aren't these pages wonderful? [applause]

Ladies and gentlemen, prior to the arrival of His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor the quartet of members from the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra will play a brief musical interlude. Please listen attentively as Robin Doyon, Brian Sand, Al Lowrey, and Christopher Taylor entertain us with this wonderful musical selection.

[The Sergeant-at-Arms knocked on the main doors of the Chamber three times. The Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms opened the doors, and the Sergeant-at-Arms entered]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Ladies and gentlemen, all rise, please.

Mr. Speaker, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor awaits.

The Speaker: Sergeant-at-Arms, admit His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

[A fanfare of trumpets sounded]

Premier, and the Clerk entered the Chamber. His Honour took his place upon the throne]

The Speaker: May it please Your Honour, the Legislative Assembly of Alberta has elected me as their Speaker, though I am but little able to fulfill the huge and important duties thus assigned to me. If in the performance of those duties I should at any time fall into any sort of error, I pray that the fault may be imputed to me and not the Assembly, whose servant I am and who through me, the better to enable them to discharge their duty to their Queen and the province, humbly claim all their undoubted rights and privileges, especially that they may have freedom of speech in their debates, access to Your Honour's person at all seasonable times, and that their proceedings may receive from Your Honour the most favourable construction.

His Honour: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Pray be seated.

Mr. Denis (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I am commanded by His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor to declare to you that he freely confides in the duty and attachment of this Assembly to Her Majesty's person and government, and not doubting that their proceedings will be conducted with wisdom, temper, and prudence, he grants and upon all occasions will recognize and allow their constitutional privileges.

I am commanded also to assure you that the Assembly shall have ready access to His Honour upon all seasonable occasions and that their proceedings as well as your words and actions will constantly receive from him the most favourable construction.

His Honour: Albertans, this is a great day for a number of reasons. One, it's the start of the 28th Alberta Legislature, it's also Victoria Day, it's also the 60th year of Her Majesty's reign, and those are very important to all of us.

At the risk of getting off the subject for a moment, Canada was honoured in front of Buckingham Palace yesterday in that the RCMP mounted the guard. For the first time in history they mounted the guard. It's usually up to soldiers. Not only that, but one of the guards was a female, and that hadn't happened before. We are fortunate to have RCMP members of that ilk. Of course, as you're well aware, here in the province of Alberta we have the first elected female Premier, and the Leader of the Official Opposition is also female. They're taking over the world. [laughter]

Speech from the Throne

His Honour: Albertans, distinguished Members of the Legislative Assembly, visitors and guests, welcome to the First Session of the 28th Alberta Legislature. It is my privilege to deliver the Speech from the Throne and to serve this province as Lieutenant Governor.

Today Alberta has the potential to reach greater heights than ever before. Economic recovery is under way in many parts of the world, and demand for our energy and skills will grow in the years ahead.

Albertans are looking to the future with new hope and confidence. They see a chance to build the best lives possible for themselves and their families, and they are ready to make the most of that opportunity.

The people of this province have declared that they are not content to gaze inward and build walls. They want to look outward and build bridges. They seek to engage with the world around them and, through investment and innovation here at home, play a leading role in making our world a better place. Alberta, your government has heard you loud and clear, and its plans and policies will continue to reflect your values, goals, and aspirations.

This province is the most economically free jurisdiction in North America. Nowhere else do businesses have so much room to operate without interference and adapt to market conditions. Your government will further these freedoms and find new ways to simplify regulatory burdens so businesses continue to drive our prosperity.

We have one of the most technologically astute, safe, and responsible energy sectors in the world, a field that provides hundreds of thousands of Alberta families with reliable livelihoods. That sector is working hard to improve its efficiency and reduce its footprint as it expands production. Your government will partner with industry on research and development through a second Alberta Oil Sands Technology and Research Authority to maintain a competitive, world-class resource economy for the 21st century, grow the marketplace for clean energy, and protect the jobs so many Albertans depend on.

We have strong and responsive public services that offer Albertans a great standard of living. Your government will invest in those services, in the infrastructure that supports them, and in the families and communities that depend on them to secure Alberta's economic future, and it will keep those services public and bring new fiscal discipline to budgets so they deliver the outcomes Albertans want in a financially sensible way.

Your government will accomplish all this because it has solid foundations to build on. The last 41 years have brought incredible benefits to our province and seen society evolve in ways that have changed how Albertans think and live.

It was the decisions of past governments that helped us adapt and get to where we are today. Every one of those governments was distinct, and each put forward the right vision in response to the issues Alberta confronted. Each was suited to its time and place and pursued the right course for the right circumstances in sync with Albertans' values. This government will uphold that tradition even as our province adapts and changes faster than ever.

Technology has put more knowledge and power at Albertans' fingertips than at any time in history. Competition and rising expectations are placing heightened pressure on the energy industry that has sustained us for so long, and demographic shifts are asking more of Albertans and the public services that nurture, educate, and care for them.

Alberta has robust traditions in which to find answers. Our western spirit and heritage and our entrepreneurial energy have always served us well. The unique pride, self-reliance, and fiscal conservatism that have made this province such a special place to live are as strong as they have ever been, and this government will use these traits to forge a brighter future. They define us as Albertans, and they are too precious to put aside.

But the challenge of change demands a response. It requires leadership ready to strike the right balance between progressive and conservative thinking. Your government will find that balance. Your government has a policy framework for this time and place, a plan in harmony with Albertans' socially progressive values and fiscally conservative beliefs, and implementation has begun.

Your government promised to increase both AISH payments and the allowable income exemption. Budget 2012 raised the former by $400 per month and doubled the latter.

Your government promised to offer subsidized child care for families earning less than $50,000 annually. Budget 2012 provided $12 million in funds for that purpose.

Your government pledged to make Alberta's Child and Youth Advocate independent to better help at-risk youth and investigate when things go wrong. At the beginning of April the advocate's office became fully independent.

This government's fiscal and economic plan includes no new taxes, no sales tax, and multiyear budgets to control public spending.

On every single count those promises were met, and this government will continue to do so in every area.

Albertans have expressed a desire for change and no-nonsense, effective leadership. They know that a great province starts from the inside out, with an efficient and responsive public service that judiciously uses their tax dollars to provide support and create the conditions for success.

To support these outcomes, this government formed a new cabinet and government structure, combining departments and designing new ministries to focus on the things that matter to Albertans: having a strong fiscal framework, caring for families and the vulnerable, promoting and protecting our resources, and having solid consultation processes that ensure Albertans are heard. These tasks will stay at the top of the government's agenda as it moves forward.

Your government will invest in Alberta's future by supporting the families in whose hands that future rests. This means providing an accessible primary care system and giving Albertans the tools and guidance they need to take charge of their health.

Your government will continue to expand family care clinics in consultation with local stakeholders and the dedicated professionals who staff the system, building on primary care networks. It will bring more allied health workers like nurse practitioners to the front lines of primary care to lower wait times. It will design and implement a plan to extend the province's network of continuing care centres so seniors can find accommodations that suit their budget and family arrangements.

Your government will extend improved access to care for the very Albertans devoted to providing it when we need it most. Bill 1, to be brought forward in this session, will guarantee workers' compensation coverage for first responders suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder. PTSD's devastating effects on individuals and their families are well understood, and it is time legislation reflected that fact. First responders rush to our aid in times of trouble, and this government will be the first in Canada to do the same for them.

Your government will promote trustworthy leadership that genuinely takes Albertans' concerns to heart and establish openness and transparency as guiding principles. The new Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation will review Alberta's Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy, FOIP, Act and oversee fundamental changes to the way the province does business. As part of this effort your government will survey conflict-of-interest issues and then introduce a new package of legislation that draws on the best solutions from around the world. As promised, this will include whistle-blower legislation. Albertans will be able to see with new depth and clarity how government works for them.

Your government will also secure Alberta's economic future by demonstrating fiscal restraint and foresight, spending wisely and saving intelligently. Starting with Budget 2012, our most critical public sectors – education, advanced education, health, and municipal services – are receiving stable funding in the form of three-year budgets. Institutions and municipalities know in advance what to expect so they can plan ahead, guaranteeing reliable service delivery for all Albertans.

And to enforce unprecedented discipline in public spending, this government is pioneering results-based budgeting. Government will engage with Albertans to identify the outcomes they expect from public programs. Every part of the government's operations will then be scrutinized on a three-year cycle. Program budgets will be reset to reflect findings, and the Treasury Board will publicly report on the progress made each year so Albertans can see how their tax dollars are being used.

Your government will also advance world-leading resource stewardship, developing our natural resources responsibly to safeguard Alberta's environment, grow its markets, and keep our economy strong. The regulatory enhancement project, which combines multiple bodies into a single regulator for upstream oil, gas, and coal, is a critical part of this plan. Your government will simplify the system and give energy firms the nimble, responsive regulator they need to stay competitive.

The industry depends just as much on access to new markets, so through the Canadian energy strategy your government will pursue co-operation with other provinces, working with our neighbours to build the infrastructure needed to reach those markets.

At the same time your government will improve environmental monitoring. Together with Ottawa, Alberta will usher in a comprehensive, transparent, and scientifically credible system. The joint monitoring program will gather more information more frequently and allow faster detection of changes to the environment so industry and government can mitigate them.

Alberta's prosperity cannot come at the expense of its beauty; the two must go hand in hand. This government will ensure they do, and in support of this strong relationship with the government of Canada we will be opening a new office in Ottawa. The office will help forge stronger relations in Canada's capital and advocate Alberta's perspective on important federal and provincial matters.

Strengthening our links with the federal government and our provincial neighbours will help to develop new opportunities that benefit all Albertans. This is about looking beyond our borders to build the bridges the people of this province want and meeting their expectations.

Albertans have entrusted their leadership with a mandate to respond to change. Over the next four years this government will rise to the occasion and deliver and fulfill a clear, focused, target-driven mandate. Albertans will know where the province is headed and how progress is being made because this is a government that will stay true to its promises.

It will partner with Albertans from every walk of life to arrive at solutions. It will treat all Albertans with fairness and respect no matter where they live. It will mirror their concerns and goals and make manifest their values and beliefs. And, most importantly, it will get out of Albertans' way so they can unleash their creative potential and build a prosperous province, one that is not only rich in resources but in opportunity, and a quality of life that uplifts everyone it touches.

Thank you, ladies and gentlemen. May God bless you all.

God bless Alberta.

God bless Canada.

God save the Queen.

Merci.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: All rise, please.

The Speaker: Ladies and gentlemen, I would now invite Mr. Paul Lorieau, accompanied by the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra quartet, to lead us in the singing of God Save The Queen. Please remain standing at the conclusion of the singing for the exit of Their Honours.

Hon. Members and Guests:

God save our gracious Queen,
long live our noble Queen,
God save The Queen!
Send her victorious,
happy and glorious,
long to reign over us;
God save The Queen!

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms, Their Honours, their party, and the Premier left the Chamber as a fanfare of trumpets sounded]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

[The Mace was uncovered]

The Speaker: Hon. members and honoured guests, a few interesting reflections for you. On April 23, 2012, 87 individuals were elected to serve the people of Alberta as Members of the Legislative Assembly. This is the largest number of seats ever in Alberta's history. In the first general election in the new province of Alberta on November 9, 1905, 25 people were elected to represent Alberta's entire population of 185,412 people. Effectively, one member represented 7,416 people. I wonder how many doors they had to knock on. Today, as we all know, we are approximately 3.8 million people in Alberta, with one member representing on average approximately 41,900 citizens.

We are 87 individuals here. We come from various backgrounds and experiences. In fact, we have occupations that cover the alphabet from A to V – we didn't quite make it Z, unfortunately, but we'll work on it – from an agronomist to a veterinarian. We have one member who has served as a Member of Parliament, 23 members who have served as councillors or aldermen, and nine who have served as mayors or reeves. Twenty-four members are businesspeople, and 10 have been consultants or advocates. Fourteen members have worked in the civil service or as assistants to members at all levels of government. Eleven members are lawyers, six of whom are Queen's Counsel members.

Nine members have been involved in agriculture, farming and ranching. Eighteen members have been schoolteachers, educators, instructors, or lecturers. Six members have been school board trustees. Five members have served as front-line health care professionals: two doctors, two nurses, and one paramedic. Five members have worked in media – print, radio, and television – and four members have experience in fine arts or languages. Four have worked in the financial sector. Two members have law enforcement backgrounds. Five members have worked in real estate and four in the oil and gas industry. Seven members have worked in the trades and six in nonprofit environments. Members have also held the following occupations: biologist, bus driver, forester, geologist, miner, and professional bullfighter.

[The Premier returned to the Chamber]

Members are bringing a local as well as a global perspective to our Alberta Assembly. We have members who were born in nine of Canada's provinces and territories. We have members who were born in 10 different countries from around the world, including Brazil, China, India, Jamaica, Lebanon, Poland, Wales, and Vietnam.

Historically the average age of members in previous Legislatures, of which there were 27, has been 48.5 years at the time of election. Based on the information received to date, the average age of the members of today's 28th Legislature is 51. The ages of the members range from 31 to 72, but the majority of members come between the range of 50 and 59 years of age.

Twenty-two Members of our Legislative Assembly today are women, representing 25.3 per cent of the total number of members here. Comparatively, the most women ever elected were elected in the general election of 1997, when 24 of the 83, or 28.9 per cent of the members elected, were women.

The average number of months served in the Legislative Assembly by all 87 members is 60 months, or five years. Thirty-eight members present today are in their first term of office – 38 members – and I would ask those 38 members to please rise and receive our collective thanks for serving. [applause] Twenty-six members are in their second term of office, including one member who's been re-elected after a gap of four years; seven members are in their third term of office; six members are in their fourth term of office, including one member elected in a by-election; five members are in their fifth term of office, including two members elected in by-elections; four members are in their sixth term of office, including your Speaker; and one member truly has distinguished herself. She is now entering her seventh term of office, and she deserves our collective thanks, the Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

In conclusion, hon. members and guests, the diversity of backgrounds and experiences that we all bring to our work as members makes our province of Alberta so much stronger and so much more reflective of the daily lives and concerns of our constituents, whom we are honoured to serve. We are here to represent them and to work together constructively to improve the lives of all Albertans.

Tablings

The Speaker: It is now my honour to table a copy of the speech graciously given by His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012.

This bill will provide presumptive Workers' Compensation Board coverage to first responders who suffer from posttraumatic stress disorder. This proposed legislation supports the men and the women who risk their lives every day to make Alberta a safer place, a better place. Our first responders, whether they're paramedics, firefighters, or police officers, arrive at the time of our greatest need. This legislation is about returning that courtesy and that favour, and it's about being there when they need us, Mr. Speaker.

This bill will establish Alberta as the first jurisdiction in the country to offer this much-needed and extremely deserved coverage. Bill 1 is reflective of this government's ongoing commitment to the brave men and women who put their lives on the line so that we can enjoy ours.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a first time]

[The Clerk read the election returns]

Please rise and receive our warm welcome. [Remarks in Ukrainian] That translates as: I love you very much.

The hon. Premier.

1:30 p.m.

Monday, May 28, 2012

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, I would just remind you to please remain standing after the prayer for the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieau.

Let us pray. Dear Lord, at the beginning of this week we ask for renewed strength in the awareness of our duty and privilege as Members of the Alberta Legislative Assembly. We ask for the protection of this Assembly and also for the province we are honoured and elected to serve. Amen.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, members and Mr. Lorieau. Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Rob Ladouceur and his daughter Natasha. Natasha is currently a grade 2 student at G.P. Vanier school in Morinville. Rob, who was born and raised in Fort McMurray, now lives in Morinville. Rob works in the oil and gas sector and is also the Wildrose Party vice-president of policy. I would now ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour for me to stand and introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly 11 students and staff from Delta West Academy in Calgary-Mountain View. With them are Amanda Dennis and Boris Portero, their teachers. Please stand, and we'll give you a warm welcome from the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House 43 visitors from Jasper elementary school in my home town of Jasper in Jasper national park. Accompanying the students are two teachers, Mrs. Connie Sawka and Mme Judith Desmeules; parents Mrs. Angelika Zaniol, Ms Sue Nelson, and Mr. Kent Horsman. They are in the public members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly members of the Falun Dafa associations of Calgary and Edmonton, who are here today to seek an answer from the Alberta government for the recent cancellations of the Shen Yun performances at the Jubilee auditoriums in both Calgary and Edmonton. I would ask Zhiqiug Yang, Beichen Sun, Chunyan Huang, Minnan Liu, Jenny Yang, and Shar Chen to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and introduce two individuals that have been very strong supporters, workers, and volunteers. Today one of them is joining my team here in the Legislative Assembly. First, I'd like to introduce Balraj Singh "Bobby/Kramer" Randhawa. If Bobby could please rise. In addition, I have Suman Hoonjan, who is joining the Legislative Assembly as my summer intern. I'd ask both of them to rise, and I'd ask my colleagues to give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Vaw Pisut. Vaw is a 16-year-old grade 10 student from Chiang Mai, Thailand, here on a one-year exchange program with Rotary International youth. He arrived in Canada last August speaking only a handful of words and is now enrolled at Notre Dame high school in Calgary. Back home in Thailand Vaw was a member of a competitive marching band. While in Canada he has become an accomplished chef and hopes to attend culinary school once he graduates high school. Since arriving in Calgary, Vaw has had four host families and will experience the centennial Calgary Stampede in July before returning home to his family in Thailand later next month. Joining Vaw is someone who is special in my life, my husband, Gord. I'll ask them both to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly five representatives from the primary care network Edmonton North, located in the constituency of Edmonton-Decore. The primary care network Edmonton North is celebrating their fifth anniversary on June 1, 2012. Today I have five guests seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to please rise as I mention their names. We have with us today Dr. Mary Turner, president of the board of directors; Ms Leanne McGeachy, general manager; Ms Carly Strong, executive assistant; Ms Lindsay Steward, physician administrative services manager; and Ms Chantal Norris, office manager. I want to take this opportunity to thank them and all the physicians and allied health professionals at the primary care network Edmonton North for their dedicated service and contribution to our health care system. I would now ask the Legislative Assembly to please give them the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

Mr. Jeneroux: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a group of students and teachers from George P. Nicholson school, located in the new constituency of Edmonton-South West, that I'm honoured to serve. Accompanying these 24 bright and energetic students are teacher Mrs. Maxine Sprague and educational assistant Mrs. Terry Katerenchuk. They are excited to be here. Since I've been an MLA, this is already their second visit. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask that all students and guests from George P. Nicholson school rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Strankman: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 15 students from Lakeview Christian school in Stettler. They have travelled a long way to get here, and we are pleased and proud to have them here to witness democracy in action, something which is near and dear to my heart. With that, I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly four guests who are members of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees and part of the work action at the Hardisty Care Centre in Edmonton. Nearly 100 licensed practical nurses and health care aides have been on strike for a week now. These hard-working individuals are looking for a fair deal from their employer, Park Place Seniors Living, who has been paying wages 30 per cent lower than Alberta Health Services pays for the same work despite receiving large subsidies from this government. Alberta's NDP is proud to stand with these workers in their struggle for fairness. I would now ask my guests to rise as I call their names to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly: Mark Wells, Lorraine McCallum, Surinder Virdee, and Gagan Brar.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Sherwood Park, do you have some guests to introduce?

Ms Olesen: Yes, I do. Thank you. It is my honour, Mr. Speaker, to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House my husband, Rex Adam, and Bill and Erma Chow. I don't know if they've been able to make it, but they were scheduled to come. They are friends of mine from Sherwood Park, loyal supporters of all things democratic and good and are great volunteers in our community. Please, let's give them a welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly one of my constituents, Sonia Varela. Sonia was born in Spain and moved to Canada in 1974. She now works as an early learning supervisor and has volunteered with the food bank for over 10 years. Sonia follows Alberta politics very, very closely and can often be seen observing the proceedings here in this gallery. I would now ask Sonia to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a young man from my constituency, Tyson Phillips. Tyson grew up near Beauvallon and is a recent graduate from the Canadian University College in Lacombe, completing his bachelor of science degree in biology with a biomedical specialty in only three and a half years. Tyson is pursuing a career in medicine and is currently studying for the medical college admissions test. He was my deputy campaign manager in the last election. I know he has a very bright future in this province. I'd invite him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Statements by the Speaker

Decorum and Civility in the Chamber Rotation of Questions and Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like to take three minutes, actually, before we begin the rest of our daily Routine. On April 23, 2012, 87 of us were given a very special and a very rare honour, to serve as MLAs in this Assembly. Thirty-eight of you are brand new members and have been given that honour for the first time. I will remind you again that since 1905 only 829 Albertans have been given this honour. History will show that many of those MLAs were honoured again and yet again in their subsequent bids for re-election while others were not, and it causes one to wonder why.

Therefore, if you feel like I do, that it truly is an honour to serve in this Assembly, and I'm sure you all do, and that we all ought to respect that honour through our words and actions – and I'm sure you all do – then I would ask you to consider developing a personal credo. The word “credo,” as you will know, comes from the Latin language, and it means a system of beliefs and principles. It's a credo that I hope will serve you as your personal guide, your statement of commitment to yourself, as it were, to your colleagues, to your constituents, and to this Assembly.

I ask you to do this in order to help establish a new atmosphere in this Chamber, one that is respectful of each other, of our parliamentary traditions, and of our standing orders. We are all very aware of the numerous letters, e-mails, and phone calls that pour into the Speaker's office when members misbehave, use unparliamentary language, rudely interrupt each other, deliver speeches that are nothing more than character assassinations, and the list goes on. Your Speaker believes we can, we must, and we will do better.

So I ask you to construct your own personal credo so that it becomes your written conscience and reflects who you are and, perhaps even more importantly, how you want others to see you. For example, the letter “c” in your credo could stand for civility. The letter “r” could stand for respect. The letter “e” could stand for equality, the letter “d” for decorum, and the letter “o” for openness. I know that each of you is very creative and that you could come up with your own c-r-e-d-o. I invite you to do that, please. Your credo will symbolize the mark you wish to make in this Assembly. Please create it and refer to it before you speak and act in this Assembly, and try not to be swayed by external influences that would have you stray from your own personal credo.

Hon. members, it's time to clean up our act in this Assembly. It's also time to show Albertans that they have elected representatives in this Assembly who are truly worthy of the honour that has been bestowed upon each one of us. The opportunity is now, and it has been placed in your hands.

In closing, I can assure you that as your Speaker I fully understand and I fully support freedom of speech and that I am prepared to offer and afford considerable leeway in this regard. I can also assure you that as your Speaker I will not be very tolerant of words and actions that violate the long-standing decency and decorum with which this Assembly was first established over 100 years ago.

Thank you for your attention and, hopefully, also for your anticipated co-operation in this regard.

Hon. members, before we carry on with Members' Statements, it's important for me to outline the rotation that will apply for Oral Question Period and for Members' Statements. Late Friday afternoon the Speaker's office received a document signed by all four House leaders on the rotation of oral questions and of members' statements. At the appropriate time in the Routine I would invite the Government House Leader to table that document. I will ensure that the rotation outlined in that document is then distributed to all members.

Meanwhile I want to state that the contents of that document, which I have accepted as an agreement to proceed, will be an agreement for the benefit of everyone following these proceedings and for the permanent record of this Assembly.

Flowing from the agreement, the Official Opposition is entitled to the first three main questions each day. The Liberal caucus is entitled to the fourth question and the NDP caucus to the fifth. The Official Opposition is entitled to the sixth, and private government members are entitled to the seventh question. The Official Opposition is entitled to ask the eighth, 12th, 14th, and 16th questions.

On days 1 and 3 in the Assembly schedule the Official Opposition is entitled to ask the 18th question. Should Oral Question Period proceed that far, the Official Opposition will be entitled to ask the 20th and 21st questions. In the past few years about 18 or 19 sets of questions have typically been asked each day.

After the fourth question each day the third-party Liberal caucus will be entitled to the 10th question. On day 4 in the schedule the Liberal caucus will be entitled to the 18th question. As indicated, the NDP caucus will be entitled to the fifth question and to the 11th question each day. After the seventh question each day government members will be entitled to the ninth, 13th, 15th, 17th, 19th, and, should we get there, the 22nd question. On day 2 government members will be entitled to the 18th question as well.

With respect to Member's Statements the rotation differs from the one that my office sent out on Thursday, May 24, 2012, as the House leaders' agreement arrived late on Friday afternoon, May 25. Under the agreement government members will be entitled to four statements on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday and three statements on Wednesday. The Official Opposition will be entitled to two members' statements on Tuesday and Wednesday and one on Monday and Thursday. The third-party Liberals will be entitled to one statement on Monday and Thursday, and one member of the NDP caucus will have the opportunity to make a statement each Wednesday. Under the agreement the NDP caucus is entitled to an additional member's statement every third week. The Liberal caucus has one fewer member's statement every fourth week. Adjustments will be made to the number of government members' statements accordingly.

I want to briefly comment on the conduct of Oral Question Period. Members asking a question will be entitled to a main question and two supplementary questions. There should not be preambles to the supplementary questions. However, in keeping with the practice of the last Legislature questions and answers should be no longer than 35 seconds each. The chair will enforce this time to enable the maximum number of members possible to participate in question period. In keeping with the level of civility and decorum that I referenced earlier, it would be helpful if answers to questions were responsive.

With respect to Members' Statements I want members to know that they will continue to enjoy great leeway when it comes to this item of business. Members' Statements provide an opportunity in the daily Routine for members to recognize people, organizations, or events in their constituencies and for those words to be recorded in Hansard. It is also a time for members to comment on whatever issues they choose. However, it will not be an occasion for members to engage in unparliamentary language or to disparage other members, as I indicated earlier. I was a member in 1993 when this item of business was introduced into the daily Routine, and it was never the intention to have members make derogatory allegations against other members.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Nonrenewable Resource Revenues

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and to the Premier my congratulations on winning a hard-fought election campaign.

Mr. Speaker, based on today's declining oil price, this government has a $2 billion hole in its budget. Even with the rosy projection of $99 oil the cash deficit was $3 billion. With today's WTI price at $91 that deficit will be $5 billion. Last week CIBC said that oil prices will decline for another three months and will, quote, ultimately bottom in the mid-$80s. Wildrose stands for fiscal accountability. To the Premier: how will she get out of this new $2 billion budget hole? By increasing the deficit, raising taxes, or wiping out what's left of our savings?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to welcome the Leader of the Official Opposition to the House and all new members that are in the House today.

The wonderful thing that we've been able to do and what we proved to Albertans on April 23 is that a Progressive Conservative government can put forward a bold plan that is fiscally responsible, with no tax increases, no new taxes, and continue to provide services to Albertans, Mr. Speaker. Our projections are entirely consistent with what's happening right now in the international economy. In fact, the average that we projected was $99.25, and the average as of today is $99. So we're confident in our plan.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that the Calgary Chamber of Commerce said when Budget 2012 was tabled that Alberta "relies too heavily on volatile royalty revenue," what is her plan to end Alberta's reliance on these kinds of revenues and secure long-term prosperity for future generations?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In terms of what the Premier talked about, our plan is stable, and we are on track currently. In terms of diversifying the economy, we will make investments in areas of the province where we know we can grow our tax base, and that will generate additional tax base and reduce our reliance on nonrenewable resources.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that these numbers don't even factor in the expensive promises that she made during the election campaign, how does she anticipate being able to manage the budget quagmire while delivering on the promises that Albertans elected her to keep?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, as we've said many, many times in this House and during the campaign, we presented Albertans with a fiscal plan and a plan to invest for the future of this province, which, I must say, on April 23 they seem to have approved of because we are here on the government side.

In addition to that, we have a budgetary process that we're monitoring. Many of the campaign commitments that we've made are already included in our budget process, and those things that were not will be included in the budget process because they were announced after the period of time when we delivered it in this House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. opposition leader for the second main question.

Alberta Office in Ottawa

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week's throne speech promised yet another Alberta embassy office although this time it's in our own country. At the cost of nearly $1 million it creates a role that clearly duplicates that which should be currently performed by members of the Premier's own government and federally elected members. To the Premier: given that other provinces are dispensing with their Ottawa offices, how can the Premier justify this unnecessary expense when we have our own deficit issues?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're very proud of the work that we've been able to do in the past six months in partnership with the federal government, and we've had tremendous success with respect to environmental management and ensuring that Canadians and people around the world understand the story of Alberta. It's important not only for our own economy but for the economy of Canada.

We had a wonderful conversation last week with the Prime Minister's office, certainly agreed that it was important for Alberta to have an office in Ottawa, Mr. Speaker. We have an international diplomatic corps there. We have the opportunity to work continually with our caucuses across the country and to ensure that our ministers do travel back and forth. This will add to our strength in Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Official Opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that there are so many senior MPs, including the Prime Minister himself, that represent constituencies in Alberta, why does the Premier feel that she and her intergovernmental minister's office are not able to work directly with the federal government?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as I said in my first answer, it's very clear that the issues that we need to manage on behalf of Alberta matter to Canada's economy, and they matter to caucuses from provinces across this country, and they matter in terms of us being able to provide support to our federal colleagues. You know, we probably in the last six months have had at least three cabinet ministers in Ottawa every month. One of the best parts of the conversation has been to be able to hear from our federal colleagues that represent Alberta about how important strengthening their ability to do research and advance arguments on behalf of Alberta is, and that's what this office will do.

The Speaker: The hon. Official Opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given her insistence on proceeding with this appointment, will she then at least break with past practices and commit to holding a fair, open, and transparent competition for Alberta's Ottawa office?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, the Premier has clearly indicated that we will engage an executive search firm to search for suitable candidates for at least the senior official position and populate the office with three employees in total. Certainly, that will be transparent.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Official Opposition leader for the third main question.

Cancellation of Jubilee Auditoria Performances

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before the election Albertans saw this government's true colours: bullying and intimidating municipal councillors, school boards, and even everyday Albertans simply because they spoke out against government policy. Albertans hoped that the election would result in a different tone, but just one week after the election the Culture minister abruptly cancelled the popular annual performance of Chinese music and dance called Shen Yun after the group publicly raised concerns about the management at the Jubilee Auditorium. The Premier says her government is different, but these are the same old PC strong-arm tactics. What is she going to do to fix this situation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I'm honoured to have the group in attendance in the Chamber.

I do want to say that at the beginning, when this began, it was a contractual issue between the Jubilee auditoriums and the performers. For me it's about the conversation of the performers, how they perform, and I've asked my officials and my assistant deputy minister to meet with them as well.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that just days after the election she told the Edmonton Journal that "it's going to be big change" when talking about her government and given that this most recent example of bullying came, ironically, just one day before those words appeared in print, can the Premier explain to this House how axing these annual performances counts as big change?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, you know, what would be really nice to see in terms of change is actually talking about the issues of the day in this House, but if we're not going to do that, what I will say, as our minister has already said, is that this is a safety issue. This is an issue with respect to whether or not netting should be up around a stage, and the management of the auditoriums believe that to be the case. We will always be concerned about the safety of audiences and the safety of performers. That is our primary concern, and it is the only reason that this issue is going on. There's a contractual dispute.

The Speaker: The Official Opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given her repeated promises to do things differently, will she instruct her Culture minister to resolve this issue, or is she telling this Assembly that she stands behind her minister's decision?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the minister has already said that she has taken steps to see if this issue can be resolved, but it is not appropriate to make that sort of commitment in this House. This is a contractual issue that has to do with safety. If those issues are not resolved, then we will have an unfortunate situation, but the safety of performers and the safety of audiences will be paramount.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Alberta Health Services Quarterly Report

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Congratulations on your selection.

Mr. Speaker, this government deliberately delayed the AHS March report until after the election, and it's easy to see why: heart bypass surgery wait times, fail; hip and knee replacement surgery wait times, fail; radiation therapy access, fail; placing our vulnerable in continuing care beds, fail; physician and staff engagement, fail; patients admitted from ER within eight hours, fail. To the Premier: how can you possibly justify keeping this important information from Albertans on the eve of an election?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it is absolutely untrue to suggest that any information was withheld from Albertans. Alberta Health Services produced its quarterly performance report in accordance with its normal schedule. We had just introduced a budget in this House, and at my request I took the opportunity to sit down with Alberta Health Services to talk about their performance over the last three months and, more importantly, talk about how new resources offered in Budget 2012 might be offered to supplement that performance.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this was a March quarterly report, not a May quarterly report, again, Madam Premier, do you honestly believe that intentionally delaying the March report until May, until after the election, does not call the integrity of AHS and your integrity into question?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's disappointing – and it is the same old same old – that we would hear the hon. member suggest, first of all, that the report was delayed for political reasons and, secondly, by his earlier examples, that Alberta's health system is somehow a failure. In fact, I can tell you that in a report released last week by the Canadian Institute for Health Information, Alberta enjoys the lowest in-hospital mortality rates, the lowest rates of hospital readmission for heart attacks, the second-best rate for heart attack surgery access in Canada, the second-best wait times in the country for hip fracture surgery, within 48 hours, and the lowest rate in the country of self-reported chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we spend $16 billion a year, Albertans expect more.

Given that the Premier talks so much about results-based budgeting, yet at the same time you choose as your Energy minister the very man who led AHS to these abysmal results, I can't help but wonder, Madam Premier: will you be budgeting based on good results or poor results?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, what this government talked about during the election campaign and what we will continue to be committed to is achieving the best possible value that we can from taxpayer dollars spent on health care.

I'm sure it is very illuminating to members and, more importantly, to employees of Alberta Health Services, who work so diligently to deliver health care of the highest quality, to know that the hon. member believes their work is in vain and is a failure. This government does not believe that. We enjoy one of the best health care systems in the country. We will continue to work to improve it in targeted areas that we talked about during the election.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Child Poverty

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. During the recent election the Premier promised a plan to end child poverty in Alberta. This is a noble goal and a very ambitious undertaking, yet there is no mention at all of this plan in the Speech from the Throne, which we heard last week. My question is to the Premier. Why not?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this is a priority for our government. It's a priority for our Minister of Human Services. In fact, some of this work has already begun. The work that our minister has been doing in consultation with Albertans around the social policy framework will be an important component of this. It's not the only component, but it is critical.

The second piece, of course, is that what we want to see with respect to ending child poverty is very much what we have been able to accomplish as a government with respect to the 10-year plan to end homelessness. Those consultations are ongoing, Mr. Speaker, and we are committed to that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given the unlikelihood that a Tory government actually wants to do something to reduce poverty and given that such a major undertaking should have been prominently featured in the government's Speech from the Throne, will the Premier admit that the elimination of child poverty is not really anything more than a hollow election promise?

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The social policy framework and the commitment to end child poverty in five years and to have a plan to reduce poverty in this province over 10 years is very much part and parcel of the mandate of Human Services. I've been tasked with this since prior to the election, and I can report to this House that there has been a considerable amount of work done in this area. We've met with many people in the whole social agency area, our partners in this area. This is a plan which will result from a community discussion. It won't be a government plan; it will be a plan that's owned and operated by Albertans and for Albertans. It's integral to the future of this province and to reducing the social cost of failure in this province.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that 400,000 Albertans, including 78,000 children, live in poverty in this province, a situation that developed under 40 years of Conservative rule, and given that that's either something that the government is going to do something about or the Speech from the Throne means nothing, will the Premier tell us which one?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, the Premier has been very strong on this matter right from the day that she took office. She was very strong on this matter when she asked me to take on the role of Human Services back in October. She was very strong on this matter during the election campaign. She was very strong on this matter when she asked me to continue the mandate in Human Services.

We're going to take on poverty in this province, and we're going to take on child poverty in this province. We're going to make the social policy framework integral to the way that we deal to ensure that Albertans have an opportunity to be successful and an opportunity to take advantage of the opportunity which is Alberta.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Falun Dafa associations in Edmonton and Calgary have presented the world-renowned Shen Yun performances to sold-out audiences at the government-owned Jubilee auditoriums since 2007. The Culture minister's rash cancellation of next year's performances means the show will have no venue large enough to accommodate it and effectively ban Shen Yun's world-class performances from Alberta. Representatives are here today hoping for a resolution to the mess this government has created. To the Minister of Culture: will she reverse her decision today and reinstate the cancelled Shen Yun performances?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's really important to note that the Jubilees for the past 55 years have hosted national and international performances from all over the world. I'm very proud of that record. As I indicated previously, my officials have offered to meet with the Shen Yun group, and I'm looking forward to that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Culture: given the silence Falun Dafa encountered when they tried raising their concerns with the Culture minister privately and given that the only correspondence they received from the government was a surprise cancellation of the Shen Yun performances, will she apologize to the Falun Dafa representatives in the gallery today for how she has treated them and immediately reinstate the 2013 performances?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, as mentioned previously, I'm not going to apologize for the safety of the performances or the musicians for that matter. I think it's really important to note that when there are contractual obligations between a performing group and the Jubilee, that's something that I'm looking at. Again, I think it's important to note that my officials will be meeting with them, and I'm looking forward to the outcome of that meeting.

We know that the Jubilee is a fabulous place for performances, and we know that many groups look forward to performing there.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Culture: if she is unwilling to reinstate the Shen Yun performances today, will she at least commit to meet with the Falun Dafa Association or with a mediator and give a date in hopes of resolving the issues they have raised?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The very first official request to my office came on May 16. Following that, I have asked my officials to meet with them. At the end of that, I will look forward to that report.

I think at the end of the day, for me, we know that many groups that come to the Jubilee Auditorium look forward to coming to it. As well, in the next two years the facilities are both fully booked.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Twinning of Highway 63

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following the tragic fatalities on highway 63 at the end of April the province has committed to completing a report on the status of highway 63. My questions today are for the Minister of Transportation. Albertans are asking for our province to take action. Why do we need another report?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, the province has not waited to take action. I would be pleased for the House to know that the province has already spent about a billion dollars in and around Fort McMurray, improving that road. In the present and upcoming three-year budget there is $450 million already approved, after which time the road from just north of Wandering River down to highway 55 will be twinned.

Mr. Speaker, the additional report coming up is so that we can speed up the twinning of the road between Wandering River and Fort McMurray, and that will be done with the able assistance of the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's good. My first supplemental to the same minister: what's the minister doing today to improve safety on highway 63?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There has always been enforcement on that road, but there has been increased enforcement. In fact, a couple of weekends ago the officials wrote in excess of 600 tickets, and that is in recognition of the behaviour that needs to change. This government is focused on doing that, and we will not stop until we make it better, which is why we have a special adviser, which is why the Premier has been very strong on saying that we will twin it. Between now and the time that it's twinned, we will make constant improvement.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: now, we know that highway 63 is a unique highway and there are many challenges with construction on that road, but what are you going to do to address these challenges?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, actually, some of the challenges have been met, and we'll continue to meet the other ones. Because this road needs to be built through an area of muskeg and in weather with fairly extreme temperature variation, it is a little more complicated than other roads. We are working through all those issues. We have addressed, essentially, all the environmental issues, and we will be constantly vigilant. As more issues come up, we are committed to dealing with each and every one of them until the road is completed.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Friday, just a day after the Premier promised a new era of transparency and accountability as the guiding principles of this government, Elections Alberta reported that there have been 28 cases of illegal donations made to the governing PC Party. The details of these investigations are kept secret because of the legislation this Premier passed while Justice minister. Even the PC president, Bill Smith, admitted that it's time to change the laws. Will the Premier turn the page and do the right thing and commit to changing the disclosure laws in the name of open and transparent government?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I thank the member for that question. I share his concern about openness and transparency, but we must go back to the facts. In 2008 the legislation was changed. Why? At the request of the Chief Electoral Officer at that time. If he has other recommendations, I'm happy to go and look at them now, but we are simply following the law that the Chief Electoral Officer requested that we put in.

Mr. Saskiw: The Chief Electoral Officer said that he's just upholding the legislation. He said that it's the government's job to deal with issues of transparency.

Given that the Premier continues to lack the political will to act now and do the right thing on this very serious matter of illegal donations, will she at least do the ethical thing and reveal how much money her party has received, ensuring that every last penny has been returned?

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Justice and Solicitor General has been very clear. A previous Chief Electoral Officer put recommendations to this Chamber for changes to the legislation. This Legislature, as it normally does, has adhered to his request and has amended the law. The Chief Electoral Officer is upholding the law that came about by his predecessor's recommendation. If the current Chief Electoral Officer feels that changes need to be made to this legislation, we definitely will take it under advisement and introduce such changes if required.

Mr. Saskiw: Mr. Speaker, you don't need a law or recommendation to do the right thing.

Will the Premier at least agree that it's extremely unethical for this government to withhold information on illegal donations from Albertans, and will she ensure that all illegal donations identified by the Chief Electoral Officer have been returned and publicly reported?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this member will learn very soon that he's in this Chamber not only to make laws but also to follow laws. This Premier and this Chamber will follow the laws of the land. There is a law in place right now that was brought upon the recommendation of the Chief Electoral Officer. If changes need to be made, changes will be made and then followed. At this point in time this government and the Chief Electoral Officer are following the law that is on the books, which, by the way, as I said earlier, came about upon his recommendation.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, did you have a question inserted here?

If not, we'll move on to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Taxation Policy

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Deciding what to do with highway 63 should be relatively easy. Find some asphalt; hire some workers; build the road. Unfortunately, it's a lot harder to find money to pay for it when the government does not collect the revenue we need from the citizens. Instead, the government has opted to spend all of our resource revenue on day-to-day expenses rather than saving revenue generated from oil and gas. To the Finance minister: given that roads are legitimate expenses for the government to make, why are we not getting rid of our flat-tax system, that sees a person making a million dollars a year pay the same rate of tax as someone making $30,000 a year, so we can afford things like highway 63?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I recall, there was that kind of a plan put forward to the people of Alberta in their platform, and it didn't do so well for them because I don't think the people of Alberta recognized that that was going to be something that would be beneficial for them.

We are looking at various alternatives as to how we can look at our capital and build our capital. Highway 63: as the Minister of Transportation has already indicated, there is a considerable amount of money built into the budget today to complete roughly half of that twinning. We will go through our capital process and our budgeting process and look at ways we can expedite that as we move forward without raising Albertans' taxes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I think the hon. minister would agree that spending all of our resource revenues on today's bills is irresponsible. Will the government then implement a policy that, one, either adopts a fair taxation system or, two, adopts actually a user-pay system that could pay for things. Like, put up a toll road on highway 63; do it that way. If you don't want to ask the citizens to pay through taxation, set up a toll road.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are some very, very good ideas that have been coming to our attention around things like toll roads and things like being able to have Albertans engaged in working on the capital of the province of Alberta. There are a number of things that we're going to be looking at over the coming weeks to determine how we might be able to expedite some of the capital in the province that's needed today.

I would also point out that Albertans have the benefit of a number of savings accounts, into which we have put a tremendous amount of royalty revenue over a number of years: the heritage savings trust fund, the access to the future fund, the Alberta heritage fund for medical research, the Alberta ingenuity fund, the sustainability fund, and there are others. We are in the strongest financial position, I dare say, of any jurisdiction in the western hemisphere, and Albertans recognize that.

Mr. Hehr: Well, as the hon. minister knows full well, we haven't put a dime away into the heritage trust fund since 1987, so I question all the saving he's talking about. When will we stop spending all of our fossil fuel revenues to pay today's bills?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, it's unfortunate that this hon. member has not read anything that has been presented in the budgets that have been brought forward in this House over the last five or six years because he would then know that we have indeed put money into the Alberta heritage savings trust fund, that we have indeed put money into the access to the future fund, that we have indeed put money into the Alberta heritage fund for medical research and the sustainability fund as well. Those are all funds that benefit Albertans today and will benefit Albertans in the future. To suggest that we're somehow in a fiscal problem at this point in time is just not reality.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the Speaker received six notes at once and inadvertently called for the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. However, I'm going to recognize the hon. member who should have been up for questions at that moment, the Member for Banff-Cochrane, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Results-based Budgeting

Mr. Casey: Mr. Speaker, the government has said that the new fiscal discipline brought about from results-based budgeting will control spending, but we haven't seen any results yet. My question is to the President of the Treasury Board and Minister of Finance. Do you really think this will reduce spending?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, government did not stop working during the election campaign. The department officials had been working on the framework and how we would move forward. We do believe that there will be some savings that come from results-based budgeting, but it is about getting results for taxpayers. Looking at the size and scope of government, we're looking at doing about a third of the programs that the government offers every year for the next three years, with a loop on that. That includes agencies, boards, and commissions. If we review these and find that what is being delivered is not giving the benefit and the value to Albertans, then we're going to change them. We do expect to see some savings through the process.

Mr. Casey: Mr. Speaker, my question is again to the President of the Treasury Board and Minister of Finance. With oil prices down and a volatile world economy how can results-based budgeting possibly help this situation?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as was mentioned earlier in question period, we are actually on target with the estimates for revenue that we had put forward at $99 a barrel. It's unfortunate that the hon. members haven't figured this out yet. We don't budget for the moment; we budget for the year. Today's spot price might be lower than what our annualized number was. In fact, the annualized number today is at $99 and change, and our revenue forecast was $99.25. On the spending side results-based budgeting will focus on using Alberta's tax dollars in a responsible, more focused way, and we do expect to see results.

Mr. Casey: My last question is to the same minister. When can Albertans expect to see a balanced budget?

Mr. Horner: We expect that we will be balancing the budget in 2013-14 as we committed, as we promised, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member from Edmonton-Strathcona.

Hardisty Care Centre Labour Dispute

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hardisty care's disputes inquiry found that taxpayer funding for staff is not "sufficiently different from comparable facilities to warrant the payment of wages lower than those paid to LPN's and HCA's under other collective agreements," yet the corporation won't negotiate with staff, compromises care for seniors, all the while pocketing taxpayer-funded profits. To the Minister of Human Services: why won't he admit that this strike is the direct result of this government's private delivery model for seniors' care?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of delivery models for care for seniors and people who need assisted living processes that all add to the choice that is available for all Albertans and all add to the capacity in the system for Albertans.

What the hon. member is talking about is a private dispute between an employer and employees as they try to get a first contract in place. This government did everything it could to get those parties together. We put in place a disputes inquiry board to ensure that they had the opportunity to come together. [interjection] We are ready, willing, and able to provide mediation in the process, and we encourage the parties to get together and to resolve this dispute in the interests of the patients and the residents in that facility.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. member for Edmonton-Centre, if you wish to get on the speaking list, I'd be happy to recognize you.

Ms Notley: To the Minister of Health: given that care staff at Hardisty are striking because their corporate employer pays them 30 per cent less than what it receives in taxpayer funds and given that this strike is further evidence that the government's insistence on paying taxpayer dollars to the private sector cuts services and disrespects care workers for the sake of profiteering, why won't the minister admit that private, for-profit delivery either hurts care or costs more?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, this is not an ideological question. As my colleague the hon. Minister of Human Services has said, it is about an employer and a group of employees attempting to negotiate a first contract. The standards in this province that apply in continuing care facilities, whether with respect to accommodation or with respect to health care, apply equally to all providers, whether public, private, or not-for-profit.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Notley: Well, it may apply equally, but it doesn't apply equally to the workers who should be getting the money that they're not getting right now.

Now, given that this government is encouraging more private delivery of seniors' care and given that the situation at Hardisty is a strikingly clear example of the profit motive undermining care for seniors, will the Minister of Health at least admit that his seniors' care plan will only serve to take money out of the pockets of Alberta seniors and Alberta taxpayers to raise profits for his private company friends?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the same regulations that apply to health care standards and accommodation standards apply to the setting of the accommodation rate that seniors pay in Alberta. That rate is the same regardless of the provider.

With respect to the quality of care and the safety of the patients in Hardisty, Mr. Speaker, I can advise the House that both Alberta Health Services and my ministry are monitoring the situation on a daily basis. I am completely satisfied as minister that all the standards are being adhered to and that the residents are in safe hands at Hardisty.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Continuing Care Standards

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Thursday's throne speech said that the government "will design and implement a plan to extend the province's network of continuing care centres so seniors can find accommodations that suit their budget and family arrangements." My questions are all to the Minister of Health. Minister, what regulations or standards exist on patient-staff ratio in both public and private continuing care facilities?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member referred to two new continuing care centres that were announced last year. We're very proud of those because they are going to facilitate complete aging in place for seniors, from a very independent level of living right through to long-term care and palliative care.

With respect to standards, as I said earlier, the standards that are in place in Alberta, the health care standards and the accommodation standards, apply to all operators. Again, rather than an ideological basis for the standards, our goal is to ensure that residents receive the appropriate level of care in the appropriate place at the right time. We will continue to design our strategy along those principles.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know what spaceship he's on, but he's not on this one. You didn't answer the question. Who is responsible for implementation of the continuing care health service standards to ensure that seniors receive the care that they so richly deserve?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm certainly not on that spaceship, but I will tell you, as I said in the answer to the earlier question, that the health care standards apply to all. The health care standards are set by government. They are done so in consultation with stakeholders, including residents, Albertans who use the system. We will continue to apply the principle of providing the appropriate level of care to the residents in their particular circumstances.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to go back to question 1. What regulations or standards exist on patient-staff ratio in both public and private continuing care facilities? That's staff ratio. Is it 1 to 140, 1 to 60, 1 to 40?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the information on continuing care health standards is public. As the hon. member well knows, it is available to her to refer to and to comment on as she wishes. With respect to particular patient-staff ratios there are various places in legislation and regulation where one can look.

Again, Mr. Speaker, the guiding principle for this government will be to provide the right level of care for the right resident in their appropriate circumstances.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Electricity Retail Market Review

Mr. Dorward: Mr. Speaker, while electricity prices are now low, just a few short months ago they reached record highs. My constituents want to know if these types of fluctuations are something they can expect to see in the future. To the Minister of Energy: what has been done to mitigate the dramatic fluctuations of the energy markets so that my constituents can better anticipate their electricity costs?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to take this question because we all know people for whom there's a lot of volatility in their electricity bills, and that actually can be a hardship for people on fixed incomes, for seniors, and for people who are more vulnerable. As a result, it's critically important, I think, that we take a good look at this question. Of course, the Premier announced a task force, an independent committee, in March to consider this very issue, the Retail Market Review Committee, led by Mr. Pound. We're looking forward to that, and I encourage Albertans to participate in that process.

Mr. Dorward: If that committee has been in place since March, what can they report today?

Mr. Hughes: Mr. Speaker, the committee will be reporting in due course. Obviously, they've been working away while the rest of us were engaged in other activities. As a result, over the next two weeks they'll be hearing from stakeholders in both Calgary and Edmonton, more than 30 stakeholder groups, who've expressed an interest. I'd encourage all Albertans to follow that and send in their observations as well.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Dorward: How do my constituents do that, send in their responses to those meetings?

Ms Blakeman: Read the website.

Mr. Hughes: Mr. Speaker, the comment from our colleague opposite is quite astute. Actually, Albertans can visit the website. It's www.rmrc.ca. They can fill out an online survey. They can provide their input. They can attend the public sessions in Calgary and Edmonton over the next couple of weeks. We need to do all we can to ensure that there is less volatility in the electrical system for retail customers in this province.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health stated that seniors deserve aging-in-place accommodations that allow them to have a full range of care. Instead, while seniors are placed in continuing care, they are now being hit with a hidden seniors' tax that makes them pay hundreds more a month for such simple amenities as an extra shower or for assistance in managing their medication. Does the Minister of Health feel that it is okay to continue to nickel and dime our seniors for such basic assistance?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is not correct in suggesting that there are any sort of hidden charges or tax in the continuing care system. As I said in response to a question from her colleague earlier on, the continuing care accommodation rate is set by government. It is set according to regulation, and it is reviewed on a regular basis. That said, the hon. member may be referring to the contractual arrangements that Alberta Health Services maintains with operators that stipulate minimum levels of service that must be provided.

Mrs. Towle: Mr. Speaker, given the minister's answer, does the Minister of Health understand that even though a senior has been approved for home care, many facilities are not providing even the showers that home care has approved because of lack of staff? Is the minister saying that this is what our seniors deserve?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, again as I said in response to the hon. member's colleague's earlier question, there are two sets of standards that are administered by the province with respect to continuing care: the accommodation standards and the health care standards. If this hon. member is aware of an instance where the required services under the Alberta Health Services contract with the operator are not being provided, I would encourage her – I would in fact urge her – to report that to my department.

Thank you.

Mrs. Towle: Again to the minister: given that I'm hearing from families across the province that seniors are not even getting their one or two showers that are home care approved, where is the money going, how is the government holding facilities accountable for our taxpayer dollars, and what are we doing to support our front-line staff?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've spent a lot of time in the House today explaining the standards, and I won't do that another time. Again, if the hon. member has some concerns about standards that are not being adhered to by particular operators, I would encourage her – I would in fact urge her – to report those. If the hon. member wants to entertain a discussion about what else can be done to enhance services that are offered to seniors, I would be equally interested in her input.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Family Care Clinics

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In March of this year this government announced that Edmonton, Calgary, and Slave Lake would be the sites of three pilot family care clinics. Then during the recent provincial election the Premier announced that over the next three years Alberta would see those family care clinics expand to about 140 communities across the province. To the Minister of Health: can the minister explain in layman's terms what a family care clinic is and how they are going to improve access to health care?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much. The hon. member is absolutely right. This government was elected by Albertans in large part on a platform that would see us offer primary health care delivered by teams to every Albertan in or near their home community. That commitment is unwavering, Mr. Speaker. The introduction of family care clinics, building on the success of primary care networks, is a big part of that. The services that are offered have been discussed in this House before. They are delivered by family physicians, nurse practitioners, and other professionals working in a team environment to meet the basic needs of families in the community.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since we have a shortage of health care providers, can the minister provide assurances that these clinics will be fully staffed and ready to serve Calgarians and Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is committed, as we have said prior in this House, to using all health professionals to the full scope of their training and expertise. Much of our success in pursuing this goal of expanding family care clinics and offering primary health care to all Albertans will in fact be founded on that very principle. We'll be continuing to work with physicians, nurse practitioners, dietitians, many other health professionals to ensure that their opportunity to practise to their full scope of practice is made available to them.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: how will the family care clinics be affiliated with the primary care networks that we presently have in our communities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the question because it has come up frequently. First of all, we will continue to consult with all the health professions involved in both models of care as we move ahead. But, more importantly, we will be in a position, I dare say, in a few short months to articulate very clearly to Albertans what suite of core services we want to make available to them in their community. We will be consulting with the communities in addition to the health professionals about their local needs, and we will be designing these models not in a cookie-cutter approach but in a design that allows us to meet individual community needs as they change over time.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Critical Transmission Review Committee

Mr. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, the Critical Transmission Review Committee disallowed and prohibited stakeholders from submitting evidence. Instead, they only asked four questions of the stakeholders. The AESO responded to one of its questions, and I'm going to quote the AESO here: Alberta's electricity pricing system has actually worked very well for the citizens of Alberta. That was stated on December 12. Some 73 days later, on February 23, the Premier convened a commission to look into the pricing of electricity. To the Minister of Energy. Both can't be correct. Which is it? Is it the minister, or is it the AESO? Are the stakeholders here . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what the nature of the question is as the member apparently didn't have a chance to complete his question. However, the Premier has put a process in place, and the process will be followed. It was clear and transparent, and we will commit to the process that the Premier has ultimately put in place.

I'm looking forward to the supplemental question. Maybe I can give a more clear answer.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Critical Transmission Review Committee appointed by this government prohibited the submission of evidence, which in effect means that they did not review any evidence. With billions of dollars at stake will the Minister of Energy agree that they should have at least looked at some evidence before issuing its findings?

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A decision has been made. Obviously, the body has been satisfied with the level of information and evidence that was provided to it. If the member has any questions relevant to the quality of information that was available to the body, he should be questioning that body directly. To my understanding the body felt that it had all the relevant information it needed in order to render a decision.

The Speaker: Hon. member, anything further?

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Relevant information comes in the form of evidence. The CTRC cited evidence. It cited evidence from 2004, but it did not read that evidence, nor did it allow that evidence to be submitted. Will the Minister of Energy admit that the Critical Transmission Review Committee erred when it relied upon a document that it did not review and did not allow to be submitted as evidence?

Mr. Lukaszuk: No.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Aboriginal Relations

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This month aboriginal relations was separated from intergovernmental, international, and aboriginal relations to become a stand-alone ministry. My first question is to the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. Will this separation be a real benefit to the aboriginal community?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier has been listening to aboriginal communities, and she recognizes the important role and contributions they make to Alberta's society and economy. Establishing Aboriginal Relations as a stand-alone ministry demonstrates the priority this government has placed on working with aboriginal communities on issues important to them, such as economic opportunities and benefits, establishing a consultation process, and providing more opportunities for aboriginal women and youth.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister: now as a stand-alone ministry what practical progress can we truly expect to see based on lessons learned from the past?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's important that we improve the relationship between government and Alberta's aboriginal population. This is vital to supporting the economic, social, and community development that's key for aboriginal peoples. This government has three main priorities: investing in families and communities, securing Alberta's economic future, and advancing world leadership of resources. Aboriginal communities and people are going to be an important part of that priority.

Mr. Jeneroux: Based on these priorities, are we going to see real improvement for the aboriginal community over the next four years?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said in my first answer, the Premier sees the importance of our aboriginal communities to this province, so our first priority is going to be finishing the ongoing review of the First Nations consultation policy. We're then going to negotiate a long-term governance and funding arrangement with the Métis settlements, and we're also going to develop a First Nations economic benefits framework in collaboration with First Nations. I look forward to working with all our aboriginal communities on all of these matters in the near future.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, just before we proceed with Members' Statements, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two special guests that are good friends of the Wildrose. The first one is the former Member for Calgary-Glenmore, Paul Hinman, who is here to listen, actually, to our first question period as the Official Opposition and, obviously, listen to our leader as she does her response to the Speech from the Throne. The second is a friend of mine – and his name is John Winslow – who is also joining Mr. Hinman. We're pleased to see both of them. I'd ask them to stand and receive a warm welcome.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Just before recognizing the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore for her member's statement, I just want to comment that the first question period here went as smoothly as any question period I have ever witnessed in this Assembly. Part of the reason for that is probably because people actually took the time to listen to each other. Almost all of the questioners and the answer persons also referred through and to the chair their answers, and that helped a lot. Secondly, we didn't actually have a large amount of heckling until almost 11 minutes in, which was pretty good.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Primary Care Network Edmonton North

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise today to recognize an integral part of the provincial government's direction on primary health care service. A made-in-Alberta solution to primary care are the primary care networks, and the constituency of Edmonton-Decore is very fortunate to have the primary care network Edmonton North. A primary care network serves as a front door to health care, where a group of family doctors and Alberta Health Services, through their allied health professionals, co-ordinate health services for patients. They diagnose and manage health conditions, provide treatment of health issues or injuries, and provide wellness advice and programs.

On June 1, 2012, the primary care network Edmonton North will be celebrating its fifth anniversary of serving the health care needs of thousands of patients. As part of the anniversary celebrations, Mr. Speaker, the primary care network Edmonton North will be launching the Stepping Up! Pedometer Challenge, a fun way for teams of participants to improve personal health and healthy living. The pedometer challenge will run from June 1 to September 7, 2012, and having participants commit to a summer of improving their health by walking in north Edmonton's beautiful parks and green spaces and throughout our great capital city will truly be a benefit for life. I encourage all the residents of north Edmonton to step up and step out in the pedometer challenge, and I wish the best success to all participants.

Congratulations and sincere appreciation to all of our health care professionals at the primary care network Edmonton North for five years of outstanding success and service.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Shen Yun Performing Artists

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the things we all love about Alberta is how welcoming we are to different cultures. This diversity makes us strong. That is why I'm so disappointed and puzzled as to why this PC government has so badly mistreated Alberta adherents of Falun Dafa, a traditional Chinese practice whose key moral philosophies are truthfulness, compassion, and forbearance.

For several years the Falun Dafa associations of Edmonton and Calgary have organized the appearance of Shen Yun at our northern and southern Jubilee auditoriums. These performances are a beautiful and skilful display of Chinese music, dance, and other performing arts. [Remarks in Mandarin] These are peaceful and hard-working Chinese-Canadians who love their province and country. They love democracy, free speech, and sharing the beauty of the Chinese culture. They deserve our respect, as do all Chinese-Canadians, regardless of their beliefs. [As submitted]

During a recent Calgary performance there were some technical, privacy, and safety issues that this group felt the southern Jubilee management failed to appropriately address. After having their complaints ignored by the arts and culture minister, Falun Dafa Calgary sent out a press release complaining about these issues. In response the minister went ballistic and sent a letter stating that because of their press release the Calgary association would be forbidden from organizing Shen Yun at the southern Jubilee, then, inexplicably, that Falun Dafa Edmonton, a completely separate group who had nothing to do with the complaint, would also lose its right to organize Shen Yun at the northern Jubilee. Obviously, these bullying tactics are unacceptable and very tiresome.

Premier, this is Alberta, not Beijing. Let us not forget who we are as Albertans and what we stand for. I ask you to reverse your minister's decision and let these Canadians, these Albertans, exercise their rights of free speech and expression, that so many of them came to this country and province to acquire.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, and thank you for providing the translation in advance. I couldn't quite tell if it was Mandarin or Cantonese, but it sounded more Mandarin to me. Thank you for that.

The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Fort Saskatchewan Community Hospital CT Scanner

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The people living in and around Fort Saskatchewan, in my riding, are marking a milestone today. The first CT scan will be performed at the new, state-of-the-art Fort Saskatchewan community hospital. A first for Fort Saskatchewan, the $1.2 million, high-definition scanner has capacity to provide 5,000 scans a year. Previously about 1,500 patients per year would have had to be transferred to facilities in Edmonton to have a CT scan, which is used to verify the presence or the absence of tumours, infection, abnormal anatomy, or other bodily changes.

The new scanner can also be used to perform virtual colonoscopies, a noninvasive procedure.

The $87 million hospital opened to the public in April of this year. It is a magnificent facility. With more than triple the space of the health centre, the hospital offers 38 acute-care beds, 24-hour emergency services, and dedicated outpatient space. Additional services offered at the hospital include IV therapy clinics, obstetrics, general surgery, ophthalmology, diagnostic imaging, rehabilitation, pharmacy, and laboratory services. Built to meet LEED, leadership in energy and environmental design, silver standards, the facility contains many futuristic design elements, including touchless door openers, occupancy sensors, and surfaces that resist bacterial growth. Patient rooms have separate air exchangers to prevent the spread of airborne viruses. The new green building will also be highly energy efficient.

The people of Fort Saskatchewan and surrounding areas can be proud of this dramatic advance in health care, and this government is honoured to have played an important part in making that happen.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I will call upon the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

2:50 Excellence in Teaching Awards

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following on the introduction of the students and the teachers here from Alberta, it's an honour for me to rise today and recognize Alberta's 2012 excellence in teaching award recipients. It's our 24th year of this celebration. On the weekend there was a celebration in Calgary, which I was very grateful to attend, and some of my colleagues were there. Twenty recipients from across the province received an excellence in teaching award, and three received the Smart Technologies' innovative use of technology award. I'm bragging a little bit, but three of those teachers were from the constituency of Calgary-Varsity.

These recipients came from 341 nominees, and there were 130 semifinalists recognized in April. It goes without saying that these people have achieved remarkable results in the classroom. The diversity was incredible, from sustainable learning practices to reduce school waste to programs to teach children compassion and community service. There were teachers who were experts in paleontology, and we can guess where they were from. There were experts in dance, bullying prevention, and even auto mechanics for women. All of these recipients have influenced students' achievement and their sense of what is possible, and they ultimately contribute to this province's prosperity.

Mr. Speaker, in recognition of their contribution to education in Alberta these recipients can access up to $4,000 for professional development. The three teachers who received the innovative use of technology award received technology packages and a Smart board. I offer my congratulations to these 2012 excellence in teaching nominees, semifinalists, and award recipients. We're fortunate to have them.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Hockey Day in Canada

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past weekend it was announced that Lloydminster will be the host of one of Canada's most storied events in February of 2013. This event was established in 2000, and it's attended by local and national celebrities alike. I might point out, Mr. Speaker, that because of your specific abilities you should be watching your mailbox for an invitation. It is viewed by millions of Canadians each year – you may want to get a haircut – and was last hosted by Alberta in 2001. I'm talking, of course, about Hockey Day in Canada.

Now, having been asked to make the bid less than a year ago, local officials and leaders were able to come together and make a successful bid for Lloydminster. The celebration will highlight Lloydminster's rich hockey heritage. The story of Lloydminster is not complete without the story of how we saved our own junior A team, the Bobcats. When they were threatened with a move about a year ago, local officials rallied, sold shares, and were able to save the team. This is just one of the reasons why Lloydminster will be the host of this event.

I ask all members of the House to join me in congratulating the city of Lloydminster, with Mayor Jeff Mulligan, on winning the rights to host Hockey Day in Canada.

The Speaker: We will all look forward to it, some of us more than others perhaps.

Flat-tax Policy

Mr. Hehr: One thing all political parties agree on is that the building of roads is a legitimate purpose for governments to be involved in. Since roads are a legitimate purpose for governments, the citizenry should be asked to pay for them. The way we and other governments ask the citizenry to pay for things has been traditionally through taxation.

With that said, Alberta is different than other jurisdictions in that over the course of the last 25 years, instead of asking the citizens to pay for things like roads, schools, and hospitals, things that citizens use, we have spent every last dime of the $225 billion we have received in petroleum revenues to pay for these services. In my view, this has not been in the best interest of Alberta's long-term future.

We only need to look to Norway, who has asked their citizens to pay for the things they use instead of spending this one-time gift, the fossil fuel revenue. In following this course of action, they have been able to save some $700 billion in their heritage fund while we have been stuck at $15 billion. I ask you: who has followed the wiser path?

We all agree that the Fort McMurray to Edmonton highway should be done and done soon. Accordingly, there are things we need: asphalt, workers, and the money to pay for it. I am certain we can find the asphalt and the workers, but here is a novel idea to consider. Ask the citizens to pay for what they use. This sounds fair. We could use this opportunity to eliminate the flat tax, a tax that sees a person making a million dollars a year paying the same rate of tax as a person making $30,000 a year.

Another option, if this government is so loath to ask the citizens to pay for this project through general taxation, is to go to a user-pay system. Set up a toll road. Charge individuals and companies a flat rate to use the road.

The reason I'm advocating for one of these two policy choices is because I'm sick and tired of us spending our kids', grandkids', and their grandkids' inheritance from a one-time fossil fuel resource on things we use as citizens. We must pay our own way. Otherwise, we are shortchanging our future.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) earlier today I provided written notice to your office of my intention to raise a matter of privilege, which I hope I'll have the opportunity to present later today.

The Speaker: Thank you. Noted.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a tabling here from a constituent of mine, Nina Nath, and she is advocating, actually, on her property tax. She's a disabled Albertan; she has a disability. She's just an absolute firecracker. She's got incredible ideas, is quite a policy wonk, too. She's put together a note on how persons with disabilities should have tax exemptions similar to those enjoyed by seniors. It's a very compelling argument. I won't go through the whole thing here, obviously, but I encourage members of the Assembly to view this tabling, the Minister of Human Services to review it, and to seriously consider if there is something we can do to help them in this regard.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other tablings? The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As per your request earlier today, notwithstanding that we've seen a circulation of a rotation for Members' Statements and question period now, I would table a package which consists of an e-mail to yourself transmitting the page signed by each of the House leaders with respect to question period rotation and a page signed by each of the House leaders with respect to Members' Statements rotation. I wouldn't say that it's in the nature of a House leaders' agreement but, rather, a consent of each House leader to these rotations applying for the time being.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have an article written by probably one of the hon. Solicitor General's favourite authors, Mr. Andrew Coyne, on the use of toll roads and their use in paying for roads if the government is unwilling to tax and actually reducing vehicles on our roads.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm sorry. I don't know how I forgot this one. There are many petitions to follow, but I would like to table a petition from residents of Edmonton and area who are supporting the Falun Dafa Association of Edmonton and asking the government to reconsider their decision to prohibit them from holding the Shen Yun performance in the Northern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium. There are about a thousand signatures. This is just over the weekend. We have about 5,000 coming from Calgary and more on the way, sir.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other tablings? If not, the Speaker would like to table a few items. First of all, hon. members, pursuant to section 39(3) of the Legislative Assembly Act I would like to table with the Assembly five copies of each of the following orders passed at the March 20, 2012, meeting of the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services: one, Members' Services Committee Order 01/12, Executive Council Salaries Amendment Order, No. 07; two, Members' Services Committee Order 02/12, Members' Allowances Amendment Order, No. 22; three, Members' Services Committee Order 03/12, Members' Committee Allowances Amendment Order, No. 08. Please note that all orders are effective as of March 20, 2012.

Also, hon. members, I am pleased to table the requisite number of copies of a report titled Review of Compensation of Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, dated May 2012, submitted by the Honourable J.C. Major.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Campbell, Minister of Aboriginal Relations, pursuant to the Metis Settlements Act the Metis Settlements Appeal Tribunal annual report 2011.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Horner, President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance, Credit Union Deposit Guarantee Corporation Alberta 2011 annual report.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, it is 3 o'clock. I think we have concluded the Routine unless there are any other items to come.

The hon. House leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would request unanimous consent of the House to revert to government business given that there is not private members' business on the Order Paper for today.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we'll deal with that momentarily. We have a question of privilege to deal with first.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Thank you.

Privilege

Obstructing a Member in Performance of Duty

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can I just confirm that you're inviting me to make my representations with respect to the point of privilege?

The Speaker: Yes, please, hon. member, if you would.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) this morning I provided written notice to your office of my intention to raise a matter of the privileges of this Assembly today. Specifically, on May 24 at 1:30 p.m. the Premier and the Minister of Human Services provided a news conference on both the throne speech and Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, to members of the media in the Carillon Room with the understanding that information provided in the news conference was embargoed until the throne speech commenced later that afternoon. A member of my staff attempted to attend that news conference and briefing but was told that opposition staff were not allowed and was specifically turned away.

The throne speech occurred at roughly 3:10 on that day, Mr. Speaker, thereby lifting the embargo that was applied to the discussions of both the throne speech as well as the bill. The bill itself was not introduced until roughly one half-hour later, and it was a little past that before all members of this Assembly were given the opportunity to review the bill. The bill was not on notice on the Order Paper, but it was given first reading that afternoon.

I believe the government has through this committed a contempt of the Assembly by providing information about a government bill to members of the media prior to the bill's introduction in the House and without offering opposition members a similar opportunity.

Erskine May, 24th edition, on page 251 describes contempt:

Generally speaking, any act or omission which obstructs or impedes either House of Parliament in the performance of its functions, or which obstructs or impedes any Member or officer of such House in the discharge of his duty, or which has a tendency, directly or indirectly, to produce such results, may be treated as a contempt even though there is no precedent of the offence.

Now, Mr. Speaker, a similar case of this kind of privilege was raised a number of years ago in this House. In a ruling on March 5, 2003, at page 304 of Hansard the Speaker found that a government briefing provided to the media concerning a bill "when the bill was on notice but before it was introduced constitutes a prima facie case of privilege as it offends the dignity and the authority of this Assembly." The difference between that case in 2003 and the one today is that the bill in 2003 was on notice but not yet introduced in the House when the media but not the opposition received a briefing on the bill.

Reading through the record of debate on the 2003 privilege issue shows that the point about the bill being on notice was considered important because that notice is interpreted as a signal that the bill is no longer in the draft stage, Mr. Speaker, but rather the government has completed any outside consultations it wishes to conduct, and the bill is now in its final form and ready to be introduced. Now, we all know that as a matter of course the government absolutely discusses new legislation with stakeholders or the general public when that legislation is in the draft stage. It's only once it has passed that stage that the details of the bill must be provided to all members of the House.

Bill 1, as we know, was not on notice on Thursday. Nevertheless, it was very clearly past the draft stage and in its final form when the government discussed the bill with the media as the bill was introduced in the House just over two hours later.

If the fact that the bill was not on notice could be used by the government as a loophole in the practices of this House, thereby allowing the government to provide details about emerging, or upcoming, legislation to persons outside the House before it is introduced and shared with members of this Assembly, that would have the same effect of offending the dignity and the authority of the Assembly, with which the Speaker's 2003 ruling in this House was concerned.

I would also note that the ruling in 2003 was influenced by a similar incident which was raised as a point of privilege in the House of Commons in 2001. Now, I won't go into the details of that incident now, because we're trying to be brief, as it was already discussed in here in 2003. Further details are available from the Hansard of the House of Commons from March 14 and March 19, 2001. However, the facts there are closer to the facts here in that the media was briefed in the morning and the bill was introduced the same day. I will only add that the Speaker of the House of Commons at that time said in his ruling the following:

To deny to members information concerning business that is about to come before the House, while at the same time providing such information to the media that will likely be questioning members about that business, is a situation that the Chair cannot condone.

Opposition MLAs and their staff members are routinely given information about government bills prior to their being introduced in this House, and we abide by that embargo on that information, so I don't know why the government chose not to do that in this instance.

By raising this issue, I am in no way criticizing the media. They did the job they were supposed to do, and I've heard no suggestions that anyone who attended the 1:30 news conference broke the embargo to which they had agreed.

I believe I'm raising this at the earliest opportunity. The issue of contempt was not evident to me until after I left the House Thursday afternoon. When I left the House, I took a few minutes to familiarize myself with the contents of Bill 1 before speaking to the media about it. While it is a brief bill, certainly many other bills are not. I believe the fact that the media had the information on the bill for about two hours prior to my receiving it affected my ability to comment on it and to offer them analysis that differed from that which they had already heard from the government.

The previous rulings on this issue, Mr. Speaker, indicate that the dignity of this House is threatened when its members are not the first to see legislation. The Assembly should be the place where public debate about legislation begins. I'm arguing that out of fairness to all members and out of respect for this House our privilege of being the first to see the details of legislation that is brought before the House must be maintained. That was not the case with Bill 1 last Thursday at 1:30.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore urge you to find that the events on Thursday constitute a prima facie case of breach of privilege. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I received a copy of the notice, the letter that was sent to you this morning, just after lunch. I want to start by apologizing to the hon. member and to the House. I have no idea why opposition researchers or others would have been turned away from that news briefing. They ought not to have been, in my view. I will raise that immediately with the people involved to ensure that that type of thing doesn't happen again. I think it's quite appropriate for embargoed briefings to happen, and it's quite appropriate for opposition members to be in those embargoed briefings. If others are being briefed, the opposition should be. That's been the practice in the past, I believe, and that should have been the practice this time. I wasn't aware that it was not, and for that I would apologize.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I think I should be very clear to the House that there was no parliamentary privilege breached in this. The bill itself, of course, was not shared. It was talked about in general terms, not specific terms. No specific wording was talked about. That is rather the norm, I think, where, in fact, as House leader I have on many occasions issued a news release a week or so prior to a session, indicating what bills would be involved in the session, giving the subject matter of those bills, and in some cases discussing some details relative to what might be in those bills, and in some cases referring members of the media to the minister responsible for the bills to get the details. On the day that the bill is introduced, there's often a news release sent out and more briefings with respect to more of the specific nature of the bills.

It is obviously important that members of the House see the actual bill in its final draft form before anyone else, and to the best of my knowledge we've always adhered to that practice. It would certainly be my intention as House leader to continue to adhere to that practice. That's the custom and tradition of the House. It is important for members of this House to have the bill, to be the first to see the final draft of a bill.

I would hope that we would be able to continue the tradition, obviously, of briefing opposition members on an embargoed basis – I think it's very important to do that ahead of time – and, of course, to brief the media. But, again, there should not be a situation where the media is briefed without the opposition being briefed, whether that's done in general or on specifics. Again, I would apologize if that's what occurred, and I take the hon. member's word for it that that is what occurred. So I'd apologize to the hon. member and to the House for that.

That being said, again, the briefing that happened with respect to the bill was in a general sense both with respect to the throne speech and the bill itself and was nothing of a specific nature, to the best of my recollection. Certainly, nothing was quoted from the bill, and the bill was not circulated.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to join in the conversation as the House leader for the third party, that being the Liberal caucus, in this House. While I appreciate the words from the Government House Leader offering his opinion that such an action should not have taken place and would not had he been directly in charge of this, I will note that this is not the first time that this has happened in this House, and indeed it's not the first time that this has happened in this House with more or less the same group of people here. On March 4, 2003, almost identical circumstances took place. Now, that's nine years ago, but, you know, the Government House Leader was here. I was here. There are a number of others who were here who should be able to remember this.

Part of the issue in play is the immediacy of when the bill was going to be presented to the House. We have a set of circumstances here in which – and we all acknowledge that the government has been very good at working with their critics to provide a three-column document or a verbal briefing on things but never the actual bill. Occasionally some of us have also seen draft bills that clearly indicate “draft” right across it in a watermark.

But, no, in this case I think what is of particular note is that the media release happened, releasing the information that was not available to members of the House and not available to members of the opposition, on a bill that was imminently coming before the House. They were clearly dealing with a finished bill. It was not going to go out for another set of consultations. It was not going to go through any other parliamentary revisions. This was a complete and final bill that was going to be presented in the House in less than 24 hours, and that is of particular note here because it is specifically mentioned in Speaker Milliken's remarks that have already been referenced by my hon. colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona.

I think it's also important to note that the media are not stakeholders. They are valued colleagues in this democratic process, but they are not stakeholders, and I think we would all be fooling ourselves if we pretended that the media were somehow filling that stakeholder position.

I think it's important in your ruling, Mr. Speaker – and I would ask you to keep it in mind – that this is not the first time this has happened. This is, indeed, the second time in a period of nine years that it's happened, and I do wonder at the government's forgetfulness given the legions of staff that they have behind them to help them remember this sort of thing.

Secondly, we were not dealing with a document that was in any way going to be subject to additional changes in any way, shape, or form. We have a document that, as Speaker Milliken referenced, was shortly coming before the House.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Anderson: I'll keep it short, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for recognizing me. I would say that, obviously, the question of the point of privilege I'll leave to you to speak to. Because of some technical things, meaning paper on top of the fax machine, we didn't receive this until about half an hour before. But I will say that this is one of the reasons why members of the opposition are so concerned that we are given enough time in question period to question ministers and so forth. There is this feeling that we don't have access to the government ministers, and this is the type of thing that happens. I realize it was a mistake – and I want to compliment the House leader opposite for admitting to that and undertaking that it won't happen again – but this is the general feeling that opposition members face, that they're not viewed as part of, essentially, the Assembly sometimes.

I would just hope that the new government ministers as well as the ones that have been there before will do everything they can to open up their offices to their critics so that they can come in and have a working relationship with them and get the information that they need. I think that if we have that type of culture in this Legislature, the things that we've seen here that the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has brought up will be far less common.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

We've heard the points from a number of members. Before I go on, because we have so many new members in the Assembly with us and I know that they likely haven't had a chance to memorize all the standing orders yet, which I'm sure they will, I would like to have it noted that points of order – and that includes points of privilege such as has been raised – do have a very high, in fact the highest, priority here during the Routine. That is why we've allowed our Routine to go beyond 3 o'clock without the need for an amendment or a motion to waive 7(7).

That having been said, I will make the following comment. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has raised a point of privilege, which is, of course, the most serious point of order that can be raised in this House. The Speaker wants to note officially that the hon. member has met the technical requirements. In other words, she did provide a written copy at least two hours before the commencement of today's session. Specifically, the Speaker's office received her letter dated May 28, 2012, this morning at 10:57. She also gave notice at the appropriate time. Thank you. I'm sure all members noted that. Finally, she has provided an outline, and we've heard from the Government House Leader, from the Liberal opposition, and from the Official Opposition in that respect.

That having been said, I would take some time to review the arguments and points that were raised by all the members, including the initiator. I will take some time to consider all of these points, and at that time I will make a further comment.

Orders of the Day

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There being no private members' business on the Order Paper available for business today, I would request unanimous consent of the House to revert to government business so that we might, as was anticipated Thursday, take into consideration His Honour's Speech from the Throne and other government business that's on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, I will get to the question in a moment. I just want to explain briefly that we're asking for unanimous consent here through the Government House Leader's motion. If you grant it, then we'll proceed as the government wishes. If you do not give unanimous consent, then this Assembly will stand adjourned immediately.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, your motion has succeeded.

Government Motions

Amendments to Standing Orders

8. Mr. Hancock moved on behalf of Mr. Denis:
Be it resolved that the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be amended as follows:
  - (1) Standing Order 52(1)(b) is amended by striking out "17 Members" and substituting "21 Members".
  - (2) Standing Order 52.01 is amended by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following:
    - (1) At the commencement of the first session of each Legislature, 3 Legislative Policy Committees, consisting of 25 Members each, shall be established to consider the following subject areas:
      - (a) Standing Committee on Families and Communities – mandate related to the areas of Health, Human Services, Justice and Solicitor General, Culture, Education, and Service Alberta;
      - (b) Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future – mandate related to the areas of Agriculture and Rural Development, Aboriginal Relations, International and Intergovernmental Relations, Enterprise and Advanced Education, Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and Infrastructure;
      - (c) Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship – mandate related to the areas of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development, Transportation, Municipal Affairs, Treasury Board and Finance, and Energy.
  - (3) The Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta are amended by striking out "Policy Field" wherever it occurs and substituting "Legislative Policy".

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, this motion is debatable. Are there any speakers? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. I was part of the negotiating team that negotiated with the Government House Leader when the original policy field committees were established. I'm wondering now, given point (3), that "Policy Field" committees, those two words, will be struck out wherever they occur and substituted would be "Legislative Policy," do we take it, then, that the government's last two-year tradition of having budget debates debated in these policy field committees, the budgets for those particular departments as named previously by the Government House Leader, would now be debated in the legislative policy committees? If there is someone available to answer that question, that would be helpful.

The Speaker: Are there any other speakers?

If not, I would invite the hon. Government House Leader to close debate.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I think some of the discussion that we've had around the operation of the House was that we would be able to sit and talk about, going forward, what other things in the standing orders we might want to reflect on and how we might do things differently. I would certainly invite House leaders to engage in that discussion immediately post this session. Then potentially, of course, the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing might meet and discuss it as well. I think that's an open question as to whether or not we continue with what's in the standing orders now of referring the budget processes to either. The option is to allow them to come to the House in Committee of Supply or to the committee, and that would be the status quo with these three committees unless it's changed, but I think the discussion has been whether we want to look at how we do budget as part of the standing orders discussion.

[Government Motion 8 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Standing Committee Membership Appointments

9. Mr. Hancock moved:
Be it resolved that the following members be appointed to the Assembly's three legislative policy committees:
  - (1) Standing Committee on Families and Communities: Ms Pastoor, chair; Mrs. Forsyth, deputy chair; Mr. Allen; Ms DeLong; Mr. Fox; Mr. Fraser; Mrs. Fritz; Mrs. Jablonski; Ms Jansen; Mr. Jeneroux; Ms L. Johnson; Mr. Kang; Ms Kubinec; Mr. Lemke; Mrs. Leskiw; Mr. Luan; Mr. McAllister; Ms Notley; Mr. Pedersen; Mrs. Sarich; Mr. Saskiw; Dr. Swann; Mr. Wilson; and Mr. Young.

  - (3) Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship: Ms Kennedy-Glans, chair; Mr. Rowe, deputy chair; Mr. Anderson; Mr. Anglin; Mr. Barnes; Mr. Bilous; Ms Blakeman; Dr. Brown; Ms Calahasen; Mr. Cao; Mr. Casey; Ms Fenske; Mr. Fraser; Mr. Hale; Mr. Hehr; Ms L. Johnson; Ms Kubinec; Mr. Lemke; Mrs.

Leskiw; Mr. Sandhu; Mr. Stier; Mr. Webber; Mr. Xiao; and Mr. Young.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would note that there is still a vacancy on each of those committees. That is a vacancy that would have been filled by a nominee from the fourth party. They have chosen not to nominate a person at this time, and therefore I propose that that spot on each committee be left vacant.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, Motion 9 is debatable. Are there any other speakers?

Seeing none, I would invite the hon. Government House Leader to close debate if he wishes.

[Government Motion 9 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Standing Committee Membership Appointments

10. Mr. Hancock moved on behalf of Mr. Denis:

Be it resolved that the following members be appointed to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts: Mr. Kang, Dr. Starke, Mr. Stier, and Mr. Webber.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Normally the members of this committee would be appointed on day 1; however, as members will note, we've just expanded the size of the committee today, and this now adds the remaining four members to the expanded committee.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, this motion is not debatable, so I will simply ask those who are in favour of the motion as proposed by the Government House Leader to say aye, and those opposed, please say no.

[Government Motion 10 carried]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a tremendous honour to move acceptance of the Speech from the Throne presented by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta. I would like to thank His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for setting forth the vision of the 28th Legislature. I would also like to thank the hon. Premier for the opportunity to move acceptance of the Speech from the Throne.

I am excited by the Premier's vision for Alberta and her commitment to move Alberta forward on so many fronts. Alberta is exceptionally fortunate to have a visionary, proactive leadership committed to making Alberta the best it can be and a leader on the national and international stage. The Speech from the Throne puts forth a road map of fundamental change in the process of governance in Alberta. It signals a new openness and transparency in government and how government relates to the concerns of Albertans. It provides certainty of direction, with multiyear budgets for education, advanced education, health, and municipal services so that institutions and municipalities can plan with certainty.

However, it also sets forward a methodology to ensure fiscal integrity by implementing results-based budgeting. Every part of government is to be scrutinized every three years to set the outcomes that are expected, to measure the results, and to report on findings so that Albertans can see where and why their tax dollars are being spent. This will reassert the centrality of ministerial responsibility and accountability. No longer will elements of government be assured of continuing support for functions that are not meeting real needs in real time.

The Speech from the Throne also sets forth a commitment to regulatory streamlining, with the goal of a single nimble, responsive regulator for upstream oil and coal projects, and it makes clear that regulatory facilitation shall not be at the expense of the environment. The direction is clear that this government will pursue world-leading resource stewardship to safeguard our environment. That includes partnering with the federal government to implement a comprehensive environmental monitoring system. It will invest in research and innovation and partner with industry to maintain and grow our world-class resource economy, and it will facilitate the opening of new markets through co-operative efforts with other provinces and other jurisdictions. I think all Albertans will be pleased by this fundamental change in approach to governance that is transparent, focused, and target-driven.

While this first session is not heavy with legislation, as we are just getting started, I am so pleased that one of our first tasks will be to extend workers' compensation coverage to first responders suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder. PTSD can be completely debilitating, and providing access to treatment is the least we can do. We have to help those who protect all of us.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to extend my sincere congratulations on your election to this important office. It has been my pleasure to know you now for many years, and I have great confidence that you will carry out your duties with equity and wisdom. Thank you in advance for your guidance and counsel.

Next, I would like to offer my warmest wishes to the new cabinet. As you undertake your responsibilities of putting the Premier's vision of this great province forward, I wish you all the best. I know that all of your colleagues who sit as private members are prepared to assist you along the way.

I would like to extend my congratulations to all the members of this Assembly on your recent elections. I look forward to working with all of you in making Alberta and our communities better places to live, work, and play now and into the future.

I would also like to thank the residents of Sherwood Park for their confidence and the honour of representing their views and interests in this Legislature. I must commend my predecessor, the hon. Iris Evans, for her years of service to our community as MLA from 1997 to 2012 and for her 18 years in municipal government before that. Iris is truly an institution in our community.

Now a little bit more about my community. The Sherwood Park constituency encompasses about two-thirds of the hamlet of Sherwood Park, which is part of and governed by the specialized municipality of Strathcona county, Alberta's third-largest municipality. As an urban centre with rural roots and a governance structure that encompasses both urban and rural residents, Sherwood Park and Strathcona county have a different historical context than many Alberta communities. Its municipal origins date back to its establishment as fire and labour district No. 2 by the then government of the North-West Territories in April 1893. It was renamed local improvement district 517 in 1913 and acquired the Strathcona name in 1945 after the merger of the municipal districts of Clover Bar and Strathcona. Strathcona county was one of the first specialized municipalities, established in Alberta in 1996.

As much of the county was not well suited to extensive agriculture and with limited natural resource wealth of its own, the county welcomed industrial development associated with the discovery of oil in the region after World War II. Sherwood Park was established to provide accommodation to refinery workers and their families in 1954 and gradually built on that base as it attracted other residents and industry.

Through a co-operative partnership with industry and other municipal jurisdictions such as the Strathcona Industrial Association, the Alberta Industrial Heartland Association, the Capital Region Board, and its predecessor the Alberta Capital Region Alliance the county built co-operative relationships to attract and grow its industrial base and commercial opportunities. By the way, I'm pleased to note that one-quarter of the 1995 to '98 Strathcona council that initiated the Heartland now sits in this Assembly, myself and the hon. Member for Vegreville-Fort Saskatchewan.

Today Sherwood Park constituency is home to two of the three oil refineries in Strathcona county as well as numerous other heavy industries and related manufacturing operations. Together with our regional partners in the Alberta Industrial Heartland we account for 43 per cent of basic chemical manufacturing output in all of Canada. We have built and continue to build industrial synergy and to attract new industries and value-added production.

I am really excited to be a part of a government committed to broadening our economic base to realize the full potential of our resources through research and initiatives such as carbon capture. We have enormous potential for further secondary processing and manufacturing. Concentrations of like industry offer great potential to jump-start further developments as the off-gases or heat of one industry forms the base of another.

Also, upgrading together with carbon capture offers potential to deliver the greenest oil on the planet. With three major carbon capture projects going forward, Alberta is fast becoming a world leader in this area. We have the potential to be Canada's Silicon Valley of petroleum processing and chemical manufacturing. By 2007 nine upgraders were proposed or under construction in the heartland region, with most already having acquired substantial land acquisitions. While that number certainly dwindled with the crash of 2008, many large oil sands producers have retained their land positions with a view to future growth, and North West is well along on design for work on its direct-to-diesel bitumen-in-kind project in Sturgeon.

Sherwood Park has also increasingly attracted a growing number of engineering firms with a wide range of talents, which bodes well for our future. Incidentally, I had the pleasure of representing our government at the 100th anniversary of Stewart Weir last week.

We also have a number of other strengths. Strathcona county was recently awarded the designation of being the best place in Canada to raise a family and get a job by MoneySense magazine on the basis of a wide variety of criteria. Sherwood Park is home to the first mega recreation centre in western Canada, combining two indoor soccer fields, a lane pool, a wave pool, two hockey arenas, leisure ice, gymnasiums, an indoor running track, and a huge fitness centre. We were the first in western Canada.

It also boasts a number of other fine facilities, including Festival Place. We offer a continual lineup of live entertainment, a gorgeous new library and civic centre, and miles of hiking and biking trails.

Our long-awaited hospital, announced in 2005, is finally well under way with the completion of phase 1 projected for 2013 and the final build-out to be completed in 2016.

I was extremely pleased on the weekend to see that the contract for the final leg of the Anthony Henday has been awarded, and the construction is to commence in June. This 27-kilometre stretch of double-plus highway includes nine interchanges, eight railway overpasses, and two bridges. It will make a tremendous difference to travel in and around the capital region and will also make a particular difference on the Yellowhead route through Edmonton.

A new courthouse has also been a priority for our community. To facilitate that, the county has offered up land adjacent to our RCMP detachment.

I look forward to working with all of you to make our communities and this province the best it can be. But I just need to reflect on a very personal note. I would like to share that my McPhail forefathers came to this country with the Hudson's Bay Company. They worked in the fur trade in the Hudson Bay lands, then known as Rupert's Land. I think they would be proud of what we in western Canada have accomplished together so far.

Growing up, I had a very special relationship with my grandmother, Anne McPhail, born Maximchuk. She inspired my interests in government as a way of making things better. She used to tell me stories about the depression, and she also told me that the first woman elected to Parliament was also a McPhail. Agnes Macphail was elected as a Progressive in 1921.

So I am especially proud to be part of a progressive government, committed to putting in place the infrastructure, education, public health care, and social supports to enable all Albertans to be the best they can be in an open, inclusive society. We have a tremendous opportunity to thrive in a time of great global uncertainty. Albertans have put their faith in our government to manage their affairs, and I pledge to do my very best.

In closing, I would like again to thank His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for his inspiring words. Again I thank our Premier for her inspiring leadership and commitment to the people of Alberta. Mr. Speaker, it has been an honour to rise today and move the acceptance of the Speech from the Throne.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly a privilege to rise in the House today to second the motion to accept the Speech from the Throne. I also feel extremely honoured to be standing here as the representative for the great constituency of Calgary-Hawkwood and to have been elected to such a strong government, one with a mandate to respond to change.

To quote the Speech from the Throne, "The last 41 years have brought incredible benefits to our province and seen society evolve in ways that have changed how Albertans think and live." I couldn't agree more. The Alberta that we know and love today is not the same as it was in the past, and neither is our government. We have changed to reflect the desires and the needs of Albertans. Just like those who governed us before, we will put forward a responsive vision for the time and the issues that we face.

Mr. Speaker, we are fortunate to live in an inclusive and diverse province. As we heard in the Speech from the Throne, the people of Alberta “have declared that they are not content to gaze inward and build walls. They want to look outward and build bridges.” I believe we can attribute some of those desires to the fact that more and more people from all across the world are choosing to call Alberta home, and one of those persons is me, standing here. In fact, in 2010 32,640 immigrants landed in Alberta, which is an increase of approximately 58 per cent from 2006. Research has shown that this trend will continue.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has clearly evolved due to its changing demographics, and so has the constituency of Calgary-Hawkwood. I would like to take a few minutes to introduce you to my constituency and to a little bit of my background. Calgary-Hawkwood is made up of five communities in northwest Calgary: Silver Springs, Ranchlands, Hawkwood, Citadel, and Arbour Lake. It is one of the four new constituencies established in the province during this past election. The five communities were drawn from three former constituencies representing both established and new communities. It mirrors Albertans whose legacy dates back generations and the ones who have just arrived. I believe that Calgary-Hawkwood is a good example of the people and diversity of our great province. I cannot emphasize enough how proud I am to call Calgary-Hawkwood my home and to have been chosen by people in this constituency to represent them in this Assembly.

This is a riding with a rich history and promising future. I am humbled to be counted among such an impressive group of elected officials representing this area. Some of the notable members in our history are former Premier William Aberhart, former Premier Ernest Manning, and former Lieutenant Governor John Bowen. Most of all, I am proud to be a member of this government, led by our Premier. Twenty-three years ago, when I first arrived in this province as a newcomer from China, I arrived all but empty handed. Since then I have been working hard to establish myself, gain meaningful employment, and raise a loving and supportive family, something that so many new Albertans strive for and are able to achieve, bolstered by the Alberta spirit.

As a newcomer I never dreamed that one day I would be standing here in this prestigious Assembly. It just goes to show that in this province anything is possible with hard work and determination. [some applause] Thank you. This reflects our pioneer legacy and continues to define our province today. There's no limit to what Albertans can achieve, and under the strong leadership of the hon. Premier I know that we'll continue to inspire Albertans from all backgrounds, all walks of life to reach their full potential.

Looking around today at all of my hon. colleagues in this House, I believe that the change we see in our demographics is very well represented in this House here. Alberta has become an all-embracing cultural mosaic. Together we represent the change that has occurred in our province. Regardless of our differences we're banded together by our shared core values that define us as proud Albertans. It doesn't matter where and when we came from. We all share something in common such as hard-working ethics, innovative spirit, and the importance of family. We're tireless in our pursuit of achievement. This is the pioneer spirit, the Alberta spirit. This is a spirit that makes us so unique, proud Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I remember quite clearly when I decided to run as an MLA. It was the time the hon. Premier spoke of her plan to invest in families and communities, as highlighted again in this throne speech. I knew then that I wanted to be part of that vision.

As a former community developer with a master's degree in social work and 21 years of public service experience I am passionate about serving families and communities. This is something near and dear to my heart. Strengthening family and building strong communities was one of the key themes of my campaign platform. Our government's commitment to strengthening families and building strong communities speaks to Albertans and echoes their values. The strong mandate in my riding and for our government across the province is humbling, but we'll move forward with this directive and do what Albertans have asked of us. Communities and families are the backbone of this great province, and when we work to strengthen them, we build a better Alberta.

As mentioned in the throne speech, this government will invest in families and communities through initiatives such as designing and implementing a plan to extend the province's network of continuing care centres so that seniors can find accommodations that suit their budget and their family arrangements; expanding family care clinics in consultation with local stakeholders and dedicated health care professionals so that families can have easy access to health care services and reducing the waiting times; providing stable and predictable three-year funding to core public services such as health care, education, and municipal services so that people in our community can access facilities and services to meet their needs; and Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, which will guarantee workers' compensation coverage to first responders suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder. Through actions such as these we're demonstrating that this government cares about people. We are passionate about making a difference in people's lives so that Albertans can enjoy a high quality of life that is second to none in the world.

Mr. Speaker, let me touch on another great aspect of the throne speech, which is Alberta's economy. Alberta is the economic engine of this country. Alberta remains in a strong position despite facing the economic uncertainty that has buffeted much of the world. Because of this, people from all over the world are watching us and wanting to learn from our experiences.

Here are a few facts worth noting. Alberta leads the nation in employment growth. Our province leads the continent as the most economically free jurisdiction in North America. Albertans earn the highest average wage, they enjoy the lowest overall tax in the country, and our government is committed to ensuring that it stays that way. We are focused on investing in people, building our savings, and maintaining the lowest overall tax structure in Canada.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I am very optimistic as I look forward to the next four years. I know that our government through our policy framework has the right plan in place. I also know that this government balances Albertans' socially progressive values with their fiscally conservative beliefs. The throne speech lays out our government's plan to focus on the things that matter the most to the people of this province. We have heard the voice of Albertans loud and clear for change and will work hard to keep their trust and ensure that the changes and progress they want will become our new reality.

Last but not least, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for his delivery of such a powerful throne speech and his service to this province and country. I look forward to working with all of my hon. colleagues in this House to build a better Alberta for us all.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Ms Smith: Hon. members, this is indeed an historic occasion. Not only do we have Alberta's first-ever elected female Premier; at the same time we also have an opposition leader who is a female. Mr. Speaker, you may have noticed that. This, obviously, is a first for Alberta, a very proud first, if I do say so myself, and is only the second time in Canada's 145-year history that women have represented both the government and the Official Opposition in a provincial Legislature.

To find the other example, you'd have to go all the way across the country to Prince Edward Island and back nearly 20 years to Premier Catherine Callbeck's Liberal government, opposed by Patricia Mella's Progressive Conservatives. In a province with a Jewish mayor in Edmonton and a Muslim mayor in Calgary I'm relieved that the image of Alberta is finally catching up with the reality no matter what fears may have been fostered during the election. We've got something to celebrate. Alberta is not just a reflection of a changing world. It's leading the way, which makes me extra proud to call myself an Albertan. Now, the Premier and I may not be the equals of Emily Murphy and Louise McKinney, but I know that we stand on the shoulders of giants – giants – great women of Alberta.

But I'm not just here as the leader of the Wildrose or the Leader of the Opposition. I'm here thanks to the folks in my riding, the people of Highwood. To them I say: I am honoured to be your voice in the Legislature, and I promise to do you proud. Though the riding has shifted geographically over the years, it's still a remarkable place with a storied history in Alberta politics, a history of leadership.

Albert J. Robertson, a Conservative MLA for what was then the constituency of High River, was the first Leader of the Official Opposition in Alberta, from 1906 to 1909, holding the fort against the Liberals of Alexander Rutherford. George Hoadley, MLA for what was then the constituency of Okotoks, was also a Conservative and Leader of the Official Opposition in 1918 and 1919. He went on to join an upstart grassroots party called the United Farmers of Alberta, which formed government in 1921, and then he had a long and diverse career in cabinet. Later on the region was represented by none other than William Aberhart, Premier from 1935 to 1943, and in a little less than four years – who knows? – Albertans may elect a second Premier that hails from High River.

Highwood is an extraordinary region, a collection of wonderful communities, a great mix of urban, suburban, acreage, and rural, warm and welcoming, truly a microcosm of the whole province, really, and much of it nestled along the Highwood and Sheep rivers. High River is the town I now call home with my husband, David, and our two dogs, Turk and Cain, who spend lots of time down by the river and are often muddy, covered with burrs, and deliriously happy.

Before I moved to High River, my stepson Jonothan came to live with us in Calgary, and I'm proud to say that he has just graduated with his bachelor of fine arts in print design from the Alberta College of Art and Design, one of the country's premier art schools. I can tell you that his dad and I are very proud of him and the exciting opportunities that lie ahead for him in the creative arts sector in our increasingly diverse province.

Though my residency in Highwood may be new, my family has a long history in Alberta. I was born and raised in Calgary by my parents, Doug and Sharon Smith. I know my parents are proud of me, but I'm equally proud of them. Mom and Dad married as teenagers, and times for them were tough. They lived in subsidized housing for a while, but they worked incredibly hard.

They paid their own way through school, they bought a home in Calgary, they lost a home during the days of the national energy program, and they somehow managed to raise five kids. I suppose we were poor although we didn't feel poor. I thought everybody in grade 6 wore their brothers' hand-me-down cords.

My first job was pushing a cart at a bingo parlour. Then I worked at McDonald's before climbing the ladder in the restaurant business from busgirl to hostess to waitress and eventually to supervisor, earning my way through university – two degrees – with less than $10,000 in student loan debt.

Now, I don't think that my experience is all that much different from most Albertans'. Hard work certainly is a common story in my family. All of my great-grandparents arrived in Alberta at the turn of the last century, coming from England, Ireland, the United States, and the Ukraine to get here. Some of the original people who settled in Alberta, east of here, just north of Lloydminster, were my own ancestors on my mum's side, the Hawkinses.

Back in the 1800s, before they moved here, they were homesteading on the Kansas plains. My great-great-grandmother was Mary Crow. She was a member of the Cherokee Nation, that had been forcibly relocated to Kansas from the southeastern United States in the 1830s by the U.S. government, a terrible stain on the history of America known as the Trail of Tears.

On my dad's side we came from the Ukraine. My great-granddad was Philipus Kolodnicki from Galicia, but when he got to Canada, some immigration bureaucrat renamed him Philip Smith. I guess it was easier to spell. That's how I became a Smith. The Hawkinses started farming, and Philip Smith worked as a CPR switchman.

It's good for us to remember those early people and those early times because it's those people and those times that stamped the Alberta character. It's good sometimes for us to consider why it is that they came here at such great sacrifice and risk. Was it for an easy life? Was it so someone else would take care of them? No, obviously not. They wanted to build a new society where they could take responsibility for themselves and build their own communities in their own ways. People like Philipus Kolodnicki wanted to be free from the stifling authoritarianism and extreme poverty of eastern Europe. People like Jim Hawkins from the plains of Bloody Kansas wanted to find a place that was unstained by the tragedies of human history, where he could find peace and prosperity. But they all came for what was once called the Last Best West, and they were determined to make the best of it.

It seems clear to me that this is why people always come to Alberta and why they keep on coming: to get ahead, to make a positive difference, to build anew, to contribute, to earn their own way, and to help others do the same. Somewhere, somehow – and it's been slowly over time – I think the present government has lost sight of this. I think that instead of helping Albertans get ahead as Albertans, their focus is now just on getting into government and staying in government. But this is why there's a Wildrose, and this is why I stand here today as Leader of the Official Opposition with a caucus of 17 MLAs, to start the process of giving Alberta back to Albertans.

My own journey into politics began in public policy research as an intern at the Fraser Institute, my first job out of university. I coauthored my first major paper on environmental policy, called Environmental Indicators for Canada and the United States. I coauthored my second major paper on environmental policy, on endangered species, when I was at the helm of the Canadian Property Rights Research Institute. My third coauthored paper on the environment, Achieving Eco-prosperity, was while I was at the Canadian Federation of Independent Business as their Alberta director. In between I was elected to the Calgary board of education as a trustee, had a career in print and broadcast journalism, and wrote thousands of articles on virtually every issue you can imagine as an editorial writer and columnist for the Calgary Herald. But property rights and their vital role in preserving both our environment and our economic freedom were themes I returned to again and again, and it's the main reason I'm now in politics.

My great ambition is for Alberta to lead the way in passing a constitutional amendment to entrench property rights in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. When I am done my career in politics, it is my hope that section 7 of the Charter will state that everyone has the right to life, liberty, security of the person, the right to own and enjoy property, the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice, and nor shall private property be taken for public use without full, fair, and timely compensation.

My constituents will discover, if they haven't already, that I talk a lot about freedom. Section 2 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms enumerates the fundamental freedoms that are guaranteed in this country and in this province. The first fundamental freedom enumerated in the Charter is the freedom of conscience and religion. I would note that this freedom was deemed so important by Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the Charter's other drafters that it's right there at the top. The second fundamental freedom is the freedom of thought, belief, opinion, and expression, including freedom of the press and other media of communication. Third is freedom of peaceful assembly, and fourth is freedom of association.

We've begun to see dangerous warning signs in Alberta that our fundamental freedoms are at risk. If municipal leaders and school board officials can't speak out against the government out of fear that they might lose grants, where is the free speech? If parents can't teach their kids the tenets of their faith without fear of being hauled before a human rights commission, where is the freedom of religion? If landowners can't meet without having government spies in attendance, where is the freedom of association? If the government can retaliate against a popular artistic performance group by denying them the use of a government-owned facility, where is the freedom of assembly? The great challenge of our time is for us to re-embrace our fundamental freedoms. They were not granted to us by government, and they cannot be taken away from us by government. This is my mission in public life, and this is why I felt called to public service. For me that job begins now.

I'd like to thank the hon. Lieutenant Governor for his delivery of the Speech from the Throne. He's of course had to do double duty this year as this was his second speech over the space of a few short months. I will have more to say on this, but first I'd like to say a few more words about the constituency that I represent, my new home in Highwood, and the reasons why I chose to make it my home.

As I said before, Highwood is an extraordinary region, a great mixture of communities and industries, and it is this diversity that convinced me to make this the place that I wanted to represent. The constituency of Highwood has changed greatly since the previous election, in 2008. A few communities have been redistricted to other constituencies, including Eden Valley reserve. But as Aboriginal Relations critic I want to assure the residents of Eden Valley that I will be a strong representative for them and every other First Nations, Métis, and aboriginal Albertan.

The arbitrary cancelling of the First Nations refinery project and the lack of consultation on a host of issues has severely damaged this government's relationship with our First Peoples. It was a surprise to me that the throne speech never made reference to how the government will help to alleviate poverty in aboriginal communities and ensure that they have full access to all of the economic opportunities that should be available to them as Albertans. I look forward to building this relationship and advocating on their behalf.

Highwood constituency has also changed owing to the booming growth of the town of Okotoks, a town that has doubled in size in the last 10 years. It faces the attendant challenges of managing growth pressures. Residents will be pleased to see the opening of the new south Calgary hospital, an easy distance for many commuters who make their living in neighbouring Calgary. The town this year faces a major decision on its growth, having bumped up against the limits of the Sheep River. This decision is expected to be made in the fall, and I look forward to assisting Okotoks council moving forward on it, whatever their decision may be.

High River and the MD of Foothills are working jointly on mapping the aquifer, which may help with a regional water solution. In any case, both of these municipalities as well face issues of managing growth. High River has annexed enough land to grow double its size in the coming years, and the MD is just finishing its growth planning study this year. I support the MD of Foothills in maintaining local autonomy to best serve its residents. I hope that as MLA I may play a role in assisting the Calgary Regional Partnership in making the Calgary metropolitan plan attractive enough for the MD to be a part of it but voluntarily. There is more work to do here.

Highwood is growing so fast that it can barely keep up. Like every municipality, the municipalities within Highwood desperately need a new funding model, one that respects them as another order of government and gives them the resources they need to address their own priorities. The highway needs upgrading. We have overcrowded schools, insufficient long-term care, water challenges. Much-needed flood mitigation is required, which brings me to George Groeneveld, the previous hon. Member for Highwood.

Mr. Groeneveld was a great advocate for the region. He worked tirelessly to do what was best for the region, including to protect us from flooding, but his 2005 flood report has never been released. For the people of my constituency this is significant. The annual anxiety over late-spring floods is always overwhelming, and on Mr. Groeneveld's behalf I would like to ask this government to let us see his report. If some of the points are out of date, we understand, but we need to judge for ourselves. We need transparency.

I also want to issue a challenge to this Premier and her government, a challenge to think big, a commuter train system not just connecting the residents of my constituency to Calgary but also connecting those in similar-size communities to Edmonton and eventually to connect major centres with each other. Vancouver has the West Coast line using existing heavy rail lines. Ontario has the GO train system. How impossible can it be to connect High River to Okotoks to downtown Calgary to the airport to Airdrie and beyond using the existing CP Rail line? We don't have to reinvent the steel wheel. I urge our Transportation minister to go and take a look at existing services in other parts of Canada, and I am more than willing to work on starting a heavy rail pilot project to connect High River, Okotoks, and Calgary if he so desires.

Highwood is farming and ranching and forestry and oil and gas all around – I will talk more about that in a minute – but it is also a burgeoning enclave for arts and culture like so much of Alberta, visual artists like Brian Clute, Bob and Connie Pike as well as Arlene Western Evans and Stephen Evans to name just a few, and the Museum of the Highwood, which recently opened after the terrible fire.

Some of our favourite movies were shot in the area: Silver Streak, Superman, and TV shows like Heartland. However, our film industry is hurting terribly. We need to fix the tax and funding structure now. One of the world's greatest movie horse wranglers, John Scott, runs his operation and makes his home in southern Alberta, and we want to keep him here.

Yes, Highwood is a wonderful area. I'm thrilled to live in a heritage house that is close to Guy Weadick's historic home, especially in this the hundredth-year anniversary of the Calgary Stampede.

Now, I would like to say a word about our major industries in Highwood and Alberta, focusing particularly on energy and the opportunities that I see that lie ahead. The "wood" in Highwood: well, we came by it honestly. The lumber industry was once a major economic driver in Highwood, much as it still is in other parts of the province. But just like a lot of Alberta industry, the lumber industry has grown and changed, and almost all the products are finished right here in Alberta. This is now a high-tech industry. Even for cutting lumber computers do the hard calculations on board length, angle of cut, and that means productivity is up, which benefits everyone. Take a primary industry like forestry, mix in technological expertise, and, presto, more efficient, more productive, value added.

This, you would think, takes a lot of energy. Of course it does, but this industry increasingly is turning to providing its own energy, converting pulp waste to power. The Canfor plant in Grande Prairie generates 23 megawatts of power, more than it can use, so it sells some of it back into the grid, with similar projects planned in High Level and Whitecourt. Now, that is Alberta innovation. Every viable source of energy needs to be developed so that Alberta is not just a leader in oil and gas but a leader in energy generation, period.

Highwood also sits square in ranching and farming country. The cattle industry is breathing a sigh of relief as prices seem to be recovering. In my riding Cargill provides work to Albertans and to foreign workers from Mexico and the Philippines. A diverse population, Highwood really is an authentic slice of Alberta. But there are storm clouds on the horizon. Overregulation in the slaughterhouse industry is strangling the smaller plants just as we need more capacity, not less. Addressing the issue of overregulation will be a priority for me.

As for farming, some Albertans may still have the image of the dusty, determined farmer working the field with a plow, but last year I climbed into the air-conditioned cab of a brand new combine. With the level of precision from the GPS technology the cab is a virtual office. A farmer can monitor markets and conduct business all around our wireless world and never stop combining.

We're not just corn and canola anymore. Schools like Lethbridge and Olds colleges teach cutting-edge plant science, irrigation, and water management strategies, and universities are working on the emerging technologies of converting agricultural products to plastics, pharmaceuticals, biofuels and more. Like forestry, agriculture is a high-tech industry and a growing player in a diversified energy market.

Of course, the Highwood riding used to include Turner Valley, the place our energy industry began. Alberta is an energy superpower thanks to that plus a century of technological wizardry, trial and error, and just plain hard work. If natural gas prices today are low, we need to look at that glass as half full, not a setback but an opportunity to convert as much of our energy use to this cleaner burning fuel as we can. Natural gas is up to 40 per cent cleaner than other hydrocarbon fuels, meaning we can grow our economy while seriously reducing toxic emissions and greenhouse gases.

Remember, we didn't stop using whale oil because we ran out of whales. We didn't stop using wood stoves because we ran out of trees or coal furnaces because we ran out of coal. We simply switched to something cleaner and cheaper and more convenient. Tomorrow all hydrocarbons will seem as old as whale oil, but today we're doing it better and better.

The oil sands reserves are staggering. Our goal must be to continue to reduce our ecological footprint until the world wonders what all that environmental fuss was all about. The new technologies are equally astounding. As steam-assisted gravity drainage gets more and more efficient, industry is experimenting with thermal-assisted gravity drainage, meaning no open pits, no fresh water, no tailings ponds, no leakage into drinking water, lower emissions, and, of course, no dead ducks. The early results are promising, a miracle of engineering that the world will one day come to celebrate because no matter your level of concern, no matter how green you want to be, we all still drive, we fly, we love our iPads or our BlackBerries, everything. Everything and everyone relies on petrochemicals in every facet of every life every single day.

Our bigger threat is that over here we're producing all this energy and cleaner than ever before because over there various groups fight a proxy battle against Alberta's oil sands. It makes no sense. Pipelines have been crisscrossing this continent for years and years with almost negligible negative impact. When did pipelines become the enemy? Compared to trucking or rail or tankers from the Middle East, pipelines have always been considered one of the safest, cleanest means of transport. Today's fully monitored, state-of-the-art lines bring that risk closer to zero than ever before. Of the countries that produce that Middle East oil, well, many are regimes that no one should ever have to deal with. Yes, with pipelines of course we should proceed with care, but letting single-minded groups shut our oil in through a proxy environmental battle based on emotion, not based on fact, is an attack on our prosperity, our future, and on each of us, and we need leadership.

The Canadian Energy Research Institute calculates that over the next 20 years the rest of Canada will see $100 billion in GDP growth, 1.6 million person-years of new employment, and $17 billion in new tax revenues, all of that outside of Alberta but only if we can get the oil to market. I hope the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood plans to share this information with the leader of the federal Official Opposition when he visits Alberta this week.

As I continue to monitor the ongoing debate about what we do in Alberta, what is clear is that a war is being waged on our product, and it is in the interests of every Albertan to do everything we can to protect it. I want to take action, but I want the action to be reasonable. Rather than throwing $2 billion at the unproven effectiveness of burying carbon dioxide or slowing growth with carbon taxes on consumers, a tax on something that no one chooses to use, let's put a fraction of that $2 billion on rebates or incentives for hybrid vehicles or fleet conversions to natural gas and renovations to improve energy efficiency of homes and buildings. It will do so much more to reduce our environmental footprint, and it won't penalize anybody.

We can change the way we use energy. Technology never sleeps. Look at our phones. We used to call you old if you once used a party line. Now you're considered ancient if you still use a land line. From wind to solar to biomass to geothermal to localized natural gas the way we can generate heat and electricity changes every single day.

But this government is still bent on building $16 billion worth of transmission lines we may never need to access a market that may never exist, transmission lines consumers have to pay for and landowners have to live with whether they like it or not. The government's electricity plan is more than four years old, and the emergence of shale gas has rendered it ridiculously out of date. That's one of the reasons why there are 17 Wildrose MLAs here in the Legislature. The government should never forget that 56 per cent of all voters did not support returning this government to power.

Now, I'd like to finish today on a happy note, but I can't. The government's throne speech shows that it mistakenly believes that it continues to have a mandate to spend its way into oblivion, to continue draining our savings, risking our future, and plunging us deeper into deficit as though this kind of reckless spending has no impact on key government services for families, seniors, and the vulnerable. To start a throne speech with this statement, "Economic recovery is under way in many parts of the world" greatly concerns me. The world economy is once again teetering on a precipice. The turmoil in Greece and Italy threatens the euro zone, and that in turn threatens us all.

Over the last 10 years we have seen gross mismanagement by this government papered over by heavy resource dollars covering up bad decision after bad decision, and there is no defence for being unaware of the world's economic challenges. We are not crying wolf. Oil and gas prices are already below government predictions. Every $1 drop in the price of oil adds more than $220 million to our deficit. If numbers continue on their current trend, we will face an additional shortfall of $2 billion – that's 2,000 times $1 million – on top of the deficit already budgeted. This kind of short-sighted and irresponsible management is, unfortunately, the hallmark of the current government.

They like to say that they've provided good stewardship of our vast resource wealth in the four-plus decades they've been around, but here's the truth. Since 1971, the year the PCs came to power, the Alberta government has taken in roughly $315 billion in resource revenue. Think about that number for just a second, $315 billion. That's $315 billion that other provinces don't have and would long for. Properly managed, this unparalleled level of wealth could carry Alberta's top-notch public services through booms and busts with no impact on the people who rely on them. What a vision. What potential we have in this province. What potential this government has squandered.

Peter Lougheed knew of this potential. He knew Alberta was uniquely positioned to capitalize on a resource other provinces could only dream of to ensure long-term prosperity for every generation that follows his. Like a true visionary, he set forth a plan to make that happen. He called it the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. Four decades and hundreds of billions of dollars after Lougheed envisioned it, the heritage fund is actually worth less today in real terms than when he started it up in 1976. What should have been the envy of Canada and the model of forward-looking, responsible government stands today as a powerful symbol of this government's outright abuse of the wealth we are so fortunate to have and a relic of a bygone leadership that wanted to harness the future for our children instead of squandering it on themselves in the present.

Under this new Premier this so-called new government shows no signs of shifting course. During the election campaign the Premier took electioneering to new heights, promising some $7 billion in new spending on top of what's already committed in Budget 2012. I can only hope she knows that there is no way to keep her promises and balance the books this year or the year after or the year after that and so changes course before it's too late. I predict we are not going to see a balanced budget in 2012 or 2013 or 2014 or 2015. I hope I'm wrong, but I fear I'm not. There is only one silver lining. If it goes as badly as I'm afraid it will, Albertans at least will be able to choose a new government in 2016.

Alberta can be great again. Part of what made us great was our resolve to keep our books in order. We know – or at least we knew – that everything springs from our prosperity. Because we have this wealth and because we balance the budget and because we manage our dollars wisely, we can provide for Albertans the very best of everything. This is why our prosperity needs to be managed with a firm hand but a caring hand. We don't adhere to these fiscal values out of ideological purity or some other sense of intellectual obligation. We adhere to them because they work. We will fight for them because of that, and we will oppose the approach this government continues to take, the one that's being discredited across the world before our very eyes.

This government says that they'll decrease regulation, but they've only ever done the opposite. They say that we have a strong public service when what we really have is a top-heavy bureaucracy and not enough workers on the front lines. They promised endless program increases and now promise no new taxes to pay for them. Well, we don't want higher taxes either. So what does this mean? The promises are empty, or our pockets are empty. They vow to increase family care clinics in spite of the fact that doctors are begging them to reconsider. They promise more continuing care centres, as this government has for 20 years with so little success. How is it that we can believe them now?

They don't promise greater transparency; they offer a new minister charged with reviewing it. Well, here we can save them some time and effort: more transparency, period. They promise they will survey the possibility of whistle-blower legislation. Well, again, make it easy. Just introduce it. They promise to develop our natural resources responsibly, but they seem to forget it's private industry that develops our natural resources. Oversight? That's something altogether different. A better relationship with Ottawa sounds good, but does Alberta really need a consulate within its own country, or is this more of the same patronage from the party who wrote the book on it?

We have another four years of PC government for a variety of reasons except for one. No one believes they will actually get this province's books in order. No one believes that we'll return to being fiscally responsible. No one believes this government will stop looking past its own nose at a future they have consistently ignored. Everyone hopes, but no one believes.

With all of their election promises, remember that they can't just stick their heads in the sand, even in the oil sands. Those sands are deep, but even they are not a bottomless pit of money. Yes, this government has a mandate, but there are also NDs and Liberals and a bunch of Wildrosers that do, too. We are here, and we are watching on behalf of all Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Hon. members, section 29(2)(a) is now available. Just to remind some and perhaps introduce the concept to others, it means that there are five minutes allocated now during which time you can ask the previous speaker a question or you may make a comment on the previous speaker's issues that she relayed to this Assembly. Either way, there are five minutes available.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do have a question for the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, and it relates to her comments regarding the fact that there were tens of billions of dollars squandered over many, many years. Instead of being saved, they were spent on various expenditures. Would the hon. leader not concede that one reason we have very low taxes, the lowest overall taxes in the country, is the fact that we have not squandered that money, but we kept the taxes low to pay for a very, very high quality of social services, a high quality of health care, a high quality of education, and many of the other programs? Are there specific areas which the hon. leader would suggest that we shouldn't have spent money on or that we should have increased taxes?

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill for that question. I think that what you will have seen, that we have argued in the past – certainly, the hon. Member for Airdrie has said that part of the way you get your spending under control is that you put in place a year-over-year spending limitation law so that rather than seeing your year-over-year spending go up by 8 or 9 or 10 per cent, it goes up by a more reasonable 2 or 3 or 4 per cent. If we had put this policy in place as recently as 2007, we would not be running a deficit at all this year. We'd actually be running a surplus.

I was interested to see that we hold the same view as the president and spokesperson for the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, Guy Smith. I was talking to Mr. Smith about the problem that we have of bureaucracy and multiple layers of middle management. He relayed a story to me from back in the 1990s. He said that the front-line workers were actually not all that upset when the previous Premier, Mr. Klein, had come through with some of those cuts to programming because what it meant was that they cut out layer and layer and layer of middle management. In those days, back in the 1990s, he tells me, there used to be one manager for every 16 front-line workers. Today, he tells me, there's one manager for every three front-line workers. These managers, multiple layers – six, seven, eight layers in the case of health care, as we hear – are the reasons why resources are not getting directed to the front line.

I can give you an example from some of our own research that we did looking at the Alberta health superboard. The Alberta health superboard in 2009 began a hiring spree of senior managers, administrators all making over $100,000 a year, who do not do one hour of front-line services. We have seen an increase of 500 of these senior managers in two years, from 2009 to 2011.

If I'm being asked where it is that we would find the savings, that's where we would begin, and we'd do it compassionately. We understand that people who have contributed their entire lives to the public service, building their careers in the public service, deserve to be respected for that. We have an opportunity to be able to move to a leaner public service model, much as this government used to believe in back in the 1990s, identify a new management structure, and then as those managers start retiring through attrition, through natural retirement, you just don't replace them. Ultimately, you move back to the kind of model where you're able to redirect those resources to the front lines, put out a target, have one manager for every 16 front-line workers. I think what you would then see is that the members on this side, I think Albertans, and I think also the front-line public service providers would be very pleased at the level of service that they're able to provide to taxpayers.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other members wishing to take up 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to first of all congratulate the new Member for Highwood and Leader of the Official Opposition. I was edified by your speech and learned a lot, really, I guess, that I didn't know about your past. One thing that intrigued me the most perhaps is that you had spoken about conservative values, and I think you've spoken previously about being a conservative or even a member of the Conservative Party. I think your story kind of reflects what happened to many hundreds of thousands of people in Alberta over this last election that chose not to vote for the Conservative Party. Was there a point, a place where you could no longer abide by the Progressive Conservative Party and chose a different path?

The Speaker: Thank you. Hon. member, we'll have to wait for an answer to that at another time.

Are there other speakers to the motion regarding the throne speech? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark and leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to give my response to the Premier's third throne speech in seven months, but first I'd like to begin by giving congratulations and thanks. I'd like to begin by congratulating you, Mr. Speaker, on your selection and every elected member in this Legislature that's elected to serve this great province.

I'd also like to thank the constituents of Calgary-Buffalo, Calgary-McCall, Calgary-Mountain View, and, of course, the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre and all of those who elected 100 per cent of the incumbent Liberal MLAs. I'd like to thank all Liberal candidates and their families and their teams and volunteers for having the courage to keep Liberal values alive in this great province. I'd like to thank all of those on our team who helped to prepare the most visionary and courageous and honest common-sense plan to address the issues important to Albertans.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Of course, I would like to thank the constituents of Edmonton-Meadowlark for their confidence in giving me the opportunity to serve them for the second election. As you know, we had a landslide victory by 118 votes, and I look forward to working hard on their behalf again. Edmonton-Meadowlark is the constituency of Speaker Gerry Amerongen; Senator Grant Mitchell, also past Alberta Liberal Party leader; Karen Leibovici, municipal councillor in Edmonton; Mr. Bob Maskell; Mr. Maurice Tougas.

A lot of good things happen in Edmonton-Meadowlark. We've got West Edmonton Mall, a lot of industry, a lot of hard-working families. We've got a lot of wise Albertans who are living the golden years of their lives, a lot of immigrants, and many very good schools.

Mr. Speaker, a lot has happened since I was first elected in 2008. In my personal life my daughter graduated from Harry Ainlay high school, attended Faculté Saint-Jean, and now is in second year at the University of Alberta. My son is graduating this year from Strathcona high school. You know, during that time God felt it was time to take my father home, and my mother enjoys the twilight years of her life, living a happy, healthy life with her family.

As you know, for me it's been quite an interesting four years in public service. I've had the opportunity to serve in government, serve as an independent member, serve as Leader of the Official Opposition, and now as leader of the second opposition party.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to get back to the throne speech. Now, after three throne speeches one would expect a semblance of a coherent vision for our province to have been articulated. This is a great province, and we deserve greatness from our leaders. The third time is the charm, right? Well, sadly, no, it's not, not in this case. I believe we deserve better. Once again we've sat through a throne speech filled with platitudes, bromides, and slogans. The third throne speech, it must be said, was little more than an exercise in filling the air with sound signifying pretty much nothing.

Mr. Speaker, we have deficits in this province. We can't balance the fiscal books or the social books with oil at a hundred bucks a barrel. If we can't do it today, when are we going to balance these books?

In a visionary document we need solutions to problems. We have deficits. We have a structural deficit. Let's talk about this. There was no meaningful mention of the structural deficit that this government has created. Was there a mention? No, not at all. As a logical result of that submission, there was no meaningful mention of how this problem might be solved.

In the absence of seriousness on the government's part we would like to offer some solutions to this problem because I believe that part of opposition is not only to critique; it's to offer solutions, pragmatic, common-sense solutions. For starters, I encourage the Premier to introduce a fair tax which would see no increase in the rates paid by 90 per cent of Albertans but would see those with taxable incomes of more than $100,000 a year pay their fair share. In fact, it would see us paying a little bit more, just our fair share, not too much. This change alone would bring in approximately $850 million in additional revenue.

I also encourage the Premier to raise the corporate tax rate so that the largest companies also pay their fair share. An increase of just two points, from 10 per cent to 12 per cent, would bring in at least $650 million. It's okay to make a buck in this province. Business is a good thing. All we're asking for is two extra cents. That's it. Two extra cents from every buck. It isn't much. Mr. Speaker, is this really so hard? One point five billion dollars just like that. Why the Premier is afraid to talk about such matters is a mystery because that's what leadership is about: having the courage to talk about tough issues.

Just these two measures alone would make it possible to end this government's practice of spending all of our resource revenue as quickly as our royalty checks roll in. We could finally start saving some of these resource revenues and investing the interest to benefit all Albertans for the future. Our decisions need to be made through the lens of what's best for not just our children but our grandchildren and our unborn great-grandchildren.

On the topic of resource revenues here's a novel idea that would both provide an incentive for companies to reduce the amount of carbon dioxide they release into the atmosphere and bring in additional revenue. Let's put a real price on carbon. We've got a problem – absolutely – perceived and real. It's long past time to move from levying based on intensity emissions to a carbon levy based on actual emissions. Phasing in a carbon levy based on actual emissions over a four-year period would encourage industry to reduce emissions, and industry would do the job. They are doing a lot of good work already, but I believe they can do better. They believe they can do better.

This will go a long way to restoring our environmental reputation locally and internationally, safeguarding the oil sands and our economy and all of our valuable social programs in the long run. It would also bring in $1.8 billion a year after the four-year phase-in is complete, money which could be used for both green transportation and to create a green technology fund to make Alberta a leader in environmentally responsible oil and gas extraction. Once again, why the Premier is afraid to discuss the revenues is a mystery. It just takes a little bit of vision and a little bit of courage.

Mr. Speaker, this province is about family and communities. Let's talk about communities. A discussion of eliminating our structural deficit is not the only thing missing from the throne speech. Any mention of ways to help our communities is also missing, but here are some suggestions. The first one can be done very quickly and easily. Let's work with the cities of Edmonton and Calgary to draft city charters so that they will have the powers they need to tackle their own unique challenges. Albertans are smart. Let's put power back in the hands of the people. Edmonton and Calgary are truly international cities. Allow their leaders to make local decisions. This is long overdue and would generate a lot of goodwill.

We can also call on the government to establish a new municipal heritage fund, which would begin providing and creating stable, sustainable funding to local governments and creating long-term infrastructure solutions. Good infrastructure is an economic enabler. Let's use the interest from this heritage fund to support neighbourhood associations. Direct funding to neighbourhood associations across the province with 25 per cent of the municipal heritage fund's earnings would enable citizens to turn their neighbourhood priorities into realities. With a $1.5 billion investment into the municipal heritage fund every year and a 5 per cent rate of return on the investment, the average neighbourhood of 4,000 people would receive $300,000 a year in 15 years. Four thousand people. That's like a small town. This sure sounds better than the current practice of squandering our resource revenues and of pork-barrel politics.

Mr. Speaker, let's talk about transportation. Here's another good idea we encourage the members opposite to steal. Invest half of the $1.8 billion a year raised by the new emissions-based carbon levy I mentioned earlier in green transportation. This money should be distributed on a per capita basis to benefit every community in this province, from the largest to the smallest. It's the people's land. It's their resources. It's their money. Let's give it to them to do what they need to do. The cities of Edmonton and Calgary are saying that they need new LRT lines, and $300 million each year from a carbon levy based on actual emissions would sure help. This would greatly help both cities to develop green transportation options such as LRT. Allow the municipalities to do what they feel is best for them. Not only would this help communities throughout the province to improve public transportation; it would result in real reductions in emissions.

Mr. Speaker, what about health care? Did you know that we have too many managers managing managers managing managers and not enough front-line staff? I'll tell you. I still work in the system. Every front-line staff will tell you that this government doesn't know what they're doing. A case in point is AHS's third-quarter report that we brought up today, that they didn't release prior to the election. It's a wreck. It's a failure in every major indicator of their own standards that they're not meeting. We're the biggest spending health care system in the country. Albertans deserve better, and I believe we can give them better. Here again, meaningful discussion is missing, so let's once again offer some solutions.

Earlier in my remarks I showed some ways that government can increase tax revenues by at least 1 and a half billion dollars with just a little bit of political courage. As it happens, we also have a good idea for investing some of this new revenue, investments which could fix a broken health care system. The best place to start is actually with home care. Let's call on this government to double the funding for home care so that our seniors can stay in their homes for as long as possible and in their own communities. It's where they want to be, and it's where we should help them stay. Doubling the funding for home care, to $808 million a year, gets us there. This stops seniors from coming into hospital in the first place and gets them out of hospital if they do get sick and come into hospital.

We also call on this government to increase the supply of publicly funded and publicly delivered nonprofit long-term care beds for those whose needs exceed what can be provided at home. The evidence is in, Mr. Speaker. Private, for-profit long-term care does not serve our seniors well because when you add the profit component, cost plus profit equals price. The price of this health care gets you much less health care and a lesser quality of health care. That's the evidence internationally and locally. For-profit long-term care is inferior, and it's more expensive. Long-term care is increasingly too expensive for too many of our seniors. It's okay for the rich guys to get their stuff, but let's face it: most Albertan seniors aren't rich. They're average, middle-class, hard-working Albertans.

Where do seniors who need affordable long-term care end up when government doesn't provide it? They end up in the hospital, taking up a bed that's for sick or injured people. This is why seniors are being warehoused in acute-care beds when they don't even need to be in the hospital in the first place. We've got a paramedic over there. He understands this. It's unnecessary for it to be this way, it's morally wrong for it to be this way, and it's economically wasteful for it to be this way.

This is Alberta, Mr. Speaker. Let's please abandon this failed approach to long-term care. Let's invest $180 million over the next five years to build publicly funded, publicly delivered long-term care spaces for our seniors, especially for low- and middle-income seniors.

Let's invest $90 million over the next six years to cover the additional operating costs. This is what it takes to ensure an adequate supply of affordable, nonprofit long-term care beds. The bonus is that hundreds of acute-care beds occupied by seniors today waiting for long-term care or home care will become available. This means patients can be moved up from the ER department in a timely fashion. This means an end to – guess what? – agonizingly long waits to be admitted into the emergency room. This means ambulances no longer sit idle. It means an end to dangerously long wait times when you call 911 when your life is in danger and an end to red alerts. Surely to goodness all of this is worth $270 million over six years.

Mr. Speaker, let's put the word "care" back into health care. That's all we need to do. It's what Albertans deserve. Or do we want to build and operate more hospitals instead of properly using the ones we currently have? For a government claiming it's ready to strike the right balance between progressive and conservative thinking, this should be a no-brainer. Unfortunately, this government has been neither progressive nor conservative.

What about education? Again, there's no meaningful mention of this rather important area, so let's once again offer some solutions. Let's get rid of school fees. It's a regressive tax on working families. Let's lower tuition and make education affordable and accessible for every child. This regressive tax exists because this government doesn't fund education properly. We call on this government to invest an extra $103 million a year in public education so that school fees can be eliminated. That's only a little bit of money. It's not that much. Alberta is blessed with an abundance of natural resources and wealth, but our greatest wealth and resource is our children, our people. Let's invest in them. The returns are immense in the long term. We can afford this, Mr. Speaker.

In conclusion, it's true that I have found this third speech in seven months to be a bit lacking, but I want to be a bit more positive. I don't want to end my remarks with criticism. I'd like to extend an offer to this government. Show the courage to address the structural deficit by introducing fair taxes so that we can save and invest in resource revenues. Fair taxation, a price on carbon, health care, education, infrastructure: these are economic enablers. Let's fix these issues. We will fully support you. Every single member of the Alberta Liberal caucus will support you. Let's stop running from the problems facing this province and have courage. Let's turn away from the old ways of doing things, which have been shown not to work. Show the courage to do the things that need to be done, and we will support you. That's a promise.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. God bless Alberta. God bless Canada. God bless you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Under 29(2)(a) I'd like to ask the member if there was any other group of people in Alberta that he felt had been missed or trivialized during the election and in the speeches that he would like to address now?

Dr. Sherman: I'd like to thank the hon. member from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. In fact, Mr. Speaker, my disappointment is that this is such a great province, such a diverse province – we are people from all over the planet – and there are many people that were left out. The most important were the original immigrants to this nation from 10,000 years ago, the indigenous peoples of this province. They face and we as a province face a crisis. While there are some who enjoy so much prosperity in this province, there are some who do not have the opportunity to participate. The indigenous peoples of this great province I believe deserve not only mention but deserve solutions to the problems. How are they going to participate in the economy, in the prosperity when the high school completion rate is so low and the young people in the aboriginal communities can't get the skills and education they need? How can they participate?

Health care, the suicide rate, the mental health rate, the obesity rate, type 2 diabetes, hypertension, heart disease. When there's no access to care, how can you participate in the economy? Education and health care are not just social issues; they are actually economic enablers, but more importantly they enable people to live amazing, amazing fruitful lives.

There wasn't much for immigrants, for new Canadians. I can tell you that I came to this nation as a six-year-old. I didn't speak English. My parents were immigrants. My older brothers didn't speak English. It's challenging as a new Canadian, whether you're from Europe or Asia or Africa or South America. It doesn't matter where you're from; it's challenging when you're here in a fast-paced province like Alberta. You don't speak the language. It's pretty cold here, Mr. Speaker.

You know, you've got so many brilliant, educated people from across the planet working way beneath their abilities and capabilities. Invest in new immigrant settlement policies, English as a second language. Let's offer more government services and more languages beyond just English because that's how we connect with one another as a people.

There wasn't enough about seniors, those who built this great province. We have a lot of seniors coming up.

There wasn't enough about our children, how we're going to educate them. We have a 30 per cent high school dropout rate – did you know that, Mr. Speaker? – a 30 per cent high school noncompletion rate, the lowest postsecondary participation rate in the wealthiest, most prosperous province on the planet. Did you know that? It's an absolute tragedy.

That's why our greatest resource, my dear friends, is our people, our children. Let's address these problems. These solutions weren't there. There are many who don't enjoy their prosperity. This world can sometimes, many times, be an unjust and unfair place. Our duty is to make it a just and fair place. That is our duty. Not just to make the rich get richer; it's to make it fair for all people. Create policy that allows amazing things to happen, and then the individual has the responsibility of taking that opportunity. Yes, I believe in responsibility – individual, personal, community, and governmental responsibility – but individuals cannot seize that opportunity if we don't create an atmosphere for it.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank you very much. I could go on forever. I love this province. I love the people who built this province. We will continue with passion and heart and vigour to support the government when they are right, to offer solutions when they're sort of right, and, hey – you know what? – to sock it to them when we think they're really off base.

Thank you very much. God bless you all.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there others on Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

If not, then I'll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood on the motion.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and congratulations on your post, which I'm sure you are going to fulfill with great dignity.

I appreciate this opportunity to respond to the throne speech that his Honour the Lieutenant Governor delivered last Thursday. Mr. Speaker, what was apparent to me during the recent election and what I think is now obvious to many is that the government has run through whatever credibility they might once have had. When the Conservatives won their majority government on April 23, the results said little or nothing about the government itself, its record, or its platform. What it did say was that Albertans didn't want to be governed by a group of people who deny climate change and who don't see a problem with discrimination against people based on race or sexual orientation. The election was not trust in the PCs; it was about fear of the Wildrose.

Mr. Speaker, that was April 23. Today we begin the process of understanding our place in this 28th Legislature, and I think it's more important than ever that the government listen to Albertans and, as well, to the other parties here in this Legislature because they, too, represent Albertans.

The message that the government is offering Albertans is sounding increasingly hollow. The message of pragmatic, responsible government is laughable when compared with this government's record on a wide range of issues. The prosperity that people think of when they think of Alberta is not reaching many in our society. People realized in this election that what we have in this government is not leadership; it's not thoughtful or pragmatic governance; it's nothing more than a desire for power that keeps this government running. I think Albertans deserve more than that.

The throne speech, Mr. Speaker, was empty beyond my expectations. But in one way I think the emptiness of the Speech from the Throne represents an emptiness in the government's vision for this province. Although there was little vision in the speech about moving our energy sector forward, either in terms of environmental monitoring or a plan for sustainable development, nothing about creating an affordable market for electricity or even about making life affordable for families at all, I think that's just part and parcel of a government which is out of touch with ordinary Alberta families.

The government has been pursuing an energy strategy based primarily on pipelines to export unprocessed bitumen instead of creating jobs for Albertans by upgrading our resources here. Before the government moved to support the Keystone pipeline as heavily as they have done, there were a number of major upgrading projects approved for the heartland area. These were billion-dollar projects that would have created thousands of jobs and drawn investment to our province. Now, Mr. Speaker, those jobs are apparently lost for the time being. That was a direct result of this government's decision to favour the interests of oil companies over the interests of ordinary Alberta families.

This throne speech was full of evidence that this government does not have the priorities of ordinary families of this province in mind. While the Conservatives move to deliver more care to our seniors through a private model, hundreds and hundreds of seniors can't afford decent long-term care. While the Conservatives insist that private care for seniors provides good care at lower cost to taxpayers, workers from one of these private facilities are now on strike because their for-profit employer refuses to pay them a fair wage or even the industry standard. We heard talk of both of these things in the throne speech, where the government admitted that they still need to design and implement a plan for seniors' care and accommodation. Mr. Speaker, they've had 41 years to do so, and they're only beginning to design a plan now.

There's a serious crisis in this area, Mr. Speaker, and this creates a ripple effect through the entire health care system. Seniors can't find appropriate or affordable care, so they're forced to live in hospital wards while they wait for a suitable bed to open up. Meanwhile the government talks about improving wait times in hospitals, and it seems that they're announcing a new strategy for how to deal with that every other week. Having a plan for taking care of seniors is the first and the most important step to solving problems in our hospitals. Our wait times are unacceptable, we have a shortage of family doctors and other health care professionals, and all of this is a result of poor planning for our seniors.

We cannot trust this government's vision for education, Mr. Speaker, either. When school boards lost $107 million in funding in the last year, it was pressure of parents, teachers, school boards, and the NDP that forced the Premier to call a fall sitting of the Legislature and restore that funding. But we are still short hundreds of teachers in the system that were there before these cuts took place. Across Alberta schools are overcrowded and infrastructure is crumbling. We're a long way from where we should be in that regard, and I think Albertans deserve a government that will strengthen our public education system and will commit to making postsecondary education accessible to all.

This throne speech contained a lot of claims about the economic freedom of Alberta. In fact, the speech referred to Alberta as “the most economically free jurisdiction in North America.” But if economically free means the lowest minimum wage and workers dying because of lax safety regulations, that’s not freedom for the average Albertan.

Mr. Speaker, everywhere – from the price of electricity to seniors’ care to minimum wages – this government has their friends in private industry in mind and not the individual families who pay the price every day when the government doesn’t stand up for them. What Albertans need from their government isn’t a focus on creating excess profits for their friends in the oil and gas industry but a plan for ensuring that all Albertans get a fair share of the prosperity of our province. That plan needs to include how you pay for our public services.

Simply saying “no new taxes” over and over again without any other plan to deliver the services that Albertans need isn’t good enough. Giving Albertans the worst return in the world on our oil and gas resources isn’t good enough. Smart and good government means making the tough calls sometimes, Mr. Speaker, and that includes looking at all of our options, including making sure that the wealthiest individuals and corporations pay their fair share and making sure that our royalty rates are delivering a fair return to the people who own those resources, the people of Alberta.

Albertans need the health care system that they deserve, and we need an education system that has the best teachers but also the best schools and infrastructure.

Where this throne speech did focus on taking care of ordinary Albertans – for example, increases to AISH, the independence of the Child and Youth Advocate, and providing access to child care for middle- and low-income families – those were all in response to pressure from Albertans and from the NDP. Increases for AISH always have taken too long, and it’s usually only in response to a great deal of pressure and many reminders that people with disabilities deserve to live with some dignity that this government ever takes action on this issue. And there is so much more to be done for Albertans with disabilities. This government should index AISH to the cost of living because a decent amount of money one year is a pittance five years later.

Similar to the increases for AISH recipients the government wants to take credit in this throne speech for the independence of the Child and Youth Advocate. Usually, Mr. Speaker, a throne speech talks about what the government will do. This throne speech is perhaps unique in focusing on things that have already been done. That maybe gives them something to put in the speech. But it was the work of my colleague Rachel Notley, who repeatedly embarrassed this government until they took action, that gave . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Oh, I apologize. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. I apologize, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you. Carry on.

Mr. Mason: I should know better. [interjections] Yeah.

Once again, taking action on something once it has become a thoroughgoing embarrassment to Albertans and to our province is not good enough and certainly isn’t something to be proud of.

So what can we see in the Speech from the Throne, Mr. Speaker? A government whose main achievements are directly attributable to pressure from the NDP. Let me assure you that that pressure will continue. We’ll work hard to raise the issues that matter to Albertans and that this government has forgotten about. We’ll continue to talk about issues that others don’t, like giving Albertans a fair share of resource revenue, cleaning up the environment, cleaning up the tailings ponds, regulating the industry so the spills like the one on Friday near Rainbow Lake don’t happen. We’ll keep talking about fully public health care and good seniors’ care. We’ll keep talking about caring for vulnerable Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, we can also see in this Speech from the Throne that the government has run out of steam. They don’t have much to offer Albertans. They don’t have a really compelling vision for the future of this province. This government needs a strong, a vocal opposition more than they ever have, and it’s clear that the government cannot move forward unless it listens to the opposition, consults with the opposition, and is prepared to take ideas from the opposition. Whether or not they give us credit is another matter.

It’s clear from the results of the election and clear from this throne speech, Mr. Speaker, that this government has much to do. Unfortunately, we don’t see in the throne speech a guide to the future of the province. I mentioned today in question period the government’s sweeping commitment to end child poverty in this province made when they were far behind in the polls in the election, when they were desperate for votes. They talked about reducing poverty in the province overall. They talked about eliminating child poverty altogether. Yet that was completely missing from the throne speech. Why would such a sweeping goal not be included in the Speech from the Throne? It’s either not really a goal of the government, or the Speech from the Throne doesn’t reflect the government’s plans, and that itself, I think, says volumes about this government.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I just want to say that I believe that Alberta has a great deal of promise. I think the future of this province could be wonderful, it could be bright, and it could be inclusive. It can include all Albertans, give everyone a share in the prosperity of our province. That should be the goal of the government. I wish that I saw that in the Speech from the Throne, but I do not. But it will remain our goal. It will be something that we will talk about, we will advocate for and work towards for the entire term of this Legislature. I look forward to working with any members and any parties who share those goals with us.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. To the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood – where did Beverly go? Is it totally gone out of that?

Mr. Mason: Deron has got it.

Ms Blakeman: Oh, Deron has got it.

I’m wondering if the member has any particular advice that he would like to direct the government’s way or perhaps expand on the advice that he’s already laid out in his remarks.

Mr. Mason: Thank you for that very broad, very general – I don’t know where to start in terms of advice for this government.

Ms Blakeman: Well, at least it’s not in question period.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Well, puffballs are not entirely a preserve of the government, I suppose. But I thank you very much.

My advice is to recognize what the election was and what the election result was. The Progressive Conservative Party in the election worked very hard to frighten Albertans about another alternative that was out there, and many people voted for them on that basis. They should not take that as a mandate to do whatever they want. They shouldn't take that as a mandate even to implement fully their platform without consultation with other parties in this Legislature and without discussion and consultation with the people of Alberta.

I think the question of the government's mandate is extremely important as we begin our work of the next four years in this Legislature. I've already heard it said: well, we have a mandate to do, you know, exactly what we want or exactly what we promised. I don't think that the government does. Most broadly, this government mandate is to govern with an appreciation of the science of climate change and to not be homophobic or racist. That's about as far as it goes for much of the government's support.

I would say that the answer is to take into account that many thousands of Albertans voted for parties other than this government and that it would be useful and interesting and productive if the government took time to consult with the other parties in this Legislature as we craft a vision for the future of this province, a vision which I think is noticeably lacking in this Speech from the Throne.

Thank you for the question, hon. member.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have to say, hon. member, that I'm happy to see you again here, elected. I really am.

Your comments with regard to the Wildrose, inferring that we are in any way racist or homophobic, are absolutely out of line . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, through the chair, please. Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'm talking about the government's scare tactics and not necessarily any reflection on any other party. That is, in fact, the government's tactics, which they used to win the election. I didn't comment on whether it was accurate or not.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there other members?

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

MLA Compensation Review

11. Mr. Hancock moved:

- A. Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in principle the recommendations of the Review of Compensation of Members of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, "the report," submitted by the Hon. J.C. Major, CC,

QC, and refer the report to the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services, "the committee," for implementation where possible by June 30, 2012, subject to the following exceptions:

- (a) that recommendation 4 regarding salary for the Premier not be implemented but that the committee implement a salary that reflects a differential of plus 25 per cent between the Premier's salary and that of a minister with portfolio;
  - (b) that recommendation 10 concerning the expense portion of a member's remuneration, known as the tax-free allowance, not be implemented and that the amount of that expense allowance be set at zero pending an amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act to eliminate it;
  - (c) that recommendation 11 regarding the implementation of a new transition allowance be rejected and that no further amounts shall be accumulated beyond those accrued by eligible members prior to the commencement of the 28th Legislature;
  - (d) that the committee examine alternatives to the pension plan for members proposed in recommendation 12 and discussed in section 3.5 of the report, including defined contribution plans, and report to the Assembly with its recommendations;
- B. Be it resolved that nothing in this motion shall limit the committee's ability to report to the Assembly on any other matter arising from the report.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have a fairly comprehensive report from the Hon. J.C. Major, CC, QC. I think it's important in that our Premier fulfilled her promise very quickly after being elected leader last fall in requesting the Speaker to move ahead with an independent report on MLA compensation and that the Speaker, after consulting the Members' Services Committee, moved ahead on that process.

Now, this is something that had come up much earlier in the House. In fact, I believe there was a unanimous resolution passed by the House somewhat earlier, brought forward by the Member for Lethbridge-East. I think there was some discussion on that resolution, but there was some, shall I say, inability to move forward because people couldn't or didn't bring forward their recommendations as to who might be appropriate.

I have to say that the Speaker, upon the request of the Premier, moved forward with having this report commissioned, and now we have it. One of our commitments was that when we received this report, we would act on this report. I believe that passing a motion approving in principle the recommendations fulfills that commitment, that we accept in a general sense the recommendations that are made in the report with respect to MLA compensation. We do not ask Members' Services to tinker with MLA compensation. We do not ask ourselves to set our own compensation. We accept the recommendations that are made in the report.

Recommendation 1 is, in fact, to set MLA compensation at $134,000, and we would believe that that recommendation should be adopted.

Recommendation 2 sets stipends for committee chairs. There's no other committee remuneration except for the chairs. While we might quibble as to whether that's appropriate compensation for chairs, we are recommending to the House and requesting of the House that we ask Members' Services to implement recommendation 2. And so on with respect to the other recommendations with respect to other offices that are represented here; Leader of the Official Opposition, for example.

There is, though, Mr. Speaker, one recommendation, recommendation 4, which the Premier indicated as soon as the report was published, as soon as it was available to us, that she would not be able to recommend, and that's the recommendation with respect to the Premier's salary. The recommendation, in fact, suggests that the Premier's stipend should be fully 100 per cent higher than an MLA's stipend and that there should be additional compensation over the next two years to bring it up to a level I think equivalent to that of the Chief Justice of Alberta. The Premier, I think quite rightly, stepped forward and said that that's not an acceptable recommendation in today's climate, so we would ask the House to respect her request and to ask Members' Services not to implement that particular recommendation.

Some of the other recommendations – 5, 6, and 7 – deal, again, with compensation for other offices, 8 and 9 as well, and that is quite appropriate. That's what we asked Justice Major to do, and he has done it.

Now, with respect to some of the issues that were around discussion of MLA compensation over and above setting the amount, there have been in the public debate, both previous to and during the election, issues around the so-called tax-free allowance. All members will know that the tax-free allowance was something that's been set up – it's been available to governments across the country both, I think, at the provincial and municipal levels – to allow what we all know is the case, and that is the fact that we all expend our own personal resources in carrying out our office. That's a norm. Everybody does it, and it's to be expected. We now have, of course, in place budgets for each of our offices so that we can in fact have some of those expenses covered, and in fact Members' Services deals with some of the issues with respect to, for example, members who are coming from out of town, their accommodation allowances and those sorts of things.

I think it's fairly commonly believed that the tax-free allowance is an anachronism. Hon. Justice Major suggests that we retain it, however, because by eliminating it, all we really do is end up sending Ottawa more money. While that is, I think, something that none of us really wants to do – not that we have any disrespect for Ottawa, but we just don't want to send them more money if we don't have to – I think it would be fair to say that in the interests of openness and transparency and people understanding exactly what amount of money MLAs are paid, now is the time to eliminate the tax-free allowance and move to a fully grossed-up, taxable MLA salary.

It's very clear what MLAs earn, and it's very clear that MLAs pay tax on the same basis as everyone else. We would recommend that recommendation 10, concerning the tax-free allowance, not be followed through on and that, in fact, we implement recommendation 1 for the salary level that's in recommendation 1.

5:10

That comes, Mr. Speaker, to recommendation 11 with respect to transition allowance, which has been another matter which has been the subject of a lot of discussion. In fact, I think it's fair to say that generally in the public there was some high degree of concern that the transition allowance which was in our compensation packages previous to the election was too high. In fact, Justice Major has come back and indicated that the existing one should be suspended and that a new transition allowance going forward from this point should be implemented.

Our Premier indicated prior to the election and during the election that she believed that we should eliminate the transition allowance. In fact, I think, again for the purposes of clarity and understanding, an MLA's salary with additional stipends for certain offices like Leader of the Opposition or minister with portfolio, et cetera, makes it very clear to understand, and then a clear pension piece would make it very clear for Albertans to understand. If we in any way confuse that with transition allowance, RRSPs, and those sorts of things in addition, that would not achieve the objective that we, really, originally set out.

So we're recommending that recommendation 11 with respect to transition allowance not be implemented, that the transition allowance be stopped as at the date of the election. Obviously, one wouldn't go back and take away an allowance that had already been earned, but going forward, we believe that the Members' Services Committee, in designing an appropriate pension as recommended by Justice Major, can incorporate from that perspective the overall fiscal amount that's set aside and achieve the objective of the overall level of compensation for MLAs without having a transition allowance. That design can be structured so that people could access a pension amount if they needed a certain amount for transition.

That's why, when we get to the next recommendation, we think it's very important that Members' Services not be constrained by the pension design set out in the report. It should be constrained probably by the overall fiscal amount, but governments across the country have been struggling with the whole issue of defined contribution versus defined benefit plans. Defined benefit plans have been a problem for the private sector in terms of unfunded liability, and it's certainly been a problem for governments in terms of unfunded liability.

While there's much that can go into the design of a pension plan to try and eliminate that particular concern, I think it's fair to say that government has certainly been looking at how you move to a defined contribution basis rather than defined benefit basis, and it wouldn't be, in our view, a great step forward to be talking about looking at that from an overall government perspective, as other governments and others across the country are doing, and then going ahead with implementing a defined benefit plan.

What we would request is that the House ask the Members' Services Committee to look at defined contribution to determine whether an appropriate defined contribution plan can be designed and put in place for members which would respect the overall recommendation of the Major report in terms of the amount of money that goes into it, the overall compensation, if you will, for MLAs but move away from the concept of defined benefit, with all of its perceived warts, and move into a defined contribution which limits the liability of Albertans yet still respects the fact that MLAs, by coming to this House, often give up the best earning years of their lives and need to have some combination there which will help to provide them for transition back into the private sector or into retirement.

I won't go on at length about that because I think it's in the hands of the Members' Services Committee, really, to do the detailed work, and members in each party have representatives on that committee to discuss it at the committee level. But I would say that when it gets to committee, I would hope that members will look very, very closely at defined contribution programs and determine one that would fit the needs of MLAs but as well meet the fiscal criteria or the overall compensation criteria set by Justice Major and have it, if it's possible, simple enough so that we can achieve the objective we had, which is for clarity, openness, and transparency, a very simple way for people to look and see what MLAs earn as they do their work on their behalf.

There are other recommendations in the report, Mr. Speaker. The question of the health benefits and other benefits: the recommendation is to maintain them. Certainly, we don't see any problem with that. Adjustments to compensation: it should be adjusted annually. The CPI as opposed to the average weekly earnings index makes sense.

Then recommendation 15 with respect to the review: this is why, again, there needs to be a subsection on the motion because I think the Members' Services Committee will have to look at that. We're not in the position, obviously, to demand the court put together a review committee for us. This recommendation is to be reviewed by a committee of judges. Obviously, we can't command in the report to put together a committee of judges, so the Members' Services Committee will have to deal with that and see the appropriate way to implement that type of a review and to see whether that review can be put in place.

Overall, we believe that the objective has been achieved. The House asked for an independent report. It has an independent report. The independent report has set an overall level of compensation that I believe fits what Albertans have been telling us. They want MLAs to be appropriately paid. They don't want us to be overpaid; they don't want us to be underpaid. We have a pay structure set out in the report which accomplishes that. We would ask that we not proceed with the tax-free allowance in the interest of openness and transparency and, again, what we believe Albertans have been telling us.

While I think that from a personal perspective I'd say that the office of the Premier should command a salary which is equivalent to the senior civil servant in the province or the senior justice in the province, it's not something which the Premier wants to do, and I believe it's not something which we want to do as a Legislature at this point.

I think the differential that's being proposed to maintain essentially the same differential that we have now – I believe it's about 26.2 per cent now – maintaining it at 25 per cent makes sense and then to move to an appropriate pension design but one which respects the fact that Canadians, whether in the private sector or in government, are currently looking at moving to defined contributions as a better way of understanding the overall cost of building a pension plan as opposed to defined benefit, which certainly might be seen by many as being preferential for the individuals receiving the pension plan but has its risks in terms of its long-term potential liability and the ability to keep up the investment necessary to meet the defined benefit in the long term and over a long period of time.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, I think it's a report which accomplishes what the Legislature asked in the motion that was passed unanimously and achieves what the Premier asked, that there be an independent report to set out the overall fiscal compensation for MLAs to appropriate levels. It does that. Where we are asking the Members' Services Committee to deviate from the report, I think, is in structure rather than in substance, and so I think it meets the objective of saying that we're accepting Mr. Justice Major's report.

We're asking the Members' Services Committee to implement it as quickly as possible to put this particular issue to bed so that Albertans know how much their MLAs are paid and we can get on with dealing with the business of the province in terms of what kind of a province we want to create. How do we address the issues of poverty and homelessness? How do we make sure that the budget is balanced, and how do we make sure that the economy is addressed in the right framework for every Albertan to be able to participate in the opportunities which this province affords? We can move on to those.

This is an important issue, but it's not really the issue that we're elected to do, so we should get it done, get it behind us, and move on to the big issues of the day.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Government House Leader.

Hon. members, this motion is debatable, and I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm standing up to speak against Motion 11. Let's go back historically and find out how this MLA pay and no-committee pay mess all started. MLAs were getting paid. When they got elected, the Premier and the cabinet at that time and many in the current cabinet today set their own salaries, gave themselves a 34 per cent pay raise just before a major economic collapse, at a time when hard-working Alberta families were having a very tough time. Then at the same time this government decided on the committee structure, and they decided how often their committees would meet. Then this whole no-pay committee issue came forward.

Now, Justice Major has done a very comprehensive report. Mr. Speaker, as you know, you put two people in a phone booth and give them five things to talk about, they're not going to agree with all five of those things. I thank Justice Major for his very comprehensive report. I'll be honest. I don't agree with all the issues in that report. I do agree with some of the issues that he brought up in the report. The greater principle here is that we should not be setting our own pay. That's the greater principle. We should not be setting our own pay. Our job as leaders is to set the moral bar for society. If we're going to decide on our own pay, we may just as well tell everybody out there: "Hey, don't worry. You guys just tell us what you want and set your own pay on your own terms. That's okay because that's how we do it."

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Perks and pensions, too.

You know, 90 per cent of Albertans, Mr. Speaker, make less than a hundred grand a year. We have this government: health care workers have been going on strike because they won't give them 3 per cent. Do you know that 3 per cent of a little is a little; 3 per cent of a lot is a lot?

We should not set our pay because we have to be leaders. We must lead by setting an example, a moral compass. Whether I agree or disagree with the recommendations in the report, the principle is what we must live by, that we should not decide our own pay. It must be set independently. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, when she was a Liberal MLA, had said that it should be independently set. For us to take this report and cherry-pick things that we like and debate the things that are good for us or not . . .

An Hon. Member: Remuneration.

Dr. Sherman: That actually sets us back to what led us to this problem in the first place.

I would say, for those who are not happy, that I agree that the pay for the Premier is a lot of pay. It'd be higher than the Prime Minister is getting paid. The President of the U.S. is only getting paid $400,000 a year plus 50 grand for expenses. If the Premier doesn't like it, she can cut a cheque and give it back. I wasn't proud of taking the no-meet committee pay, and I apologized to Albertans. I cut a cheque with interest and gave it back, and I challenge the government members to do the same.

The whole principle is that the pay should be independently set. He's done a comprehensive, independent report. Whether we agree with it or disagree with it, we should accept it. We should not be debating, cherry-picking which things we want and checking public opinion polls to see: hey, what's going to give us politically the best advantage?

Mr. Speaker, the judges are going to review it every four years. Justice Major is a very intelligent man. You know, he's made some decisions that he has thought about very wisely, and I believe we ought to respect Justice Major, whether or not we for political gain or loss agree with some of those decisions.

Mr. Speaker, that's really all I have to say. Thank you very much. I encourage every member of the House to accept this report in its entirety. If you don't like it, cut a cheque back when you get paid.

The last thing, Mr. Speaker. I do want to acknowledge the hard work, having served on both sides of the Chamber. Many members in the opposition here will serve on multiple, multiple committees. I do know that all members in every party here in the opposition – some were on six, seven committees – work extraordinarily hard. That unfairness needs to be addressed and fixed. We all work hard as MLAs. We all work hard in our constituencies and in the Chamber. For some MLA to work on seven committees and some on these make-work committees, we need to address that fairness because it's a lot of work here to serve our constituents. Please, let's not create extra work and make-work projects to keep some people busier than others, and let's just talk about fairness.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak on Motion 11, albeit briefly. It's interesting in a way and perhaps somewhat ironic that you apply for a job, as we all did in this last election, without any accurate knowledge of what the pay rate is going to be afterwards. But we all did choose that, and we're in this circumstance now where we have to move forward on what the compensation for MLAs is going to be.

Unfortunately, we're stepping into what is a bit of a quagmire in the history of MLA pay, I would say quite a lot of mismanagement historically in this regard. There are some fundamental principles that I think are at the root of why this has been such a problem over the years and come to a head during this last election. I think that the public recognizes and we recognize here, too, as New Democrats that the process of MLAs setting their own pay rate is in itself a deeply flawed process that has led to a very tangled web that has interfered with the proper functioning, I think, of the Legislature and of this last election, dominating when other issues could have been and should have been debated and, I would say, even threatened the very integrity of this House as well. So we have an urgent need to seek some resolution on this issue.

I think that the key to resolving this MLA pay question is to look out to, first, the pay rates and the procedures of regular Albertans in the province of Alberta and see first what their circumstances are and perhaps seek judgment from there. The first thing I would like to point out is that, you know, in the rest of the province many Albertans are suffering from the lowest minimum wage in the entire country of Canada here.

Ms Blakeman: And two tiered, to make it worse.

Mr. Eggen: Yes, that's right, a two-tiered system where waiters and waitresses are forced to be from a different pay rate as well.

Ms Blakeman: Primarily women.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder has the floor. Thank you.

Mr. Eggen: She's helping me out. That's awesome. Yeah, that's good.

Sometimes you're helping me. That's good.

A large portion of workers in this province have no pension at all. Through very poor labour practices and the boom-and-bust cycle of our economy we see an unstable situation for many people that are facing retirement without a pension, defined or undefined. On the other hand, the Major report that we saw just recently come out would make Alberta MLAs amongst the very highest paid in the entire country.

The incongruity of this situation between regular workers and our own MLAs here setting our own pay rate makes it very problematic at the very least, this situation, and I think we need to seek resolution based on the first principle that this Major report was created for in the first place, which is to have an independent decision made on our wages here. While this was the model that was created by bringing in Justice Major, almost immediately it was muddled and clouded and ultimately broken, this sense of independence of the Major report.

I wonder, in terms of setting the terms of reference for this inquiry, who actually would choose Justice Major in the first place. I would be very curious to know who actually did that. I'm suspecting it was the Premier who actually did do that and who set the terms of the references. You know, it just seemed very confused from the outset. Then ultimately immediately breaking that idea that we or that the government would accept the results of that report, again, I think just confused the whole issue.

I think it's important for us to take a long, sober look at this MLA pay issue and to refer it to Members' Services, where it can be worked through in a reasonable way, again, as I said, using those principles that I had laid out at the beginning: first, what is the standard for wages and pensions in the rest of the province for the rest of the people here in the province and, two, to try to go back to that concept of independence that the Major report was meant to be in the first place.

It's interesting, you know, that when you look back to ancient Rome and to Paris, France, after the revolution, political leaders were paid some version of the average wage of their constituents. They would get a pay raise if the wages of their constituents rose first. While I'm certainly not suggesting that this is one of the parts of the terms of reference for this pay raise, it does remind us of what we are doing here in the first place and how we will be judged by setting our own salaries. Ultimately, it's the constituents who place us here with the responsibility to have sober and reasonable judgments on the issues of the day, and they are looking to us now more than ever on this very issue to ensure that we give ourselves a reasonable wage but not excessive and that there's something there that's not gold-plated, that it's something that reflects how people are paid here, the rest of Albertans who live and work here and make the province go round.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is now available. The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if it would be appropriate to ask the hon. member if he could perhaps go back and review the process. He commented on not knowing where the name came forward from and alluding to the fact that he believed it might be from the Premier's office. I can assure him that it was not the Premier's office who put forward the name of the honourable member. Rather, it was something that the Speaker took on, and I believe he spoke with the Members' Services Committee. That could be the subject of a review. I'd ask the hon. member to go back and review the record because it's clear it wasn't the Premier who determined what the parameters of the inquiry would be, but she did request the Speaker to get on with the job of getting it done, and we're glad that he did.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Government House Leader. Hon. member, did you wish to respond?

There being none, I'll recognize the next speaker. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As always, it's an honour and privilege to rise and speak to this government motion. I will tell you at the outset that I will be voting against this motion, and hopefully the reasons will become apparent.

I would like to thank Justice Major for what I thought was a very thoughtful piece of work that analyzed a great many facets and came to some very reasonable conclusions. By all means, we could hire 50 different people or 50 different organizations to do a report, and it wouldn't come out exactly the way that Justice Major decided on it. But I thought that if you reviewed the report, you were given an insight as to what he was looking for and what he was considering. I think that at all points in his report he made it clear the sort of different cleavages between what people outside of this Legislature think about the political process, what we do in this Legislature, and how we represent our constituents.

He was perfectly honest when he said that the pay of MLAs has to reflect an ability to attract people to the job, the ability to have people leave their professions at various stages of their lives and give up some very good working years in doing that to serve, and also a reflection that they will not necessarily win their next election. This is not a job for life, so there's got to be a balance. He also recognized the fact that it's a difficult balance because no matter what the pay is going to be, people at the grocery store, people at 7-Eleven are going to be upset. We're easy targets. At the same point in time I think his report reflected that. I applaud him for reflecting all that and going through all his points and honestly going through the analysis because the analysis, when you go through it, is pretty good and pretty succinct when you look at all of those components even if we here would have different opinions in varying degrees.

I also like the approach that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark took at the start of this, which was: how did we get here? It reminded me of this scene in The Godfather. It was after the godfather had initially been shot, and Sonny had been shot at the causeway. The war was winding up between the five families, and they met at the head of the table. There was Barzini, and he brings up the godfather, and the godfather gets up and says: well, how did we get here? Then he goes through the process, and he says: I will not be the one to forgo the peace. That was the final thing. The five families make up. They get on with business and go from there.

If we look at this sort of endeavour that we've got here, it goes back to 2008, to where the government did give themselves a raise of 34 per cent immediately after becoming elected. This was immediately followed by a recession and a government who found themselves in some political troubles, okay? In every sense of the word this issue often was front and centre in the upcoming election. So one of the reasons that this was acted on was political pressure.

I will note for the record that it's been a long-standing Alberta Liberal position that MLAs should not be setting their own pay.

That's why I believe – and I'm surprised she's not here to discuss this today . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you can't refer to a member being here or not.

Mr. Hehr: My apologies. I hope she'll be able to rise and speak, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, to sort of go through what she believed in her motion, I hope, to be true, that MLAs should not be setting their own pay, that we should move this to an independent process.

That's what I thought we all agreed on here in this House. I can remember that private member's motion when we all got up here. We all spoke about how wonderful this was and how, yes, this is a great process and, yes, we're excited by this and, yes, we realize that we here as politicians are not to be setting our own pay. I think that for everyone here, from the loyal opposition to government members, if you go back in Hansard, this was sunshine, lollipops, and bunny rabbits. Everything else was that this was going to be great. We then sent it to Members' Services, and there, again, we discussed it. Sure enough, we all willingly went down this process of having a committee. We had a person selected, and they would have a report. I think that at least the intent was that we would honour this report. Otherwise, I'd say: why did we bother, okay?

Why did we bother? It just, you know, drives me nuts when we go on these exercises in futility like this, which this is now. What we're doing here today is exactly what we said that we wouldn't do: us not setting our own pay. We're going to set our own pay. The government is going to do what they want. They're going to interpret this the way they want. They're going to add it to some pay down the road. Maybe they're going to still pay their MLAs to investigate various happenings around the province. I don't know whether their new special adviser is getting an increase in pay, but we've seen that in the past when we don't follow a set of rules and regulations set out by an independent member. So it leaves that an open, not airtight rule of what we're going to do.

I also appreciated that Justice Major – and on the Premier's pay the hon. Solicitor General said: did you agree with the Premier's pay? Well, whether I agreed with her or not is irrelevant, okay? We said that we weren't going to accept it. If the Premier didn't want the pay, as former Speaker Kowalski always said: if people don't like their pay, they can always write a cheque back to the treasury; we'll cash it. He never saw it happen before, but, you know, he said: we'll definitely cash it. So it's immaterial. The Premier could have gotten up and had a flag-waving ceremony quarterly when she got her pay: look at how great I am. So there are ways around this whole situation.

In any event, you know, I think we should have accepted this. There was a process whereby every four years a panel of judges was going to look into this. If there was public angst, public uproar, or political interference in what was supposed to be done, the judges would have a report. It would come out every four years. Hopefully, it would look at the situations as they came up. Hopefully, it would be in step with where the province was going and what was in the best interests of the Alberta people and this Legislature. I believe that in that forward-looking nature his report was not frozen in time. His report was not meant just to sit there and left to be a one-time affair. No. He's a thoughtful man. He envisioned a way to keep it relevant, to keep it honest, to keep it independent, which was very important.

Those are the reasons why I believe that this is an exercise in futility, and I don't think we should be going down this path, and I don't believe it's in the best interests of the Alberta people or this Legislature in the long run.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Minister of Finance and Treasury Board.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and might I say that you look well in the chair.

I would like to move adjournment of the debate at this time.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

[Adjourned debate May 28: Mr. Hancock]

The Deputy Speaker: I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today as the seventh Member of the Legislative Assembly to serve on behalf of the residents of Calgary-Glenmore and the citizens of Alberta. I would like to begin by congratulating you, Mr. Speaker, and the other chair officers on your elections. Your guidance and decisions will determine the atmosphere of this House.

I would also like to compliment the officers and staff of the Legislature who've assisted us all in preparing for this session. I've been impressed with the patience and hard work shown by all of the LAO staff over the last few weeks. I look forward to working with each of you.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to express my appreciation to all of the individuals who stood as candidates in the recent election. Placing your name on a ballot is at once intimidating, exhilarating, and a great sacrifice both personally and for a candidate's family. To my fellow members: I look forward to working with you as well.

Now to introduce Calgary-Glenmore. Calgary-Glenmore is in the southwest quadrant of the city. The constituency boundaries run along Glenmore Trail on the north, McLeod Trail on the east, Anderson Road on the south, and the Tsuu T'ina Nation on the west. To put it plainly, the constituency surrounds the Glenmore reservoir. The name "Glenmore" has an historical context in that it was first used by Sam Livingston, an early settler of the Elbow valley, when he used the word "Glenmore," which is Gaelic for big valley. The riding honours our history. Many of our schools are named in commemoration of notable figures: Louis Riel, Nellie McClung, John Ware, Premier Henry Wise Wood, and Bishop Grandin. There are 12 communities in the constituency. Two of their names reflect Alberta's past as well, and those are the neighbourhoods of Palliser and Haysboro.

In Calgary-Glenmore each community is represented by a strong community association. These associations are led by engaged individuals who make sure that their neighbourhoods provide the best environment to make a home and to raise a family. In addition, the various community associations organize family fun days, community cleanup and recycle days, parades, and Stampede events. They build and maintain outdoor skating rinks and organize many athletic programs for their members.

Community members also take initiative. In Oakridge one of the wooden playgrounds needs to be replaced. In fact, the children call it the splinter park. In the fall of 2010 neighbours working together researched the replacement policies, applied for and received grant money so that a new playground can be installed in the next month. This is just one example of the strength and get-it-done approach of Calgary-Glenmore residents.

Mr. Speaker, throughout the recent campaign I often spoke about how Calgary-Glenmore reflects what is great about Alberta. I observed how we have many fine facilities because of the planning, commitment, and spending of past governments. Some of these facilities are the Rockyview hospital and the Southwood public library. As well, there are two high schools, Henry Wise Wood and Bishop Grandin. Both these schools take pride in the programs they offer, be it in academics, sports, and one of them even has a marching band. There are many K to 12 schools also in the constituency which take advantage of the many delivery approaches allowed by Alberta Education. We have public schools, separate schools, and private and charter schools and quite a few home-schooling parents, who are all bringing out the best in our young people.

For the senior population there are many fine facilities. In total there are eight. I'll mention the Bethany care centre, Trinity Lodge, and Carewest. These residential complexes and others strive to provide dignity, respect, and quality of life for our seniors.

Mr. Speaker, Calgary-Glenmore is also home to several major tourist attractions. First, there is Heritage Park. This is a living-history museum, portraying the settlement of western Canada through exhibits and activities from the fur trading era to the time of bobby soxers. You can climb aboard an antique train, you can cruise the Glenmore reservoir on a sternwheel paddle boat, you can take a ride on a traditional merry-go-round, and you can flirt with your sweetie under the canvas on the caterpillar ride. There are more than 179 original and replica buildings and structures, and with the recent completion of the heritage town plaza, you can now visit a hands-on and interactive automobile museum, a brewery exhibit, and enjoy fine dining in the park.

Calgary-Glenmore is also home to the north and south Glenmore parks. Along with the Weaselhead natural environment area these spaces offer many biking and nature pathways for outdoor enthusiasts.

Mr. Speaker, these facilities remind us of the importance of making good, strategic decisions for all Albertans and are a result of the policies and practices of previous governments. This government will continue that tradition of putting forward the right vision in response to Albertans' values and the issues they face. The government has a policy framework for this time and place, a plan in harmony with Albertans' socially progressive values and fiscally conservative views.

During the recent election my constituents spoke passionately about the need for quality education in our schools and postsecondary institutions, the delivery of a public health care system, the growing need for senior citizens' services and facilities, and the challenges of transportation needs within the constituency. They asked that all of this be achieved within a framework of fiscal responsibility. Albertans understand and applaud our government's plan for zero-based budgeting and continuous three-year program funding reviews. As His Honour said in the Speech from the Throne, the government will deliver the outcomes Albertans expect in a financially sensible manner.

Mr. Speaker, I also believe that improving literacy skills among our population is another path to greater prosperity for all. The most recent statistics indicate that for individuals to function fully in a knowledge-based economy, over 39 per cent of adult Albertans need improvement in their literacy skills and 44 per cent of Albertans need improvement in their numeracy skills. The reasons for these statistics are numerous. The reality, though, is that with improvement of these skills employment opportunities grow and income levels grow. I look forward to supporting this government's initiatives in this area.

Mr. Speaker, as MLAs together with our constituents we will be engaged in a democratic process that has a long and honourable history that allows for participation by all, and as our government indicated in the throne speech, one of our greatest priorities is more transparency. This can also be achieved by engaging Albertans directly in the legislative committee process. Questions and policy discussions explored in committee allow us to exchange ideas and to ensure that the best decisions are made on behalf of Albertans.

The parliamentary process is a structure with all of its rules, proceedings, and precedents which enables members to serve. While the model is challenging and rule bound sometimes, that is okay. It keeps our government alert, accountable, and accessible. As members of this Assembly we have all been selected by our constituents to serve the people. This is a role that I intend to fulfill with graciousness and respect.

The constituents of Calgary-Glenmore are clear in their expectations, and I will meet them. I will listen to their needs and concerns. I will be their voice in their Assembly. I will be their advocate at committee work. I will fulfill this undertaking with pride, integrity, and commitment.

We have a history of over 100 years of parliamentary governance in Alberta, and look at what we have achieved. Alberta is the jurisdiction in North America with the best job creation, the best school system, and our health care system is there when people need it most.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I see this Speech from the Throne as the fulfillment of the mandate that Albertans entrusted our party, our leader, and our government with on April 23. May we aim for success with the dignity and respect that Albertans deserve.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) would be available if anyone wishes to pursue it.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, having had a very, very fruitful debate and response, although I know that many others want to, given the time I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I'd move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:52 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, May 29, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us pray. Almighty God, guide us so that we may use the privilege given to us by Albertans to be their representatives in this Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think clearly, and the conviction to act and speak without prejudice. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it is my honour and my privilege to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly Mr. François Ouimet, Deputy Speaker of the National Assembly of Quebec, and Mr. Richard Daignault, the Quebec Assembly's interparliamentary relations director. The Deputy Speaker and Mr. Daignault are here to meet with you today. They have already risen, and I would like the Assembly to give them the warm and traditional welcome. Bienvenue.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Seniors.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you two school groups that are here from Whitecourt-St. Anne. First, I'll ask the group from Darwell to please rise and be recognized by my colleagues here in the Legislature and our guests from Quebec as well. They're 18 of the brightest, young, enthusiastic citizens of Whitecourt-St. Anne, and I really appreciate their coming to visit us here today. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, the other group that we have here is from the Grasmere school, and they're equally as bright and equally as enthusiastic and equally as smart. I even had the chance to talk to a number of them. I'll have the opportunity with their pictures to go back to their classes and talk about local politics, provincial politics, and federal politics. They're all very, very interested because they're studying that right now in social studies. On behalf of everybody here, thank you, and I'd like to introduce you to all my colleagues here and our guests from Quebec.

Thank you.

Mr. Lemke: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a group of students and teachers from the Forest Green school. They participated in a guided tour of the Legislature and had the opportunity to observe the members in this House, as they are doing right now. I hope these students enjoy their legislative experience. I would like to thank the teachers and parent helpers here today and would like to acknowledge them. If they could please stand when I say their name. The parents are Mrs. Jackie O'Shea, Mrs. Mary Jane Buchholtz, Mrs. Krystal Hoople, Ms Cindy Woolford, and the teacher is Miss Lisa Aronyk. If the students would all stand to be recognized.

Thank you very much.

Mr. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group from the Rosedale Christian school located in the constituency of Grande Prairie-Smoky. Accompanying these very bright and very tall individuals is Mr. Ross Wiebe, their teacher. Please, could I have them stand and be recognized by the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you 10 students, one teacher, and one parent from Holy Trinity school in Olds. The teacher is Miss Jasper Moe, and the parent helper is Mrs. Kara Coates. Holy Trinity opened in September of 2010 and currently has 107 students ranging from pre-K to grade 7. Joining us today are the students in grade 6. I would invite the students and teachers to rise and receive the traditional welcome of this House.

Ms Kubinec: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly three very important people in my life. Seated in the public gallery, first and most importantly, is my husband, Tim Kubinec, and two very dedicated, hard-working campaign people who helped out so much during the campaign.* I would like to thank them for their support both now and during the election. I ask that they now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly three employees of the Hardisty Care Centre as well as Mark Wells, a senior communications adviser with AUPE. Corrie Cruz, Paramjeet Mrahar, and Jerzy Borysewicz are just three of the employees currently in negotiation with Park Place Seniors Living, a private health care company out of British Columbia. They're currently being paid less than the Alberta Health Services standard despite the company receiving generous subsidies from the government. This dispute is just one example of how for-profit, private health care can not only leave patients with inadequate care and staff underappreciated but leaves ample room for employers to take advantage of employees, their families, and the taxpayer. I ask my guests to rise, and I ask all members of the Assembly to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you two great Albertans, Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop. I'll ask them to rise as I tell their story. At their own expense these two courageous Albertans have fought for 10 years, since their first stakeholder submission on farm workers' rights to the Marz commission in 2002. They stand before us today yet again to beseech the government to honour their commitment to paid farm workers for basic rights, mandatory WCB, occupational health and safety standards, and child labour standards; simply, inclusion and equality for paid farm workers. Let's give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly our guests

* The following names were not read into the record: Norman and Anita Kitz.

David Froelich and Akram Shamie. David and Akram are with Teamsters, local 987, representing over 800 taxi drivers working for Greater Edmonton Taxi Service. The drivers chose to unionize last year and are currently bargaining towards their first agreement. They're hoping that the bargaining process will achieve their objectives. I would now ask David and Akram to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly our guest Annie Lelievre. Annie is a journeyman scaffolder and has been a resident of Fort McMurray for over 30 years. On December 31, 2011, tragedy struck as her son was killed in a car crash on notorious highway 63. This January Annie set up a Facebook page to demand that the government twin highway 63 as soon as possible in order to help prevent further tragedies like the one she has had to endure. As of today over 6,900 people have joined the page. I would now like to ask Annie to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Finance.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today to introduce to you and through you a young man I've gotten to know quite a bit over the last several years. Chris Carlile, who's a constituent of mine, is a bright young man who's going to be working in my office over the summer as an intern.

Chris grew up in the constituency of Calgary-North Hill, which is now Calgary-Klein, in the community of Highwood and attended James Fowler high school in the constituency. Mr. Speaker, Chris actually took over managing my campaign halfway through the election in some very unfortunate and difficult circumstances and did an exceptional job while he was in the middle of writing final exams for his third-year political science course at the University of Calgary. For that I'm very, very grateful to him. I'd ask Chris to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

Seniors' Accommodation Standards

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta seniors and families are frustrated by the shell game that this government is playing with their care. The government doesn't seem to know how many long-term care beds, lodge beds, or continuing care beds they have.

Yesterday the game continued in the Assembly with the Minister of Health. When asked about staff-to-senior ratios in continuing and long-term care centres, he avoided the question. He said that the standards are public, that it's all in the regulations and legislation. Then he went further to say that he wouldn't answer any more questions on this matter. Imagine, Mr. Speaker, a minister of the Crown refusing to answer questions.

Does the minister think it's fair for 40 seniors to have one staff member? How about 60? How about 140? Is it fair to put high-needs seniors, who should be in a nursing home, into an assisted living facility?

Well, Mr. Speaker, I looked through the regulations and legislation for staff-to-senior ratios and didn't find them. I looked through the Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act. Not there. I looked through the Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act regulations. Not there. I looked through the Nursing Homes Act and its regulations. Not there.

I ask the minister to show me the regulations. Show me the legislation with staff ratios. Show me the licensing act. Show me the accommodation standards and regulations. Minister, table it in the Legislature tomorrow for all Albertans to see. Albertans deserve to know.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Red Deer Optimist Rebels

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to recognize a group of extraordinary young hockey players who exemplify the very meaning of teamwork and resiliency, the national midget triple A champions, the Red Deer Optimist Rebels. This is a remarkable team that overcame incredible adversity to become Red Deer's first-ever midget triple A national Telus Cup champions.

Going into the third period in the final game, the Red Deer Optimist Rebels were losing by four goals. In a nail-biter of a hockey game Red Deer was able to score an unprecedented four goals to tie the national championship game. The Red Deer Rebels scored in overtime to defeat the team from Quebec, les Phénix du Collège Esther-Blondin to become the national champions. [interjection] I tried.

In doing so, they won Red Deer's very first midget triple A national championship and one of Red Deer's finest hockey moments. This was truly an astounding accomplishment, and I would like to congratulate the team, the coaches, and the management, starting with captain Brady Bakke, Dasan Sydora, Matthew Zentner, Kolton Dixon, Kirk Johnson, Jonathan Finnigan, Stefan Danielson, Cole Berreth, Tanner Lomsnes, Nick Glackin, Joel Topping, Logan Fisher, Dylan Thudium, Brendan Dennis, B.J. Duffin, Rory Davidson, Ty Mappin, Scott Ferguson, Scott Feser, and Quinn Brown; the coaches and management: Doug Quinn, Tricia Bakke, Rob Hamill, Dion Zukiwsky, Al Parada, Peter Friestadt, and Lee Sherback.

These players and coaches serve as an example to us all that hard work in the face of adversity can overcome all challenges. Congratulations on your great victory.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Skills Canada National Competition

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to recognize an outstanding organization and the excellent event they put on earlier this month. From May 13 to 16 our Expo Centre came alive as 500 young people from across Canada competed in the 18th annual Skills Canada National Competition. This trade and technology challenge offered competitors the opportunity to showcase their talents in over 40 disciplines, including welding, cooking, and robotics.

Skills Canada is a nonprofit organization consisting of educators, students, employers, labour groups, and government representatives that promotes careers in skilled trades and technologies. As a former vocational teacher myself I know that organizations like Skills Canada are so valuable to our communities. They help our students build relationships, become aware of career options, and learn the competencies necessary to succeed. I have had the opportunity and the good fortune of being a judge in this exciting and interesting competition, and this year I was honoured to speak at the closing ceremony.

Mr. Speaker, our Premier has often spoken about the value of skilled trades and innovation in our province, and our government has championed trades as an excellent career choice for our young people. As such, I would like to commend Skills Canada and their local chapter, Skills Canada Alberta, for fostering such a sense of pride, excellence, and community among these professionals. Finally, I offer my sincere congratulations to the gold, silver, and bronze winners and all other competitors for their achievements. They have a very bright future ahead of them.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Potential Oil Well Site in Calgary-North West

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In December of last year an oil and gas exploration company was granted approval from the Energy Resources Conservation Board to drill an exploratory well near the community of Royal Oak in my constituency of Calgary-North West. It is slated to be the site of a sweet oil well, and work has been planned for sometime this July.

After extensive protest from nearby residents the company responsible for drilling the well voluntarily suspended operations pending an ERCB review, which will likely come this summer. A significant number of local residents are opposed to the well site due to concerns about the well and its proximity to homes and businesses in the community. Considering that the well site near the Royal Oak community could potentially be in operation for 50 years, local residents could be living and operating their businesses within a few hundred metres of the well site for quite some time.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that it would be beneficial for our province to have urban policies in place that would govern the exploration and development of natural resources within densely populated areas. Doing so would help balance the development of natural resources within urban areas while keeping the concerns of local residents and communities in mind.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Provincial Response to Oil Sands Criticism

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's energy industry is under attack. Federal NDP leader Thomas Mulcair is openly deriding the oil sands, that are expected to bring $3.3 trillion into Canada's economy. Mulcair arrives in Alberta shortly. Of course, the truth puts a lie to Mr. Mulcair's claims. The Kearl oil sands plant, for instance, will start up this year producing no more emissions than a refinery producing a conventional barrel of crude. This is the story the Redford government is not telling Canadians. Wildrose stands tall for development that showcases environmental stewardship. Why is the PC government abandoning Albertans by backing away from confronting a bully?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, nothing can be further from the truth. As a matter of fact, as we're sitting today right now in this Chamber, our Premier is discussing a Canadian energy strategy with western Premiers. As a matter of fact, I will be meeting with the federal leader of the NDP opposition and illuminating him on facts of Canadian economy and the role of the oil sands not only in this province but nationally and internationally. This government has stood very strong on responsible development of Alberta resources and will continue to do that. We don't need to take lessons from those people across the aisle.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, why were Albertans, then, left for three days to rely on Saskatchewan Premier Brad Wall to call a spade a spade and face down Mr. Mulcair after his first attack? The Premier may be off wining and dining the western Premiers today, but why is this Premier always the last one to the defence of our oil sands?

The Speaker: Hon. member, it's customary to not refer to the presence or absence of members during your questions.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, one thing that the Leader of the Opposition may learn is that leadership depends on actually taking a leadership role and not following the debate of politicians from other provinces or other parts of the country and simply making inflammatory remarks. This province has a very clear record of being supportive of responsible development of natural resources in this province, and we will continue to do so.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, why has the Premier said that she may meet with Mr. Mulcair but that her Deputy Premier will likely go instead? The federal NDP leader has taken the time to come here to see the oil sands first-hand. Why has the Premier not made meeting Mr. Mulcair a priority? What could be more important?

Mr. Lukaszuk: I don't know if I should take that as a slight, Mr. Speaker. I think Mr. Mulcair will enjoy meeting with me. I will present him with all the facts that he requires to formulate a better-informed opinion, and he will be very well served by this visit. I'm actually looking forward to meeting with him.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Second main question. The Official Opposition leader.

Cancellation of Jubilee Auditoria Performances

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, when asked in this House about her government's abrupt and unfair cancellation of Calgary and Edmonton Shen Yun performances, the Premier said that it was because of "a safety issue." Perhaps she now realizes that she was mistaken. This was not about a safety issue at all. The safety issue in Calgary, the Shen Yun group says, could have been resolved, and in Edmonton there was no safety issue identified whatsoever when the government pulled the plug after Shen Yun had gone to the media. Will the Culture minister admit there was no safety issue in Edmonton, as the Premier claimed, and the decision to cancel was merely out of retribution?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, let me be perfectly clear. This government will not be taking lessons from that political party on culture or cultural inclusion any time soon. But I will tell you that both Jubilee auditoria, in Edmonton and in Calgary, are booked 365 days a year. They negotiate their contracts, and their number one priority is the safety of employees, the safety of performers, and the safety of the audience in the Jubilee auditoria.

The Speaker: The opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Culture minister: given that her own letter to the Shen Yun group, which I will table, confirms that their decision to notify the media about this issue is the sole reason for the cancellation of their performances, will she not admit that the safety issue offered by the Premier yesterday is an excuse, is utterly false, and that the real reason she cancelled their show was simply to punish them for speaking out?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, as I said yesterday, I'm not going to apologize for the safety of performers at either of the Jubilees. We know that there's a contractual arrangement that was made between all performing groups, and their safety is absolutely paramount. That's why the netting is in place in Edmonton and in Calgary.

Ms Smith: They managed to figure out the safety issues in a hundred other facilities across North America.

To the Culture minister: given that yesterday she said, "My officials have offered to meet with the Shen Yun group" and given that the Shen Yun folks have said that no such offer has been made, though they would be grateful for it, will the minister correct this statement and provide a hard date when she and her office will meet with the Shen Yun group?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, next week my officials will be meeting with the Shen Yun group. I look forward to a discussion about some of the issues that they are going to bring forward. But, again, any issues revolving around safety and the net: that's not going to change.

The Speaker: Third main question. The Official Opposition leader.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Ms Smith: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again and again we've seen that the Premier's claims of changing her party and bringing transparency to Alberta are not worth the paper they are written on even when that paper is Hansard. In the wake of an update last Friday from the Chief Electoral Officer concerning another dozen cases of illegal donations, we asked for a change so that there would be better transparency about this disturbing issue. Not only did this government pass a law in 2010 putting a gag order on the Chief Electoral Officer, but when asked about it yesterday, they tried to cover it up in this House by claiming that he wanted to be silenced. To the Premier. As the minister who presented this bill, the Premier knows that the claims by her ministers yesterday aren't true. Will she confirm that they were wrong?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I proudly stand by my comments yesterday. From the 2008 Chief Electoral Officer report, page 85, he recommends that these investigations be held in private.

More importantly, we shouldn't be complaining about how the elections operate. That's not really up to us to decide. This is an independent officer who reports to this Chamber, not any one of the parties.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a copy here of this relevant page that the hon. member mentioned, the relevant page of Mr. Gibson's report, which I'm happy to table. It requests only that legislation "add specific direction that an investigation . . . be conducted in private." It seems very clearly limited to confidentiality during an investigation, not confidentiality of the results. Will the Premier revisit the legislation she passed in 2010, lift the gag order, and allow the Chief Electoral Officer to publicize the results of these investigations?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I say again to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that it's not up to us to be debating how elections are run. This is an independent body who reports to this Chamber, not to any particular Premier.

I also have a letter, that I will table later today, which I have sent to the Chief Electoral Officer asking him for any further recommendations, which we'll be happy to consider.

Ms Smith: Again to the Premier. Given that the legislation that the Premier wrote in 2010 not only gags Elections Alberta but includes also a provision that nobody has to pay any money back that was illegally donated prior to April 2010 and given that the Chief Electoral Officer said that he has proven 10 cases of illegal donations before 2010, most, if not all, to the PC Party, will the Premier commit to returning every single dollar of illegal donations?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, what this member is forgetting is that the Election Act of Alberta has been debated with full participation of all parties in this Chamber and passed in this Chamber. If the current Chief Electoral Officer has any concerns relevant to the legislation or to the process of elections or to his ability to investigate or not investigate, he has the free will to communicate with the Minister of Justice, provide us with recommendations, and they will be duly considered by this Chamber. [interjections]

The Speaker: I'd just remind hon. members that one person speaks at a time in this Assembly. That has been a long-standing tradition. Let's try to observe it.

The hon. Liberal opposition leader.

Hardisty Care Centre Labour Dispute

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. LPNs and health care aides, the backbone of our health system, are on strike at Hardisty Care Centre. At issue is the fact that they're paid 30 per cent below industry standard. The mediator and dispute inquiry board recommended wage parity, yet Park Place Seniors Living, Hardisty's B.C.-based corporate parent, refuses to remedy this dispute. To the Minister of Health: why is there one set of standards for workers in AHS-run facilities and completely different rules and compensation standards for workers in for-profit, private facilities?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The government does not regulate the dollars that are paid to particular health care professionals. That is a matter for negotiation where agreements exist between employers and employees. In this particular case, as was said yesterday in the House, these parties are currently at odds. We have every hope that the parties will resume negotiations as quickly as possible and come to an agreement that satisfies both sides.

The Speaker: The hon. Liberal leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It causes me due concern that taxpayer-funded dollars aren't being watched closely.

Given that for-profit seniors' care facilities seek above all to maximize profits and that that invariably results in poor staff treatment, which is directly linked to poor patient care, and there's a potential for more of these labour disputes in other facilities, will the Minister of Health finally stop wasting taxpayer dollars, put an end to this government's failed experiment with the privatization of seniors' care, and bring in first contract legislation?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member persists in trying to draw an ideological link between the events at the Hardisty nursing home and the continuing care plan in place for this province. What we in fact find are two things: the health care that is provided in the facility, and the vehicle for that is a contract with Alberta Health Services and the operator. We also have in place standards, for which we fund a rigid and rigorous compliance process for both accommodation and health care delivered in those facilities.

The Speaker: The hon. Liberal leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I didn't know that facts became ideological all of a sudden.

To the minister: how can you possibly be unaware that study after study, including the Health Quality Council and Parkland Institute reviews, clearly show that seniors in for-profit, private facilities spend more time in bed, are bathed less often, are fed less, have more falls, have more bed ulcers, and eventually end up in acute care more often all because these companies don't hire enough workers and overwork and underpay the ones that they do have?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government does not subscribe to the logic that is inherent in the hon. member's question. The quality of continuing care in this province is governed by standards, which I described in this House at length yesterday. It is supported by equal funding that is provided whether the operator is public, private, or not-for-profit. The majority of the time I can say – and I think many members of this House would agree – that the care is of excellent, excellent quality.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the NDP.

Private Operation of Health Care Facilities

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week's throne speech claimed that the government would keep public services public, yet this month a private health care facility, the Copeman clinic, is opening its doors here in Edmonton. This clinic will provide preferential access to publicly insured health services in exchange for a fee. My question is to the Premier. Why, despite the assurances in the throne speech, is she allowing privatization of public health care?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, no information has been brought to my attention that the particular clinic to which the hon. member refers is in any way in violation of the Canada Health Act or any other statute or regulation under Alberta law. If the member has such information and cares to forward it to me, I'd be pleased to look into it. As many hon. members will know, these clinics exist in many provinces across the country. They provide services that are outside of the public health care system, and the arrangements for such are a matter between the individual patients and the clinics that serve them.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. NDP leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, some provinces have put a stop to it.

Given that Albertans who can afford over $8,000 in annual fees can queue-jump in order to get cardiac care, pediatric care, and stroke and brain injury rehabilitation, how can this Health minister pretend that his government is not complicit in the privatization of our system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member's question poses some serious allegations. I think I need not remind him that a public inquiry with respect to preferential access, or queue-jumping as he calls it, is now under way in this province and is led by a retired justice. So I would invite him to present that information to the inquiry.

With respect to the question of physician practice, as the hon. member knows, all physicians in Alberta are, in fact, by definition private providers. They bill a publicly funded health insurance system that is supported by other legislation and regulation. The clinics to which he refers are no different.

The Speaker: The hon. NDP leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's clear that the government's throne speech isn't worth the paper it's printed on. Given that the government merely has to allow private investors to fill the gaps created by the government's health care failures for private health care to grow and flourish, will the Health minister admit that his government's wilful neglect is the primary cause of the creeping privatization of our health care system?

Mr. Horne: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, we're presented with a question that's founded on an ideological argument. What this government is interested in is providing better access to everyday health care services for Albertans. We have talked about many strategies in the areas of primary health care, continuing care, and mental health that we're actively engaged in. Investing Albertans' hard-earned tax dollars to improve that access in the community will continue to be our focus.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday both the Justice minister and the Deputy Premier refused to do the ethical thing and reveal how much money the governing PC Party received in illegal donations. They wrongly blamed the former Chief Electoral Officer when, in fact, he only recommended that the investigation itself be conducted in private. So when the PC Party has been found guilty of accepting or soliciting illegal donations, that need not be kept secret from all Albertans. To the Minister of Justice:

will this government finally commit to changing this misguided legislation in the name of open and transparent government?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, the legislation is based on the independent report of the Chief Electoral Officer, who independently reports to this House. I've sent a letter to the new Chief Electoral Officer. If the Chief Electoral Officer has an amendment request, we will go and look at it. But it's not up to any one member to make amendment requests to the actual act. It's about a nonpartisan and independent office, and that is what the Chief Electoral Officer does, not this House.

Mr. Saskiw: We'll be tabling the report later, so you can actually read it.

To the Minister of Justice: given that the Chief Electoral Officer made it clear that it is the government's job to handle issues of transparency and accountability and given that this government fired the last Chief Electoral Officer, who tried to bring this government's ethical failings to light, will this government stop making excuses and finally reveal how much money the PC Party received in illegal donations?

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, I will ask the hon. minister to comment soon, but we're treading into an area here of a question with respect to jurisdiction. Typically party matters are not raised in the Assembly, and I would just caution all members.

We'll allow the Minister of Justice to comment on this last question if he wishes.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties (continued)

Mr. Denis: One thing I'll just mention again, Mr. Speaker. This Premier believes so strongly in transparency and accountability. Right behind me is an associate minister in this respect.

Thank you very much.

Mr. Saskiw: Mr. Speaker, the PC Party has already admitted that they've accepted several thousand dollars of illegal donations. We just want to find the full amount. Given that this government refuses to take steps to be more open, transparent, and accountable, how can we expect this government to make any serious improvements on their obvious ethical shortcomings?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, speaking of shortcomings, there are some serious factual shortcomings. First of all, the past Chief Electoral Officer was not fired. His contract simply ran its course. A search by an all-party committee took place to appoint the new, current Chief Electoral Officer. This Chief Electoral Officer has the full ability of addressing this Assembly and asking for changes to the act if he so wishes.

Lastly, it is my understanding that any and all parties that would have received money that was not received in accordance with the rules would have returned it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Municipal Charters

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Over the past year Albertans have heard a lot of discussion regarding the need for special charters to be created for Alberta's two biggest cities, Edmonton and Calgary. So far there appears to be very little progress or anything tangible officially reported about these charters. My questions are to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. When will these charters be created, and what will they mean specifically for the residents of Edmonton and Calgary?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the question. I've met with Mayor Nenshi and Mayor Mandel several times. In fact, I met with Mayor Mandel again just this morning, and this was an issue that we discussed. I can assure the hon. member that we're working very diligently on completing the memorandum of understanding so we can go forward with creating a city charter.

What it will mean to the citizens of Edmonton and Calgary, which is 80 per cent of the population of this province, Mr. Speaker, is essentially cost-effective, efficient service delivery on the things that they need.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. With respect to your response it sounds like Edmonton and Calgary will get special treatment compared to all other municipalities across the province. Are Alberta's two largest cities through the establishment of special charters getting a leg-up over other municipalities in our province?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, this is a very valid question. A lot of people in rural Alberta, especially municipal councillors in rural Alberta, have asked that. I can assure the hon. member that we're also reviewing the Municipal Government Act. This is not to single out any municipality in particular to provide extra services but to make sure that our relationship with every single municipality in this province is robust and that we deliver the services every single community needs. We're going to continue to work on that.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. I appreciate the general information; it's very helpful. In general Albertans need to know whether these charters mean that taxpayers living in Edmonton and Calgary will end up paying more taxes. Will this be the case?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, after my meeting with Mayor Mandel this morning that was one of the first questions that was asked by the media when we came out. I can assure everyone in this House and every Albertan that Mayor Mandel and I agreed first and foremost that there is only one taxpayer in this province. This is about roles and responsibilities first and then discussing revenue. We will not discuss revenue without first and foremost keeping in mind that there is only one taxpayer and they're taxed a lot. This is about streamlining service delivery, ultimately.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Northern Gateway Pipeline Project

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Northern Gateway pipeline is critical to the growth of the energy sector and jobs both in Alberta and Canada. In fact, last Friday Natural Resources Minister Joe Oliver said that Canada is taking an $18 billion to $19 billion hit every year by not having this access to Asia Pacific markets. Yet this Premier has failed so far to persuade B.C. Premier Christy Clark, a friend of Alberta, to support this important pipeline project. If the Premier cannot even get Alberta's friends to back Gateway, how does she expect to get the support of the world?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, yet again incorrect. As a matter of fact, Premier Clark as recently as today, I believe, has sent a message via media supporting both Premier Wall and Premier Redford in their deliberations today relevant to the development of energy, acknowledging the fact that it is the provinces that are leaders in developing energy in our mutual jurisdictions and that we need to take an actual leadership. There is a great deal of agreement between the three western Premiers on the responsible development and transmission of our natural resources.

The Speaker: Thank you. Just a cautionary reminder that we do not use proper names in this Assembly.

Let us go on to the hon. member's second question.

Mr. Hale: Lots of words and no action. The Premier continues to tout the Canadian energy strategy, which, after eight months of talking, includes siding with Chiquita against us and no details. Since Premier Clark is not here for today's western Premiers' meeting, will Premier Redford commit to going to B.C. to secure her public support for Gateway?

The Speaker: Again, just a cautionary reminder, which I'm sure you will be reminded of, to not refer to the presence or absence of members.

The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, let me quote Premier Clark of British Columbia from as early as today saying: I support a national energy strategy. She goes on to say, referring to Edmonton: if I was there, that would be the comment that I would offer; I know that the Premier of Alberta and Brad Wall already know my thoughts on this issue, that I have communicated earlier, and I am seeing what they will come up with at the meeting.

She is very supportive of this meeting. She wishes she could be over here. Obviously, for political reasons she has to be in British Columbia right now, but to suggest that Premier Brad Wall, the Premier of this province, and Premier Clark are not united on developing a national energy strategy would be incorrect.

Mr. Hale: When will this Premier make it her top priority to stand up for Albertans and secure the firm support of the B.C. Premier for the Gateway pipeline project so that western Premiers present a strong western front?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, not only has this Premier stood up for Albertans, but on April 23 most Albertans stood up for this Premier. Again, she will be delivering on what Albertans have wanted us to deliver on.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Child and Youth in Care

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question this afternoon is to the Minister of Human Services. I understand that the role of the Child and Youth Advocate is to investigate serious incidents involving youth in care and making recommendations for improving services for vulnerable children and youth in our province. To the minister: how will the Child and Youth Advocate improve transparency in child intervention systems and ensure better outcomes for children in provincial government care? Remember, sir, that this is about kids and not process.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very proud of the fact that one of the first actions that our Premier took upon being elected as leader last fall and being installed as Premier was to ask me to bring forward legislation which would make the Child and Youth Advocate's office independent. That was done, and I'm very pleased and proud that that office is now an independent officer of the Legislature, effective April 1 of this year. I obviously cannot speak on behalf of the Child and Youth Advocate's office because it's independent, but we will be working closely to ensure that all appropriate cases are referred to that office and also to ensure that that office through the Legislative Offices Committee has the budget it needs to appropriately investigate, report on, and publicly bring to the attention of this Legislature all issues relevant to children.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Aboriginal children represent 60 per cent of children in care, a number that is way too high. Will the Child and Youth Advocate ensure that the overrepresentation of aboriginal children in care is addressed?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, I cannot ensure that the Child and Youth Advocate's office does anything. They're an independent office of the Legislature as of April 1, and they will set their own agenda as to what issues they deal with.

I can confirm that the issue with respect to the overrepresentation of aboriginal children in the child welfare system as it is across this province is an extremely important issue to us. In fact, prior to the election we had a task force, which I believe you led, which helped us to talk with First Nations and aboriginal people across the province and bring some more focus to that agenda. We're going to continue with our ADM in that area, Catherine Twinn, to ensure that we put the time and attention necessary to deal with that issue.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mrs. Leskiw: To the same minister: how can we be sure that the ministry is making real changes and improvements to the child intervention system based on recommendations from the Child and Youth Advocate and Council for Quality Assurance?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think this is extremely important because the children of Alberta deserve the representation that they're going to get from the Child and Youth Advocate on an independent basis, the assurance that those recommendations will be publicly available and will be unfettered, and that we will actually have the opportunity in this House to receive that report and to talk about the action taken with respect to that report. Two very important pieces: the Child and Youth Advocate's office being an independent office of the Legislature and the establishment of the Council for Quality Assurance to make sure that every incident is investigated and that we learn from them so that we can continue to improve.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Family Care Clinics

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Over the past eight years primary care networks have been proven to greatly improve access, quality, and cost-effectiveness of health care services to 80 per cent of families across Alberta, yet without consulting and without an overarching plan to integrate these into the health care system, the Premier announced recently 140 new family care clinics. To the minister: why did the Premier commit to billions of new dollars for family care clinics without evidence or a full consultation with the relevant stakeholders?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, primary care networks have been a tremendous catalyst in improving access to primary health care across Alberta. The intention of the Premier and the commitment of this government is to increase access to primary health care through building on the success of primary care networks and introducing additional family care clinics across the province. We can't do enough at this point in time to increase access to primary care for Albertans who need it. We have about 20 per cent of Albertans who report they do not have access to a family doctor. As the census data which was reported on today shows, we are both coping with an aging population and, increasingly, many new families. Our birth rate is increasing in Alberta. Primary care is our top priority.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the Premier promised to evaluate the first three family care clinics before expanding. Why did you proceed, without doing the evaluation, to 140 new family care clinics?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, neither the Premier nor this minister made any such commitment. We intend for family care clinics not to be a uniform model to be applied in a cookie-cutter fashion across the province but to address the needs of specific communities. Our commitment from the very beginning was to work not only with all health professions in designing family care clinics but to work with local communities to identify the areas where they need the services the most and to do our best to put a model in place which serves that community.

Dr. Swann: Did you not also commit to following the 21 recommendations of the Health Quality Council report, which was to not introduce any major changes in the health care system without proper consultation, without evidence, without moving forward on the health care budget?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, what we committed to was something that Albertans have been asking for for some time, and that is increased access to team-based primary care in or near their home community. The family care clinics and the primary care networks are important models of care delivery. What really matters, of course, and what this government will be talking about increasingly in the next few months are what core services Albertans want available to them in or near their home community on a standard set of hours, delivered by a team of professionals that can respond to the needs not only of young children but of aging parents.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Twinning of Highway 63

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Highway 63 is the primary transportation route used to haul heavy equipment, oversized loads, and massive machinery while at the same time serving as the primary transportation route for lower Athabasca community members. Given that highway 63 has been the site of 80 fatalities in the last six years alone, to the Minister of Transportation: why won't the minister admit the government has failed to make the twinning of highway 63 the priority Albertans expect it to be?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, I would have hoped that the member asking the question would have been listening better yesterday. Had he been listening yesterday, he would have heard that this government has already invested a billion dollars in and around Fort McMurray. He would have heard that we have $450 million over the next three years to twin the southern hundred kilometres of that highway. He would have also heard that this government is committed to twinning the rest of the highway and, in between now and when that's done, to bringing forward initiatives to make it more safe, more operable for the people using it, and better for Albertans. It's happening.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that six years have passed since the province promised to twin highway 63 and considering only 33 kilometres have been completed to date, this government has been dragging its feet. At this rate the twinning won't be complete until 2034. That's not good enough for the thousands of Albertans trying to get to and from Fort McMurray safely every day. Why won't the government commit to a firm timeline for completion of the twinning of highway 63?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, I'll say it a little slower this time for the member. Over the next three years there's $450 million in the budget, which will twin the southern hundred kilometres. We've committed to twinning the entire thing. Between now and then we're working with the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo to bring forward interim measures. All of this is happening. The government has committed. The government has committed a lot of money. The government has committed resources. It's a high priority. It's happening. The hon. member should just perhaps pay attention to what's already been said, and he could deal with new questions requiring new information.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government has appointed a special adviser to come up with another plan and given that the government's plan is to talk about another plan for highway 63 when what Albertans want to see is action, to the Minister of Transportation: doesn't the minister understand that you can't pave a road with empty promises?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member, again, was paying attention, he would have seen, really, nothing but action. He would have seen a billion dollars spent in the past. He would see $450 million more coming up in the future. He would actually have seen action since the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo increased signage to tell people when the passing lanes are, to encourage them to be patient and wait. He would have seen increased enforcement. It's all happening, and Albertans, from what I hear, are very happy with the progress made although they would like it to be faster.

Mr. Anderson: Immediately prior to the election this Premier announced three government-controlled health clinics as pilot projects, as was discussed. Although family doctors expressed concern that these clinics might undercut proven primary care networks, which are run independently by doctors and other health professionals, many were willing to give these pilot projects a chance. Then during the election the Premier, without any consultation, promised to build 140 of these government clinics, shocking the Alberta Medical Association and doctors across this province. To the Health minister: why would your government undertake such a massive reform without first consulting family doctors and the AMA or Albertans, for that matter, which they didn't?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm glad the hon. member raises the three family care clinics that are already up and running. They are a source of great pride to Albertans, and they're doing an awful lot to help access to primary care in the communities they serve. In northeast Edmonton, for example, the primary care clinic is serving a large number of new Albertans, new Canadians, many of whom do not speak English. It is serving a large unattached population in that part of the city, where there is a great need for mental health and addiction services. In many other respects they are doing exactly what we intended family care clinics to do; that is, to provide basic primary care services to people in the communities where they live, with their involvement and with consultation.

Mr. Anderson: Given the concerns expressed by family doctors that these government-run health clinics are meant to replace existing family clinics and primary care networks and given that one of the pilot project clinics resulted in the Calgary Mosaic primary care network shutting down, according to its own executive director, is it this minister's goal to replace existing family practices and primary care networks with these new state-run health clinics, or is it to staff these new clinics with new nurses and doctors, or was this just a brazen electioneering promise made without consultation and without a plan? Door number C perhaps? No?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I don't know which of the multiple questions there the hon. member intends me to answer. What I will tell you is that if the hon. member and his colleagues are suggesting that we have an oversupply of primary health care in this province, I think they should go out and consult with Albertans themselves. There is more than enough to be done, more than enough opportunities for family doctors and all professions, who should be able to practise to their full scope of training and expertise to deliver these critical and foundational health services to people in their own communities. That's what we ran on, that's what we're committed to do, and that's what you'll see from us in the months to come.

Mr. Anderson: The doctors didn't see it coming. They don't want them. Listen to the doctors for once.

If your intent is not to replace existing family practices or primary care networks, then let's talk about cost. Given that I cannot find any costing of your promise to build and operate 140 new government health clinics over the next three years, will you please either tell us or table for the House both the estimated cost to build or lease these clinics as well as the annual cost to employ the health professionals needed to run them properly, or will you refuse this request and just keep making it up as you go along?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, my job is to think about and lead initiatives to improve health care in Alberta. If the hon. member wants to preoccupy himself with questions of infrastructure, that's entirely up to him. We have over 40 primary care networks in this province that are doing a very good job. Their work is supported by Albertans, other health professionals, and physicians. We have three new family care clinics, with more to come, that are also very well supported by family physicians and other health care leaders across Alberta. As I said earlier, we will start with a question of what core services we want to make available to all citizens in or near their home community. The questions around how models are structured in order to deliver that will be answered in the fullness of time for this member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Openness and Transparency in Government

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yet another recent study was critical of the Alberta government on transparency, this one putting us at last. My question to the Minister of Service Alberta: why is the government using the current FOIP legislation to hide information from our citizens?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to congratulate the member for asking his first question in the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, our government and our Premier have an unprecedented commitment to transparency and accountability. For the first time we have a Premier that dedicated an associate minister solely responsible on this file. Let me say that Alberta is a leader. Alberta leads Canada with completing over 90 per cent of FOIP requests within 30 days. On the other side, we proactively publish some of the most important information like ministerial office expenses and payments made to all vendors that deal with the government.

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad to hear the government's quick response on FOIP, but the FOIP application process is a deterrent in itself. What are you doing about this?

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The information and data that government has really belongs to its citizens, so we're finding more and more ways where we can really bypass the FOIP process altogether, use that as a last resort, and provide proactively more information and more data to Albertans. It's their information. They deserve to have it, and we're working on this.

Mr. Quadri: Mr. Speaker, people also want transparency on their personal information. How is this government making sure that Albertans can access their own personal information?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans have a right to the personal information government has collected about them. That's why there's no application fee when Albertans are requesting this information. But Albertans also want their personal information protected. The way we do that is, first of all, to ensure that we only collect information that's absolutely necessary. Let me say that we are North American leaders by being one of the only jurisdictions that has private-sector privacy protection. That means that when a private-sector actor breaches a privacy policy, they have a mandatory notification requirement, where they notify the commissioner.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View, followed by the hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

School Construction and Renovation

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, thank you. The government announced during the election campaign an ambitious plan to build 50 new schools and renovate 70 others. In making that announcement, a lot of people were perplexed to find that those school projects, so desperately needed, would be tied to surplus revenue, yet at the same time corporate handouts like the $3 billion AOSTRA project were put into place. To the Education minister: wouldn't it make more sense to flip those around and put the kids first, commit the money to renovating and building new schools and maybe put the money to the other industry contingent on surplus?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I think one thing we know for a fact is that our province is growing at an unprecedented rate. There are many communities throughout this province that simply require more schools, and that is our number one priority. This Premier and the Minister of Education along with the Minister of Infrastructure have made a commitment that we will provide the schools that the children need so that they can continue receiving the 21st century education that they are receiving in this province in buildings that are adequate for delivering that education. That is a commitment that we have made to our children in this province, and we'll keep that commitment.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, given that many are beginning to wonder if the government's hesitation in commitment to building and renovating schools like they promised is because they don't have the money for it and given that it's well documented that many schools, as we know, are in disrepair and that many communities are growing so quickly that their schools are bursting at the seams, do we have a plan to commit the money now so we can put the kids first? How are we going to operate these schools when we do commit that money? Do we have money for that also?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, this is quite interesting, Mr. Speaker. Here is a member from a political party that is advocating cutting budgets, that is advocating building less, that is advocating cutting programs, and that has run an entire campaign on that, but at the same time he's questioning whether we have the money to build the schools that are so desperately required. I can tell the speaker one thing. There was a budget in this House, that was debated and passed. That budget was taken to Albertans. They reviewed it, and they voted overwhelmingly in favour of the budget and this government, and we will deliver on our commitments.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, the hon. minister is right about one thing. We did advocate certain cuts to a bloated bureaucracy, but we said that we'd like to see more money put forward to the front lines. I think we all agreed on that.

To this minister: given the government promised Albertans during the election campaign it was going to take care of these desperately needed new schools, both new and renovated, and given the government has often based its decisions on where to build new schools on politics rather than need, as we know, will you publish a list for all Albertans to see detailing which communities are going to get new schools, which communities are going to get their schools renovated when and if funds magically appear to this government to spend on the students that desperately need it in this province?

Mr. Lukaszuk: To address the first part of the comment, 85 per cent of Alberta public servants are front-line servants. I would want this member to stand up and tell us which ones he wants to fire, those who deliver nursing care or those who teach or do other important work for Albertans.

One thing, Mr. Speaker. If he wants to see the list, every school board provides the Minister of Infrastructure every June, July with their capital plan. That capital plan is reviewed, and priorities are being addressed. This member is a new member – I appreciate that – but he will soon know that those capital plans are available. He can review them. They're at his disposal. Go at it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw. [interjections] There was some heckling and clapping going on, and perhaps you didn't hear. I've recognized the hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Alberta Office in Ottawa

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the Speech from the Throne we learned that this government intends to open an office in our nation's capital. To the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations: are we not adequately served through the representation of government Members of Parliament, with which we are well supplied?

Mr. Dallas: Well, certainly, Mr. Speaker, Alberta's Conservative MPs bring an Alberta perspective to discussions on items of federal jurisdiction, but we need to remember that we have two orders of government, and Albertans have elected this government to provide representation on their views that are inside provincial responsibility. We seek to have, as an observer would put it, boots on the ground in Ottawa to deliver our messages and report back to us when something more can be done or said with respect to our government.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is again to the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. What other purpose does it serve to have an official Alberta presence in Ottawa?

Mr. Dallas: Well, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has worked hard to maintain good relations with Ottawa. However, we can increase our impact with a consistent presence and face-to-face meeting opportunities with key players in Ottawa. With an official representative available, we can reach out personally to make policy presentations to decision-makers and advisers who might otherwise be out of reach to our ministers, and we can further strengthen these relationships.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Do we anticipate a patronage position to fill this office?

Mr. Dallas: No, Mr. Speaker. The selection of an official representative will follow a national search by an executive search recruitment firm.

Risk Assessments for PDD Clients

Mr. Wilson: Mr. Speaker, on May 12, tragically, a front-line worker, Dianne McClements, died in Camrose, allegedly killed by an individual with special needs who was in her care, on the heels of Valerie Wolski's death a mere 15 months earlier. The families of the victims deserve answers from this government. Our front-line workers need to know they will be safe while caring for our most vulnerable citizens. The Wildrose would immediately publish the recommendations of the occupational health and safety investigation into Valerie Wolski's death to ensure the safety of our front-line staff. To the Minister of Human Services: why has this government failed to produce this report, and when can we expect the results?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the recommendations of the occupational health and safety division have been posted. They've been posted in the form of orders to PDD and to the operating authority in the Wolski situation, and those are known publicly.

With respect to the investigative report, that has been provided to the prosecutors' office, and it would be inappropriate to publish that report until prosecutors have made a decision with respect to charges.

Mr. Wilson: Mr. Speaker, thank you. Given that the initial occupational health and safety investigation reportedly recommended not-for-profit agencies be provided with risk assessments for their clients, will this government make risk assessments available immediately to protect our front-line workers while waiting to release this report?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I've inquired and been informed that now, with PDD being part of the Human Services portfolio, all of the recommendations that were made by occupational health and safety have been implemented by PDD, not just in the central region but right across the province. I am assured that that is happening.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This smells like the same kind of distasteful deflection we saw from this government after the death of Ms Wolski last year. How can the minister tell Alberta's front-line workers it cares about them when it will not be open and transparent when tragedies happen?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the hon. member is referring to. We've been totally open and transparent with respect to the posting of the occupational health and safety orders. We've been totally open about the fact that there's an investigation happening, and that investigation has now been turned over to the prosecutors' office to determine whether there are charges to be laid. I've been open in saying that the PDD authority has assured me as minister that the recommendations, the orders that were put in place, have been carried out not only in the central Alberta jurisdiction but right across the province.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes question period for today, but before we go on to the next part of the program, I wonder if I could ask House leaders to please review the issue of preambles to questions with their members at their respective caucuses for tomorrow. Today we only got to 96 questions and answers, which is well below what we're used to in this House.

Secondly, please also review the references to any absence or presence of members.

Thirdly, of course, as we all know, elected officials should not be referred to by their proper names in this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, a private member's statement.

Regulatory Reform

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to talk about overregulation in our province. It's ubiquitous, and I'll provide two examples as diverse as food preparation and truck transportation.

Last year Stirling's Settler Days chili cook-off was apparently declared a threat to public health, and it wasn't because it was too spicy. It was because the chili was potluck, prepared in the homes of private citizens, as has been done for as long as I can remember. The organizing committee was told that in future the chili would have to be made in approved, inspected kitchens or on-site. Since when did open-air cooking become safer and more sanitary than private homes?

A trucking company owner told me of an ongoing challenge that he faces with regulations in his industry. Several times a week his trucks haul crushed cars from Lethbridge over the weigh scales at Coutts on their way to a steel mill in the U.S.A. For the past year he's been using three-eighths inch cables to secure the cars. Every load has crossed the scales and has been delivered without incident or accident. Last week a load was stopped, and the driver was issued a fine of $570. The reason? The scale operators decided the cables weren't safe and that he'd have to use chains.

Couldn't these government employees, whose salary comes from taxes paid by this trucker and others, have seen themselves as a resource to him? Shouldn't they have given him a call and let him know of this unexpected change in their attitude or enforcement approach so that the fine could have been avoided? Better yet, why weren't he and other haulers consulted about whatever government concerns had arisen in an attempt to find a mutually acceptable solution? Want to know the answer? Because they don't have to.

Wildrose believes in more freedom through less government regulations. So do most Albertans.

Notices of Motions

Mr. Saskiw: Pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) earlier today I provided written notice to your office of my intention to raise a matter of privilege, which I hope I'll have the opportunity to present later today. I have the requisite copies of that written notice.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table a letter from myself to the Chief Electoral Officer, Mr. Brian Fjeldheim, which I had cause to send over to his office. Five copies will be provided to the Clerk.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter actually addressed to the Premier but from a representative of the Alberta Grandparents Association. It's signed by Marilyn Marks, and she wishes to make the point again that the recent evaluation of Alberta's Family Law Act by the Canadian Research Institute for Law and the Family, coming out of the U of C, has found that our Family Law Act makes it virtually impossible for grandparents to meet the test that is required of them in the act in order to be able to access their grandchildren. She notes that grandparents and other family members require legislation that is less adversarial and that is not set out or made in a court which challenges family concerns.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate amount of documents, a letter from the Culture minister to Mr. Jeffrey Yang, director of the Falun Dafa Association of Calgary.

I'd also like to table the appropriate number of copies of page 85, the Chief Electoral Officer Duties and Powers, indicating that the investigation only shall be conducted in private, not the results of said investigation.

Privilege

Obstructing a Member in Performance of Duty

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona raised a purported question of privilege regarding a media briefing that took place prior to the introduction of Bill 1 on Thursday, May 24. I would like to thank the hon. member for bringing this matter to the attention of the Assembly for consideration. I have given it considerable consideration over the last 24 hours, and I'm prepared to make a ruling in this regard.

For many members this will be their first opportunity to observe a question of privilege being raised and to hear the chair's subsequent ruling in that regard. Standing Order 15, which guides this Assembly, sets out the procedure to be followed when a question of privilege is raised. Hon. members will note that the chair's role in making a ruling on a purported question of privilege is solely to determine whether the question raised is a prima facie, in the first instance in other words, breach of privilege. It is a threshold test. If it is found to be a prima facie question of privilege, it is appropriate for a member to give notice of a motion such as one referring the matter to a committee for disposition.

Technically the matter raised by the member is a question of contempt although it is treated in the same way as a question of privilege might be. The authors of House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, note the following passage at page 82.

It is important to distinguish between a "breach of privilege" and "contempt of Parliament". Any disregard of or attack on the rights, powers and immunities of the House and its Members, either by an outside person or body, or by a Member of the House, is referred to as a "breach of privilege" and is punishable by the House. There are, however, other affronts against the dignity and authority of Parliament which may not fall within one of the specifically defined privileges. Thus, the House also claims the right to punish, as a contempt, any action which, though not a breach of a specific privilege, tends to obstruct or impede the House in the performance of its functions; obstructs or impedes any Member or officer of the House in the discharge of their duties; or is an offence against the authority or dignity of the House, such as disobedience of its legitimate commands or libels upon itself, its Members, or its officers.

Dealing first with the procedural requirement, as the chair noted yesterday, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona did meet the requirement in Standing Order 15(2) of providing a minimum of two hours' notice prior to the commencement of the sitting. Notice of the question of privilege was received in the Speaker's office yesterday at 10:57 a.m.

In making representations in the Assembly during yesterday's proceedings, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona referred to a press conference held by the Premier and the Government House Leader at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 24, in which both the Speech from the Throne and Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, were discussed. The member was advised by her staff that when they had attempted to attend the conference, opposition staff were specifically denied access.

The basis of the purported question of privilege is that the member's ability to discharge her parliamentary duties was impeded when information about a government bill was provided to the media prior to the bill's introduction in this Assembly. In response the hon. Government House Leader noted that during the press conference Bill 1 was discussed but only in general terms and that no specific wording was provided to those in attendance. The Government House Leader acknowledged the importance of ensuring that members are the first to see proposed legislation in its final form before a bill is disclosed to outside parties.

On March 5, 2003, Speaker Kowalski ruled that there was a prima facie case of contempt in circumstances where information on the contents of a bill on notice in the Order Paper were provided in a media briefing prior to the bill's introduction in the Assembly. The Speaker held at page 304 of Hansard for that day that "the department briefing provided to the media concerning [the bill] when the bill was on notice but before it was introduced constitutes a prima facie case of privilege as it offends the dignity and the authority of this Assembly."

By convention no notice is required for the introduction of Bill 1, which is the first bill of a session and is introduced as a part of opening day ceremonies to assert the Assembly's independence from the Crown. However, the chair is of the view that this has no bearing on the particular matter. At the time the relevant press conference took place, Bill 1 most certainly would have been in final form and ready for introduction, I would expect.

The chair would like to make all members aware of a recent ruling from the Canadian House of Commons concerning the early release of details contained in government estimates. In his March 22, 2011, ruling Speaker Milliken stated the following at page 9113 in the House of Commons Debates for that day.

The member . . . is certainly not misguided in his expectation that members of the House, individually and collectively, must receive from the government particular types of information required for the fulfillment of their parliamentary duties before it is shared elsewhere. However, in such instances when there is a transgression of this well-established practice, the Chair must ascertain whether, as a result, the member was impeded in the performance of parliamentary duties.

While in the matter before us there may be a legitimate grievance, as admitted even by the President of the Treasury Board, there has been no specific evidence to suggest that any member was [actually] impeded in the performance of his or her parliamentary duties, and thus there can be no finding of prima facie privilege. Further, the minister has recognized the seriousness of this matter and given his assurance that measures will be in place to prevent a recurrence.

An earlier ruling by the same Speaker is also on point. On November 5, 2009, Speaker Milliken concluded that the Minister of Public Safety in a press conference had not disclosed the details of a bill yet to be introduced and had only discussed in broad terms the policy initiative proposed in the bill. On this basis, the Speaker found that there was no prima facie question of privilege.

In conclusion and on a matter related to the purported point of privilege, the chair acknowledges and appreciates the Government House Leader's apology for the apparent inability of opposition staff to gain access to the aforementioned press conference of May 24, 2012. The chair also notes the Government House Leader's submission that the bill was neither circulated, nor was the specific content of the bill disclosed.

Given the circumstances of this particular case the chair finds that the member's ability to perform her functions has not been impeded, and accordingly the chair is unable to find a prima facie case of contempt and considers this matter now closed.

The chair does want to thank members for their attention to this matter.

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills on a point of privilege.

Privilege Misleading the House

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising according to Standing Order 15(2) to raise a point of privilege, that on May 28, 2012, the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General interfered with the abilities of members of this Assembly to fulfill their duties when he misled the Assembly in response to a question in Oral Question Period. Page 83 of the House of Commons Procedure and Practice states that "deliberately attempting to mislead the House" is considered contempt of the House.

I'd like to start with a preliminary matter. Points of privilege must be raised at the earliest opportunity. Notice concerning this point of privilege was sent to your office, Mr. Speaker, this morning as well as to all House leaders. As such, it is our view that the point of privilege was raised in a timely manner and is in order.

I would like to now address the substantive elements of the point of privilege; namely, the first element, that the Assembly was misled. In particular, the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General stated that the legislation regarding investigations by the Chief Electoral Officer was changed based on the officer's recommendations. In his words, he called this a fact. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, in review of the recommendations from the Chief Electoral Officer, Lorne Gibson, he stated in his October 2006 report under recommendation 26(d) that the government "add specific direction that an investigation shall be conducted in private." This report was tabled by the Leader of the Official Opposition earlier today. Note that the wording is that the investigation be conducted in private. However, nowhere in the recommendation does it state that if someone or a provincial party has been found guilty, those results can't be made public. Therefore, what the member said is not a fact.

How on earth in a modern democracy could the findings that a political party accepted illegal donations be kept secret and private? Once the investigation is complete, there is no reason to withhold this information from Albertans. As such, the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General clearly misled the Assembly.

However, this is not enough. The House of Commons Procedure and Practice refers to a three-part test in order to find a prima facie case for a finding of contempt that a member deliberately misled the House. First, it must prove that the statement was misleading. Here the document of the Chief Electoral Officer speaks for itself. The member misled this Assembly in stating that the government changed the law because of the Chief Electoral Officer's report. That is not correct. The report clearly states that it is the investigations that are to be kept private, not the results of those investigations.

Second, it must be established that the member knew at the time that the misleading statement was incorrect.

The third and, I would submit, most difficult part of the test is that the member, in making the statement, intended to mislead the Assembly. Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to determine the mens rea of an individual, what they knew at a particular time. However, the facts here would indicate that the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General referred to that report, and presumably by referring to the report, the learned member would've read the report. However, to give the benefit of the doubt, the member opposite could simply have been mistaken or in error. If that is the case, I would ask the member to retract and correct his statement.

Pending the finding of this Speaker that there is a prima facie case of privilege, I seek to move that the matter of privilege concerning the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General's comments be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, when I was a starting lawyer about 12 years ago, one of my principals said to me: when you have the facts, you pound the facts; when you have a law, you pound the law; and if you have neither, you just pound.

Mr. Speaker, I'm going to go through specifically what was said in the Chief Electoral Officer's report. I'm referring to a report that has already been tabled some time ago. It said specifically, "Add specific direction that an investigation shall be conducted in private."

Then I will also refer to Alberta's Election Act, section 4.2(4). I do not believe that this needs to be tabled. If I'm wrong, please correct me. It says:

Subject to subsection (5), any former Chief Electoral Officer and every person who is or was employed or engaged by the Office of the Chief Electoral Officer shall maintain the confidentiality of all information and allegations that come to their knowledge in the course of an inquiry or investigation.

It doesn't just say "allegations"; it also says "all information" in and of itself.

Mr. Speaker, the matter of the Chief Electoral Officer, as I'm sure you and all members of this House are aware – this is an officer who reports directly to the Legislature. If there are any changes, it has to go through an all-party committee. I look forward to the report from the 2012 election because there will be some recommendations there as well.

I wanted to mention, as well, just in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, that this member has mentioned a three-part test. The first part of the test is that the statement was misleading. I respectfully submit to you and all members of this House that the statements I made yesterday were not misleading. I stand by them completely. Further, I also mention to you as our new Speaker that this member's three-part test, which he has quite correctly indicated, talked about intending to mislead the Assembly and talks about a mens rea, which is a mental element, not an action element. Not only has there been no misleading; he has failed to show that there has been any intent to do so.

I would lastly mention the old adage that when dealing with matters of libel, which you mentioned earlier just in your preamble, truth is an absolute defence to any such action. Thank you.

The Speaker: Any other comments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've listened to this quite intently, and I appreciate the point of privilege being called, but in this matter I accept the representation of the Solicitor General. The legislation as it was read to me was silent on things, whether they would go public afterwards. When the legislation is silent on that, I think it's up to the government to interpret that.

I think there's also something to remember. In this House we're playing with live ammunition. We have to answer questions, and I understand that oftentimes we're doing the best we can to answer questions on a quick basis and give answers in that regard.

In this matter I don't believe the Solicitor General in his words or his actions deliberately misled this House, and I would agree more with his interpretation of what happened yesterday than the submission put forward by the honourable presenter of the argument that was forthcoming. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have spent some time rereading the Election Act and the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act, and I do believe in this case that the Minister of Justice is correct. However, in the reading of section 4.2(4) and (5), where it's talking about maintaining "the confidentiality of all information and allegations that come to their knowledge in the course of an inquiry or investigation," it does not specifically say that that information is never to be released. In other words, the act is silent on whether the information can ever be released to the public or to the Assembly, but it does require that the officers that are involved in the investigation keep that information confidential. In other words, they don't go out and put it on the cocktail chatter. But the act itself does not specifically prohibit a disclosure of an investigation.

I think there's a very fine line that's being drawn here. There is the following section in (5) that does say that, you know, information should be disclosed to a person whose conduct is the subject of it, that it should be disclosed to the person conducting the investigation to be able to get information from someone else, et cetera, et cetera. There are a number of categories here.

I think we have to be very careful about accepting what the Justice minister is saying today as there being a prohibition in the act against ever disclosing any results of an investigation that takes place under the Election Act or the election disclosures act because that is not the case. We have had in the Chief Electoral Officer's past reports the disclosure of various cases that he, in fact, investigated. So we need to be very careful on this one. I agree that in this particular instance the minister is correct, but it should not be taken that this is correct for all times in all cases.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I'll recognize one more speaker, then. The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Real quick, Mr. Speaker. I would like to rise and say that obviously I agree with the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, the opposition deputy House leader, on this point of privilege.

It's very clear. First, we have to look at what the recommendation says that the Chief Electoral Officer made to the Justice minister, who is now the Premier. The specific quote from the report is that he asked to "add specific direction that an investigation shall be conducted in private." Having an investigation conducted in private is very important, obviously. It's important, when you're talking about allegations and things like that floating around out there in the ether and so forth, when you've got innuendo and so forth, when everyone is presumed innocent until proven guilty, that you don't allow that information to go public because it's unfair to the person whose character might be impugned in that situation. That's very clear, and that's very clearly the statement in the recommendation that's made.

For this member we're not talking about the act here. That's not what's in question in this point of privilege. What's in question is his representation of what was said in the recommendation, and he specifically said that what was said in the recommendation – nothing to do with the act, what was said in the recommendation – was that the Chief Electoral Officer said that he wanted to have complete privacy with regard to not only conducting these investigations but also to keep the results from investigations where illegal donations were found from ever being made public. It's clearly not what the recommendation says. It doesn't say it.

For this minister to stand in this House and say that the Chief Electoral Officer at that time, Mr. Lorne Gibson, asked to keep the results of findings of illegal donations to political parties private and nonpublic is completely false. That's not what the report said. This minister has clearly misled the House by saying so, and he should retract those statements. If he wants to refer to the legislation, he should refer to the legislation but not the recommendation because that's not what the recommendation said, and he knows it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Unless anyone has anything new or different to offer, we'll conclude the speaking list at that point.

Hon. members, it's a rare time when you get two purported points of privilege raised over two consecutive days. In fact, I don't know if it's ever happened in my time here, but c'est la vie.

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills has of course met the technical requirements, as he's indicated. In fact, he did provide written notice of his intention to raise this point of privilege, and that was provided in writing this morning at, I believe, around 11:18 or thereabouts; nonetheless, in advance of the two-hour rule requirement. He subsequently gave oral notice. So he's done what had to be done.

The chair has now listened to some good debate on the matter, and the chair will take the evening to study the debate and to do a little further research and will comment tomorrow.

- (a) that recommendation 4 regarding salary for the Premier not be implemented but that the committee implement a salary that reflects a differential of plus 25 per cent between the Premier's salary and that of a minister with portfolio;
- (b) that recommendation 10 concerning the expense portion of a member's remuneration, known as the tax-free allowance, not be implemented and that the amount of that expense allowance be set at zero pending an amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act to eliminate it;
- (c) that recommendation 11 regarding the implementation of a new transition allowance be rejected and that no further amounts shall be accumulated beyond those accrued by eligible members prior to the commencement of the 28th Legislature;
- (d) that the committee examine alternatives to the pension plan for members proposed in recommendation 12 and discussed in section 3.5 of the report, including defined contribution plans, and report to the Assembly with its recommendations;

- B. Be it resolved that nothing in this motion shall limit the committee's ability to report to the Assembly on any other matter arising from the report.

[Adjourned debate May 28: Mr. Horner]

The Speaker: Are there any speakers? This motion is debatable.
The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre?

Ms Blakeman: I will pass.

The Speaker: Does anyone from Executive Council wish to conclude debate?

The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition. I'm trying to read the signals here. Carry on.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today to debate the motion before the House to accept in principle the MLA remuneration and recommendations by Justice John C. Major. First of all, let me remind hon. members that it was Wildrose, more specifically our Finance critic, the Member for Airdrie, who really drove the issue of MLA pay, severances, and transitions during the last Legislature. He brought forth a private member's bill more than a year ago, the Legislative Assembly (Transition Allowance) Amendment Act, 2011, that would have dramatically reduced the often-exorbitant amount of severance MLAs collect from taxpayers upon defeat or retirement. Naturally, of course, the government members defeated this bill and soundly. Not one government MLA stood up for fiscal restraint and respect for taxpayers when the bill came to the floor for a vote.

The NDP Member for Edmonton-Strathcona voted for the bill, the Liberal Member for Calgary-Buffalo voted for the bill, and I thank them for their co-operation on behalf of the taxpayers in this province. But not a single Progressive Conservative MLA stood up to say no to these extravagant entitlements that day. I have no doubt that without the Member for Airdrie's tireless efforts, pushing this issue to the forefront of public debate and ultimately into the recent election campaign, we wouldn't be in this Legislature today talking about changing the way MLAs are compensated. I'd like to thank him today for all of his hard work on this file on behalf of the Official Opposition caucus and indeed on behalf of all Albertans.

It's a shame that this government needed to see its political life flash before its eyes before they acted on this issue, Mr. Speaker. But as it is with just about everything this government does, it's not important enough to act on unless the voters are upset enough about it. Then, and only then, do we get any kind any kind of response from the government. Nevertheless, we are here today about to change how we as elected MLAs are compensated and to better reflect what Albertans expect from us in terms of fairness, transparency, and respect for hard-earned tax dollars. I am happy about that, and I dare say it's about time.

I don't know if anyone will forget the very first act of this last government, of which the current Premier was a senior member. Weeks after Albertans cast their ballots, the cabinet went behind closed doors and helped themselves to a staggering 34 per cent pay hike. No warning, no consultation, and no apologies, just a brazen cash grab from the politicians just elected to serve Albertans and protect their tax dollars. It was a stunning display of arrogance, Mr. Speaker, and it came to define the Progressive Conservative government as out of touch and only out for themselves, and perhaps it sent us down the path to where we are today, here debating Justice John Major's report. Until then, no one single instance more clearly defined the compensation issue in the minds of Albertans than the cabinet pay hike of 2008.

But as I said before, Mr. Speaker, this government didn't act right away. It's not as if the public backlash wasn't strong enough to warrant corrective action. In my three years touring Alberta prior to being elected, no one issue elicited more anger from everyday Albertans than the cabinet pay hike. Instead of saying, "Whoa, maybe we overstepped here," and "Let's look at reforming our pay structure," the government doubled down. Sure, there was a patronizing offer to return a tiny portion of the huge pay raise they gave themselves, but in my estimation that cynical gesture only made Albertans angrier. The public thought: "These guys can line their pockets with my tax dollars, give back a few pennies, and expect me to forgive them? Not a chance."

From there, Mr. Speaker, this government was thoroughly and rightly criticized for hanging on to these giant pay hikes while at the same time handing out millions of dollars of bonuses to bureaucrats and failed health executives. It was around this time that Alberta once again began running budget deficits, bringing the government's ongoing personal abuse of tax dollars into much sharper focus and underscoring the need for major reforms to how politicians and public servants are paid.

Fast forward a few years, and we're on the eve of a provincial election. The now infamous no-meet committee has been exposed, and Albertans are angrier than ever not only at the inflated salaries and benefits MLAs collect at their expense but also at how complicated it is to navigate all the hidden pots of money that MLAs are paid. Because of these events, Mr. Speaker, I think it's fair to say that Albertans are probably more interested than ever in how much we are paid and why. So it's good that we're here today in the Legislature, ready to finally act on what Albertans have been telling us for so long.

I've often said, Mr. Speaker, that the Premier shouldn't have needed a judge to tell her what the right thing was to do, but that's a discussion for another day.

Most of what Justice Major has recommended in his comprehensive report is quite good, and Wildrose does support most of it. For example, we support the idea of a single comprehensive base MLA salary that encompasses the entire scope of a member's job; no extra pay for committees, just a flat salary that is easy to understand and easy to track and lower than what it was under the old system. That's what Albertans were asking for.

We also like where Justice Major suggested going with transition allowances, replacing the current golden parachutes, which saw some MLAs departing with over a million dollars, with a more reasonable package intended to help MLAs with a short-term transition into life after politics. The government has decided to go further and eliminate it altogether on a go-forward basis, and we have no objection to that either.

Additionally, we were pleased to see the government reject some of Justice Major's more troublesome recommendations like yet another huge pay increase for the Premier and also keeping the tax-free portion of MLA salaries. Albertans cannot shield one-third of their salaries from tax, and their elected representatives should not be allowed to either.

Before this goes to committee, there are a couple of things I urge my colleagues in all parties, especially the members of the Members' Services Committee, to consider as we move forward. The first is cabinet salaries. The Major report worked off current salary levels, which essentially means that the excessive cabinet pay hikes are the starting point. The report even recommended an additional increase to cabinet pay, but that doesn't mean that we can't now revisit this issue, finally. As MLAs we have the ability and, I would say, the obligation to look at this and get it right. In Members' Services Committee we look forward to raising this issue and arriving at a sensible solution because no one I spoke to during the recent election told me that they thought cabinet ministers needed a pay raise.

The second is the gold-plated pension plan that Justice Major has recommended. Let me be perfectly clear, Mr. Speaker. We absolutely cannot go back to this. Premier Ralph Klein was right to have killed these pensions almost 20 years ago. Reinstating them would be a slap in the face to Alberta taxpayers and hard-working Alberta families. The Canadian Taxpayers Federation has done some wonderful research showing why that is. For starters, an average Albertan would have to save $822,000 in order to equal the benefits a gold-plated pension plan would pay out to retiring or defeated MLAs. That is not a figure that most Albertans can even relate to.

The CTF also reports that unfunded pension liabilities in Alberta have reached $11 billion, including $42 million still remaining on the old MLA pension plan Premier Klein got rid of. These unfunded liabilities have spooked just about every private-sector pension plan away from defined benefit plans and for good reason. As the CTF points out, the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada reported in 2010 that more than 90 per cent of private-sector defined benefit pension plans have become virtually insolvent after 2008.

The most compelling reason to throw out gold-plated pensions really has little to do with facts and figures and dollars and cents. It's about leadership. It's about what accepting something like this says about us as politicians and officials elected to do the people's business and guard the public's dollars. If we accept this gold-plated pension plan, we merely affirm that which most people already believe about their politicians, thanks in no small part to this government's self-serving ways, that we aren't really interested in serving the public and doing what's right, and we're merely here for what we stand to gain from it. By jumping on the first opportunity we have to pad our bank accounts, we would give the public every reason to believe this. That's why I'd like us to make a stand on this, to give Albertans at least a small reason to have confidence in us.

I know that every member of the Official Opposition is ready to lead the way on this, and I know that both myself and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek are ready to convince our colleagues on the Members' Services Committee to do the same.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on Motion 11.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise and speak to this motion although I'm going to come at it a bit differently than everyone else has. I and my caucus have a very, very strongly held belief that MLAs should not be setting their own pay and perks. We raised this in a number of different venues and as a reaction to different proposals about pay schedules and things that were being raised in the Members' Services Committee a number of times. It was our standard response. We really, really believe this.

We were very happy to have one of our members, who's now one of the members of the government caucus, bring forward a motion. We don't get many motions, the opposition, because as some of you know and some of you don't, all private members are treated the same. Well, this would be my argument with the Government House Leader. All of our names are put into a pool, and the order for the private members' motions and bills are drawn from that, so Official Opposition and third-party and fourth-party opposition don't get a lot of chance at this. For us to take one of our motions and designate it to this tells you how important it was. It was brought forward by the Member for Lethbridge-East, and in fact it was unanimously passed. It was pretty clear that there was to be an independent commission to set the MLA pay and benefits.

Now, what did we actually get from this? What we got from it is an independent commission. Okay. Fine. I will quibble with the way it was set up in that it went to the Speaker of the day, who set it up with some criteria that raised eyebrows and set this all on a certain course. But we did end up with an independent commission, a one-person commission of Justice Major, who then presented a report.

Did we accept that report? Well, no. What we're hearing here is the ensuing debate, which will inevitably end with MLAs setting their own pay and benefits, which was not where we started. What we've already got is cherry-picking in this very motion that I am debating. We have the government saying, "We accept the report except certain things," and they can spell them out. At this point I don't care what the certain things are anymore because we have lost the ability to stand up and say: we accept this report.

We charged them to do a certain thing, we said we wanted someone else to do this, and what are we going to do? We're spending time in this House debating it again, MLAs talking about setting their own pay and perks. The government motion starts it out by saying that we're not going to accept this, that, and the next thing. They're cherry-picking off the report. We like this, but we don't like that. Okay-dokey, then.

What's going to happen after this? Oh, wait. It's going to get sent to the Members' Services Committee. Now, that is an all-party legislative committee, much respected, much feared. I'm sorry. Who's sitting on this again? Oh, right. A majority of the people sitting there are government members, and there are a small number of participants on that committee who represent the Official Opposition, the third party, and the fourth party. That group is going to decide how to implement this and is additionally charged with working out some of the details on things like the pension plan. Correct me if I'm wrong, but are we now not sending this to a group of MLAs to decide their own pay and benefits? Yes, we are. Right there we've contravened what we said we would do.

We all said in this House – and it was unanimous on the day – that we would support an independent commission setting this, and we've already managed to work that around way back to the Members' Services Committee, which the previous speaker, the Leader of the Official Opposition, in such an eloquent way outlined where all of these problems started. Wait for it. I'm waiting. My ear is out. Yes, indeed, that would be the Members' Services Committee who decided to set all of these things, and now we are going to send this back to the Members' Services Committee to decide the pay and perks. What is wrong with this picture? What's wrong with this is that we've already violated where we started.

Now, I've got all kinds of, you know, quibbles and suggestions and things that I'd like in there and not like in there. I was one of the few MLAs that actually signed up and went to the commission and put it on record. In fact, my Hansard appears at the back of the report. I was very concerned that the commission be aware of a couple of things. One is that not all private members are equal. Government private members are more equal than other private members. I wanted that known and understood because that really matters when you're talking about pay and benefits. Of course, if you're taking the best years of earning, anyone that's sitting on the government side was earning extra money by being appointed to government-only committees or to chair a government-only arm's length group.

The Seniors Advisory Council – that was always a government MLA, and it came with a salary of 40,000 bucks a year – and the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities: all of those were paid additional money. At one point they were so desperate to find a job for their one last backbench MLA that didn't have an extra job that they booted the person who was currently the chairperson for the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities so they could put their own backbencher in there. I'm going back quite a few years on that one, but people will be able to figure out who I'm talking about.

There were lots of things that each of us could contribute to this discussion. You know, I wanted it known that not all private members are equal. I wanted it known that for people that were coming from the not-for-profit sector or the public service sector, which is half of our working population here in Alberta – we love to talk about the entrepreneurs. I love you, entrepreneurs, because you're making us all money, and it's a talent I don't have, and I'm incredibly in awe of all of you. But, God bless you, you are half of the workforce.

The other half of the workforce are people that work in the public service and the NGO sector. You've got to understand that most of them are not paid well enough to be able to sock away money on a regular basis for a pension to begin with, and the best working years in the not-for-profit sector are 35 to 55, which is exactly our age. So anyone coming here from the NGO sector is going to end up with a significant payment deficit in order to perform the service of representing the public here. I wanted people to understand that and to know it and to work it into what they were doing. I wanted to make that point.

I wanted to make the point that, you know, you shouldn't be basing things on a situation where one group is significantly disadvantaged over the others, which is what I've just been talking about, that the transition allowance was incredibly important to people that were going back into the NGO sector, and I used myself as an example there.

I also wanted to quibble with the criteria comparisons. If you look on page 11 of the report, you know, the benchmarks that were set there were against Canadian federal, provincial, and territorial parliaments, fair enough, but Alberta Queen's Bench and Provincial Court judges – yikes – or senior public service in Alberta, including provincial, university, municipal, education, and health care sector? Well, gee whiz. The guy that heads up AIMCo for the province makes 2 million bucks. I'm just not in that league, and I don't think I should be compared to him.

I'd like to have known how I measured up against a plumber or an unionized iron worker or a high school principal or a wage earner or even a high wage earner where there was no job security. We have four-year job security, right? So I wanted to know how we compared there, and was it fair? Did we fit into that strata of people? I've got a lot of plumbers and high school teachers and wage earners in my life and in my constituency. I'm just not moving in that rarified strata of, you know, government mandarins and judges. That's a different level for me. So I would have preferred different criteria. But, you see, we could all cherry-pick about how we want this to go, right?

During the election a lot of people weighed in on this one, and credit goes to the Wildrose for whipping this one into a true frenzy, with froth on top and sprinkles and a cherry. Really, what people said is: "We want you to be reasonably paid. We don't want you to be paid crap. We don't want you to be paid the best in the world." Fair enough. That's why I was interested in where I came in with the plumber and the teacher and all of those people. They wanted that pay to recognize the responsibility, to recognize the leadership, to recognize the hours.

We do work a lot of weekends and a lot of evenings. I will tell you that you all will get to a point where you will think: "God, if I blew off this event, I'd be blowing off 80 bucks. Would I pay $80 to sit at home in pajamas and eat a grilled cheese sandwich?" You will all come to that point where you make that decision because we do work a lot at night and on the weekends, and that's part of what we are paid to do or that the pay should recognize.

Also, for those that travel away from home, that's a lot of time away from your family. It's a lot of time away from your family.

All of those things need to come into that mix about how we're paid. Essentially, we should be paid reasonably. It should be transparent so that anybody can figure out how we're paid. That means that with that taxable allowance, although, in fact, it's a deal from the federal government, now we're going to make taxpayers pony up the money for us to give to the feds. Yikes. Why are we doing that? But it will make it more transparent, and I'm willing to do that in order to make it more transparent.

You know, I could go on and on about the things I like and the things I don't like, but the point of this whole thing and where I started is that it's about payment, and it's also about what we do for that payment.

My last point that I want to make is that we have absolutely no balance, no measurement that the public can use against us. There is no code of conduct for MLAs except that you must be here in question period, and if you're not, they'll start to dock your pay. Aside from that, there is nothing in anything we do that says that you have to open a constituency office, that you have to be there, that you have to return phone calls to constituents, that you have to meet with constituents. All of those things I have seen not done in my time in this Assembly. We had MLAs whose offices were locked, and you had to phone and prove who you were in order to get an appointment. We've had all kinds of variations on that, so what we do need is a code of conduct.

If you are going to have a salary where we are paid reasonably, where there's a pension or a transition allowance, there must be something on the other side that balances this that says: "Here's the code of conduct. You must have a constituency office. You must have it open at some kind of published hours. You know, you have an obligation to meet with and speak to your constituents." I mean, beyond that, we can get into another level of detail, but do you see what I'm saying? I'd be right PO'd if I was an Albertan, too. We're going to pay these guys to go to Edmonton and do what? Talk? Yeah, let me in on this one.

How do they gauge our performance? They can't. All they can do is look at how many times we turn up in the media. Is that a good way of understanding what a good job we've done or what a bad job we've done? Careful how you answer that one. We need to be able to stand up and say to people: yes, this is a reasonable way to pay us, and this is the independent commission that we had tell us. But we also need to be able to stand up and say: fair enough; this is how you measure me. We need to have that code of conduct and to put it out there so that we can be measured against it because right now we don't. There is no way for any of our constituents and Albertans to say, "My MLA is meeting the minimum requirements" because there aren't any. No wonder they do not like paying us the money that we're getting paid.

Now, back to the beginning: code of conduct, and this is the report that we commissioned. Like it or not, suck it up, Sunshine. This is what we got back. You can argue that they got the wrong criteria and all the other arguments I've made here. The truth of it is that we said that we would abide by the independent commission that gave us the answer to this, and I want to see if you're going to do that. Right now, if you agree to Motion 11, you are agreeing to the government starting to cherry-pick which of these things they will accept and not accept out of the report. The deal was: we don't set our salaries.

Can you tell me, anybody, if the chairman of Syncrude or the chairwoman of Suncor or Nexen or anybody gets to set their own salary? Anybody? We've got somebody from the oil and gas sector here. Are they setting their own salary?

Ms Kennedy-Glans: They negotiate.

Ms Blakeman: They're negotiating it. You're darn right.

Do they get to just say, "I'm going to get paid this much money and these many perks"? No, they don't. They have to negotiate to get it. Well, our negotiation was that we hand it over to this independent commission, and they're going to tell us what you're going to get back. That's the deal, my friends, and you better stand back. You'd better stand on that one because otherwise we've broken our own faith. That's all I want to say.

I won't be supporting Government Motion 11, Mr. Speaker, because it breaks that faith of an independent commission that we would abide by and brings us right back into that circle of MLAs deciding their own pay and perks. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available should anyone have questions to the previous speaker or comments with respect to anything that was said by that speaker. No one under 29(2)(a)? Thank you.

Dr. Swann: Under 29(2)(a), Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: You're up under 29(2)(a)?

Dr. Swann: Sorry. Yeah.

The Speaker: Proceed with 29(2)(a), then.

Dr. Swann: I'd be interested to hear from the hon. member if there are other jurisdictions that are actually implementing codes of conduct or job descriptions that could hold us more accountable for the pay and perks that we receive.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'm not aware of any other jurisdictions that do that, but to be perfectly honest, I didn't research it. To be even more blunt about it, I don't care. I think it's what we do, and it's how I hold myself accountable to the people that I represent. I really don't care what they're doing in P.E.I. or in the Yukon. I think what's important is how we set ourselves up, and that's very important to me.

I've done a lot in my years to be as transparent as possible to my constituents, to be accountable, to let them look at the work I'm doing and criticize me for what I'm doing. I publish an annual report every year. Actually, when I started 15 years ago, I did one paper annual report, that went in the mail. Because of the wonderful technology we have, I now do an annual report that goes in the mail and on the website, which you also have to have now. So I have a website. Then about once a month I do an e-zine on important issues that come out of the House. I also work on Twitter and on Facebook. Yikes.

I publish how I spend the constituency budget every year in that annual report. It goes out every time, and it says: this is how much was on salaries and who got paid out of it. You've got to be careful there because you don't want people to be able to sort of go: well, your constituency assistant makes this much money, then, right? You've got to give an overall statement there: how much is spent on rent, how much we spend on promotional items, and how much we spend on mailing and the annual report. All of that is broken out. I've published it for 16 years now, and I invite people to come in and look at my books if they want to. They're more than welcome to do that.

It is about accountability, to me, and I think it's important that we have that code of conduct as the other side of our payment. I don't know of anyone else that goes into a job without some kind of job description and some kind of code that they're measured against as to whether they've accomplished that. So I don't care what anyone else does. I think it's important – and it's important to me – that we do the best we can to do that.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you. I was listening to the hon. member speak, and I completely agree with the importance of a code of conduct, but I have questions about whether or not the code of conduct should be set by this Assembly. Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, the requirement to have an office: in my constituency, which is four and a half hours from one end of the constituency to the other, would the code of conduct require that I have two?

My constituents expect to see me at every public event – graduations, parades, rodeos, and fairs – while her constituents might not or at least not in 44 different communities. I'm wondering why, when we're trying to improve democracy, the code of conduct would be written by members of this Assembly instead of the people in our constituencies, who hold our code of conduct up to us every single day and especially every four years during an election.

Ms Blakeman: I don't know that it does necessarily have to be written by us. I just think that there needs to be a baseline code of conduct. You're right; your people expect you to be at absolutely everything. My people expect that even more. Your people know that you're going to be on the highway for two and a half hours or three hours. Mine know I'm not. They know that I can put on my running shoes and walk to their event in 20 minutes. So I had bloody well better be at every single event they want me at, and I am. We have different requirements, and we all work our constituencies differently.

The bottom line is: what is the minimum standard of what we should be doing? That's what I was aiming for here, not how many offices you have but that there is a constituency office of some kind in some place that you do have public hours for. In other words, the public can access you. Maybe that's a virtual thing. Maybe you do that by skyping at a certain time, at a certain point. I don't know.

The point is that, yes, we are measured every four years by our constituents, but I think there has to be another way. As I say, in my time here I have seen abuse. I have seen MLAs that, you know, don't participate in question period at all, or they won't let people come into their constituency office, or they refuse to do any casework for their constituents. I think there has to be a minimum that we can all work from, and it shouldn't be hard to meet that.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

Speaker's Ruling Speaking Order

The Speaker: Just before we go on with the speaking rotation, a request has been made with respect to what the speaking order or speaking sequence should be. I want to say that on this particular point we try to observe tradition in the House, where if there are a number of speakers, we don't normally recognize two people in a row who are from the same party. Similarly, we usually don't go back to a party that has already spoken when there is a third one who has not spoken.

These are customs and traditions that do not find themselves in our standing orders per se. In my time in the chair I can tell you that we've tried to develop a system to adhere to, and it seldom, if ever, really works, which is why there is nothing in the standing orders, I suspect.

There will be occasions that occur when people have to leave early or a sudden occurrence has happened and they have to leave early, or they have a flight to catch or whatever it might be. We have no way of knowing how long a particular person might wish to speak. At the moment we're speaking either 90 minutes in the case of the Official Opposition leader, and others are speaking 20 or 15 plus five or whatever it might happen to be when we bring in 29(2)(a).

However, on this particular occasion I've already indicated a speaking order, so I want to revisit that. In the spirit of fairness, I would ask your agreement to alter the speaking order to allow the Member for Airdrie to go next, then the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, and then the Member for Calgary-Mountain View. Otherwise, we tend to chair the Assembly and the speaking order based on notes that come in to us or previously provided speaking order lists, just so that we're clear. If no one objects to that, then I would recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie to go next.

I'll invite the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre to make a comment although I hesitate getting into a debate on this, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much for the caution, Mr. Speaker. Under 13(2) could the Speaker explain? My understanding was that we do go back and forth between the government members and the opposition members, but I take it that today – and that's why I'm asking for the explanation – there are no government members who are indicating they wish to participate, and therefore you have only opposition members to deal with. Is that what's at issue here?

The Speaker: All I can tell you, hon. member, is that I have three people who've indicated a wish to speak, so I've just clarified that. I thank you for the observation. Should more names come forward onto the speaking list, we'll be happy to add them accordingly.

Debate Continued

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to stand and respond to Government Motion 11. I'd like to thank my colleague and the leader of our party for her kind comments. As much as I'd like to claim a lot for this progress, I would have to defer on that and say that, actually, the largest reason that we're here today debating an actual decrease from the recommendations given by Justice Major is because for the first time in 40 years the government opposite had the life scared out of them in the last election by this member and by my colleagues. That is the true reason because I know that in this House when I brought it up – and I made many arguments – I wasn't very successful. So something changed over that 28-day period, and I don't think it was the hearts of the members opposite as much as they would like to claim.

I think that we should give a round of applause to the new chair for her first time here. [applause] All right. Oh, everyone is so happy.

Albertans made two primary decisions during this last election. First, obviously, they decided to give the PC Party a likely final chance to get their ship and house back in order. This was a testament to their brand and the longevity of their brand, their aggressive and very negative campaign tactics during the 28-day writ period, some good, old-fashioned race baiting, and other things like that. Also, as well as the need for a more experienced alternative, we forget here that the Wildrose had exactly zero seats after the 2008 election. It's very difficult to ask the people of Alberta to hand over the keys to a $40 billion province to a party that had zero seats after the last election, so I think that the common sense and the overall judgment of Albertans was sound in this regard.

Albertans also made it equally clear that they wanted a strong, viable, and fiscally responsible Official Opposition that could develop into a seasoned, alternative government-in-waiting should the PCs repeat their last four years of poor governance. Clearly – clearly – they liked a lot of what they heard. There are just, certainly, some edges they wanted to be sanded off, and we will sand them.

As it pertains to MLA pay and perks, Albertans' decision to elect a strong and fiscally sound Official Opposition has certainly already begun to pay off. Several months ago, after becoming Premier, this Premier appointed Justice John Major to review MLA pay and perks and insisted that whatever recommendations he came back with, whether it meant a raise or a cut, would be implemented with no questions asked. You all remember that, I think.

The Wildrose made it clear that this was unacceptable and that the Legislature should reject any salary increases and, in fact, should roll back the salary increase the cabinet gave itself, replace the annual RSP allowance with a modest defined contributions pension plan akin to what is found in the private sector, and cut MLA gold-plated severance packages. That, of course, was the subject of my Bill 202 over a year ago, which asked us to cut by two-thirds the pension and cap it and so forth. That was unanimously agreed to, is my recollection, by all opposition parties and caucus members. I could be wrong. Correct me if I'm wrong on that. Maybe not, after hearing that last speech. But it was unanimously voted against by every single member opposite, and that needs to be remembered.

The Premier, of course, was outraged with the Wildrose proposal. Obviously, her government, as I said, voted against my private member's Bill 202, the Legislative Assembly (Transition Allowance) Amendment Act, 2011, which would have cut the MLA severance. She was quoted in the Calgary Sun on January 21, 2012 – this is the Premier – as saying, "Whatever Jack Major says is what we're going to do. I've been very clear on that . . . You don't ask Jack Major to write a report and then tell Jack Major what to [do]." No, you sure don't.

During the election the Premier attacked the hon. Official Opposition leader during the debate for saying that the Wildrose would go ahead and cut cabinet salaries and MLA benefits regardless of what the Major report said. Of course, the famous quote is: I don't need a judge to tell me what the right thing to do is.

The Premier said, as reported in the Edmonton Journal on April 13, 2012, in response to the Official Opposition leader, that "you have to decide if you want an independent process or if you want to control your own salary," arguing that the independent process was best. This debate attack followed an April 9, 2012, PC press release scolding the Wildrose for its MLA pay position as follows:

The Wildrose would immediately put MLA pay in the hands of MLAs, an inherent conflict of interest. [The Premier] has committed to implementing the recommendations of the independent review of MLA pay by . . . Justice John Major.

3:50

Following the election Justice Major came out with his report, of course, and sure enough it called for a huge increase in the Premier's salary, a slight downward adjustment in the golden MLA severance packages, and a defined benefits pension plan. Oops. The Premier's response, although completely inconsistent and very hypocritical of her previous statements, was, however, the right thing to do. She ignored the recommended increases to her salary and instead adopted the Wildrose position, or most of our position, on the matter. She got rid of the gold-plated severance packages, declined the wage increase, and asked the Members Services' Committee to put the defined benefits pension proposal on hold and to consider whether to instead adopt a more fiscally sound defined contributions pension plan, a very good idea. Strong, principled, and fiscally prudent opposition matters, and although the Premier's hypocrisy on this issue is somewhat difficult to stomach, it's better late than never.

We are happy the tax-free allowance has been jettisoned after being hammered by the other side for saying that it should be jettisoned, saying, "Oh, we're giving all this money to Ottawa that we wouldn't otherwise give Ottawa." Well, that may be true, but the point of the matter is that what's good for Albertans is good for their representatives. If they have to pay taxes federally, we pay taxes federally.

The Premier's salary increase of 25 per cent that was recommended by Justice Major is being declined by the Premier. We agree with that although we should be rolling back those cabinet salaries by 34 per cent. That would have been even better.

Also, as someone who's always advocating that wages and costs and government spending be capped at the rate of inflation plus population growth, I'm glad to see in the report that MLA salaries will instead of being kept to the average weekly wage index go up with the rate of inflation, a very good adjustment.

Of course, we're all happy about the transition allowance decision.

Now, we don't agree, obviously, with the cabinet getting a salary increase. Although it is a modest one, there's still no excuse for it. There was a 34 per cent increase, so even this roughly $5,000 increase that they should be getting under these recommendations is not appropriate, as modest as it may be. But we agree with most.

Now, the main outstanding issue, obviously, in this motion today is the issue of what form this new pension will take. The Wildrose strongly believes that a defined benefits pension is not acceptable. Defined benefits plans are causing havoc across the world right now, absolute economic carnage, for both large corporations, as we see with the auto industry in the United States and in Canada, as well as for governments, as we see right across Europe, the United States, and in provinces like Ontario, who just cannot manage it right now financially.

One of the biggest crises faced by Europe is the massive liability their public-sector pensions place on today's workforce, and the same problem, of course, crippled GM and Chrysler as well. Defined benefits plans are almost always unaffordable and cause ever-increasing liabilities for future generations of employees or, in this case, taxpayers. The private sector has always used defined contributions plans more than defined benefits precisely because they are more responsible and more fair. Where they have not, they have been bitten, and it has caused major problems.

Each person covered in a defined contributions plan gets a pension that more accurately reflects the amount they and their employer at the time contribute. There is no liability for future generations. That's the ethical part. Why should future generations pay for us? Why can we not make sure that we save enough in a defined contributions plan and be responsible for our own retirement rather than putting it on the backs of future generations, who may have to deal with all kinds of different problems: economic, social, and so forth?

If we are to have any credibility in making negotiations with the public-sector unions, we cannot be giving ourselves lavish pay and benefits. Who could fault whatsoever the health services workers for wanting a 3 per cent increase to their relatively low salaries when politicians in this Chamber had given themselves a 34 per cent increase just a few years earlier? That has shown in the way that the costs of wages in this province have shot up in a manner where even with oil at $100 a barrel we still cannot balance the books. Think about that. It's because we have not controlled increases in wages and increases in government spending in general.

We will insist that there be a fair and affordable defined contributions model that we adopt so that all MLAs pay their fair share. To give you an idea of how unfair defined benefits plans are, especially when you are talking about people making salaries in the $135,000 to $200,000 range like MLAs and cabinet ministers, here are some examples the CTF, or the Canadian Taxpayers Federation, put together. The CTF has calculated that under the MLA pension plan proposed by Justice Major, a three-term backbench MLA would stand to collect $52,740 a year for life after three terms. Using the standard annuity calculator, the CTF determined a regular Albertan would have to have $822,000 in savings to purchase a pension or joint life annuity that would pay the same amount.

Canadians are currently limited to putting no more than $22,970 into RRSPs each year, roughly $23,000, so it's tough to imagine how any Albertan could match their local MLA's pension. Perhaps this is the number, the $23,000 a year, that we should use when we start talking about the defined contributions plan such as perhaps putting half of that amount, $11,500, mandatorily into a member's RRSP, and then the remaining half, the additional $11,500, being in a matching program, where the member can put up to $5,750 into that pension, and it will be matched up to that limit. If the member only puts in $500 after that year, then they only get $500 in addition to the original $11,500 that they got from the government for their RRSP.

That's just one idea. I throw it out there, and I look very much forward to hearing other members' ideas on the defined contributions plan. The point is that when we leave this Chamber after we're done our careers, whenever that is, or our terms in office, we need to be able to do so knowing that we haven't put anything on the backs of future generations. Then we can truly hold our heads up high. That would be the Wildrose way of doing things.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We now have five minutes for Standing Order 29(2)(a) if anybody would like to use it. Any takers?

We'll move on to the next speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and, as well, congratulations on your first time in the chair. Or Madam Chair of Committees. I'm not sure if you are Speaker when you're in the chair.

The Acting Speaker: Yes.

Ms Notley: Madam Speaker. There you go. Okay. At other times Madam Chair of Committees. Welcome to the chair.

I'm very pleased to be able to rise to speak to this issue, and I'll start by simply pointing out that our caucus will not be voting in favour of this motion. I'm going to try in a somewhat succinct but not prewritten way, so we'll see how well that goes, to outline the reasons for that.

Let me just begin by referring to the comments that were made previously by the Member for Edmonton-Centre about how our salaries are established and the reference that she made to one of the members of the government caucus around whether or not members negotiate or don't negotiate their salaries. I would just throw it out as one possible observation that one could characterize an election campaign where your salary is one of the primary election issues as a form of negotiation because, of course, what happens is that you either win or you lose. Some of you may not be aware, but... [interjection] Yes. It's sort of like negotiating with the federal Minister of Labour, you know? You're in or you're out. Usually out. In any event, it is arguably a form of negotiation when you go through that process.

People may or may not be aware. As you know, this issue, as previously mentioned, was the topic of much debate over the course of the election. It was a very popular topic of debate in my particular constituency and in relation to my own candidacy. I will say that not only I but also many of my volunteers on my campaign did spend a great deal of time talking to people in the riding of Edmonton-Strathcona about the issue of MLA pay, so I think I can come here with some sense of what people's opinions on this issue are.

Some people have outlined this to some extent. People want to see us paid transparently. They want to see us paid equitably. They want to see the work that we do fairly compensated. They don't want to see us go behind closed doors, and they don't want to see any kind of situation that could be characterized either by appearance or by substance as being, you know, sort of behind-closed-door fixing of things for our own benefit. Basically, they want a common-sense, fair approach to this process, and that's hardly surprising.

Now, the question of whether or not this Assembly or members of this Assembly or a subcommittee of members of this Assembly should be the ones tasked with setting our salary or whether, alternatively, a judge should be tasked with setting our salary is not actually an easy question to answer. The immediate assessment of this issue when you first look at it, when you first come to it, is to say: "No. Let's independently have some third-party group establish our salary for us, and that way we can remove all appearances of corruption or self-interest and all those things."

I remember the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, who himself has advocated for that, at the same time cautioning, talking about his own experience in municipal government where a council that he was a member of had embarked upon that process only to discover that the independent organization recommended such a ridiculous increase that there was no politically sustainable way you could accept that increase. So he was very conscious that that's always a risk that you run.

Clearly, that is the issue that the members of this Assembly are now wrestling with because we had a number of recommendations come back which, quite frankly, go well beyond that sort of sense of common sense or common fairness or what you would expect to be able to go out onto the street with and talk to your constituents about and have them embrace. For instance, the proposed raise for the Premier really seemed a bit much.

I understand why it is that the Assembly and the government particularly are bringing forward a motion to refine, shall we say, the report issued by Mr. Justice Major. Politics is politics, and it is a different beast. It is the way we work now. It's a real thing, and you can't deny it. You can take a very sort of neutral, objective, well-researched approach to things, but you need to know that politics is another thing altogether. So how do you balance those things?

There are some good things associated with this motion that I would like to just put on the record that we do agree with. We agree with the recommendation to increase transparency of our salaries by getting rid of the tax-free element of the allowance. I think that the extra cost to do that is justified because it gets to that issue of transparency. So that's a good recommendation.

We also support the elimination of the transition allowance. When the transition allowance was first passed by members of the current government, back in about 2000, the only member in the Legislature to vote against it when it passed the committee was the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. We've got a long, strong record on saying that that transition allowance was well outside of what reasonable people could expect to receive, so it's hardly surprising that we're happy to see that that message has finally been heard.

Then, obviously, we support the notion of not moving forward with the proposed increase for the Premier because, frankly, there are too many things going on in this province that would just make it too hard for anybody to stomach if we also at the same time saw that type of raise – 100 per cent, 150 per cent raise – for the person who's ultimately responsible for the economic well-being of not just a few Albertans but all Albertans. I'll talk about that in a moment.

Those things in the motion, then, are good things. There are also good things in the report as a whole, which this motion is asking us to accept with the exception of those things that have been highlighted in the motion. I am pleased to see that the report is finally recommending that which the Member for Edmonton-Centre raised, which is the ridiculous inequity of the compensation that existed between government members and opposition members up to the last month and a half, the fact that on average government backbenchers earned about $15,000 a year more than opposition backbenchers. That always just seemed to me to be a ridiculously unfair and unreasonable distinction, so I'm glad to see that that has been removed.

I'm also glad to see, of course, that we've finalized the process of getting rid of committee pay because apart from sort of the complexity of ensuring that taxpayers understand what they're paying to people and what they're paying them for, there's also the whole issue of the discretionary pay control that resides particularly in the Premier's office vis-à-vis a number of their members as well as if you have a large enough caucus in the leaders' offices in other caucuses. People's salaries can be significantly increased or decreased depending on who they're nice to or who they're not nice to on any given day. I don't think that as members of the Assembly we should have a third or a quarter or whatever element of our salary subjected to those kind of internal discretionary political games, so I'm glad that that's been eliminated.

In terms of things in this motion that I have some concern about, one of the things is the fact that we are sending the issue of pensions back to the Members' Services Committee. Pensions are a very loaded issue, and they're also a way in which people can either increase or decrease the value of their overall package without anybody understanding exactly what has happened there. It's a really, really hard thing to track. We are in fact taking that back to the committee, and it's going to be quite an interesting debate as we watch how that unfolds.

Ultimately, our position is that we want to ensure that while we think some type of pension is reasonable, we certainly don't want to see the MLAs in Alberta getting way ahead of the curve in terms of what is received in other jurisdictions, or way behind, and that it be in line with what working people in Alberta can expect to receive.

I want to distinguish, however, a little bit our position from some of the points that have been made by members of the Official Opposition caucus and, I suspect, some members of the government caucus as well. I know that when the Canadian Taxpayers Federation and their friends in the governing caucus and their friends in the Official Opposition caucus engage in their slashing and burning and cutting and cutting and cutting campaigns, the first thing they do is that they haul out the word "gold-plated," and they attach it to whatever it is that they're attacking: gold-plated welfare benefits, gold-plated pension plans, gold-plated transition allowances. Some of them are gold plated. They never seem to say gold-plated oil and gas company subsidies though. Strange that we haven't seen gold-plated attached to that. It's a bit of a tried-and-true strategy.

What I want to say on behalf of working people in this province and across the country is that, in fact, we have a crisis in our retirement planning and in our pension funding and that the answer is not to simply shortchange working people and to suddenly decide that defined benefit plans are evil and that the only thing we can responsibly do is take yet more money away from low-income and middle-income working families just the way the federal Conservatives are about to do with the employment insurance plan. That action, those horrendous proposals that we're seeing federally with the employment insurance plan, is something that's being orchestrated by the same group of folks that want to see defined benefit pension plans eliminated, and they want to see working families' wages and incomes generally suppressed. I don't buy into that analysis.

Now, as an MLA I don't believe that I need to have a defined benefit plan, and I'm going to see what is a modest, reasonable approach in the long run. Obviously, MLAs don't devote 25, 30 years – most of us don't – to this job, so it's a different model. But average working Albertans and average working Canadians: they need security and the ability to plan in the future for their retirement, and if they do that with a modest, defined benefit pension plan, so be it.

With this government and the former Energy minister at the time – I think I can say his name now because he's no longer a member – Ted Morton, aggressively fighting against reform of our Canada pension plan, which would have assisted low-income, long-time working families, I find it very, very hard then to get on the bandwagon that wants to attack the retirement earnings of people who don't earn the kind of money that we earn. I need to put that on the record because I really don't like the conversation that's been had so far and the misrepresentation about the value of defined benefit pension plans to working people in this province and across the country.

As I say, I'm certainly not suggesting that MLAs need to have a defined benefit plan. We are in a different situation. I also want that to be very clear.

The other things in the report that are ultimately going to result in our voting against this motion are the things that I'll get to now, though. What this motion will do is it will ensure that we adopt the salary proposal, the general indemnity proposal that was in the Major report. In doing that, our basic salary will be roughly $134,000 a year. That will make us the highest paid group of legislators in the country save for the House of Commons. If you factor in the proposed pension stuff – and we don't know if it will go up or if it will go down – we'll still be in the top third. Now, that would be fine if I could look at our province and say: darn, we've done such a great job of managing this province, and everybody is sharing in this wealth, so that's reasonable that I'd be one of the most highly paid MLAs in the country. But the problem is that that's not the case.

We have the greatest disparity between rich and poor in this province in the country. We have the lowest minimum wage in the country. People in our caucus and on behalf of our caucus cannot then vote for a motion that would see us giving ourselves the highest salary in the country. It can't be done. If government wants to come back to us with finally revising our minimum wage to a point that is just and equitable, wants to come forward with an antipoverty campaign that's less about planning for planning for more planning with more consultations and a couple of conferences and some conventions over the next five years but actually a budget, well, we'll talk. But until that happens, we really struggle with the idea of giving ourselves that kind of raise.

I think that pretty much summarizes where we're going with this. I think there have been improvements, and I do appreciate the work that was done by Justice Major. I think most people here are generally trying to do the best thing, but we will not be supporting this motion.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We now have Standing Order 29(2)(a) if anyone would like to participate in that.

Seeing no one, we'll move on to the next speaker. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Clear Mountain View. Thank you, Madam Speaker. Well, I'm pleased to stand and speak to this motion, which, as my colleague from Edmonton-Centre indicated, we will be voting against. In addition, I want to be very clear that I would hope that with this motion, which is likely to be passed given the dominance of one party in this House, although it's not explicit, this Premier and this cabinet cannot interfere with a decision made by this Legislature between now and the next review, which is what happened in the previous administration, where the Premier and cabinet chose to give themselves a significant boost through order in council, I believe. It's not exactly clear to me that explicit in this motion it precludes this government from meddling in the pay and benefits that this body is about to adopt.

Madam Speaker, trust is the only real currency we have in politics, and whatever we do as policy-makers to enhance that public trust is to the good of democracy, to the good of engagement of citizens, and to the good of better public policy. Whatever we do that undermines trust is truly going to damage all of us, our citizens, our democracy, and our engagement in creating a better province, especially in this, perhaps the least trusted profession. I take that on the basis of studies.

We have to be especially transparent, accountable, and conscious of conflicts of interest, and what is a bigger conflict of interest than setting your own pay and benefits, yet we've been doing it for decades. So I think it's very clear that the time has come to have an independent commission, not only an independent commission but an independent commission with teeth, a commission that is actually going to impose its guidelines on this Legislature so that there can be no perception and no reality of interference or meddling or serving our own interests by setting our own salary and benefits.

It must be clear that we are acting in every way in the public interest. Fairly or unfairly, this government has shown itself unwilling to address many areas of conflict of interest. That's the role of the opposition, I think, to point that out and to make very clear that there is an accountability required of government and that all of us have to be accountable for our actions and our words. We will never be seen as independent and fair making decisions in this Legislature relating to our own salaries and benefits.

As the Leader of the Opposition I pressed for two things with the previous Premier: the independence and authority of this committee and, secondly, that a committee representing someone from the nonprofit as well as the government sector and the private sector be set up to provide some balanced approach to this whole question. Neither of those things were adopted, and that's the government's prerogative to set up the panel that they chose. But having done so, I think we're under obligation to adopt the recommendations we established.

Having said that, I want to say a little bit about what might appear to be an unrelated issue, but in fact I see a tremendous connection between the perception of our role as government members in serving our constituents and the plight of farm workers in this province. Not only do they not get access to the labour code as paid farm workers – so the standards of pay and benefits do not apply to the food producers in this province – they do not enjoy the occupational health and safety standards that the rest of workers enjoy, they do not enjoy workers' compensation for injuries and death in this province by legislation, and they are precluded from forming a union to act on their own behalf. If that isn't enough, there are no child labour standards in this province for paid farm workers.

We are talking about salaries and benefits here which we have traditionally set ourselves, and at the same time we have ignored, in fact snubbed, the rights of farm workers, those that feed us on a daily basis. This is a travesty, and it has to stop. I think more and more people, as they're becoming aware of it, are going to ask for this kind of leadership for our farm workers, our agriculture workers.

It is in some ways peripheral to the issue of salary and benefits. In some ways it points to severe evidence of conflict of interest and lack of attention to the public interest when a whole sector of our society, agriculture workers, are excluded from these most basic of rights, as distinct from all other paid working groups.

This is something that I will be raising repeatedly, that our paid farm workers, two of whom are in the audience today, will continue to hammer away at until this government gets it. There are farmers' rights organizations. There are not farm workers' rights organizations allowed in this province to advocate on their behalf.

With those comments in mind we'll be voting against this motion. Again, trust has to be at the forefront of everything that we decide and everything that we communicate if we're going to engage Albertans in ensuring a healthy democracy. It's very clear to me that in spite of commitments to an independent commission, we are again meddling with recommendations that we said we wanted and that we would follow.

There's a real danger here that we are going to be seen once again in a conflict of interest, setting our own salary and benefits and not following the very recommendations, which, in fact, the Premier said she would follow. She said that she would set up an independent committee and follow the recommendations. So there's a real problem here with both perception and reality in terms of our continued conflict of interest as long as Members' Services is involved and as long as it's not clear – and I don't think it's clear in this motion – that this government cannot meddle in between the four-year periods that it has been recommended to have a review of salary and benefits.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Would any member like to speak on Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I would ask if there are any other members that would like to speak to Motion 11? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. It's actually nice to see you in the chair. Congratulations on your first day sitting in the chair as Speaker.

Madam Speaker, we've put ourselves in what I consider an interesting dilemma on this particular motion. I'm going to talk a little bit about the fact of where I was, where I am today, and where I think we're going to go.

We've had many members discuss what they like about this particular motion and what they don't like about this particular motion. Madam Speaker, I have a report that's, I think, 357 pages. You'll remember, because we used to sit in the Legislature together on the same team, that I'm an avid reader and I'm an avid researcher. I was one of the people that read every page in the Health Quality Council, every single word. And the devil is always in the details. That's what I always try to find.

We have a brand new caucus here, and sometimes when you've been around a little while . . .

Mr. Anderson: A little while.

Mrs. Forsyth: A little while is a long while.

The Deputy Premier knows that I've been around for a while because I remember when I was advocating on his behalf with the PC caucus when he won by a landslide of six votes, I think it was, when he first got elected . . .

Mr. Lukaszuk: Three.

Mr. Anderson: Three. You guys have something in common now.

Mrs. Forsyth: Three. Yes.

. . . and encouraging the caucus at that time. Because we wanted him on our side, we thought it was important that he win. I don't know if I'm going to regret those words now, but certainly at that particular time it was important for me to advocate on his behalf for the PC Party at the time to pay for his judicial recount. I think we went three times. I can't even remember. It was a long time ago.

Anyhow, back to this. I just went through a judicial review, and I can tell you that it's not fun. I learned a lot from that, very interestingly enough, and some of that is what the Member for Edmonton-Centre, the beautiful riding of Edmonton-Centre, alluded to when she was speaking in regard to: how do you judge or how do you even pay what is a good MLA and what is a bad MLA?

As I was saying, I tried to talk to my caucus, and I said that the devil is in the details. We have the 357-page Major report, and as I indicated earlier, I haven't had a chance to read it. But I plan on reading it because the Official Opposition leader, my colleague that I have the privilege of sitting next to, and I are both on Members' Services. Knowing her as well as I do know her – and I've gotten to know her very well over the last two and a half years. She's an avid reader also, probably even more avid than I am about reading all sorts of reports, so I'll probably have to catch up to her on this particular read.

What I find most interesting – you know, I've listened intently in regard to the motion that's been moved by the hon. House leader. It talks about all of the things: "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in principle" – in principle – "the recommendations of the Review of Compensation of Members of the Legislative Assembly."

Now, what's fascinating about this is that we're talking about a report that the Premier was over and over again talking about, the independent report that's going to be done by Justice Major, to the point where she criticized us as members, saying: how dare you? I mean, I was in the Legislature watching her arm go up and down. “How dare you criticize or even think about getting involved in an independent report of the Legislature by a judge. This is going to be independent, and we’re going to accept all the recommendations.” You know, here we are just trying to offer what we thought was fair in regard to compensation.

Well, lo and behold, the independent MLA compensation review, all 357 pages of it, hits. I remember watching her on TV when this report came out. It was like a deer in the headlights: oh my, oh my, we can’t – can’t – accept that huge raise that he is recommending in the report. This is the independent report done by an independent judiciary that she was going to accept everything. Well, I mean, everyone in this House who’s political isn’t that stupid to say: well, I’m going to accept that huge raise on top of my 35 per cent raise that I accepted in I think it was 2007. I think Albertans would be really, really PO’d at the fact if all of a sudden I’m looking at a 70 per cent raise.

Madam Speaker, she’s not going to accept that, and Albertans bought into that quite quickly during the election: that’s good leadership; that’s fine, strong, good leadership, and we’re open and accountable, and we’re happy that you’ve done that. But don’t forget that previous to that you accepted a 35 per cent raise without any consultation with Albertans, and we knew Albertans didn’t like that because we heard that at the door.

It says:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve . . .

Approve.

. . . in principle . . .

Now, that’s interesting, “in principle.”

. . . the recommendations of the Review of Compensation of Members of the Legislative Assembly . . . and refer the Report to the Special Standing Committee on Members’ Services . . . for implementation where possible by June 30, 2012, subject to the following exceptions.

There we go.

Our wonderful Premier: “regarding salary for the Premier not be implemented.” Not. Well, that’s pretty darn smart. “But” – but; I love those buts – “that the Committee implement a salary that reflects a differential of +25% between the Premier’s salary and that of a Minister with Portfolio.” Now, don’t forget, Madam Speaker, that this is going to Members’ Services, and there are two of us and I can’t remember how many of them, so we’re not talking a lot of fairness there.

Then we go to:

that Recommendation 10 concerning the expense portion of a Member’s remuneration, known as the tax-free allowance, not be implemented and that the amount of that expense allowance be set at zero, pending an amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act to eliminate it.

Well, my colleague from Airdrie already mentioned that he brought this all forward on his private Bill 202 in – what was it? – 2011, which this government defeated.

Now, when you go back to that private member’s bill in 2011 and we talk about the gold-plated pensions, let’s not forget, Madam Speaker, that I’m one of those gold-plated pension, pork-barrelling piggies, as we got called and get referred to, who’s going to probably get a substantial amount of cash. When the member brought this particular bill forward, we sat down as a caucus, albeit a small caucus at that particular time, and had to have some serious discussions in regard to what he was bringing forward. And you know what? I agreed on that. I agreed on that not only in the Legislature, but I agreed on the fact that I ran again, moving forward under that pretext if we would have formed government. So now my challenge is that all of the things that he brought forward under Bill 202 are all of the things the government wants to take the credit for now, which is very interesting.

Then we go on to the transition allowance, another thing, a duplicate of what my colleague the Member for Airdrie brought forward in 2011 under his private member’s Bill 202. They didn’t like it then, but all of a sudden now they like it. Fascinating.

Now, this is one of those time bombs that we have to be ready for:

that the committee examine alternatives to the pension plan for members proposed in recommendation 12 and discussed in section 3.5 of the report, including defined contribution plans, and report to the Assembly with its recommendations.

We’ve already had some discussions on that from several members. You know, time is of the essence. I know that some of our members, quite frankly, are quite excited about wanting to do their reply to the Speech from the Throne, so I’m not going to spend a lot of time, but I want to speak just for a minute on this. This, I think, is one of the key things. I’ve listened, and I haven’t picked this up from anybody within the Legislature speaking to this. We have this little letter B, and it says, “Be it resolved that nothing in this motion shall limit the committee’s ability to report to the Assembly on any other matter arising from the report.”

It’s a 357-page report. We have a Members’ Services Committee, that’s dominated by the government, and all of a sudden they might decide to pick out of this report anything that they might think is important: extra pay for ministers, basic salary plus extra pay for ministers. Level of compensation, I know, has been looked at. I think it’s about $135,000 that they’re examining. I’ve lost track of what they’re recommending for a cabinet minister. I’ve even further lost track of what they’re going to now pay the Premier because it’s been very, very confusing on what they’re recommending.

Madam Speaker, I guess one of the things that I want to just briefly touch on and what bothers me more than anything is the government’s loose definition of the word “independent.” I just want to speak to that for a second. What frightens me and what concerns me when the government talks, insists, and carries on about this independent commission, that they were so proud of and were so bragging about – and we’ve got other independent commissions out there going on right now – is that when the report comes back, they pick and choose what they like and dislike within this independent report. That’s where the struggle is in regard to using the word “independent.”

We’ve got, you know, a judicial inquiry going on in health care on queue-jumping. Does that mean that that particular report will come back and that if the Premier doesn’t like that there are allegations of queue-jumping in the report, she’s not going to accept it?

That’s where we are today in this Legislature, discussing a motion on an independent report. We have said and our leader has said and our House leader has indicated the fact that we agree on some of the things that the motions are bringing forward, that we’re not opposed. The leader eloquently said way back during the election that she didn’t need a judge to tell her what Albertans wanted because we’ve listened to Albertans, and Albertans have clearly told us what they think is fair compensation, what they think is fair for MLAs to have.

We as an opposition will listen to the rest of the debate this afternoon. I found some very interesting things said through this whole debate. The leader and I will then go off to Members’ Services and see what happens from there, what the government proposes in regard to the pension and how you define our pension plan. I think – and I’ve said this before – what bothers me is a government that cherry-picks . . . [Mrs. Forsyth’s speaking time expired]

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We have Standing Order 29(2)(a). The hon. Associate Minister of Finance.

Mr. Fawcett: Yes. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. As I don’t get to ask questions anymore, this is certainly my opportunity to ask questions. I was certainly amazed at the member’s comments about the government cherry-picking recommendations. She so glowingly spoke about the bill brought forward by the private member from Airdrie-Chestermere about MLA compensation and, particularly, the transition allowances and mentioned to the Assembly that she is going to be collecting one of these big transition allowances.

One of the things that there’s been lots of talk about in this debate is the integrity of politicians. One of my concerns always around debates on compensation for any elected office is that when you’re in the opposition, you can say anything but don’t have to be accountable for the actual implementation of this. We’ve seen this. We’ve seen Reform MPs that have campaigned on not taking the MP pension, and what are they doing right now? They’re taking it. We saw a member of this party’s caucus, who was defeated, who said that he was going to pay back every single penny for a committee, that he wasn’t going to do . . .

Mr. Anderson: Point of order.

Mr. Fawcett: . . . and a leader that had promised Albertans during the election that he had in fact paid that back. Obviously, that wasn’t the case. Madam Speaker, my question to the member is . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. We have a point of order.

Point of Order

Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: A point of order on that last point. This member gets very busy, and sometimes I know he forgets to read newspapers and watch news. Obviously, under 23(h), (i), and (j) what he has said here is imputing, is likely to create disorder. The reason for that, Madam Speaker, is because this member knows full well that the former Member for Calgary-Glenmore went back to the LAO, asked how much he did receive in actual payment for that no-meet committee, as it was called, and was told by the LAO in a letter that he owed absolutely nothing. So, actually, the initial newspaper report was completely wrong in imputing that he had received a dime from that. He hadn’t received a dime. For this member to stand up and impute that member, who served very proudly in this Legislature, is shameful, and he should retract that statement immediately.

The Acting Speaker: We’ll hear from the hon. associate minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Yes. You know, I don’t think we need to waste a lot of time on it. I’ll certainly withdraw that comment. It was just in the context of my question to the member, and I certainly want to get to that, Madam Speaker.

Debate Continued

Mrs. Forsyth: Madam Speaker, I would be pleased, absolutely pleased to answer his question.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, we’ll just have the associate minister ask the question first, and then you can answer it.

Mr. Fawcett: My question, you know, is: if the member is so exuberant about the bill brought forward because it was the right thing to do, what is the member doing with her transition allowance?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Madam Speaker, what I will be doing is accepting it, like everybody else. There is nothing else I can do.

The other thing. I mean, this member knows full well. He wants to talk about the fact that he’s Mr. I’m Good and Happy. I spoke in the Legislature exactly when he brought the bill forward, and he should go back to Hansard. I talked about the fact that I would be accepting that particular pension at that particular time and that there was some dilemma there.

I will tell him, when he wants to talk about integrity and he imputes one of our members, that I paid back in full, every cent, for the no-meet committee. We might as well read it into the record: $24,624.72. Having said that, I would like to ask the member, since he’s so quick to jump up, if he would like to have all the members from his party, the PC Party, table what they’ve paid back also.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We have a few minutes left under Standing Order 29(2)(a). Is there anyone else that would like to ask a question?

Seeing none, we’ll move on. Are there any more members who would like to speak to Motion 11?

I would ask the hon. Government House Leader to close debate.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think it’s been an interesting review of the issues around MLA compensation. I think the one thing that I would like to say in closing debate is that a number of members opposite have expounded on the fact that we on this side, in particular our Premier, said that we need to have an independent commission to review MLA compensation. That’s responsive to the motion that was passed from Lethbridge-East’s motion in the House a number of years ago.

There was a period of time when the Speaker and Members’ Services attempted to fulfill that motion but didn’t get the co-operation it needed in terms of suggestions from various parties relative to how that independent commission might be populated. The Premier, immediately upon being elected leader of our party and installed as Premier of the province, made that request to the Speaker’s office, and the Speaker moved ahead with Members’ Services to have this commission put in place.

We now have the report. We said that we would ask the House to adopt the report when it came in, and that’s exactly what we’re doing. There’s been some quibbling about whether or not we’re adopting the report or whether, in fact, we’re setting our own pay. We are not setting our own pay. This report sets out a comprehensive level of MLA compensation, and what we’re asking Members’ Services to do is to put that in place.

The Premier has said that she doesn’t want to accept the pay which this report suggests should be afforded the Premier. We’re asking the Members’ Services Committee to honour that request.

With respect to the tax-free allowance the report allows two options. We've chosen the option which we think Albertans want, and I appreciate the support from the Official Opposition with respect to that, to say that we shouldn't have a tax-free allowance. Recommendation 1 was the grossed-up amount. Recommendation 10 said that he thought we should take an allowance, but he left that option open. We took the option that we think Albertans want, and we're asking Members' Services to implement that.

With respect to the transition allowance we suggest that the transition allowance which has been provided for in the report is fair. But, again, we've heard from Albertans that they don't want us to be seen to be taking more than a pay and an appropriate pension amount, and we believe that Members' Services can roll those two together and create a comprehensive, probably defined contribution pension process, which will be open and transparent to Albertans and within the parameters of what has been recommended by Mr. Justice Major.

I believe that we're fulfilling the obligation to say that we accept in principle what's being put forward in the report. We don't believe Members' Services should be tinkering with the pay of MLAs. We think we should adopt it essentially as it's been put forward.

Ms Blakeman: As you've cherry-picked it.

Mr. Hancock: It's not cherry-picking to suggest that when there are two options, you choose one of them. If there are two options, one having the grossed-up amount and the other having a tax-free allowance, choosing the grossed-up amount is not cherry-picking. It's choosing to implement in the interests of Albertans.

I'd ask that we pass this motion and let Members' Services get on with the job.

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate May 28: Mr. Horner]

The Acting Speaker: We'll move on to the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mr. McAllister: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is truly an honour to rise here in this Assembly today. I recognize, clearly, the great debate that has taken place here. In fact, I've seen it with my own eyes in the last couple of days. It's been very interesting for a newcomer, the passionate people that have stood and worked tirelessly before us. In fact, in my desk there is a signature of the Speaker dated August 30, 1993. Some have been here a while. I am humbled to be in a position to contribute to this process, and so it begins with a response to the Speech from the Throne. May I thank every member in here in advance for your undivided attention, which I know I will have for the next 10 or 15 minutes.

We have all just come through an election campaign, so we all know the value of support on the home front. I'd like to start there: my wife, Lisa, her unwavering support. I have three children: my son, Mitch, who graduates from Chestermere high school this week, and my daughters, Ally Grace and Morgan Faith. I am eternally grateful, clearly, for their support in the campaign that we have all just come through.

Back in August I took a giant risk and walked away from a very successful and rewarding career to take a run in the field of politics. Some said at the time: McAllister, you have lost your mind. In the last day or two I have thought that maybe they were right at times. But I did so because I want to effect positive change in this province, and I know that on that point we all agree. I want to stand up and effect more positive change in my community.

I also did it because I feel like the government has gone off course, and that is what I heard over and over again through the election campaign from the great people of Chestermere-Rocky View. I'd like to thank those people, too. More than 10,000 of those people humbled me by selecting me to be their provincial representative. I'm truly honoured by it.

We have a very diverse riding in Chestermere-Rocky View. It's diverse in many ways: ethnically, socially, geographically. You might think of it geographically as an upside-down U, I suppose, over the city of Calgary. On the east side is my hometown of Chestermere, 15,000 people. There were fewer than 5,000 people in the town of Chestermere 10 years ago, so that gives you an indication of how fast it has grown. In fact, the most recent Canadian census had Chestermere as the fifth fastest growing community in this country and the fastest growing community in this province.

With that kind of growth, of course, we are dealing with some very unique challenges. Keeping up with the necessary community amenities is tough, and I know we'd all recognize that in our own ridings anyway. I hope to be able to provide support for that unprecedented growth: support for health services, support for schools, and support for rec facilities when we can. We have a beautiful lake community with wonderful, committed community people, a small army of people that do a lot in the town of Chestermere. I'm very proud to be from there.

Also on the east side of this riding is Langdon. It's another rapidly growing community, now more than 4,000 people. It is referred to as the good luck town. There is Conrich, Indus, Kathryn, Keoma, Delacour, Dalroy, Dalemead, and many farms and ranches in between. So far we're just on the east side of Chestermere-Rocky View.

Now, many of those people talked to me about property rights during the campaign, and I should say up front that I intend to stand up for them on this front. I know our party will lobby for property rights in Chestermere-Rocky View and throughout Alberta. In the throne speech, Madam Speaker, there was not one mention of this critical issue, and I know a lot of Albertans found that troubling.

I mentioned the east side of our riding. There is Balzac to the north of Calgary. There is Springbank, Bearspaw, Elbow Valley, Redwood Meadows, Cochrane Lake, the Tsuu T'ina First Nation on the west side. You will see some of the most natural beauty in this province in this riding. These are communities full of proud people who have found success through hard work and through entrepreneurial thinking and entrepreneurial action. They talked to me at length at the doors and in community halls about fiscal responsibility. They asked me over and over again: in a province with this financial wealth, with an industry like the oil sands and the revenue that we take in, how is it that we can't go to the mirror and find a way to balance our books?

I share their concern. My parents taught me a pretty valuable lesson, and it seems pretty simple, actually, as well. I think we probably all know it, and we'd be wise to apply it in government: don't spend more than you take in; put money away into savings. I plan to push for these things because my constituents told me to. That's the most important part. I believe we can have the best services in this country and still balance the books. We do have to go to the mirror and remember that we are spending Albertans' money when we are spending money. It is not ours to do with as we choose. We have to spend it wisely, just as Albertans and you and I and everybody else in here have to do in our home.

Madam Speaker, my constituency is among the youngest, as well, in this province. Parents are very aware that educating our kids and providing the resources and the facilities to do so is a paramount responsibility of the provincial government. We talked about it some today in question period. We have to ensure that all of Alberta's children receive a world-class education, which will make them competitive in a world where quality education is becoming more and more significant. In partnership with the important core values taught by my parents, a proper education, we know, provides a launching point for healthy and contributing citizens. I should say all parents; I don't think it was just mine that taught me a few values.

We do know that the provincial government spends more per capita than any other province on education. The problem is that tens of millions of those dollars are wasted in an administrative and bureaucratic nightmare. We spend millions finding ways to burden the classroom teachers with additional paperwork, with record keeping, and other make-work projects. These are things that I heard from teachers and administrators themselves just in the last weeks in meetings in my own constituency.

I'd like to see more money go into the classroom, more money for more teachers and front-line staff in our children's schools.

That's what this party has talked about. This means flowing more funding directly to individual schools, where principals, teachers, and parents, we believe, know best where and how to spend it. Hiring more teachers was a centerpiece of our last Wildrose balanced budget alternative. We can move money away from other areas like the government's continued use of corporate welfare projects like carbon capture. Of course, we would like to see it better used by hiring more teachers, particularly on the front lines, and on support staff in the classroom also.

Madam Speaker, a central feature of Alberta's education system is that it provides parents with a greater range of educational choices, I think, than any other system in North America. Many of us in this room also choose different choices. Now, although strong public schools are critical to our education system, charter schools, private schools, and home-schools provide educational opportunities and teaching methods that are sometimes unavailable in our public system.

In fact, our public school boards have responded to competition from these schools by rolling out, I think, a diverse range of excellent options, some optional choices that are second to none in North America. This is why I'm a strong advocate of the public system. I am proud of Chestermere high school and the teachers and administrators. As I said, my son graduates there this week. My daughter Ally Grace is enrolled in kindergarten in the French immersion program at Prairie Waters elementary in Chestermere also. C'est bon to the program. They are terrific people and big supporters of that public system.

Madam Speaker, let's not forget the essential role that special-needs education should take in our education system. This is crucial. It's an area where the government, I think most would say or certainly as I heard on the campaign trail, is underperforming. There are thousands of children with special learning needs in our education system. The government has done a poor job of caring for them.

We do have a very good preschool program with regard to students with developmental disabilities. We should point that out, the good with the bad. But once you move on, once you get into the grade level after you get past kindergarten, it is underfunded in a lot of ways. This is something that we hope the government will work to alleviate in the next few years. Again, while we didn't get any indication that they would in the throne speech, I stand here and believe that they will and that we can work together on that.

We will, as is expected from the opposition, hold the government accountable on behalf of Albertans when we must. That said, I do look forward to working with government, with the members on the other side of this Assembly and on this side, to get more done for the province of Alberta. I believe we can work together.

Over the next four years, Madam Speaker, I plan to represent the people of Chestermere-Rocky View to the best of my abilities, which means listening to them, meeting with them, and advocating for the people that sent me here. It means remembering above all else that it is the people of our province, the people of our constituencies, that employ us. It is those people that sent us here to the Legislature on their behalf.

5:10

It is an honour – it really is a privilege – to stand up here before you today. I'm grateful for the opportunity. I started today by talking about family, and I would like to conclude my response to the Speech from the Throne by talking about the same thing. My mother, Joan, is in Medicine Hat. I come from blue-collar roots. My mother worked in the dietary and laundry facilities at the Medicine Hat regional hospital for years, raising three kids by herself for a long stretch. My father is a cow-calf farmer, and he farms in the village of Gagetown, New Brunswick, still in his young 70s, mid-70s now. Anybody with anybody in farming knows that you can't make a man retire from farming. He'll do it until the very end.

They did teach me something, one or two things, growing up. One of the most important I'd like to speak of I think serves us all well, and that is to remain humble, which means that I don't believe it's our hockey jacket that defines us, I don't believe it's our job that defines us, I don't believe it's the vehicle we drive, our bank account, our title, or any of the above. I think at the end of the day, more than anything else, it's our actions that will define us.

Through that, Madam Speaker, may I say that we have healthy debating here, but I believe what unites us is stronger than what divides us, and I hope that we can apply that principle as we go forward. It's my hope that I stand here and sit here on a daily basis with great dignity for the residents of Chestermere-Rocky View as we all work toward a better and stronger Alberta.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I think it's important that we remember to laugh at ourselves once in a while. For instance, when the Member for Little Bow, Ian Donovan, shows up with one black sock and one blue sock on, I think we should laugh at that, even if it was my lame attempt at a joke to sort of let you know.

It is an honour and a privilege to be able to respond to the Speech from the Throne. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, for that lovely maiden speech.

We have Standing Order 29(2)(a). Are there any who would like to take advantage of 29(2)(a) at this time?

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next speaker, the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is an honour and it is with great pleasure that I rise today to respond to the Speech from the Throne given by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. It is a privilege to do this on behalf of the constituents of Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock. I'd also like to take the opportunity to thank my husband, who has sat here for the last four hours and waited for this opportunity to listen.

I would like to thank the Lieutenant Governor for both his wonderful words and his commitment to this great province. I would also like to thank him for formally beginning this First Session of the 28th Legislature. Madam Speaker, His Honour's distinguished career as both a member of the Canadian armed forces and as a military adviser and volunteer with humanitarian causes should be looked upon with the utmost respect. I further commend his dedication as he continues to serve the people of Alberta.

I would like to extend thanks and gratitude to our hon. Premier. The past year has been incredibly demanding for her, and she has served in the office of Premier with integrity and an unwavering loyalty to the people of Alberta. Under her guidance Alberta continues to be a province with strong leadership, innovative solutions, and unlimited opportunity.

Madam Speaker, it gives me both pride and humility to have been elected by the constituents of Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock. The old Chinese proverb goes: may you live in interesting times. I think we do. This past election brought out an interest and passion in many people who had been indifferent and uninvolved for many years. It engaged many youth who decided that they want to have a say in shaping their future. I also have many friends in my baby boomer generation who for the first time read up on the issues, asked the questions, and made their voices heard. My daughter is an engineer in Winnipeg, and it was interesting to hear that most of her colleagues followed our election and were very knowledgeable about our issues. People across this country were following the events here in Alberta. We saw Facebook and Twitter light up with questions and comments from all corners of this province. This relatively new way of communication enabled people to have easy access to the candidates and to ask questions and make comments.

The reason I sought the nomination for the Progressive Conservative Party, Madam Speaker, was to bring my knowledge of local governance and an experienced voice to this Assembly. The citizens of Alberta expect great things from this government and have entrusted us to do good work here to put into law and to practice what's important to them. We must be transparent and honest in all that we do, and we must keep Albertans engaged in what we are doing. We must use respect and decorum in our discussions and deliberations. I am confident that we will not let Albertans down.

Madam Speaker, this is our province, and this is our time to shine, our time to secure a good quality of life and prosperity for future generations, and as His Honour said in the Speech from the Throne, this begins by investing in families and communities.

Madam Speaker, education is an area that has always been very near and dear to me. I started out as a member of my children's school council because I wanted to be involved in their education. I was elected as a school trustee and spent a total of 18 years in that position, having spent three of those as the president of the Alberta School Boards Association.

As I travelled across this country in that capacity, I came home every time knowing that we have an excellent education system here in Alberta. We are seen as world leaders in this field, and I support the hon. Premier in further raising the bar. We will strive to further improve the education system and to keep up with the inevitable changes that will take place, but we can rest assured that our children are being well educated. As a grandmother I know I speak for many Albertans when I say that a strong education is critical to the future of Alberta. The future prosperity and progress of this province depends on our ability to educate our youth and give them as much opportunity as possible, and I am thankful that our Premier shares the same passion and vision in this area.

Madam Speaker, agriculture has also been a big part of my life. My husband and I have four children, including three sons who are proud farmers. They epitomize the enthusiasm of youth and bring it to this vital industry in our province, an industry that has been a significant part of Alberta's past and conjures up feelings of pride and heritage.

Last fall there was a succession planning seminar held in Westlock. There were about 250 people who attended, and the presenter was surprised when he asked the question to those in the room: who doesn't have a son or daughter with them? Only a few hands went up. There continues to be a strong presence in this province of young farmers whose families are involved in agriculture, young farmers who are well educated and enthusiastic about the future of agriculture in Alberta.

The face of farming has changed. It has become more complex, and there is a need to keep abreast of all of the changes in the industry. This government will ensure that we enable our food producers to continue to operate without undue interference and will support them during their time of need.

Madam Speaker, my Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock constituency starts just north of Edmonton, near Morinville, and goes all the way up to Chisholm and Swan Hills. It is quite large and diverse. Parts of the area have some of the best farmland in Alberta, and there are vast tracts of forest in the resource-rich Swan Hills area. A large and growing number of my constituents commute either to Edmonton or Fort McMurray to work. We have several large towns, with innovative entrepreneurs who have developed successful industries and who sell their products around the world.

As the Lieutenant Governor stated in his Speech from the Throne, Alberta is already “the most economically free jurisdiction in North America.” Nowhere else are businesses so free to operate without undue interference or to adapt to market conditions. With a Premier so dedicated and passionate about allowing businesses to thrive, I am confident that I will see more of this business development and entrepreneurial energy in my constituency.

One of the issues in my riding, however, is the depopulation of our northern rural areas. Madam Speaker, our local school board is faced with declining enrolment in the area north of Westlock. Trying to keep our small schools viable is a challenging task. Our municipal governments spend a lot of money to ensure that the hamlets have good sewer and water systems, good streets, and fire protection. With our government’s commitment to building and maintaining many schools across this province, I am optimistic that we can keep our small schools open so that young families can stay in their communities. All of my constituents have the same need for good education, health care, seniors’ care, and infrastructure, areas that our province is fully committed to strengthening.

Madam Speaker, I know a man in Westlock who was born and raised in Nigeria, Africa. He tells me of his amazement at seeing what we have here in Alberta. The abundance of space and personal freedom is what impresses him the most. Sometimes those of us who have spent most of our lives here take these things for granted. It is at our peril that we do so. We must work hard to preserve our freedom and to always be good stewards of our natural resources. I agree with the Honourable Lieutenant Governor that we must develop these resources responsibly in order to protect our environment and grow our markets. We must be judicious with development and plan wisely. We must evaluate and monitor development to ensure that there will be prosperity and natural beauty for our grandchildren.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I want to tell you how excited I am to be a part of this dynamic group of representatives, who will do the very best they can for the people of this province. We bring diversity and enthusiasm to this Assembly. We are of many faces and ethnicities, and we represent the diverse face of Alberta, a place I am so incredibly proud to call home.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, for that very passionate maiden speech.

We do have Standing Order 29(2)(a) if anybody would like to make use of it.

If not, we’ll move on to the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you. Madam Speaker, hon. colleagues, Albertans, it is an honour to rise today to speak in response to the Speech from the Throne. On April 23 I had the privilege of being elected to represent the people of Innisfail-Sylvan Lake in the Alberta Legislature. Like hundreds of thousands of Albertans, voters in Innisfail-Sylvan Lake voted for the Wildrose vision of a stronger, more confident Alberta, and I’m honoured by their faith and their confidence in me.

Last week we heard the government’s agenda for this legislative session in the Speech from the Throne. The journey Alberta has taken since its foundation is indeed remarkable, overcoming adversity and presenting thousands from across Canada and from around the world with a brighter future. The Speech from the Throne referenced how the government played a pivotal role in the development of our great province and that government would be the leader in moving our province forward. It ascribed to government the power to help Alberta and Albertans reach their full potential and conquer their challenges. Respectfully, I disagree.

Albertans know that it isn’t the government that leads Alberta forward. It’s the people, everyday Albertans across this great province, who are the real driving force behind our success. Albertans are a prosperous and entrepreneurial group of people. They look to their representatives to ensure their opportunity in this province. Albertans, whether born and bred or who come from other places, have an unstoppable spirit, a desire to create better lives for themselves and for their children, a passion to drive forward new ideas, new opportunities, and new freedoms for hard-working families, a need to overcome and conquer those obstacles which others have found immovable and enviable, and an unshakable faith that through honesty, integrity, and hard work our province will continue to cast down its detractors and naysayers.

I have always been proud to be an Albertan, and I’m honoured that my fellow Albertans gave me the privilege of representing them here in this Chamber. I did not have a lifelong dream to run for office. In fact, I hadn’t really ever considered it until my brother was forced into a long-term care facility because of an illness. In 2008 my 32-year-old brother, Ron, was diagnosed with a devastating illness that would take his life in less than three years. Huntington’s disease is a neurological disorder for which there is no treatment, no cure, only a horrific death.

During that time my brother Ron required admission to a long-term care centre, which at age 32 was a difficult development for my brother to take. I fought – and I fought hard – to get my brother the care he needed. I wrote 420 letters, I called politicians, whatever I could think of to get him a long-term care bed. Eventually I had to take my cause to the media, and on the eve of the 2008 federal election my brother received a long-term care bed.

This was a terrible and difficult time for my family. My brother Ron had no assets, he had no income, and he had no savings. As most of you are likely aware, long-term care is expensive and for many Albertans, including my brother Ron, impossible to afford. However, my brother Ron was fortunate that he had a family that fought for him, provided for him, and advocated for him. What about those who do not? It saddens me to think that there are those Albertans who do not have the support that my brother did and who are facing this difficult journey without adequate care.

We have thousands of dedicated medical professionals in Alberta, but the system in which they operate is broken, and patching over the widening cracks with more money and tinkering will not fix the problem. Albertans who need long-term care shouldn’t have to fight for it tooth and nail. People like my brother Ron, who are terminally ill, shouldn’t have to spend their last days fighting for adequate health care.

My family and I miss my brother dearly. Ron would have been amazed and proud to know a Member of the Legislative Assembly. He would have been honoured to know that because of him I have chosen to serve the public in the best way that I can. I am saddened that he is not here today to stand by me, to encourage me, guide me, and watch his sister rise and speak in the Legislature, but his journey is my inspiration to fight for a better health care system for all Albertans, and his legacy will be the day when Albertans are able to access the best health care in the world, that's available when they need it.

We needn't look too far to see what happens when a government fails in its responsibilities to serve in the best interests of its citizens. Our role in representing this wonderful province is to ensure that we have balanced budgets, keep spending under control, and not let the government be all things to all people. Alberta must remain a destination of choice for families and businesses.

Madam Speaker, I am honoured to represent Innisfail-Sylvan Lake. The riding of Innisfail-Sylvan Lake has many unique features. The rural landscape boasts some of Alberta's best agricultural land and many of Alberta's most productive farmers. Rural Alberta needs a strong voice in the Legislature because it is dying a slow death. Farmers, ranchers, and landowners are facing rising input costs, erosion of landowner rights, and ever-increasing power bills. Our rural electrification associations are being dismantled. Producers are not able to stay in business, and there is no encouragement of young farmers in this industry. Our role as public servants is to ensure that Albertans are looked after. We must ensure the success of our agricultural industry because if we have no producers, simply, we have no food.

The Innisfail-Sylvan Lake riding is like many ridings in this great province. The aging of the population is creating challenges to ensure healthy and safe living options. Many hard-working, aging Albertans are living within limited means and cannot afford to heat their homes, pay their utilities, and are too proud to become a burden on their families. This retiring generation has toiled the fields of Alberta to ensure that we have success in the province that we see today. Our aging population needs to be respected, to be allowed to have dignity and choice.

Innisfail, like many communities, is facing such a problem. Their lodge needs to be updated if not replaced. The community has needs that have exceeded the options available. I will be a strong voice to ensure that the needs of our aged are being met in this province.

Sylvan Lake, like many communities, has many similar needs. However, there are two main priorities for the residents of the Innisfail-Sylvan Lake riding. Sylvan Lake's beauty is encouraging Albertans and Canadians to visit and enjoy the bounty of the lake. The town of 12,800 people boasts a stunning and popular lake and swells to the population of a small city in the summer.

The first priority for Sylvan Lake is an urgent care centre. Its need is strongly supported by the community and local physicians. This would also enable surrounding areas such as your own riding, Red Deer-North, and Red Deer-South to relieve the ever-increasing demands on the Red Deer regional health centre.

The second priority is the review and opening of the highway 781 and highway 11 intersection. The residents of Sylvan Lake have spoken out about decisions being made by the current government with no public input. The closure of this intersection was one such example. I have met with the Minister of Transportation, and I'm looking forward to his assistance and co-operation with me on this issue.

It is my commitment to work with the government on behalf of the people I represent and to see that these projects are fulfilled. I will not rest until this happens.

On April 23 over 440,000 Albertans voted for a new hope and a better alternative. They voted for Danielle Smith and the Wildrose – oh, sorry; I'm not allowed to say that – a party with new ideas that will put Albertans first. Our approach is clear and simple: prudent spending, saving for the future, genuine health reforms, support for our everyday, hard-working families, protections for seniors, and true accountability for all Albertans.

Over the next four years Wildrose will be offering a real conservative alternative. We will offer new ideas to the failed policies of the past. We will listen to Albertans rather than telling them what they should be, what they should do, or what they should say. We will shed the light of the day on those practices and policies which the government would prefer to keep hidden. We will promote an Alberta which walks tall in the global corridors of power. We will reject the notion that we cannot improve our public health care system and stare down those who believe that long waiting lists and crowded emergency rooms are intractable problems.

Madam Speaker, we will do what we have pledged to do from the very beginning. We will do something remarkable. Wildrose will put Albertans first each and every day in every community across this province. My colleagues and I are excited about the role Albertans have given us for the next four years. We will take seriously our role of holding government accountable on behalf of all Albertans. We will demonstrate that we are a government in waiting led by a Premier in waiting, and we will show Albertans that with Wildrose their interests will always be put first.

Hon. members, I extend my congratulations to each and every one of you. I realize that the next few years will be a challenge, but it will be an exciting challenge. I look forward to the promise of a more open and transparent government, co-operation amongst all parties for the betterment of all Albertans, and ensuring that every riding is treated fairly. I look forward to working with each and every one of the members of this fine House to help strengthen our communities, bring dignity to our elected members, and show all Canadians what a beautiful and hard-working province Alberta truly is.

Lastly but not least, I would like to say thank you to my husband, Brad, and my family. Their unwavering support, dedication, and strong belief in my abilities make me work harder every single day for the riding of Innisfail-Sylvan Lake. I look forward to the next four years.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, for a very passionate and touching speech. I'm very pleased to see that you caught yourself on using a formal name in the Legislature. We all have to remember that.

We do have Standing Order 29(2)(a).

We'll move on to our next speaker, and that is the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to address the Assembly for the first time and to reply to the first Speech from the Throne of the 28th Legislative Assembly of Alberta. I'd like to pause at this time, as the hon. member did, and thank His Honour the Honourable Donald Ethell, Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, for his distinguished service to Canada and Alberta in both the Canadian armed forces and as a tireless adviser and volunteer in our communities.

Madam Speaker, I'd like to also congratulate you on your election. Thank you for your service.

I'm mindful that at age 60 I'm one of the oldest new members here. Yet I cannot help but feel like a young child on Christmas morning. There are no words to express the feeling of joy that I am experiencing today. I would not be here at all except for the love and support of my wife, Janice, and my family. Janice is in the gallery today with my friends. Janice truly is a jewel in my life. My family are my touchstones.

My hope and prayer is that providence will guide me in my service here to do the things that are in the best interest of Alberta's families in all their many forms. When we consider a new piece of legislation, it is right and fitting that we ask ourselves: "Is this right for my family? Is it right for the families in my community?" I quote from the Speech from the Throne. "Albertans are looking to the future with new hope and confidence. They see a chance to build the best lives possible for themselves and their families, and they are ready to make the most of that opportunity." I share that confidence for my family and my province.

I owe a debt of gratitude to my neighbours in the community of Edmonton-Gold Bar. By working on my campaign and voting for me, they have honoured me by choosing me to represent them here. However, I am well aware that I received only a plurality of the vote and that I must earn the trust and respect of both those who voted for me and those who voted for the other fine candidates in my constituency. My goal is to serve all my constituents with honesty, integrity, and humility.

Edmonton-Gold Bar is special to me. I have lived virtually my entire life in southeast Edmonton. I was brought up there, raised a family there, built a business there, and will retire there. My community has been a central focus of my adult life.

Edmonton-Gold Bar includes in it the rich francophone culture of the Bonnie Doon area, with the U of A's Campus Saint-Jean, and the option of the young people in our area to attend King's University College. We have active community leagues engaged in good works in our neighbourhoods. The seniors in our area are active and busy people, many times finding themselves over at the South East Edmonton Seniors Association, SEESA.

The chance to work together with my friends as a basketball coach, as a Scout leader, the chance to serve God through my church, the chance to partner to build a community centre for our young people: these opportunities have impressed upon me the power of people working together towards a common goal and the satisfaction of achieving those goals together. Mostly, though, I'm grateful for knowing the people that I have served with in these endeavours. The people I now serve as their representative are my family, my friends, and my neighbours. Whatever other duties and responsibilities that may fall upon me, my paramount role is to bring their cares and concerns to this House. This I now pledge to do.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to being the representative of the people of Edmonton-Gold Bar, my modest hope is that my background as a certified management accountant, as a chartered accountant, as a graduate of the University of Alberta and the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology, as a businessperson and a community organizer, that those things can help me contribute to the good work of this institution. I look forward to working on government and legislative committees and helping to ensure that going forward we are truly serving the best interests of Albertans.

I dedicate myself to service while an MLA and invite all members to do likewise.

Mr. Speaker, in researching the maiden speeches of the many hon. members that have come to this House before me, I noticed that there was a scarcity of partisanship in their maiden speeches. I think many people come here to this House seeking to extol higher virtues in their first address to the House, knowing full well that there would be plenty of time later to mix it up with their political opponents.

However, democracy is about choices, and partisan democracy is about political choices. Recently our provincial electorate made a choice, and it took the country's breath away, quite frankly. The meaning of that choice will shape our province's future for years to come. To me the lesson of history in our recent election is clear. Those who seek office and look to the future retain the confidence of the people of this dynamic province.

As we heard from the throne speech, "the challenge of change demands a response. It requires leadership ready to strike the right balance between progressive and conservative thinking." I believe our government reflects that balanced thinking in its policies and governance. As the Lieutenant Governor so aptly recognized in his speech last week, our western spirit and heritage and entrepreneurial energy have always served us well. The unique pride, self-reliance, and fiscal conservatism that have made this province such a special place to live are as strong as they have ever been.

Our recent election was about the nature of our province and its politics. It surprised some people. When the dust settled, we found out some things. We found out that our Premier is progressive, our government is progressive, and our province is progressive. Upon reflection, the election results should not have been such a shock to so many. The one person who did not seem at all shocked was our Premier. That may explain why she is our Premier, for I think that she knows who she is, what our team is all about, and knows that Alberta is a progressive province and that these roots run deep here.

Alberta was a leader during the progressive era in enacting women's suffrage, workers' compensation, creating the Alberta Wheat Pool, and gaining control of our natural resources. During this time Irene Parlby of the UFA became the first female cabinet minister in Canada and was one of the five strong women, the Famous Five, who won the Persons Case, which was the historical base of gender equality in our country.

Mr. Speaker, in 1971 Premier Lougheed's government passed the Alberta Bill of Rights, increased the people's share of energy revenues, and built the roads and schools and hospitals needed by a growing province. The opposition said that the government spent too much and that it did not reflect the values of Albertans. In 1975 the electorate made their choice and sent that opposition to the ash heap of history.

Now we will, as the Speech from the Throne described, provide an accessible primary care system and give Albertans tools and guidance to take charge of their health, expand family care clinics, and expand the province's network of continuing care centres. This government is not driven to do things by a strident ideology but by the belief that this is what the people of Alberta want and that it's the right thing to do. Our challenge is to look to the future, to do the right things for our time, our place, and our people. Progressivism is to me, more than anything else, the political imperative to be forward thinking and to provide current solutions to current challenges.

Now, our province is diverse in many ways, including political thought. I'd prefer that as Members of the Legislative Assembly we welcome and accept that diversity, Mr. Speaker. Debate is healthy; division is not. My wish is that members of this House recognize that Alberta is that diverse and tolerant modern society. We have always been people who look to the future with hope and confidence. We are proud Canadians. This is the message our electorate sends in election after election. We can debate, we can disagree, but we should not go on looking to divide our province based upon a fundamental misconception of who we are.

Mr. Speaker, having sat in this House listening to the Speech from the Throne, it reminded me of my reason for coming to the House, to represent the values I believe I share with the majority of Albertans. I am a fiscal conservative and believe we should maintain our policy of low taxes and avoiding debt while building our savings when we can. I believe Alberta is a progressive society in that it affirms and promotes our diversity and respects our differences. Our social policy should be tolerant and respectful.

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne spoke to the need to simplify regulatory burden so that business will thrive and continue to drive our prosperity. I'm excited to assist with those initiatives, and I will work to discuss them with the many stakeholders.

Only an accountant could get excited about results-based budgeting, and I am. I heard from many residents of Edmonton-Gold Bar regarding the need to exercise fiscal discipline in the government, and I will be happy to report to them that that will be happening.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to take a minute to let this House know of some comments that I heard from the residents of Edmonton-Gold Bar this spring. Firstly, they know that Alberta is a prosperous province, leading the nation in jobs in our economy and in our country, a province that has low taxes, great opportunity, and no debt.

Secondly, they love our environment. I pledge to consider the environment in all the decisions that I make in this House.

Thirdly, my constituents know that they have a first-class educational system and a first-class health care system, and to that end I'd like to recognize and thank all those teachers and health care workers that work in this great province.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, as much as I am proud of my province, I am first and foremost a Canadian. To have the opportunity to come here today to serve my country by being a member of this House fills me with awe. I suspect that feeling will never leave me. I look forward to working with all members of this Assembly in the months ahead.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I now move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:47 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, May 30, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us pray. Almighty God and Creator of the Universe, grant that we the members of our province's Legislative Assembly fulfill our duties with honesty and integrity. May our first concern always be for the good of all our people, and let us be guided by these principles in our deliberations this day and always. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed an honour and a pleasure to introduce to this House a good friend of this Legislative Assembly, of this government, and definitely of the province of Alberta, Federal Republic of Germany Consul General Hermann Sitz, who is accompanied today by a well-known Edmontonian of German heritage, Mr. Bernd Reuscher, the honorary consul of the Federal Republic of Germany. As all members of this Assembly know, Germany is a very important partner not only to Canada but to Alberta economically, academically, and culturally. We are proud to have an Alberta office in Munich, Germany, as well. So any visit by any member of the consular corps of Germany is very welcome in this province. I would like to ask both the consul general and the honorary consul to rise and receive our gratitude and the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Herzlich willkommen in Alberta. Welcome.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 28 bright young grade 6 students from my constituency. That's Norwood elementary school in Wetaskiwin. They're accompanied today by their teacher, Marcie Hofbauer, and parents Laurie Dahl-Perras, Cindy Johnson, and Sherri Scolah. These young students are keenly interested in the operation of government. I'm very glad to have them here today, and I want to congratulate their teacher and parents for encouraging that interest. I hope they continue to have a great time here, and I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you 74 visitors from James Mowatt elementary school in Fort Saskatchewan. They are here as part of their grade 6 curriculum and have loved their experience here. They are accompanied today by their teachers, Miss Kristin Scott, Mrs. Barb Percy, Mr. Chris Bartsch, and Mrs. Trista Masterson, as well as one of their parents, Mr. Jon Duval. I would like to ask them to rise – they should be on both sides of the Assembly – and receive our greeting.

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Mr. Chris Bourdeau and Mr. Nolan Sawatzky. Chris is the assistant director of communications in Treasury Board and Finance, and he is accompanied by Nolan Sawatzky, who is a student in Grant MacEwan's public relations program. Nolan is currently serving as a communications intern in the Ministry of Treasury Board and Finance. They are seated in the members' gallery this afternoon, and I would ask that they rise and that we give them the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a group of 23 very bright, energetic, and photogenic students from Viking school who are visiting with us today. They are accompanied by their teacher and vice-principal, Mr. Philip Brick, teacher's aide Mrs. Wanda Lefsrud, and Mrs. Kim Beaumont. I met these students just a few minutes ago. They're enjoying their visit here to the Legislative Assembly. I would ask that other members of the Assembly join me and give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of this House two women who have been involved in promoting innovative education and life-long learning in the province. First, the president of the Public School Boards' Association of Alberta and a member of the board of trustees of Clearview public schools, Ms Patty Dittrick. Also, with Ms Dittrick is the executive director of the Public School Boards' Association of Alberta, Ms Mary Lynne Campbell. I would ask that Ms Dittrick and Ms Campbell rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To you and through you it is a great pleasure to introduce some very dear family friends. In politics we all know it takes sacrifice, and this family has given a great amount. For 28 straight days they lent me their father and their husband to manage my campaign, my successful campaign. I am grateful to them for this gift. Please help me welcome to the House today Porter, five; Paxton, three; and their mom, Tanya Cooper.

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Seniors.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly four guests that are seated here in the members' gallery. Neil Pierce, Julia Daniluck, Julie and Joshua Kelndorfer are here today in recognition of MS Awareness Month, which has occurred through the month of May. Neil serves as president of the MS Society of Alberta and is familiar to members of this Assembly for his contributions to the voluntary sector throughout Alberta. Julia was diagnosed with MS in the spring of 2002, and her team has raised almost half a million dollars since 2006. Julie serves as director of government and community relations for the MS Society of Alberta. Diagnosed with MS eight years ago, she is an active volunteer with the organization. Joshua is a student at Parkallen school and started a team in the Edmonton MS Walk in 2008 to raise money to find a cure for his mom. Since 2008 this young man has raised $50,000. I'd ask that these four great Albertans rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and honour to introduce to you and through you two of my fellow Rotarians, Bob Huff and Jyl Talsma. Jyl is the mother of one of our brave Afghanistan veterans. With them today we have a very special guest, Helene Quedens, the Lacombe Rotary Club's exchange student from Denmark. Please stand and be recognized and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly Marcel Seveny. Marcel is a student at MacEwan University completing a major in English. He's very interested in politics and eager to learn more about the political process here in Alberta. I would ask Marcel to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a group of guests from the Candora Society. The Candora Society is a nonprofit group which has worked with residents of northeast Edmonton for over 24 years. The society is based on a philosophy of participatory education, enabling people to give voice to their issues and to take a stand on what is important to them. By connecting people to each other, the Candora Society is promoting positive growth in the lives of women, children, and families in our community for free. I would now like to ask my guests to rise as I call their names and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: Susan Catlin, Ian Daly, Michelle Ackland, Colin Daly, Katrina Ungarian.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I introduced two members of the Farmworkers Union, and I neglected to mention that they're here on a dual purpose. The first indeed is the health and safety of farm workers in the province, with the absence of occupational health and safety, workers' compensation, and child labour standards, but they're really here also to highlight that farm operators are at tremendous risk, as has been highlighted by the federal minister through Bill C-45, the Westray bill, that places all farm operators at risk if they do not create the conditions for health and safety in their workplace. This is a mission that they have also shared with some in the House. I look forward to hearing more from them in the next couple of days, Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday a point of privilege was brought against the Justice minister for allegedly misleading this Assembly when he made the outrageous claim that the former Chief Electoral Officer asked the government to muzzle him from reporting any findings of illegal donations. Obviously, this statement lacks any logic. Honestly, why on earth would a person tasked with ensuring democratic transparency ask to be muzzled from disclosing publicly illegal deeds that undermine our democracy?

That the minister's statement is also flat-out untrue was made clear by none other than the current CEO, who, when asked by a reporter late yesterday if the former CEO had requested the law to be changed so that findings of illegal donations could be kept secret, said through his spokesperson: "that was not the recommendation of the CEO."

The facts are now very clear. First, the former CEO, Lorne Gibson, did not recommend that findings of illegal donations be kept from the public. Untrue. Second, this Premier, while Justice minister, authored legislation that muzzles the CEO from reporting findings of illegal donations. Third, there have been dozens of findings of illegal donations by Elections Alberta, and as far as anyone can find out, the PC Party is involved in every single one of them.

On behalf of Albertans the Wildrose demands the following. First, the Minister of Justice and Premier should retract their past statements to this House that the CEO asked to be muzzled. It wasn't true. Second, the Minister of Justice should immediately table legislation this fall retracting this order and make it retroactive so all illegal donations found by the CEO thus far can be reported. Lastly, the PC Party must pay back every cent that was illegally donated to them and apologize to Albertans. Anything short of fulfilling these demands will show this Premier has no intention of changing the culture of corruption and secrecy that has existed for far too long in the halls of Alberta's Legislature.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Parliamentary Reform

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. After swearing in her cabinet, the Premier remarked that she wanted to change the role of the Legislature and to craft more policy with all parties, saying: we'll let everyone talk about policy and stop talking about politics. Well, the Premier declaring that she will let us talk about policy suggests that she hasn't fully grasped the role of the opposition in our system.

We believe strongly that effective opposition is a necessary safeguard for Albertans. The work of the opposition in holding the government's feet to the fire and demanding that they be accountable to the electorate is indispensable to a functioning democracy. Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms says that question period relies on the willingness of cabinet "to submit its conduct of public affairs to the scrutiny of the Opposition on a regular basis." It also recommends that the "respect for the rights of the minority, which precludes a Government from using to excess the extensive powers that it has to limit debate," is critical.

Question period is the most important opportunity for the opposition to speak directly to cabinet about their decisions. In Alberta, however, question period is often a venue for government private members to ask the cabinet to read a news release from the department in the Legislature. It's a waste of the Assembly's time, Mr. Speaker. I want to invite the Premier to think about the purpose of question period and to work with the opposition to craft a new role.

As we saw last week, the government has resisted working cooperatively with the opposition. Lack of communication with House leaders on Bill 1 and a refusal to allow an opposition presence in the media room for the Premier's news conferences is troubling. The Premier talks about a better relationship with the opposition while effectively ignoring the members on the other side of the floor. The Premier's repeated decisions to hold news conferences in the cabinet room – and there's another one later today, Mr. Speaker – blocks any opposition presence from those news conferences and prevents us from doing our job.

While the Premier has talked about making changes about how the Legislature functions, so far she has not taken the opportunity to consult with the opposition. That needs to change.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Multiple Sclerosis Awareness Month

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I wish to speak about Multiple Sclerosis Awareness Month. MS can occur at any age but is usually diagnosed between the ages of 15 and 40. It is an unpredictable, often disabling disease of the central nervous system. Symptoms can range from blurred vision, speech, bladder, and bowel problems to partial or complete paralysis.

With about 11,000 Albertans living with MS, including my friends Jan and Larry, finding safe and effective treatments for this disease is a priority for the Alberta government. This government will continue to support the work being done to find a cure for the disease. We are moving forward with Alberta's three-year observational study on CCSVI. That's chronic cerebrospinal venous insufficiency. Currently there are close to 1,000 participants enrolled in the study. The information gathered will provide important data in the near term to support the efforts of other investigators working to find a cure.

We also support the dynamic work of the MS Society as it continues to provide a wide variety of services and programs to Albertans affected by MS. The society is also the largest funder of MS research in Canada.

To support these programs there are several fundraising events each year. Recently there were walkathons in Grande Prairie, Red Deer, Fort McMurray, Drumheller, St. Paul-Lakeland, Medicine Hat, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Lloydminster, and St. Albert. You can still participate in walkathons being held in Calgary and Brooks this upcoming weekend. During the weekend of June 9 to 10 MS bike tours will take place around the province.

I encourage Albertans to learn about the many ways to get involved in helping to find a cure for MS. Jan, Larry, and others say thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Emergency Services Workers

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to acknowledge the vital work of our emergency services personnel. This summer will be like many other summers we've all enjoyed over the years. Albertans will barbecue. They will gather at family functions. Our children will engage in summer activities like swimming, biking, and soccer. For most of us it will be a typical glorious, sunny summer. But for some Albertans it will be a trying summer, a summer that will test the human spirit, a summer that will challenge the strength of family support networks. Like all other summers, our forests will be at risk of wildfires, our farms will experience drought, and our homes may flood.

All Albertans, whether we know it or not, rely on a network of emergency services personnel that is always keeping watch. We depend on these brave men and women to survey the risks, to make hard, split-second decisions, and to protect Albertans and our property from disaster. Our paramedics, policemen, firefighters, emergency dispatch, and emergency management personnel never have a typical summer. They always remain committed and always put the safety of Albertans first, tirelessly working away in the background.

I would like to acknowledge the search and rescue teams, emergency medical services, policemen, firefighters, emergency dispatch, and our Provincial Operations Centre. Thank you for ensuring our peace of mind, knowing that you're there to protect our communities, save lives, and mitigate damage to our properties. Know that the members of this Assembly and the citizens of Alberta appreciate the work that you do for us. Thank you again for your commitment to Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Premier's Attendance at Bilderberg Conference

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Tomorrow federal NDP leader Thomas Mulcair will be in Alberta, a golden opportunity for the Premier to meet face to face with the man who's appointed himself Alberta's number one enemy and dispel the myths he believes about our oil sands. But, instead, the Premier will be hobnobbing behind closed doors, away from the accountability of journalists and the public, at the invite-only Bilderberg conference in Virginia and sticking taxpayers with a $19,000 tab. Where are this Premier's priorities? Is it to stand here in Alberta and defend our most important industry from bullies like Thomas Mulcair, or is it to attend secret cocktail parties on the taxpayer dime and let the bully have open season? To the Premier.

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to be able to be attending a conference in Washington made up of international leaders who are making decisions and are involved in decisions that affect the Canadian economy and the oil sands. You know, what's tremendously interesting to me is that this hon. member, before she was an hon. member, criticized the former Premier for rushing back to Alberta to try to convince someone who was never going to change their mind about the oil sands to change their mind. My job and the job of our cabinet is to advance Alberta's interests, to support the oil sands, and that's what I and the Deputy Premier will be doing tomorrow.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Smith: I hope the Premier knows that there's a big difference between a movie director and the official leader of the federal opposition.

Given the exclusive and secret nature of the Bilderberg conference, given that no reporting of this conference is allowed, and given that Bilderberg's own website states that "no resolutions are proposed, no votes [are] taken, and no policy statements [are] issued” at the conferences, will the Premier tell us what possible justification or actual value there is for this $19,000 taxpayer-funded trip?

Ms Redford: I’ll tell you that I have a pretty good sense of what the role of the Leader of the Opposition is, and I’ll tell you that I think it’s to support Alberta initiatives that matter for the future of this province in a constructive way. One of the ways that we yesterday had tremendous opportunity to speak about advancing Alberta’s interests was through the Western Premiers’ Conference, to get support from western Premiers with respect to a Canadian energy strategy, at the very moment that this Leader of the Opposition was standing in the House saying that it wouldn’t happen, it shouldn’t happen, and it couldn’t happen. And, Mr. Speaker, it did.

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since she’s dodged the question a couple of times, I’m going to try it one more time. Given that B.C. Premier Gordon Campbell attended Bilderberg in 2010 and the province’s Conflict of Interest Commissioner was called in to investigate and given the secretive nature of the Bilderberg meetings and the matters discussed and given that the only way to get into Bilderberg is by secret invitation, how can Alberta taxpayers know that they are getting something that actually advances our interests and not just personal networking opportunities for the Premier?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I don’t understand what the Leader of the Opposition’s definition of secret is. At 4 o’clock yesterday we issued a press release. We’re standing in the House today talking about this. I’ll tell you that we’re going to talk about Alberta’s interests. I’m very happy to continue to talk about it after this conference is over because I’ll tell you that everything that we need to do as the government of Alberta is to ensure that opinion-makers around the world understand who we are, what we do, why, and how we do it to advance Alberta’s interests and our economy.

Committee Compensation Repayments

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the spirit of openness and transparency, only after Albertans expressed outrage about MLAs accepting cash for the no-meet committee did the Premier promise that all PC MLAs would pay back all the money they received or, I quote: any MLAs who do not will not have a place in my caucus. Wildrose MLAs have shown leadership by paying back the funds. Not the PCs. Unbelievably, MLAs are sitting in the PC caucus while still owing money to taxpayers for work they did not do. Will the Premier show that she’s kept her election promises and . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we have been in extensive discussions with every member of this caucus with respect to this issue, and I can stand here and proudly say that every single member of our caucus has made arrangements and has already started to pay back that money. We know full well that it will be completed because it is the right thing to do.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, given that the PCs have not made this information public – the Wildrose has demonstrated leadership by once again providing proof, which I’ll table also later today, that its members did the right thing and returned all funds owing – we challenge, no, we demand, on behalf of Albertans: will the PCs who sit here today in government give the money back before the Legislature rises for the summer?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we made a commitment during the election. We are keeping our commitment during the election. In fact, my understanding is that there are even people who were in this Progressive Conservative caucus who were not re-elected who paid back the money, which was not the case on the other side.

Mr. Anderson: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Member for Airdrie, you’re rising on a point of order? Noted.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, as you know, the Premier is incorrect, and I’ll allow for my MLA to be able to correct her afterwards.

The Premier promised accountability, and she promised Albertans that every MLA would repay the no-meet money or they would not sit in her caucus. Voters have a right to know that that has happened. If the Premier will not table proof that all the funds have been repaid, will she keep her word and kick out the members of her caucus who have not repaid the money?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, if that is the case, I make that commitment.

The Speaker: Just before we go to the third main question. The chair is having some difficulty hearing the debate and the questions. I wish we could just tone it down a little bit, please. Otherwise, I will bypass you and go to the next member.

The hon. opposition leader.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Premier: now that, and with much gratitude, we have the official confirmation from the Chief Electoral Officer’s office that the information about proven illegal donations should be made public, should not be kept secret, can we have an end to this shameless cover-up? Will the Premier give her blessing to the Chief Electoral Officer to release, number one, the names of the offenders; number two, the party that they have donated to; and, number three, the penalty that they’ve received?

Ms Redford: As we’ve said many times in this House, we have Elections Alberta that is run by a Chief Electoral Officer, who – I will use the word again – is “independent” from this Legislature. Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to tell the Chief Electoral Officer what to do or to give my blessing to anything he may or may not choose to do. I think that shows incredible contempt for the office and the independence of the office of the Chief Electoral Officer.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, given that, will the Premier at least then give her blessing to the Chief Electoral Officer to release the dollar figure amounts of those donations given to her own PC Party and give this Legislature and all Albertans her commitment to return every single last cent of illegal donations given to her PC Party?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the first part of that question was the same as the first one. It is not for me to bless the Chief Electoral Officer, and I think it's incredible that the Leader of the Opposition would think that as a politician she had a right to do that. In terms of whether or not the Progressive Conservative Party has received any illegal donations, the party has spoken to that matter. That is not the case. The investigations continue, as I understand it, for a number of political parties.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: I will take this opportunity to again remind members that government is accountable for its own policies, its own programs, its own services, and its budgets. It is not accountable for a party, and neither are you in that respect.

So let's move on, please.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties (continued)

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier felt it necessary in this new Legislature to introduce a new Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation. Will she direct him to make it his first undertaking to review the report of former Chief Electoral Officer Lorne Gibson and develop a plan to implement his recommendations to ensure fair and transparent elections for the future of this province?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, it was quite interesting for us – and the hon. Member for Airdrie was a part of the Progressive Conservative caucus when we went through this – to undertake an extensive review of the recommendations from the Chief Electoral Officer the last time that we reviewed the Election Act. What we have said is that as part of the work of the new associate minister of transparency he will be reviewing the suite of legislation that deals with conflict of interest, with political fundraising, and with elections. Now, on top of that, I believe that there was a letter tabled in this Legislature yesterday where the Minister of Justice went above and beyond and specifically solicited advice from the Chief Electoral Officer as to whether there were any changes he would like to see.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton Centre.

2:00 Municipal Funding

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. There are several issues around municipal funding that this government has failed to address. Now, this government rages against the feds for taking more of Albertans' money than it gives back in equalization payments, yet it happily does exactly the same thing to Edmonton and Calgary. To the Premier: why do Edmonton and Calgary only get back pennies on the dollar for all the different taxes they pay? Calgary gets 8 cents back; Edmonton gets 6 cents back. [interjections] Oh, that seems to have distressed her. I'm sorry.

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, I'd be curious where the hon. member would be getting her information from. I have heard arguments presented by different members of the AUMA that they don't get the same value for the dollar, but they're talking about, specifically, dollars that go to municipalities. The same arguments have been made in rural Alberta. The argument we always make is that whether it's a municipal government or a provincial government or a federal government, we all serve the same clients, and all the dollars go back to every community to provide the services that Albertans need.

Ms Blakeman: With respect, the point that they're making is that they don't get that money back.

On to the next question. Why is the principle of stable, predictable three-year funding available only when applied to the MSI, the municipal sustainability initiative, and not to the 22 other grants that come from the province to the municipalities?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, that's not the case at all. We have said from day one that we wanted to secure stable funding for municipalities. It applies to all of the grant programs that we run through so that municipalities know what they have, what they can count on. MSI is the major portion of that funding because it makes up almost a billion of the $2 billion that goes to the municipalities, but the commitment is the same for all of those programs.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. Well, let's stay on MSI, then. How is the government going to implement its new commitment to increase MSI grants to $1.6 billion a year by 2014 when it still hasn't delivered on its two-year-old promise to increase MSI funding to $1.4 billion a year, especially given that all you managed to do last year was $896 million? How are you going to do this?

Mr. Griffiths: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've been very clear from the beginning that we plan on – for 10 years the program was $11.3 billion sent to municipalities. It was going to increase every year. Because of a global economic downturn it was difficult for the province to meet all of those obligations and targets. To get to the $11.3 billion by 2017, we would have to approach $1.6 billion. As we go through year-over-year fiscal plans, we're going to continue to try and meet that obligation and that promise that we made to municipalities five years ago.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the NDP opposition.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties (continued)

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just yesterday the Solicitor General claimed that legislation which allows this government to hide illegal donations made to the PC Party was introduced on the recommendation of the previous Chief Electoral Officer, but the Chief Electoral Officer says that only investigations were to be in private, not conclusions. The Chief Electoral Officer says that the Justice minister isn't telling the truth. To the Justice minister: are you telling the truth?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, proceed if you wish.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to get into points of order here as I like this hon. member.

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order, are you rising to answer the question, or both?

Mr. Denis: I don't want to get into a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I'm prepared to answer the question.

The Speaker: The hon. leader, then.

Mr. Mason: He says that he's prepared to answer the question, but then he sits down. Mr. Speaker, it's a simple question.

This one to the Deputy Premier: when you said that changes to legislation that keep the results of investigations into illegal donations secret were introduced on the recommendation of the Chief Electoral Officer, were you telling the truth?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I take objection to anyone in this House suggesting that I may not have been telling the truth at any point in time.

The member of the fourth party would be well served to research the legislation. Number one, there are two acts at play. One is the Election Act; the other one is the election finances act. Any monetary contributions to campaigns are made under the election finances act. I would invite him to read that act because there's only one little section on investigations. There's nothing in that act, in my opinion, that precludes the Chief Electoral Officer from releasing information, and if he chooses to do so, he's welcome to do it. He's independent. He needs no permission from this government.

Mr. Mason: He clearly believes otherwise, Mr. Speaker, and this government is involved in a premeditated cover-up.

To the Deputy Premier: will this government do the open and transparent thing, do the right thing, and write to the Progressive Conservative Party to demand that they voluntarily release details of the illegal donations that they have so willingly accepted in violation of the laws of this province?

Speaker's Ruling

Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. member, I've just reminded a couple of previous speakers about that fine line. If you have a question that pertains to one of the officers that serve this Legislature independently or otherwise, that's a fair question. But we're treading on a very delicate piece of turf here.

Deputy Premier, I'll recognize you to respond if you wish.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Mr. Lukaszuk: To restate the obvious, if the Chief Electoral Officer chooses to release information, he's privileged to do so as per the independence of his office. Nothing, in my opinion, in the legislation prevents him from doing that.

But let me remind you, Mr. Speaker, that, yes, the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta has publicly stated that it has been investigated, that there were some irregularities, and that money has been paid back. But there are other parties in this Chamber that have been investigated, and I wonder who they are.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have new information in my hand that shows that this government is allowing the PC Party to stuff their coffers with illegal donations, but there's a twist. This document shows the Premier's own riding association took $1,800 in illegal donations from Mount Royal University in 2008, with the PC Party collecting $2,000 more. To the Minister of Justice: will the government commit today to amending the legislation to bring all violations to light?

The Speaker: Well, again we're treading on that fine line. This may be the last question that we allow in that vein. You might want to rephrase the next ones.

Hon. Deputy Premier, if you wish.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, less than one week, and we're racing to the bottom.

But let me try to address that. If this member feels that he has information, for the benefit of the fact that he's a new member, first, table that information in this House, and (b) file it with the Chief Electoral Officer, who will, again, investigate it and report it if he feels it's appropriate to do so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will definitely table this document later.

Given the Premier made a funding announcement to Mount Royal right before the election and then during the election the Premier's picture appeared on the cover of their alumni magazine together with a puff piece, is it fair to say that Albertans should be concerned about this obvious unethical conflict of interest?

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Speaker: On a point of order? Thank you.

Hon. member, third question.

Mr. Saskiw: Given that the Premier herself is at the core of the problem by passing a law that makes convicted political parties unaccountable to Albertans and now that her own riding has accepted illegal donations, how can Albertans believe that the Premier . . .

The Speaker: The Government House Leader has risen on another point of order?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Noted.

The Deputy Premier to answer.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I will speak to it. As a member of this House and as a member of the bar, being a lawyer, this member should know two things. Number one, he is making suggestions that the Premier has done something illegal, yet he hasn't even tabled the document, nor has he given the privilege to the Chief Electoral Officer to investigate it.

Mr. Anderson: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Point of order noted.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Second of all, the member knows very well, Mr. Speaker, that there is a process by which allegations can be investigated. He should utilize that process. This is not the way we resolve issues in this House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Highways 628 and 779

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Secondary highways 628 and 779 are major arteries in Stony Plain and through Parkland county. For over 12 years the town has implored the Ministry of Transportation to make much-needed upgrades to these roads, but as of yet little has been done. In fact, some of my constituents refer to 628 as a goat trail. To the Minister of Transportation: what is the provincial standard for when secondary highways such as highways 628 and 779 should be upgraded?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, to the hon. member I would say that we don't consider any highways secondary. They're all provincial highways, and upgrades are done according to overall provincial priorities and available funding. Factors that determine that funding are traffic volumes, safety records, new developments, economic activity, and condition of the infrastructure. All those are matters along with the priorities of the day.

Mr. Lemke: My constituents will be delighted to hear that this is a primary highway.

First supplementary question to the same minister: given that the people of Stony Plain have seen irregular and inconsistent upgrades to these roads for over a decade with no date in sight, when will the government commit to making these repairs to ensure the safety of the people of my constituency?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The initial construction work has actually begun on highway 779 by Alberta Transportation. Utility work was completed by the town of Stony Plain in 2011. My department is moving forward with the engineering, land acquisition, driveway relocations, and railway crossings for the reconstruction of highway 779, and this work will need to be completed before the construction begins. Although the construction of highway 779 will take more time, we remain committed to completing the work.

I'm out of time, unfortunately. I'll talk to the member after on more details.

Mr. Lemke: Second supplementary question, again to the same minister: given that in 2009 Alberta Transportation added highway 779 upgrades to its three-year plan only to remove them again in 2012 after the town of Stony Plain had spent over $3 million in infrastructure to prepare for the new road, will Alberta Transportation add these important improvements back into the three-year plan and follow through with their commitment to the town of Stony Plain?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No committed projects were cancelled, but they were moved back to meet our funding envelope. Transportation's overall budget for 2012-2013 is $3.3 billion, of which $1.95 billion is for program expense, and $1.38 billion is for capital investment. As I said, some projects were deferred. Our total capital infrastructure program is still 38 per cent higher than the average of provinces in Canada at $1,493 as opposed to $1,081. To the hon. member: we understand it's a priority, and as the funding becomes available, we will get that job done.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

National Energy Strategy

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wildrose stands for defending Alberta's interests and standing up for our resource development. In contrast, the Premier prefers talking about her pet project, a vague national energy strategy, instead of getting results. Alberta needs concrete action to support the energy sector, not airy-fairy ideas that the Premier said that have little substance. We need pipelines to the west coast, to the U.S., and should support a west-to-east pipeline to diversify our markets, to get full value for our product, and to create jobs. Why did this Premier not focus on pipelines rather than pipe dreams at the Western Premiers' Conference?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, to refer to a Canadian energy strategy as airy-fairy is really not understanding the importance of this industry to this province and to this country. As a matter of fact, this initiative is supported by four western Premiers and by territorial Premiers. I don't think there is anything airy-fairy about it. As a matter of fact, this is leadership showing that as western provinces and, frankly, all of Canada we believe in responsible extraction of our natural resources.

Mr. Hale: The B.C. Premier wasn't even there.

Given that yesterday the Premier met with our western partners and once again touted this empty national energy strategy with no detail, no timeline, no deliveries, can the Premier tell us her national energy strategy with concrete details, or is she just going to keep having conversations? It's time to put some meat on the bone.

Mr. Dallas: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier commented yesterday that this is a discussion, and clearly there was consensus among western Premiers. The Premier has a Canadian energy strategy on the agenda for the national discussion coming up, and there are plenty of opportunities to flesh out details on this, build consensus, make sure that all provinces understand and buy in to the benefits of a Canadian energy strategy.

Mr. Hale: Given that we have seen federal leaders defame our resource development, pitting other provinces against us, will the Premier consider the Saskatchewan Premier for the job of Alberta's new ambassador to Ottawa to defend our interests because our Premier is missing in action?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I think no Premier in Canada has done a better job of articulating and advancing and promoting the interests of Alberta as a place of tremendous opportunity, opportunity not just for Albertans but opportunity for all Canadians.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This spring postsecondary students in Quebec have participated in a series of demonstrations, protests, and started a province-wide student strike about the cost of tuition. Government and student groups are at odds over the issue. The unrest has even turned violent, and the Quebec government has created legislation to force an end to the strike. My first question is to the Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education. Student groups in our province have staged protests in the past and most recently supported Quebec's students with a rally in Edmonton. What is preventing a full-scale student strike in Alberta?

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to address my colleagues for the first time in this House. There are a number of reasons why this government has a strong relationship with Alberta students and postsecondary stakeholders overall. Like my predecessors, I look forward to meeting with student groups and other stakeholders to hear directly from them on issues such as tuition or any other issues they wish to speak of. I believe most students understand that this government has ensured that postsecondaries have stable three-year funding and that the rates of tuition are capped at CPI. Alberta is a leader in Canada for scholarships and bursaries, and we will continue to provide this access to education for all Albertans.

Ms Kubinec: Mr. Speaker, my second question is also to the Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education. Institutions talk about rising costs of their own and how those costs have been passed on down to the student. Is this minister planning to allow the postsecondaries to introduce more market modifiers to help institutions who are finding it hard to cover their costs?

Mr. Khan: Mr. Speaker, Albertan tuition costs are in line with the national average, and tuition fee regulation is keeping tuition increases at a manageable level. As a one-time initiative market modifiers were introduced on a select number of programs because anomalies existed when the current tuition fee was implemented. The six modifiers were necessary at the time and effective in making these programs more competitive with similar programs outside the province. We continually monitor the cost of delivery and the costs associated with being a student; however, there are no plans to reintroduce market modifiers at this time.

Ms Kubinec: My final question is to the same minister. Tuition is only a part of the equation. What is this minister doing to control noninstructional fees, and is it the time now to develop a regulation around these fees?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Students need to know that any new fees have to add value to their education. I do not believe that to achieve this, we need to make any regulation changes or develop entirely new sets of regulations. We've asked all Campus Alberta institutions to develop formal policies around these fees with formal consultation with student groups. My predecessors have done an excellent job in this area, including student groups as stakeholders in the purview of the provincial tuition rises. Students and taxpayers and Albertans understand that the government of Alberta currently subsidizes 75 per cent of the cost of postsecondary education.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the Member from Edmonton-Calder.

Twinning of Highway 63

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We've been building roads for a hundred years in this province, so it should be fairly easy to complete the twinning of highway 63, but the trouble is that this government has now run five consecutive deficits, the heritage fund is worth less than it was in 1976, and the coffers are bare. Today as it stands, we are spending all our resource revenues on things we use today. To the Minister of Transportation: can you please confirm with me that we're not actually going to dip into the heritage savings trust fund to pay for this road?

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I have made clear in the House the last two days in a row, in the next budget there's $450 million over the next three years to build the first hundred kilometres of this road. As the hon. member also knows, we'll be coming forward with a report at about the end of June on plans to further that. We have committed that we will twin the entire road, and the financing for that will be announced in due course. I would say that there's no plan to dip into the heritage fund at this time, that I'm aware of. We will make the announcement at the appropriate time.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Hehr: Well, given that this government is unwilling to ask citizens to pay for things they use, like roads, through taxation, will you commit to paying for highway 63 through a toll instead of on the backs of future generations?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for the question. As we said, I am working with my ministerial staff and the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. Between us we are getting a wide variety of opinions on ways to pay for this road, and amongst those discussions will be tolls. There is no commitment to charge tolls or not to, and in the fullness of time we will bring that report to the House, and all will be revealed when the decision is made. I thank the hon. member for suggesting tolls as one of the options.

Mr. Hehr: The reason I suggest tolls is because you have a fiscal deficit because you spend the oil money as soon as it comes in. So there's only one way to do it, either raise taxation or build a toll. You won't tax people. Will you commit to paying for building this road through a toll?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that I couldn't hear a question there, I will do my best to respond anyway. As we've made very clear, our government is committed to looking at all of the options, and after we have that fulsome discussion and we get some informed advice, we will make the best decision that we can on behalf of all Albertans. When we make that decision, we will share it with all Albertans. I look forward to that, and I hope the hon. member will be paying attention when that happens.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Special-needs Education Funding

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. This PC government is supposed to be funding school boards so that they can properly support students with special needs. However, the Edmonton public school board recently reported that it has been forced to increase special-needs funding by $21.8 million, or about 31 per cent. Even with the modest pre-election announcement for special ed here the funding gap is huge. Why is the provincial government forcing school boards to carry this funding shortfall, which ultimately results in shortchanging every student in public education?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this particular member wasn't in this House when the budget was debated, so let me share some good news with him. For our first time in the history of this province we have passed a three-year budget for education, which is growing from $6.8 billion to $7.1 billion over three years, which roughly is at $34 million per school day. Funding for inclusive education has grown by $68 million, which is equivalent to 22 per cent. Now, if my memory is correct, the funding for special education for the Edmonton public school board has grown from $36 million to $52 million, a very significant increase.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, the funding for special needs has been flat and has been increasing dramatically for not just Edmonton public but other school boards as well. You know, the question is whether we can fund or not fund moderate special-needs programs in our schools because of the discrepancy that was allocated for special ed. What was spent in Edmonton public was between $45 million and $60 million in the last four years. So numbers are fine, but the facts on the ground speak differently.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Lukaszuk: I'm not sure if there was a question, so I will take the liberty of telling him, Mr. Speaker, that an increase of 22 per cent is hardly flat. It's quite a significant increase. The Edmonton public school board is receiving additional funding. Their funding for special needs is growing from $36 million to that of $52 million, quite a significant increase. There is nothing flat about that. So a 22 per cent increase for special funding and an increase of $6.8 billion to $7.2 billion: that's a great investment in education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd be glad to table the report that we have from Edmonton public that demonstrates that we're only getting about a third of the funding that is required to meet the special-needs education in Edmonton public schools. Will the minister commit and consult to ensure that special-needs students get the support that they need without jeopardizing the quality of education for all Alberta students? The discrepancy is there. It's on the paper.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, nothing needs to be tabled. The budget has been debated and passed in this House and is a public document. Spending on education is growing, I say one more time, from $6.8 billion to $7.1 billion. That is very significant. It is predictable. It's a three-year budget. It is good news for Alberta education. Alberta students are getting one of the best education systems in the world, and that particular school board is getting a significant increase as well.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, people are fearful to drive highway 63 to Fort McMurray. Five years ago I was taking a group of baseball players there from Medicine Hat. Unbelievably, it took several meetings with our parents to convince them to go. This was a trip in our own province, and parents felt their boys would be unsafe. This fear is keeping people away from Fort McMurray and costing thousands in economic opportunities in tourism. Wildrose stands for economic development. To the Minister of Transportation:

how can he feel it's appropriate to drag this project out when every day it's risking lives and costing Fort McMurray thousands?

Mr. McIver: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would say to the hon. member that asked the question that he should do what I did and drive up that road right now, and he would see there is lots of equipment moving, lots of work under way, lots of road construction going on. This government is taking action. This government has in the next three years' budget $450 million. There's already been a hundred kilometres of trees and brush cleared. I would say to the hon. member: those trees didn't cut themselves down; the workers under this government did. We will continue to do that work until that highway is twinned because we are taking action on highway 63.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, I took this trip in 2007, and the promise was already a year old. It's my understanding that only somewhere between 19 and 50 kilometres have been completed. Can you explain that in action, please?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The actions taking place are that there's already about a billion dollars in roads, bridges, and other construction in and around Fort McMurray, either complete or well under way today.

Again I would repeat for the hon. member: there's another first hundred kilometres of road that will be completed three years from now. It's already in the budget. Nothing else needs to be done. I would remind the hon. member that we are working with the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo to put together a plan to speed up the northern part of the road. That's nothing but action. The hon. member asked for it. The hon. member actually already has it.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, given that this government has a track record of cherry-picking recommendations, why did you not just listen to the residents of Fort McMurray?

Mr. McIver: Actually, Mr. Speaker, I think I just pointed out that I was up there listening to the residents, talking to the mayor of Fort McMurray and other people. I would remind the speaker that the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo is a resident. We're certainly listening to him.

Mr. Speaker, I think Albertans and people from Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo would be glad about who they chose in the election because the other party's recommendation was to cut our expenditures on infrastructure back by 25 per cent for four years in a row. That would leave those people waiting a lot longer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, followed by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Emergency Medical Services

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During the recent campaign there were many comments made to me about the EMS service. Constituents provided a variety of comments about ways to improve that. My question is to the Minister of Health. I understand you have asked the Health Quality Council of Alberta to undertake a review of EMS services. This review comes nearly three years after EMS has transitioned under Alberta Health Services. With all these issues around ambulance response times why has it taken nearly three years to call this review?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for the question. The government announced the review in February, following the receipt of the Health Quality Council of Alberta report that looked into a number of health care related issues. Emergency medical services was one of those issues. One thing I'd want to make very clear is that while this review will deal with a number of the issues the hon. member mentions, it will not change the government's policy decision that EMS is health care and belongs as part of the health care system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Fenske: Thank you. To the same minister: could you provide us with a progress report or an update of some kind on this project?

Mr. Horne: I'm very happy to do that, Mr. Speaker. The review is expected to be completed in October. It will be a public report. It will be issued by the Health Quality Council directly. It will examine a number of the issues around transition that have been raised in this House and elsewhere, things such as dispatch consolidation, challenges specifically related to the integration of fire and EMS services in some parts of the province, and the availability and adequacy of data on EMS.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Fenske: Thank you. My question for the same minister: what are the remaining opportunities for the general public, for emergency response providers, and for municipalities to participate in this review?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, that question would be best directed to the Health Quality Council as they're conducting the review. But I can inform the member and the House that a number of key stakeholders have been identified who, I believe, have approached the Health Quality Council and may have been in fact engaged. Those include Alberta Health Services, of course, the Firefighters Association, the Association of Chiefs of Police, the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, and the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties. Those organizations as well as community organizations and members of the general public are all welcome to contact the Health Quality Council in this regard.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Family Care Clinics

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, when asked about the government's big plan for family care clinics, the Minister of Health, not surprisingly, failed to answer the questions. When asked how the government will pay to build and operate 140 of these new clinics, the Health minister shook off the question, saying that he does not "preoccupy himself with questions of infrastructure." Well, Albertans want to know where the money is coming from. Again to the Health minister: how are you going to pay to build, staff, and operate 140 new state-run clinics?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the response I gave yesterday in answer to the question yesterday was a reflection of the fact that members opposite do not seem to understand that the commitment of this government is to offer primary health care teams to every Albertan in or near their home community across the province.

While others may wish to be preoccupied with discussions about buildings and budget – and those will be addressed in due course – I want to remind this House that both family care clinics and primary care networks are going to be the vehicles that we use to deliver on this commitment. There's $75 million that was earmarked in Budget 2012 for primary care. There are many, many clinics and organizations across the province that are already delivering primary care services, and many of those will have a role in delivering on this commitment.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I find it hard to believe that with 140 new clinics there was no plan, no costing whatsoever. Nobody disputes that we need to add primary care for Albertans. The concern is that you won't be adding capacity at all, only further centralizing the system, as you did with the superboard.

Again to the Health minister: can you explain how many of these state-run clinics will be additional capacity and how many will merely replace what we already have, like what happened in Calgary with the Mosaic primary care network?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, as I said yesterday, we are not going to take a cookie-cutter approach to this exercise. We have tremendous resources, a great portion of my budget invested in primary health care delivery currently across the province. The question is how to use those resources and additional resources which we will allocate to them to expand the availability of care to all Albertans. That includes the services of family physicians, but as I said before, it includes the services of other professionals such as nurse practitioners, who have a greater role to play in delivering these critical services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Health minister doesn't want to preoccupy himself with matters of infrastructure, I will ask the Minister of Infrastructure. Minister, where are the other 137 state-run clinics going to be, and where are you going to find the money to build them?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're working on that in consultation with Health. I don't know about state run. There will be no state-run facilities in this province. We'll be discussing that with my colleagues in putting together the funding necessary to do this.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I understand the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie is scheduled to go next, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Edmonton Folk Music Festival

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Edmonton Folk Music Festival is one of the most successful folk music festivals in North America. From humble roots in 1980 this festival has grown to an annual attendance of approximately 85,000 and attracts some of the biggest and best local, national, and international musicians. Despite its proven success the government seems to undervalue the festival by not providing it with the financial support it needs and deserves. My first question to the Minister of Culture: what kind of financial support is available to the Edmonton Folk Music Festival?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for that question. Indeed, the Edmonton folk festival is one of the most impressive festivals that takes place this summer in Festival City, in Edmonton. Currently the festival is eligible for funding under the Alberta Foundation for the Arts through the arts presenting grant and as well through the community spirit donation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister. Edmonton is not the only music festival in the province. Can the minister explain how Edmonton's funding compares to funding provided to other festivals, including the Calgary Folk Music Festival?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you well know, there are festivals that happen all over Alberta, from Slave Lake down to Pincher Creek. The Calgary and the Edmonton folk festivals receive the bulk of the funding because of the amount of people that attend those festivals. Also, the funding is not a cookie-cutter approach. We look at each individual application separately. We also look at the talent that comes from international, national, and from within Alberta when they come and perform.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: has funding for arts decreased in our province over the years?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to answer this question. We know that funding to the Alberta Foundation for the Arts has increased approximately 59 per cent in the past seven years, from $16.9 million to $27.9 million in 2012-13. In March of 2012, just this last couple of months ago, an additional $1 million was provided through AFA to assist more artists and organizations with supplemental grants.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Veterans' Licence Plates

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wildrose stands for fiscal responsibility and budgeting on clear priorities. The current government believes in squeezing Albertans to pay for corporate welfare and pet projects. In recent years the government has raised the tax burden on Albertans through service fee hikes across the board. One of the most offensive was the fee hike on the veteran's licence plate. To the minister: when will this government stop nickel and diming our heroes and scrap the fee hike on our veterans' licence plates?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I'd like to congratulate the member for asking his first question in the House.

Secondly, I'd like to say that his question was absolutely false. There was no tax hike. There was no increase on the veterans. There was no increase on the veteran's licence plate. In fact, veterans today can go in, exchange their Alberta licence plate, and get a veteran's plate free of charge.

Mr. Fox: I do believe there was a 6 per cent hike on renewals that went from $64 to $71.

Mr. Speaker, is the minister actually telling us that he thinks this excessive tax grab from veterans is justified to cover the skewed PC government priorities like spending nearly a million dollars on a patronage appointment in Ottawa?

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think the member is getting confused with respect to the way some items appear in the budget. However, hon. member, please take a review of that once again. There was no separate fee for veterans' licence plates. In fact, since we've introduced the veteran's licence plate, last November I introduced the veteran's licence plate for motorcycles. On this side of the House we respect our veterans, we honour them, and we will continue to do that.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to hear that the other side of the Chamber here does respect our veterans, but given that the government has promised no new taxes for the next three years, can the minister opposite promise that Service Alberta will not bring in any more hidden taxes or fee hikes over the next three years?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The fact remains that the cost of doing business does increase. For example, in the last 10 years for all motor vehicle products the cost of running these products went up by 109 per cent. Land title services increased by 71 per cent. From time to time fees must go up to account for the cost of providing those services. On this side of the House we have made a commitment to no new taxes and no tax increases. We have been open and transparent about our agenda, and that's why we're on this side of the House and not that.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, you have a member's statement.

Alberta 4-H Program

Ms Kubinec: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise today and recognize an organization that is dedicated to the personal development of youth while providing a positive impact on volunteers and communities in Alberta, an organization whose vision is to develop leadership, communication, technical and life skills to all its members and leaders. I am of course referring to the 4-H program, a program that now has 35,000 members and 10,000 leaders across Canada. My own children belong to 4-H.

In Alberta 4-H first started in 1917, and over 180,000 people, approximately 7 per cent of our population, have gone through the program. Alberta 4-H is the largest in the country, with over 8,100 members and 2,600 volunteers in 442 clubs across the province. The key objective of 4-H is to learn through hands-on experience as all members are encouraged to gain knowledge and skills by actively participating in the projects that are offered. There are over 33 projects available in the Alberta program, projects that range from teaching its members how to care for small animals to ones involving photography and others that incorporate veterinary science.

Members have the chance to develop self-confidence and improve self-esteem; learn communication and public speaking skills; make new friends across the province, the country, and the world; win awards, trips, scholarships, bursaries; and, most importantly, have fun. Projects are open to all youths aged nine to 21, whether they come from the city, town, acreage, or a farm. There are also many activities for the whole family, and everyone is encouraged to attend meetings and social events. For those interested in gaining leadership experience, Alberta 4-H has a volunteer program for all those over 18. By organizing activities and helping 4-H members set and achieve goals, these volunteer leaders have the opportunity to gain new leadership skills.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Flood Risk Management in Southern Alberta

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The floods in 2005 devastated many Alberta families and communities throughout Alberta and especially in the southwest region near my riding of Livingstone-Macleod. Communities banded together during those tough times and showed the great Alberta spirit of compassion, resilience, and hard work that many across Canada and the world have come to know this great province for.

Shortly after these floods the Alberta flood management committee was asked to produce a report on flood prevention. The report was titled Alberta Flood Mitigation Report and began shortly after the 2005 floods had taken place but, unfortunately, was put on hold when the Premier at the time announced that he would be stepping down. The report was all but finalized except for financial details, which were reported to be based upon federal assistance programs.

Sadly, the report was mothballed before the federal government ever had a chance to see the figures as Alberta communities continued to be left in the dark. The following Premier had seen the report but failed to release it to the public despite the protests of the former MLA for Greenwood, who chaired the committee.

I have to agree with the former Premier when he said that there were a number of good recommendations in the report that we have to implement, and if we don't, we will see this recurring in the province. But now it's clear that the government isn't prepared to follow through on the report and doesn't want to be tied down to making the necessary improvements for these communities, and that isn't good enough.

Mr. Speaker, as we are now approaching the same season, where 64 communities in Alberta are vulnerable to flood risk, I would like to ask that this government release this study to the public and make efforts to immediately implement all recommendations made, to give Albertans the comfort of knowing that this government is prepared to respond if tragedy ever strikes again.

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Bill 201

Scrap Metal Dealers and Recyclers Identification Act

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 201, the Scrap Metal Dealers and Recyclers Identification Act.

This bill addresses scrap metal theft, which is becoming a serious problem in our ever-growing province of Alberta, by requiring scrap metal dealers and recyclers to record information about the identity of individuals selling recycled metal. This information could then be used by peace officers during scrap metal theft investigations, thereby deterring this type of theft in the province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 201 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four items to table today, with the appropriate number of copies. The first is a letter from Ken Kowalski indicating the members who were on the no-meet committee, the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, that were re-elected on April 23, 2012: the hon. Member for Calgary-East, the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, the hon. Member for Strathcona, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, and the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater. I table the appropriate number of copies.

I table the appropriate number of copies as well of a notice from the director of human resources and information technology to the former hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore indicating, and I quote: during the entire period of time that he was appointed to this particular committee he was also appointed to more than three Assembly committees and thus was not eligible and did not receive any compensation for his service on the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing.

I also table a similar document from this office regarding the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek indicating the amount that she owes, which she read into the record yesterday, and that has been paid back in full.

The fourth tabling in the appropriate numbers is a Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act request which we received May 10 from Mount Royal University regarding alleged illegal donations to the Calgary-Buffalo PC Association, the Calgary-Lougheed PC Association, the PC Alberta annual general meeting and convention, and two amounts in the amount of $900 each on November 13, 2008, to the Calgary-Elbow PC Association dinner as well as November 27, 2008, to the Calgary-Elbow PC Association event.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a long letter from a constituent, Freda Bisset, who's very concerned that the Alberta Dental Association stopped producing a fee schedule in 1997. She details a number of the results of that, which is making it very hard for a number of people to be able to cope with the new amounts and what they get back from any coverage on it.

My second tabling today is a long series of e-mails between myself and a constituent, Chantele Theroux, who's also written to a number of other members of this House, in that her condo was built with such shoddy practices that her condo association is now subject to a number of additional assessments and she is on the verge, if she hasn't already, of losing her condominium despite being a very good homeowner and on good terms with her bank. But it's $34,000 worth of additional assessments, and she just can't handle that. So thanks very much, government. That's not keeping people in their homes.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to table five copies of roughly 2,000 signatures, each gathered just over this weekend, in fact, Minister of Culture, from the Falun Dafa Association of Calgary. They urge the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to - ... invite Shen Yun Performing Arts back to the Southern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium ...

- Urge the Premier to see to it that the management at the Southern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium apologize to Shen Yun for their unprofessional conduct
- Urge the Premier to see to it that the net placed over the orchestra pit at the Southern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium is removed for Shen Yun performances to allow proper expression of the arts.

I would note that that has been done in hundreds of other venues across North America without any problem. With that, I'll table these.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Lukaszuk, Deputy Premier, Globe and Mail website article dated May 28, 2012, entitled Clark To Miss Western Premiers Meeting.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we get into a long stretch of points of order and a ruling on a point of privilege, might we briefly revert to Introduction of Guests?

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Please, hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to my hon. colleagues for allowing me to introduce a group of people that are very important to me and have travelled from across the province to be here today. They're members of my family. I'd like to introduce Dr. Carola Starke, my sister; along with her two daughters, my nieces, Angela and Lydia – they are residents of Edmonton-Riverview – my in-laws, my mother-in-law and father-in-law, from Lacombe, Alberta, residents of Lacombe-Ponoka, Al and Doris Chiswell; my son, Roland Starke, who's a resident of Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood and is a second-year seminary student at Concordia Lutheran Seminary; and my mom, who turned 90 two weeks before April 23. Because I was otherwise occupied, I was unable to celebrate her birthday with her on that day.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Dr. Starke: That's pretty much what she said, too.

I'd also like to say that she is a resident of Edmonton-Calder. Last, but certainly not least, my partner and best friend, my wife, Alison, who is a resident of Vermilion-Lloydminster and actually got to vote for me. Please join in giving them the traditional warm greeting of the members of the Assembly.

The Speaker: We'll proceed with some points of order, then. The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to refer to our standing orders in Standing Order 23, particularly (h), (i), and (j). Would you like me to proceed with both of them at the same time?

The Speaker: Let's do one first.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: One first. Okay. Well, the first one that I stood on was with regard to a statement made opposite by the Premier implying, of course, that the former member of this Legislature, Mr. Paul Hinman, who is no longer a member in this House, specifically did not pay back the money that he received from the illustrious no-meet committee. As you saw, Mr. Hinman asked the Legislative Assembly Office whether he had received any money for sitting on that no-meet committee, and he received a letter in return very clearly indicating – and that letter was tabled earlier – that he had not received a dime for sitting on that committee. So I would ask somebody over there to retract the Premier's statement on that because it was just absolutely untrue.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader to respond.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, there's no point of order, obviously, because 23(h), as I read it, says: "makes allegations against another Member." Unfortunately for the former Member for Calgary-Glenmore, he's no longer a member, so no allegation was made against a member. That would be a technicality, however.

The reality that we've seen over the course of this rather unfortunate discussion about a no-meet committee: all members who are in this House and those who aspired to the House should know the amount of work that every MLA on every side of the House has put in, fully deserving the compensation they get for the work that they do. On this whole issue about a no-meet committee, particularly one like the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, which should only meet in the rarest of circumstances – you don't change your standing orders every day, and you certainly don't want to meet in a court on questions of privilege every day – everybody knows that that committee is not supposed to meet, and everybody knows that people were being compensated for the work they did.

That aside, one can understand the confusion when in one day in the press the former Member for Calgary-Glenmore is quoted as saying that he's not going to pay any money back because he worked very hard for every dollar he got, and quite frankly I agree with him, and then the very next day – it was a Friday and a Saturday, as I recall – somebody must have talked to him because he's very quickly then saying he is going to pay all the money back. Then all of a sudden he discovered he was right in the first place, perhaps in accordance with what now is being tabled in the House, that he didn't have any money to pay back in the first place.

You know, this stuff gets bandied around in the public by people who make statements and impugn the character of people without knowing the facts and then expect . . .

Mr. Anderson: Just like the Premier just did.

Mr. Hancock: No.

With all due respect, the members opposite made this an issue for their own political gain when they didn't have the facts, and they knew what they were talking about was inappropriate. They knew what they were talking about was trying to besmirch the character of members who work hard on all sides of the House, and now they're upset because that information that was public now may be, by the filings that they put in place, rendered to be something different than what was understood publicly.

If that's the case, that the hon. member didn't owe any money . . .

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, thank you. I think this is a point of clarification. It has been sufficiently commented on and clarified. We're going to move on.

You had the second point of order, hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, yes, under Standing Order 23(h), making allegations against another member; (i), imputing false or unavowed motives to another member; (j), using abusive or insulting language. In my view this is a point of order. The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills raised during his question an allegation, as I recall the wording, that the Premier, who is a member of the House, accepted illegal donations.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think also under House of Commons Procedure and Practice, 2nd edition – I probably should be using the third edition now – chapter 11, pages 501, 502, and 503, sets out some very clear rules relative to questions, and I think all members should be availing themselves of the opportunity to read and understand these. The allegation that the hon. member made, as I recall it, was in the supplementary, in which he shouldn't have been making an allegation because there isn't supposed to be a preamble to supplementaries, created disorder, reflects on the character or conduct of members of the House, asks a question which is outside of the administrative responsibility of the government – and that was a question about party financing – but also presumes that there was, in fact, an illegal donation. Mr. Speaker, we don't know that.

Just because the hon. member presumably was referring to what has since been tabled, a statement released under a FOIP request, obviously, about something that Mount Royal may have done in the past, what they do not know is whether or not that was caught at the time and returned, as has been the situation in many circumstances that I'm personally aware of where a donor or somebody who was attending a function made a cheque on behalf of an organization that wasn't supposed to. You immediately catch that, and then you go back and say, "You can't do it this way," and the individual who is attending makes his own personal cheque. That might have happened. There may be all sorts of explanations around that, but the hon. member didn't give the Premier or any other member of the House an opportunity to deal with the issue in an appropriate way because they brought it to the House to malign the character of a member rather than sending it to the Chief Electoral Officer for a proper investigation, which he fully ought to know should be done.

Mr. Anderson: It's good to be back in this House, seeing such passionate defences given.

First off, in response to the Government House Leader, the member did not at any time say that the Premier did anything illegal. The exact text of the question, which I'm sure he can look up after, was: "Given that the Premier herself is at the core of the problem by passing a law," which we all know is true, "that makes convicted political parties unaccountable to Albertans and now that her own riding," referring to her riding association, "has accepted illegal donations, how can Albertans believe . . ." and so forth.

Clearly, he was not saying that the Premier did anything illegal. He was saying that her riding association accepted illegal donations. We stand by the document that was tabled. If that document is false, then I invite the government to prove that it's false. It sure doesn't look false on the face of it, but perhaps it is. An answer was not given. But clearly this member did not impugn the character of the Premier. It is the riding association that has accepted illegal donations.

Secondly, with regard to preambles we know that there is a long-standing tradition in this House – we've been using it for certainly as long as I've been here – that in your preambles you can say at the beginning of a question "given that," preface it that way, and then go on to the question so that there's some context to the preamble. Otherwise, people listening at home wouldn't have a clue what we were talking about. So we've been using that. Clearly, in his question he said "given that," so he did not abuse that privilege. Actually, it was a very short question. When he read it, it was roughly 20 seconds long, which is about half as long as this minister's answers to most questions in the House.

I think it was a fair question, and I think clarification has been given.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, you will recall that the chair interjected on three or four occasions when this line of questioning was being pursued or different comments were being made with respect to the issue at hand. I want to just make a point here. I've been in this Assembly a long time. Some of you have been here as long as I have, and one person has been here even longer. It's a very, very fine line we tread when we start making comments that might malign someone's character or, as I stated in my credo speech, making comments that amount, perhaps, to character assassination or whatever.

Stating that a member is or has been or was engaged in some form of illegal activity certainly constitutes an allegation against a member under Standing Order 23(h). I understand that, and I'm sure you do as well. However, there has been no finding of illegality in this matter, at least not to the chair's knowledge. If you find that there are issues like this and you want to do the proper research on it, there are offices of the Ethics Commissioner. There are offices of the Privacy Commissioner. Anything concerning a possible conflict of interest: the chair would strongly advise you to avail yourselves of those independent officers.

This issue, however, is of a serious enough nature that I'm going to actually take a day to read the actual Hansard. I haven't had all the Blues provided to me yet. I'm not prepared to make a ruling on it, honestly, right now, but I will make a firm ruling on it tomorrow, and I hope it will bring the tone and the timbre of questions like this under greater focus for each of the members.

Third point of order, the hon. Member for Airdrie.

Point of Order

Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: Well, Mr. Speaker, it goes to something that was said by the Deputy Premier – God bless his soul – when he said in his statement that the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills in his question had accused the Premier of doing something illegal. When you review the Blues, if they are consistent with what this member was reading off, the paper that he was reading from when he asked the question, then you will see that, in fact, he was simply pointing out that the Premier's riding had accepted illegal donations.

If we're not able in this House to come forward and discuss an issue and question the government on whether their riding associations or whether the Premier, the most powerful person in the province, or her constituency association is accepting illegal donations and why we can't ask the Justice minister to change the law to keep that from happening or disclosing the information – as you eloquently put it, Mr. Speaker, we would like to know these things. We would like to know whether it was illegal or not, but we'll never know because Elections Alberta is prohibited from telling us. There's nothing the Ethics Commissioner or anyone can do for us that will allow us to know if anything illegal was done as long as this cloak of secrecy is maintained by the government.

I would say again that this member did not say that the Premier did anything illegal but did say that there were illegal donations accepted by her riding association, as was lined out by the documents tabled by the Leader of the Official Opposition.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the hon. member failed to provide any citations, so I'm not exactly sure what he's suggesting in here. However, let me say this. Really, the root of what we're talking about here is the fact that every member who runs for office and every member that gets elected to this House brings with them one thing that's exceedingly important, and that's their integrity. One ought not, as we've seen rather much lately, including an overabundance of it today, throw around words like "corruption" and "accepting illegal contributions" and that sort of language loosely. One should not do it loosely.

In fact, one would have been very tempted to raise a point of order during Members' Statements, which, of course, we're not allowed to do, when the hon. member who just raised this point of order accused a couple of people of being liars, absolutely inappropriate language for the House. One of the things that we have to have for respectful debate in the House is respect for each other and respect for the processes that are necessary when things are perceived to be wrong. One shouldn't immediately jump to the observation that somebody has done something illegal if there's an opportunity to have it fully, fairly, impartially investigated by an officer of this House. As you've already mentioned, Mr. Speaker, we have an Ethics Commissioner and a Chief Electoral Officer, and there are appropriate ways to investigate.

There has been a lot said about secrecy. What the hon. member ought to do is go back and read two acts, the Election Act and the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act. The Election Act has section 4.2, which was put in there, talking about the privacy of an investigation. I've heard him say in the House that it's appropriate to keep investigations private, and I think it is. It's not appropriate to be going out there and besmirching the character of individuals because there's an investigation on. That's exactly the root of what we've been talking about here today. One shouldn't jump to besmirching the character of individuals by throwing around allegations of corruption or of illegal contributions or of accepting illegal contributions. They should put it into the appropriate place where an investigation can happen.

Now, if the hon. member would read the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act, there's nothing in that act which prohibits the Chief Electoral Officer from disclosing the results of an investigation.

Mr. Anderson: That's not what he says, Dave.

Mr. Hancock: That may not be what he says, but if he reads the act – you're a lawyer; I'm a lawyer – the Election Act prohibits disclosure of certain information to certain circumstances. The Chief Electoral Officer can put in place fines, the Chief Electoral Officer can direct that contributions be returned, and the Chief Electoral Officer can provide information to the prosecution service to look into whether there should be a prosecution. There are options available for the Chief Electoral Officer.

I'd ask the hon. member to read that, to make representation, if he will, to the Chief Electoral Officer about what should be appropriately done. But do not besmirch the character and integrity of any member of this House or, quite frankly, anybody else until appropriate investigations are done. There are all sorts of appropriate explanations for some of the things that have been thrown around in this House.

People do things in our political organizations. It's all volunteers. These are all good people. In my organization they're good people; I'm sure in his organization are good people. They don't all read the rules all the time. But we do put in place – I hope he does; I know we do – appropriate ways to screen to make sure that the rules are followed. So when a cheque comes from someone who's not entitled to send you a cheque, you send it back. If you don't catch it at that screen, you return the funds. If you look at the donations that were made to Calgary-Elbow, for example, in 2008, all of which have to be reported if they're over $300, I'm sure you would not find any illegal contributions disclosed there. What does that tell you? Well, it may tell you that somebody took care of it at the source.

One could make that assumption if one was open and honest about the fact that we all come here with our integrity intact and that we intend to do the honourable thing for the people of Alberta. If you didn't want to believe that or you thought something might be askew, there's an appropriate way to go and have it investigated. I'd encourage you to ask the hon. members opposite to understand that because it will make the House operate much better for the next four years if we don't automatically assume that everybody comes here with foul motives and, instead, assume, as we ought to do, that everybody comes here with their integrity intact to do things in the best interests of Albertans.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. I was interested to allow this air-clearing to proceed. It's a coattail to the previous point of order, actually, which I will be considering, as I mentioned, through the night and reading Hansard carefully through before ruling on that.

On this particular point of order I find there's an issue of clarification here. I hope that the Member for Airdrie feels satisfied, having made his statements. The Government House Leader has made his. I think we can move on to the final comment.

We have one more point of order to deal with. I believe it's the hon. Government House Leader's.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I think we've beat this to death, and I think we should let our members proceed with their maiden speeches in response to the Speech from the Throne.

The Speaker: That point of order has been withdrawn, then.

Privilege Misleading the House

The Speaker: Before proceeding with that, I would like to rule on the issue of privilege. Hon. members, the chair is prepared now to do so with respect to the purported question of privilege that was raised by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills in the Assembly yesterday afternoon.

As I indicated yesterday at page 60 of Hansard, notice was provided by the member and received in the Speaker's office at 11:18 a.m., so the requirements of Standing Order 15(2) with respect to notice have been met, although the chair will have a few words about the notice a bit later.

The basis of the member's question of privilege concerned comments made by the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General on May 28 during question period about a former Chief Electoral Officer's recommendations on amendments to legislation concerning improper contributions to political parties. The exchange giving rise to the question of privilege is found at page 17 of Hansard for that day.

As was the case with the purported question of privilege that the chair ruled on yesterday, the allegation raised by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills actually falls into the category of a contempt of the Assembly, which is treated as a question of privilege. As the chair also explained yesterday at page 58 of Hansard, any act or omission which tends to impede the House in the performance of its functions or obstructs or impedes any member or officer in the discharge of their duties may be treated by the Assembly as a contempt.

Hon. members, the test for finding a prima facie question of privilege on deliberately misleading the Assembly is a very high bar. A question of privilege on this subject was brought forward last fall. On November 24, 2011, Speaker Kowalski stated at page 1367 of Hansard: "Deliberately misleading the Assembly is an extremely serious allegation, which seldom satisfies the test for constituting a prima facie question of privilege."

As stated by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills yesterday in his submission, the test is referred to at page 86 in House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition. The test was articulated by David McGee, a former Clerk of the New Zealand House of Representatives, and is found in the third edition of his book Parliamentary Practice in New Zealand, 2005, at pages 653 and 654, where he states:

There are three elements to be established when it is alleged that a member is in contempt by reason of a statement that the member has made: the statement must, in fact, have been misleading; it must be established that the member making the statement knew at the time the statement was made that it was incorrect; and, in making it, the member must have intended to mislead the House.

This was, in fact, the test used by Speaker Kowalski in the purported question of privilege last fall and also in his ruling of November 7, 2007, which is recorded at pages 1860 and 1861 of Hansard for that day.

In his submissions yesterday the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General was very clear that, in his view, his statements on this subject during Monday's question period were not misleading. He stated at pages 59 and 60 of yesterday's Hansard, "I stand by them completely." Given the strength of his convictions on this point it could not be said that he intended to mislead the Assembly, and even if the minister was mistaken, there is no evidence that anyone was actually misled.

At best, this is a disagreement about interpretation between members, which occurs not infrequently in this Chamber. At best. Some might also say that this is even less infrequent between two lawyers. As Beauchesne's, sixth edition, states at paragraph 494:

It has been formally ruled by Speakers that statements by Members respecting themselves and particularly within their own knowledge must be accepted. It is not unparliamentary temperately to criticize statements... by Members as being contrary to the facts; but no imputation of intentional falsehood is permissible. On rare occasions this may result in the House having to accept two contradictory accounts of the same incident.

In short, this matter would not have given rise to a successful point of order, let alone a prima facie question of privilege. Accordingly, the chair finds that there is no prima facie question of privilege, and the matter is thereby concluded.

However, the chair would like to make a few additional brief comments. Questions of privilege are the most serious matters that can be considered by this Assembly and should not be taken lightly. A charge of deliberately misleading the Assembly is very serious and could damage a person's reputation forever.

The Speaker, this Speaker in particular, adopts the comment made by Speaker Kowalski in his November 24, 2011, ruling at page 1368 of Hansard. "However, the chair would ask members to carefully consider bringing forward matters that call into question the integrity of other members when the evidence is less than convincing."

Your chair wanted to grant the member bringing the purported question of privilege forward the greatest leeway, but frankly I was concerned when the notice for the serious charge did not actually contain the name of the member against whom the allegation was being brought. In the interests of fairness and parliamentary tradition, members should please ensure that their notices contain sufficient information to allow for a proper response by the person against whom they are brought. This is especially true where the issue is as serious as the allegation brought forward yesterday and on which I have just ruled today.

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate May 29: Mr. Dorward]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour to stand and speak to the throne speech for 2012 in this Assembly. Like many Albertans, I looked forward to the throne speech, looking for signs of a clear direction, a plan, a fiscal commitment, a clear sense of how we would balance our expenditures with our revenues, and like many Albertans, I was disappointed. The Premier identified through the throne speech a global economic recovery under way, and that set the tone, to me, for a speech that lacked real groundedness, a real sense of the instability of our global economy, and the need to take very seriously an unstable future, an unstable resource revenue stream – that has always been the challenge for Alberta to deal with – the instability of our primary resource, our most valued commodity in this province and one of which we are all greatly proud and benefit from.

The government's budget of the past couple of months clearly relies heavily on this quite uncertain assertion of recovery and continues decades of addiction to this nonrenewable resource wealth, 25 and sometimes 35 per cent of our budget on a year-to-year basis, holding hostage, I would say, our future, our children's resource wealth, and living off an uncertain future to pay for today's expenses, an indicator from many authors in the world of a petrostate, very consistent with how most states function in the world when they are so reliant on the hydrocarbon industry and fail to make judicious decisions in the long-term interests of the public, fail to enact tax policy that is realistic and deals with current needs and pays for what we do today but, rather, lives on a wing and a prayer that these resources will be there and that periodically we will accept going into deficits in spite of having the greatest wealth in the country. Not leadership, not responsible governance.

We will continue to raise very pressing questions on behalf of citizens, our children, our grandchildren, and the unborn generations yet to come to this place that are looking for a more thoughtful approach, one that we, I think, on this side, in the Liberal caucus at least, feel has been addressed to some extent through our platform for a fair and progressive tax system that would address the basic needs of our people, our primary service needs: education, health care, persons with disabilities. Some of the unmet needs of crisis and emergency that we can anticipate every year – floods, fires, major disasters – we need to plan for. Again, that is part of a fair and responsible tax system.

Our fiscal plan charts, of course, then, not just for this next couple of years but for the long term and would ensure that we are taking in as a government what we intend to spend this fiscal year. It's been a tradition since I got into this House that every year this government comes back for supplementary supply, millions and millions of dollars that are unbudgeted, and any talk of fair tax, a review of tax falls on deaf ears. This is not leadership.

To quote from the Speech from the Throne, Albertans chose to “engage with the world around them and, through investment and innovation” we see opportunities. I would love to see leadership in this province on an alternate energy future, on new technologies, a knowledge-based future, that we could be in the forefront of given the wealth and the wonderful postsecondary opportunities we have here.

It has to do with planning. It has to do with investment. It has to do with seeing education as an investment, not an expense to be cut, not on the backs of students and faculty and their support services, that have seen continued dwindling over the past decade to the point where not only are they constrained from a physical budget point of view, but they are constrained by an attitude of mean-spiritedness that they feel coming from this government and the lack of resources, the lack of a positive relationship and a position of coming with real opportunity that these postsecondary institutions bring. That needs to change.

We are pressing again for a plan that sees a real honouring and a commitment to the long-term future of this province with alternate economies based on good postsecondary investment, research, development, and an embracing of the 21st century that has us moving beyond a resource economy that is extracting and exporting. We need leadership there.

In addition, public services are continuing to be dependent on revenue from this nonrenewable resource side. People continue to suffer in Alberta, where we have something in the order of 15 per cent of children in poverty. We have increasing numbers of people with mental illness, disability, on the margins of society, ending up in health care services, ending up in addiction services, ending up in the criminal justice system because we've not seen fit to both bring in the resources we need to ensure that we deal with these issues early, preventively in schools and in disadvantaged families and in mental health services and health services, getting at the root of these issues in an early fashion by investing appropriately and bringing in the dough to make sure that we can do that as opposed to nickel and diming people, including our seniors, who are struggling, in some instances at least, to pay for their accommodation and some of the health care needs that are essential to them.

Our social supports in this province since the '90s have continued to be 30 per cent less than they were in the '90s. We are not supporting people on the margins of society, and therefore we are paying through the nose in some of these ways: in emergency departments, in addictions services, and the criminal justice system.

The decision was made to pay off the debt in the '90s – there was some rationale for that – but it was made on the backs of some of our most vulnerable people, and we continue to do that: our most vulnerable people, children growing up in poverty and continuing the cycle of poverty, mental illness, learning problems, behaviour problems.

Because of this decision and our unwillingness to take in resources adequate to the real needs of our citizens, we have among the highest rates of family violence, depression, addictions, suicide. It's understandable in some ways with a very wealthy economy but not acceptable and not something that we can at all be proud of when we know the answers lie in committing ourselves to investing in people and long-term well-being in the province.

The Premier through the speech promised greater openness, transparency, and accountability. Hard to swallow on the heels of a Premier that just flip-flopped on a commitment to a public inquiry into serious problems in the health care system: intimidation, bullying, examples of financial mismanagement and spending, and evidence from the Auditor General in the past four years at least of serious problems in financial management in Alberta Health Services that have never been addressed.

It's hard to swallow the words “more openness and accountability” when we see a report from Ontario in these past six months identifying Alberta as the least open, the least accessible to information, the least accountable of the provinces in this examination of the provinces and their access to information and freedom of information.

We've long complained in the budget process about the lack of details on where our money is going. We're talking millions of dollars in a line item without any details to be able to identify whether or not they are appropriate expenditures. We know, indeed, of contracts without an open process. Bill 50 is a good example of that, where we see up to $16 billion planned to be spent on major power line structures, with no identification of any bidding process. We have the three big power producers taking their share. That's all we see. This is not openness. It's not accountability. It's not transparency.

We heard from the Auditor not too long ago about the lack of openness of the Energy department on what it is Albertans should be expecting from the returns on our production. Understanding that the ERCB actually measures our production in fossil fuels and is mostly funded by the industry gives us pause and, I hope, pressure to move beyond industry-managed resource accountability. We've seen that in the oil sands, where the industry has been monitoring itself. We also heard from the Auditor General that he is concerned that we don't know how much of our resource accurately is being produced. Therefore, we do not know yet how much revenue we should be receiving from a publicly owned resource.

Critical public sectors – education, health, municipal services – with a tenuous relationship to this government, a fractious relationship between unions and government and a perception, at least, that this government is trying to eliminate more unions. We already have, I believe, among the lowest union participation in the country. It's clear that those involved in the front lines and those in unions feel no lost love for this government, that appears to be antiunion in some of the ways that it deals. We need to build relationships, whether it's with the medical profession or with the licensed practical nurses or with the lab technicians or the mental health workers. We need to build relationships and add to the sense of well-being and opportunity and growth that the Premier talks about.

To quote again from the report, businesses will have an even greater freedom “to operate without interference” because of government simplifying “regulatory burdens.” This is an important business principle. Unnecessary burdens should be eliminated. Red tape should be eliminated. What many of us fear is that the history of this province is a woeful lack of commitment to the environment in independent monitoring, science-based decision-making. It cannot be reconciled with the severe reductions we've seen in the last five years in Alberta Environment. In one year $13 million was cut from monitoring in Alberta Environment. What does that say about a serious commitment to sustainable development?

Groundwater monitoring, which we talked about in 2006, forced a baseline study of groundwater monitoring, which many will remember, around coal-bed methane and the concerns around fracking and groundwater contamination. The government spent millions of dollars on baseline water testing. We have never seen a report on the outcome of those thousands of water wells that were tested to see whether the fracking was having any impact. What I do know is that the scientists in Edmonton and Calgary universities have said: “We want to know. We put in this data to Alberta Environment, and we still do not have any feedback on what the conclusions of that were. We have strong evidence that there are some groundwater sources that have been contaminated.” We need to know the big picture. What has happened over six years to this baseline groundwater monitoring?

Where is our commitment to climate change, the most serious threat to well-being, health, extreme weather events, and costs?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available should you have any questions for the previous speaker or comments about his speech. Anyone under 29(2)(a)?

If not, thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and a sincere, heart-felt congratulations to you on being named Speaker of the House.

It's a privilege to rise today to respond to the Speech from the Throne. I was just a young boy when I first visited this Assembly. My father, Doug, used to sit right up there above the clock and watch many a debate on this floor. I grew up around this building and now have the opportunity to raise my two daughters, Molly and Lily, in the very same environment. It's an absolute honour to serve our incredible province of Alberta and bring the voice of a new generation to the Legislative Assembly.

I'd also like to congratulate my fellow members on their hard-fought election campaigns and on winning their seats. We have an exciting challenge ahead of us, and I look forward to a constructive and courteous Legislative Assembly. I pledge to work collaboratively with my colleagues, whichever side of the floor they may be on, for the betterment of the province we all share. I would like to thank the hon. Premier for her tireless work in articulating a tremendous vision full of hope and confidence for the future.

In the throne speech the hon. Premier has very succinctly captured the optimistic mood and energetic spirit of Alberta in 2012, specifically with reference to the growing demand for our skills, resources, energy, and talents in the coming years and the hopefulness and confidence in the future that Albertans feel as a result. This is something that Albertans are keenly aware of. There are amazing prospects available to people in this great province, and we can be proud of the role that this government has played in the past to foster this high standard of living. This government has adapted over the years in response to the changing needs of Albertans. As this election has clearly demonstrated, Albertans have voted for a government that reflects them and their reality, and they voted for change.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to talk a little more about what this change looks like. Whether it is our more seasoned colleagues, for whom this is not their first term, or one of our newly elected members such as myself, this government epitomizes that change. We have seen the hon. Premier gather an incredible team of dedicated Albertans to form this government, and I feel that we all embody a new generation of elected officials. We are a generation of parliamentarians that represents a shift in the way government does business.

In listening to the throne speech last week, I know that the hon. Premier intends to bring forth a new era of openness, transparency, and accountability in government. The hon. Premier has signalled her commitment to clarifying conflict-of-interest issues and bringing forward whistle-blower legislation. In addition to enacting legislation that will augment ethical conduct within government, the hon. Premier has stated that we will work to change the culture of government. We need to open up the system for Albertans to have a meaningful role in the discussion on government policy and outcomes. In order to facilitate that greater transparency, we'll alter the previous culture of government, delivering more candour and openness.

I couldn't be more proud and honoured to earn the trust of the residents of Edmonton-South West to bring forth this change. Mr. Speaker, I would like to sincerely and humbly express my gratitude to the wonderful constituents of Edmonton-South West for their trust in my ability to represent them in this the 28th Legislature of the Alberta Legislative Assembly. In my capacity as their democratic representative I promise to faithfully serve their interests. Before the members of this Assembly I would like to celebrate the fact that Edmonton-South West is one of the newest constituencies on the electoral map. We are a constituency that's vibrant, that's new, and that promises to bring fresh ideas to our province.

Nestled in the deep south and far west of Edmonton city limits, our constituency is home to a very diverse and unique set of values. Mr. Speaker, the constituents of Edmonton-South West want strong and accountable representation, and this is what I will deliver. In the countless conversations I had with Albertans, whether in coffee shops, schools, at community events, or on the doorstep, I realized that we share many of the same concerns. As a father raising two young daughters in a rapidly growing part of Edmonton, I know first-hand some of the challenges families face today. I'd like to say that for me "family" and "community" are very important words. Strong families and lively communities are the heart and soul of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, meeting with many young and growing families to hear their perspectives was an echo of my own hopes for the constituency. These constituents have also conveyed their ideas for how we can continue to improve Edmonton-South West, and I intend to work hand in hand with them to realize these goals.

As a father I know first-hand the importance that education will play in their future. In order for our children to grow up to attain their goals and aspirations, we will need to build upon the world-class education system that we have. Alberta is already recognized as a jurisdiction that performs very well both in Canada and internationally. As a parent I have to say that one of the paramount guiding principles of our education system is choice. I will continue to push for that choice in education. We know that one-size-fits-all solutions don't work in education. It's imperative that school boards and government officials continue to work with parents to identify their priorities in education.

In addition, we also recognize the fantastic and tireless work of our educators. On a daily basis they are the ones teaching the curriculum and preparing our children for a promising future. Every day in schools like Sister Annata Brockman, Johnny Bright, or George P. Nicholson these educators are helping our children to learn.

Mr. Speaker, the constituency of Edmonton-South West is one of the fastest growing communities in the province. As such, we face enormous growth pressure in providing the services that Albertans deserve and expect to receive in a timely manner. My own daughters will be entering the school system very shortly, and as parents we want to make sure there are local schools there which will offer our children that world-class Alberta education. As I listened to the throne speech last week, I heard that commitment in the words spoken by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor.

This past fall the hon. Premier committed to restoring $107 million to the education system. Those dollars were a key investment in getting both the tools and the personnel out to our classrooms, where they are making a difference in the lives of students. During the election campaign the hon. Premier also pledged 50 new schools for the province and the modernization of 70 existing schools. This is a tremendous commitment to parents, to educators, and to the children of Alberta and one that I wholeheartedly endorse.

In addition, this fiscal year the government will create more than 12,000 new school spaces across the province. These spaces will meet the ever-increasing demand and expectations that parents have of this government. I look forward to advocating on behalf of hard-working Alberta families for more school spaces.

Mr. Speaker, as we heard in the throne speech, growing healthy and vibrant families and communities is an investment in ourselves, in our children, and in the bright future of this province. Part of this government's commitment to helping Albertans lead healthy lives is family care clinics. We have consistently heard from Albertans that they want other options for accessing the health care system; in particular, with respect to primary care. Primary care networks have done an amazing job of bringing a new perspective to the delivery of primary care and will continue to do so.

At the same time we will move forward with the family care clinic model that will group medical services all under one roof, providing a one-stop shop for families for the medical care that they need. Whether they need to see a doctor, a nurse practitioner, a dietitian, or perhaps a psychiatrist, those services will be available in the same clinic. With extended hours and a variety of health care practitioners on-site Albertans will receive better access to primary care. As well, each of the family care clinics will be further tailored to the specific needs of that local community. As a parent I know that this model will be more flexible and responsive to the busy life that most modern working parents lead these days.

This government will continue to implement practical solutions such as these to the issues that Albertans face. Mr. Speaker, the articulate and progressive vision presented in the throne speech has resonated with Albertans. We have a lot of work ahead of us and a bold agenda to complete, but this government is a team of professionals, and each brings his or her own unique skills and competencies to the table.

Under the innovative leadership of the hon. Premier our individual and collective strength will serve us well as we address the concerns of Albertans with effective solutions. As we heard in the Speech from the Throne, this government will continue to foster the conditions necessary for further economic development and further improve the standard of living for Albertans. Albertans have more reason than ever before to be hopeful, and I am proud to be part of a government that will create continued confidence in our future.

Once more I would like to thank the constituents of Edmonton-South West for their trust. I hope to bring my own unique perspective to this Assembly, but let the word go forth that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Albertans. I look forward to taking this journey in step with my constituents' high expectations of me.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one under 29(2)(a), I'll recognize the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, hon. colleagues, it is an honour for me to rise today to respond to the throne speech. I'd like to congratulate you on being elected as Speaker of the House. I think I speak for all members that we appreciate your efforts to conduct the very challenging role of being Speaker. We are all working on our credo as you suggested. Perhaps your years as a Shumka dancer may assist you in this role. I, too, Ukrainian danced, for seven years. Given your experience in this regard I would hope that you're open to a change in the existing standing orders so that whenever there's a procedural dispute between the government and the opposition, we can decide it through a Ukrainian dance-off with you being the judge.

Mr. Speaker, by way of introduction I'd like to give a little bit of information, a personal background. My family has very close ties to the Two Hills area. I grew up on the family farm one mile west of Two Hills, where we raised purebred Simmental cattle. My dad, Ronnie, was a beaver trapper and dynamiter for the county of Two Hills for over 25 years. It's a pretty neat job. Maybe not as neat as a bullfighter. My mom has worked at the Two Hills RCMP detachment for over 30 years. She was supposed to be retired as of last summer but keeps showing up for work. One of my sisters works as a registered nurse at the Two Hills hospital and the other at the Citizenship and Immigration centre in Vegreville. I've been made uncle to two nieces and nephews. My family says that behind every man is a stronger and smarter woman, and I can certainly say that's the case with me. I'd like to thank the love of my life, Shannon, for her love and unconditional support.

My family on my dad's side came from the Ukraine and homesteaded near Morecambe in 1903, and on my mom's side the Kings came to the same area in 1912. The settlement of Alberta's prairies was a very difficult and challenging time, Mr. Speaker, but they did not rely on the government for help but, rather, worked on their own initiative and in their own community to build our province. I recall the story about how my ancestors brought a big, heavy rock to Alberta to grind grain to make flour for bread because, of course, as advertised, there are no rocks in Alberta. As most of us members with farming backgrounds know, there are certainly a lot of them.

It is my privilege to represent the people of Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, and I am humbled by the faith and confidence they have placed in me by electing me to be their MLA. My constituency has been represented by some outstanding Albertans: Mike Maccagno, the Leader of the Official Opposition between 1964 and 1967 – he was from the Lac La Biche area – and, of course, more recently by former Premier Ed Stelmach, who had represented my home area of Two Hills at one point honorably and ably, and also former member Ray Danyluk, who served in many ministerial portfolios.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to the voters in Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills who elected me to be their representative in the Alberta Legislature. It is a responsibility that I do not take lightly. I've always believed that it is an MLA's job to listen to their constituents and then bring their voice to government, not just toe the party line or parrot talking points. Sadly, too many Albertans have lost faith in their elected representatives. They have become cynical about government and how it makes decisions. They believe their elected representatives behave more like squabbling children than they do leaders.

Some would dismiss these concerns and opinions as irrelevant. After all, aren't politicians expected to behave that way? But the problem is genuine and its impact substantial. Alberta has one of the lowest voter turnouts in provincial elections across Canada. We in this Chamber have difficulty understanding how so many Albertans could choose to not have their voice heard in how our province is governed. The idea of not voting is completely foreign to us, something we would never consider doing.

While the reasons behind the decline in voter turnout are complex, I believe one of the main reasons is because an increasing number of people do not respect politicians anymore. They see the tragicomedy that is question period. They question politicians' fearmongering that their opponents are akin to Snidely Whiplash tying Lillian Gish to the railway tracks. They watch attack ads which reduce important public issues to sound bites and character smears. I've always believed that public service is an honourable calling and that those who choose to enter public life do so because they want what is best for their families and their communities.

In the past election Albertans for the first time had a real choice between two competitive parties who offered different visions of our province. While the Wildrose was obviously disappointed with the outcome, we are by no means discouraged. Hundreds of thousands of Albertans chose to support our vision of a province and a government that has new ideas that would put Albertans first. Albertans are not well served by having elections which end in a default win for the incumbent government. A competitive election ensures accountability and engagement on the part of our politicians.

Wildrose is honoured by the role Albertans have asked it to play over the next four years. We will work hard to ensure that Albertans' voices are heard in the Legislature. We will support the government when it makes prudent and responsible decisions, and we will offer alternatives when the government loses its way. A Wildrose opposition will be considerate, responsive, and principled, not merely an opposition party but a government-in-waiting.

In speaking with my Wildrose colleagues, I believe that one of our shared priorities must be ensuring that our government leaves our children with a future which is prosperous and open to endless possibility. We must place a new focus on promoting the skilled trades as opportunities for Alberta's youth as these jobs will be in high demand and will support our growing economy. In my constituency Portage College is well placed to meet those demands.

Our government must implement an effective aboriginal education policy developed in consultations with First Nations and Métis settlements to make meaningful progress on this difficult issue.

As the MLA I will work hard to ensure that the government lives up to its promise to build schools in both Lac La Biche and Two Hills, and I'll fight to ensure that they are not only built on time but also to specifications to ensure that they take into account the expected growth in the area.

In terms of health care we must reject the failed policies and ideologies of those who cannot and will not see beyond the current system. Simply pouring more money into health care without changing our health care system will put our families at risk. We must work together and implement bold solutions. Alberta must be a leader in Canada on public health, not a follower.

My constituents have told me that they are not happy with prepackaged food that's being shipped to our hospitals instead of using kitchens that already exist in each and every rural hospital. I tasted the food. It's absolutely awful. It's demoralizing for the staff when they serve this food, knowing that it's bad for the seniors. There is a very active seniors' group in St. Paul and Elk Point who are standing up for seniors in their commitment on this very issue.

The lack of long-term care is a major issue across the constituency. Seniors are waiting far too long in hospital beds. They are not sick. They are simply aging and deserve proper care. This is particularly an issue in the town of St. Paul.

In Lac La Biche, in addition to the typical provincial issues, they've been fighting for a dialysis unit in the local hospital for years. In fact, the former mayor, Tom Maccagno, required the services and fought passionately for them until he recently passed away. Residents should not have to be faced with the decision to either leave their community or risk their lives each and every day on a clunker of a bus in minus 40-degree weather.

Our energy sector remains under attack both domestically and abroad. The good-news story of Alberta's oil sands just isn't getting told. We must aggressively pursue each and every opportunity to promote Alberta's natural resources and push back against radical environmentalists and foreign lobbyists who would rather see Alberta's oil sands shut down.

Mr. Speaker, these are serious issues, and they require serious men and women to take the lead on them. As an MLA I will fight for my constituents on issues which they tell me are important to them, I will work with my colleagues to find practical and affordable solutions to our province's pressing challenges, I will stand up for the principles upon which I campaigned and was elected, and I will join my Wildrose colleagues in putting Albertans first. I look forward to the next four years and the opportunity they afford to our elected representatives to prove to Albertans that far from being disdainful, politics is both a worthy and honourable calling and one that I am honoured to pursue.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

I do have a speaking list, but for certain circumstances I'd like to recognize the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster to go next, if he's ready, with the concurrence of the hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. Thank you.

The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me begin by also expressing my congratulations to you on your election to your position. Your breadth of experience, your respect for our rules and privileges, and your exuberant personality will serve you well in your new role. I wish you all the best as the chief arbiter of debate in this august Chamber.

I'd also like to send my congratulations to the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont and the hon. Member for Red Deer-North for their election to their respective positions.

Mr. Speaker, like my 86 colleagues here in the Assembly and thousands of visitors to this imposing structure each year, I cannot help but be moved by the sense of history housed herein. If only these walls could speak, what would they tell us? What advice would they give?

As I walk by the portraits on the walls outside, I wonder: what would our forebears say if they saw the Alberta of today? What will that Alberta look like in 50 or a hundred years, when all of us here have concluded our earthly journeys and these seats are occupied by those who are not even born yet? One cannot help but be filled with the profound sense that we're only temporary guardians, stewards of Alberta's promise and potential, charged with the task of safely delivering that precious cargo to the next generation of Albertans.

So how will each of us contribute to that endeavour? For my part I hope to be able to draw on experiences as a first-generation Canadian, a parliamentarian, a veterinarian, and a community leader.

Now, my parents both came to this country nearly 60 years ago, having been forged in the tumult of war and oppression. My mother's family fled the cruel brutality of Stalin's Soviet Union, and my late father, as a 15-year-old in the summer of 1944 was handed a rifle and ordered to march east and engage the advancing Russian Red Army. My parents each came here in the '50s because there was no hope and no future for them in Europe. Canada and, more specifically, Alberta offered them both.

That story, that history is not unique. It goes on today, and it's written by people from around the world who come to Canada, who come to Alberta because we remain a shining beacon of opportunity, hope, and freedom. We welcome these newcomers, and we embrace how their diverse cultures, their skills, and their enthusiasm enrich our province and our country. The bus driver from Bulgaria who came to Calgary to raise his sons because he felt democracy would take too long to mature in his homeland, the Filipino farm worker with a master's degree in animal science who works in a hog barn near Paradise Valley because it means a brighter future for him and his family, or the engineer from Lebanon who uses his expertise to enhance heavy oil recovery near Kitscoty: all these and thousands more like them are following the same path many of our ancestors travelled. They came to Alberta because of freedom, opportunity, and hope.

The 28th Legislature, the group of 87 Albertans: we have been granted a unique privilege. We have been charged with the duty of representing our constituents, but we have also been given the task of upholding and preserving the tradition of Westminster parliamentary democracy. That is truly a rich and colourful history, a history that I was first exposed to as a member of the TUXIS Parliament of Alberta, Canada's oldest model youth parliament. Some 30 years ago I was privileged to serve as Premier of the 62nd session of TUXIS, and two years later, Mr. Speaker, like you, I was dragged up the steps of the dais to assume the duties of Speaker. I was also privileged to represent Alberta at the first-ever Youth Parliament of Canada, serving in cabinet as minister of energy. Some years later both of my sons served in this Assembly as TUXIS parliamentarians.

That experience taught all of us rules of procedure and the rules of order and much more. We were given the opportunity to debate, to challenge each other's thinking, to respect opposing viewpoints, and to seek the truth through vigorous discussion. Indeed, provincial youth parliaments have provided a fruitful training ground for many of our nation's leaders. People like John Diefenbaker, Jack Layton, Ralph Goodale, Lloyd Axworthy, Bob Hawkesworth, David King, and Bob Clark were all once members of provincial youth parliaments in Canada.

Now, I am grateful for that experience. Each day as I return to this Chamber, I strive to embody the lessons that I learned then and the expectations that Albertans have for our behaviour here: that we learn more from discussion than discord, that we gain more from co-operation than confrontation, and that Albertans yearn more for statesmanship than showmanship.

Mr. Speaker, like my colleagues who have spoken before me, I too am fiercely proud of my constituency of Vermilion-Lloydminster. Sweeping through east-central Alberta from the Saskatchewan border along the Yellowhead and westward, extending north to the North Saskatchewan River and beyond in the Tullibee Lake district and south to the Battle River, my riding is a great diversity and wealth of economic resource and human capital.

The city of Lloydminster, Canada's only border city, is one of the most unique communities in Canada. Founded by the Barr Colonists in 1903 and, therefore, pre-dating our province's entry into Confederation, it straddles the Alberta-Saskatchewan border, creating a unique set of opportunities and challenges. We have two area codes, but you can call across the border toll-free. There is no sales tax, even on the Saskatchewan side. The legal drinking age is 18 on the west side of Meridian Avenue and 19 on the east side. There are a dozen liquor stores in Alberta, but only one on the Saskatchewan side. Our hospital is in Saskatchewan, so my sons are proud Albertans, but both carry Saskatchewan birth certificates. Fortunately, we're all in the same time zone.

While most of these idiosyncrasies are easily dealt with, Lloydminster faces a long list of jurisdictional challenges that demand an effective dialogue between our government and the one in Regina. Fortunately, we have an excellent relationship with Premier Wall's administration, and I am looking forward to working co-operatively with Tim McMillan, the MLA for Lloydminster and my counterpart in the Saskatchewan Legislature.

Our second anchoring community is the town of Vermilion, host of the main campus of Lakeland College. This outstanding postsecondary institution will celebrate its centennial year next year, and it is a vibrant and going concern at 99 years of age. Boasting the highest growth of enrolment of any Alberta postsecondary institution last year, Lakeland has an unsurpassed record of providing practical, real-world instruction to students from across Canada and around the world. A diverse range of programs from agriculture to trades to environmental technology to emergency services training keeps Lakeland at the forefront of preparing our young people to be leaders in tomorrow's Alberta. Speaking of tomorrow, I will be privileged to represent our province as Lakeland officially opens the centre for sustainable innovation, an applied research facility that will see the development of new and creative solutions in a wide variety of fields.

Vermilion's historic downtown is being carefully preserved and restored.

Vermilion is the home to Canada's winter sports heroine, that paragon of fair play and clean athleticism, the only athlete in Olympic sport to be awarded the bronze, silver, and gold medals in the same event. Of course, I'm referring to Beckie Scott.

Mr. Speaker, you have related how you represent an ethnically diverse constituency here in our capital. Well, that is also a characteristic of Vermilion-Lloydminster. Next month I will be attending the Vikings in the Streets Festival in Viking, Alberta, celebrating the rich heritage of the Norwegian immigrants who settled in that area over a century ago. Visitors have the opportunity to look for hidden trolls in Troll Park or to enter the lutefisk eating contest.

On the same weekend I will visit the Three Cities Fair, an annual summer celebration in the villages of McLaughlin, Rivercourse, and Paradise Valley, home of the unique Climb thru Time Museum, fashioned from the interior of a restored grain elevator.

There will also be a celebration in the village of Marwayne as they officially open their new agriplex facility, a joint effort of the village and local agricultural society.

A few miles to the west is the village of Dewberry, home of the five-time reigning Sask Alta hockey league champions, the Dewberry Mustangs, as well as the most storied family in the history of chuckwagon racing, the Bensmillers, the only family that has had three generations qualify for the finals of the Rangeland Derby at the Calgary Stampede.

Venture a little farther west and you will find the rich Ukrainian heritage in the areas around Clandonald, Minburn, Innisfree, and Ranfurly.

Regardless of where you travel in my constituency, you will eventually return to the crossroads of the village of Mannville, home to the historic Telephone Exchange Museum, unique in Alberta.

Vermilion-Lloydminster is home to some of the finest livestock producers in the world. During my veterinary career I was privileged to work with these progressive, innovative, and peer-respected individuals.

But we produce more than just great Alberta beef. Grain, oilseed, and pulse crop production is also vital to our area. Our producers are leaders in the concept of farm-to-fork sustainable production, utilizing creative marketing that sees their products served in some of the finest restaurants in the world. Want to try some fine pecorino sheep cheese? We produce that. Interested in elk velvet products processed near Kitscoty and exported worldwide? We produce that, too. Even Paradise Valley free-range pork is produced in my constituency. Those pigs were my patients. Agriculture is evolving, and I'm proud of the farmers and ranchers from my constituency that are leaders in that movement.

Mr. Speaker, I've been honoured to serve my community in a variety of capacities since coming to Lloydminster in 1983. First and foremost, I was privileged to act as the other family doctor for nearly three decades in my veterinary practice. Caring for patients and their owners was not just about diagnosis and treatment. It was about trust, about building relationships and providing lifelong care to companion animals that today are family members in every sense of the word.

This vocation also gave me the opportunity to visit farms and ranches throughout our area at all hours of the day and night and often in challenging weather conditions. I learned that animals have a poor concept of clock or calendar. They don't care if it's the weekend or your birthday, and they demand your full attention when their needs arise. Since coming here, I've been told by my more experienced colleagues that this will be good preparation for my new vocation.

As a city councillor in the 1980s I learned the importance of fiscal responsibility, working co-operatively with other elected officials, and that there is only one taxpayer and they expect wise and prudent stewardship of their tax dollars. As a coach of soccer and speed skating I saw how sport and recreation is an important means to mould and mentor our young people, teach fair play, respect for rules, an active lifestyle, and lifelong fitness.

Serving recently on our health foundation as board chair, I have experienced first-hand some of the many challenges that we face in our health care system.

As church elder I have led services in our seniors' lodges and nursing homes, and I've listened to the concerns of our grandparents, who only ask to be able to enjoy their golden years in an atmosphere of dignity and respect.

Where does that leave us today? As I've listened to the debate on the Speech from the Throne, we've seen the thrust and parry that is part of our parliamentary heritage, and that's good. This parliament, this government has laid out a plan of action, one that addresses the issues and concerns raised during the recent election. Let me be clear. Albertans sent this government many messages during the course of the recent election campaign, and they have been heard. Now it's the government's job to prove that we have listened and will act on their behalf.

Opposition members have and will continue to provide constructive criticism, propose alternative courses of action, and hold the government to account. Let's make sure we listen to each other because no one party has a monopoly on all the good ideas. It shouldn't matter if it's an NDP idea or a Liberal idea or a Wildrose or a Progressive Conservative idea. What should matter is whether it's a good idea.

Albertans expect all of us to heed them and to lead them, and together we need to find the solutions to build our province for that future day when, perhaps, some of our portraits will adorn those walls. That is our mandate, and it belongs to all 87 of us. So I urge my colleagues on both sides of the House, regardless of political persuasion, to work together for the greater good of our province. In the words that we spoke at the opening of every sitting of TUXIS youth parliament, let us pledge ourselves anew in an unselfish quest for the best in our homes, in our churches and schools, in our work and communities, remembering always that life is not a goblet to be drained but a measure to be filled.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Anybody under 29(2)(a)?

If not, then just before we go on with the next speaker, I'm going to read you the list here that I have. I've received so many notes, probably a record coming to the chair in one day, somewhere over 40, regarding the speaking list. We'll have to tighten this up in the future, hon. members. We'll need a lot of co-operation from the House leaders of all four parties and from individual members. I have the hon. Minister for Tourism, Parks and Recreation, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, then Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, Calgary-Shaw, Calgary-South East, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, and we'll announce more as we go.

Hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, the floor is yours.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, with Standing Order 13 could you please clarify why the back to back? Usually we go back and forth on these.

The Speaker: Perhaps you didn't hear what I had said in the lead-up to this previous comment here. We had a circumstance that required a little urgency, and I asked the favour of the House. That's why we had to go with two in a row.

Ms Cusanelli: If it pleases you, I am happy to delay my maiden speech to another day if it would help the situation.

The Speaker: If that's your wish. I understood you had your parents here from the notes that I got.

Ms Cusanelli: My mom is here, yeah.

The Speaker: Hon. minister, why don't you just proceed. The chair has had this on his head here for the last 35 minutes and has made a ruling, so why don't you proceed.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and congratulations on your election to this Chamber and also to my colleagues for their success in this election 2012.

What an honour it is to rise here today representing constituents of Calgary-Currie and to respond to the Speech from the Throne. As their MLA I take on this role with humility and excitement. This, my first speech, is also my promise to serve with significance and with integrity. I will act as an agent of change to bring Alberta into a very exciting future.

First off, I would also like to acknowledge His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for his commitment to public service. As a former peacekeeper he is truly a role model for all Albertans, and I would like to thank him for this.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Premier for providing real life leadership and the direction she has initiated for our province.

I would also like to recognize three very special people in my life, whom I credit my success and ability to be here with you and serve today: my mother, whose unfaltering strength has taught me that anything is achievable through hard work and through integrity; my partner, Tom, who has been my source of never-ending support and encouraged me to maintain course through storms and celebrated the happiness of overcoming those; finally, my daughter, Victoria, who is an image of patience, dignity, and love. I learn from her wisdom each day.

Mr. Speaker, this government has a responsible plan in place to build upon the great legacy of our province, and this design speaks to the needs and desires of Albertans. The policies of this government have resonated with me, especially as they relate to assisting our most vulnerable citizens. Serving families and communities has always been central to my work in public service and is something I find great joy in.

It is the joy in witnessing the transformation in the lives of young people that inspired me as a school principal. Being an educator provided me with many satisfying experiences, which have made distinct impressions on my life. No experience was more rewarding than developing trusting and caring relationships with vulnerable, disadvantaged students and helping them with their day-to-day challenges. While working with these students, I realized that there is a unique potential within all of us and that everyone deserves opportunity to grow into productive citizens. Troubled students, however, need our support. They need our promise that we will help them reach their goals and overcome their challenges.

Through our children's stories I have learned the value of a promise kept. The Speech from the Throne reminded me of my duty to uphold the examples of our government's kept promises.

This government in carrying out these promises is fulfilling a valuable and noble cause. Our government will continue to build a tradition of serving Albertans by doing the right things. By maintaining steady and predictable funding to our education system, over the next three years we will be able to employ the necessary resources to assist each of our children. I am proud of this measure, which will give the ability to school districts to make decisions at the local level and serve the needs of our constituents. In doing so, we will recognize the potential of our youth, helping to ensure that they have bright and productive futures. Mr. Speaker, this three-year funding decision is the right thing to do for education, and I could not be more honoured to be a part of this membership, which values the future of our province and honours its promise to children.

Mr. Speaker, I want to highlight that His Honour's Speech from the Throne addressed the importance of environmental stewardship. Alberta is the home to some of the most scenic places in the world. From the pristine lakes and rivers to the towering Rocky Mountains, our diverse landscape is one to envy. People from around the world come to Alberta to truly live the experience of adventure and majestic beauty that we have the opportunity to be a part of as a way of life.

We were also blessed with a wealth of natural resources. These resources sustain our economy and families across the province. For this we are extremely fortunate. However, in developing these resources, we must be cognizant of our environment and its fragile nature. Mr. Speaker, I believe it is critical that we maintain a high level of environmental stewardship in order to protect Alberta's natural beauty. In doing so, Alberta will signal to the rest of the world that we are striving toward a cleaner environment, setting an example for other jurisdictions.

The Speech from the Throne laid forth initiatives that will help monitor environmental quality, and these steps will help us ensure that our environmental standards are continuously improved, enabling us to maintain the splendour we have all come to know and love here in Alberta. I am grateful to be able to act as a steward on behalf of the constituents of Calgary-Currie. So many of the rich dialogues with our Calgary-Currie constituents were held on the doorsteps and involved discussions related to environmental stewardship. I make the promise to my constituents to be their voice on this front. I look forward to the two-way dialogue that we will have over the course of the next years.

I am also looking forward to our government building infrastructure to expand our energy sector across Canada and also across the world. This will help create jobs and improve our economic well-being, benefiting all Albertans. As His Honour stated last week, Alberta's prosperity cannot come at the expense of its beauty. The two must go hand in hand. We know that all Albertans expect us to make decisions regarding the prosperity of our province for the right reasons. Together I know that we will achieve the delicate balance that exists between high quality of life and also maintaining the graceful landscape and beauty with which we have been blessed.

In closing, I would like to again thank the constituents of Calgary-Currie for this opportunity to represent them. I am truly humbled and grateful for this opportunity to advocate for their needs. We will celebrate our strong, vibrant voice in this Assembly, and that is my promise to my constituents. To His Honour the Lieutenant Governor: thank you for so eloquently presenting the Speech from the Throne. To all members of this House: let us work together in a cohesive and dignified manner. Let us reflect the hopes of our constituents of building upon the already great legacy of our province, and let us reflect these hopes in a manner that demonstrates the real leadership, true respect, and dignity that is the expectation of our constituents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, I'll go to Cardston-Taber-Warner, please.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to stand and address the 28th Legislature and all Albertans. I'd like to begin by looking at some things that I think we all have in common. First, we won more votes in our riding than anyone else. We talked with many people grateful to live in Alberta. Some were born here. Others moved here looking for a job or a better job. We have a desire to serve all Albertans, we want to make a difference and leave a legacy, and like most Albertans, many of us are or used to be PC Party supporters.

I was born and raised in Lethbridge. I had a paper route as a kid and worked summers for my dad's trucking company, Speedy Storage & Cartage. I swept floors, washed trucks, worked as a swamper, helped out in the shop, and even made deliveries around the city.

When I was 20, I moved to Sweden and lived there for two and a half years. I learned to speak the language and still snacka lite svenska. I lived among the people. I saw first-hand the debilitating effects of womb-to-tomb socialism: the high tax rates, the redistribution of wealth from the productive risk takers to those cautiously putting forth less effort and expecting others to provide for them.

I learned four economic truths in Sweden. First, you can't multiply wealth by dividing it. Secondly, you can't legislate the poor into prosperity by taxing the wealthy out of prosperity. Third, what one person receives without working for, another person must work for without receiving. Fourth, government cannot give someone anything that it does not first take from someone else.

Upon returning from Scandinavia, I attended university in the U.S.A. and earned degrees in psychology and a master's of business administration. I spent most of my working years running the family trucking company, steering it in a different direction, from local delivery to oil field services. We relocated the business to Taber and became known for providing the quickest, safest, and most cost-effective rig moves in western Canada. This was accomplished by creating systems that encouraged innovation and creative problem solving by people on the front lines.

I've also taught management at the University of Lethbridge and developed and taught a very effective life skills and employability module to help introduction-to-trades students complete their courses successfully at Lethbridge College. I'm a volunteer at a nongovernment, not-for-profit employment agency. I lead self-employment workshops for aspiring entrepreneurs. Each school day that I'm not here, I teach ethics and morality to grade 11 and 12 students, who get up before school starts to come early and study the wisdom literature of the ages. From these books we learn the constancy of human nature and how to apply life lessons from the past to current challenges.

With partners I cofounded ChopStix restaurant, a new franchise concept we recently opened in Airdrie. It's right on highway 2, and I invite all of you to stop in and enjoy some quick gourmet Chinese food.

Mr. McAllister: Free.

Mr. Bikman: Who said that?

As a father of 13 children I know a little bit about organization, teamwork, and delegation. I've learned how to adjudicate and how to find common ground. Eight sons and five daughters graduated from public school and have all earned at least one postsecondary degree; some have three. All are married, and my wife, Sheila, and I have 33 and a third grandchildren. I've negotiated with teamsters and with suppliers, and I can tell you that they're easier than kids.

At times over the past 30 years I've been a mayor, a deputy mayor, and a councillor in the village of Stirling. Like many of you, I've always voted so that I'd have a right to complain. Well, I hope I don't give my constituents any cause to complain.

The Cardston-Taber-Warner riding covers a large part of southern Alberta. From the rich, productive, irrigated fields surrounding Barnwell, Taber, and Grassy Lake in the east, it includes the communities of Wrentham, Warner, Milk River, and south to Coutts on the American border. Going west along highway 501 through the rich, productive rolling hills of the Milk River Ridge, we come to Del Bonita, which this year celebrates its 100th anniversary, and then to the temple town of Cardston. Highway 501 runs through the newly discovered Bakken formation oil field, beginning to be developed now. Continuing west of Cardston along highway 5 through the hamlets of Leavitt and Mountain View, my friend Broyce Jacob's hometown, leads us to the Waterton Park townsite. Passing south of Hill Spring and Glenwood, this is beautiful farming and ranching country.

The Blood reserve is now part of this large riding, too, with its First Nation heritage and unique culture. Travelling east from Stand Off, we cross the very important St. Mary dam and reservoir, rejoining highway 5 at Spring Coulee. Further east are the towns of Magrath, Welling, Raymond, and Stirling, my hometown, all settled originally, beginning in 1899, by Mormon pioneers. They came to develop an irrigation system that turned this dry, parched part of the Palliser Triangle into one of the most productive and advanced irrigated farming and ranching areas in the world, a huge exporter of beef and produce and home of delicious Taber corn.

This drive is well over 600 kilometres. Irrigation farmers, deeply dependent on electricity to run their pumps, are very concerned about the alarming increases in electrical costs. Bill 50 is one of the main reasons that they voted Wildrose. They hoped the rest of the province was equally aware of the threat to all Albertans and the businesses that employ them. Irrigation and water management are vital to the region. Much more money and attention are needed for storage and to deal with flooding and runoff, a regular threat to the village of Stirling, which last year came within inches of having the Ridge reservoir breached, a disaster that would have destroyed my town.

My constituents have had honourable MLAs since the mid-1970s. However, for the past four years they've felt increasingly disenfranchised. They believe their voices have not been heard clearly or understood by the past and current Premiers. When asked why they left the PC Party, they usually say, "I didn't leave the party; the party left me," and they move their hand to the left, indicating the drift to more socialistic and left-leaning philosophies.

Here's a little list of what the constituents of Cardston-Taber-Warner tell me prompted their migration to Wildrose. First, they want a say in decisions that affect them. The Premier often states: we've listened to Albertans, and they're telling us. Well, no farmer, rancher, or dairyman I know asked for a landowners' advocate. What they said instead, loudly and clearly, at the task force meetings was: "Repeal bills 24, 36, and 50. Let's start fresh." They don't want to just be listened to. They want to be heard, and they'd like to think that what they say will make a difference. It will to me. I promised them that I'll work with the government to remind them of the principles that made Alberta great.

In the south they're tired of hearing their PC MLAs apologetically attempting to justify legislation that he or she knows full well is not what the constituents wanted or needed. "I spoke up for you in caucus but was voted down" is the unacceptable explanation usually given. Mr. Speaker, so far as I know, there is no law or rule preventing this government from allowing its MLAs free votes in the Legislature. I'm asked: why doesn't this happen? Our conclusion in Cardston-Taber-Warner is that democracy under PC rule simply means: "Jeez, we let you vote about every four years in a semifixed election season. What more do you people want?"

Lately the government's message has clearly been: when we want your opinion, we'll give it to you. People in my riding can't believe that their government really thinks that it's smarter than the collective wisdom of Albertans, that it's so out of touch with the voters it thinks government means a legislative dictatorship. They've observed that the PCs are actually a minority government, one that over 50 per cent of the voters rejected.

In discussing the superboard, my neighbours reminded me that nowhere in history has central planning ever produced better results for hard-working citizens. Oh, it's more efficient. You don't have to put up with disagreements or the opinions of those you don't consider your intellectual equals, but it sure as heck isn't better at meeting real needs in a timely, cost-effective manner.

Second, southern Albertans want a balanced budget. They know this government has a spending problem, not a revenue problem. Nothing in the Speech from the Throne reassured them that it realizes this yet or intends to make any real changes. They know that when more money is left in the hands of the people and companies that earn it, more productive sector jobs are created, the standard of living rises, and their government – yes, the people's government – collects more taxes. History proves it. They know the government doesn't have any money of its own. It's all taxpayers' money. They know the government doesn't create wealth. Too often it usurps and misallocates it by subsidizing uncompetitive projects – does anybody want some world-class magnesium? – creating bloated bureaucracies and trying to bribe voters with their own money.

Many of my constituents are businessmen and -women, including lots in agribusiness. They know the surest way to underdeliver at the front lines and exceed budgets is by allowing overhead expenses to grow out of proportion to the services being provided and the results being achieved. They're smart enough to know that when cuts are required, they must begin at the top, not at the client, consumer, or citizen delivery end. They know that free enterprise is the most efficient and effective way to deliver scarce resources. The invisible hand that Adam Smith spoke of is real because human nature is constant. No government is smart or powerful enough to overcome human nature. History is littered with the remains of failed dictatorships, be they legislative tyrannies or bloody battles.

Thirdly, they're tired of long waiting lines for health services and intimidation of the real health care providers on the front lines. Again, it's not money; it's the system. Decisions need to be made closer to the people affected by them. The main benefit of centralization is purchasing. Right now that's the only thing most people think the superboard may be getting right, and you don't need eight layers of management to accomplish that.

An Alberta Health Services worker recently whispered to me, fearful of losing her job, that she sees millions of dollars wasted each year in just her small area. She asserts that a one-time investment of $100,000 would return at least 40 times its cost every year. That's $4 million in annual savings in this little department, and her manager agrees. Why isn't it being done? Because he says that the savings will benefit another department, too, and result in a smaller budget for him. Where is the accountability? Don't bother looking. It doesn't exist.

I ran on a platform of restoring the Alberta advantage. To the citizens of Cardston-Taber-Warner this means, among other things: entrenching property rights in our Charter and allowing access to the legal system for all disputes, balanced budgets, rebuilding the heritage savings trust fund and saving for a rainy day, cost-effective medical services, more choice in education and certainly no clause 16 in the Education Act, reduced regulation and red tape, accountability within the civil service, transparency and openness in government decision-making, not behind closed cabinet doors.

We believe in the collective wisdom and intelligence of our citizens. They need to be consulted, listened to, and heard. It takes more time and effort to begin with, but it's much quicker and cheaper in the long run because you get it right the first time.

I'll be watching, I'll be working hard, and I'll be advocating for true conservative principles. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, let me just give you the speakers list – I think we have it sorted out – Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, Calgary-Shaw, Calgary-South East, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, and if time permits Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, the hon. Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation, Little Bow, and Calgary-McCall.

The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would like to congratulate you on your election. As a rookie in this Assembly I look forward to your advice. Throughout your career you've established a reputation as someone who has been fair and approachable. This House will be well served by you and the guidance you will provide to all members. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, I am a third-generation constituent of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, and I am so honoured to be able to represent the dynamic constituency of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville. I figure everyone has a phrase to address their constituency with, and mine will be “dynamic.” Some would say that it’s dynamic because of the many communities it includes, 12 municipalities: three counties, Lamont, parts of Beaver and Minburn counties; two villages, Chipman and Andrew; five towns, Bruderheim, Lamont, Mundare, Vegreville, and Tofield; one city, the city of Fort Saskatchewan; and a very large portion of the specialized municipality of Strathcona county. Those are the municipalities that make up Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville. These communities provide a great deal of variety of lifestyle choice, ranging from urban to rural, infusing vitality through diversity.

Agricultural opportunities brought pioneers to this area, and this industry continues to play a vital role in sustaining our economy. Agriculture has evolved since the days of the homesteaders, since the days of my grandparents. In the Speech from the Throne the Lieutenant Governor referred to the unique western heritage and spirit of self-reliance that have made our province a special place to live. Alberta’s farmers embody this heritage and this spirit. Mr. Speaker, farmers are now working thousands of acres and operate millions of dollars of equipment.

Farmers have to be innovative to stay competitive, and Providence Grain, a farmer-owned independent grain handling company whose head office is in Fort Saskatchewan, is one example of how farmers have addressed their changing needs and their opportunities. Others have diversified. Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville is home to commercial Saskatoon berry orchards, an experimental hackberry orchard, a growing equestrian industry, and commercial and purebred cattle operations.

Agriculture continues to be a growth industry in Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville. Unique independent food processors have invested in this region and have thrived as a result. I’m very pleased to have shared with my colleagues today a sample of one of Vegreville’s fine local products from Simply Fine Sweets, a local specialty chocolatier and bakery. Mr. Speaker, their products are available in Vegreville, but they are also served at Edmonton’s own Hotel Macdonald.

Adding value to our products locally, be they agricultural or petrochemical, is not only important to me and my constituents but to all Albertans. I say this because according to a recent survey 70 per cent of Albertans feel strongly about value-added and about upgrading bitumen within this province. Home to three of Alberta’s five Industrial Heartland partners – Lamont, Fort Saskatchewan, and Strathcona – we embrace and we encourage sustainable industrial development in our riding.

Alberta’s Industrial Heartland is a total of 582 square kilometres, and the value-added is more than just upgrading bitumen to synthetic crude. It also presents an opportunity for Alberta to grow our thriving petrochemical industry by using the off-gases from one company to become the feedstock of another. This approach is already starting to happen as Williams Energy recently agreed to supply off-gas ethane to NOVA Chemicals. The heartland is close to the resources needed for the development of industry, including water, workforce, and transportation.

This development is happening in an environmentally conscious way that is sensitive to the local community. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the Life in the Heartland website was developed as a one-stop information portal to provide residents with convenient access to air and water quality information, noise and light data, and safety information. I’m very proud to say that one of the ways safety is being addressed is the Northeast Region Community Awareness Emergency Response – what a mouthful – NR CAER for short, which provides mutual aid emergency preparedness for its nine member municipalities and 30 industrial partners. This organization established the UPDATEline, that was implemented in 2003, in order to provide the community with 24-hour information on its member activity.

Alberta’s Industrial Heartland has attracted over $30 billion of investment and has developed into Canada’s largest hydrocarbon-processing region and has done so using eco-industrial principles. This is very much in line with the Premier’s vision of developing our natural resources responsibly while protecting our province’s natural beauty. I am encouraged by our hon. Premier’s recent comments in this House before the recent election.

We in this government are committed to diversifying the economy and to ensuring that we’re investing in value-added for the good of all Albertans. We know that that has tremendous opportunities for Albertans and Alberta taxpayers across the province.

Now, I would be remiss as a small-business owner not to mention that small-business owners have located throughout Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, and as they say: small business is big business. These businesses provide services to the major industrial players and to local residents alike. Small businesses are vital to our continued success as a province. Our province, as noted in the Speech from the Throne, is the most economically free jurisdiction in North America. Small business will benefit from our government’s work to simplify their regulatory burden.

In addition, all businesses, large or small, require access to markets, and Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville is fortunate to be served by both the CP and the CN rail lines; the Warren Thomas Aerodrome, Josephburg; numerous pipelines; and many highways, including the Trans Canada Yellowhead highway.

Mr. Speaker, you will find Elk Island national park and the Ukrainian cultural village within this riding. In Fort Saskatchewan you can find a showcase of history, the recreated North West Mounted Police fort, which stood on the site from 1875 to 1885. As part of the Fort Saskatchewan Museum and Historic Site the fort helps tell the story of the people that made Fort Saskatchewan their home.

I could go on, but the main reason that Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville is such a dynamic constituency is the people that I have the privilege to represent. They work hard, they aren’t afraid to get involved, and they care about their communities and neighbours. They are the reason I want to do everything in my power to ensure that the communities they love are strong and vibrant. That is one of the reasons I was so proud to hear in the Speech from the Throne our government’s commitment to strengthening families and communities.

Alberta would be much poorer if the small-town way of life were to disappear. That’s why I want to ensure that people can call their same community home from their first birthday to their last. This means we must work to ensure the proper balance between services and fiscal priorities. This means not only ensuring timely access to health care and innovative education programs, near and dear to my heart as an educator, but also support for recreation and cultural pursuits, delivered through local organizations such as agricultural societies, cultural communities, and faith groups.

Mr. Speaker, I know my constituents expect me to listen to their issues, to their ideas, and to their solutions, and I will do my best to listen and to represent them and carry their message forward.

One such message I look forward to working with my colleagues here to address is the volatility of electrical prices and ensuring that Alberta's economy remains strong and prosperous.

Having just finished a campaign, Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my hon. colleagues that infrastructure investment is vital to this area. Local municipalities, industrial partners, and the province must work towards a new heavy-load bridge across the North Saskatchewan River, affordable seniors housing units, and an improved or new facility to deliver hospital services in Vegreville. These examples are just some of the needs that exist in the communities of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, that are simultaneously growing and aging. I applaud the government's continued investment in infrastructure, as outlined in the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to working with all members of the Assembly in this building in the future, following in the steps of those such as the hon. Ed Stelmach, Rob Lougheed, Muriel Abdurahman, Derek Fox, and Dr. Walter Buck. I look forward to helping to assist in a future that invests in people no matter where they live, an Alberta that honours our seniors, supports our families, and encourages our youth to reach their potential.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members. Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the next speaker. The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great honour to be here today addressing this House for the first time. The history of this magnificent building and all it stands for, the beauty of this Chamber, and being in the presence of my fellow members makes this perhaps one of the most equally humbling and exciting moments of my life as I deliver this my maiden speech. I strongly believe that the next four years will shape our province into the future and the roles we play on both sides of this floor will have a lasting impact on Albertans for a long time.

Thank you to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for his delivery of the Speech from the Throne. I have great respect for him, the role he plays in our democracy, and what he has achieved, a member of the Order of Canada and a man who has spent his life fighting to ensure that other nations can enjoy the same things we so often take for granted here at home: safety, security, freedom, and democracy. His Honour is a shining example of a great Albertan, and being in his presence has added to the pride that I have in being a member of this Assembly.

I have the immense privilege of representing the riding of Calgary-Shaw, which recently went through some border changes to accommodate the redrawn electoral map. Located in the deep south end of the city, Calgary-Shaw is now made up of six distinct and unique communities: Midnapore, Sundance, Somerset, Shawnessy, and the recently added Millrise and Shawnee Slopes. The last two communities, Millrise and Shawnee Slopes, were previously well represented by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, and I pledge to continue the good work he did there.

In Calgary-Shaw there is a tangible spirit that is admirable and infectious. During the course of the campaign I had the pleasure of meeting with many great residents in the riding who have dedicated countless hours of volunteer work to building their communities. One shining example of this that I would like to share with the House is the story of the South Fish Creek Recreation Association. The creation of this outstanding facility is an iconic Albertan story, and it adds to the pride that my wife and I share in representing this riding. It is a great example of what makes Albertans unique: the spirit to overcome adversity, the willingness to give of oneself for the greater good, and ultimately the understanding that creating a legacy beyond ourselves is what real great work is about.

In conjunction with the YMCA, the public library, and a Catholic high school a group of dedicated volunteers took their vision for a community-based recreation centre and created a facility that will have a lasting impact on Albertans for generations. The community portion was just expanded two weeks ago, and it has become the first quad ice surface in the city. I had the great pleasure of being there to celebrate the grand opening with the wonderful people who made it all happen. There are countless inspiring stories in this riding, and in time I look forward to sharing many more.

Calgary-Shaw has a long history of electing strong members to this House, from Jim Dinning to Jon Havelock and, recently, Cindy Ady. The good people of this riding have always been well represented. This is the first time they have ever elected a member from the Official Opposition, and it will allow me to advocate for the constituents in a different way, from across this floor. I look forward to numerous engaging discussions and debates here, and I have confidence that many positives can come from this relationship as we work together to find areas of mutual interest and benefit.

Many people in the riding expressed concerns during the campaign that affect and impact all Albertans: health care, education, and seniors' care. I think that we can all agree here today that it is incumbent upon us all to put aside partisan gamesmanship as we find solutions to these critical areas of importance to all Albertans. It is simply what they expect of their government and why we in the Wildrose Party, as the Official Opposition, have stated that we will not oppose simply for the sake of opposing.

There are a couple of local issues I would like to highlight for this House, and those are primarily transportation and infrastructure issues within the riding. The construction of the ring road in Calgary is long overdue, and I applaud the work that has been done thus far. There are concerns about the interchange that is going in at 22X and Macleod Trail; specifically, that it will cut off access from Shawville Boulevard to eastbound 22X, which is critical to the flow of traffic out of the core commercial district in the riding, which is also home to an LRT station and the aforementioned rec centre, Y, public library, and high school. It impacts all Calgarians who benefit from and use this area, but in Calgary-Shaw it's in the heart of the riding. It is vital to ensure that shopping, dining, or accessing entertainment or public transit does not become a burden to those who live in the community.

There are also concerns that this interchange is one of the last to be built on the south leg of the ring road as it currently is only a single lane flowing in either direction and will eventually create a pinch point. The southwest portion of the ring road is also of high importance to our riding, and I look forward to assisting the hon. Minister of Transportation in any possible way I can to help put an end to the decades-long struggle around this piece of infrastructure.

Fish Creek park, one of the largest urban parks in North America, with a mixture of grassland and mixed forest spanning over 3,000 acres, is a source of immense pride for our riding. Roughly 3 million visitors per year enjoy this historic and natural preserve, and ensuring that the best practices of sustainability are employed to preserve the feel, atmosphere, and sense of tranquility the park has offered to so many over the years is of utmost importance to our riding.

Now, we have a lot to be proud of in Calgary-Shaw and a lot of great ideas to ensure that we continue to grow and meet the needs of our growing population while we still care for our natural environment.

Mr. Speaker, after you were dragged to your chair last week, you spoke with powerful emotion about your family and their role in your life. I am also very lucky to have a family that is very supportive and one that I wish to make proud in my role here. My wife, Sally, and my two-year-old son, Jude, are without question the greatest gifts in my life, and I will always remember the passion and dedication that my wife put into my campaign to be here today.

She is a first-generation Canadian, born of two Egyptian immigrants who came to Canada in 1976, and seeing the world through the lens of my in-laws, who experienced life under a dictatorship, is an invaluable perspective to be able to bring here and contrast our own government to.

I'll remind this House that Egypt just last week went through their first presidential election ever. Much was made during this past campaign about the fact that we have had one ruling party in Alberta for over 40 years. Similarly, former Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak also held onto power for over 40 years. At least here at home we can say that it was always through a democratic process that our governments received their mandates.

Likewise, we in the opposition have also received a mandate from the public, and our role is a critical component to a functioning democracy. Now, I've been asked to be the critic for Human Services, and I would like to thank our leader for tasking me with this important ministry. I have many personal connections to it, starting with the fact that I along with my sister are both adopted. We do not share the same biological parents, but the adoptive parents that we share are two of the finest people I will ever meet in my life, Dave and Sam Wilson, and I want them to be recognized here as well.

It is said that friends are the family that we choose. In my case I couldn't have chosen or asked for a better family. I'm eternally grateful to my biological mother for her strength and courage at the age of 16 to make the choice that she did, and I believe it is what allows me to be here today.

My sister Amanda has had many challenges in her life as she continues to learn how to live with an autism spectrum disorder. Growing up with a sibling with special needs was at times a struggle, but it taught me some of the most important life lessons, and I will carry them with me always: the strength of compassion; the need for equality; the understanding that just because our brains are wired differently does not mean that we are not the same, that we do not share the same desires, the same wants, to love and be loved. She is married to a wonderful man. Both of them are supported by AISH, and they share a special and unique bond. My wife and I are her alternate guardians, and this has us preparing for our lives to change overnight when we are set to assume the same responsibilities that many Albertans shoulder as they care for family members in need.

While knocking on doors, the one thing that struck me was just how many families are impacted by children with special needs. I could sense the agony as they strive to create the best life they can for their loved ones. Human Services can make a difference for the thousands of families that go through these struggles daily. I feel that my understanding and my familiarity with some of them will give me the capacity to work passionately and productively with the hon. minister to help fulfill the noble vision of this ministry.

These past weeks have been filled with new experiences, and I am in awe of the traditions of this House and will be inspired by its beauty and the passion of my fellow members. Last week, when I sat at this desk for the first time, I had an unexpected surprise when I opened the drawer to the desk and found those who had sat here before me, such names as Laurence Decore, former Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, and Peter Trynchy, whose grandson Jeffery now plays an integral role in our party.

While on that subject, I would also like to have this House recall another Canadian parliamentarian, one who has been an inspiration to me as I embark on my political career. Chuck Cadman was first elected to Parliament in 1997 as a Reformer. His primary initiative was to change the laws governing young offenders and to protect victims' rights after his 16-year-old son was randomly murdered in a brutal street attack. He successfully passed a private member's bill that resulted in changes to the Youth Criminal Justice Act, achieving his initial goal.

Now, many of you may recall the drama that unfolded in Parliament in 2005. We had a minority Liberal government. It was on the brink of falling during the budget vote. Mr. Cadman, the only independent elected, held the balance of power. A vote with the opposition, the government falls; a vote with the Liberals, they live to see another day. Despite receiving chemotherapy treatments throughout this time, it is rumoured that he sat in his constituency office for upwards of 12 hours a day, meeting with and listening to his constituents as he tried to decide how he was going to vote and what he was going to do. On voting day Mr. Cadman flew across the country to fulfill his duty.

I'll never forget the image of Mr. Cadman standing, ultimately siding with the Liberals. That moment in time, when he stood to vote, will forever be burned into my memory, and I consider that instant one of the most pure moments of democracy that I have ever witnessed. When he stood, he defined himself a second time. When asked why he voted with the government, he stated that he was simply obeying the wishes of his constituents, who did not want to face an election so soon after the last one.

He lost his battle with cancer only a few weeks after that defining moment. What I find so inspiring about Chuck Cadman is that he finished his political career the same way he started it, with honour and integrity. He fought for what he believed in, and he exemplified the ideal that our democracy is founded upon, that we as elected officials are here to represent our constituents, not our party and not our own interests.

Mr. Speaker, as we embark on this the 28th Legislature, my first, I will always remember why I am here and who it is that I represent, and most importantly I will constantly strive to do it with honour and integrity.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the next speaker, the hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour to rise today to respond to the Speech from the Throne. I begin by thanking His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, Donald Ethell. His Honour delivered a lucid and well-formulated plan on behalf of the government of Alberta.

I have great assurance and trust that the government of Alberta under the leadership of our hon. Premier will continue the long-term success that has made Alberta one of the best places to live in the world. I would like to thank the hon. Premier for articulating an exemplary vision for the future of this province, a vision that is forward thinking and one that will continue to foster the conditions necessary for our future development and growth. We are all very privileged to live in this great province, and I'm certainly privileged to be the representative for Calgary-South East.

I would like to sincerely thank the people at the very heart of our democratic system, the voters. Let us always remember that it is with their blessing and their authority that each of us is present in this Assembly today. I would like to express my gratitude to the people of Calgary-South East for placing their faith and confidence in me. I assure them that I will represent their interests faithfully, articulately, and with purpose. I will make their voice count in this Assembly and ensure that it is always present in the dialogue when we talk about the priorities Albertans hold for the future and how we can make our lives better for our families.

I also want to take this time to thank my wife, Mishelle; our two sons, Carson and Thaine; my family; friends; and supporters for helping me become a member of this Assembly. Without the enormous support of some key people in my riding this would not have been possible. I also want to thank the following people for the excellent work they do at the grassroots: Sean Chu, Kelly Bitz, Richard MacQuarrie, Shane Byciuk, James Sale, Leslie Paron, Cory Exner, Michelle Taylor, and Chris Wigle.

Mr. Speaker, one of the values that I've learned over and over in life is teamwork. We are always better when we stand together and work together. In my career as an advanced care paramedic I've experienced the positive outcomes of collaboration creating significant change, and that is what I hope to bring to the constituents of Calgary-South East.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to take a moment to congratulate you on your election as Speaker of this esteemed House. To all of my colleagues both in government caucus as well as the members of opposition parties: I congratulate you. It is my hope as members of this Assembly that together we will have a respectful and productive legislative session and four years of putting Albertans first rather than specific political interests.

As we celebrate 100 years in this House and 100 years of democracy, 100 years of the Calgary Stampede and the recognition of our heritage, I'd like to take a moment to reflect on my own family history. My family came to Canada in 1905. At that time my great-grandfather was 13 years old. He was wanting to follow in his older brother's footsteps, who had already had his own homestead in the wide open spaces of Alberta. Shortly after arriving in Alberta in his early teens, my great-grandfather took on the task of herding cattle by himself. He camped out for three months 120 kilometres from home with his dog and his horse. It's hard to imagine those sorts of things happening in this day and age. He demonstrated his ambition, courage, and determination. In 1911 that same 18-year-old applied for and received his own homestead just north of Michichi, Alberta, where my father grew up and where I spent my summers. Today that homestead is still producing food and contributing to the economy, run by my uncle and his son.

Mr. Speaker, my family has been in Alberta for over a hundred years, and I am blessed to know our history and our family and its contribution to this great province, from teaching Sunday school, adopting children, always lending a helping hand, participating in celebrations of our heritage like the Calgary Stampede, providing work and training for new Canadians, and dropping off groceries anonymously at people's doorsteps. Some of these examples I've seen first-hand, and others I have read about. Nonetheless, it has helped me shape my own values and the values I wish to pass on to my children.

Mr. Speaker, my family is just one example out of tens of thousands of families in this province that have contributed to our success by exemplifying the values of putting people first. As members of this Assembly if we truly serve and work to serve Albertans every day, how can we possibly go wrong? I believe Albertans care about people, and they value principles more than the bottom line. It is my understanding that this compassion was well articulated in the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I'm particularly proud of my constituency of Calgary-South East. This is a vibrant, diverse, and growing community that reflects the best qualities of Calgary and the best qualities of this great province. This is an urban riding that encompasses the communities of Auburn Bay, Chaparral, Copperfield, Cranston, New Brighton, Legacy, Mahogany, Seton, Silverado, and Walden. The majority of people here speak English, but many of my constituents also speak Spanish, Vietnamese, Punjabi, German, Chinese, and French. They represent the ever-changing face of Alberta, that has grown to become more diverse over the years, and it is this diversity that is the strength for this province.

People bring with them new ways of doing things and perspectives that enrich the fabric of our society. A constant flow of ideas and fresh perspectives are key to maintaining and growing our international and economic competitiveness. It is true in the case of both long-time residents of Alberta as well as newcomers that the diligent and entrepreneurial spirit of these constituents has been apparent throughout the constituency. We are a constituency of opportunity-oriented folks who run their own small businesses and are taking advantage of the wealth of opportunities available to us as Albertans. My father ran his own business for 40 years, and it was there that I learned the values of honesty, integrity, and getting the job done right the first time. I see much of that same outlook present in the riding of Calgary-South East. It is this powerful western spirit that has been crucial to our past successes and will remain so as we move forward.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to point out with pride that the constituency of Calgary-South East is also an educated one. Fully 90 per cent of the constituents have a diploma or a certificate of some sort while 30 per cent of constituents have a university degree. In both cases, this is higher than the average provincially. In addition, the fact is that a large proportion of constituents are employed in the scientific, technical, or professional fields, engaged in developing constant innovations and knowledge. Whether it is construction, manufacturing, retail, transportation, finance, education, or health care, I know that the constituents of Calgary-South East are performing tremendously well in their respective fields.

Mr. Speaker, when I hear the hon. Premier speak about government's priorities for the future, I see how they align with what I hear from Albertans. The message they convey to me is to put people first, do it with purpose, and do it while building the province more efficiently, all while continuing to spend wisely. This is why I was pleased to hear the Speech from the Throne last week as it expressed many of the perspectives that I've been hearing from my constituents. Much like this government, Albertans believe in building stronger families and communities. The goal is to support families and communities in reaching their full potential, paving the way for people to take advantage of opportunities which allow them to enjoy a better quality of life.

The hon. Premier has also pledged to have a strong and nimble public service, one that is designed around Albertans and one that is well poised to offer exemplary services to the public in an efficient manner.

Mr. Speaker, the family and the local community is the most basic unit of our society, and we are only as strong as our weakest family and our weakest community. Family is where the future of this province is to be found. That being said, let us not forget our First Nations and Métis families. With a proud history they were here before any other newcomers started arriving, and they, too, have contributed to the greatness of this province. I served with Maskwachees Ambulance Authority on the Samson Cree Nation, Ermineskin, Louis Bull, and Montana reserves. I've seen firsthand the challenges the aboriginal people of Alberta are facing, and I look forward to a meaningful dialogue to see where we can be of support.

Mr. Speaker, it was obvious to me from the throne speech that we must support our seniors, giving them the tools that they need to live fulfilled lives as they age. After all, the generations before us were the ones who built this province and made it an amazing place today.

I am pleased that this government continues to innovate in the provision of health care. Family care clinics and community care paramedics are a model for recognizing the crucial role of health care practitioners and allowing them to practise to their full extent. These innovations will also create greater access to primary health care for Albertans, which will contribute to a more efficient system in the future.

It is also important to help younger members of the family by offering a variety of educational options right in the community. As I raise my two young sons, I am grateful for the number of choices that I can make with respect to their education, particularly the choices in my own home, where I have the freedom to teach my children my values. Albertans have access to world-class education, and this government is committed to keeping it that way.

Most families and communities in this province are thriving, Mr. Speaker, and we will carry on making sure that they do. What I heard from the throne speech is a commitment from this government to providing the resources necessary for families to flourish.

I also believe in the solid basis of our current prosperity. It was built by a government that fostered the conditions for economic growth and development. To me the throne speech has emphasized this, the importance of securing Alberta's economic future.

This is a government that believes in spending the taxpayers' money wisely. Through her effective leadership the hon. Premier has introduced the idea of results-based budgets that will balance public spending by providing predictable funding and eliminating government waste. This will be achieved through no new taxes and no provincial sales tax. Mr. Speaker, let me repeat myself: no new taxes and no provincial sales tax.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, we are going to be innovative, we're going to be collaborative, we're going to be efficient, and we're going to be inclusive. We are going to lead this province with purpose, with class, and with dignity while serving Albertans first.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Just before I recognize the next speaker, I will just give you the order that I have for speakers. Assuming that we will have time, I will next recognize the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, then the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, and if we have time, the hon. Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation.

Before I recognize the next speaker, may we briefly revert to the Introduction of Guests?

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some members of my campaign team who are here this evening. Joscelyn Proby, Donald George Retson, Peter Cross, Val Neaves, and Trevor Zimmerman all helped a great deal to ensure that we have this seat that I'm standing above here today. If they could stand and receive the warm welcome.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, introductions?

Mr. Bilous: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce a number of very special guests. Along with my parents are many campaign workers, volunteers, who helped me be here today. I'd like to call your names, and as I do, please stand and be recognized: my parents, Orest and Mary Ann Bilous; Chris Klein; Miranda Klein; Gertrude Sopracolle; Brad Lafortune; Peggy Wright; Garrett Spelliscy; Bri Pickard; Sasha Pickard; Darren Zeigel. Please stay standing. If you could please join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: On His Honour's speech I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to begin by expressing my congratulations to all the new members on their election to the Assembly. I'd also like to congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on your new role and was pleased to hear your commitment to impartiality and fairness in the House.

I'm honoured and humbled to be the elected representative for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. I think all members will agree that our electoral success was the direct result of the hard work of many volunteers, including family members, that was put into our campaigns. In addition to the volunteers that I introduced, I would also like to thank the many volunteers who couldn't be here today who contributed countless hours and strengthened the fabric of our democracy by getting involved.

I'd like to take this opportunity to talk a little bit about the area I represent, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, about its history and deep roots in progressive politics. The constituency is located in the northeast part of Edmonton and has a very rich history. Originally Beverly, the community where I live, was known for its mines, that provided jobs for its many residents and coal for much of Alberta. The town of Beverly was incorporated in 1914, and though the coal mines no longer provide the backbone for the community, the area is still full of life and will be celebrating its hundred-year anniversary in July of 2014. I feel proud and humbled to be able to represent the community as it celebrates its centennial.

5:10

One of the undeniable characteristics of Beverly is its sense of history. Many original families continue to live in the Beverly area, and in my three years of door-knocking I've had the opportunity to meet many community members whose families have lived in the area for generations. With this history comes a great sense of pride and passion for the community, and I'm excited to see young families moving back into the neighbourhoods north and south of 118th Ave. These young families will add their stories to the next hundred years of Beverly's already rich history.

The constituency also crosses the Yellowhead and encompasses Clareview, including Hermitage, Belmont, and the historic Fort Road district. With the new electoral boundaries our constituency gained some neighbourhoods from Edmonton-Manning. I experienced the fabulous sense of community in those neighbourhoods on Family Day this year, when the Hairsine Community League organized a great event with pickup hockey, bonfires, and a sleigh ride for kids.

First developed in 1972, Clareview is still a relatively new part of Edmonton. It's a good area for young families. It's affordable, they can live close to the schools and the beautiful Hermitage ravine, and there's convenient access to public transit through the LRT. I met constituents from all walks of life while door-knocking in the Clareview area. It's an area of immense diversity. Many new Canadians are settling there, some so new they haven't become citizens yet, so they couldn't vote in this election but are looking forward to 2016.

The aboriginal community is also a very significant part of this area. Some told me they were concerned about their young people, who face many challenges in the form of poverty, gangs, and addiction. I share with them a commitment to safer communities with thriving programs for our youth and supporting our municipalities so they can afford good community policing. As a teacher in Edmonton's inner city I've worked with many aboriginal youth, and I believe every one of them deserves a fair chance at success. I'm happy to have the opportunity to serve these constituents as the NDP aboriginal affairs critic.

The people of Clareview are hard-working Albertans who responded to our message of making life more affordable. They're worried about their electricity bills, especially the seniors on fixed incomes who I met. They need Alberta to have predictable regulated rates like everywhere else in Canada so that they can make ends meet every month.

In the last election people in Clareview made an important choice. They wanted real representation, a strong voice in the Legislature standing up to this government and fighting for their priorities. As a New Democrat I come after other strong NDP representation in the communities of Beverly-Clareview. The constituency has had two New Democrat MLAs in the past – Ed Ewasiuk from '86 to '93 and Ray Martin from 2004 to 2008 – plus one member of the CCF, Elmer E. Roper, from 1942 to 1955. I've learned a lot indirectly and personally from these men, and their names would continue to come up on the doorstep when I was campaigning for the past three years. I think that foundation was a large part of our success, and I will do my best to live up to the high standard these former MLAs have set.

For six years I taught high school in Edmonton's inner city. I worked with some of the most vulnerable members of society. The barriers and challenges that these young people face is incredible.

Many youth have lived through foster care, the prison system, homelessness, prostitution, addictions, trouble with the law, struggling to make ends meet, frequent trips to the Food Bank, and insufficient winter clothing. There is no shortage of challenges these young people face. I taught at an inner-city high school because I believe all Albertans deserve to have the same opportunities. I've seen and been a part of the successes of students and young people when they're given the opportunity to overcome incredible odds and climb insurmountable obstacles.

No matter how different people may appear to be on the outside or on the surface, inside we're all the same, with the same needs, desires, hopes, and dreams. The people of this province, the people of Beverly-Clareview are no different. They all want a roof over their head, a safe community to live in, a clean environment, a good job, a health care system that can be relied upon when they're sick. That's why Albertans deserve a government where people are the first priority. In the words of JFK: "Democracy is never a final achievement. It is a call to an untiring effort."

Mr. Speaker, first and foremost, the job of an MLA is to represent his or her constituents. By talking to people over the past three years on the doorstep, in their homes, and at their places of work, I met thousands of people who were eager to share their priorities and their concerns about our community and our province. In response to the Speech from the Throne, I would like to share with this Assembly my priorities, which have come from conversations I've had directly with the residents of Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. The Alberta NDP opposition stands up for all Albertans. Unfortunately, as evidenced by their throne speech, the current government does not.

I met many people who work in the oil and gas sector, and they told me that keeping quality jobs in Alberta is important. Many said that they were voting New Democrat for the first time in their life because they want this province to invest in upgrading and refining our bitumen here in Alberta. Many Albertans cannot understand why the Conservative government is intent on building a pipeline to ship our raw bitumen and our jobs with it. If we build four new upgraders in Alberta, it would generate billions of dollars in revenue from taxes and royalties, create thousands of high-quality long-term jobs, and ensure Alberta remains prosperous for the long term.

It baffles me that this government is intent on and insists on sending raw bitumen to the U.S. instead of upgrading it here. This begs the question: whose interests is the government looking out for? I can see how oil companies would prefer to build a pipeline and ship bitumen to existing factories in Texas, but it escapes me how the government also thinks this is a good idea. I was under the impression we were elected to represent the best interests of Albertans.

Another priority for the residents of Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview is making our communities safer. We all deserve to live in a neighbourhood we're proud to call home. As a resident of Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview I believe this begins with investing in safe and healthy communities. There is no easy answer to some of the problems in our neighbourhoods, but by investing in strategies that focus on crime prevention and community involvement, I'm confident we can make our communities safer.

Building safe and vibrant communities for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview and across Alberta means co-ordinating efforts to address not just the symptoms but the root causes of crime. Of course, we need adequate laws and sentences to bring those who break the law to justice, but more importantly we need to build healthy communities from the ground up so that the common crimes we see in our neighbourhoods are less likely to happen in the first place. Let's not forget that crime prevention is cheaper than enforcement, prosecution, and jail time. It also means fewer of us will be victims of crime.

For a New Democrat education is a critical investment in the future of Alberta. A highly educated workforce means that Albertans will be competitive in the global market. Unfortunately, this government has not done enough. Class sizes continue to be a challenge for teachers, parents, and students. Adequate training, resources, and the provision of support staff all play a pivotal role in helping schools deliver the best quality of education possible. Integrated and inclusive classrooms can be a great idea if all stakeholders – school boards, teachers, parents, and students – receive the level of support they need to be successful. Proper training, small staff-to-student ratios, appropriate equipment, and sufficient funding are all necessary to meet the diverse needs of schools that provide wraparound services.

Schools are the hub and lifeblood of a community, and I believe that the government has a duty to play in keeping schools open and acknowledging their importance, especially in mature neighbourhoods. Families often move into an area because the school is local and often walking distance from home. Children and parents have the opportunities to get to know one another through school activities, spending time in their own neighbourhood, which helps to develop a meaningful relationship and connection to their community.

More needs to be done to keep postsecondary education affordable and ensure that higher learning is not just a place for the elite. If the cost of attending postsecondary institutions continues to rise, more and more Albertans will seek higher learning elsewhere, which will increase the chances of those students remaining out of Alberta upon completion.

Decades ago we knew the time was fast approaching when baby boomers would retire and make the transition from independent to assisted living. There should not be a shortage of spaces for seniors. They should not be gouged by rising or hidden costs, not in this province.

Alberta is prosperous because of the workers who helped generate these profits. Workers in Alberta deserve to be compensated appropriately for the work they do. Our labour laws should be protecting the very people on whose backs the corporations are turning record profits. We need a diversified economy, one where there is support for small businesses and incentives to develop alternative energies such as wind and solar. Our government needs to ensure the Alberta economy is not subject to the whimsical nature of a boom-bust cycle. Long-term planning, strategic decisions, and calculated steps need to be taken in order to ensure our ship can weather the storm during times of scarcity and make smart investments during times of abundance.

A diversified economy includes agriculture, yet we find little or no support for agricultural co-operatives or local markets. We should be supporting our small- and medium-sized producers and provide initiatives for them to connect to the market directly. We should be packaging the food we grow locally as opposed to shipping it overseas to be packaged and then returned to be sold. We need to ensure that local producers, farmers, get paid for the true cost of production.

Health care is a priority for Albertans. They recognize the value of our public health care system and want assurances that it will remain publicly funded and publicly delivered. We need to address the shortage of health care practitioners through innovative solutions such as increasing enrolment in postsecondary institutions, attracting and retaining medical professionals, reducing emergency room wait times, and creating more hospital beds, home care options, and facilities for seniors.

As a social studies teacher I had many discussions with students regarding the role of government and the job of an MLA. They thought, as I do, that people elect governments to make decisions on their behalf and to act in their best interests. That meant once upon a time that voters elected representatives because they had vision and foresight. They had ideas on how to improve the quality of life for their neighbours and their communities.

Leadership is about vision. It's about taking risks and making bold decisions which sometimes may not be the most popular. If some politicians in our history stuck to making only easy ones, we would have been shortchanged. Our public health care system exists because a man named Tommy Douglas had the courage, resolve, and tenacity to carry out his vision of a society where everyone has access to health care services regardless of income, status, or ability to pay. Our public health care system is a source of pride for many Canadians and is the envy of many jurisdictions around the world.

Part of the reason I got involved in politics is because I see Alberta's potential. I believe in a just Alberta, where the government places people before profit. We live in the richest province in the country, in the wealthiest jurisdiction in the world. Albertans should have the best programs and services available, yet there is much room for improvement. It's a matter of approach, of priority.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to represent a constituency with such immense cultural and religious diversity. Indeed, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview is a good example of the huge range of backgrounds that we have as Albertans. As their MLA I will celebrate the richness that each group brings to our community. I commit to reaching out, to taking an inclusive approach, and working with cultural and religious groups of all stripes to make their voices heard, from aboriginals who want their youth to have a fair chance of success and our environment to be respected for the sake of future generations to commitment to family and community that I've seen in the Dutch Reformed Church, the Somali Muslim community, and in my own Ukrainian heritage.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to commend the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview on his speech so far, and I would like to ask him if he has anything more to say.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. On election day Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview constituents of all cultures, religions, and walks of life made a choice for real change in their community. They want inclusive representation that they know will work hard on their behalf. I value the differences in our experiences and our history. They have also sent me to this House with an important message. Regardless of political affiliation or ideology I will reach out to all members in order to work toward our common future and a better, more inclusive Alberta.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to working with all members of this Legislature in order to effect positive changes in all of our communities.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I now recognize the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would like to thank His Honour the Lieutenant Governor both for his many years of service to this country and to this great province and also for sharing his view of the tremendous future that lies ahead for Alberta.

I would also like to congratulate Mr. Speaker on winning not just one but two elections in the past five weeks. I'm honoured to serve in an Assembly under your guidance, wisdom, and impartiality.

In what will become my maiden speech as a Member of the Legislative Assembly for the new riding of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, it is a pleasure to rise today to reply to the Speech from the Throne.

To begin, I must say that I'm extremely proud and humbled to represent the great people of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo and to stand up today on their behalf. I would also like to thank a number of people for helping elect me as the new MLA, including Jim Moore, Andrew Highfield, Jeff Thompson, Ujeer Ahmed, Dave Gilmour, Kareem Noor, and many others who worked tirelessly on my behalf. Without their support and encouragement I would not be here today. Their passion and dedication are great examples for the economically strong and culturally vibrant corner of the province that is Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to say that I have been a part of the community since 1993, when I moved my young family to Fort McMurray to purchase a small business called Campbell's Music at a time when the economy was still struggling from the previous downturn. I did not move there with a two- or a five-year plan, as many did, but to run my own business and become a highly engaged member of my new community, my new home. I'm pleased to say that our diverse product inventory makes us one of the most popular music stores in western Canada and is the only major music store north of Edmonton, now celebrating its 36th year in business. There wasn't a lot going on back then. Fort McMurray was just a small, friendly city where everybody knew each other, but we were still full of excitement with the opportunities ahead.

Fort McMurray, of course, is in the heart of the oil sands, and many might find the oil sands to be relatively new. They think it's a relatively new discovery. But for the past hundred years global attention in the oil and gas business has been on conventional supplies, developed by drilling oil wells into the ground. It's only been as those supplies appear to be dwindling and as politics in the Middle East have become increasingly problematic that international attention has been drawn to the oil sands. However, the oil sands are not something new or unknown. Hundreds of years ago aboriginal people used exposed heavy oil harvested from the banks of the Clearwater River to waterproof their canoes. Now the Wood Buffalo region is indisputably the hottest regional industrial economy in the entire world. But even as Fort McMurray is becoming a citizen of the world, it is also very much a community rooted in the northeast corner of Alberta in a magnificent boreal wilderness and in our ties to an opportunity and way of life that are unique in the world.

Accelerated global interest in oil sands development has meant tremendous growth, and that growth has presented some challenges. Addressing the challenges that accompany such rapid growth requires bold thinking and innovative approaches. At the same time Fort McMurray is among the most dynamic communities in Canada, with a highly educated workforce and a commitment to stretching the bounds of emerging technologies to achieve prosperity. As a community we saw unprecedented growth over a very short period of time that led to many challenges, and we fought hard to protect our interests with all levels of government: municipal, provincial, and federal.

It was during that period of time that I chose to get more involved and joined the Fort McMurray Chamber of Commerce, where I eventually served two terms as the president. As the president I lived and breathed the issues faced by small business in this community: lack of available commercial space, labour shortages and recruitment challenges, competitive wages. I also lobbied regional council on a number of issues. At that point I subsequently became elected and served two terms as a member of council for the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo. As a member of council I had the opportunity to grow, learn from, and work diligently with a team of men and women that have developed a strong vision of how Wood Buffalo will continue to be a world-class region, with a 25-year outlook to ensure that it will not only be a sustainable and vibrant region but will become an example to the rest of the world on how to make sustainability happen in a resource-dominated northern city.

There I worked with a great many councillors and staff and was able to see the valuable work done by our municipal governments not just in Fort McMurray but across this province. After all, municipalities are the foundation of our province, and our government knows that relationships with our cities and towns are key to enhancing the quality of life of all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, the region I call home is one of the premier economic drivers of our great province, of Canada, and of the world. Our province enjoys the highest average weekly earnings, the highest employment growth, and the lowest unemployment rate in the country. The hard work being done in Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo makes a significant contribution to the prosperity that Albertans enjoy today and will continue to benefit from for years to come.

As we heard in the Speech from the Throne, securing Alberta's economic future is one of our government's top priorities. To do so, we have committed to saving, to balancing the budget by 2013-14, and to finding innovative ways to maintain Alberta's long tradition of fiscal discipline. We have also committed to no new taxes and no tax increases so that Alberta families can continue to build financially sound futures and so businesses continue to attract investment and stay competitive globally. Mr. Speaker, it's easy to see where Fort McMurray fits into this, and going forward, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo will surely remain a leader in efforts to secure our province's economic future in the decades to come.

Mr. Speaker, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo is so much more than just an economic powerhouse. It is a culturally diverse region and one where families are at the heart of the community fabric. As such, I was very pleased to hear the hon. Lieutenant Governor say in the Speech from the Throne that this government will continue to invest in families and communities. By investing in families and communities, we will ensure the continued well-being of those with whom our future rests.

In Budget 2012 our most critical public services – education, advanced education, health, and municipal services – are receiving stable funding in the form of three-year budget commitments. This is needed to ensure that our public institutions have the resources, services, and capabilities they need to continue providing the best services possible, that Albertans deserve.

Mr. Speaker, during the election I made a commitment, as did this government, to accountability and transparency. I'm very, very pleased that my fellow Fort McMurray MLA was named the Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation. I now look forward to working with my hon. colleague and friend from Fort McMurray-Conklin on these very important issues.

The first and most important commitment I made to the people of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo during the election, Mr. Speaker, was to open a fully staffed and operational constituency office in Fort McMurray, where residents can come for assistance with provincial services. As I have often said, the first step in accountability and transparency is accessibility to the constituents, and I'm committed to remaining accessible. That is why I'm so pleased today to announce that as of next week the constituency office of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, located in downtown Fort McMurray, will be open for business. In the weeks since the election we have already assisted dozens of individuals with various issues, and starting next week, we will be better equipped to assist many more.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, I was recently assigned a very important task by the Premier as special adviser to the Minister of Transportation. That task is to provide recommendations for highway 63 safety, and I would like to take a moment to address that before closing my statement. Since being assigned this task, I've done a great deal of research and have met with many stakeholders and individuals with valuable input, and I will continue to do so in the weeks ahead before we table the recommendations. It is important to know that highway safety in general across the province, but specifically on highway 63, is a top priority for this government, and I would like to thank the Premier for reaffirming that by assigning me this important task.

I want to remind Albertans through you, Mr. Speaker, that highway safety is not just about adding more roads or more lanes. My report will no doubt contain recommendations on the addition of passing lanes and a plan for the accelerated twinning of highway 63, but the approach will also focus on changing the culture on our highways. We must discourage bad drivers, and we must encourage good drivers. More passing lanes should not be an opportunity for racing on our highways. A twinned road should not be a blank cheque for speeders. Our highways have been plagued by overzealous drivers, racers, speeders, and impaired drivers, and we must take steps to reduce and eliminate these. That will also be a focus of my report because the safety of our citizens is the highest priority for all Albertans.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, the vision of the Speech from the Throne is one where our government will pledge to continue to advance our world-leading resource stewardship. For more than half a century Alberta has been developing our oil and gas resources while coming up with new ways to minimize the impacts to our environment. It's no secret that the Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo region has been one of the world leaders in this regard. This government will push those efforts into overdrive. One key piece will be AOSTRA 2, which is the Alberta Oil Sands Technology and Research Authority. It will help us to develop technologies to shape the ever-changing global markets so we can sell them our products and our innovation. We will strive to become global energy leaders in every field from production to research and development.

Mr. Speaker, over the next four years there will be plenty of work to do as our province has the potential to reach greater heights than ever before. This government will meet the needs of Albertans in a way that prepares us for the long term. As the MLA for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo I am committed to playing an important part in the building of this foundation. Likewise, I have committed and will remain committed to an honest, open, and transparent government, one that takes the twinning of highway 63 and the issues facing the Fort McMurray region very seriously.

In closing, I would again like to thank the constituents of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo for giving me the opportunity to represent them and reiterate how proud I am to do so. I would also like to thank our hon. Premier for her vision, leadership, and hard work. I look forward to becoming an active member of her team for years to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I will recognize the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise in this House today to speak on behalf of my constituents of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. First, I would like to extend my congratulations to you, Mr. Speaker, on your recent election.

I am both honoured and humbled to rise and address this Assembly for the first time on behalf of the citizens of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. I am honoured to be chosen for the duty entrusted to me by my constituents and humbled to serve in this House, where many able and worthy representatives have come before me. I do have big shoes to fill.

I congratulate and applaud my predecessor, Richard Marz, on a lengthy and noteworthy career. When Mr. Marz stood where I stand today delivering his maiden speech in the Legislature, he referenced the English writer and clergyman Sydney Smith, who said, "It is the calling of great men, not so much to preach new truths, as to rescue from oblivion those old truths which it is our wisdom to remember and our weakness to forget." Mr. Speaker, I believe Mr. Marz lived those words and right to the end sought to return his party to the path of small "c" conservatism. I shall endeavour to continue his work here in this Legislature.

In fact, there is a long history of great MLAs from the Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills region, including the youngest member, elected at the age of 23. Bob Clark later became the minister of youth and then education. He finished his 20-year career as an MLA as Leader of the Opposition.

Lastly, I recognize and thank another former MLA, Connie Osterman, who served the people of the region faithfully for more than a decade. Before her career as an MLA and minister began, she organized a group of farmers and landowners to campaign for changes to the Surface Rights Act and the Expropriation Act, changes finally made in the early 1970s. The work she did to protect landowners' rights should not be lost on this generation of MLAs. I thank Connie and her husband, Joe, for their support, and I am proud to call them friends.

I am gratified, Mr. Speaker, to represent the citizens of one of Alberta's larger rural ridings. Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills is more than just an amalgamation of three towns having a common history. My riding relies on the hard work of hundreds of farm families who live between our 12 urban municipalities, where agriculture is not just a leading industry; it is the backbone of our economy and the bedrock upon which our communities are built. It is important to remember that long after the oil is gone, agriculture must and will remain.

Mr. Speaker, we have a vast and diverse riding that sweeps from Huxley in the northeast to Water Valley in the southwest and from Eagle Hill in the northwest to Carbon in the southeast. Not only do we have 12 urban municipalities, but there are also three counties as well: the counties of Mountain View, Rocky View, and Kneehill. Our rural areas are strong, but the towns in the riding take a back seat to no one. We have our namesakes, but we also have wonderful communities like Carstairs, Trochu, and Linden. When the riding boundaries were redrawn, we welcomed a new southern boundary, and the riding now includes Crossfield, Irricana, and Beiseker, my home town. Crossfield is the heart of manufacturing and commercial industry in the riding.

We have unlimited potential in the riding of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills and in the whole province of Alberta. Helping to unleash that potential is Olds College. Founded in 1913, the college today sits on a campus of more than 2,000 acres that includes a working farm. They have more than 30 degree programs and lead in innovation and agricultural technology. Recently I was honoured to attend the grand opening of a new program at the college. They became the first college in western Canada to offer a brewmaster program.

For those of you that are good at math, you would have realized that in 2013 the college will celebrate its 100th anniversary. The whole year will be a celebration of agriculture in rural Alberta that will feature major monthly events, peaking with the World Plowing Championship in August. I invite you to come down to the college and join me and the brewmasters for the historic events and enjoy the fruits of their labours. I also hope the government of Alberta will be forthcoming with support for this year-long celebration.

Like many of my constituency citizens, I was raised on a family farm. My parents farmed just west of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. I spent many an hour in the seat of my father's 1960s Massey tractor, with no power steering, and I learned a love for the land that endures to this day. Growing up where and when I did, it didn't take long for me to realize that our farm was too small to support two families. After high school I made the decision to attend the Saskatchewan Technical Institute and start my career as an electrician.

Like some before me and many afterwards, I left Saskatchewan for Calgary in 1969 to obtain full-time work. It proved to be one of the best decisions of my life. I spent the next 35 years as one of Alberta's hard-working tradesmen and small business owners. I saw the good times and the bad, the energy boom of the early '70s, and the awful aftermath of Trudeau's national energy program in the 1980s. During this period I met and married my wife, Carol. We have two children, Barbara and Steven, and two grandsons, Everett and Elliott.

Mr. Speaker, you may rest assured that public service is a calling I take seriously. I have served as mayor for the better part of a decade. I have learned that it takes more than a sense of duty to help your community succeed. It takes hard work, long hours, and determination. More importantly, it takes a heartfelt desire to listen to the people and the wisdom to act on their concerns.

My fellow members need to understand that the previous government's legislation impacting landowners' rights is not acceptable. The way in which landowner rights were being abused was just plain wrong. The lack of discussion with Albertans when creating the legislation was disappointing, to say the least. Landowners' rights are vital to Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. It is critical we respect Albertans' private property.

Continued tinkering with the health care system while wait times grow is not acceptable. This includes introducing new programs or clinics without proper consultation with the stakeholders or a completion of pilot projects. In the throne speech we heard about the continued commitment to family care clinics, but the people of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills are very concerned about just where all the new doctors and nurses are going to come from. Even the AMA has raised concerns about this project, but it seems that, like with land rights, the government is not that interested in listening. As a result of the lack of listening, for the first time in a generation my riding chose to elect an opposition MLA, giving me a solid mandate to raise their concerns. My election was no accident. The government broke the faith with my constituents as with many citizens across this great province.

The great news, my friends, is that it doesn't have to be this way. All of us, all 87 members of the 28th Assembly, have the opportunity to turn the page on politics as usual, which often leave the individual MLA muzzled and local communities wondering where their representation has gone. As my riding's MLA I pledge to provide my support and voice the ideas advocated by my constituents. As well, if a fellow MLA brings forward an idea supported by my constituents, I will support it in words and in action. The free vote I have as a member of the Wildrose ensures that good policy will win my support.

Mr. Speaker, I truly hope that others here today are willing to embrace this approach, which, I believe, will renew our democracy in ways that will benefit our children's children. Often it seems that the meaningful debate of vital interest to our province is locked away behind caucus and cabinet doors. By bringing that debate back into this Chamber, it will empower MLAs to do the job we were sent here to do.

As a former member of the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association executive I'm keenly aware of how beneficial it can be when people of all political stripes work together. Furthermore, I believe it is in the interest of our province to remove the politics from our infrastructure funding system. We need a universal priority list of infrastructure projects, and we need to make that list publicly available. Whether it's the twinning of highway 63 or the highway 2 overpass for the town of Olds, the public deserves to know when these projects will be completed as well as when and why projects are overdue.

On the east side of my riding the cost of water is another factor standing in the way of economic development. I believe we must find a long-term solution to the high water rates paid by those connected to the Aqua 7 waterline. The public demands and deserves this basic accountability. As a true conservative I believe that a smaller, more-focused government is advantageous to its citizenry.

Mr. Speaker, I am more than willing to meet with any MLA in this Legislature to discuss issues of common concern. I will also oppose the government forcefully when necessary, but you may rest assured that I am less interested in posturing than I am in policy. I look forward to working with all 86 members of this Assembly and representing the people of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation.

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, I move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I'd move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:50 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, May 31, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us pray. Dear God, as we conclude for this week our important work in this Assembly, let us renew our energies with great thanks to those who have given us the privilege to serve them so that we may continue in our service to them and to the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two introductions to do. I'd like to first introduce to you and through you to the members of the House the parents and students from the Calvin Christian School just outside of Coalhurst, Alberta. Accompanying the students today are two teachers, Mr. Andrew Krul and Mr. Bill Vanderweide, also in the public gallery. We'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Little Bow, you have a second introduction?

Mr. Donovan: Thank you. Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to introduce Kim and Lavonda Justinick, who have also travelled up from my constituency of Little Bow. Would they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all hon. members 30 grade 6 students from Penhold school in my constituency. Accompanying them today are their teachers, Mrs. Cormack, Mrs. Akins, and Mrs. Cunningham, as well as several parents: Mr. Dean Davis, Mrs. Shelley Davis, Ms Alana Petty, Miss Stacia McKinley, and Mr. Dave DeLong. Just a few minutes ago I had the opportunity to meet and have my picture taken with these excited students, and they've all enjoyed their day at the Legislature this afternoon. I invite all of them to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it gives me great pleasure to rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a special guest from my constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud, Mark Jacka. Mark attends the University of Alberta, majoring in political science. Although he was studying and writing exams in April, he also found time to help out on my campaign and come door-knocking on several occasions. It should be noted that he's now preparing for his piano exams. Mark is very interested in many political processes, and I'd ask Mark to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

I have a second introduction if I may, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Hancock: I understand in the public gallery is my friend Mr. Ian Crawford. Mr. Ian Crawford is the son of Neil Crawford, who served for many years in this Assembly. Ian, in fact, was the Wildrose candidate in the constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. Between Ian and myself and the other candidates we managed to get the Edmonton-Whitemud constituents very engaged in the process. We've had a wonderful political conversation, and I'm very pleased that he's here today to witness the proceedings.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all the members of this Assembly 54 grade 6 students from the Rimbey elementary school. The students are joined by their teachers, Mrs. Grahn and Mrs. Hohn. I invite the students and their teachers joining us to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House someone who you may have met before, Josh Traptow. Josh is an active member of the PC Party and currently serves on the provincial PC executive committee. He's also the highly respected president of my Calgary-Bow PC Constituency Association. Josh supported the Premier during the leadership campaign as her special assistant. He was a member of the Premier's transition team, later serving as special assistant to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. During the election he worked tirelessly as campaign chair for the party in southern Alberta, and despite this heavy workload Josh also took on the task of successfully co-chairing my campaign. Josh is returning to the business world in Calgary, where he's an avid volunteer with the Stampede and the Calgary Heritage Authority. He recently was awarded the Queen's Diamond Jubilee medal for his contribution to the community, province, and country. I would ask that Josh rise in the members' gallery and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three guests. As I name them, I'd ask that they stand. My wife, Mardell, and my constituency assistant, Wendy Pasiuk. They're here to help me honour my other constituency assistant, Laurie Huolt, who after 10 years of great service to the people of Wetaskiwin-Camrose and great professionalism has decided to leave me. I guess she's had enough of me. She's got two kids getting married this summer, and she plans on doing lots of golfing. I'd ask that all members of the Assembly give them the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a constituent of mine who is accompanied by two young boys. They are here today to learn and bear witness to democracy in action here at the Alberta Legislature. They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to please rise as I mention their names. My constituent is Ms

Marion Sotski. Ms Sotski has lived in the constituency of Edmonton-Decore for the past two years, having moved to Edmonton from Fort McMurray. She is accompanied by Kayden Sotski, her grandson. By the way, it was on his initiative. An interest in the most recent provincial election sparked an interest in politics, and that's why they're here today, perhaps a budding politician. He is also accompanied by a very good friend of his, Andrew Scrimgeour, who is his best friend. They will be taking in a tour later this afternoon. I would ask all the Members of the Legislative Assembly to please give them the traditional welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you my core team who helped me during my nomination, followed by the general election, and that is the reason that I think I have reached my goal today. I will ask that when I call their names, they please rise till the end. Dr. Wasim Haque is a scientist, but he has taught me a great deal of the politics of this province, followed by my campaign manager, Indranil Chaudhury, and my very close friend Nusrat Ali Akhtar. I ask them to please rise, and I request that all hon. members please give them a round of applause today as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the House two of the most important people from my election campaign, my parents. John and Lena Jansen have been married 54 years and are two of the most supportive people I have had with me through this foray into public life. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I just received a yellow note from someone, unsigned, about some guests. If you'd please identify yourself as to who you are, then I'd be happy to recognize you.

The hon. Minister of Education, it's your turn.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you Robert Woodward, who's sitting in the members' gallery. After graduating with a degree in political science from the University of Calgary, Robert headed south to work on several campaigns in the U.S. before coming back to Alberta and the University of Calgary law school. We're very glad that he came home, and we're pleased to have Robert working in my office as a summer intern this year. While he has only been with us a week, he's already left a great impression. I'd ask that everyone in the House give him the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, Calgary-Acadia, followed by the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of introductions. First off, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two interns who'll be working in my department's communications office this summer. Shelby Soke is a third-year public relations student at Mount Royal University in Calgary, and Ian Roddick has completed his course work for the public relations program at Grant MacEwan University. Both of them are working on several Justice and Solicitor General initiatives. I'd ask that they stand and be welcomed by this Assembly.

The Speaker: One more, hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Jeff Cook. Jeff is my summer intern in the legislative office before returning to law school at the University of New Brunswick. He was born and raised in Toronto, but don't hold that against him. You may ask what has brought him to Alberta. In his words, he fell for a woman from Alberta. I'd ask that he please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, followed by the hon. member for Wainwright, who is also Battle River's representative and the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will admit to the House that I was the sender of the – it wasn't unsigned. It was initialed, but it was illegible, so now you know what I felt like in high school when I got all those notes from the girls. It was a lonely six years, I'll tell you.

In any case, Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of the House a group of people who will be presenting a few hundred signed postcards to the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed this afternoon calling for a ban on flavoured tobacco. This postcard campaign is co-ordinated by the Canadian Cancer Society in its Relay for Life events around Alberta. First of all, representing Lloydminster comprehensive high school and Holy Rosary high school in Lloydminster: students Jianna Marin, Brielle Wall, Kailee Weber, Kayla Scheidt, and their chaperones Sherry Lazerte, Kim Ruptash, and Lorelee Marin. Representing the Campaign for a Smoke-Free Alberta, the Lung Association of Alberta: Leigh Allard, Gina Ibach, and Krista Potter. From the Canadian Cancer Society, Angeline Webb and Sarah Hawkins. From the Action on Smoking and Health: Vikki Pym, Stuart Adams, and Les Hagen. And, finally, from the Alberta Policy Coalition for Chronic Disease Prevention, Shandy Reed. I would ask all members to join in giving the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to members of this House some very special visitors representing the Church of God in Christ, Mennonite, which has two missions in Edmonton. One is the guest house beside the Cross Cancer clinic, and the other is a unit house for those who volunteer in different hospitals. I'd ask them to rise as I introduce them: Harry and Mildred Isaac, Kristi Jo Penner, Karisa Fricke, Caitlin Giesbrecht, Lindsay Litwiller, Ron and Cheryl Unruh, Chentelle Hiebert, and Kyla Wiebe. I'd ask all members to offer up the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly guests from Braemar school and the Terra Centre here in Edmonton. I'm very pleased that they were able to join us today in the members' gallery. With us today from Braemar school – and I would ask them to stand – we have principal Sandra Erickson, students Gladys Chandiru, Geneva Gylander, Bryann Lohse, Sarah Plante, Danielle Rochelt-Reid, Erin Simpson, Stephanie Sinclair, and from the Terra Centre the executive director, Karen Mottershead. These guests are seated in the gallery, and I would now ask that they all please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions here today. First, I would like to introduce to you and through you our guest Elisabeth Brosseau. Elisabeth is a student from Quebec working in our caucus for the summer as part of a Quebec-Alberta exchange program. She's studying at the Université de Montréal, completing her master's degree in political science, focusing on federalism. Since arriving in our province, she said that she has been struck by the many similarities between Alberta and Quebec. I would like Elisabeth now to please rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: Do you have a second introduction, hon. member?

Mr. Eggen: Yeah, I do if you don't mind.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Eggen: I have also to introduce in the public gallery Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop of the Farmworkers Union of Alberta. They are here to remind us that all paid farm workers here in this country are as equal as every other person in terms of rights and privileges.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I understand you have two separate introductions.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, I do. I have two different introductions.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a woman who is very well known to many MLAs and to the media for the organization that she started, which is Elder Advocates, and that is Ruth Maria Adria. She is sitting in the public gallery today, and with her is Bev Munro. Now, Bev is a resident of the Edmonton General hospital long-term care. Bev has also long been a self-advocate for improved conditions in that facility. She has actually had information presented in this Assembly previously, and I will be tabling something from Beverley later on. She is particularly concerned at this moment that she be able to have her friends come and visit her at the General. Please welcome them to the Assembly.

My second introduction is a sad one for me and for the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre because we are losing two individuals who have served us very, very well there. John Henry Weinlick has been a faith leader in Edmonton. He's going to stand so you can see him. I want you to honour these two people because he has been a faith leader in Edmonton for 41 years, the last 10 at McDougall United Church downtown. Prior to that, he was put on a number of committees and urged to join URGE. I don't know how many of you will remember the Urban Reform Group Edmonton. They worked very hard to preserve the river valley and establish the LRT. He also started what turned into the Support Network. He has really made McDougall United a central and integral part of downtown Edmonton, and I shall miss him upon his retirement at the end of June.

Now, even more important than John Henry is his wife, Laressa Pawlowski-Weinlick. Laressa is a musical diva, particularly for us downtown. She is a musical theatre star, particularly in comedy roles, and has improved and widened the music that's available at McDougall United over her years of service there as the musical director. Last year I think they did more than 95 concerts there.

Please, please welcome and honour these wonderful Edmonton citizens.

The Speaker: Just a brief reminder, hon. members. I've gotten some of your notes. Thank you. To refresh memories, the chair recognizes people to do these introductions, recognizes you as members in the order in which we are notified of your request to do so.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

National Energy Strategy

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Deputy Premier, who you might mistake for the actual Premier by watching the House proceedings this week, said that the western Premiers all supported the Premier's so-called Canadian energy strategy. But here's what one of them, the Saskatchewan Premier, actually had to say, and I quote: it needs specific points, things that you would execute, and I have a hard time discerning what that might be. Unquote. How about that, Mr. Speaker, a western Premier wondering what our Premier is actually talking about? I happen to agree with him. It's been months since she touted this supposed strategy, and no one knows what it is. Will the Premier stop talking airy-fairy nonspecifics and start getting results on the west coast, Keystone, and east-west pipelines?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, first of all, thank you for that compliment, but I could never live up to that of our Premier.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell you this. The Premier of Saskatchewan, who, I believe, is being referred to, is a full signatory to the document. As a matter of fact, there is an understanding between western Premiers that we have to have a co-ordinated approach to development and transmission of energy, with full understanding of jurisdictional limitations, and make sure that one part of the country is not getting in the way of another part of the country in developing and transmitting energy.

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader. [interjections] The floor is yours.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maybe I should help the hon. member by telling the House exactly what the Premier really did say. He also said that the Canadian energy strategy is, quote, mostly about process, and specifics are elusive. How can the Premier claim broad support for a vague scheme, and when will Albertans and our western friends finally see some specifics, some targets, and some deliverables?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, indeed, Mr. Speaker, the Premier of Saskatchewan is a signatory to this document, and he is committed to the process. The whole purpose of developing a strategy is a process. Provinces will continue to collaborate, hopefully from coast to coast to coast, through a process to develop a system through which we can in a very responsible way develop our mutual energy resources and transmit them from part of the country to another and outside of Canada for export.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the hostility toward our oil sands that will no doubt be on full display today with Mr. Mulcair's visit, why can't the Premier see that without specifics a national energy strategy would merely result in overregulation, unwanted interference, wealth transfer, and ultimately fewer jobs not only here but also in the rest of Canada?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, hostility only comes from uninformed sources. Hopefully, we have converted one today and, hopefully, soon the leader of this Official Opposition.

The Speaker: A reminder, hon. members, that it is your House rules to not have preambles before supplementary questions.
Second main question. The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Committee Compensation Repayments

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier admitted that the PC MLAs on the no-meet committee have not all paid back the money that they owe Albertans. A Wildrose government would stand for keeping promises, transparency, and accountability. The Premier's election promise was not to just make arrangements to pay it back but to return the money or they would not be allowed to sit in her caucus, as they are doing right now. Given that the Premier has not tabled proof, to the Minister of Municipal Affairs, from Battle River-Wainwright, who was on the no-meet committee in 2008: has he paid the money in full, and will he promise to table the proof?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, I sat on the committee for I believe it was one month, we met a couple of times, and I have returned the money.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and congratulations to the hon. member for meeting the standard set by Wildrose MLAs.

Given that the government has not tabled PC MLAs' proof, I'll ask the Minister of Education, from Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater, who was on the no-meet committee in 2008, 2009, and 2010: has he paid the money back in full, and will he promise to table the proof?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, let me remind the Leader of the Opposition that the campaign ended on April 23, so campaigning is over, and now we're here to govern this province. [interjections] The Premier has made a commitment that all MLAs of this caucus will live up to her expectation, and such will be done. [interjections]

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'm not sure in which part of your own personal credos outbursts like we just heard fit, but I'd ask you to review that, please. We have a wide audience. We have school groups visiting us. We have people who are interested in hearing the questions and the answers.

Committee Compensation Repayments (continued)

Ms Smith: I guess we can take that as a no, Mr. Speaker.

To the associate minister for persons with disabilities, from Peace River, who was on the no-meet committee in 2008 and 2009: has he paid the money back from the no-meet committee in full, and will he promise to table the proof?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for the question. I have paid the money back in full.
Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The third main question. The hon. opposition leader.

Prohibited Donations to Political Parties

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this week the Justice minister told this House that the Chief Electoral Officer asked for a gag law to keep secret the results of his investigations into the PC Party for accepting illegal money. Not so, said the Chief Electoral Officer. Yesterday the Deputy Premier flip-flopped and told us in this House that the Chief Electoral Officer is free to release the results of his investigation, except that days earlier the government said that he couldn't. Can somebody over there please tell us what the government's line is today? Can the recipients of illegal donations be identified? Yes or no?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the line hasn't changed; the understanding has. We have always been clear that in this House we have introduced legislation that actually gave more powers to the Chief Electoral Officer than any Chief Electoral Officer has in this country, and it was always the intention to allow the Chief Electoral Officer to release the results of any of his investigations. There are legal opinions that say that the wording of the law perhaps may prohibit him from doing so, so we have made a commitment that we will make any changes required to the law to allow him to do what we always wanted him to do, release that information to Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hopefully, we can provide some clarity because this morning we received a letter from the Chief Electoral Officer stating, "Our legal interpretation indicates that the confidentiality provisions extend to both the process and outcome of investigations." I will be tabling that later. In other words, it is a gag law. Will the government commit . . .

The Speaker: Please remember the words I uttered a few minutes ago. There are to be no preambles to the supplementaries, hon. leader.

The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much. I'm not exactly sure what to answer there, Mr. Speaker, but I will state the facts on the record once again. Earlier today I spoke with the Chief Electoral Officer. He actually had sent me a letter responding to mine a couple of days ago – I will be tabling the said letter – and it indicates, again, that he's willing to work with us to improve openness and transparency. If there's any legislation we need to table in this respect, we will do so in the fall.

The Speaker: The hon. opposition leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was going to ask for the government's commitment that they would table the legislation in the fall, and I'm pleased to see that the Justice minister has said so.
Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Protection for Women in the RCMP

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta government contracts with the RCMP to provide policing and other services in many Alberta communities. Now this once respected culture has become rife with proven cases of sexual harassment and abuse, mostly of women. My questions are to the Solicitor General. Was the Solicitor General aware of the cases now proven, and is he aware of current allegations of abuse of Alberta women?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, obviously, the topics that the member provides information on are very serious. We do take it seriously. I offered to meet with this member to talk about some of these things the other day, and she refused to step out to go and talk to me, so I leave it back to her.

Ms Blakeman: Actually, he wouldn't tell me why he wanted me to step out, which is why I wouldn't.

Back to the same minister. I haven't raised this issue, so please take it seriously, Mr. Solicitor General. What has the Solicitor General done to protect Alberta women working for the RCMP, which, I remind him, is under contract with this government?

The Speaker: Again, just a polite reminder, no preambles, please, to supplementary questions.

Proceed, hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, again, I think this member needs to be advised that although the RCMP is under provincial contract, they have a dispute resolution process, and I do respect their process today.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, to paraphrase, all that evil needs is for good men to do nothing. Mr. Solicitor General, why have you done nothing?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I am really happy that this member refers to me in this House as a good man. That really warms me. Thank you very much.

Mr. Speaker, the RCMP has an internal process, and I think we have to respect that. The RCMP – I don't know anything more Canadian than the RCMP – in fact, has been here since 1874. They have their own policy, which we do respect.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Pace Oil & Gas Ltd. Pipeline Spill

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. On May 19 a large oil field spill was discovered 20 kilometres southeast of Rainbow Lake. The spill released more than 22,000 barrels of oil and water emulsion over four hectares of land. It is essential to our economy and to the environment that we put in place more stringent laws and independent monitoring of our energy industry. To the environment minister: why has this government failed to deal with this situation properly: better laws, stiffer fines, more independent monitoring?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, hon. member, for the question. In fact, hon. member, both the Environment and SRD ministry and the ERCB were on location right away when the spill was there. We have a very stringent regulatory process and a monitoring process that, I would say, has been ramped up with both the federal government and the provincial government over three years to increase and to actually double the monitoring in the oil sands.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, it's interesting. This spill carried on for more than four days before another company happened to fly by and notice the leak. It's obvious that self-monitoring is, in fact, a dismal failure. Does this environment minister have any plans to toughen the laws, increase the fines, strengthen independent monitoring, or is it just business as usual, breaking records for larger and larger and more frequent spills?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, in this government and in this province we have very stringent environmental regulations and processes in place to make sure that those cleanups happen. If there are fines to be added, those are looked at as well. This leak has been stopped, and clearly the cleanup is under way. We have been there to make sure that we were on-site, as was the regulator. There seems to be no impact to wildlife there. So we move forward to make sure that if there are charges to be laid, we'll look at that. But, first and foremost, we want to make sure that the site has been cleaned up, job one.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, you know, this leaking oil well was more than 35 years old. Aging infrastructure, lax safety laws, lax environmental laws: it adds up to a recipe for disaster. This government claims to be such a big booster of the oil and gas sector. Then why don't they . . .

Preambles to Supplementary Questions

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm going to lay the law down right now. No preambles during supplementals. So, please, those of you who are on the question list order, rephrase your questions accordingly, or you will not be recognized to proceed with the rest of the question. That's firm as of right now.

Hon. minister, if you wish to respond.

Mrs. McQueen: Again, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to reiterate that we have a very, very strong monitoring program here in Alberta. We're doubling that. We make sure that if there are charges that need to be laid against companies, we go through the process, and we do that. We have a remediation plan that's in process right now and being executed by the company with Alberta Environment and Sustainable Resource Development. So we are on top of this file, and we were on this file as soon as this leak was reported.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Seniors' Benefits

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government keeps telling Albertans that they want to keep seniors in their homes, but actions are a lot different than words. Due to reduced funding to the special-needs assistance program effective July 1 seniors will now have to pay more for their life-saving personal response devices. This program helps keep some of the most vulnerable or low-income seniors in their homes instead of forcing them into acute-care facilities. Can the Associate Minister of Seniors please tell Albertans why this government is doing more to keep seniors out of their homes than in them?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, Alberta hosts some of the most important and generous programs for seniors across this nation. If there are specifics that this member has about her constituents, don't wait and make it political. Come to my office, and we'll talk about it.

Mrs. Towle: To the Associate Minister of Seniors: as it is the government's duty to tell the residents of this province what programs they're cutting – these funds are being reduced and will be targeting our low-income seniors, our most vulnerable – what other benefits have been reduced, and when will you tell our seniors what you are cutting?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, the budget was clearly debated. There are no seniors' benefit programs being cut. It was the Wildrose that proposed to Albertans to cut spending, not the PC government.

The Speaker: The Opposition House Leader has risen on a point of order. It has been noted.

Please proceed with your final question.

Mrs. Towle: To the Associate Minister of Seniors. On July 1, effective this year, you are cutting the program by 25 per cent. Given that this government is ready to commit billions of dollars to more corporate welfare with its AOSTRA 2 project, how can this government justify its continued nickel and diming of our seniors?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, once again – I'll say it slower this time – we have a very generous program here in Alberta. The seniors' benefit program offers income supports for low-income Albertans. We're very proud of the program. We've had a good discussion in our debates in the House with the past budget. I can assure the member that if there are circumstances and constituents that have concerns, come to me, and we'll discuss it.*

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Thomas Mulcair Visit to Alberta

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Weeks after making remarks about Alberta's oil sands industry, federal NDP minister Thomas Mulcair has finally decided to grace us with his visit. He says that the oil sands industry has resulted in the Canadian dollar suffering Dutch disease, and he says that our air, land, and water are dumping grounds. My question is to the Deputy Premier. Today you met with Mr. Mulcair. What did you possibly hope to accomplish with a leader who has made such inflammatory statements about Alberta?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, first of all, just a correction. He's not a minister; he's the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that leaders in our country, particularly leaders of the opposition, are familiar with Alberta and with the importance of the impact of Alberta on the rest of the Canadian economy and the fact that we as Albertans wish other provinces had vibrant economies because we know that we are just one part of Canada, and we want Canada as a whole to be successful. We want also leaders of this country to know that we are as passionate about our environment in Alberta as others are in their provinces, and that's what I tried to convey to him.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back to the Deputy Premier: given that Albertans know that the oil sands are developed responsibly and that processes are constantly improving, was the Deputy Premier successful in having Mr. Mulcair inform himself?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, the proof will be in the pudding, Mr. Speaker, and I guess we'll hear and read about it. However, I have provided him with a comprehensive body of articles, that I hope he reads on his flight back to Ottawa, I have provided him with open lines of communication with our ministers in this cabinet, and I have assured him that we will continue being advocates not only for the environment in Alberta but for Alberta's role in the Canadian economy. I have also advised him that Alberta prides itself in uniting Canada, and we will not play into the gamesmanship of pitting one part of the country against another for political gain.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Deputy Premier: can the Deputy Premier inform the House about the serious allegations of Dutch disease?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure if we should even be discussing that because it is not founded on any facts. We do know that Alberta is a net contributor to the Canadian economy. We do know that we attract Canadians from all over Canada, and we welcome them, and we wish more of them came here to work in our province. We do know that we employ Canadians outside of Alberta, in Quebec and Ontario, and we hope to create more jobs in those provinces, and we know that when one part of the country grows economically, the tide goes up and all ships go up. That is the message we will be hammering. We pride ourselves in collaborating with other Premiers and the Prime Minister, and we will continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Compensation for Victims of Crime

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On January 14 my constituent 77-year-old Otto Loose was brutally murdered. Under the Victims of Crime Act the family deserves compensation for their loss, yet they've been denied it due to a frivolous charge based on Otto's dementia. This decision lacks basic human compassion and is devoid of decency. Now, the family, who is with us today, is not only suffering loss of a loved one but is also faced with a financial burden. To the Minister of Justice: are you willing to take this under review and help this family in their time of need?

Mr. Denis: First off, I would like to congratulate this member on asking his first question in the House.

Please accept our government's condolences for the loss in your constituency, which was rather public.

Mr. Speaker, the Criminal Injuries Review Board reports to my department, and it is an independent board that decides payouts in this respect. I am not aware as to where the specific situation is, but we can look into this. Specifically, though, it is an independent board designed to avoid political interference.

Mr. Donovan: Mr. Speaker, I'm disappointed in the minister's response to this. Given that the government is ignoring the rights of the victim's family in this heinous act of violence and given that the family was offered assistance in the first place but now is being denied it, how can this minister possibly refuse action to take on this important case?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to advise this member that last year $29.4 million was allocated for victims of crime, including this particular situation. But, again, I defer to the independent body, the Criminal Injuries Review Board. I'm willing to discuss this further with this member, and I thank him for bringing it to this House's attention.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you very much, and I look forward to the meeting.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Western Premiers' Conference

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Western Canadian economic opportunities have been at the forefront of discussions in Edmonton this week as Alberta hosted the Western Premiers' Conference. My question is to the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. Were there any significant accomplishments at this year's conference?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, this was the eighth time that Alberta has had an opportunity to host this conference. I know that the Premier was very pleased that she had an opportunity to meet with western Premiers, to have a discussion with those Premiers about issues that matter to our residents and to their families. The Premiers had a full agenda. They talked about the importance of the west in Canada and the need to move forward on the Canadian energy strategy, they talked about ways to address western Canada's labour needs, and they agreed on priorities for the upcoming Council of the Federation meetings in Halifax in July.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Did the Premiers leave the conference with a real plan to advance a Canadian energy strategy?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, in a word, yes, they did. Through the Canadian energy strategy provinces and territories will work together for mutual benefit. They'll include ways of talking about moving energy to market, creating jobs, building economic diversity, building economic capacity, all at the same time creating more manufacturing opportunities, advanced research and technological innovations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. With the world's eyes on Alberta and Canada did the Premiers discuss or make any new progress on the issue of sustainable resource development?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, there was significant discussion around responsible resource development. Premiers welcomed the federal government's proposal to move to a regime of one project, one assessment, a proposal that could result in more streamlined environmental assessments. The goal is to help avoid potential adverse effects to the environment from major projects while reducing overlap and duplication for project reviews.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Fiscal Accountability

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Monday the Minister of Finance said that we aren't in a fiscal problem in Alberta. Yes, there has been a recession, but Alberta has more energy revenues than any other province in Canada, $11 billion this year. This is more than we took in in personal income taxes. To the Minister of Finance: given our energy wealth why have we done five straight deficits, and why are future balanced budgets based on very, very rosy and risky predictions of oil sands revenue and land sales?

The Speaker: The hon. minister and President of Treasury Board.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the question. As I understand it, there were a number of different questions in there, one of which was, "Why do we have rosy projections?" or something along that line. I would remind the hon. member that our projections are not based on what the government thinks is going to happen. They're based on what the industry thinks is going to happen.

Budgeted projections are, of course, spot prices or pictures in time. We budget not for the moment but for the annual expenditures. It is our expectation that our departments will follow those budgets. That will allow us to finish the year on target in 2013-14 with the balanced budget.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister again: if we don't have a revenue problem, why are our children subject to teachers being hired and fired based on the price of oil and having the government admit it doesn't know how to pay for new and renovated schools?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I would take exception to that in the sense that we have introduced a budget in this House, debated it in this House, passed it in this House, that actually sets out three-year predictable funding for our education, for our health care, and for a raft of programs. We intend the departments to work within those budget confines and the predictability of that three-year funding agreement.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister again: if we don't have a revenue problem, why has the government put only a tiny bit of money into the heritage trust fund for inflation-proofing, and why has that fund lost 35 per cent of its real value in 20 years?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of interesting statistics that the hon. member threw out there. I would also remind the hon. member that we paid back $25 billion in debt over that same period of time. We have put $25 billion into infrastructure in this province. We have also created a sustainability fund during that same period of time with some $17 billion that allowed us to continue to build the infrastructure that Albertans want us to build, the schools, the hospitals. We will continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Environmental Monitoring

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Canadian Natural Resources Limited was recently charged with releasing excessive amounts of hydrogen sulphide gas from its Horizon oil sands facility. CNRL was penalized for similar charges twice in the past year and a half. To the environment minister: why doesn't this government recognize that its failure to hold polluters accountable damages both our environment and our international reputation?

The Speaker: Is there a response? The hon. Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. I would say that the system is working. There have been releases that have happened. The companies were charged, and that proves that our regulations and our process are in place, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that CNRL has been penalized twice in the past for exceeding limits of sulphur dioxide emissions and for failing to report such incidents and given that the penalties have been less than $25,000 and given that these incidents raise questions internationally about Alberta's environmental record, to the environment minister: will the minister admit that the government's reliance on self-monitoring and self-reporting by industry is inadequate for the protection of our environment and our health?

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. No, Mr. Speaker, I will not admit that because it shows that what's happening is that the system is working. They had a release, and they were penalized. We've dealt with that issue, so the system is working that's in place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government has a responsibility to protect the health and safety of Albertans and given that high concentrations of hydrogen sulphide can cause respiratory failure, to the minister: why does this government continue to fail to enforce environmental laws and protect the health of Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The answer would be the same. We are making sure that we have strong regulatory processes in Alberta, very, very stringent regulatory processes. If there are releases and people do not make those regulatory processes, they are charged. This is an example of where the system is working.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Electricity Retail Market Review

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this year electricity prices more than doubled, small businesses were penalized, and in particular low-income and senior citizens on fixed incomes were adversely affected. In March of this year this government appointed a Retail Market Review Committee to investigate retail electricity prices. My question to the Minister of Energy: in light of recent issues around transparency and accountability how can he reassure Albertans that the review will deliver a fair and open account of the subject?

Mr. Hughes: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question from the hon. member. I would say that the proof will be in the pudding in that the report will clearly be transparent, it will be open, and it will be made available to all Albertans to review. The government will use that information and the feedback based on that in order to make thoughtful and appropriate judgments about the future regarding the volatility of electricity rates for retail consumers.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We now learn that one of the committee members is also the chairman of the board of a retail energy company that stands to benefit financially from the committee's findings. How can the minister claim this is an independent committee?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the representation from the hon. member. This committee was established with a group of people who are knowledgeable in the industry, who have appropriate advice to give. But at the end of the day the judgment will be made in the public interest by the government of Alberta on behalf of the people of Alberta.

Mr. Anglin: It's amazing, Mr. Speaker, that somebody would put their profits behind. Will the minister agree to reconvene a truly independent committee to give the attention that this committee, this investigation deserves?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I would contend that the committee is an independent committee and, more importantly, that all Albertans can participate. I would encourage all Albertans to participate in this process so that we have before us the full facts and feedback from people with all perspectives and that what we ensure at the end of the day is that we have all the facts on the table and that this government then can make a fully informed decision with that feedback from all Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler.

APEC Education Ministerial Meeting

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past April 23 Albertans overwhelmingly elected to build bridges instead of erecting walls around our province. Although, no doubt, this includes fortifying links with the rest of Canada, it also includes strengthening our ties abroad. However, while popular opinion suggests that economically things are going well in this province, my constituents are still concerned about big expenditures such as major foreign travels while our belts are still tightening here at home. Can the Minister of Education enlighten this Chamber about his recent trip to Korea, particularly with a view to justifying this expense to all Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the question. Yes, this government is committed to building bridges in a global economy, and this trip was very important to Alberta. It's very seldom we have the opportunity to represent ourselves on such a global stage. The conference that I attended was the APEC conference for education ministers, which is only held every four years, with the 21 member economies. Only one minister of education from Canada is selected to go to represent the entire country. Alberta sat at the table with the secretary of state for education for the United States and the ministers of education from China and Korea and Singapore and Thailand and Taiwan and all these countries. It was a very worthwhile trip, and it profiled Alberta on the global stage.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, it's a point of pride that Alberta was chosen as the Canadian representative at this important global meeting. Can the minister accentuate some of Alberta's specific highlights from this trip?

Speaker's Ruling Preambles to Supplementary Questions

The Speaker: Hon. member, let's just be reminded about preambles, please. I've made the statement. I was sidetracked momentarily. Please rephrase your supplementals so that they are questions. If you are not able to do that quickly, please just jump ahead to what your main question is for the supplemental so that we can conclude this day on a wonderful note.

APEC Education Ministerial Meeting (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes. In addition to the APEC conference that we attended, while we were in Asia, we visited Hong Kong, Macau, and mainland China. The purpose of those visits was to visit some of the schools that are accredited with Alberta curriculum and, indeed, grow that business for Alberta. There is an incredible amount of opportunity down there in terms of exchanges for our teachers, exchanges for our students, and to be able to create even more market for our postsecondaries as the students from those Asian countries are looking for places to go.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Without a preamble, what did the minister learn to make our education system even stronger?

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you for that short question. Mr. Speaker, the one thing I would say, to emphasize how well Alberta is doing, is that when I was at the APEC conference, one of the very first presentations the education ministers from the 21 member economies had was from some of the brightest thinkers with respect to education in the world, and they profiled jurisdictions that are doing well on the global stage. Along with the logos and flags of countries there was the logo of Alberta, and the province of Alberta was profiled at the APEC conference.

In addition to that, we're going to be able to work with the APEC countries on research that's being done by the APEC group on teacher quality and 21st century skills and learning.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Drumheller Sunshine Lodge Security System

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am proud to represent the good people of Drumheller-Stettler. It has been brought to my attention that the security system in Drumheller's Sunshine Lodge has not worked for over a year. This leaves the seniors in the facility in great danger, especially those with dementia. At night the residents and the hard-working staff are also at risk of intruders. Is the Associate Minister of Seniors aware of this alarming situation, and can he tell me what is being done about it?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, our department in conjunction with the Department of Health sets the standards, and we do regular inspections of complaints like this. This is something that our staff would take care of on a regular basis, and if there is more information that the member would like to pass on, I'll make sure that the inspections branch gets that.

Mr. Strankman: Sir, I'm aware of the regulations. Who is enforcing these standards according to your own regulations?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, between the local foundations and the departments of seniors and Health the accommodations and the standards group will enforce those regulations.

Mr. Strankman: This is not the case.

This has been going on for over a year. Who is neglecting these vulnerable seniors?

Mr. VanderBurg: If any member here in the Assembly has any idea of neglect of seniors, please make sure that we are aware of it. We have a hotline set up for that. I think you have a duty not only just to report it but to take action as an MLA for that local region. We have inspectors. We have people that take this job very, very seriously, and I would expect action from you, sir.

2:30 Aqua 7 Regional Water Commission

Mr. Rowe: Mr. Speaker, to the Environment and Sustainable Resource Development minister. In 2001 the Aqua 7 water commission began servicing municipalities. It soon became clear that the funding formula was not going to be sustainable. Eight years later a financial audit was ordered. The findings of the report were released in August 2010 with three key recommendations, the main one being an immediate $6.2 million cash injection to buy down the debenture. Other recommendations were met but not the most important one. What does the minister have planned to find a long-term solution?

The Speaker: The minister you wished to address this to was . . .

Mr. Rowe: The Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for the question. Welcome to the House.

Certainly, this is a difficult situation for the seven communities with Aqua 7 but one that we know can be resolved. Our government has met with members of the Aqua 7 commission in the past and will continue to do so as well. But I do have to say – and I know the hon. member knows this – that our government has already approved a special $1.8 million to help with the financial difficulties, to help with the debenture payments, to spread them out from 20 years over to 30 years, something that those communities have asked for and something that our government has delivered on.

Mr. Rowe: We do thank you for that $1.7 million, which went to pay the penalty fee for the debenture change.

Given that there seems to be a lack of continuity with managing water-related issues across the province, with multiple ministries having a hand in the bucket and Transportation left holding those purse strings, what is the Minister of Transportation willing to do to find a long-term solution? Will he also meet with the stakeholders and act immediately?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for the question. I guess the short answer is yes, and I'll just expand on that slightly. I earlier today spoke with the reeve of Rocky View county, who is looking at what their options are. I have agreed that we will meet with the Aqua 7 people and interested parties and see if we can find solutions that end up being amenable to everyone.

Mr. Rowe: I thank you for that commitment, Mr. Minister.

Lastly, adding confusion into the spray of water challenges is that municipalities typically work with Municipal Affairs on issues such as water. What is the Minister of Municipal Affairs doing to help communities navigate these multiple ministries?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I appreciate the question. I know that water is one of the most critical issues we deal with as we go forward in this province, and it's one of the most valuable resources that we're going to have. I have already met with Aqua 7, and we came up with the $1.785 million to help with the refinancing, which allowed them to lower their water costs to their residents by almost 40 per cent in the short term. We're going to continue to work, as the Minister of Transportation said and as the minister of environment said, on a long-term strategy to deal with water co-ops and water commissions and the provision of regional water services across the province.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, I will recognize you next, and I'd just ask House leaders again: if there are changes in your batting order for question period, please get them to us in advance.

Provincial Economic Strategy

Mr. Casey: Mr. Speaker, the 2011 census numbers were just released, reporting that Alberta had the largest population growth in the country as well as the youngest average age in Canada, five years younger than the national average. This is great news for Alberta's growing workforce needs, but being that housing costs are near an all-time high, I'm concerned that these young workers will simply not be able to afford the high cost of living in Alberta. My question is to the President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance. What is this government going to do to ensure that we keep our province a viable place for young people who are just starting out?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a good question because we do have a fairly significant influx of young people coming to our province. The reason they are coming is because we are creating jobs. We're creating more jobs than anyone else in this country, and we also have the lowest overall taxes of any province in this country. We are going to keep us there. We are going to keep us as one of the lowest overall jurisdictions, if not in Canada, perhaps even in North America. We're also going to provide the infrastructure that these young families need, including recreational opportunities, which is one of the reasons, you might notice, I'm wearing a Whitecourt Wolverines jersey, based on a bet that I had with the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne when they beat the Spruce Grove Saints, another great team in the province of Alberta.

Mr. Casey: Again to the minister of Finance: is this government doing anything to ensure that low- and middle-income families have access to adequate child care?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is a good question. In Budget 2012, which, again, was debated and passed in this House prior to the election and which we ran our campaign on – obviously, we can see the results – we invested an additional $21 million in child care subsidy, so approximately 9,000 Alberta families will receive new or increased funding to offset the cost of accessing child care. I'd add, too, that our government anticipated this growth, and we have been providing 20,000 new child care spaces since 2008. Access to affordable child care is critical for working parents and for new Albertans as they move into our province and create more wealth for future generations.

Mr. Casey: My last question is to the Minister of Education. Will there be enough desks, schools, and teachers for these kids when they reach school age?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We certainly will have a great demand for school desks, and the only way to prepare for those is through infrastructure. Contrary to demands by opposition parties, this government is not going to cut infrastructure and is in the process of building 88 schools with promises to build 50 more and renovations on another 70.

I'd like to add that, yes, I have made arrangements to pay back those funds. It's very disappointing, as important as education is, that the one question I got in this House from the opposition was not on education.

Calgary South Health Campus

Ms L. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, South Calgary and area residents have been waiting a long time for a nearby hospital where they can access the care and services they need closer to home. When construction of the new south health campus began, we were pleased, but now it seems that it's been a while since we've seen or heard much about the new hospital and when it will open. To the Minister of Infrastructure: why has it taken so long to get this hospital built and up and running?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to say that hospital construction is now complete, but there are still a few things to be done. Systems critical to supporting hospital services need to be installed and tested to ensure safety and working order prior to opening the first phase of the facility. I'm proud to say that as the largest undertaking of a new health care facility in Alberta's history, the $1.3 billion south health campus is on budget. As with most projects of this size and complexity, it's not unusual for construction schedule to vary from the initial schedule. Since this was started over five years ago, it's been consistent progress.

Ms L. Johnson: To the same minister: when can Calgarians and area residents expect to access care at this new facility?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, we're completing installation and testing of equipment critical to the neurosciences and academic family medicine clinics. These clinics are expected to begin serving Calgary and area patients this fall as the first of a phased-in opening schedule.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the minister is: will the minister outline for us what this facility will mean to the people of Calgary and surrounding areas?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a great facility for the Calgary and south area. It's going to fill a void that's been there for a while and, hopefully, increase health care services in southern Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the Member for Calgary-Foothills.

2:40 Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. It's now nearly a decade since the Westray bill, C-45, was passed in the federal Parliament following on the mine disaster in Nova Scotia. The bill amends the Criminal Code to make owners, employers criminally liable when they put their workers at risk of injury or death on the job. Farms in Alberta in 2012, especially large industrial operations, are incredibly still exempt from occupational health and safety standards. They are therefore placing not only workers but farm owners at huge liability. To the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General: do you agree that employers, including many large Alberta farm operations with paid farm workers exempt from OH and S, are at significant risk in Alberta with C-45?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Let me assure this House that my ministry doesn't hesitate to pursue criminal charges where the investigation indicates that it is warranted. With respect to occupational health and safety I would defer to the Minister of Human Services or perhaps the minister of agriculture.

Dr. Swann: Nice dodge, Mr. Minister.

With thousands of injuries and 15 to 25 farm deaths in Alberta per year, including children, what is he going to do to protect farm employers from criminal liability under C-45?

Mr. Olson: Perhaps I could address the hon. member's question. I'd like to thank him for the question. This is an issue that is important to us. Agriculture is Alberta's second-biggest industry. It is our biggest renewable resource industry. Obviously, it's driven by workers, by farm workers, and they are key to this. Their safety is of utmost importance to us. This is a matter of constant attention from my department. As you may know, Mr. Speaker, early last year there was a committee that was struck to give us advice on that. We've received their recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Yes. There have been several such committees in 10 years, and nothing has come of them.

Bill 1, the new bill in the House, recognizes the importance of emergency responders to Albertans with enhanced WCB protection.

The Speaker: Question, please.

Dr. Swann: So what about basic farm worker rights, Deputy Premier?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that in my previous capacity as minister of employment and immigration we have gone a long way working with Alberta farmers. Let's not forget that the majority of farms in Alberta are family-operated farms where farmers not only cultivate land and raise cattle, but they also live and play on that very same land. So bringing in occupational health and safety standards, as you would into any other plant, is definitely much different. But there is collaboration right now between the ministers of Justice and Agriculture and Human Services to work with Alberta farmers, to work with Alberta farm families, and to strengthen safety on the farms in a manner that is appropriate to farm life and that in any way doesn't hinder their ability to live, play, and cultivate the land.

The Speaker: Hon. members, it's been the long-standing tradition of this House that if a minister wishes to supplement or clarify an answer that he or she gave earlier in question period, that minister will be allowed to do so. Accordingly, that will allow the person who asked the question to pose one further question without preamble. In that vein I believe the hon. Associate Minister of Seniors has a comment to make, and that will entitle Innisfail-Sylvan Lake to a supplemental.

Proceed.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To supplement the answer to the Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, the 2012-13 Alberta seniors' benefit budget is $350.7 million. This is an increase of $21.8 million, or about a 7 per cent increase, from last year's budget. As well, the special-needs assistance and project grants for seniors budget is $28.5 million. This is an increase of $6.9 million, about a 32 per cent increase. No talk about a decrease. I will make sure to send the member a copy of the last budget passed by this House.*

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I actually have that budget. We're talking about your special-needs assistance program. That's where the actual deduction is taking place.

The Speaker: There's no question there. Do you wish to comment, or are we done?

Mr. VanderBurg: No. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is a program that has a 32 per cent increase in the budget.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

Statement by the Speaker Member for Lesser Slave Lake 23rd Anniversary of Election

The Speaker: Hon. members, today marks a very special day in our Assembly because today one hon. member, specifically the one from Lesser Slave Lake, has achieved an important milestone. As of today she becomes the longest serving female member in the history of our Legislative Assembly of Alberta. [Standing ovation]

As we all know, on April 23, 2012, this hon. member was elected to her seventh term of office, serving a total of 8,474 days, or 23 years, two months, and 11 days. The hon. member thereby now surpasses Cornelia Wood, a former Member for Stony Plain, who served from March 21, 1940, to June 29, 1955, had a break in service, and then served again from June 18, 1959, to May 23, 1967. The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake has served continuously since March 20, 1989.

She is also the first Métis woman ever elected to this Assembly, and I know she's proud of it. The hon. member developed the first native language program that was introduced to Alberta schools, and she worked to establish education policy and curriculum to further strengthen Alberta's First Nations and Métis communities. She was responsible for developing the Cree language program for adult students.

She has tirelessly advocated for and spoken out on behalf of her constituents, as recently evidenced during the 2011 fire in Slave Lake.

In addition to serving on numerous committees throughout her legislative career, she also has served as a minister without portfolio responsible for children's services, the associate minister of aboriginal affairs, and the minister of aboriginal affairs and northern development.

The hon. member has been honoured many times over the years for her tireless work for her community, including being presented with the national aboriginal achievement award for public service, the Esquao circle of honour award, and the aboriginal role model award.

This milestone is a testament to the Member for Lesser Slave Lake's steadfastness and endurance. In fact, out of the 829 members who have served in this Assembly since 1905, only 16 – 16 – other members have ever served seven or more terms. The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake becomes the 17th member to do so.

She is also the honorary chief of Tallcree First Nation, an honorary member of Kapawe'no First Nation, and she was inducted into the Blackfoot women's society.

For that and on behalf of all Albertans we will thank her in a moment. Let me just say: [Remarks in Cree] Today is a great day. Hai, hai.

Hon. members, join me in recognizing this wonderful milestone. Hon. member, I'll ask you to rise and receive their thanks. [applause]

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Braemar School and Terra Centre Partnership

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and recognize the tremendous work being done by two organizations in Edmonton. Braemar school, located in the beautiful constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar, in association with the Edmonton public school board is doing great things for teen parents and their families. In partnership with the Terra Centre, a charitable not-for-profit organization that serves pregnant and parenting teens, this junior high and high school is helping young moms to reach their full potential.

These young mothers not only have the option to complete their education through self-directed or class-based studies, but they also have access at Braemar school to on-site child care, counselling, financial literacy programs, and a number of other valuable services that will enable them to graduate and go on to fulfill their dreams.

The program is working. In fact, this month Terra Centre hosted a Mother's Day breakfast at the school to celebrate the academic success of over 60 students.

Mr. Speaker, the relationship between Braemar school and the Terra Centre is an excellent example of the great things that can be achieved when organizations work together towards a common goal.

To support their important work, our government has collaborated with them to establish a learner's bursary program and now provides child care subsidy funding directly to the school, eliminating the need for the teens to apply directly to the government. This helps these young women access the right supports at the right place at the right time.

Mr. Speaker, our government is so excited about the work being done for our young people at this school and others like it. Through this type of co-operation we will continue to accomplish more for Albertans. Let's look for more opportunities to bring together those working in our communities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Lesser Slave Lake.

Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In Alberta today we have industrial agricultural operations masquerading as family farms to take advantage of provisions designed to protect the family farm. The result is that family farms in Alberta are in greater jeopardy of injury and death as well as huge legal liability. All farms, including the family farm, are subject to Bill C-45, which makes owners, employers criminally liable when they put their workers at risk of injury or death on the job. Since these operations are not subject to occupational health and safety and workers' compensation protection, this opens the door to both increased worker risk and owner criminal liability.

The Premier supported extending occupational health and safety standards to paid farm workers during her leadership campaign, affirming that this loophole for industrial operations needed to be closed. In addition, the lack of regulations for paid child labour, regulated in all industries but agriculture in Alberta, contributes to injury and death for many children each year. Fair-minded Albertans, who continue to benefit from the labour of paid farm workers, expect this government to honour the Canadian Charter of Rights and the Alberta Bill of Rights. They want it recognized that paid farm workers are equal in rights and stature to every other paid worker in Alberta. All paid farm workers deserve to work in conditions where occupational health and safety standards apply along with workers' compensation. As indicated earlier, farm employers' liability would also be reduced if these basic rights were in place.

A business model that is dependent upon the use of disenfranchised workers and unregulated child labour is untenable, unethical, and unconstitutional. It cries out for reform. When will this government make it happen?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore to comment on the tribute about the Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Dreamspeakers Film Festival

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to recognize an outstanding international indigenous event, the Dreamspeakers Film Festival, which is currently being showcased in Edmonton. It is a vital event hosted every year by the Dreamspeakers Festival Society. Edmonton, Alberta, has become the location for gathering dream-talkers, directors, scriptwriters, actors, musicians, storytellers, and artists. The Dreamspeakers festival attracts talented artists from all over Canada and beyond, drawing connections between the indigenous peoples while celebrating artistic expressions of respective cultures.

Mr. Speaker, the Dreamspeakers festival program is always engaging and entertaining, with a wide range of local, national, and international indigenous films being screened to a diversity of audiences. One of the most successful activities within the festival is Youth Day, which is filled with exciting opportunities for youth to meet renowned filmmakers and attend workshops and a career fair.

Congratulations and sincere best wishes to all of the Dreamspeakers festival board of directors; to the executive director, who is related to the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake; and to the tremendous number of volunteers involved to make the Dreamspeakers festival a success for all the world to enjoy. The commitment of this organization to the promotion of arts and culture is a treasure to be experienced, and I would invite all hon. Members of the Legislative Assembly to make time and attend this event over the next few days in our capital city.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-South East, followed by Medicine Hat.

World No Tobacco Day

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today in this Assembly to acknowledge a significant day. Each year on May 31 we observe World No Tobacco Day. It took an international effort between all member states of the World Health Organization to inaugurate this day in 1988. Twenty-four years later we continue to mark this day on our calendars as a step forward to reducing the harm caused by this substance. The purpose of this event is to abstain from tobacco products for a period of 24 hours.

The World Health Organization estimates that each year 6 million people will die from diseases that are directly linked to tobacco use. Each year here in Alberta, Mr. Speaker, more than 3,000 people die a preventable death from tobacco-related illnesses.

Mr. Speaker, we know that strategies like the government's tobacco reduction strategy have made significant inroads in helping people to kick the habit. That's why this government is committed to further enhancing the strategy to discourage tobacco use by both youth and at-risk people, to protect Albertans from second-hand smoke, and to offer more support for tobacco cessation.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, this government announced yesterday that it will initiate legal proceedings against tobacco manufacturers. The lawsuit will attempt to recover a portion of health care costs associated with smoking-related diseases which resulted from the industry's misrepresentation of negative effects of tobacco products.

Let's observe this day, an important step in reducing the harms caused by tobacco use.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat, followed by Calgary-Bow.

Addiction Services in the Palliser Health Region

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The city of Medicine Hat is the only one of the seven major cities in the province that does not have an addictions residential detox program, that does not have a treatment program, and does not have a transitional living/aftercare program. We are all aware of the human costs involved with addiction issues, with mental health, and the fact that this government continues to neglect the growing concerns of Medicine Hat and the surrounding area is disappointing.

In typical PC government fashion there were a couple of approved locations for a facility promised to the residents of my constituency, but they have since been cancelled or postponed. Numerous local groups, families, and individuals requiring access to such facilities are frustrated by the lack of commitment by this government, and for good reason.

Mr. Speaker, the McMan foundation of Medicine Hat has advised me that the delay in having this addictions facility operating is endangering the lives of their clients. In fact, in a publication released by the McMan foundation in March of 2010, which I will table in the House, we see that the Palliser health region, with a population of over a hundred thousand people, is being completely neglected. Right now patients in detox who need medical attention are asked to wait in acute-care beds in hospitals, and those chosen for treatment have to leave the region.

I stand before all members of the House representing all the constituents of that Palliser health region and the many vulnerable families and residents at risk to implore the government to stop sitting on its hands. Mr. Speaker, today I ask this government to commit to this project and work closely with both myself and, more importantly, the support groups of Medicine Hat to ensure we start and complete this much-needed facility by 2013, as was originally committed to by this government. To continue to wait is no longer an option.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Before I recognize the next speaker, the hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to ask for the unanimous consent of the House to waive rule 7(7) so that we can continue with the Routine past 3 p.m.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General and Deputy Government House Leader has moved his motion. Those who are voting now must be reminded that it requires unanimous consent. Is there anyone who objects to the motion? Please say so now.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Calgary-Bow.

Seniors' Week

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, members of the Legislature. I'm pleased to rise today to speak to all Members of this Legislative Assembly about an important annual event, Seniors' Week.

Every year during the first week of June we set aside time to celebrate and honour the contributions of our seniors. This year's theme, A New Energy, speaks to how seniors are redefining what it means to be a senior and the many roles that seniors play in our province: as our parents, as our grandparents, employers and employees, and volunteers and caregivers. In those roles and more seniors continue to be leaders in our communities.

Every single day there are a hundred new seniors in Alberta, and these new seniors and all the seniors bring a new energy with them. Older Albertans volunteer with charities, are involved with their families, or may still be busy at work. No matter what they're doing, their involvement is certainly felt all around us. We need to recognize this and pay tribute to seniors for all that they do.

Seniors' Week kicks off in Red Deer on June 4, with special events being held in communities across Alberta throughout the week to recognize and celebrate seniors. More information on Seniors' Week events for your area is available online at seniors.alberta.ca/seniorsweek.

I'm pleased that the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta co-ordinates and supports these events. As chair of this council our work focuses on raising government's awareness of the issues and concerns regarding seniors in our province, but we know it is equally important to recognize and celebrate the successes. That's why one of the highlights of the week for me is the minister's senior service awards, that recognize Albertans who volunteer their time to make a difference in the lives of seniors.

Mr. Speaker, Seniors' Week is also a great time to personally thank so many wonderful Albertans for their continued contributions to a stronger province. I hope you can join me in celebrating and recognizing Alberta seniors.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Public Lands (Grasslands Preservation) Amendment Act, 2012

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill I request leave to introduce Bill 202, the Public Lands (Grasslands Preservation) Amendment Act, 2012.

It's an honour for me to rise today to speak to this legislation. The purpose of Bill 202 is to ensure the continued protection of public grasslands that contain ecologically significant and sensitive wildlife habitats. It will not affect privately held lands. It will develop a clear, publicly accessible, understandable, and objective process to review the sale of public grasslands. In addition, it will also provide for a period of receiving public feedback on proposed grasslands sales. I look forward to hearing the rest of the debate.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 202 read a first time]

Statement by the Speaker

Tablings

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we recognize anyone under this item in the Routine, I would like to correct the record in connection to the first document that was purportedly tabled yesterday by the Leader of the Official Opposition. As noted in Hansard at page 92, the opposition leader refers to her tabling as "a letter from Ken Kowalski indicating the members who were on the no-meet committee, the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing."

However, there was, in fact, no letter tabled from Mr. Kowalski. Rather, the documents that were tabled are as follows: a document dated May 30, 2012, on the letterhead of the Leader of the Official Opposition titled PC Members of Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing Re-elected on May 23, 2012, and attached to that document was a letter dated March 9, 2012, from the former Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo to Hon. Ken Kowalski, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, regarding Mr. Boutilier's assignment to that committee. These documents have been recorded in the official records of the Assembly as sessional papers 16/2012 and 17/2012, and they are described in the Votes and Proceedings as outlined above.

Hon. members are just reminded that they must take due care to be accurate and succinct when describing the documents that they are in fact tabling since these documents do become official records of the Assembly. Accordingly, this error has been corrected.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Justice, you have a tabling?

Mr. Denis: Yes, I do. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I heed your earlier direction with respect to tablings.

I'm rising today to table a letter dated May 31, 2012, to myself from O. Brian Fjeldheim, Chief Electoral Officer, in which he provides an independent opinion as to the confidentiality of his investigations, and I will provide five copies of same to the Clerk.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, you have a tabling?

Mr. Eggen: I do. Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a report by the Edmonton public school board which shows the gap between the amount that the board receives from the province for special-needs students and the amount that the board actually pays for supporting those same students.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three sets of tablings today. The first set is on behalf of my colleague the Member for Calgary-Mountain View. He has asked me to table five copies of a series of letters from the Canadian Mental Health Association in Edmonton letting clients know that the funding has been cut and then response letters back from a Mrs. Twila Riopel decrying the job and program losses and how this underfunding is going to have a huge effect on people with mental health issues. That's one set.

The second is in response to some facts I presented yesterday during my questions. The first is entitled 2012 Property Taxes FAQ, a frequently asked questions sheet from the city of Edmonton, downloaded from their website, which notes that for every dollar a typical Edmonton household pays in all taxes, 6 cents go to the city.

The second one is an article from the Globe and Mail, which is the fastest way I could find this, in which Mayor Nenshi of that city says, "The City of Calgary gets 8 cents of every dollar Calgarians pay in taxes." So that's those two.

The final one is reflective of the guest that I had in the gallery today, and that is a letter from Beverley Munro and signed by Beverley Munro, who is a resident of the Edmonton General long-term care facility. She had written on February 21 with concerns. Despite her submission at that time none of the violations she reported have been addressed, and she feels she's continued to struggle to receive health care and safe accommodation. She did follow through on all of the points with people she's supposed to talk to but really feels that she has not been successful and is particularly concerned that she's no longer permitted to spend time with her best friend.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a document dated May 31, 2012, from Drew Westwater, who is the director of election operations and communications at Elections Alberta, which outlines the interpretation of section 5(4) of the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act. I have the requisite copies.

I also have one more tabling. The second tabling is a letter outlining the PC MLAs that at one point sat on the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, whose members collected $1,000 a month to sit on it even when it never met, with the requisite copies as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In reference to my member's statement I would like to table a map document titled Residential Detox and Treatment Facilities in Alberta, March 2010, and I have the requisite number of copies.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have several thousand signatures on a petition from the Falun Dafa Association of Calgary. These have been gathered over the last three or four days. They are urging the Minister of Culture and community services to "request a written apology from [the Southern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium] management for the above incidents," referring to, of course, issues concerning privacy, where some workers barged in on some of the actresses while disrobing, as well as some of the safety and lighting issues that hurt the performance. They're asking for an apology from the southern Jube as well as a written agreement that the orchestra net will be removed for all Shen Yu performances and are also requesting "an invitation to Shen Yun from the [southern Jubilee] management, in an attempt to repair the relationship and get them back to Calgary for future performances."

I must say that my office has been inundated with all sorts of letters in this regard, and I hope that the Minister of Culture can work with these folks to make sure that we bring this fine cultural event back to our great province.

3:10 Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're anticipating that the spring sitting will adjourn later this afternoon, and therefore there is no projected government business to share at this time. The Order Paper will disclose any business for the fall sitting.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We have one point of order. The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The citation for this point of order is in our Standing Order 23(h), (i), and (j) but specifically (j). They talk about: "uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder" and also "imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member" and "makes allegations against another Member." The comments I'm referring to were from the Associate Minister of Seniors, who said in his comments very clearly that the Wildrose proposal, our alternative budget, would result in significant cuts to, I'm assuming, seniors but also just to government services in general. This is an often cited and, frankly, very flawed and untrue statement that continues to come from that side of the House.

The hon. member is welcome to go onto our website at any time, and he will see three consecutive alternative Wildrose budgets. I'll refer only to the last one, but the other two were similar. The last one saw between a 2 and 3 per cent increase in overall government spending and a significant increase, in particular, for the Ministry of Seniors. What we did propose was not cuts to government services but cuts in things like corporate welfare.

This party here, unlike the party opposite, clearly believes that we should be putting the building of schools and infrastructure over corporate handouts to their friends and consumer power builders of power lines across this province. We're the party that takes schools over corporate grants. We also believe very strongly, of course, Mr. Speaker, that we should not mortgage our children's future in order to spend whatever we need to spend or say whatever we need to say in order to remain in power. That's not what this party is about.

I get very interested in a party that claims that half their name is conservative and has a supposedly conservative member over there, the former alderman, who was known as Dr. No for being such a fiscal conservative that he would join a group of individuals over there claiming to be conservative that have overseen the greatest increase and the most out-of-control increase in spending in this province's history.

To say that because we want to slow it down instead of ramping it up by 7 and 8 per cent per year – we want to hold it to 2 or 3 per cent a year so that we can at some point in the future balance our budget. I think this is something that Albertans overwhelmingly wanted to see. It certainly was not the reason that the Leg. is as it is today. It was because of, frankly, fear tactics like this member used today, which are untrue, unfounded. He knows it, and he should withdraw the remark.

The Speaker: The Opposition House Leader has clarified his point. The chair would allow a government response if they wish. If not, we could simply move on and accept the clarification as uttered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Looking at citation 23 (h), (i), and (j), that the Member for Airdrie cites, I don't see any issue at all here where the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne violated any of these citations at all.

Also, I think that the Member for Airdrie just gave a very good political speech. If we were in an election, I would be wondering when we'd have our chance to give the same speech. I think that the minister just made a comment that he believed that the Wildrose would cut spending and that the PCs would not. I think that sometimes our Member for Airdrie has a bit of a hair-trigger, and he jumped up a little too soon on this point. I think we should just move on.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I listened very carefully to the point of order. I reviewed the Hansard. In fact, the Associate Minister of Seniors said this according to the Blues: "Well, Mr. Speaker, the budget was clearly debated. There were no seniors' benefits programs being cut. It was the Wildrose that proposed to Albertans to cut spending, not the PC government."

Hon. House leader, you have given a good point of clarification on it. The Deputy Government House Leader has augmented his minister's comments. The point of clarification has been registered and noted, and we shall now move on.

Speaker's Ruling Allegations against a Member

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday a number of points of order were raised during Oral Question Period. On a point of order raised by the Government House Leader in response to comments made by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, the chair deferred making a decision yesterday so that he could review it through the night. The chair has since had an opportunity to review the Hansard and the context in which the remarks were made.

The two questions posed by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills which caused the Government House Leader to rise on a point of order are found at page 86 of yesterday's Hansard and are as follows:

Given the Premier made a funding announcement to Mount Royal right before the election and then during the election the Premier's picture appeared on the cover of their alumni magazine together with a puff piece, is it fair to say that Albertans should be concerned about this obvious unethical conflict of interest?

In a separate quote:

Given that the Premier herself is at the core of the problem by passing a law that makes convicted political parties unaccountable to Albertans and now that her own riding has accepted illegal donations, how can Albertans believe that the Premier...

These were the comments made by the particular member.

In speaking to his point of order, the Government House Leader stated that the question violated Standing Order 23(h), (i), and (j), and other authorities. The authors of House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, state at page 614:

Remarks directed specifically at another Member which question that Member's integrity, honesty or character are not in order. A Member will be requested to withdraw offensive remarks, allegations, or accusations of impropriety directed towards another Member.

The same authority also provides at pages 502 to 503 that a question should not... reflect on the character or conduct of... members of the House.

Members may also wish to refer to the December 4, 2007, ruling by Speaker Kowalski at pages 2391 to 2392 of Hansard for that date, in which the Speaker found a member who had alleged that the then Premier had involvement with accepting illegal campaign donations to be out of order and required the remarks to be withdrawn.

In speaking to the point of order yesterday at page 94 of Hansard, the Official Opposition House Leader denied that his colleague was saying that the Premier did anything illegal but, rather, that it was her constituency association. First, I think the Opposition House Leader is trying skillfully to avoid the inescapable conclusion that the member is creating the impression that the Premier is doing something illegal.

Second, if the question really was about the funding of the constituency association, then clearly it would be out of order totally. The authorities on this matter are very clear. The chair would refer members to Beauchesne, sixth edition, paragraphs 409(6), 410(5), 410(17), and to the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, at pages 501 to 503, on these points. For instance, Beauchesne's, sixth edition, states at paragraph 410(17): "Ministers may not be questioned with respect to [their] party responsibilities."

In fact, the chair cautioned the member on this point after the member's main question in this same sequence. The primary purpose of questions in Oral Question Period is to seek information from the government about government programs, government services, government funding, government policies, and other government issues that call the government to account for its actions as a government. Oral questions involving party matters or party responsibilities do not come within the administrative authority of the government. As such, they have no place in question period.

While the chair is aware that it is only the fourth day of regular business of our 28th Legislature and that many new members are adjusting to their new roles, allegations of this nature against another member of this Assembly are simply not acceptable, and they will not be tolerated.

The chair finds a point of order with respect to the allegations made against the Premier and also finds a point of order based on the fact that these questions dealt with party, not government, responsibilities. Members must therefore be reminded that they can and will be called to order if they violate the standing orders, which you have all pledged to uphold and abide by, or if they violate parliamentary traditions and authorities such as I have alluded to in Beauchesne's or Erskine May or Montpetit or the House of Commons Procedure and Practice or any of our other revered books of tradition as was done yesterday.

As such, the chair will now recognize the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills and invite him to do the honourable thing and simply withdraw his remarks.

Mr. Saskiw: I withdraw.

The Speaker: The hon. member has withdrawn his remarks. Thank you very much.

Statement by the Speaker Page Recognition

The Speaker: Just before we proceed to Orders of the Day, we are nearing what may well be the end of this particular sitting. Before we conclude, I want to thank our pages on behalf of all of us for their dedication and commitment. We have five retiring pages: Sydney Petrovic, Kaylin Bechard, Braden Smyth, Zachary MacGregor, and Katarina Michalyshyn. They leave us with some final words, which I would like to read to you and which thereby will be recorded in Hansard forever for those members who are here as well as for those members who are no longer in this Chamber but were served by these particular pages during their own tenure.

From the pages' letter to all of us:

Mr. Speaker,

As another session comes to a close, we face the regrettable reality that some of us will not be returning in the fall. We would like to express our gratitude for the wonderful opportunity we have been provided to serve in the Legislative Assembly.

We would like to sincerely thank you, Mr. Speaker, the Table Officers, the Sergeant-at-Arms, the lovely ladies in 315, the Security staff, and all the other staff of the Legislative Assembly Office. Of course, we would be remiss not to thank all of the Members of the Legislative Assembly, without whom, our role in the Chamber would not exist.

Being on the floor of the Chamber has presented a unique perspective that very few others will ever experience. For no other part time job would we be able to see news in the making, before we turn on the TV or read the newspaper. The enriching experience of working alongside a diverse group of people, each dedicated to improving our province, means we leave as more informed individuals with insight that will undoubtedly assist us in our future endeavours.

The relationships we have forged, the memories we have created, and the skills we have developed are priceless. As we have grown in this environment, our appreciation of this opportunity has grown with us. From our encounters with the influential men and women who help shape our province to firsthand participation in important ceremonies, we will take these experiences with us for the rest of our lives.

It has been a great honour and privilege to be able to work with everyone in this Assembly, and for this, we are greatly appreciative.

Yours sincerely,

Sydney Petrovic, Kaylin Bechard, Braden Smyth, Zachary MacGregor, Katarina Michalyshyn.

Hon. members, I ask you to thank these pages. [applause]

I would now ask the Deputy Speaker if he wishes to make a few remarks.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you have mentioned, we have five hard-working pages who will be leaving us at the end of the session. Just for the record again: Sydney Petrovic, the head page; Kaylin Bechard; Zachary MacGregor; Katarina Michalyshyn; and Braden Smyth. I would ask you to join me in recognizing the efforts of our diligent pages, who daily show patience and understanding of our many demands. They carry out their tasks with attention to duty, including some very late nights of work with us.

On behalf of all members each departing page is given a token of our appreciation. These gifts are from the personal contribution of every member of our Assembly. Along with the gifts are our best wishes. We are honoured to have our pages work with us in the Legislature to serve all Albertans. I'd ask the Deputy Chair of Committees to hand a gift to our head page, Sydney. Sydney is representing all of the pages, and Sydney in turn, Mr. Speaker, will present each of the retiring pages with their gift from us.

Thank you very much. Good luck. God bless.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. We'll take a brief break for about 30 seconds, and then we'll move on to Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate May 30: Mr. Scott]

The Deputy Speaker: I recognize the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Conklin.

Mr. Scott: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today to respond to the Speech from the Throne. First, I would like to congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on your new role as well as all the new and returning members of this House. I am truly honoured to be among all of you.

I'd like to begin by thanking His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for delivering a brilliant speech that encapsulates the vision this government has for the future of our great province.

I'd also like to take a moment to just recognize my parents. I was recently reminded of how important our parents are in the role that we've taken on in this Assembly. They've all encouraged us and inspired us. My father was among my many campaign workers out on the campaign trail pounding in signs. He couldn't be here with us today, but I know that he's thinking of me. He knows of this today, and I'm going to be talking to him about this.

I'd also like to thank my daughters, Jenna and Jeya, who have stood by me knowing that their dad would be away from home. They often remind me on the phone that they know I'm doing good work, and they encourage me to carry on. I'm often reminded of how important families are as we carry out this good work.

We all know and acknowledge that Alberta is a very special place, and this Speech from the Throne sets out a vision that does justice to all of the citizens of Alberta. Allow me to express my thanks to our hon. Premier for setting a bold agenda for us all to fulfill over the next four years. This agenda will improve the lives of all Albertans no matter where they reside in the province. I am proud to be part of a government with a mandate to listen to all Albertans and respond to change.

Mr. Speaker, I must also extend my thanks to the Premier for entrusting me to become the province's first Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation. I am particularly honoured to work with the Minister of Service Alberta. What an honour it is to take on this responsibility. I am pleased to be part of effecting fundamental change to the way that this province operates, ensuring that Albertans can easily make sense of how their government does business. As the name of the job title suggests, we will move boldly forward in this transformational process guided by the principles of accountability and transparency.

Part of the mandate will be a review of Alberta's Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. We will also be examining conflict-of-interest issues, seeking out a legislative solution that entrenches more accountability into government. This will include whistle-blower legislation to encourage people to come forward with allegations of wrongdoing and to offer protection from reprisal. Along with my colleague the Minister of Service of Alberta I am excited to be undertaking this important endeavour on behalf of the hon. Premier.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to also thank the wonderful constituents of Fort McMurray-Conklin. I would like to graciously accept the confidence and trust that they have placed in me. Over the course of my legal career I am proud to say that my colleagues and I have strived to be actively involved in our community. I have always believed that when individuals come together and donate their time, ideas, dedication, and service to the community, much can be achieved. Some of my constituents will confirm what an important role organizations such as the United Way have played in our region, and I am gratified to have been part of that effort.

The constituency of Fort McMurray-Conklin has the distinction of being one of the most charitable in Canada per capita, and I can personally attest to the presence of that generous spirit in our region. It is precisely this spirit of service that I wish to continue as the elected representative for this tremendous constituency.

My constituents expect me to convey their perspective to this Chamber and to express their vision of how they want their communities and our province to look in the future. Mr. Speaker, I will deliver on those expectations and faithfully represent this diverse group of people that inhabit the constituency of Fort McMurray-Conklin. As a long-time resident and business owner in Fort McMurray who has raised children in the community, my outlook parallels that of my many neighbours.

I understand the challenges that are faced by this region. We are a place blessed with abundance and economic prosperity. Our tremendous growth is only rivalled by our region's tremendous opportunity. I am very proud of the fact that my constituency along with that of the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo is part of the important economic engine for the province of Alberta and indeed for the entire country.

Fort McMurray and the surrounding towns such as Fort MacKay, Anzac, Conklin, and Janvier all offer boundless opportunity and an excellent quality of life. From listening to the throne speech, I know that our hon. Premier understands the importance of securing Alberta's economic future and continuing to create the conditions that will foster growth. This is the reason why so many people flock to our province and likewise to my part of Alberta. I would venture to say that the ever-changing face of Alberta has its most acute expression there, with high immigration rates and rapidly shifting demographics. We are a vibrant and diverse population. On the streets of our towns you can easily meet people from numerous countries, other Canadian provinces, and from various parts of Alberta. The region has a tremendous concentration of opportunities available to newcomers.

We continue to need entrepreneurial and self-driven people to come to settle, to make a better life for themselves, and to help play a part in the exciting future of our region. It has been my experience that newcomers usually arrive armed with a passionate attitude, adding to the enterprising spirit of our long-time residents.

Mr. Speaker, not only is Fort McMurray-Conklin an economic driver in Alberta; the fact is that this constituency is simply a beautiful place to live, full of stunning scenery, lakes, and endless boreal forest. For my fellow members who have not had the chance to visit, I strongly encourage all of you to visit to explore the wonderful sights the region has to offer. I know that our hon. Premier has had the pleasure of visiting several times.

Mr. Speaker, the incredible bounty of natural resources that characterizes this province is a blessing to all Albertans. They expect their government to provide world-leading responsible stewardship over our energy, land, and water resources, not to mention maintaining the pristine natural beauty of Alberta.

Previous governments have put in place strong safeguards to preserve the natural environment, and I am pleased that this government's throne speech has acknowledged the continued importance of that. This government will continue to work with industry to ensure conscientious development, which allows us to grow our markets while protecting the environment for future generations to enjoy.

In recent months we have made a great deal of progress as we move to implement a comprehensive environmental monitoring system for the entire province. The first priority was addressing the need to strengthen monitoring for the oil sands regions. At present a working group is considering the role of governance and funding as we work to ensure that environmental monitoring is scientifically credible, open, transparent, and easy to access. As we consider the bigger picture, our next step is to determine how to best implement the effective and scientific oversight of the provincial environmental monitoring program.

Mr. Speaker, the constituency of Fort McMurray-Conklin encompasses a large area, stretching north all the way to the Northwest Territories. Fort Chipewyan, for example, is a spectacular place, situated on the shores of Lake Athabasca. It has the distinction of being the oldest settlement in the province as well as being the home of many proud First Nations people. My constituency also stretches in the opposite direction south past Fort McMurray all the way down to Conklin and Janvier.

Fort McMurray, of course, is the urban hub for the entire region. Other smaller communities like Conklin and Janvier are areas of new growth for the oil sands industry and represent some of the fastest developing parts of the constituency. Anzac is another town in my constituency that I enjoy visiting, especially for their recent all-terrain vehicle rally, which was just held this past weekend. I might add that that was my second time on an ATV, and it is not easy to drive one.

Mr. Speaker, we also recognize that along with the blessing of high economic expansion and development, the region faces massive growth pressures. As a result of this fast pace of development our region must overcome the challenge of providing infrastructure and services in a timely manner that meets the ever-growing needs of the population. This government will work closely with all levels of government and stakeholders in continuing to develop the necessary infrastructure and to offer the services that Albertans deserve. From the throne speech I know this Premier understands that investing in infrastructure is essential for growing our economy and for creating the types of communities that people want to call home. Having the critical infrastructure in place is the foundation for a healthy and prosperous society.

The residents of my region are passionate about many issues, and I am proud to carry these issues into the Legislature on their behalf. I love my region, and I feel passionately about it. Communities in this province need efficient transportation links, including highway 63. They need land for shops and services and for housing, they need schools for their children, and they need hospitals and family care clinics that provide timely, accessible health care. My constituents have reminded me many times that they need the quality of life found in other regions.

This government recognizes that Albertans outside our major urban centres need to have equitable access to our world-class health care system. We also know that planning for future development in a proactive and forward-thinking manner is sound policy. We will certainly foster this type of thinking within our caucus.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I would like to say that I have enormous faith in the compelling vision that the Premier has put forward. She has remarked that Fort McMurray is not just a boom town but a hometown. I agree.

This is a plan for the future that works for all Albertans. That is why I am extremely proud to be part of this amazing team of professionals, who collectively bring to the table a wealth of ideas and experience. Mr. Speaker, the throne speech contains a vision that I believe will ensure that Alberta's best days are ahead.

I am passionate about my region. I look forward to working with all of you to serve our great province. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, may we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests before I acknowledge the next speaker?

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the House my parents, John and Lena Jansen.

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech (continued)

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-North West, you may proceed with response to the Speech from the Throne.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to add my comments to those already offered by my colleagues in consideration of the Speech from the Throne and, of course, to welcome my parents to the House.

It is also my great honour to represent the constituents in Calgary-North West, who are so blessed to live so close to the gorgeous Rocky Mountains and enjoy all the best that Alberta life has to offer. They work hard, and they work smart, and they want to know their government is doing the same.

I know and respect a commitment to enterprise and labour. My father came from Holland with nothing more than a plan to work hard and build a good life in Alberta. He spent his entire career with the Alberta government in public works and is very proud of his time and his accomplishments there.

The Jansen kids were taught that hard work was the only way to guarantee success, and I held that value close to my heart as I took my broadcasting career from its humble beginnings in Medicine Hat to channels 2 and 7 in Calgary and on to Montreal, where I reported on the national unity referendum. I then moved to Toronto, where I spent 10 years in the CTV national newsroom covering some of the most important stories that decade, including the Bosnian conflict, the Gulf War, and the September 11 tragedy.

I was always a dedicated advocate for the western perspective during my time in national news. I knew that the perceptions of Alberta and Albertans that Canadians outside this province had did not match what I knew to be true. We are smarter, we are more sophisticated, and we are more thoughtful in our politics than we are often given credit for.

I saw those qualities in our Premier, Alison Redford, more than 27 years ago, when we worked on the Ron Ghitter PC leadership campaign together. So when she decided to seek the PC leadership herself many years later, I devoted my time as a campaign volunteer to help her achieve that goal and to realize her vision. The lessons that we learned from Ron about integrity, tolerance, and understanding are what I believe to be the bedrock of how we approach the weighty responsibility of government leadership.

I see those qualities in our caucus. The warm support and encouragement I received during the process has made me stronger. The advice and mentorship newly elected MLAs have received has been very much appreciated. We are a strong, united caucus with a focused goal, which is to make Alberta better by investing in our families and in our communities, by advancing our world-leading resource stewardship, and by strengthening and improving our provincial economy in the global marketplace.

As an MLA I pledge to remember every day the mandate of the people of Calgary-North West, who gave me a chance to represent them. I spent many long hours, as did my colleagues, at the doors of my constituency listening to people's concerns. They spoke passionately about issues that made them happy, that made them angry, and that sometimes kept them up at night. They told me they needed a playground for their elementary school because four years is too long to wait for a chance to climb and slide and swing at recess. They told me they needed a middle school so they wouldn't have to watch children play in a schoolyard they could see out their kitchen window, knowing their kids were too far down a list to attend.

That's why I'm so supportive of this government's commitment to building and modernizing a number of schools across the province's fast-growing communities and its commitment to stable, long-term funding that will ensure every child in Alberta gets a world-leading education in up-to-date facilities.

My constituents also told me they need a government that listens and then acts based on a commitment to doing what is right, and they were very clear with me about what doing what is right entails. It means committing to infrastructure dollars, public health care, education, and building bridges with the federal government and the rest of the country so we don't shut ourselves out. Many of my constituents are teachers, health care workers, oil and gas professionals, and they want a government that believes our oil and gas industry functions not just for Albertans but as the economic engine that drives our country's economy with efficiency and a high standard of environmental protections.

To conclude, I'd like to thank the constituents of Calgary-North West for giving me the opportunity to represent them as a member of a government that will continue to work hard for its citizens and communities. I am honoured and humbled by their choice, and I will work very hard to make sure their voices are heard.

To His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, thank you for presenting the Speech from the Throne and shedding light on what is in store for our great province. To all my hon. colleagues, may we work together towards the common goal of making Alberta better in every possible way so that our province's legacy of entrepreneurship, leadership, and innovation continues as we move towards a very bright future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I will acknowledge the next member. Before I do that, I'll tell you the list that I've got going. The next member will be Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the Member for Little Bow.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I always appreciate the opportunity to respond to the Speech from the Throne because it's one of the few times that members can speak unfettered, without the limitations and the confines of the rules of debate over bills. The only other time is in budget debate.

I hope that everyone here is aware of how fabulous my constituency of Edmonton-Centre is, and I know that brings a smile to many people's faces because I've branded it like that, and I insist that everyone talk about my fabulous constituency that way. But there's a reason, and I'm going to tell you why. I thought this might be of interest to you.

I'm going to kind of walk you through the neighbourhood of the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, and we're going to start in the river valley, which I hope all of you take advantage of and enjoy, with the wonderful walking and cycling and multi-use trails that the city of Edmonton and the government and the federal government have made available to us.

Also in the river valley, of course, is our baseball park, which is no longer a triple-A but will be something. So those of you that have apartments and condominiums in the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre and even across the river in Edmonton-Strathcona and elsewhere, please come down and enjoy a good old-fashioned baseball game, beer, peanuts, hot dogs, and all the rest in the river valley sometime over the summer.

We have the old, now decommissioned, Rosedale power plant. Please watch this because over the next couple of years we will be working with the city, the province, and the federal government to build this into something wonderful and new, something probably about artists, but we're not too sure about that.

Of course, the Legislature Grounds and the building that we're in is also in the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, and you must, if you have not already experienced it, come during the summer and watch the hundreds of people who come to enjoy the grounds here and especially the wading pools. For many, many people in Edmonton-Centre and in other places, this is their local pool, their community pool. It was one very brave decision by one of the bureaucrats here in the government that, when told that there were kids playing in the reflecting pool, said, "Oh, okay," and there have been kids in the wading pool from then on. Rather than taking a negative, "They shouldn't be in there; get them out," they have tried very hard to accommodate people. To be fair, it was not a pool that was built to have chlorine in it, which is why you keep seeing them repairing it over and over again. God bless them for doing that because it really is a wonder.

July 1 is a wonderful day on the Legislature Grounds here because, of course, the Chamber is open, the only time of the year, and one of the few Legislatures that allows people onto the floor of the Legislature at any time. But if you come on July 1 – you'll probably be in your own constituencies – please bring your family onto the floor here.

I have five communities. The first one that is closest to here is Oliver, and a sort of subset of that is Grandin, which honours one of the first Catholic religious leaders here in this area. Oliver, of course, is our high-rise area. I talk about my constituency as being 20 blocks by 20 blocks by 20 storeys high. That's pretty much it. At a good clip I can walk across my constituency in 45 minutes, but most of the people live up. I have less than 500 single-family homes now, and I am pushing 46,000 people. Most of them live in a high-rise building, and most of them live alone. My average per door is less than two people; it's like 1.8. Most of you, I imagine, will have four people or so behind every door. I tend to have one, sometimes two people behind every door.

Oliver was our first high-rise community. We have learned over time how to make that a community because high-rises don't lend themselves to talking to each other very much. We've developed things like board game nights and a lot of activity out of the community league, which is really cool. We have a number of community gardens, where people get little plots where they can grow flowers or vegetables. They do so with great gusto in a number of places across the constituency. The community league there offers hayrides and all kinds of summer festivals.

Queen Mary Park, which is the district that's on the far north of my riding and the most easterly section, is my last single-family dwelling area. These were homes that were on the original Hudson's Bay preserve, so a number of them did come with caveats when they were first sold about how big they were and how they were built. If you ever get a chance to go through it, they're mostly those old postwar homes, little bungalows you all recognize, six concrete steps up – and my legs can tell you about every one of those – big picture window on one side, smaller window on the other side, lovely little places, and very affordable for people. Originally, we had mostly Polish and Ukrainian and United Kingdom people settle there.

Now, the district, while I've been serving it, has completely turned over. Those rental houses that were there: a lot of them have been bought, and you can tell the second you walk up the sidewalk. It's really cool. They're fixing stuff up, and a lot more of the people that have been moving in are younger families, Vietnamese, Cambodian, and it's really a pleasure to see that community reinvent itself. They also have a brand new spray park, which they're very proud of and worked very hard to get.

Unfortunately, that is one of the inner-city schools that got closed, and we really notice it. It left a literal and figurative black hole in the middle of that community. The school is used by some other groups, but at night there are no kids there, there's no lights on, and it's literally a black hole for us. It took all of the kids out of the community. So it is hard to get families to move in there. Unfortunately, a lot of those homes that are being bought, they don't have kids. I know a couple of families that do, but mostly they don't.

Moving eastward we have Central McDougall. This is a very old community in Edmonton-Centre, considered right downtown or inner city. This is a community that I am fiercely proud of because they have worked so darn hard to keep their heads above water. They have a poverty index that is triple what is normal. They have very low capacity there. People mostly live in three-floor walk-ups, and they really struggle. There are a lot of social service agencies there that work in the community, and the community is inundated with a lot of transition houses, shelters, and even some kind of old-fashioned boarding houses. But they're really struggling with the amount of at-risk people that they are expected to accommodate in their community, and they've started to push back against that. So I've worked with them on that quite a bit.

They have also managed to build themselves a really spanky playground and a nice park for the parents to sit at as they watch the kids on the playground. Their community as well is working very hard and co-operates a lot with the social service agencies. The school is John A. McDougall school. If you're paying attention at all to Alberta sports history, that was the original home of the Edmonton Grads. That was the school they went to. Their coach was J. Percy Page, and that is where they all started and all went through school there.

I have to say that all of my schools are tremendously motivated. The parents cannot support the students very much. Parents are working often two and three minimum wage jobs, so it's the teachers and the administrative staff that raise the funds for those schools, and they work damn hard to do it.

We've had a lot of revitalization downtown, which makes it very fun, and it's been nice to watch that happen over the years. Make note of this and check Hansard very quickly. Some of the new restaurants that we're really excited about: Blue Plate; Credo is a coffee place, excellent coffee, by the way; the MRKT; Cafe Select. Some old favorites: Rigoletto's; the Bistro Praha has reopened there. A new one that has got a brand new NAIT graduate is Corso 32. Cafe De Ville is an old one, a beloved. Ruth's Chris for those of you that really like the meat. The Pampa is also a meat eater's paradise, right across from my constituency office on 109 Street.

Now, for those of you that like new urban fare, we are attracting some of the truck diners, as they call them. They are coming into the neighbourhood, especially around here. They're new entrepreneurs, chefs, and they are starting their restaurant in a truck by making gourmet sandwiches and really neat ways of presenting things. So I like to support them in that.

Edmonton-Centre also has a really wide range of arts organizations: the Citadel; the Winspear; the Stanley A. Milner Library; the CBC is downtown; the Art Gallery of Alberta; the new Royal Alberta Museum, which will happen right behind city hall – we have, of course, city hall; they also have a wading pool, very smart; they make theirs into a skating rink in the winter, even better – Azimuth Theatre; SNAP, which is the Society of Northern Alberta Print-artists; Latitude 53 society of artists; Harcourt House; the art walk on Jasper and 124; a number of dance studios, including Dance Alberta.

But really what Edmonton-Centre is about is the people. I have very strong communities of artists. I have a fabulous community of gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered, questioning, two-spirited, and/or queer that I am very proud of. I have a very high percentage of seniors, which is unusual. The other communities with very high percentages of seniors are Medicine Hat and Camrose. The highest in the province is 15 per cent. I have 13 per cent of my constituents who are seniors.

June is a great month for us. The first week is Seniors' Week, and I do 16 seniors' teas in a week. The second week is Pride Week, and we have a number of wonderful events that happen around Pride Week, including the best parade you will see on Jasper Avenue. Well, wait. There's Carifest later in August, so two great parades on Jasper Avenue. If you're around, please take it in. That's going to be the second Saturday in June. Then film festivals, art displays, lectures, a bus tour and lecture about how the gay and lesbian community came into being. It's a great time in Edmonton-Centre.

We also have a lot of students attending NAIT, the University of Alberta, Alberta College, Grant MacEwan University, Athabasca University. It's wonderful to have so many young people in Edmonton-Centre.

A number of service workers, young professionals, the 104th Street market community: it's really about the people. When I get excited and talk about Edmonton-Centre, that's what it is for me. Yes, we've got great stuff there and great communities, but it's the people that really make it happen.

While I was campaigning, I heard a number of issues that people wanted me to bring forward and to work on. The first one really shocked me, but I heard it enough times that I'm telling it to you now. My constituents would like to launch a public discussion on euthanasia. They feel very strongly about it. They think it's time we grow up – we're grown-ups – and talked about this issue. They would like to see that happen.

There were lots of concerns and talk about long-term care and home care.

They're particularly interested in saving the nonrenewable resource revenue money, which is of concern to all of us. I've heard it all happen today during question period and Members' Statements. So, like, good for everybody.

My downtown people, of course, want more money on urban priorities, like cycling and walking infrastructure, but also on public transportation, like bus routes and LRTs. They're looking for – this is controversial – arena funding that is not going to come from the MSI for the city. We'll see how that one plays out. It should be interesting.

They're also very interested in advanced education, having the tuition fees come down, and loved our platform of eventually working to public payment for a first university degree, apprenticeship, or college diploma.

They're also very interested in fair and progressive taxes – I did not put those words in their mouths; they brought it up – and concerned about homosexual bullying, violence against women and girls.

Mental health is a huge issue in my constituency. Out of the casework that we do in my office – and I now have two caseworkers that work there all the time – mental health issues are underlying 80 per cent of our casework.

Funding to the arts is very important for Edmonton, Calgary, and for the province.

I really have to say that these are good people who work very hard. They embrace big ideas, and they embrace the move towards better government.

Thank you for letting me walk you through my neighbourhood of the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. I know that the people I represent are quite different in many ways and quite similar in other ways from the ones that you represent, but I'm very, very proud to speak for them. I'm very proud to represent them. In my fifth term here, in opposition, I think I'm a little unusual in keeping coming back to represent them.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

4:00

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and respond to the throne speech and address my colleagues for the first time in this House. I would like to congratulate all of the members on their recent success in the election, and I want to let them know that I'm looking forward to working with them.

I want to congratulate you, Deputy Speaker, for your success in this election. It gives me great pleasure to see you, as I have followed you as an MLA, and your achievements are tremendous.

I would like to also thank the hon. Lieutenant Governor for sharing with each of us and with Albertans his perspective on the tremendous future that lies ahead of us. Listening to such a distinguished leader relate this optimism and driven vision was truly inspiring.

Mr. Speaker, in my view, your service is an excellent example of how the government is building bridges around us instead of putting up walls, which we heard mentioned in the Speech from the Throne. It is something that I'm very proud to be part of.

I would also like to recognize all the employees of the Legislative Assembly who have provided my colleagues and me with tremendous support as we learn our new role. In supporting a mere 87 Members of this Legislative Assembly, they are actually serving over 3.8 million Albertans that we work for.

Mr. Speaker, as a new MLA I am still in a state of euphoria and slowly trying to comprehend the fact that I have realized my dream of representing the people of Edmonton-Mill Woods in this Legislature. Having come to Edmonton almost 25 years ago from Karachi, Pakistan, I brought my hopes, my dreams – this is a little emotional – for the future with me to my new home called Canada. When I stand for O Canada, you know, I get goosebumps because I feel for that.

I just want to acknowledge the Member for Calgary-Shaw. Yesterday he was talking about that he had married a woman of Egyptian heritage. That just starts me thinking about the beauty of this Canadian mosaic. This is our strength. Our multiculturalism is our strength that today is reflected upon any Assembly, in Alberta or in Ontario or in Ottawa. That is actually our strength, and I'm very proud of it. I call myself a Canadian because I feel great pride that I brought my hopes and dreams with me, and people have helped me, accepted me, and on top of that, they have elected me to represent them. This is a very emotional time for me.

I know the importance of having a strong, accepting community, which I found in Edmonton-Mill Woods. I am committed to supporting this constituency so that it remains a welcoming place for newcomers. As you know, Mill Woods has been a diverse community. It was multicultural before it became fashionable to use the word. It is here that one can witness an assembly of different nations having a common dream, a common desire to seek a better and more prosperous future. It is an honour to have been selected to be their voice in this province.

After listening to the Speech from the Throne, I have an even stronger sense of excitement about the great things this government will be accomplishing for our communities over the next four years.

Mr. Speaker, as a new immigrant to Edmonton I started my career in the local fashion world selling designer clothing to Edmontonians. So this is a free tip. If anybody needs any tips on fashion design, their suit, I can give you free tips. My service is available. As I was walking in today, you know, the guy was telling me that this suit looks good. I said: well, because of the way I put it together, it looks good. So anybody wanting fashion tips, I'm here to offer them for free.

Mr. Speaker, you know, having at that time recently graduated with my bachelor of commerce, I excelled in the industry and worked over time to recognize my gift of working with people. My interaction with the public taught me tolerance and gave me a better understanding of how to connect with others. This new career also taught me important lessons in business, which paved my way to becoming an entrepreneur. I eventually bought a printing business, which connected me to people of various walks of life and helped me to learn about a number of organizations involved in community work. As I began to work with these community organizations, I came to understand the diverse needs of Albertans around me.

I also realized the importance of having a capable and responsible government, one that can effectively provide essential services while maintaining fiscal discipline. As we so clearly heard in the Speech from the Throne, that is the kind of government we will be. As a member of this government I will actively champion the voices of Mill Woods' growing seniors' population, who need our continuous attention. I will work to support the recreational and academic programs that are so valuable to our children. Those programs are provided by 25 terrific schools in my riding and countless other organizations. I will also strive to ensure that our health care system is responsive and effective for our residents.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, in addition to my experiences that I mentioned earlier, there are also a number of people who have had a profound impact on my life. First, my grandmother. My grandmother often told me that a tree which is laden with fruit leans toward the ground, a symbol of productivity, simplicity, and humility. I must also acknowledge my exemplary parents, whose guidance in everyday life has inspired my siblings and me to achieve our goals. They have inculcated in us the values of humanity, acceptance, and tolerance. I'm also thankful to my wife, Sarwat, who has stood by me as a true companion for the last 17 years and many more to come.

My passion for the game of cricket has also greatly affected my life as it has taught me the importance of sportsmanship, the art of winning and losing happily.

These people and experiences have helped shape who I am and have prepared me to venture into the world of public service. Mr. Speaker, it was a joyous first step for me when I won the PC nomination for Edmonton-Mill Woods, and the election campaign followed soon after. One of the most memorable events of my campaign was the hon. Premier accepting our invitation to come and speak to an enthusiastic crowd of over 800 people. The audience was a true mix of all religions, backgrounds, and ages, a true representation of the diversity of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The massive applause as the Premier entered made my team and constituents very proud. After all, it was her determination and commitment to Albertans that changed our political landscape and inspired many of us to run for public office.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, the results on election night were electrifying, but in the morning I realized that we have an immense responsibility ahead of us. We are now part of a team that is working toward an even better future for Alberta than that which we have already experienced. Nothing less than success will be acceptable. We all know that Albertans are the hardest working individuals in the world, and they deserve the highest quality of life, excellent and accessible services, and low taxes so that we can each spend our hard-earned money as we see fit.

As His Honour the Lieutenant Governor related in his speech, we are fortunate to have this high level of economic freedom. This freedom has fostered an incredible sense of entrepreneurship, creativity, and motivation among our residents. As I have already discussed, I experienced my own entrepreneurial transformation when I moved here, and I am sure it is no different for many newcomers to our province. Mr. Speaker, Edmonton-Mill Woods currently has a population of 45,845; about 30,000 eligible voters. With Alberta's growing economy, there is likely to be an influx of new immigrants and migration from other provinces in the near future. If we continue to promote an environment of free enterprise and low taxes, I know that newcomers to our province will continue to be successful.

In addition, in my constituency it will be important to facilitate job opportunities for newcomers, including pharmacists, engineers, IT experts, clinicians, and other skilled workers so that they can be effective partners in building our province. This government is already doing that. Budget 2012 expanded the role of pharmacists.

As we heard in the Speech from the Throne, we are going to continue investing in our markets for new technology, including clean energy, which will be creating many new exciting jobs. Mr. Speaker, in listening to the speech, I know our government will continue to provide Alberta with the quality-of-life services and the wealth of opportunity we have been fortunate to experience until now.

The Speech from the Throne has renewed the energy and excitement that I felt throughout the nomination and campaign period and also given us a focus. Mr. Speaker, as I move forward, I assure you that I will serve the people of Alberta to the best of my ability, keeping with the goals and the values from the Speech from the Throne, and will be an effective voice for the constituents of Edmonton-Mill Woods.

I'm looking forward to working with all of my hon. colleagues here today in the spirit of true democracy to ensure the best path forward for Alberta. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I also move that we adjourn debate on the Speech from the Throne.

The Speaker: Hon. member, did I hear you move a motion to adjourn debate?

Mr. Quadri: Yes. That's what I just said. I can repeat it.

The Speaker: I'm sorry, I couldn't hear you.

Mr. Quadri: Mr. Speaker, I move adjournment of debate on the Speech from the Throne.

The Speaker: The hon. Member from Edmonton-Mill Woods has moved the adjournment of debate on the Speech from the Throne. All in favour of this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Aye.

The Speaker: Those opposed?

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Speaker: I'm sensing that there's some sort of a tie here.

[Several members rose calling for a division]

The Speaker: Call in the members, then. We'll sound the division bells and sort this out.

[The division bell was rung at 4:12 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

Thank you.

Statement by the Speaker

Decorum and Parliamentary Behaviour

The Speaker: Hon. members, just before the House rises at the end of the first sitting of the 28th Legislature, the chair finds it necessary to offer two minutes of brief reflections on decorum and parliamentary behaviour. As noted in my comments on Monday, I encouraged all of you to adopt your own personal credo to serve as a guide as you fulfill your duties as members to the constituents you serve and to your colleagues and to this Assembly. The long-standing tradition of respect, dignity, and honour for each other and for this institution must be maintained.

We have had a very productive first few days in this House, but I know and you know that we can do even better. Realizing that 38 of you are new to parliamentary procedure and protocol, the chair offered considerable leeway in various aspects of the proceedings of the House. Nonetheless, the chair would like to offer all members a few friendly reminders before the Assembly adjourns for the summer.

Number one, members should always speak through the chair.

Number two, preambles will not be permitted on supplementary questions during Oral Question Period.

Number three, members are not permitted to refer to the absence of another member.

Number four, members should not refer to other members by their proper names. They should use their constituency names or their ministerial titles.

Number five, when a member comments about a document that is about to be tabled, the member should be brief and should accurately describe the document in no more than one or two sentences to avoid taking up precious time of the House.

Number six, when introducing guests, which is important to all of us, I would ask you to please be very brief to allow the maximum number to be introduced.

Also, with respect to the rotation several notes were sent up to the chair yesterday and again today, and they concern in what order we speak or don't speak and so on. Please understand that there is no specified order in our rules that dictates how this should go. There is a respected tradition to alternate between the government member or minister and an opposition member and go back and forth and to and fro, but the chair can only be as effective as the information with which he or she is provided when chairing. I have asked before to receive speaking lists of members who wish to speak, and we do our best to include them. Today was an example where we had one list from one particular side, and we did not for some reason have the list written out on the other side. We're looking at that. I've met with some of the House leaders and spoken with them about it. Please keep that in mind.

Also, please know that today the chair did allow some leeway to go back to a member who had been skipped over because of circumstances. We had a similar circumstance yesterday when we had some health issues that arose with a couple of people, so we allowed some of those speeches to be made. The chair will continue to be lenient in that respect, and you will find that it will work for your advantage as well as for others' advantage from time to time.

Members should also be mindful that when the chair is speaking, he appreciates your attention. Let's add that to the list.

Members should also be aware that when we are in Assembly, members must take their seat and should not move freely about the Chamber. Again, we realize that there are new members here who are here for the first time who don't know all these rules, so we've permitted some leeway. The Sergeant-at-Arms also permitted some leeway. You are permitted to move freely about the Chamber during Committee of the Whole or Committee of Supply or any of the committees. That's when the chair leaves the throne, as it's called, the dais, and the Deputy Chair takes over at the Clerk's table here. At that point you're free to move around. You're free to go and sit at other people's desks and chat with your colleagues and discuss world affairs. Remember that.

If you wish to speak to your colleagues in any event, please use outside the Chamber to do that. We have excellent services also that are provided by pages, who would be happy to send notes back and forth to other colleagues.

Finally, the chair would like all members to do a little bit of parliamentary homework, please, over the summer since there have been some transgressions this week in connection with statements uttered that amount to serious allegations against other members both during question period and also during Members' Statements. I would ask you to review in your good conscience what the purpose of Members' Statements really is. It is not an opportunity to stand up and deride or throw derogatory comments at another member. That is not what it's all about.

Finally, finally, we are all referred to as honourable members, and the basis of the word "honourable" is integrity and respect. There is little point in you arriving at orders for the House, called standing orders, or having rules or guidelines in parliamentary books and traditions if you aren't prepared to abide by them yourselves. The Speaker's job, as with the Deputy Speaker's job and the Deputy Chair's job, is simply to enforce your rules and the long-standing parliamentary traditions that have guided hundreds of others across this great country.

Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 3(4)(b) the House stands adjourned until Monday, October 29, 2012. Thank you for your attention.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. pursuant to Government Motion 7]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, October 23, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Let us pray. Almighty God and great creator of our universe, as we begin our deliberations in this fall sitting of the Alberta Legislature, we ask for Your guidance as we do our work to benefit our province and its people and to benefit our country. Let us also be mindful of those who serve in our military and peacekeeping forces and who, in so doing, afford us the great privilege of serving as democratically elected representatives. Amen.

Hon. members, as is our custom, on the earliest sitting day possible we pay tribute to members and former members of this Assembly who have passed away since we last met. In addition to our admiration and respect, there is also a great deal of gratitude to members of the families, who shared in the burdens of public office and public service. Today I would like to welcome members of the Fowler family and the Lougheed family who are seated in the Speaker's gallery and also in the members' gallery. I'll introduce them very shortly.

Mr. Richard S. Fowler

April 12, 1923, to July 8, 2012

The Speaker: Hon. Richard Fowler, known to his friends and family more often as Dick Fowler, served as the MLA for St. Albert from 1989 to 1993. During the 22nd Legislature Mr. Fowler served as Solicitor General, minister responsible for native affairs, Minister of Municipal Affairs, and Minister of Justice and Attorney General. In addition, he served on the Select Standing Committee on Public Affairs.

Mr. Fowler also served in local government, serving as mayor of St. Albert from 1965 to 1968 and again from 1980 to 1989. He also had a very distinguished legal career, having served as a judge in the Provincial Court of Alberta from 1994 to 2009. A Catholic school and a nearby park are already named in honour of his service to his community.

Hon. E. Peter Lougheed, PC, CC, AOE, QC

July 26, 1928, to September 13, 2012

The Speaker: The Hon. Peter Lougheed was first elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta in the 1967 general election. He represented the constituency of Calgary-West until his resignation on February 28, 1986.

On September 10, 1971, he was sworn in as Alberta's 10th Premier. To date he is the only Leader of the Official Opposition to subsequently serve as Premier. He resigned as Premier effective November 1, 1985.

Upon becoming Premier, the Hon. Mr. Lougheed committed to the principle of open government. He changed how all members approached their roles by making the Assembly more open and more accessible. In March of 1972, for example, Alberta Hansard was officially established under his watch. For the first time Albertans all over the province could read and follow word for word what occurred in this Chamber. Also in 1972 Alberta became the first jurisdiction in Canada to provide live televised coverage of House proceedings.

A state memorial was recently held in honour of the Hon. Mr. Lougheed, and a special tribute was also held right here in our Legislature Building.

In a moment of silent prayer I would ask each of you to remember Mr. Lougheed and Mr. Fowler as each of you may have known them. Rest eternal grant unto them, O Lord, and let light perpetual shine upon them. Amen.

Please be seated.

Hon. members, we have with us today members of the Lougheed and Fowler families. I'm going to break our custom and tradition to introduce them to you at this time. I will ask that they rise and remain standing as I call their names, and then we can welcome them all at the end with our generous applause.

Representing the Lougheed family is Stephen Lougheed, son of former Premier Peter Lougheed.

Representing the Fowler family are Dawne Fowler, spouse of former member Dick Fowler; James Fowler, son, and friend Brenda Raynard; Rose Marie Fowler, sister; Bill Fowler, brother, and wife, Irene; Judy Fowler, niece; and Marg Mrazek, a special family friend. As well, we welcome the following members of the Fowler family who are with us in spirit and are watching these proceedings today on television from their homes: Christine Fowler, daughter; Caroline Fowler, daughter; Cathy Doyle, daughter; Mary Ann, sister, and husband, Jake Willis, from Wetaskiwin along with their son Bruce, who is home on leave from the Middle East; Fred, brother, and his wife, Ann, from St. Albert; Uncle Bill and Aunt Hazel Dandeneau from Edmonton; stepdaughter Coralee and her children and foster children Shaelyn, Torrin, Brielle, Nicky, Stacey, Saneka, Tylys, and Eli in Raven, Alberta, as well as several other nieces, nephews, and friends.

Please join me in thanking all of them for their participation. Our tribute today goes out to them and to the late members' honour. [applause]

Thank you.

Hon. members, this being the first day of the fall sitting, I have a special treat that I know will very much brighten your day. Edmonton's own Pro Coro Canada singers will now sing a special arrangement of O Canada to commence our proceedings. I would ask you to stand now, please, and ordinarily I would also ask you to join in. Today, however, I would simply ask that you stand back and listen and enjoy the wonderful harmony that is about to unfold. As you're doing so, please reflect on what a great country we live in and how honoured we are to have brave men and women in our military who protect her and each and every one of us as well every single day.

Pro Coro Canada Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
Car ton bras sait porter l'épée,
Il sait porter la croix!
Ton histoire est une épopée
Des plus brillants exploits.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

[applause]

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. Please be seated.

The Pro Coro group is normally 24 voices. I think at least 12 made it out here today.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two very distinguished Canadians who have dedicated their lives to leadership and service. Seated in your gallery are Brigadier General Christian Juneau, commander of land force western area, in charge of all regular and reserve army units from Vancouver Island to Thunder Bay, Ontario, who assumed this position on June 27 of this year; and area reserve Sergeant Major Chief Warrant Officer Gordon Crossley. As you know, the province of Alberta has a proud and storied history of support and appreciation for Canada's servicemen and women. We are honoured to be home to four active military bases and many reservist units, one of which I am proud to still be associated with. As a government we are fully committed to supporting those in the Canadian Forces as well as their families throughout their career.

Mr. Speaker, these gentlemen lead countless courageous men and women who have given so much to their country and are shining examples of service and sacrifice to all of us. It is for this reason that we are especially pleased that Brigadier General Juneau and Chief Warrant Officer Crossley are able to join us here today as we continue to carry out the democratic process that they are committed to defend. I would ask our visitors, who have risen in your gallery, to receive the very warm and traditional welcome from this grateful Assembly and from a most grateful province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly three special members of the province's Blackfoot community seated in your gallery. Arthur Calling Last is an elder and current member of the sacred Horn Society. Elder Calling Last, who was just inducted into the Lethbridge racing association's hall of fame, is a self-trained artist who takes great pride in his long involvement as a trainer and owner of racehorses here in Alberta. He is joined today by his wife, Loretta, who I am told is always supportive of her husband's cultural endeavours.

Allan Pard is a Piikani elder who currently serves as senior adviser to Aboriginal Relations and is an invaluable resource to me. Allan has been with the Alberta government for more than 20 years and continues to be an active and committed steward of Blackfoot history and culture. Allan also trains and races horses on his ranch in the Piikani Nation south of Calgary.

Mr. Speaker, I invite them to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: [Remarks in Blackfoot] My special way of saying welcome. Everything is going smoothly so far.

Mr. Khan: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House on this special day when we honour Richard Fowler another one of my predecessors, Mary O'Neill. Mary served as MLA for St. Albert, winning her first election by 16 votes in 1997. She left the Assembly in 2004 but never quit working hard for Albertans. Mary has been a role model and mentor to me and many others in the community of St. Albert and around the province. She is seated in your gallery, and

I would ask her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Our first introduction of guests will be performed by the hon. Premier.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you a very special guest. Peter Mansbridge is an award-winning journalist and author and a Canadian icon. A little known fact: his father was recruited to Alberta from Ottawa to be the Deputy Minister of Health for Helen Hunley when she was the Minister of Health under Premier Peter Lougheed. For more than 40 years Canadians from coast to coast have relied on Peter's experience, integrity, and insight to stay engaged and informed. Through our radios and from our living rooms so many of us have shared with him the triumphs as well as the heartbreak of events that have shaped history, shaped our world, and shaped our country.

You are a great Canadian, Peter. Have a pleasant stay here in Alberta. Now I'd ask everyone, after you rise, to please give you a warm welcome to this House.

The Speaker: The Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special group of seniors who are members of the Heritage Senior Stop-in Centre in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. They are seated in both the members' and public galleries today. The Heritage Senior Stop-in Centre started as a coffee group of six people who used to meet at the old Heritage Mall here in Edmonton in the early 1990s. In 2001 on their own initiative they moved to their current site in the Blue Quill Shopping Centre. Today they are here to view the proceedings of the Assembly. I'd ask Dr. Munawar Chaudhry, group leader; Ruth Gellert; and 22 other members of the organization to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, we have three school groups. I hope we can get all the intros in before 1:50.

The President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two groups of grade 6 students from Woodhaven middle school in Spruce Grove. They are truly a bright and energetic group of students who participated in your mock Legislature this morning. They passed no-bullying legislation and no-homework legislation. They are accompanied by teachers Mrs. April Kluh and Mr. Graeme Webber and parent helpers Mrs. Melissa MacDonald, Mrs. Olivia MacMillan, Mrs. Heidi Chadwick, and Mrs. Michelle Spring. They are seated in both of your galleries, and I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Glori Meldrum and Laurie Szymanski. Glori is the founder and chair of Little Warriors. As a sexual abuse survivor she has been creating awareness for the treatment and prevention of child sexual abuse.

I'd also like to acknowledge a school from the constituency of Edmonton-Riverview, l'école Notre-Dame, sitting in the gallery over here. Bienvenue.

Also, from the University of Alberta we have the students' union president here today, Colten Yamagishi, and students' union councillor Mike McGinn. I would like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Mrs. Mills' class from Mundare. They are very excited to be here participating in the School at the Legislature. They will be debating whether there is enough gym time available to students. With them today is their teacher, Adrienne Mills, and three parents: Mrs. Doris Bradley, Mrs. Bernice Komarnisky, and Mrs. Jennifer Larrivee. Would they please stand so that we could greet them.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the new executive director of the Alberta Liberal Party, Gerald McEachern. Gerald hails from Ontario, where he ran northern Ontario's largest advertising agency and fought the Mike Harris Conservative government to win a full campus rural medical school for northwest Ontario, a school that we could surely use in Alberta. In the last eight years he's been living in New Brunswick doing economic and organizational development. He will soon be joined by his wife and four children. In his six short weeks in Alberta the Liberals are back in the black, we've gone green, we've fused Liberal and Alberta values in our new logo, Liberalberta. I'd like Gerald to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Statement by the Speaker

Conduct of Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we begin question period, please be reminded that each question and response must not exceed 35 seconds and that your remarks are to be directed through the chair, supplementary questions must not be preceded by any preamble, and finally the language you use should be temperate and parliamentary at all times. So I will ask that each of you strive to uphold the civility and decorum that befits this hallowed Chamber.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: With that, to show us the way, I'll ask the hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition for her first question.

MLA Remuneration

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Delighted to be back.

Mr. Speaker, I believe people are only as good as their word. During the last election the Premier promised – promised – to end gold-plated transition allowances for MLAs, but just this past Friday PCs on the Members' Services Committee did the opposite. They recommended not only giving themselves a transition allowance but also a richer payment to RRSPs as well. The Premier says it's not her fault. She says she was caught by surprise and that she never told her caucus whip to slip this latest cash grab through the committee. Can the Premier explain to Albertans why her caucus is ready to break another election promise?

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like to just add that no report from the Members' Services Committee has yet come to this Chamber. I'll leave it up to the Premier, however, if she wishes to make a general comment.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think your comment is quite specific. This is a committee of the Legislative Assembly. Members who sit on that committee are fully able to explore the work that they do, as I understand it. My understanding is that the work of that committee was to review the recommendations of the Major report. I understand that that's what they did, and I don't understand that it's my role to direct the members of the committee to do anything.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the PC members of the committee want taxpayers to cover 100 per cent of their RRSPs. That means, in effect, that MLAs would get an 8 per cent, or nearly a thousand dollars a month, pay increase. Now, of course, a thousand dollars a month: that sounds kind of familiar as a number. Is this replacement money for the no-meet committee?

The Speaker: Again, hon. members, I would caution you about going down this line. No report has yet come forward from this committee; neither has any recommendation formally surfaced just yet.

Hon. Premier, I'll leave it to you if you wish to comment. If not, I'll invite the hon. leader to go on to the third question.

Ms Redford: Answered.

Ms Smith: I think, Mr. Speaker, that we're going to see a lot of that this session.

As angry as Albertans were about the no-meet committee and the payments to a few MLAs, this thousand dollars a month would end up going to all 87 MLAs. Can the Premier put an end to the immediate game playing and order her members to do the right thing and give Alberta taxpayers a break?

The Speaker: Hon. member, I hope I don't have to remind the Assembly or any future questioners again. There is no report yet that has come forward to this Assembly. There is a process. Let's try and stick to it.

Hon. Premier, if you wish to comment, I'll leave it up to you.

If not, I'll move to the Leader of the Official Opposition for her second main set of questions, please.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, in the most recent fiscal update we learned that the deficit is $3 billion. This is exactly where we warned that this government was headed even though throughout the election they said that we were wrong. On Friday, once again, the PCs on the Members' Services Committee voted themselves an 8 per cent pay raise – that's 8 per cent – about $1,000 per month, by having taxpayers fill up their RRSPs. Will the Premier stop grabbing taxpayer money and commit to getting spending under control?

The Speaker: I think this is a similar vein of questioning, hon. leader, so please revisit the question, but I'll invite whoever on the government side wishes to make a comment to please do so.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, it's been a very interesting summer. It's been a very interesting September and October. In fact, I've had the opportunity to do budget consultations with Albertans across this province. We had open public consultations which we invited members of the opposition and members of this side of the House to attend. I want to commend the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat for attending one of those. He was the only one that did.

It was very apparent in those consultations, Mr. Speaker, that spending wisely is very important to Albertans. That's where results-based budgeting will be a true effort by this government to get value for money.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If the Premier is committed to an 8 per cent pay increase for her MLAs, should we expect that government employees are also going to be getting an 8 per cent pay increase this year?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as you have so rightly said – and I'm sure eventually the Leader of the Official Opposition will understand – this is not a committee of the government. This is a committee of the Legislature that at some point will make a decision that we as MLAs will consider.

We made it very clear as a government and have stood by the fact that we do not support a transition allowance. We will not support a transition allowance. We have made no commitment in any way as a government to any increase with respect to MLAs, nor should we. That's why we have a Members' Services Committee. It is the job of MLAs, not the government.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I would also remind you that questions ought not be speculative in nature. Bearing that in mind, please proceed.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The idea of employees – and, yes, we do actually work for Albertans – deviously getting taxpayers to cover 100 per cent of RRSP contributions is just something that would not happen in the real world. Would the Premier now admit that having her people raise this in the Members' Services Committee was wrong?

Speaker's Ruling Hypothetical Questions

The Speaker: Hon. members, let me say for the third or the fourth time, please: don't deal in speculation; don't deal in something that is hypothetical, something that has not yet come forward in the proper process way. So let us move on to the next question, please.

Leader of the Official Opposition, your third main set of questions, please.

Provincial Fiscal Reporting

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is in deficit trouble. That's pretty clear now. The Associate Minister of Finance shocked his colleagues when he actually told the truth and admitted that the government would only attempt to run a balanced operating budget this year while taking out debt to pay for everything else. Then the real Minister of Finance tried to reassure Albertans by explaining that this was actually a legitimate way to balance the books. Finally, the Premier tried to smooth things over with what looked like a redefinition of the word "balanced." Albertans want to know the real truth. When is the budget, all of it, going to be balanced?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is my purview: to bring forward a budget based on my consultations with Albertans, which we've done. I've already mentioned that. I think Albertans can rest assured that when we put forward the budget next year, it's going to include the priorities of Albertans. It's going to include funding for our capital plan, and our commitment is that it will be balanced.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, this government is also running an honesty deficit. The last fiscal update avoided telling the entire story, even though by law, by the government's own law, it has to. What the minister did last time, not showing all the numbers, might even be illegal. Will the Finance minister commit to a complete and full and honest update next time?

The Speaker: Let us remember the 35-second rule and no preambles, please. Let's continue.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I take exception to some of the accusations, frankly, that might have been thrown across there. We have a very high standard of reporting. In fact, what we're doing is making it better. We are going to give Albertans a comparison of what our actual is to what our original budget was. We did that in the first quarter. We believe that we met the terms of the legislation in what was released in that first quarter. We will be sitting down with the Auditor General and the audit committee, as we already have, and talking about further refinements to our quarterly updating. In fact, we did not decline any requests for information, including from the opposition.

Ms Smith: Well, we'd like to see a full update next time.

Mr. Speaker, given that the deficit hole is huge and only getting bigger and given that we see no evidence yet of any effort to fix the problem and given that energy prices remain low and the Canadian dollar remains high, how will this minister reduce spending to restore a little confidence that he actually knows what he's doing?

2:00

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's interesting that in the 60 some-odd-plus meetings I've had with captains of industry in our province, with CFOs of corporations, with chambers of commerce, they are very confident of this government's ability to move forward and deliver on what Albertans' priorities are, and I feel quite confident. We've also done in-year savings expectations. We have increased them. If the hon. member had been listening when we did the first-quarter update, she would have got this, that we are going to be looking for in-year savings of more than half a billion dollars. We've asked departments to review all of their capital spending, and in fact we've made some adjustments in that regard.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Health Services Local Decision-making

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's good to be back.

An internal memo obtained by CBC indicates that the new AHS Board chair, Stephen Lockwood, has the full backing of the province to off-load its responsibilities onto local hospitals without consultation or a clear plan. This has left senior management scratching their heads and wondering who's in charge: their executive, the Health minister, or the Premier? To the Premier: is your interference an admission that the government's AHS experiment has failed?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I was quite pleased today in my scrum before question period to be asked exactly this question by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and I have to say that I was pleased to hear the good news because what we've heard from the opposition and what we've heard from Albertans is that they want to make sure that health care is delivered in our communities. The best way to do that is to keep local managers and health advisory councils involved, so I think it's fantastic that local communities are going to be directly involved in consulting and delivering on health care in their communities.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The right thing done wrong could cause problems.

Given that the Health Quality Council recommended against further shuffling of AHS management deck chairs and recommended a focus on reducing hospital occupancy rates to 85 per cent by improving home care and long-term care, why is the Premier ignoring Dr. John Cowell's advice?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the interesting thing about running a health care system that's as large as the one that we have is that you can't do what the hon. member is suggesting and focus on one issue at a time. We are at the moment making a commitment, and have, through the chair of Alberta Health Services to work with local communities to do exactly what local communities have said, and that includes family care clinics and better support for long-term care. It's going to allow for greater operational flexibility, for lower costs, for opportunity for community engagement, and it will create an engaged and an innovative approach to health care, including long-term care, for all Albertans.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, there's a reason they call this question period and not answer period.

Given that the AHS performance dashboard from June 2012 shows that the government is warehousing 467 seniors in hospitals and that another thousand are still in limbo, awaiting placement, why is the Premier yet again renovating the management structure instead of renovating her government's failed home care and long-term care policy?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the exciting thing about health care is that you can have an integrated approach to resolving problems, and I have to say that this question does not suggest that the hon. member actually understands that. We know that it's possible to develop innovative approaches to access to health care and long-term care such as the work that our Minister of Health has done in conjunction with community leaders in support of decisions that are being made in Alberta Health Services to create better opportunities, and I thank him for that.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. leader of the New Democratic opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie.

XL Foods Inc. Beef Recall

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. When news of the E coli crisis at XL Foods broke, the Premier responded by telling Albertans to keep eating beef even though E coli can cause death and serious disabilities, especially for children. Even as the Premier was giving Albertans cooking advice, the recall on the contaminated meat was further expanded. Will the Premier admit that she jeopardized the health of Albertans by encouraging them to eat a product that was deemed unsafe for human consumption?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I will not do that, but what I will do is say that the hon. member jeopardized the health of the beef industry by fearmongering and suggesting that Alberta beef is not safe to eat, and . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Premier has not concluded her remarks.

Ms Redford: Thank you. On that very day when I met with beef producers, we talked about the fact that the incident at XL was an unfortunate incident. There is no doubt that the CFIA took appropriate steps, and we had to make sure that our minister worked with the federal government to get that plant open. Good news today, Mr. Speaker: we achieved our goal.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier clearly puts the health of the beef industry ahead of the health of Albertans.

Given that the federal inspections have failed to protect Albertans and other Canadians from tainted beef and given that the federal budget contains major cuts to the Canadian Food Inspection Agency, when will this Premier finally stand up to her federal cousins in Ottawa and demand adequate funding for food safety in Canada?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, one thing I will say that I'm very proud of is our provincially regulated food processing in this province. It works, and it protects public safety. One of the things that we have already done in this province is taken more responsibility for food regulation and inspection than in other parts of the country. Our record stands for that. We are primarily concerned about public health in this province. We protect public health in this province. We've had a record of doing that and will continue to do it.

Mr. Mason: The Premier's words are not matched by her actions, Mr. Speaker.

Given that the health of Albertans, not to mention the health of the beef industry, depends on preventing another beef contamination crisis, why has the Premier failed Albertans by refusing to support a public inquiry into the failures of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency at the XL plant?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, I believe that there are always times when we can learn from opportunities. This was a very unfortunate incident. It certainly impacted Albertans in many ways. We've seen already from discussions that our minister of agriculture has had today with the federal minister that steps are already in place to learn lessons from this experience. There is no doubt that there are lessons to be learned. We will take them seriously. We will share some of our best practices with the federal government, and that is how we will resolve this, not through a public inquiry.

Provincial Fiscal Position

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, in 2005 Alberta had a very proud moment, of course, and that's when Premier Klein announced that Alberta was debt free. I remember the photograph – I think we all do – of Ralph sitting beside a large cheque with “paid in full” emblazoned right across the front of it. Now, just seven years later, a report by the well respected Macdonald-Laurier Institute says that Alberta is now the most likely province in all of Canada to face an EU-style debt crisis because of its high spending and overreliance on oil revenues. Minister, will you commit that you will not return Alberta to debt in order to finance your government's spending habits?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I certainly hope that as someone who purports to understand the financial situation of this province, the hon. member would not rely on that particular study. That particular study's methodology I would call into question. I would also suggest to you that nowhere in this country is there a province that has net financial assets except right here. We are in a net positive financial position. We are going to stay in a net positive financial position, and we will maintain a triple-A credit rating that is gold plated, the envy of all of Canada.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I hope that minister knows that his friend Jim Dinning sits on the advisory council of that study. He's the guy who balanced the budget before. You may remember him.

Mr. Speaker, given that over the last few weeks this government has clearly been floating a trial balloon, that they're looking at using all kinds of different debt instruments to pay for tens of billions in new spending, will the minister commit that Alberta will not take on new financial liabilities just so this Premier can keep up her ongoing spending spree?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member mentioned one of the previous Finance ministers in this House, Mr. Dinning. I'm very pleased that I do consider Mr. Dinning a friend. In fact, I had one of my sit-down chats with the captains of industry with Mr. Dinning, and I can honestly say that Mr. Dinning is a hundred per cent in favour of the approach that we're going to take. Mr. Dinning is also a member of the Canada West Foundation. In fact, I would tell the hon. member that he should look at the legislation in this House. It is against the law for the government of Alberta to run an operating deficit, and we will not borrow for operating.

Mr. Anderson: Balance the operating budget. Way to go. Fantastic.

Mr. Speaker, let me ask what so many Albertans are asking right now. With oil revenues at record levels and with the oil patch pumping out so many jobs that every Albertan is employed because oil prices are so high, how can you possibly find a way to continually run record deficits, vaporize our savings, and now return us into debt? It takes real talent to mess things up this bad, and you've got talent, sir.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, it simply shows the ignorance of the financial situation of this province. We are in the best financial position of any jurisdiction, I would argue, in North America. We have net assets of close to $12,000 per person in this province versus net debt in every other jurisdiction in this country. We have some of the best service delivery in the world, I would argue. We are a growing province. We have 3.7 per cent growth this year, leading the nation. Indeed, next year we will lead the nation as well. We will continue to manage this province's finances prudently and effectively for all Albertans.

XL Foods Inc. Beef Recall (continued)

Ms Fenske: Mr. Speaker, as we are all aware, September brought about the largest beef recall due to E coli in our country's history. The Canadian Food Inspection Agency subsequently suspended operations at the XL Foods plant in Brooks. I understand that today the same agency has reinstated the plant's operating licence. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Could he please tell me: what does this mean to Alberta's food system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, this has been good news for us today. We've been waiting for it for a while. It's good news for the people in Brooks and certainly for the workers there. When you have a community with 2,000 workers and 12,000 or so people, obviously it's a huge impact when they can't work. It's also very important for our producers, the people to whom I am responsible for reporting. So we're very happy, but this is just the beginning of a process. It's going to take some time before everything is up and running completely.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: how can consumers be assured that beef products coming out of that plant are safe to consume?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that in the last number of weeks there is no plant in North America that has had more scrutiny than this one. When the CFIA has been very deliberate in getting us back to the point of recertification, I think that we can have lots of confidence that everything is being watched very carefully. In fact, I talked to Minister Ritz earlier today. He told me that for the time being there's going to be extra scrutiny of the plant until they're satisfied.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what does this mean for Alberta beef products moving to the United States, our largest trading partner?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to stress that this was one plant – a very large plant, a very important plant, but it was one plant – that had the U.S. border shut it down. All other plants in Alberta and across the country were still delivering beef across the border. Minister Ritz and I talked about that today, and we are focusing on that. One of our next steps is collaborating to make sure that we can get that border open for the XL products as soon as possible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Dealings with Government by Former Ministers

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The stench of entitlement with this 41-year-old out-of-touch PC government is overwhelming. This past summer we saw that this government is more interested in padding the wallets of their government family than fixing the real fiscal mess they've put us in. Evan Berger, after getting turfed by voters of Livingstone-Macleod, was rewarded with a fat, six-figure patronage appointment. Not only does this fly in the face of our ethics legislation; it is wrong and reeks of cronyism. Wildrose believes in accountability. Will this government do the right thing and, like the voters in his own riding, turf Evan Berger?

The Speaker: Hon. minister of agriculture, it wasn't directed to anyone in particular, but if you wish to answer, please do.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll certainly be happy to answer that question.

First of all, Mr. Berger had a distinguished career as an MLA. He is a logical person to be involved working for the department in terms of helping develop policy because of his expertise and because of his experience.

Now, when there was a discussion about Mr. Berger being hired to work for the department, the obvious first question was: does the Ethics Commissioner approve? All steps were taken to have this approved by the Ethics Commissioner before any step was taken to hire him.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Evan Berger's position as a senior policy adviser never existed before, that there was no job description, that there was no open job competition, and that even Evan Berger didn't know what his job was, could the agriculture minister please explain how this obvious conflict of interest ever passed the smell test?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I would have expected that this hon. member would know that the Public Service Act does allow for the hiring of employees of government without a competition when they have specialized skills, specialized knowledge, and that's certainly the case with Mr. Berger.

Also, the Conflicts of Interest Act is written in a way that does allow for the discretion of the Ethics Commissioner. If there was no discretion for the Ethics Commissioner, why would the provision be there in the act? He simply exercised his discretion, and certain members opposite, I know, have commented numerous times on how we should respect the decisions of the Ethics Commissioner.

The Speaker: Your final supplemental, hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Mr. Berger admitted in his own local paper that he'll likely run in the next election, will this government simply admit that it provided Mr. Berger with a soft landing so he can campaign on the taxpayer dime for, surely, another failed election bid?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I have over a thousand employees that work for my department. I don't know how many of them are interested in running in the next election. There could be dozens – I don't know – and that's not my concern. My concern is whether the department performs the work that it's supposed to do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Highway 63

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to stand here today and ask my very first question in question period as the MLA for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. Highway 63 is a very vital transportation corridor for the continued economic growth of this province, and my constituents have significant concerns about their safety when they're travelling on it. Recent announcements on the acceleration of the twinning are very much appreciated by my constituents, but we know it will still take several more years. To the Minister of Transportation: what is the government doing in the meantime to educate, promote, and create a safer driving culture on highway 63?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo: we have been busy. We have increased signage, passing lanes. We've worked with industry to inform them and encourage their employees to behave in a safe manner. We've done our best to educate the public as we wait for the safe twinning of highway 63, which will be complete in 2016. The public expects strong government action to look after traffic and keep Albertans safe, and that is exactly what this government is providing them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Speed and dangerous driving habits are known to be a main cause of fatal collisions. To the same minister: will the government consider a significant increase in maximum penalties to help deter these offences?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, that's a good question, and I have to tell you that the government is looking hard at all options. One thing we do understand is that speeding is one of the main causes of accidents, collisions, and injuries to Albertans. We are committed to addressing serious speeding. We certainly have added law enforcement along that road. We have a good fine and penalty regimen. We haven't committed to other legislative changes at this point – we're considering all those – but we have beefed up our efforts, as is very apparent by the actions of this government.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is to the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General. I recently read that the opposition wants eight new police officers on patrol on 63, but your department has already committed to 16. Can the minister advise this House when these 16 officers will be on the ground patrolling the highway 63 corridor?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to advise that there are already four new officers as of the end of August of this year already patrolling, and there will be an additional 12 officers – that's a total of 16 officers – at the beginning of January. I don't know why the Wildrose wants to reduce law enforcement here. I've read their report, and I look over and over again. Maybe it's because they didn't mention in that report that they had consulted any law enforcement officers. Just a thought.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, you rose on a point of order?

Mr. Saskiw: Yes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Environmental Monitoring

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. After a working group of experts to provide advice was established, they recommended an environmental monitoring agency be set up, but the environment minister then needed a management board to direct the creation of this agency. Still with me? Big promises, little results. To the Minister of Environment and SRD: how is the process more transparent when the cabinet took from June to October to review, vet, and – who knows? – rewrite this report before the minister released it?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Quite frankly, this process has been very open and transparent. We received the report at the end of June, and we had the press release a week ago. Certainly, the writers of the report were very open in saying how quickly government responded to this and how quickly we responded to taking action on all of the recommendations, so the writers of the report themselves really commending us for the quick action that we're taking on this report.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, I know. Hand-chosen patronage is certainly arm's length.

Can the minister point out exactly where in the current budget the funding for the expert group and the management board can be found, and where and when exactly will the $50 million come from to run this agency? Where's the money?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier, when I was appointed to this ministry, the first thing I did was to make sure that we would have money in our budget, $3 million to be there, for the writing of the report and the implementation of this. As Mr. Speaker and as Albertans know, the industry has come forward as well and made commitments with regard to funding this, up to $50 million each year for a maximum of three years. The money is there, and we have made a commitment under the leadership of this Premier – and so has industry – to make sure the funding is in place for environmental monitoring.

Ms Blakeman: Well, send me a copy of the budget with that $3 million underlined because I'd like to see it.

Back to the same minister: why doesn't the minister see the conflict of interest created here when industry is supposed to fund and self-monitor, and if noncompliant, then it becomes: the polluter pays? How is this not a conflict of interest?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, it's quite interesting. Those that were critics of ours, people like Dr. Schindler, who were quite critical of us in the process before last week, are coming forward saying very positive things about, one, making sure that the financing is in place, making sure that there's an arm's-length board that will be reporting on the science and the data that will be arm's length, and making sure that we've put in the funding with regard to this. Our critics have come forward, brought things forward, and now are saying that this is the way that they see it going forward. Very positive comments from that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Environmental Monitoring of the Oil Sands

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me just say that not all the comments have been positive. Yesterday a coalition of oil sands investors released a report which stated, "The current approach to development, particularly the management of the environmental and social impacts, threatens the long-term viability of the oil sands as an investment." To the minister of environment: will she admit that her government's hapless management of environmental impacts just jeopardizes the sustainability of Alberta's oil sands?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to talk about the things that we have been doing in this province with regard to land-use planning, about moving forward, the work that has gone on with environmental monitoring, the work that we've done with regard to the plan for the lower Athabasca region coming into effect September 1, which puts limits and triggers in place, making sure that we have triggers in place before we would ever hit any limits in this province.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, given that a report for the upcoming Shell hearing predicts approved oil sands developments will threaten certain species' habitats by up to 60 per cent and given that Albertans have waited years for regional biodiversity rules that are still MIA, will the minister admit that her government's long-standing failure to act threatens both the environment and the sustainable economic development of that region? When is the work ever going to get started?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's the whole point of land-use planning and regional planning and cumulative effects in the regions. We make sure that those limits are put in place, that there are triggers in place, and that as we develop the oil sands and we reclaim any areas, we've put aside as well good habitat space for caribou and other species. That is the point about regional planning, long-term planning to balance good economic growth in this province with strong environmental leadership.

Ms Notley: Well, the biodiversity limits are not in place. They're not developed. They're not there.

Given that it's been two years since the government's monitoring programs were discredited and that we are still years away from a credible replacement actually existing on the ground, how exactly does the minister expect development approvals ongoing right now to be remotely connected to the long-term sustainability of that region?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is the whole point about the lower Athabasca regional plan, to make sure that we're developing with regard to those limits. We are working now. The plan came into effect September 1. We are now working with area groups and stakeholders in that region to develop those. This is what long-term planning is about, involving Albertans and making sure that we set those limits and triggers so that as we develop the oil sands, we are thinking far down the road.

Speaker's Ruling Preambles to Supplementary Questions

The Speaker: Hon. members who have questions yet to be asked, could I just remind you to revisit the rule about preambles? I'll make a statement about that later. I know it's day one, and some of us may have forgotten, but there have been at least 12 violations. I've let some of them go because they were, mercifully, quite short, but some are getting longer and longer. Please, let's abide by the rules that you yourselves have made.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the Member for Calgary-South East.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wildrose puts Albertans first. This means a local, patient-centred approach to health care. Our new AHS chair, Stephen Lockwood, agrees and is pushing forward for more hospital-based decision-making, acknowledging that it creates happier staff and better patient care. But just last month the Health minister shot down the idea of decentralized decision-making, saying: we are committed to the system in place, and there will be no restructuring. Albertans are wondering who is in charge. Will the minister finally admit that centralization has failed Albertans?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government some time ago set the structure for the Alberta health system as one health region to serve the province. Unlike the member opposite, who would clearly like to see us return to the 1960s and '70s, an era when hospital boards competed with one another to provide the same resources to the same people, this government is committed to and is supported by a board at Alberta Health Services that is doing exactly what we asked them to do, find better and more effective ways to support local health care workers and local facilities by giving them the tools they need to do their job, and they're doing that very well.

Mrs. Forsyth: Given that the AHS CEO, Chris Eagle, in a memo to staff agrees with the Wildrose again that we need to reduce the burden of bureaucracy, when will this minister start addressing the serious problem of the massive bureaucracy so money can start reaching the patients and the front lines?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the board of Alberta Health Services, supported by senior management, including Dr. Eagle, have done a very good job of reconnecting health care with local communities. The local health advisory councils, which serve the province, are doing an excellent job of having conversations at the local level, providing feedback to the board of Alberta Health Services on the quality of the services that are provided, on their ability to access those services, and some very valuable input to planning for the future. This is a health delivery organization that is connected to the community. It is providing equitable and excellent results across the province, and we will support them to continue to do that work.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That answer fits nicely into my next question. Given that Chris Eagle in the memo fails to address the serious issue of staff engagement, which according to the most recent AHS quarterly update is at an all-time low – not high, Minister, low – will the minister finally do the right thing, listen to the Wildrose yet again, and expand the health inquiry to include the bullying and intimidation of our health care workers?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think my answer will fit very nicely with the second part of the hon. member's question. The answer, once again, is no.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-South East, followed by the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler.

School Construction in Calgary

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be here today and on behalf of my constituents of Calgary-South East ask a real question. I mentioned in my maiden speech in the spring session that in my constituents are educated above average for this province. [interjections] They either carry a degree or a postsecondary certificate. It's clear that they value education. [interjections] Calgary-South East is also unique in that it's projected to foster close to 40 per cent of . . .

The Speaker: Hon. members, please. No interjections. The member has the floor.

Hon. member, I'm about to re-give the floor to you. I'm just asking for others to please quell the interjections. Start over, please.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I mentioned in my maiden speech in the spring session that Calgary-South East is above average in the province when it comes to postsecondary education and degrees. It's clear that they value their education. [interjections] Calgary-South East is also unique in that it's projected to foster close to 40 per cent of all the city's growth and development in the coming years. It's possible that our population in Calgary-South East could grow from 53,000 today to well over 130,000 by 2019. The growth pressures are significant, and we're feeling it in our schools. Both separate and public schools in my constituency and surrounding area are at capacity, and my constituents are very concerned, to say the least. To the very hon. Minister of Education. I hear daily from my constituents about the concern with growth pressures in the schools in their communities. Can you tell us what you're hearing and what you intend to do about the issue?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have seen first-hand the growth pressures in southeast Calgary and in other areas of Alberta, and I can tell you that I've been there with the hon. member touring schools. There's not a day that goes by that he doesn't remind me about the growth pressures down in his area. I'm happy to say that this government has responded. There are six new schools in Calgary this year, and there will be more coming.

We have elected the right Premier. Albertans have elected the right Premier to respond to this. We've got a Premier that wants to invest in families and in communities, and that's what we're going to continue to do.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: Hon. members, some members in the House are asking questions for the first time and need some reminding. The first reminder is to please not interject when people are asking the question so that the chair can hear the question and determine whether it's able to be received or not. That would help immensely. Please let's be fair to all other members and listen to their questions.

School Construction in Calgary (continued)

Mr. Fraser: To the same minister: when can we anticipate an announcement of a groundbreaking for a high school in southeast Calgary?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I know that these Albertans and many Albertans are eager to learn about the next round of capital projects. I can tell you that we're working with the 62 different school boards, that have all submitted their capital plans to us. We're weeding through those, and we're working with the ministers of Infrastructure and Treasury Board and Finance to try and look at those and weigh them across the province, which is not an easy job to do, and as well to try to combine those with potential other projects like libraries and municipal projects.

Mr. Fraser: To the same minister. The government has made a commitment to families to make sure that they can focus on their kids' education, not buildings and transportation. When can we expect an announcement about middle schools, junior highs, and elementary schools, when they'll be put in the ground?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, we know these projects are important not only to this constituency but to the whole province. The consideration of these projects is well under way, especially in light of the fact that our budgeting process is well under way right now, and that plays into this very importantly. It's my hope that we will be able to have announcements in the coming months, but all I can say to these concerned families and concerned Albertans is: stay tuned. When we do come forward with capital plans and capital projects, I know we'll have their support.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by the hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Berry Creek Reservoir

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Berry Creek reservoir is a body of water vital to the farming area of the special areas around Sunnynook, where water is a scarce and valuable commodity. Several weeks ago the spill gate for the reservoir failed, leading to a dramatic loss of water. The majority of the water has already gone downstream, causing a catastrophic impact on the local ecology and the financial well-being of hard-working Alberta farmers. All my questions are to the minister of SRD. When will the province speed up its lacklustre response to this local disaster?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know the primary function of this reservoir is certainly to supply water for irrigation and for farmers in the area. Our officials have been working with local constituents, your constituents, in that area to make sure that we are doing the repairs to the outlet gate. We continue to work with them in as fast a fashion as we can and in making sure that they are aware of the issues as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we hold local businesses, individuals, and corporations accountable when they are responsible for environmental disasters, will this out-of-touch PC government accept responsibility for this environmental disaster created by their government?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are making sure that for the gate that has been broken, we're taking action and we are correcting that action. We are also making sure with regard to the fishery in the area that we're opening up the fishery to all Albertans and Canadians so that for a low licence of $5 those folks as well have access to the fish in there. We are doing everything we can in as timely fashion as we can to make sure that this is looked after.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Given that the province has affected both the environment and the pocketbooks of farmers negatively, is the minister prepared to prioritize funds needed for the reclamation and rehabilitation of this critical body of water and to assist farmers who have been affected by this officially induced disaster?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are working with the local farmers and constituents in that area. We continue to do that, and our first priority is to make sure that we get these repairs done in as timely a fashion as we can. Certainly, we're always open to having discussions with Albertans and constituents in that area.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley, followed by the Member for Little Bow.

Agriculture Policy Framework

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past year agricultural producers in Alberta have had access to strong and effective business risk management programs. Now, it's my understanding that the agriculture ministers from across Canada, including our own, agreed to a new five-year Growing Forward policy framework at their annual meeting. My questions are to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. What will this new Growing Forward framework support?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the general answer is that it will continue to support everything that has been in the previous Growing Forward agreement. There are two basic pieces to the agreement. One is the business risk management programs like AgriStability, AgriInvest, and so on. The other piece of it is the strategic initiatives. We did sign the umbrella agreement in September in Whitehorse, and we are now working on the bilateral agreement. The agreement signed in Whitehorse was the multilateral agreement by all of the agriculture ministers across the country. What we are working on now is the bilateral agreement between us and the federal government for the programs specific to Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Goudreau: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Given that the current federal budget includes – it's my understanding – a $252.9 million reduction in agricultural spending over the next three years, how will that specifically affect AgriStability and AgriInvest programs for our farm producers right here in Alberta?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, it is true that the federal budget did involve a decrease in the agriculture budget of about $252 million over three years. That is going to impact on several of the programs. I want to point out that we spent the summer consulting with our producers in Alberta to hear what they had to say about what was important to them in terms of programming in the new five-year agreement. We are confident that there's a bit of a refocusing that will be more in strategic initiatives, but I think it will be a good balance.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question, again to the same minister: how will these changes ensure that we continue to have a strong and vibrant agricultural sector in this province considering this reduction in financial support?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, there were some very interesting discussions about increasing insurance options, for example, and that's something that we heard loud and clear from our producers. We are also, as I mentioned at the end of my last answer, refocusing some assets on research, innovation, things like food safety, environment, marketing. These will all serve to support the industry. My feeling is that, again, we have a very good balance here given the financial constraints that we're all under.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Little Bow Continuing Care Centre

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I'll say that it is great to be back here for the fall sitting. Mr. Speaker, this summer residents of my constituency fell victim to an out-of-touch AHS superboard, who shut down the Little Bow continuing care centre. My question is to the Health minister. Given that the minister clearly did not have the facts in regard to any of the notices sent out to the public, the staff on this rushed closing, will you apologize to my constituents for moving our most vulnerable citizens, our seniors, based on little or no knowledge?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is true that Alberta Health Services made the decision to close the Little Bow facility. As the hon. member knows, there are a number of issues involved in the decision that AHS has talked about publicly, not the least of which is the age of the facility and the fact that it lacked many of the amenities that we would associate with providing the best possible quality of care for seniors in the province. Things like the lack of washrooms in some of the rooms, the lack of a full sprinkler system, the presence of asbestos in the building, leaking pipes, and drafty windows: these things are not consistent with the quality of care that we wish to provide.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the fact that the minister had only made one visit to this facility after I almost begged him to come there to look at the fact that the building was not falling down, the question is: will he provide us with an adequate reason for shutting this down? I have a report right here, that will be tabled later today, to show that the facility passed inspection from your own government.

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, it is true that the facility, when it was constructed, met the building code of the 1950s. As the hon. member is aware, any renovations to that building would involve the building being required to meet the building code of 2012, which, for the reasons I described earlier, is not achievable.

More importantly, Mr. Speaker, our government is focused, as I said, on providing the highest quality of life for seniors across the province. This is a facility that has served the community well over the years. However, it has continued to dwindle in numbers of both staff and patients. These factors were also a consideration in Alberta Health Services' decision to close the facility.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be passing these out later to show what a great grade the place did have.

Mr. Speaker, to the Premier of Alberta – I'm sorry. She's not here, so I don't know who I'm supposed to... [interjections] Sorry. Bad on that.

Given that one senior passed away just nine days after being moved, who will take responsibility to ensure that our Health minister actually protects our seniors?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, what would be clearly reckless, irresponsible, and, I would suggest, unbecoming of any one of us would be to speculate on the cause of death of any constituent. In particular, to attempt to connect the decision to close this facility with the death of one or more of these residents is not appropriate, and I'm not going to dignify it with a reply.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Speaker's Ruling Preambles to Supplementary Questions

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're going to resume with Introduction of Guests in a moment, but just two quick observations.

Number one, I'm going to ask House leaders if they would please review the rule about preambles in the 35 seconds, and I want to indicate why. It's very difficult for members to phrase a supplementary question that is 35 seconds long unless they're going to go into a whole bunch of "given this" and "given that" and so on. So I'd just ask you to please review that. If you don't have a solution, I might be able to be of some help to you in that regard. It just occurs to me that it's taking up valuable time in many cases. I could have interjected so many more times today. I hesitated to do so, so I'm just going to leave it up to the House leaders to please review that with your own caucuses and your whips.

Secondly, just a reminder to please ensure that you make it very clear as to whom you're asking a particular question. We had a couple of members who were not so clear, and that causes a little bit of confusion.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Let me recognize for an introduction the hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of introductions today. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of people who are in the building today. Although we were not able to get many of them seats in the Assembly for question period, I know they're watching on TV from another room. Here to join me today for first reading of the Education Act this afternoon are representatives from the Alberta Home Education Association; the Alberta School Boards Association; the Public School Boards' Association; the Alberta Catholic School Trustees' Association; the College of Alberta School Superintendents; the Association of School Business Officials of Alberta; the Alberta Teachers' Association; the Association of Independent Schools and Colleges in Alberta; the Association of Alberta Public Charter Schools; the Federation of Francophone Parents of Alberta; the Alberta School Councils' Association, which is all our parents; and my Minister's Student Advisory Council. While they're not in the gallery, they are here in the Legislature and important nonetheless, and they certainly deserve a warm welcome from this Assembly.

I'd also like to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly several gentlemen who are in the gallery, one of whom I had the privilege of working with over the summer when he joined my office as a summer intern. Robert Woodward is sitting in the public gallery. He was a wonderful addition to our team, and we're very happy to have him back in the building today even if it is just for one day. I'd also like to introduce to you two members from my constituency. Rick Cherniwchan and Randy Orichowski are also sitting in the public gallery, and both do an amazing job day in and day out representing the county of Smoky Lake. I'd ask those three to rise and please receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly my lovely wife, Christine. I love my work, but when I head home, she's the reason there's a smile on my face. Christine is seated in your gallery, and I ask that she please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you. I note that the smile is mutual.
The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not positive that our guests are still here. Nonetheless, I'm pleased for the record to introduce them to you and through you to all members of the Assembly. They are the members of the Education Advisory Committee. This provincial committee offers pedagogical expertise to the visitor services office in their development of educational programming and represents elementary, junior high, senior high, and postsecondary education across Alberta.

With us today were Sandy Myshak from Edmonton public schools; Anne Marie Brose from Grant MacEwan University; Dr. Craig Harding from Calgary public schools; Nancy Crousset from Conseil scolaire Centre-Est in St. Paul; Dr. Carla Peck from the University of Alberta; Corvin Urbach from Wolf Creek public schools in Ponoka; Constance Scarlett from the Alberta Museums Association; and Wally Diefenthaler, educational consultant. I'd also like to recognize Brian St. Germain from the aboriginal family and school program of Red Deer public schools, who could not join us today. I would ask that the members give them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to introduce to you and through you two constituents from Calgary-Varsity. One of them had to leave, and that is Mr. Raphael Jacob. He's currently the vice-president external for the Students' Union at the University of Calgary.

2:50

As well, I'd like to introduce to you Mr. Jim McCormick. Many hon. members will know Mr. McCormick through his political activities, but in Calgary-Varsity we know him for different reasons as well. He's a tireless volunteer, a respected member of Calgary's business community. He has a passion for strengthening not just our community but our province. He's a dedicated family man who's just recently discovered the joy of twin grandchildren. I am so pleased that he came to the Legislature today. He's seated here in the public gallery. Jim, I would ask you to rise and receive a traditional greeting.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder on behalf.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly our guest, Mr. Petros Kusmu. Petros is this year's vice-president external for the University of Alberta Students' Union, vice-chair of the Council of Alberta University Students as well as the director of the Canadian Alliance of Student Associations. Petros was born and raised here in Edmonton and was also fortunate enough to spend nearly seven years in Eritrea in northeast Africa. I would now ask Petros to please stand and receive a traditional warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly three constituents from Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville who have joined us here today. Two of them are seated in the public gallery. Perry and Vernon Degen have been long-time, active residents in Strathcona county and have moved to the city of Fort Saskatchewan and remain in that constituency. I'm so pleased to call them friends. Also, in the members' gallery is our president of the Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville PC association, Mr. Glenn Hennig, who is a resident of the village of Hilliard. Glenn has been active on the persons with developmental disabilities board. Please stand. I would like to welcome them and ask that you welcome them as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you today to all members of the Assembly the mayor and councillors from Sturgeon county and the deputy mayor and councillors from the town of Morinville. I would ask them to rise. They are Mayor Donald Rigney from Sturgeon county; Deputy Mayor Karen Shaw from Sturgeon county; Councillor Tom Flynn from Sturgeon county; Deputy Mayor David Pattison, town of Morinville; Councillor Lisa Holmes, town of Morinville; Councillor Paul Krauskopf, town of Morinville. It's a real pleasure to have you welcome them to the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm looking up in the galleries here, and I see three people that I recognize from Calgary. I think that they deserve some introduction here. I see Mr. Troy Wason, who is currently running as VP for the PC Party of Alberta – I think that we should give him a round of applause – and his lovely wife, Lisa Mackintosh, who is here today, a strong Conservative and a good friend, and also Ms Cynthia Williams, a long-time Progressive Conservative. They're all three here today to visit with us. I ask that they rise and that we give them the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Harvie Andre

July 27, 1940, to October 21, 2012

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With sadness I rise today to pay tribute to another distinguished parliamentarian who passed away this week. Harvie Andre was a dedicated public servant, serving five terms as the Member of Parliament for Calgary Centre, from 1972 until 1993. He worked tirelessly to advocate on behalf of his constituents as a member of the opposition, as a member of the government, and as a cabinet minister. I volunteered on several of Harvie's election campaigns and had the privilege of being on his ministerial staff in Ottawa and in Calgary.

During Harvie's time as an MP there were many issues facing our province and country, from the national energy program to constitutional discussions. He was a key player in the government of Prime Minister Joe Clark. Through it all Harvie displayed dignity and absolute commitment to his constituents and colleagues. I also would like to say that he was very determined to do what was right for Albertans.

Harvie was the minister responsible for the Royal Canadian Mint in the government of Prime Minister Mulroney. I can still remember sitting in a staff meeting as Harvie held up the prototypes for the 1988 Calgary Olympic coin program, which was a great success during those games. Harvie was also the minister responsible for introducing the one-dollar coin into circulation. What you may not realize is that the original design for the coin was to depict voyageurs in a canoe. Unfortunately, the masters were lost, and the alternate design, showing the loonie, was approved for production.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, Harvie Andre was a master parliamentarian. He combined his managerial skills with a great understanding of politics within his party, his province, and our country. The consistent observation is that Harvie was a man of integrity, loyal to his friends and family, and respectful of parliamentary institutions. There are many of us in this Legislature who have connections to Harvie Andre and his family. We say thank you for his service, his commitment, and his example.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is great to be back here.

The Speaker: Excuse me.

Are you rising on a point of order?

Ms Blakeman: I was trying to, Mr. Speaker. I was trying to catch your eye.

I'm mindful of the time, and I would like to request the unanimous support of the House to waive Standing Order 7(7) in order for us to conclude the Routine of the day and allow the members' statements and tablings to continue. I would ask that you please present that option to the Assembly.

The Speaker: Essentially, the Member for Edmonton-Centre is asking us to waive Standing Order 7(7), I believe. This requires unanimous consent, so I'm going to ask one question. Listen carefully, and respond accordingly. Is there anyone who objects to the House continuing on with its Routine beyond 3 o'clock?

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition with her statement.

Wildrose Policies

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I say, great to be back here in the Assembly, and I speak on behalf of our entire Wildrose Official Opposition when I say that it is even better to see how many Wildrose ideas have made their way onto the legislative agenda. From top to bottom, with few exceptions, the government's fall agenda lineup reads like a page straight out of the Wildrose green book.

First, the revised Education Act. The original bill attempted to sidestep parents as the most important decision-makers in their children's education. It died when the Wildrose and families across Alberta rose up to defeat it, but the bill is back again, Mr. Speaker, with families keeping the rights that they always knew that they had.

Next, the Electric Utilities Amendment Act will make sure that all future transmission projects will be approved by the Alberta Utilities Commission, not the provincial cabinet members. Mr. Speaker, that also sounds awfully familiar. On we go. The Election Accountability Amendment Act, naming those political parties who broke the law by accepting illegal contributions. Sounds like Wildrose policy, too.

The Public Interest Disclosure (Whistleblower Protection) Act. Whistleblower protection: page 42 of the Wildrose platform.

And it's not just bills. Today we hear the health superboard chair say that he wants more local decision-making on the ground in Alberta hospitals. Not only that, but he has the full backing of the province to go ahead and start doing it. Mr. Speaker, I could fill a book with all the times that we called for that.

Now, I suppose that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, but my Wildrose colleagues are wondering when the government is finally going to copy our single most important idea, a balanced budget and money in the bank. I've got to say, Mr. Speaker, that I'm somewhat less optimistic about that one, but I won't give up. After all, with a Wildrose caucus that's proven itself this effective so far, I believe anything is possible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

RCAF 429 Transport Squadron

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year the city of Lethbridge's 429 Transport Squadron, based in Trenton, Ontario, will be celebrating their 70th anniversary since being formed on November 7, 1942, at East Moor, England, during World War II. The 429 Bison Squadron was adopted by the city of Lethbridge in 1944. The city sent care packages and followed its wartime exploits. Lethbridge citizens served with the squadron during World War II. The squadron was disbanded there on May 31, 1945.

The squadron was re-formed as the 429 Tactical Transport Squadron in Quebec in 1967 and renamed 429 Transport Squadron in 1981, when they flew the Hercules planes. It was disbanded again and rebanded in 2007. The squadron now operates four Globemasters. These are beyond gigantic-sized planes. They fly personnel and huge equipment all over the globe.

In 2008 the city of Lethbridge renewed its ties with the squadron with the unique honour of Freedom of the Sky. This honour was the first of its kind in Canada.

The 70th anniversary celebration this year will be marked with a trooping of the squadron colours in Trenton, Ontario.

This year Lieutenant Colonel Jason Stark, commanding officer of 429 squadron, will be the guest speaker in Lethbridge's Remembrance Day ceremonies. A contingent of the squadron will parade at the cenotaph, and the Globemaster plane will exercise the Freedom of the Sky to the delight of the citizens in attendance below at the cenotaph. Each year our city looks forward to the arrival of our adopted squadron to visit our namesake city and continue to foster and strengthen ties while promoting our Royal Canadian Air Force heritage.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Bullying Awareness and Prevention

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about a very prevalent and pervasive issue facing many school-aged children throughout our province. Last week many of us heard about the unnecessary and tragic death of a British Columbia teenager. This young girl was subject to cyberbullying on social media sites and torment from her school peers on a regular basis. Her story is heartbreaking but not unique. Many children and youth are familiar with the suffering this young girl experienced.

No matter the medium, whether it is vicious messages on Facebook to taunting and physical abuse on the playground, bullying of any kind is unacceptable. Schoolyard bullying can have devastating consequences for children and youth, including isolation, depression, and in extreme cases suicide. As the father of a school-aged child the safety and well-being of our province's youth is especially important to me.

Mr. Speaker, last November our government recognized National Bullying Awareness Week. We called on all Albertans to take action and stand up to bullying and to send loud and clear messages that bullying is wrong and needs to stop and, most importantly, that it should never be considered a normal part of growing up. Ending bullying in our schools and communities is the next step towards fostering a caring, respectful, and safe environment for our children to grow up in.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

National Foster Family Week

Mr. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today and acknowledge National Foster Family Week and share with you a story of two exceptional foster parents, Jennifer and Kristofor Spencer. Foster parents like Jennifer and her husband, Kristofor, are key members of a team dedicated to helping children, youth, and families. They mentor and support birth parents, help children to achieve success in school, and work with youth as they transition to independence.

Jennifer and Kristofor were named foster parents of the year by the Alberta Foster Parent Association in 2011. As a part-time college student and avid volunteer Jennifer has fostered for seven years. She takes pride in telling people that she is a foster parent and emphasizing that Albertans don't hear enough about the great things that happen in foster care.

My constituency is part of the northwest Alberta child and family services authority. There are 69 foster homes in this region and over 2,400 throughout the province. We need more foster homes in my region and across Alberta. I encourage any Albertan who is interested in learning more about becoming a foster parent to contact the Alberta Foster Parent Association or their local child and family services authority.

Like Jennifer and Kristofor, foster parents are caring and compassionate people who open their hearts and their homes to a child or youth in care. It is a rewarding experience that impacts the community as well as the family and the child. Please join me in recognizing Jennifer and Kristofor and all the other foster families across the province for their dedication to improving the lives of fellow Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

XL Foods Inc. Beef Recall

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning we learned the Canadian Food Inspection Agency has given the green light to the XL Foods plant in Brooks to reopen. This is welcome news and a huge relief to the Alberta cattle producers and 2,200 workers who have been unable to work since the plant closed on September 27.

In the past few weeks I am proud to have witnessed such an overwhelming amount of community support to help workers and the cattle producers in my constituency of Strathmore-Brooks. I am proud to have worked alongside the city and county councils and local MP to move the situation in the right direction. This is about our community, and I'm happy to see all levels of government and the community groups coming together.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the federal agriculture minister for his hard work to get the plant online and for taking time to come visit Brooks. I would also like to acknowledge our Wildrose Official Opposition leader, who met with Brooks and county immigration services, affected employees, and city officials last week to learn about the situation and offer support. Thanks is also due to the provincial agriculture minister for coming down to Brooks and for making this a nonpartisan issue as well as to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark for making the journey and offering his support.

This weekend I hosted a town hall meeting with producers from the area and learned a lot about how the plant shutdown has affected their operations. This shutdown has had an enormous economic impact on the entire area, on both businesses and the Alberta cattle industry. We had many livestock producer groups that attended with the common goal of getting the plant reopened.

My thoughts go out to those who were affected by the outbreak of E coli. It should have never happened, and hopefully the review to follow will identify the shortcomings which led to the situation.

As the local MLA I can say how great the community has been throughout all of this. Seeing all the many groups working together with one common goal and ensuring laid-off employees were looked after has been very rewarding.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Hon. members, may we revert briefly to the introduction of guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, the Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education.

Mr. Khan: Mr. Speaker, thank you. In perhaps the most important introduction I will ever make in the House, I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the House my inspiration, my motivation, my everything: my family. Seated in the members' gallery are my wife, RaeLynn, my son Mick, and my daughter Sasha, and we have the pleasure of my father-in-law, Barrie Burton, joining us today. I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 30 I wish to advise you and all members of the Assembly that at the appropriate time I intend to move the adjournment of the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely the actions of the Ethics Commissioner, an officer of this Legislature, in appointing a defeated MLA to a specially created position without that MLA observing the one-year cooling-off period mandated by the Conflicts of Interest Act and [importantly] the resultant breach of public trust and loss of confidence in the implementation of the act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

3:10

Introduction of Bills

Bill 3

Education Act

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I'm honoured to rise today to introduce Bill 3, the Education Act.

This new legislation comes as a result of many years of discussion and consultation with Albertans across the province about the future of education in Alberta. In fact, Mr. Speaker, representatives of many of the groups who have worked with us to create this legislation are in the building with us today although many of them are outside the gallery, and I introduced them earlier. To all of them – the students, the school boards, the parents, the teachers, the leaders from our private and charter schools, and our home educators – I want to thank you for your contributions. I also want to thank the thousands of Albertans who provided their input over the last several months and years.

Albertans are truly passionate about education, Mr. Speaker, and that's a good thing. The result is a piece of legislation that will help us focus education where it should be focused, on the student. In a nutshell that's what this bill is all about, putting students first.

This bill is also one of the first in the country to formally recognize the role of the family and the parent in education. As a parent that's an area I am particularly proud of. I'm also very proud of the focus we've put on ensuring our schools are safe, welcoming places for our children, places where diversity is respected and bullying is not tolerated. Of course, the Education Act empowers local school boards to be responsive to local needs.

In short, the Education Act will help all of us who support Alberta's children, help them realize their full potential as engaged thinkers who are ethical citizens with an entrepreneurial spirit.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Bill 6

Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure to introduce Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012.

If passed, this bill will provide significant new protections to Albertans at home, in the marketplace, and on the job. It will also raise awareness about the responsibilities associated with workplace health and safety, safety code requirements, and fair trading practices. Bill 6 seeks to amend three pieces of legislation: the Safety Codes Act, the Fair Trading Act, and the Occupational Health and Safety Act. It will add new administrative penalties, strengthen existing ones, and significantly increase the fines that can be levied against those who would jeopardize the health and safety of Albertans or would part them from their money through unfair business practices.

Mr. Speaker, we've consulted with Albertans, and they have told us they support our efforts to improve these protections. I'm confident the changes that can be effected by these amendments will go a long way to showing Albertans that we value their contributions to our communities, to our workplaces, and to our economy. The amendments in this bill ensure that those who would take advantage of the hard work and trust of Albertans will be held accountable and that the cost of flouting these laws is now too great to be deemed simply the cost of doing business. These amendments will result in increased protections for Albertans and increased compliance with legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 6 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012, be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Bill 8*Electric Utilities Amendment Act, 2012

Mr. Hughes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 8, the Electric Utilities Amendment Act, 2012.

In 2009 legislation passed in this House approved four critical transmission infrastructure projects and gave government the authority to designate and approve future critical transmission infrastructure. Bill 8 removes the government's power to approve future critical transmission infrastructure, meaning all future transmission infrastructure projects will require need and routing approval from the Alberta Utilities Commission. Given the enthusiastic speech from the Leader of the Opposition earlier, I am sure we all look forward to a speedy passage of this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 8 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Bill 9*Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2012

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 9, the Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2012. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

This act requires changes to ensure that Alberta maintains a fair, equitable, and competitive tax regime. Changes are also needed to implement changes to the scientific research and experimental development tax credit that was announced in the budget. The proposed act will keep Alberta's legislation both current and effective.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today I talked in my questions about the reports that the government has so cleverly taken off their own web pages now, so I'm tabling this today for every member on both sides to be green, to help out Rachel so nobody is mad, to make sure that we can actually see what the reports were that show in what good shape the Little Bow Continuing Care building was.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a report produced by Ceres on behalf oil sands investors. The report outlines and discusses the need for improved environmental and social performance in the Canadian oil sands in order to promote and secure investments.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Is it the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on behalf?

Ms Blakeman: No, sir. They're my very own tablings. I have two of them today. The first one: I wouldn't usually do this, but I will be referring to this specifically later, so I am going to give you copies of an article by editorialist Rick Bell, who writes for a Calgary paper. I will table that.

I'd also like to table a number of posters that were presented to me during the Edmonton Pride awards. They're very cleverly done by a group that is trying to speak out to young gay, lesbian, and transgendered kids and say: you have a voice. They're making fun of the supposed slur that something is gay, meaning something is bad. They're talking about history in here. They do say: "You have a voice! Be a part of speaking out against hate crimes! Encourage your school to create & support Gay/Straight alliances!" There's a series of six of these posters. They're excellent.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, please.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have five copies of two tablings. One is a report by CBC relating to the AHS chair wanting hospitals to make more decisions.

The other is an e-mail dated October 16, 2012, addressed to all AHS, a message from the CEO. It's titled From Good to Best-in-class, about local decision-making.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others? The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the requisite number of copies of a blog posted by McMurray Musings writer Theresa Wells entitled An Ocean of Tears, A Ribbon of Road: Highway 63, and 2016. The blog highlights her personal thoughts and feelings about an announcement made by the government of Alberta on Friday, October 19, on the completion of twinning of 36 kilometres of highway 63 near Wandering River and our commitment to twinning the entire length of the highway from Fort McMurray to highway 55 by the fall of 2016.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I wish to table with the Assembly a report by Alberta's Chief Electoral Officer as required by section 44(1) of the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act and his accompanying letter to the Speaker dated October 18, 2012, concerning compliance with the election campaign financial reporting requirements.

As well, pursuant to section 39(3) of the Legislative Assembly Act I would like to table with the Assembly five copies of the following orders passed at the June 7, 2012, meeting of the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services: one, Members' Services Committee Order 04/12, Constituency Services Amendment Order, No. 25; two, Members' Services Committee Order 05/12, Transportation Amendment Order, No. 11; three, Members' Services Committee Order 06/12, Members' Allowances Amendment Order, No. 23; four, Members' Services Committee Order 07/12, Executive Council Salaries Amendment Order, No. 8; and five, Members' Services Committee Order 08/12, Members' Committee Allowances Amendment Order, No. 09.

Please note, hon. members, that all of the aforementioned orders which I'm now tabling are deemed effective April 23, 2012.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of

Mr. Young, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, 13 memoranda dated August 17, 2012, from Scott Ellis, senior financial officer and director, financial management and administrative services branch, Legislative Assembly Office, to 13 Members of the Legislative Assembly regarding return of committee pay relating to their service on the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing.

The Speaker: Thank you.

We're now ready to entertain the point of order. I believe it was the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is my first point of order, and I'm sure there won't be too many more. I stand to raise a point of order under section 23(h), (i), and (j), and it is in regard to a comment that was made about permanent police officers on highway 63. The comment was made by the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo and was echoed by the Member for Calgary-Acadia, and it's regarding a report that I and the Infrastructure and Transportation critic from Cypress-Medicine Hat presented about a week ago. It's actually entitled Getting It Done, twinning highway 63, and it included many things, one of which was demanding a timeline, which we were very satisfied that the government has finally taken our lead on.

In it as well as that after consultations with stakeholders, with first responders, and with families that have suffered from tragedies on highway 63, they all told us that they want eight more permanent police officers, and they want them now. Mr. Speaker, the comments made by the Member for Calgary-Acadia tried to infer that, you know, there are 16 permanent police officers that the government has put on that highway when, in fact, that's not going to happen until 2013. The people that we talked to, the people on the ground, the first responders and families, want those permanent police officers now. It's completely incorrect for the minister to make that comment. It is not only an allegation against myself as a member but also those families, and I'd ask him to retract that statement.

Mr. Denis: If anything I said was incorrect, I would retract it, but with respect to this member nothing I said was incorrect. I do not have a copy of the Blues, Mr. Speaker, but when I answered the question in that exchange, I indicated clearly that currently there are four new, additional enforcement officers on highway 63 and that there would be an additional 12 by the early part of 2013.

Mr. Speaker, I'm really at a loss as to what this member has a point of order about. He called a point of privilege last time, which was ruled out of order. I'm really at a loss.

The Speaker: Well, hon. member, as we all know, there are frequently varying interpretations of the facts. I don't think there's a need to get into a long debate on this. I will recognize two more speakers quickly, one from the government side and one from another party if you so wish. But, again, this just might be a dispute over the facts.

First, the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't get into the facts at all; I'll get into the standing orders. This point of order was brought under Standing Order 23(h), which is, "makes allegations against another Member." No member was mentioned in the response. They mentioned a party. As we've heard in the House, unfortunately, year over year over year, a party is not a member.

There was no allegation against a member. There was no imputation under (i) of "false or unavowed motives," and there was no "abusive or insulting language of a nature . . . to [cause] disorder" under (j).

One of the things that we need to do, I think, in the House is make sure that when we raise points of order, we don't lapse into the practice that has become way too common in this House of leaping up and yelling out "23(h), (i), and (j)" and thinking that that's a foundation for an argument.

The Speaker: Anyone else who wishes to chime in?

Well, hon. member, I've already commented that frequently we find two different interpretations of what some perceive to be facts and others perceive to be something else. Let's be mindful that a point of order should not be raised merely for purposes of extending a debate or continuing discussion. As such, given that it's your first point of order, hon. member, I'll just say that we're going to accept the clarifications that have been offered, and we're going to move on.

Request for Emergency Debate

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre under SO 30, I believe.

Dealings with Government by Former Ministers

Ms Blakeman: Yes, indeed. Thank you very much, sir. I would like at this time to move the motion that I believe has been circulated to everyone, and that is:

Be it resolved that this Assembly adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the actions of the Ethics Commissioner, an officer of this Legislature, in appointing a defeated MLA to a specially created position without that MLA observing the one-year cooling-off period mandated by the Conflicts of Interest Act and the resultant breach of public trust and loss of confidence in the implementation of the act.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as you and I well know, the point of Standing Order 30 is its urgency. I would argue that this is an urgent matter for us to consider. This is our first opportunity to address it. It's the first time we've all been together in the House and the House has been called since this matter came up.

While we're talking legalities, I did investigate, and to the best of my knowledge and as far as I am able to determine, there is no open investigation under section 24(6) of the Conflicts of Interest Act which would preclude any other discussion. Just briefly for people, under the Conflicts of Interest Act if an investigation has been asked of the Ethics Commissioner by anybody – a motion of the Assembly, a minister, or an individual member – that investigation has to take place. You can't do anything else, raise a question or anything. To the best of my knowledge and my investigation I cannot find that that has indeed happened.

I think that this is an issue of ongoing credibility and a loss of confidence. When I look in the instructions for Standing Order 30, or emergency debates as they're called, under the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, they specifically state that the issue has to be specific, which is indeed what we're dealing with here, the actions very specifically on a specific case about the Ethics Commissioner, that it be urgent and important – and I think that conflict of interest is important, that act is important, and the upholding and the credibility of it are important – and that it requires urgent consideration. If we continue to go forward with this, it will not be resolved, and I think it's important that it is.

When we look at Beauchesne's 387 to 389, that's indicating that the primary issue is the urgency of the debate. Specifically, there's a section that talks about the opportunity to debate this issue under the rules and provisions of the House. This runs you into a checklist. I've looked to see where else we could be discussing this issue. The Legislative Offices Committee, to which this particular position would report, does indeed have a meeting scheduled more than a month from now, toward the end of November, which is a very long time to go with the public out there wondering just how ethical we all are here and how much credibility we put in that act that we're all supposed to be abiding by.

Of course, this issue is not currently before the courts. It wasn't mentioned in the throne speech. There's nothing on the Order Paper as a government bill, nor has it been specifically talked about in any kind of government release or website. There's no private member's bill or motion that's dealing with it. The budget is not affected by this, and there's no supplementary supply budget this time around, thank goodness – that's unusual – no government motions except that there is a motion to convene a discussion of or a review of the Conflicts of Interest Act in its entirety. That motion is sitting on the Order Paper. It hasn't been moved. I have no idea when that committee would be charged to meet although I notice, in reading the notice of motion, that it will be charged to report back within a year, which, again, I would not say is a speedy resolution. Again, I'm addressing a very specific incident here, not the entire act.

There was an attempt to ask a question today in question period, and it was, to put it politely, blown off by the government, so that's obviously not a useful debate. We're not supposed to be debating here in question period, but it wasn't a useful forum for us to try and dig to the bottom of this and discuss it as an Assembly.

In Beauchesne 389 it says that the issue has to be so pressing "that the public interest will suffer if it is not given immediate attention," and I would argue that is indeed the case with this. Beauchesne 390 is also saying that "the public interest demands that discussion take place immediately," which would be now, rather than, for example, waiting and discussing it under a review of the act, however long that takes to be called into place.

The situation we have is a breach of the public trust and a loss of confidence in a critical piece of legislation that affects every member in this House and how everyone views us and the work that we do. How serious is this as an issue that the Assembly should discuss it? Well, I think it's a very serious issue. For example, if this particular MLA or any MLA had knowingly breached this act without the knowledge of the Ethics Commissioner, according to the Conflicts of Interest Act they are subject to a $50,000 fine. I think that is underlining how seriously it was intended that that cooling-off period be taken. That fine is specific to breaching the cooling-off period in the Conflicts of Interest Act, so clearly it was meant to be taken very seriously.

How seriously do I take this? Well, we have the commissioner in question stating publicly that the member was – and I've got air quotes happening here – a member of the family, which is why, Mr. Speaker, I did table a copy of a newspaper article, which I wouldn't usually do, but it is referenced a number of times in here. It's the Ethics Commissioner's own words, and he has not disputed that this is inaccurate in any way, shape, or form, but he does go on to say that the member was "within the family, [within] the government family," which as you well know, Mr. Speaker, is only involving members who are on the side that elects the most members and forms government, so that rather sets up a difference between that member and other members of this Assembly. That in itself, I would argue, is a breach when we're talking about private members.

He does go on and get quoted quite a bit about how he believes that it's okay to be a member of the government family, and there's no conflict of interest there. I think that needs to be discussed by these members because it affects all of us.

Part of the criteria for decision is on page 695 in the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, and that is whether a timetable of the House has prevented any discussion in a timely manner. I'll also just note that it says, "events which [had] taken place in the past, in that they might precipitate a course of conduct which, if allowed to continue unchecked, would certainly classify itself as an emergency and of pressing consideration." I argue that that is also relevant in this particular matter.

I ask the Speaker to find that this is a matter of urgency and should be able to be debated by the Assembly. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First, I would invite you to find this notice of motion out of order. It's not in order for a number of reasons, but I would direct your attention specifically to Beauchesne's 493 under the heading Protected Persons.

493. (1) All references to judges and courts of justice of the nature of personal attack and censure have always been considered unparliamentary, and the Speaker has always treated them as breaches of order. Members have been interrupted in Committee of the Whole by the Chairman when they have cast an imputation upon a judicial proceeding.

Now, obviously, the Ethics Commissioner isn't a judicial proceeding, but there is a very strong comparator in that somebody is set up in an office to make determinations, in this case an officer of the Legislature, and it casts into disrepute that office if you allow people to make this type of aspersion on the actions of the officer.

It goes on to say:

(2) When a judge has been employed as a Royal Commissioner, it is proper in the House to criticize the report but not its author.

Now, in this notice of motion it's specifically the actions of the Ethics Commissioner. It's not the report. It's not the decision. It's the actions of the Ethics Commissioner that are called into question. That would clearly be out of order under 493(2).

(3) The Speaker has traditionally protected from attack a group of individuals commonly referred to as "those of high official station." The extent of this group has never been defined. Over the years it has covered senior public servants, ranking officers of the armed services, diplomatic representatives . . .

Et cetera.

(4) the Speaker has cautioned Members to exercise great care in making statements about persons who are outside the House and unable to reply.

Mr. Speaker, there's a very good reason for that section in Beauchesne's, and it is that we need to respect our courts, we need to respect our legislative offices, we need to hold them in high regard, and we need to not be casting aspersions on the offices or the officials that hold those offices.

There's no question that from time to time there are appropriate ways to deal with the issues that are contained in a report or decision but appropriate ways. What might those appropriate ways be, Mr. Speaker? Well, we do have a Leg. Offices Committee of the House. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has indicated that there's no timely basis to move to the merits of the notice of motion itself in terms of urgency, that there's no timely way to deal with this issue. Well, I would submit to her that she has provided no evidence that she's asked for a meeting of the committee of the House to deal with this issue and no evidence that the chair has refused to hold a meeting of the committee to deal with this issue.

In fact, I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that the most appropriate place for an issue of this nature, if anybody has a concern about a report of an officer of the House, is for it first to be addressed is at the standing committee that provides oversight for Leg. officers. Why would that be the case, Mr. Speaker? Well, because one of the rules we have in this House is that one shouldn't make comments about people who cannot be here to defend themselves.

At committee, of course, the committee could ask the Ethics Commissioner or another legislative officer or others to attend before the committee and to discuss the issue at hand, the issue in question. But, of course, in the House if this motion was passed, we could spend all afternoon debating a specific officer and a specific officer's actions with that officer having no ability to appear, to present, to put into a context what reasoning might have been utilized, or anything of that nature.

Mr. Speaker, I'd say it's clearly out of order, and not only is it clearly out of order, but if you were not to agree that it was out of order, then I would say that the wording of the motion itself is rather questionable in that it's asking us "to discuss . . . the actions of the Ethics Commissioner . . . in appointing a defeated MLA." It's clear on the face of it that the Ethics Commissioner did no such thing. He did not appoint a defeated MLA to anything, so the plain language of the motion is out of order in that it calls for us to debate something that didn't happen.

Thirdly, the question of urgency, which is also important: this has to be something that there is no other way to deal with appropriately in order to adjourn the business of the House. There's clearly another way to deal with it appropriately if the hon. member wished to do so.

Any member could ask for the committee to meet, could ask for the committee to deal with this as an issue, and that committee could then quite appropriately ask the Ethics Commissioner to attend to discuss with the committee the context of the decision-making and why the decision-making was made, which would be, in my humble submission, a much more logical and appropriate way to deal with an issue of this nature than suggesting we adjourn the ordinary business of the House and proceed to discuss it in the absence of the Ethics Commissioner, with no opportunity for the Ethics Commissioner to put the whole decision into context or to provide information as to why he made the decision the way he did.

This begs the question as to whether it ever is really appropriate, once you've appointed somebody as a judge or as a commissioner to make rulings based on an act and independently of the House, for us to second-guess those decisions. But that would be a discussion for another day, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, briefly, please. Thank you.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd first like to commend the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre for her timely and responsible motion for an emergency debate. Of course, section 30 sets out the various prerequisites to have a motion pass. My understanding is that 30(7)(b) through (f) has been satisfied completely, so in our respectful view the motion comes down to whether there is a matter of urgent public importance. That meeting is further defined in 30(7)(a), which states that "the matter proposed for discussion must relate to a genuine emergency, calling for immediate and urgent consideration." Of course, guidance to interpret these rules and also previous precedents can be found in Beauchesne's from sections 387 to 398 as well as the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, pages 689 to 690.

Before going into the question of urgency, the matter must also be specific. Mr. Speaker, it is clear that the question in this motion is specific to the exact incident of this government appointing Mr. Berger to the position for which he may not be qualified. The question must also require urgent consideration. Every day that passes, the taxpayers are paying for the potentially improper appointment of a defeated MLA. I know that this government certainly doesn't think that every time taxpayers get hosed, we have to have an emergency debate, or we'd be having one every day. However, this issue goes much further. It goes to the very root that ethics legislation may have been violated, or there may have been a loophole created that violated the spirit of the act.

In terms of urgency, if the matter is not dealt with now, it sets a precedent for a government to continue unethical practices, and stopping this is of utmost importance, or during summer sessions we're going to continue to have taxpayers pay for insiders and former government MLAs.

Finally, it's noted, Mr. Speaker, that the Speaker may but not must take into account the general wish of the House to have a debate, and I ask you to consider this motion and to allow the House to discuss this matter. Thank you.

The Speaker: Is there anyone else who wishes to chime in? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, again briefly if you would, please.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief. I will not go over in great detail some of the comments made by the Government House Leader except simply to point out that constitutionally the role of judges is significantly different than someone who is appointed through this Legislature by a vote of this Legislature to be an officer of this Legislature. I think that it's quite unfortunate to confuse the constitutional foundation of those two roles and to try and use the protection accorded to one person to protect another.

Regardless, I want to simply speak to the issue of urgency, Mr. Speaker. The fact of the matter is that Albertans are increasingly concerned with issues related to the way in which MLAs in this Assembly are compensated both before and after their time in office. This is a matter we have heard quite a bit about recently, and I believe it was the Premier who talked about how, you know, a transition allowance in any form, by any name is a transition allowance.

Now, if you take a former minister of agriculture who loses his seat and then give him a new job that has just been created for him with no precedent, then that looks a lot like nest feathering. The problem is that that goes to the credibility and the public faith that all Albertans have in this Assembly and the public faith that all Albertans have in all MLAs in this Assembly. Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, those of us on this side are getting a little tired of wearing the excesses that are perpetrated by those on the other side.

This is a matter of public urgency because Albertans need to have faith that decisions here are made in their best interest and not in our best interest, and that is the issue that is currently outstanding as a result of a decision made by a minister of this government to appoint his predecessor into a specially created position to allow him a nice transition to the next time he runs for office. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: All right. Thank you.

The Speaker listened very intently to all arguments which have been eloquently presented by the members. Could I just make an observation before I make my ruling, that once a number of previous speakers have already indicated how compliant the motion is with the rules, we not go through the exercise of repeating how compliant they are. That would help.

It's quite correct that Standing Order 30(2), as referenced by various members, provides that "the Member may briefly state the arguments in favour of the request for leave," and the hon. member did that. Subsequent to that, "the Speaker may allow such debate as he . . . considers relevant to the question of urgency," and we've done that. Then the role of the chair is to "rule on whether or not the request for leave is in order."

Hon. members, the chair is prepared to make a ruling with respect to leave for this motion to proceed or not pursuant to Standing Order 30(2). The Member for Edmonton-Centre for the record has met the requirement of providing at least two hours' notice, and I would note for you that the request was in fact received in the Speaker's office at 9:39 this morning.

The motion reads as follows:

Be it resolved that this Assembly adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely the actions of the Ethics Commissioner, an officer of this Legislature, in appointing a defeated MLA to a specially created position without that MLA observing the one-year cooling-off period mandated by the Conflicts of Interest Act and the resultant breach of public trust and loss of confidence in the implementation of the act.

The relevant parliamentary authorities on the matter of whether an urgent or emergency debate should or should not be permitted are cited on pages 689 through 696 of the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, and in Beauchesne, sixth edition, paragraphs 387 to 390, as various members referenced.

Hon. members, while the chair is aware that the Member for Edmonton-Centre is clearly very concerned about a particular decision made by the Ethics Commissioner, the chair must also caution all members that with the protection of freedom of speech that we all enjoy in this Assembly must also come a responsibility to ensure that persons outside the Assembly are not unfairly disparaged as they do not have the opportunity to respond here.

Beauchesne, sixth edition, at paragraph 493 reads – I believe the hon. Government House Leader quoted this as well, and I'd like to reiterate that quote – "The Speaker has cautioned Members to exercise great care in making statements about persons who are outside the House and unable to reply." Furthermore, Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice, 24th edition, at page 266, discourages not only acts that tend to obstruct officers in their duties and activities "but also any conduct which may tend to deter [officers] from doing their duty in the future."

Before ruling on whether this matter constitutes a genuine emergency and, as such, should pre-empt all other items of business for today, the chair would also like to note that the member in her proposed motion states that the Ethics Commissioner appointed a defeated MLA. For the record the chair notes that while the Ethics Commissioner has the ability to waive compliance with the cooling-off periods in the Conflicts of Interest Act if certain conditions are present, he has no other involvement with the hiring of an individual to a government department.

The chair is aware that this was the first opportunity for the members to bring forward such a point, and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has done so. For those of you who are new members to this Assembly, you are here to observe first-hand the procedures that have to be followed in making a request for an emergency debate. It is the chair's role under Standing Order 30 to determine whether a matter is of urgent public importance and cannot be brought before the Assembly within a reasonable time by any other means. As noted in Beauchesne, sixth edition, at paragraph 390, "urgency does not apply to the matter itself" but, rather, to the urgent need for the debate. Standing Order 30(7)(a) provides that "the matter proposed for discussion must relate to a genuine emergency, calling for immediate and urgent consideration." The chair cannot find that this matter constitutes a genuine emergency by that definition, and I am guided by various precedents and authorities in that determination.

Finally, in finding this request to now not be in order, I will note that there is a motion on notice on the Order Paper today to appoint a Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee, which other members also have referenced. In fact, the Member for Edmonton-Centre happens to be one of the members proposed for appointment to that committee, and the chair presumes that she will have plenty of opportunities during that review to raise any concerns regarding the provisions contained in the Conflicts of Interest Act.

Accordingly, the chair does not find the request for leave in order, and the question will not be put.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure – well, pleasure might be stretching it. It's my duty to move Government Motion 12.

Evening Sittings

12. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 4(1) the Assembly shall meet on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings for consideration of government business for the duration of the 2012 fall sitting unless on motion by the Government House Leader made before 6 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the following sitting day.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Oh, my apologies. This is not a debatable motion.

Ms Blakeman: That's just what I was going to ask.

The Speaker: Yes. Sorry. Pursuant to Standing Order 4(1) this motion is not debatable.

Thank you for the rapid reminder, Mr. Clerk.

I should note at this time, however, that our Clerk is celebrating an important anniversary, and you can see why. He's very quick and ready. I would ask you to please join me in congratulating and thanking our Clerk, who this week is celebrating his 25th anniversary of service in this Assembly. [Standing ovation]

Thank you, all, for that.

[Government Motion 12 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move Government Motion 13, which states: Be it resolved that a Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be appointed to review the Conflicts of Interest Act as prescribed pursuant to section 48 of that act consisting of the following members; namely, the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo as chair, the Member for Calgary-Hawkwood as vice-chair, the Member for Edmonton-Centre, the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, the Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, the Member for Calgary-Glenmore, the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky . . . [interjection] Mr. Speaker, I believe it's improper for me to refer to names in this Chamber.

The Speaker: Sorry. Are you asking for some clarification on a point here, hon. member? I was distracted.

Mr. Denis: Yes. I believe it's improper for me to refer to members by name in this Chamber. I just wanted to continue.

The Speaker: Well, in this circumstance the names are already printed there, and we'll allow it. So proceed.

Mr. Denis: If you'll allow it in this case, I will just go ahead here. It almost feels like I'm breaking the rules, Mr. Speaker.

13. Mr. Denis moved:
Be it resolved that

- (1) A Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be appointed to review the Conflicts of Interest Act as provided in section 48 of that act consisting of the following members, namely Mr. Allen, chair; Mr. Luan, deputy chair; Ms Blakeman; Mr. Dorward; Ms Fenske; Ms L. Johnson; Mr. McDonald; Ms Notley; Mr. Saskiw; Mr. Wilson; and Mr. Young.
- (2) Reasonable disbursements by the committee for advertising, staff assistance, equipment and supplies, rent, travel, and other expenditures necessary for the effective conduct of its responsibilities shall be paid subject to the approval of the chair.
- (3) In carrying out its duties, the committee may travel throughout Alberta and undertake a process of consultation with all interested Albertans.
- (4) In carrying out its responsibilities, the committee may with the concurrence of the head of the department utilize the services of the public service employed in that department or the staff employed by the Assembly or the office of the Ethics Commissioner.
- (5) The committee may without leave of the Assembly sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned.

- (6) The committee must submit its report, including any proposed amendments to the act, within one year after commencing its review.
- (7) When its work has been completed, the committee must report to the Assembly if it is sitting. During a period when the Assembly is adjourned, the committee may release its report by depositing a copy with the Clerk and forwarding a copy to each member of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, section 48 of the Conflicts of Interest Act states:

By December 1, 2012 and every 5 years after that, a special committee established by the Legislative Assembly must begin a comprehensive review of this Act and must submit to the Legislative Assembly, within one year after beginning the review, a report that includes any amendments recommended by the committee.

The House leaders from the other parties were advised of this review and have provided members to this committee, and we have honoured their requests. I look forward to the work of all members from all sides of the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this motion is debatable. Are there any others who wish to participate?

Seeing none, hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, I'm sure you've offered some comments, but if you'd like to officially close debate, I would invite you to do so.

Mr. Denis: I again would just move that the debate be closed today.

[Government Motion 13 carried]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate May 31: Mr. Quadri]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, you have some time remaining with respect to the comments that you were making pertaining to the throne speech when we adjourned in the spring. Should you wish to continue, now would be the time for you to do so and to conclude with the time you have remaining.

Mr. Quadri: Good afternoon, Mr. Speaker. I think I concluded my speech before I adjourned the debate, so I completed it last time.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others who wish to participate? The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to deliver my maiden speech. I'd like to introduce myself to those of you who I have not yet had the pleasure to shake hands with. My name is Ian Donovan. I live in the small hamlet of Mossleigh, just south of Calgary. I grew up on the family farm. At the age of 17 I took over the farm when my parents moved to town after my father had a stroke. He passed away when I was 19, and the farm was left to me to look after to provide for me and my mother.

I've been part of the Mossleigh Lions Club and an active community member my whole adult life. When you live in a small town, you help build it. You support each member in any way needed because one day it's going to be you that needs the support. I started on county council at the age of 19. I worked for the people in my county the last 17 years, two of those years as reeve. Deep roots in my farming community have played a huge part in making me the compassionate, approachable, and understanding man that stands here before you today. I'm a man that prides himself on listening to the people who need to be heard and searching for reasonable solutions to issues that arise.

Now I have the opportunity to thank a few people. Today I'd like to start with my wife, Serena, who has been first and foremost an important supporter. Together we decided to start this journey. To say that my wife is amazing is an understatement; she is truly my everything. Our five children, who I don't get to see as much as I'd like: I love them with all of my heart. [interjections] I know.

To the many people who helped knock on doors, put up signs, talk with strangers, neighbours, and friends, and believed I should be their MLA; to Jodie Gateman, my campaign manager, who put all of her heart and soul into making my dream come true; to former MLA Barry McFarland, who has done a wonderful job for our constituency over his 20 years of service – filling his shoes will not be easy; I appreciate his support and his listening ear – it is very humbling that I stand here to thank each and every one of them for where I stand today. I intend to make all of my constituents proud.

Today I can confidently say that I am very proud to be a part of this team. Not just any team – I've been part of numerous teams in my life – but I'm proud to be part of this team, a group of 17 MLAs that have different backgrounds, different ideas and goals, but we all work together as one when it comes to this province.

Without our staff our jobs would be next to impossible. To all of our Wildrose caucus staff I'd like to say thank you, with a special thanks to my staff in my constituency office, Lois McLeod, and my leg. assistant, Cody Johnston. Their experience and their knowledge have been an enormous asset to me in these last few months. Even though they work in the background and they may not always be seen, they have a huge effect on all Albertans that we represent.

I've been an MLA for just a mere six months, and I've already experienced and learned many things. Today I get to touch on a couple of them. The first thing I have learned: do not always believe what you are told. I watched my colleague the Health minister believe all the lies AHS told him about the Little Bow continuing care centre in Carmangay. There are lies about the care not being good enough for seniors and the building almost about to fall down around them.

This government did not take the time to meet with the families of the residents and explain that closure would be in the near future. Neither did they take the time to go through the maintenance logs and the inspection logs. Had they taken the time, they would have seen that although the building was indeed aging with the people that were inside it, it also had been maintained with integrity and pride. They would have also seen that all these families wanted was what was the best for their family members and their loved ones. Each of these families was willing to work with the system and find the answers to the problems and find suitable placements for their loved ones.

In our small towns in southern Alberta we don't expect money to be frivolously thrown away and spent on things that are not necessary. We look for accountability, and we take pride in the jobs we do. The staff that was employed in this facility went above and beyond to provide the level of service in this centre, and you would be hard-pressed to duplicate it in any city facility.

You can't re-create a sense of small-town camaraderie. It is made by the very people within it. I think we all witnessed this this summer when we had over 300 people in Carmangay stand up for what we felt was right.

You would also be hard-pressed to find any other facility that runs under budget in this spend-all society. You'd be hard-pressed to find any parts of the building that were actually falling apart. The maintenance man, Roger Burke, had dedicated over 25 years of his life to making sure that building was in sound shape.

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

You see, we small-town folk take pride in every aspect of our lives. We small-town folk remember each and every day that these seniors, who suffer from terrible diseases like dementia and Alzheimer's, were the very people that built this province, and without them we would be nothing. We appreciate the simple things in life, and sometimes the simple things are being able to walk across the street, take a piece of pie to your neighbour, and just say, "Hi," just because you can.

You see, the issue that happened in my riding, in one of my small towns, is near and dear to my heart. My mom was a resident in the High River hospital in the long-term care unit. We had recently celebrated her 80th birthday, and like the 18 residents in Carmangay she suffered from dementia.

An Hon. Member: Just take a deep breath.

Mr. Donovan: I'll drink Wilson's water, too.

While we were on the stairs of this very building on April 23, in the facility of Carmangay my mom passed away. So I do care for every person in my constituency. I will go to whatever lengths it takes to make sure that each and every one of them, even though they might not even remember their name, is treated with the respect and the dignity they deserve.

As a Member of this Legislative Assembly, whether you're just an MLA or a minister in the government, it's our responsibility to speak up for all of those who cannot speak up for themselves and protect those who need protecting. I can honestly say that as a son and as a member of the community, and – right on. Always nice to have water. Where was I at? Blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. That can be in Hansard, I think.

I did what I said to make sure that my mom and the 18 residents of Carmangay had the best care and were treated with the dignity and respect they so deserve. I'm thankful my mom wasn't facing a move at the end of her life into another facility that was not a home.

I hope that if you ever find yourselves in the same particular position that I did, there are injustices happening around you to the people you love, you also stand up for what is right and do not take the lies and the padded answers. I hope you demand accountability, responsibility, and fairness. For us small-town folk it's just called respect.

Another thing I've learned in this short time is that this government is not considerate of how Albertans seem to be and where they live and the ability to read a map. It is interesting to me that they would have some of their MLAs enter into ridings that aren't even theirs and publicly proclaim: I'm your MLA. These MLAs live five or six hours away, and they weren't even on the ballot in the riding that they were about to visit. It is interesting to me that there are some in this room that assume these constituents, these voters, are not intelligent enough to recognize this proclamation as untrue and outright rude. I do not believe it makes a difference whether you live in a rural riding or an urban riding. These people, these voters, these Albertans are not morons, and they need to be treated with the respect that this province should be demanding.

I think there are times for teams to join. I think there is a lot of information that can be shared. Other MLAs want to come tour a neighbouring riding or see similar ridings with assets and issues, but keep respectful and professional relations. Please know that if you ever enter into my riding and proclaim something as silly as being the MLA, you're basically slapping my voters in the face and telling them that their democratic rights are meaningless. That is not a message I want my voters to hear or any voter to hear. Remember, they voted for me, not for you. Your name wasn't on my ballot, so unless I'm standing here today in error, this shows how Little Bow did vote. Look around this room. This is how Albertans voted on April 23. With no immediate pending election there's no reason to be out campaigning, so please don't have your Deputy Premier introduce you as "your MLA" in my riding. I think it's a bit rude.

The most concerning thing I've learned in the last few months is that there are good people on this side of the floor, and there are good people on that side of the floor. The concerning part to me is that even though we have good people sitting around the tables at meetings, governing this province, we still seem to work against each other. I personally hope to be able to work with you, not against you. I hope I can find solutions to the problems that we face in this province instead of the power struggle that we seem to be stuck in.

A few weeks ago I showed up at a press event the Premier was attending in regard to the E coli issue in this province. I being the agricultural minister, or agricultural critic – that's next term. Sorry. Just planning ahead. Along with my colleague and friend Jason Hale from the Strathmore-Brooks riding we attended to show support for the residents of his riding as well as him being a beef producer himself.

We were told by the press secretary for the Premier, "This is our event; you guys stay away," meaning that as opposition we couldn't possibly work with the Premier and her ministers for Albertans; meaning that we couldn't possibly have anything important to contribute to finding a solution; meaning that even though one of us, Mr. Hale, lives in the riding, we couldn't possibly shed light on the background of things to help the employees of this Brooks plant; meaning that showing up couldn't possibly have an effect other than negative for Albertans to see that MLAs, no matter what party they are from, do all work for the common good of Albertans. We were at the event to support the Premier and the livestock producers and to show that we are a unified Alberta. The agriculture minister took the time to thank us for coming and recognized that our intentions were honest.

I would like these bullying tactics that I've witnessed so far to stop. I would not use them with you, but I can if I need to. I feel that if we all work together when we leave this room, we'd be acting as a positive force for all Albertans, not as a negative one on the outside. I've told many people in my riding: I don't care who you voted for on April 23, whether it's NDP, Liberal, the PCs, or the Wildrose. I'm here to work for them. I'll do my best for every person who calls or writes. I'm a very optimistic person.

I believe we should respect each other and our differing views. I believe we can and should look past our differences and do what's best for Albertans, all Albertans. That's what we're supposed to do, all 87 of us who were voted to be in here.

Madam Speaker, I look forward to the next three and a half years of lively debate and respect for each other in this room and outside of it. To all of you that have talked to me about wanting an actual free vote and not a whip vote, you still have a chance. You can come and join our team and be part of the Wildrose government of 2016.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. Very passionate maiden speech. I found myself agreeing with some of your comments.

Now, hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of questions and comments. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. I'm wondering what specific issues the member is looking to move forward. Let's say two or three from your constituency and two or three from your other interests in life. What are the issues that you're looking to drive forward in the next three and a half years?

Mr. Donovan: That's an excellent question. Well, there are quite a few things we could start off on. I think balancing a budget is key and crucial. I'm a farmer by trade. I'm not as smart as some of the other members that live in different ridings around here, but I think we've got to look at the fact that – in my business I have to run a balanced budget. I think this is a business, and we have to run a balanced budget.

In all fairness to the current government they've pulled out about six items that we brought up while we were campaigning, so I think we are bringing some of the things to the table, and I think we can work with them on some items. I think we have to find some continuity in this government and try to figure out how to work together. I like to argue with the best of them, but at some point you have to move forward.

How much time would you like?

Ms Blakeman: Three issues. Three and three. Personal and from your constituency.

Mr. Donovan: You want constituency? Well, I guess we'd like to have to some roads down there. There's an overpass in Nobleford that needs to be built. That's one of the key ones.

It's been touched on before, and I don't know if everybody noticed it or not, but a long-term care centre in Carmangay happened to be closed over the summer. I would like to work with the Minister of Health to figure out what to do with that building now, whether there be a pilot project, whether there be a private owner to come in and buy it, and take care of that because right now that has crippled that town. Don't get me wrong. It's not going to kill them because they will get back up, and they will stand up, and they will fight, and they will survive. The point of it is that there's a perfectly good building there. They say – I can show the studies here and all the numbers that they did themselves – that these are things that need to be done.

The schooling in our riding is very diverse. We have home-schools, we have private schools, we have lots of religious schools, and we have public schools. I think they all need the right to be able to learn what they want to learn and to be able to teach what they want to be able to teach.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

We still have a few minutes on Standing Order 29(2)(a). Would anybody else like to participate?

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next maiden speech. I would ask the Minister of Energy.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm deeply honoured today to rise in my place to give my inaugural address to the Legislature of Alberta and to respond to the Speech from the Throne. The Speech from the Throne focused on reaching new heights, supporting Albertans, strengthening our economy. When I listened, I could not help but think about my own family and its history in this province. I thought about how far our province has come, but most importantly I reflected on the fact that in 2012 we still hold the same values and virtues as the men and women who built this province.

If I were to put a title on my comments today, it would be We're Albertans by Choice. My family has been in Alberta since before Alberta was a province. Like many Albertans, my forebears made a choice. Their choice to come to Alberta was a deliberate act. In some cases it was actually a deliberate, informed act, but in some cases it was to escape circumstances with less opportunity, more difficult lives, or constrained social circumstances.

My mother's father, William Gardner, passed through Alberta in 1896 and two years later returned because he felt an irresistible attraction to the foothills and the mountains. Alberta presented an immense opportunity to carve a ranching life out of the foothills at the turn of that century. He was one of the first people in his area to put up a barbed wire fence to keep his cattle in and other people's cattle out. Not everybody was happy with that. William Gardner, though, had a choice. He'd been in the British navy. He'd been around the world. He travelled immensely, including once as a young sailor accompanying a royal delegation to attend a czar family wedding in St. Petersburg and later crossing the Panama isthmus on foot while the Panama Canal was under construction. The world was his oyster, so to speak, but he chose Alberta.

He met a young daughter of an Irish doctor practising in Calgary, Sarah Waddy, and they were married in a small church on the Tsuu T'ina reserve in 1901, adjacent to the boundaries of the constituency I now represent. Together they made a choice. They chose to put down deep roots, raise their family in Alberta near the Chain Lakes, south of Longview. Amongst those children born on the ranch was my mother, Mary.

My own father, Jim Hughes, was born and raised in Hereford county in England. The Hugheses and the Hereford cattle have been closely linked for several generations of both species. My father and his family members all knew Hereford cattle well. Before he left England, he spoke to people who shipped cattle all over the world from Herefordshire. He could have gone anywhere, but at the end of his research seeking the best cattle country in the world, he chose Alberta and arrived here in the late '20s, joined soon thereafter by his brother Tom.

Now, Jim and Tom made their respective choices. They had tough times, and they had good times. They built a cattle business through the Dirty Thirties. They never forgot the value of a dollar or the value of their family or the value of their community.

My parents were married in 1939 and chose to raise our family, again, in the cattle business. Alberta was good to them. They lived long and healthy lives, my father to 100, my mother to 95. So I'm sticking around. In so many ways their lives reflected the lives of so many others who also chose Alberta. They worked so very hard, overcame immense challenges of nature, and carved out a life here. Together with others they formed a community that came together when needed and respected each other's need for space the rest of the time.

Denise, my wife, emigrated from Ireland to Canada as a very young child. She never made that particular choice, but her parents certainly did. Denise chose to stay in Alberta, and I must say that I'm very pleased that she did and so are our three teenage children, Aidan, Carlan, and Eamon.

I share these stories, Madam Speaker, as they are stories that are common to so many Albertans who live here today. People came to seek opportunities: some for adventure, some to build a new life, some to find a job that would support a growing family, some to escape the social and economic constraints of the old country.

Now, the earthly remains of all of those members of our family who came before us rest for eternity in the cemetery in High River. Their spirit, however, propels us forward with conviction and determination to continue to build that which they started. Each generation has the same choice. Each generation in our case has so far made the choice to stay and build a life in Alberta. By so doing, they help build the Alberta story and our community and, as an extension, our nation and the wider world.

Where does this lead us, Madam Speaker? It leads us to today, to our own current choices, to our own desire to continue to build an Alberta so that future generations also will choose to come to Alberta. What are the values we share that will allow us to continue to build that province, that magnet for humanity, that beacon of opportunity? What will guide our choices? First, we highly value our landscape and our environment much as did my grandfather. The test is this: if we were to be here in 50 or 100 years, would we be proud of what Alberta looks like? I'm honoured to be part of finding that balance here in this very Legislature in the near future. I'm proud that this government understands and has outlined the need for responsible development and the means to achieve it.

Secondly, we as Albertans are a community which has a special brand of consensus politics going right back to 1905. We can disagree greatly, but at the end of the day we can also consistently come together as Albertans in a way almost unlike any other province in this country.

4:20

As a personal aside, Madam Speaker, at least in my family – and I know this is true for many others – politics is just one expression of living in this community. Seldom a full career or calling; rather, it is a way to build the community beyond the personal needs of one's own family or business. For example, my father together with newspaper publisher Charles Clark of the High River Times worked to recruit signatures to recall Mr. Aberhart in the 1930s. Ultimately, it was an unsuccessful democratic exercise, but it was an engagement in community. My uncle Tom Hughes, whose daughter Maxine is in the gallery today, ran on the Peter Lougheed ticket in Okotoks-High River in 1967, narrowly missing out on becoming the eighth new Progressive Conservative member in that Legislature. I have the evidence here to prove that he was actually a candidate at that time with this campaign brochure.

In short, Madam Speaker, public service is an honourable calling.

Incidentally, Maxine is joined in the gallery by my niece Dr. Sarah Hughes and her husband, Dr. Andrew Simmonds, both of whom have also chosen to do their medical leading-edge research here in the province of Alberta.

Now, I cannot mention the Hon. Peter Lougheed without adding to the mountain of tributes rightfully sent his way. He was a pillar of our province, a leader of our nation, an icon of public service, and the very definition of the public interest in his conduct.

I must also echo the recognition delivered earlier by our colleague from Calgary-Glenmore with respect to the late Hon. Harvie Andre, a former Member of Parliament. Harvie was a dedicated and spirited servant of the people of Canada, a fierce defender of the interests of western Canada in a strong and united Canada. We will miss him dearly.

Madam Speaker, the third common value that we as Albertans believe in is the importance of free enterprise, of the market economy, the creative genius of individual enterprise because it has served us well as a community, as a province.

Fourth, we believe in supporting those who need assistance in our communities. There's a common commitment to social justice in this province that sees business leaders taking on a challenge like ending homelessness in this province within 10 years. I am proud this government has increased AISH payments and that we are taking the needed step of supporting first responders.

Fifth, Madam Speaker, increasingly we are recognizing that we as Albertans are citizens of the world. When I wrote the birth announcements for our own children in the mid-1990s, I said that they were lucky to be born Canadians with the opportunity to become citizens of the world. Now, within less than a couple of decades, we all need to become citizens of the world. We are defined by our connectedness to others in this world by virtue of our need for markets for our products – agricultural, forestry, or energy in nature – and by virtue of the fact that the citizens of Alberta have come from around the world to join the First Nations people who arrived here more than 10,000 years ahead of the rest of us.

Now, Madam Speaker, in 2011 our eldest son and I joined a group of 35 other Albertans on a climb to the roof of Africa, Mount Kilimanjaro, raising a million dollars for orthopaedic services in this province and leaving behind a substantial contribution for health care training in east Africa. I'm still recovering. This is just one example of how Albertans are becoming citizens of the world.

Building on those fundamental values is how I will seek to guide my conduct in this House and beyond. I'm honoured to be one of only 34 Albertans who has served in both this Legislature and in the House of Commons of Canada. One of the first was Mr. R.B. Bennett, who started here and later became Prime Minister of Canada. I have no such ambition, Madam Speaker. I look forward to working with members from all sides. Some of my best work when I served in the federal House of Commons was accomplished working with all parties. Good ideas can come from anywhere. All we need is the goodwill to turn ideas into good work. I will work hard to treat colleagues with respect. I will work hard to ensure we always meet that important test in any choice we face, defined by the question: what is the public interest?

I particularly look forward to representing my constituency of Calgary-West, one represented by former Prime Minister R.B. Bennett in the federal House, by former Premier Peter Lougheed in this House as well as many others in this Legislature.

The communities of Aspen Woods, Christie Park, Discovery Ridge, Sienna Hills, Signal Ridge, the whole Signal Hill area, the Slopes, Springbank Hill, and Strathcona Park are vibrant, young, growing communities. They represent some of the fastest growing communities with all the needs that that implies. People work hard, raise families, and they love their communities. I'm proud to work with them to help ensure that those communities continue to flourish as a strong element of this great province.

I ask all members of this Legislature and Albertans beyond to help build a province which will continue to be a community of choice as selected by the citizens of the world. When I looked at where I wanted to live and raise a family, I chose Alberta, and I will continue to choose Alberta. I do so as a proud Canadian.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much for that very fascinating history of your family and another excellent inaugural speech. I don't think you prefer maiden speech.

As we all know, Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in, and it allows for five minutes of questions and comments. I think the Member for Edmonton-Centre would like to comment.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much. That was very interesting, and thank you for sharing a bit of your background. I have a funny feeling that my grandmother is buried in the same pioneer graveyard in High River, Millarville, somewhere. There's a pioneer graveyard with a log cabin, and evidently you can only be there if you've been approved as a pioneer family, so she's there.

I would like to ask you the same question. Why did you run for public office? Now, you served federally as well. What is the issue you're trying to accomplish? What are you trying to move forward? How are you trying to change the world in the period of time that you're going to be in this next session?

Mr. Hughes: Thank you for that question. It's a great question, actually, Madam Speaker. I did have a choice. I was serving in my own business capacity for many years, and things have gone exceedingly well. We've been very fortunate. But I felt that at this stage in my life I could make a contribution to this province. Having served in the House of Commons for five years, you know, you learn that your time is shorter than you think it's going to be, that you need to have a sense of urgency as a member in any Legislature, that you need to be committed to an objective that you're trying to accomplish.

From my perspective my goal is: I would be pleased if I could make a contribution with respect to finding that balance between economic development and environmental protection. I come, obviously, with a deep and long-standing multigenerational appreciation for the landscape and for the land in this province. From those roots and from that background I have a deep commitment to ensuring that we do the right thing by the environment in this province so that our kids and their kids and their kids for several generations out look back and say: you know, they did the right thing.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: No one else wants to question?

You at one point – it was one of your major pieces of why Alberta is great – talked with great emphasis on the free market. I'm always interested in why there is such emphasis put on that private sector and no accompanying recognition of the NGO and public sectors. You have been a public servant; you have served the people before. I'd like to hear why you don't talk about the contributions of the charitable sector, the recreation sector, youth, culture, health care as a public sector, teaching, education as a public sector. None of those are ever mentioned. It's always how wonderful business and the free market is. End of discussion. So I'd like to hear why you don't talk about the other half of Alberta.

Mr. Hughes: Well, Madam Speaker, I would say that, you know, my own life has been an example of a deep commitment to public service. I paid for my own way to go to Harvard to get a master's degree. I came back with a pickup truck and $60,000 debt to my name.

4:30

I've demonstrated through time, through service in the federal House, through commitment through my service as the inaugural chair of Alberta Health Services, through commitment to helping with a group of other friends to organize the first World Cup in cross-country skiing, to being quite active in the community – it's a lifestyle to be active in the community. It's part of the community of which I spoke in my comments earlier. It is an important part of it, but the fundamental underpinning of our society is that we have to create the ability and the capacity to have all of these other opportunities for ourselves.

The free-market enterprise that we all see demonstrated in this province probably more than in any other province in the country, that we're so proud of, is actually the fundamental underpinning. The economy is the fundamental underpinning of having the ability to ensure that we treat everybody fairly and that everybody has opportunity and that we have a cultural capacity in this province which exceeds a lot of other places in the world, that we can celebrate that and we can enjoy it and we can make the most of it. You know, the charitable communities, obviously, are all important institutions in the community of which I spoke.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'd now ask the Member for Calgary-McCall for his response to the throne speech.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to respond to the throne speech. It is an honour to have the chance to rise and respond on behalf of the people of my riding of Calgary-McCall. Before I begin my remarks, I would like to thank the residents of Calgary-McCall for once again putting their faith in me and giving me their trust. It was hard work to gain their trust, but I thank them again for giving me their trust. Their support is precious to me, and I will work very hard to serve them as well as I can.

I would like to thank the many volunteers who worked day and night on my re-election campaign, and I'm very thankful for all their support. I would also like to thank my staff for their hard work and dedication. It was the hard work and the dedication of my staff which made my re-election even possible. Without their support it wouldn't have been possible for me to do my job.

Finally, I would like to thank my family for their extraordinary patience and love over the years. Without their support I could never have entered politics, and I certainly couldn't continue in politics. I'm sure all members of this House understand what I mean when I say that.

It has been months since we heard the throne speech, but my concerns have remained the same. There was no mention of eliminating our structural deficit so that we can safeguard and improve the vital services we all value such as health care and education. There was no mention of improving seniors' care. We need more home care and long-term care beds so we can cut down the wait times in the hospitals. There was no mention of improving the provincial government's relationship with our cities, towns, and villages, of giving them the reliable and predictable funding they need, or of treating them with the respect they deserve. We need to build more schools, Madam Speaker. My riding, Calgary-McCall, needs a high school and a junior high very badly, and we also need a kindergarten school. However, these failures of this throne speech have already been discussed, first during the short session immediately following the spring election and then throughout the summer, when the Alberta Liberals continued to hold this government accountable for their actions.

Now I would like to speak of a failure that has not been properly discussed, the failure to support new Albertans, Madam Speaker. My riding of Calgary-McCall is incredibly diverse. Many immigrants to Canada have made it their home, and many more immigrants continue to arrive every day seeking to make a new and better life for themselves and for their families. It is an incredible place, where you can hear many different languages, explore many different cultures, celebrate many different festivals, and enjoy many different foods. Calgary-McCall is home to new Canadians from Pakistan, India, the Philippines, China, Africa. You name it, and they are there. They are hard-working people who want to contribute to their new communities, but it is difficult for many of these new Albertans to reach their full potential and, as a result, to contribute their best to Calgary and to this province and the country.

The main reason for this is the language barrier, Madam Speaker, and as I have mentioned, this is something that is not addressed in the throne speech, support for new Albertans. This lack of support for new Albertans is most unfortunate. To understand why, think of it this way. Just imagine what Alberta would be like if we suddenly decided to leave our oil buried, underground, how poor we would be. Of course, we do not do that because it would be foolish to waste such a precious resource.

Unfortunately, however, this government is leaving massive resource wealth untapped, and it is costing every Albertan money. This government is failing to develop our human resources by neglecting to help new Albertans develop the language skills they need. This government's failure to invest in English as a second language, or ESL, is just plain foolish, as foolish as leaving the oil in the ground. This government's failure to value human resources as much as they value natural resources means that we are leaving billions of dollars of potential wealth untapped. That is why we encourage this government to properly fund ESL training for new Albertans and for their children.

Proper ESL funding will help new Albertans to better integrate in and interact with the broader community. By increasing funding to traditional ESL as well as Internet and mobile ESL, this government would not only tap into the knowledge and skills new Albertans bring; it would also help to unburden our social services, our teachers, and help newcomers to reach their full potential. The great thing is that increasing our investment in ESL would cost far less than the value of the benefits it would bring. A 50 per cent boost in ESL school funding would require an investment of only $56 million a year. An additional investment of $20 million a year would allow us to meet the needs of workers and their employers by providing Internet and mobile ESL. The throne speech fails to offer this kind of support.

Other ways to help new Albertans to contribute all they can to our province would be to provide more settlement funding and to get serious on foreign credentials so that we could have foreign-trained doctors, engineers, and other professionals fully contributing to our economy. None of these supports are offered either. This is very shortsighted when you think of it, Madam Speaker, because while our past wealth came from developing our natural resources and much of our present wealth comes from developing our natural resources, as we move deeper and deeper into the 21st century, more and more of our wealth will come from developing our human resources. This government needs to get serious about this, and I hope this government will take Albertans' concerns to heart and start making decisions that benefit all of us, not just those who sit across the floor from me. Just as leaving oil underground is foolish, so is leaving knowledge and skill untapped due to a lack of English skills or a lack of recognition of foreign credentials.

Madam Speaker, it is disappointing to see that the throne speech focused more on crafting delightful sentences than presenting a plan for Alberta. I would have preferred more concrete language offering support for our cities, towns, and villages, for families, for students, for seniors, and for new Albertans, so many of whom live in my riding of Calgary-McCall. This throne speech fails to offer a vision to support Albertans, those who were born here and those who moved here from other provinces and from all over the world, as I came from India to Alberta in December of 1970. I know more needs to be done for all Albertans and all new Canadians. The speech does not meet their expectations, so I simply cannot support this throne speech.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you for your comments, hon. member, and thank you for helping us to understand your constituents better.

Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) would anyone like to comment or question the hon. member? The Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm just wondering if the hon. member could comment on the status of the airport tunnel, that he was such an ardent advocate for, and what his next great cause will be after the airport tunnel is completed.

Mr. Kang: Thanks for the question. Importantly, I think I was the only MLA in the House who was advocating for the airport tunnel. Thank God, touch wood, I was successful. The airport tunnel will be open in 2014, and you will know the benefits of the airport tunnel when it's open because you will be able to drive from the northwest all the way down to Stoney Trail in 2014. So fewer greenhouse gas emissions. In going to the airport, you won't be stuck in the traffic for hours and hours because there will be another access to the airport.

My next mission? We all know that our schools are bursting at the seams. We need more schools in Calgary-McCall, in Chestermere, everywhere, so my next mission will be education and balancing the budget because we are spending our future generations' money. We should be looking at saving some. Now with – I'll say it – the nonsense, you know, of that study going on, I don't know what's going to happen to the heritage trust fund. I'm afraid because the sustainability fund is almost all gone, and I don't know what the future of the heritage trust fund will be. Those are my concerns. We should be saving for future generations so they can have better, if not the same, living standards than we have today. That's my concern, and that's what I'll be fighting for.

The Acting Speaker: There are still a few minutes left under Standing Order 29(2)(a). Are there any other members who would like to question or comment?

Seeing none, I would ask the Minister of Transportation to present his response to the throne speech.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As the 808th member of this Assembly, far from number 1, I thank you for the opportunity to rise today and honour the tradition of new members delivering their maiden speech. It's especially nice to do this on the six-month anniversary of becoming the MLA for Calgary-Hays as part of a strong, stable, majority PC government.

I would be remiss if I did not congratulate the Speaker on becoming the 12th Speaker, I believe, of the Assembly. His place in the history of our great province is well earned after 19 years serving in the Legislature, and I'm sure he will distinguish himself as an unbiased and wise referee in the years to come, something his hockey official training has no doubt prepared him for.

By way of introducing myself to the House, I would have you know that I became an Albertan at 9 p.m. on July 26, 1981, when the plane I was on landed in Calgary. I am proud to say that I chose Alberta, and my employer of the day granted my request to relocate.

I'm also proud to have grown up in Woodstock, Ontario, as the fifth of seven children in a working-class home, the son of a welder and an office worker. The endeavours of my parents would have fit quite nicely in the Alberta economy of that day and today as well. In fact, my parents still inspire me today. I can assure you, Madam Speaker, that if I have any success debating issues in this House, it's due in large measure to the best and most basic training in debate and negotiation I received while living in a household of nine people with only one and a half bathrooms.

Both my parents and all four of my sisters still live in Woodstock. The three brothers McIver have all lived in Alberta at some point. Today my older brother is in Petawawa, Ontario, and my younger brother in Red Deer, Alberta.

I'm blessed today to be married to my beautiful and inspiring wife, Christine, who makes me smile and who is the founder and chief executive officer of the Kids Cancer Care Foundation of Alberta. Between us we have four children, all in Calgary. We're also blessed to have two grandchildren, Quinn and Zander, who quite simply remind us why it's so important to leave the province and the world in better condition than we found it.

Politically, Madam Speaker, I will lay claim to being determined and persistent. My first inspiration to serve publicly came from the father of a high school friend. A fellow named Bill Allen operated a lumberyard in Woodstock and served as mayor there for several years. During the teenage years, when I was hanging out with his son and a lot more interested in serving myself than helping others, he shared some of his inspirations for and experiences in public service. Despite my efforts to ignore the positive message, some of it seemed to stick.

Back in '98 I first ran for the position of alderman in the city of Calgary, where my dreams were crushed in a sound thrashing at the hands of the inimitable Sue Higgins, who today remains a legend of Calgary city hall. This was followed by another loss in a by-election, and finally in 2001, thanks largely in part to the retirement of Ms Higgins, leaving an empty seat on city council, I got elected.

The next nine years were filled with terrific opportunity, one after another, to serve Calgarians by both supporting and bringing forward positive changes and, in turn, fighting off proposals not in the public interest. During this time I had many chances to interact with the Alberta government. I was able to work, interestingly enough, with Alberta Transportation to co-ordinate the construction of interchanges on the Deerfoot Trail, where traffic signals had been the bane of the existence of thousands of citizens for years. Today, of course, the Deerfoot is ready for more improvements.

For eight years I served on the board of the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, working with many ministries on legislative improvements as well as funding programs culminating in the municipal sustainability initiative, which stands today as the very highest standard of infrastructure funding for municipalities across Canada. I'm so pleased that our Premier has committed to extending this program, giving municipalities more certainty in their funding plans.

I've also had the privilege during that time of serving with the Calgary Police Commission for two years and chairing the Calgary Housing Company for three years, which, interestingly enough, is the largest landlord in the city of Calgary, at that time serving well over 25,000 people.

I was also fortunate to serve on the Metropolitan Calgary Foundation, providing housing for seniors; chairing the Community and Protective Services Committee, overseeing emergency services; and leading the family and community social services committee.

Madam Speaker, the greatest gift I have received from public life is that I have been required to decide what I believe. Through being asked to explain over and over again into a media microphone what's important and then to live with that record and defend it, something great happens. A set of firm beliefs develops. This guides my thoughts and words and actions and gives me at least a chance to succeed in public service.

Madam Speaker, I don't want to miss this chance to thank the people of Calgary-Hays for the absolute honour of representing their interests in this Legislature. Members may know that Calgary-Hays consists of the communities of Quarry Park, McKenzie Towne, McKenzie Lake, Douglasdale, and Douglas Glen. The riding is bordered on the west by the Bow River, on the south by the 22X, on the east by 52nd Street, and on the north by the community of Riverbend. I had the opportunity in my past political life to have an impact on the planning and development of this riding, and I look forward to working with both my municipal and federal counterparts in securing the infrastructure and legislative needs of the area, including recreation facilities, the LRT, improvements to the Deerfoot Trail, completing the ring road, and the full opening of the south Calgary health campus.

I would like also in this Assembly to express my gratitude to the Premier for her confidence in asking me to serve as her Minister of Transportation. Although I have much more to learn than I know today, I understand the importance of the portfolio. Transportation is a cornerstone of our economy and our quality of life as Albertans. Transportation is our link to the rest of the world and our very lifeline. Only with a strong transportation network can we secure the future of our children and grandchildren.

The entire province needs to be listened to and worked for in this portfolio. Many projects which are not in the headlines of the media are nonetheless urgent to Albertans across this province. I recognize the need to listen twice and speak once to Albertans. Madam Speaker, I pledged a few short months ago to carry out these duties to the best of my abilities. I shall remember that promise.

With the support of our Premier and this government we have already committed to completing highway 63 from highway 55 to Fort McMurray, and I say "we" because nobody does this alone. We have put in place important infrastructure in Sylvan Lake, Medicine Hat, Cochrane, and Diamond City amongst other places. We have in place commitments to complete 100 per cent of the Edmonton ring road and 70 per cent of the Calgary ring road, with more to follow.

In short, Madam Speaker, this government is listening to Albertans and acting on their priorities from north to south and east to west. I'm very excited about the future of Alberta. God has blessed our province with resources, agriculture, great people, and terrific neighbours. It's now our duty to manage those blessings wisely.

I look forward to working with all members of this House and all Albertans to create together a future where we can truly say four years from now and then, indeed, 40 years from now that we left it better than we found it.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. I agree with you about leaving it better than we found it. Thank you for your very articulate speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Anyone wish to question or comment?

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next speaker, and that would be the Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hale: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. It's a distinct honour to speak in this session of the 28th Legislature of the great province of Alberta. I want to thank the constituents of Strathmore-Brooks for giving me the privilege to represent them and share their successes as well as their concerns here today.

I would also like to recognize a friend and mentor by the name of Fred Mandeville, a long-time MLA in my constituency. It was people like him who inspired me to become active in provincial politics.

I take great pride in sharing with you some highlights of what makes the Strathmore-Brooks constituency truly great. Dinosaur provincial park is a United Nations educational, scientific, and cultural organization heritage site. It's located northeast of the city of Brooks along the Red Deer River. Dinosaur provincial park contains some of the most important fossil specimens discovered from the age of dinosaurs period in the Earth's history. The property is unmatched in terms of the number and variety of high-quality specimens, which date back over 75 million years. The park contains exceptional riparian habitat features as well as badlands of outstanding aesthetic value.

The John Ware cabin is also located in Dinosaur provincial park. A true pioneer, John Ware was an African American born cowboy who established his reputation in frontier society with deeds rather than words. His skills in the saddle and straightforward honesty earned him the respect of fellow cattlemen, First Nations, and entrepreneurs. John Ware was the first of many immigrants from a multitude of nations who live and work in my constituency.

Madam Speaker, water is the lifeblood of southern Alberta, and the Bow River is critical to the urban and rural health of this region. The western and eastern irrigation districts have roots which are firmly planted in the history of Alberta. In order to attract settlers to the area, the Canadian Pacific Railway began construction of a network of irrigation canals and reservoirs, starting with a diversion weir across the Bow River in Calgary in 1904.

On May 1, 1935, the Eastern irrigation district was formed. Originally the CPR had planned on closing the western section of their irrigation system, but after two years of meetings between the farmers and the CPR the Western irrigation district was born on May 1, 1944.

Madam Speaker, irrigated farmland provides the world with 40 per cent of all food produced. We are indeed fortunate to have two irrigation districts within my constituency that provide water to 400,000 acres of farmland. In addition, irrigation water is provided to 1,900 farms, over 25 industries, and a number of large feedlot operations.

The Strathmore-Brooks constituency is proud to host the Brooks Kinsmen Pro Rodeo in June and the Strathmore Heritage Days pro rodeo and chuckwagon races in August. I would like to invite all residents of Alberta to these events, which allow us to preserve and enjoy our rich western heritage.

The Strathmore-Brooks constituency is home to numerous recreational opportunities: the Crawling Valley campground, Kinbrook Island provincial park, and Rolling Hills campground, just to name a few.

We are home to the Rosebud School of the Arts. The Rosebud school is famous for its first-rate theatrical productions while developing the knowledge, skills, and attitudes of other students in a Christian context. I would also like to recognize the Brooks campus of Medicine Hat College. The parents and the students of my constituency value the opportunity to be educated in their own homes.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take a few moments today to address a crisis that has affected my constituency. Over the past month the Brooks area has been crippled by the E coli incident found within XL beef and the loss of work which has been associated with it. While this is an unfortunate situation, I am proud to have witnessed such a positive and overwhelming amount of community support to help the workers and the Alberta cattle producers. I am proud to have worked alongside the city council and our MP in a collaborative effort to move the situation in the right direction. This is about our community, and I'm happy to see all levels of government and community groups coming together.

Every MLA in this Legislature has a story about how and why they're here today. I would like to share my story. My great-grandparents settled in the Bassano area in 1910, and my family has been living, working, and raising our children there ever since. My wife, Maggie, and I along with our two sons, Levi and Blu, are currently running a cow-calf operation near Bassano. We along with other hundred-year farm families treasure the agricultural legacy that five generations of blood, sweat, and tears have provided.

Madam Speaker, it saddens me to tell you that I know of a hundred-year farm family in my constituency who is returning their Alberta government hundred-year plaque. They are no longer proud to receive recognition from a government which they believe is taking away their property rights.

My constituents and I are concerned about Bill 19, Bill 24, Bill 36, and Bill 50. The current government has methodically and incrementally eroded Albertans' right to own property or to be compensated in a fair, reasonable, and transparent way, and this government's throne speech showed no commitment to change their ways. Madam Speaker, the reason I am standing here today is because my constituents want good government, a government they can trust to look after their best interests. It's my commitment to the people of Strathmore-Brooks to stand up for their rights and represent them in this great province.

When it comes to advances in civilization, it is said that we all stand on the shoulders of giants. I suggest to you, Madam Speaker, that the seniors in Alberta are our giants, and we need to be more respectful and appreciative of their contributions. I have talked with many seniors who are struggling to make ends meet. In this time of rising food and energy costs seniors have little protection due to minimal or nonexistent cost-of-living adjustments. Without these types of adjustments the Alberta government is taking away their dignity at a time in their lives when dignity is the thing they hold most dear. I am fully committed to standing up for the rights of our seniors and ensuring they live the life they deserve.

Madam Speaker, I graduated from SAIT with a diploma in chemical technology, and I'm an oil field consultant with hands-on experience in the oil and gas industry. I have worked in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and yes, I have worked in Fort McMurray. I have seen and I know the reality of large national and international oil companies building and running multibillion-dollar enterprises under very difficult conditions. As the Wildrose Energy critic I will look forward to holding this government accountable when it comes to defending and supporting the oil and gas industry in Alberta, and I look forward to holding them to account on their misguided Canadian energy strategy.

I believe that education is essential to Alberta's future. There are challenges we face as a growing province. I along with the Wildrose caucus am committed to ensuring Alberta's students are ready to be leaders in a changing global economy. I believe that educational decisions that affect our children should be made locally. I also believe that important core values taught to us by our parents should resonate and be supported by the educational curriculum and the teachers. Madam Speaker, what is more important than the development of successful learners, confident individuals, and responsible citizens who make a positive contribution to society?

I am concerned with health care, as most of you are. As a family we've had many experiences within the current system. My father was a quadriplegic and in a wheelchair for 40 years. We have endured many visits to numerous clinics, hospitals, ERs, ICUs, and, last but not least, home care. Madam Speaker, I must emphasize that it's been my experience that the professionals who provide the care are excellent, but the system they work in needs significant repair.

Yes, Madam Speaker, I was a professional bullfighter. I've had the opportunity to travel all over western Canada. Through the years I've had the pleasure of meeting great men and women, indeed great Albertans while visiting many towns, villages, and cities in this province and others. Although the faces are different, the characteristics are the same: good people working hard, each taking pride in being an Albertan. They tell me how government is encroaching more and more on their way of life. More importantly, they tell me how helpless they feel when it comes to influencing government decisions. In the past they have sent government MLAs to Edmonton, but those MLAs were forced to vote the way the Premier told them to. Their voices weren't heard because the government wasn't listening.

Madam Speaker, I can tell you that politics is not exclusive to government. As a husband and a father with a large extended family, as a volunteer community coach, as a businessman competing for contracts, I've experienced a lot of politics. I've learned that it's not always easy but is critical to be able to listen to different people's points of view, to try and see both sides of an issue, and to work towards reasonable compromise. After all, isn't this the essence of democracy?

It is clear to me that Alberta has a democratic deficit. We need less big government telling us what to do. We need more transparency and more accountability. Franklin D. Roosevelt once said: "In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, you can bet it was planned that way." I believe that democracy does not happen by accident. We need to rebalance the existing system of government with a clear bias towards transparency and accountability.

Madam Speaker, I'd like to quote the Member for Highwood, the Leader of the Official Opposition, who said, "Alberta has a rich and proud history of producing great men and women to champion the democratic causes of voting rights for women, senate reform, government accountability and provincial rights."

I would like to finish, Madam Speaker, by saying this. There's often a tension between ideology and common sense. I believe the exception to that rule and what makes the Wildrose caucus special is that our ideology is common sense.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, for your response to the throne speech. That showcased your community, especially the inspirational description of how they pulled together during a time of crisis.

Now 29(2)(a). If anybody would like to comment or question, this is the time.

Seeing no one, we'll move on to our next member responding to the throne speech, and that would be the hon. Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's truly an honour for me to move acceptance of the Speech from the Throne, presented by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta. As he set forth the vision for the 28th Legislature, I couldn't help but be struck by what his remarks meant to me. As a cabinet minister, as an MLA with the privilege of representing the constituency of St. Albert, and as someone who grew up in this province and is extremely proud to be an Albertan, I realized that that was a moment in time made possible by some very special people, whom I can only refer to as remarkable human beings.

The first remarkable human being is the man who delivered the throne speech itself. His Honour is nothing short of a Canadian hero. For people in parts of the world where they have not known the peace and security and freedom that we are graced with here in Canada, these people think well of Canadians because for them His Honour and his fellow peacekeepers have been the face of Canada, for his distinguished military service all around the world, for his service, after he retired, in African refugee camps delivering aid to the poorest of the poor, and for his current service as Lieutenant Governor as he has courageously shone a light on Albertans' struggle with mental health.

When he shared through the Speech from the Throne that Bill 1 would guarantee workers' compensation coverage for first responders suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder, he brought the full significance of his service to that announcement. For those of us who are new to this Chamber, I can't think of a more fitting bill to be our first on which we have the privilege to vote. To me, it's the kind of bill that made me want to serve my constituents in the first place, and it was put forward by the kind of government I want to be a part of, the kind of government that was inspired by another remarkable human being. I'm speaking, of course, about the late Hon. Peter Lougheed.

I enjoyed the honour and privilege of speaking with Premier Lougheed on two occasions. Although those conversations were brief, the impact of his words will last a lifetime. I know I'm not the only person in this room who enjoyed that experience. He was the kind of visionary who inspired Albertans no matter how they made their living or on which side of the political fence they sat. Madam Speaker, I can't express what it means to me to actually be a part of the team that continues Premier Lougheed's legacy, his vision.

That brings me to the third remarkable human being of whom I thought as I heard the Speech from the Throne. Like so many of us, Premier Redford says that she has been shaped by Lougheed's Alberta. Inspired by his predisposition to look outwards beyond Alberta's borders, she has played key roles within the international community, advising on human rights and democratic systems in some of the most desperate regions of the world so that she could bring broader understanding back to Alberta, from which we may all benefit. Like His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, she has seen a need and said: let me help. I'm proud to serve a leader of such conviction and vision, and I'm proud to serve with all my caucus colleagues as well as my colleagues across the aisle.

Of the remarkable people I speak of today, the most remarkable, in my humble opinion, are my parents, Ash and Sharon Khan. They started their lives together as college sweethearts with a newborn son, with very little means but very big dreams. They are both children of parents who were not born in Canada. My grandparents on both sides of my family dreamed of a better life for their children, and it was their quest for this better life that led them to Alberta. It led them to building a home in Alberta. My parents took turns putting each other through university here in Alberta and made tremendous sacrifices to fulfill the dreams of their parents by striving to make an even better life for their children, my sister and me.

My parents are an Albertan success story. They have truly exceeded the dreams that they held as a very young couple beginning their life journey. The life and opportunities that they afforded my sister and me have truly been remarkable. It is now my turn, my obligation to my parents, to my grandparents, to my wife and two children, to the remarkable Albertans I've spoken of this evening, to my constituents in St. Albert, and to all Albertans who strive for the dream that their children will have more, that their children will have an even better life full of untold and remarkable opportunities. I believe it is the challenge of all my colleagues in the House to work with purpose and diligence so that our children in Alberta and our grandchildren and the future generations of all Albertans one day will experience a quality of life that exceeds all of our wildest dreams.

Madam Speaker, the Speech from the Throne outlines how our government intends to go about this important work. My team at advanced education and I are ready to help. In fact, I believe we're already there. The throne speech celebrated the fact that Alberta is the most economically free jurisdiction in North America. It promised to make the most of what we have and demonstrates that this is a government which will never be complacent, a government absolutely committed to improve on what we have built. There is a recognition on this side of the House that it is our investment in the ingenuity, creativity, and intellectual wealth of our citizens which will propel our province to its next plateau.

Our resources do not define us. Our geography does not define us. Our institutions do not define us. Our Alberta is, has been, and will always be defined by our people. We must continually invest and reinvest in our people to ensure that we are able to make the most of the opportunities which we currently enjoy.

Albertans are fundamentally entrepreneurial and have been since the first ranchers settled here, since the first rig was built, since the first store opened on Perron Street in St. Albert. Albertans know the concept of return on investment. They are bold but prudent investors. An investment today in our youth, in our entrepreneurial class, and in our innovators is such a vital component of our public investment portfolio. The return will sustain many generations.

Madam Speaker, my team and I work every day to further those freedoms so business, especially small business, can continue to drive our province's prosperity because the role of small business in Alberta's economy cannot be understated. Alberta has one of the highest numbers of small businesses in the country on a per capita basis, composing 96 per cent of all business in Alberta and providing more than a third of the private-sector employment in the province. That's why our government is committed to ensuring they have access to the supports they need. Madam

Speaker, there are so many services out there for small businesses; they just need to know how to find them. So we're creating an environment that does just that. We want to point small business in the right direction, connect them with the services and expertise they need, whether they're offered by our government or within the community, and then get out of their way so they can do what they do best.

Madam Speaker, the throne speech also stated that our government will partner with industry on research and development through a second Alberta Oil Sands Technology and Research Authority, which has been referred to as AOSTRA 2, to maintain a competitive world-class economy for the 21st century, to grow the marketplace for clean energy, and to protect the jobs so many Albertans depend on. AOSTRA 2 will do more than perpetuate Premier Lougheed's vision of financial security for Alberta. It will build on his vision, Premier Redford's expansion of it.

While Alberta's resource-based economy may be dominated by the hydrocarbon energy sector, we know that other important and promising sectors have much to contribute to Alberta's energy future: forestry, agriculture, construction, machinery, petrochemical manufacturing, and the technology sectors.

As a result, AOSTRA 2 will couple an economic vision with the principles of sustainability. AOSTRA 2 will also strengthen Alberta's position as Premier Redford leads us looking outwards in building bridges with the international community.

While the vision of AOSTRA 2 may be ambitious, I know we can turn that vision into reality. I know that for a fact, Madam Speaker, because I've spent the summer meeting with and, more importantly, learning from the incredibly talented and intelligent and motivated people within Alberta's postsecondary institutions, within industry, within the business community, within my ministry itself, and, of course, within the best constituency in the province of Alberta, in my humble opinion, St. Albert. These people have been invaluable, and I have learned the craft. Thanks to them I'm ready to take the task before us with the same enthusiasm and commitment as our stakeholders.

Rising to move acceptance of the Speech from the Throne, I can't help but think of all the good that has been done here for the people of this great province, the historical, lasting, society-changing contributions which have been made by our predecessors in these chairs from both sides of the aisle. Our predecessors have created high expectations for us, and those of us in the Chamber should have high expectations of each other.

Some of those expectations have been outlined for us in the throne speech. At the core of the speech is recognition of our good fortune. We are the most blessed of the provinces in this wonderful country. We have in abundance the most valuable of natural resources. We have a growing human capital base, which is among the most highly educated and technically expert in the world. Our education system and our health care system and all of our public institutions are not beyond scrutiny. We can never rest in our quest for excellence. However, our public institutions are envied by countries around the world. Our entrepreneurial class is world competitive. In short, we have the tools to build a great modern society. We can do better, we must always strive to do better, but never has a province been given such resources to employ in the cause of improvement.

Yes, we're going to meet some challenges along the way. Having served as a cabinet minister yourself, Madam Speaker, you know that's part of the job. When those challenges come up, I look forward to the privilege and honour of addressing those challenges with my colleagues in the House. I'm looking forward to sharing this adventure with all of those currently in this Chamber and walking confidently down the road which has been laid out in the throne speech. It is the right path. It will lead us to a better place. As we work together to refine and achieve the objectives identified, I hope we all remember that we are the voice for all. We are the audience for all. We are servants all. We are leaders all. I believe we walk this path with the intent and hope that all Albertan families, too, can exceed their wildest dreams.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister. It was very reassuring to hear that the Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education has a strong belief in Alberta's entrepreneurs. Once again, another informative and inspirational speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) kicks in. Anybody who wishes to comment or question now has the opportunity.

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next response to the throne speech. The Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise with some enthusiasm to make some comments on the throne speech. Now, I guess it's been five months or so since we actually were here before to listen to the throne speech, so I think it's important to review some of the elements that were in that speech and to talk about those intervening five months, I think, and, more importantly, as well about where we spent time in our constituencies and looked and listened to our constituents and found out what were the most pressing concerns and issues for themselves and for their families.

What I saw and have heard when I was travelling around Alberta this summer was not unlike what we had been seeing previously in the province of Alberta, not just in Edmonton-Calder but right across the province. First and foremost, what I saw and heard were concerns and issues around our public health care system. Quality public health care doesn't just provide us with the emergency needs that we might encounter in a hospital or at a doctor's office, but it also provides us with a sense of security to know that that public system is there when we need it for ourselves and for our families. Over the last number of years we have seen that security or that sense of security be compromised by a continuous sense of upheaval and continuous revolution, I would say, of how our public system is being delivered here in the province. We heard this during the election as well. I think what we heard from health care workers especially, who actually deliver public health, is that they were looking for some sense of a pause in this tumultuous change of administration and so forth that they have been undergoing over the last four years.

I just put that forward first and foremost as a caution because we heard just this morning that there is another change in the works in terms of decision-making and responsibility in our public health system. While we might welcome some aspects of more local control of how decisions are made to deliver public health in our province, I think we need to be conscious of just how much tumult and confusion and chaos those same health care workers and the public have dealt with over the last four years and to go forward in a reasonable and measured sort of way so that we don't end up with the chaos that we had to live with over the last four years.

Second, I heard quite loudly and clearly about the need to address utility costs here in the province of Alberta. Delivering affordable electricity I think is part of our public purview here in the Legislature, and it's very important that we get that right because at this point, again, that sense of security and stability to know what our electricity and power bill is going to be from month to month has been pulled out from underneath us here in this province. We've seen tremendous fluctuations, from the brownouts that we saw in June to the high bills that are coming into our mailboxes here in the late fall, going into winter. The absolute necessity for us to re-regulate and govern those electricity rates through this Legislature I think has never been more clear than we see it here today, in 2012.

It's not as though we're dealing with a commodity that's the same as other things that we might buy and sell in the marketplace. I'm as much of a fan of the marketplace as any person when we're dealing with things that might benefit from competitive markets. But with electricity, number one, it's an essential service, that we just can't do without. I think there's hardly anyone that is not using electricity in quite a profound way in their daily lives, and it's just part of our lives here in a modern industrial society. To suggest that it can be left open to the vagaries of an open market I think is just not appropriate at this time in our province's history. The market is not there as a free market anyway. There are only a few players. At the end of the day lots of Albertans end up paying much more than they can afford for this essential service.

Third, I heard quite strongly and clearly as the Education critic just the importance of strengthening our public education system across the province of Alberta. As a teacher of long standing and with my own children going through the public education system, I recognize the value and the quality of the education system that we do have in the province. I can say without bias that over these last 20 years or so the public educators have become just that much more professional and interested, and they deliver a strong pedagogical system when they are teaching our children in our public schools, so hats off to them.

We are here again to support public education delivery in the best way possible through legislation. Here we are again with Bill 3, the Education Act, appropriately named, and I certainly will commit to trying to make sure that we do get the best possible new Education Act out of this legislation. We only get to do this once in maybe 20 or 30 years, however, so let's make sure that we do it right, that all aspects of Bill 3 are looked after in a fair and impartial way so that we get a new Education Act that we can all be proud of.

It was just delivered to our tables here today. I spoke on it today, and there are a couple of areas that we need to address, certainly, before we can pass this in good conscience. In dealing with section 16 of this act, I think it is very important for all of us to ensure that we permeate this document with a sense of social justice and equality that extends to all Albertans and in the best way possible. So you will certainly be debating that, I hope, in a constructive and productive way over these next few weeks.

The issue about our environment and the interaction between our primary industry in the province of Alberta, which is oil and gas and energy production, and that balance between that and protecting our environment: again, these are themes that we all know and have heard over these last years and even decades, but now more than ever we have to take a long, sober look at whether or not we are in fact reducing the gap between sustainability and the accelerated production of our energy system in this province.

It's clear that the oil sands are becoming more and more of a driver of our economy, and we recognize the essential elements of how many people are employed in that industry and how much royalty it brings back to the public purse, to the public good in this province, and then, finally, how we are managing the oil sands resource for the future.

I think we have some serious decisions to make, and we will lay the groundwork for those decisions here in this House over the next coming years. I hope everyone takes the gravity of that situation seriously and looks past just being a cheerleader for whatever certain special interest they might be looking towards and looks for the common good that's best for all Albertans for now and for the future as well.

You know that there are two secrets that we can use to solve a lot of our problems locked in the oil sands and the oil sand industry. Number one, if we can build a capacity to increase our secondary processing of bitumen here in the province of Alberta, upgrading it to synthetic crude and other products, we know that that is a big job driver, a big producer of equity for our province, and helps to diversify our economy, too.

When we talk about raw bitumen exports, we can't let that other element of industrial development be passed by. If we're not building upgraders in the province of Alberta, someone else is getting that value-added upgrading capacity somewhere else and often in another country. I certainly will use my seat in the Legislature here – and I hope many of you will, too – to advocate to upgrade more bitumen, to upgrade it to other products here in the province of Alberta for the sake of all of us and our economy and our future.

It's interesting that with the recent passing of Peter Lougheed we all are reflecting on what this gentleman and his administration did during their tenure to build Alberta to the level of success that we enjoy here today. Certainly, I was a fan of the way that Peter Lougheed approached our energy wealth and developing that energy resource into wealth and equity for all Albertans.

I was reading an article written by Andrew Nikiforuk in The Tyee magazine a few weeks ago. I suggest that everyone take a look at it because it sort of goes back and outlines six basic concepts that Peter Lougheed used to help govern the choices he made when he was governing. We know many of these things, but it's worth while to go back and think about it. You might find it interesting to hear it from a New Democrat, but these are basic ideas that help to service the public good. That's why I'm here as a social democrat, to service the public good and to enhance it, and I think that these ideas help to augment that position.

First, Lougheed challenged Albertans to think like owners and to look at our natural resources as ours and not just something we sell off to industry. Unfortunately, we have had this concept compromised very seriously in this province over the last 30 years, and it seems as though it's very large international oil companies that are the presumptive owners of our energy resources rather than Albertans, which is the actual legal definition of who owns those resources.

Secondly, Mr. Lougheed told us that we need to collect our fair share from royalties. You know, being a member of the heritage trust fund committee, it became patently obvious to me and many other members that our contributions to the heritage trust fund went down in close proximity to how our royalty rates were going down as well. So as we collected less in royalties, we were less able to save in the heritage trust fund for the future, and we're all the poorer for it.

You know, I like to use the Norwegian example, that some people were having some problem with, but at the very least let's look and see just how much the Norwegians have saved in their heritage trust fund over the last number of years. It's in the range of $600 billion. One of the members of the heritage trust board told us that the interest from that much money would be enough to run the expenses of this province of Alberta on a year-by-year basis.

Madam Speaker, I'm so happy to be back speaking on the throne speech and, as I always say, as a humble public servant of my constituents in Edmonton-Calder but also of all people in Alberta. I look forward to working together with all of you to build constructive legislation that serves the common good. I've heard that theme a number of times here today. Let's put it to the test and ensure that everyone benefits equally in a just manner here in the province.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, for your thoughtful comments and your thoughtful response to the throne speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) for anyone who would like to ask a question or make a comment. The Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just a question, please. Going back to the member's comments about the Norwegian savings fund, I think it's the general pension fund. A couple of things I'd just like to ask about. First of all, that is an energy revenue fund that is made up of a lot of different components, including Norwegian pensions. I think it's important to point out that the fund that AIMCo manages on our behalf, including the pensions, is close to $70 billion. Based on the fact that the Norwegians have a 25 per cent value-added tax or sales tax, a 1 per cent asset tax, amongst the highest corporate income taxes in the world, my question to the member would be: in order for us to grow our heritage fund at a similar rate, would he support those taxes?

Mr. Eggen: Thank you. I did hear the hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park articulating this at our meeting as well, and I appreciate that. I'm only using the Norwegian example as an illustration of what you can do to save. I'm not suggesting that we become Norwegians although I am one and proud of it, third generation, but I am suggesting to just imagine the possibility of even having a fraction of that money in the bank.

We asked Leo de Bever – right? – to give us a sense of how much money we would need in the heritage trust fund so that we could run the whole operation off the interest. He said pretty much the number that was what the Norwegians had in the bank. So I found that to be serendipitous and, you know, insightful.

5:30

I'm not suggesting that we take the whole package of what the Norwegians have put in place, but certainly there is a strong sentiment in the province of Alberta right now to start saving long term using the heritage trust fund as Peter Lougheed, Progressive Conservative, had originally intended.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

We still have two minutes under 29(2)(a). Any other questions? The Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: I would like to ask the hon. member a question regarding the so-called heritage savings. Do you know how much the Norwegians have in the bank? What's their income tax rate? I understand my colleague has probably just asked that question.

Also, since 1966 how many tax dollars has Alberta sent to Ottawa?

Mr. Eggen: Well, I believe that the Norwegian trust fund, whatever they call it, is in the neighbourhood of $600 billion. They chose to structure it so that most of the royalty benefits they're getting from their oil and gas are going to that. It was more of a design to regulate the economy so that they were losing some of those vagaries of the boom-and-bust cycle that we see from a petroleum-based economy, right? I think we can learn something from that.

This whole issue about Norwegian taxes is completely misleading and irrelevant. I mean, I'm sure they pay taxes. I'm pretty sure that they, you know, have many benefits from that, too.

Once again, I'm suggesting there are other savings plans around the world, right? We don't have to be stuck on this one thing. There are lots of ways by which we can take best practices, using evidence-based reasoning to take those elements back here, and build something better for the future. I mean, I don't know, maybe I'm living in a different place from you, but you know that Albertans want to save for the future using the heritage trust fund right now. Anybody who doesn't think that, then, is missing the proverbial boat.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you for those questions and comments.

Now we'll hear the inaugural speech from the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just for the record I'm Irish, but I married a Norwegian.

Allow me, Madam Speaker, to congratulate you on being elected to your position and also to congratulate you and all our fellow members on their election to this Chamber. Many like me take our seats for the first time, and we've been united by our shared sense of awe at the responsibility that I think we are just starting to understand.

There are many returning MLAs to be thanked, many of whom have taken the time to answer my questions and all of whom have offered a warm welcome to newcomers in this Assembly. I'd especially like to thank colleagues on the all-party Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship for their support as we chart a new course in policy development, one that includes all points of view.

To the Premier: thank you for the opportunities you've created for me and for all Albertans through your leadership.

Sincere thanks are also due to my constituents in Calgary-Varsity, the people who sent me here. I'm inspired by their will for positive change and their enthusiasm about their role in democracy.

Finally, I extend heartfelt thanks to my husband, Laurie, and our sons Graydon, Mitchell, and Liam. There's a special place in heaven for mothers of three sons. They have given me faith and unwavering support. I hold them always in my heart.

The first time I entered this Chamber and every time since, I am acutely aware of and grateful for the diversity of this House. So many of us come from such different backgrounds. We come from different occupations. We were born in different parts of this province, this country, across the world. We represent different political philosophies, different cultural heritages, different age groups. It's right that we are so diverse because Alberta is also diverse and is becoming more so with every passing year.

The diversity in this House, the diversity in this province is also reflected in Calgary-Varsity, my home for the past 20 years. The median age of people living in Calgary-Varsity is over 60, making us one of the wisest in the province. Our seniors are vibrant. They are essential players in our complete community. What is even more remarkable is observing how these seniors live alongside the thousands of students who daily attend over 26 public, separate, charter, and private schools in our constituency and those who come from across the province and across the world to study or train at the University of Calgary, nearby SAIT, even Vecova.

Calgary-Varsity is now considered by many to be an inner-city constituency. That's a hard thing for long-timers to accept. We have four light rail transit stops within our boundaries and significant density now emerging along our transportation corridors, yet we are also cradled by Nose Hill park to the north, Bow River valley to the south, and the grandeur of the Rockies to the west. Many, including myself, have rural and farm roots.

Calgary-Varsity is a constituency recognized for its valuable contribution to the well-established business community in downtown Calgary. Ties to the energy sector are powerful, yet our innovation is not limited to oil and gas. We're an entrepreneurial community creative in emerging energy technology, in medical R and D, and in the arts.

This diversity is remarkable. It's a gift. Yet this diversity is not necessarily easy to navigate. It takes resolve and sometimes even courage to build the dialogue and coalitions needed across all lines, to first understand and then to bring together our creativity, our history, our education, our business acumen, our faith, our culture, and our vast resources.

My challenge as a representative of Calgary-Varsity is to engage all citizens in creating and operationalizing a shared vision of our community and our potential, one that must constantly change by connecting bottom up to top down, formal leadership to grassroots. Getting to this shared vision will require much dialogue and plain old hard work. We can't just sand down our differences. It's tough sometimes for us to live with disagreement, to transcend the divides between urban and natural, young and old, established and new. Sometimes we just have to hold ourselves in that very uncomfortable space to allow the tension, the creative suspension, the breathing space because it is in the tension that the as-yet-unimagined solutions lie.

This leads me to the excitement I feel for the potential of our all-party Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship. Together members of all four parties can reach out to Albertans, seek their input, and explore solutions on issues that matter. Yes, I expect there will be disagreements, but if we can stand together through the tensions, I believe we will find fresh solutions to big issues like how to find markets for oil and gas and how to build and maintain social licence to operate. I believe this is what Albertans expect. It is what Albertans deserve.

For nearly three decades now my work has afforded me the opportunity to work with diversity, connecting for-profit and not-for-profit organizations to grassroots realities in projects here in Alberta and around the world. As a lawyer and a businesswoman representing Canadian energy companies, I've been negotiating and managing projects with a wide variety of host governments and communities for the last 28 years. In the not-for-profit realm I founded a voluntary organization, Bridges Social Development, 10 years ago responding to an invitation from female and youth leaders in Yemen and First Nations communities here in Canada, training these local leaders who want to build their own capacity and lead their own change.

Now, in this newest chapter of my life, I'm humbled to be serving in government, honoured by this opportunity to work with you, Madam Speaker, and others here in ways that reflect the values of Albertans and the magnitude of the potential available to us. I am deeply grateful to be part of this government in this province at this time.

I'm the typical Calgarian. I was born into a farming community near Tillsonburg in southwestern Ontario – and, yes, my back still does ache when I hear that word – where my parents and siblings continue to farm. In my lifetime I have watched Ontario move from a have to a have-not province. Over the course of my career I have worked on projects in more than 35 countries, many of them emerging democracies in emerging markets. I know with absolute certainty that we are the envy of most of the rest of the world. What we have here in Alberta is precious. We are not entitled to this wealth. Many people have worked hard over the years to create the conditions for prosperity and a sound economy in Alberta, and we need to keep working hard, bringing this province's diversity to the table and never yielding to complacency.

What I offer you, Madam Speaker, and my colleagues on both sides of this Legislature is the same thing I offer to residents of Calgary-Varsity. I will listen to you, I will learn from you, and I will work hard with you to move Albertans' priorities forward.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, for that response. I believe from listening to you that you will be able to transcend the divide that you spoke of in your speech, of old and new and young and old. It's a pleasure to work with you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Anyone wishing to comment? The Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'd like to say that what has been presented by the Member for Calgary-Varsity has certainly been very inspirational. I was just wondering at this time if the hon. member could share with all of us here in the House a little bit more insight. She had mentioned that she's listening very carefully, and some of the highlights and attributes of her particular constituency are the diversity of people who live there, very common to other constituencies across the province of Alberta. I was wondering, since she had spent quite a bit of professional time and otherwise in the oil and gas sector, if from being elected to present day she had learned anything more about the expectations of her constituents regarding a focus on diversifying the economy in Alberta apart from the oil and gas sector.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you for that question. Madam Speaker, it's interesting. Having spent 28 years in the energy sector and being known for that and being quite outspoken about how Canadian companies can and should operate here in Canada and abroad, I now find myself in a very different situation, acting in an elected role. What I'm observing is an understanding from my constituents and from others that while we must diversify – and my children are under the age of 25. Do I expect them to do the same work I do? No. Nor do others. Yet there still is an acceptance that our province is a province rich in energy resources. That is where our expertise lies. I think, first and foremost, that while we talk about diversification, we still have to focus on diversification on the basis of our strengths, building on those strengths.

The conventional oil and gas that we worked in and I worked in at the beginning of my career is so different than what we have today, and I expect that 30 years from now it will be different again. We can export that knowledge to other parts of this country, continent, and the world, but I think the energy sector is still the basis of our uniqueness in this world.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other comments or questions under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next hon. member, the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'd like to start by taking this opportunity to congratulate you on your appointment. I'd also like to express my congratulations to all of those like myself who are newly elected to this Assembly. I also believe that it's important to recognize the former Member for the Lacombe-Ponoka constituency, Mr. Ray Prins, for his many years of public service. I wish him a long and enjoyable retirement.

Today it's my honour and privilege to stand and give my maiden speech in this Chamber. I'd like to thank the voters of Lacombe-Ponoka for their support and confidence. I am both honoured and humbled by their choice to elect me. As their representative I hope to be a strong voice for my constituents in this Alberta Legislature. With this opportunity I extend my sincerest gratitude to my friends, family, and volunteer team. Without their tireless effort and unwavering support I would not be here today.

Madam Speaker, I'd like to take a moment to introduce myself and the Lacombe-Ponoka constituency to my fellow colleagues here in the Legislature. I am proud to say that I am a born and raised Albertan who was brought up in the town of Whitecourt. What is it they say about Alberta beef? It's raised right.

As a child and a teenager I watched my parents build a thriving trucking business. Watching them taught me that hard work, perseverance, and integrity are the keys to building a better life. The stories of my grandparents reinforced this lesson. They told me of their trials and tribulations, how they overcame them and looked to build something better for themselves and for our family. These sentiments are no different than anyone else who came looking for a better life here in Alberta. This is our history as a people, a people who continually persevere and overcome.

My grandfather also told me that I wouldn't know who I was or where I was headed in life unless I understood where I came from. The same applies to governance. We must have a reverence of our history to understand where it is we're going to go in the future. Talking to Albertans, I have heard the same story told a number of times. It is this story of hard work and success from our ancestors that has given me an appreciation of what it is we have here in this province today.

You know, after graduation I began to read political history books, specifically the memoirs of Sir Winston Churchill. This reading opened my eyes to the power of politics as an agent of change. I find it ironic that at the same time I found political history, Canadian politics, Alberta politics, discovered me.

Being an MLA will be a new and challenging experience, though I must admit that politics is not. Over the past number of years I have been a loud advocate in federal politics, serving on the federal electoral riding association of Wetaskiwin and holding a number of key positions such as financial agent, policy director, and president. In addition to these efforts, I sat as a member of the Lacombe economic development board and helped found the Wildrose Lacombe-Ponoka Constituency Association in 2009. I sincerely appreciate the opportunity to use my talents and knowledge in the service of Lacombe-Ponoka. However, I must admit that my talents are heavily overshadowed by the achievements of the people in my constituency, both past and present.

The town of Lacombe was founded by Father Albert Lacombe, a French-Canadian missionary who is now remembered for brokering peace between the Cree and Blackfoot, negotiating the right-of-way for the Canadian Pacific Railway through Blackfoot territory, and securing a promise from the Blackfoot leader to refrain from joining the Northwest Rebellion in 1885. Alberta's Famous Five – Henrietta Muir Edwards, Nellie McClung, Louise McKinney, Emily Murphy, and Irene Parlby – also have deep roots in the Lacombe-Ponoka area.

Before Mrs. Parlby helped the five advocate for the rights of women at all levels of government, she made her home near Lacombe with a rancher she had wed after arriving here in Alberta. Mrs. Parlby was elected to the Alberta Legislature under the banner of the United Farmers of Alberta and pushed through 18 bills to improve the plight of women and children in our province. She was named as a cabinet minister without portfolio in 1921, becoming the second woman ever to hold a cabinet position in the whole of the British Empire. She became the president of the United Farm Women of Alberta and a staunch advocate for rural women in Alberta. It is because of the pioneering work of women like Mrs. Irene Parlby that we have reached this historic moment in Alberta where both the leader of the government and the Leader of the Official Opposition can be and are women.

The Rt. Hon. Roland Michener, the 20th Governor General of Canada, was also born in Lacombe. His distinguished career included appointments as high commissioner to India and Canada's first high commissioner to Nepal. Mr. Michener was also the first appointee to the Order of Canada as well as its first chancellor and principal companion. On top of this, he was also the second of only two people to be presented with the Royal Victorian chain, a personal gift of the monarch, awarded by Queen Elizabeth II.

It should be noted that the accomplishments of the people of Lacombe-Ponoka are not only found in the pages of history. Anna Maria Kaufmann, Germany's most popular soprano, hails from Lacombe. The opera singer's big break came as the female lead in The Phantom of the Opera, which she has performed more than 500 times. She has performed with operas and orchestras from around the world and has also used her talents to honour great sporting events such as singing the national anthem for a global audience of 1 billion people during the 2006 World Cup in Germany. She still has not forgotten her home. We have a cafe in the Lacombe Memorial Centre named in her honour.

Former MLA Jack Cookson from the Lacombe riding said it right when he stood up in this very Assembly and commented that "our ancestors, who really were responsible for developing Alberta and Canada, did not do so by merely sitting on their butts."

Aside from these great people, the riding of Lacombe-Ponoka has a long history of excellence in many fields. Two that I will highlight today are agriculture and health care. I am proud to say that our constituency is home to the Lacombe Research Centre, which is one of a network of 19 national agricultural research facilities operated by Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada. The centre conducts research in field crops and livestock production relevant to the central Alberta region. The centre's main research focus is on ante- and post-mortem factors that influence red meat: yield, quality, safety, and preservation. The centre also develops integrated sustainable crop and animal production systems as well as crop varieties for the short season environments of the parkland and northwestern Canadian regions. The Lacombe Research Centre holds the distinction of developing the very first breed of livestock developed in Canada, the Lacombe hog.

Even though the riding of Lacombe-Ponoka has been a leader in the field of agriculture, our constituents are right to be concerned about the future of this industry. As municipalities grow, both farmers and municipalities need to work in a co-operative fashion whereby the activities of one do not hinder the activities of the other. As the MLA for Lacombe-Ponoka I will advocate for farmers and ensure that local agriculture is not strangled by cumbersome and erroneous red tape.

While on the subject of agriculture, I would like to tell you all about the second largest rodeo in Canada. It has been mentioned by some to be Canada's best rodeo and an annual hallmark of the constituency. It's the Ponoka Stampede. Also in Ponoka I was privileged to attend the grand opening this summer of the Canadian Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame.

The Lacombe-Ponoka constituency is also home to a number of outstanding health care facilities such as the Centennial Centre for Mental Health and Brain Injury, the Northcott Care Centre, the Rimoka Housing Foundation, and the Halvar Jonson Centre for Brain Injury, a centre which was named in honour of another long-serving, great political leader from the Lacombe-Ponoka constituency.

The Centennial Centre for Mental Health and Brain Injury deserves further recognition as it is one of the most modern mental health referral centres in western Canada. The centre is also home to the Grant MacEwan University school of registered psychiatric nursing. It is a growing training centre for medical and applied professionals in the psychiatric, geriatric, and brain injury specialties.

I believe that we can all agree that citizens are the greatest resource this province has, and their greatest resource is their health. I am also quite certain that we can agree that when health care services are needed, they're needed today, not tomorrow. In the throne speech we were told that this government wants to give Albertans the tools and guidance they need to take charge of their health, but our current health care system is in desperate need of reform as Albertans continue to wait in bureaucratic queues and on long waiting lists. Like so many Albertans I have seen the pain of loved ones as they wait for service from our system. Albertans are hurting and dying on these long lists, and urgent changes are needed so that Albertans can take charge of their health today.

Our province is great, but there is a lot of work to make it even better. I believe in voter-driven democracy, and I look forward to helping my constituents. We must never forget that we are here on an ever-lengthening, ever-ascending, and ever-improving journey. While I campaigned, the message I shared with my constituents was: it's time your MLA was your voice in government. My conviction in this style of democracy shall remain and grow strong.

Madam Speaker, I'd like to thank you for the opportunity to address this Assembly. I look forward to the tasks at hand and the opportunity to hold this government to account.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. Your constituency was blessed with a number of great leaders, and you'll have the opportunity to show that you, too, can be a great community leader.

We have just a few minutes, but we can move to Standing Order 29(2)(a).

The Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Madam Speaker, I was going to move that we adjourn debate until 7:30 this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:58 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, October 23, 2012

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Good evening, everyone. Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 1

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Services for Persons with Disabilities.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you so much, Madam Speaker. It is an absolute honour to rise here tonight on behalf of the Premier and ask approval to introduce the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, for second reading this evening.

Madam Speaker, as first responders thousands of brave and committed men and women across the province rise to the challenge when Albertans need them most. If we ever need the services of firefighters, police officers, sheriffs, or paramedics, we always feel secure in the knowledge that they will be never more than a phone call away.

These men and women often do their work in the most difficult of circumstances. Throughout the day they can face challenges that are beyond our wildest imaginations. They walk into burning buildings without knowing if they will walk out. They open doors without knowing if there is someone on the other side that may harm them. They struggle heroically to keep hearts beating and lungs working without knowing if they will win the race to the hospital. All too often they are confronted with horrific situations that can leave them psychologically wounded and scarred.

Police officers, firefighters, paramedics: the way these brave men and women continue working to save and protect Albertans after experiencing horrific situations is a testament to their resilience. Sometimes what they witness and experience is just too much to bear, and it begins to negatively affect their work and their personal lives. As strong as these men and women are, sometimes they need resources and support to function effectively in their personal lives and at work.

In the past we have asked first responders to defend their need for support and their assertion that what they have experienced is making it difficult or impossible to continue doing their jobs. To date we have required proof that what they are experiencing is a result of the work that they do. That approach lacks both understanding and compassion, and that is why today we are moving the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act to second reading.

We are bringing forward legislation that provides presumptive posttraumatic stress disorder, or PTSD, coverage to over 27,000 first responders in Alberta. This legislation illustrates our understanding that experiencing trauma is a major component of a first responder's job. In fact, it's an expectation. It recognizes the reality of PTSD and the hardship and suffering it causes, Madam Speaker. In essence it is an acknowledgement that those who are psychologically injured providing help often need help themselves, and we are obligated to provide it.

As you know, a clear understanding of the severity of PTSD and its effects has emerged over the last decade, Madam Speaker. Posttraumatic stress disorder is an intense, emotional, and psychological response to a recent or past traumatic event that is life threatening, very disturbing, or stressful. The effects of PTSD are varied. It can involve reliving a traumatic event through nightmares or flashbacks, it can create emotional numbness as an internal defence mechanism, or it can result in continually being on edge or easily startled.

As with physical ailments and injuries experienced in the workplace, Madam Speaker, PTSD causes real hardships to those who are experiencing it as well as their loved ones. Unlike a physical injury, however, PTSD can emerge weeks, months, or even years after the traumatic incident occurred. Not all wounds are visible. First responders regularly experience devastating trauma. Putting the onus on these courageous men and women to pinpoint which traumatic incident triggered their PTSD is an unreasonable demand. Presumptive coverage through Bill 1 is about lifting this burden from their shoulders and solidifying their workers' compensation coverage.

Although we know more about the devastating consequences of PTSD than ever before and have more resources available to help those that are suffering, we still have the stigma to overcome. Our first responders are brave, but they are humble, and they are trained to put the health and safety of others before their own. They are often hesitant to come forward with PTSD claims and what that could mean to their reputation, to their career, or to their loved ones.

This legislation must reflect that we understand the plight of first responders who are being affected by their traumatic experiences. It must also illustrate that PTSD is not something to be looked down upon or to be hidden. It must also show that we accept that a trauma that was experienced years before can surface at any time, but most importantly, Madam Speaker, it must show that we understand and value the work that first responders do and clearly show that we are grateful for the services that they provide. We want to support first responders with PTSD in whatever way we can so that they can move forward with their lives in a positive and healthy way.

Madam Speaker, I am proud that Bill 1 will be the strongest legislation to address PTSD in Canada. In May the government of British Columbia passed Bill 14, recognizing that a worker is entitled to compensation for mental disorders brought upon by work-related stresses. However, our bill will be the first in Canada to provide presumptive PTSD coverage for first responders. That means that the burden of proof will not be shouldered by these men and women when they need help to overcome the trauma they've experienced as a regular part of their work.

The focus of Bill 1, Madam Speaker, on the first responders is not to deny that other careers can cause stress and trauma. There are many strong, hard-working Albertans that could experience trauma in the span of their career. That is why the Workers' Compensation Act in Alberta already allows and will continue to allow any worker in Alberta to apply for PTSD coverage. This government understands that traumatic situations could happen anywhere. However, these are not necessarily an everyday occurrence for most Albertans. It's not an expectation of their jobs.

The legislation we bring forward today is to say that we understand that for first responders – our firefighters, our police officers, our paramedics and EMTs, and our sheriffs – experiencing trauma is a major and expected part of their work. Bill 1 is reflective of this government's ongoing commitment to the brave men and women who put their lives on the line so that we can enjoy ours, Madam Speaker.

Thank you. At this time I'd like to move adjournment of second reading of Bill 1.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Debate adjourned October 23]

The Acting Speaker: May I ask the next person that would like to speak in response to the throne speech to stand and be recognized? The Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise today as the newly elected representative of Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. I am both humbled and privileged to serve and represent my constituents in this honourable Assembly.

I want to begin first by recognizing my predecessor, Mr. Ty Lund. Mr. Lund served in this Assembly for 23 years in multiple capacities. He served with dignity, honour, and integrity. His service to our constituency and to all Albertans is worthy of our commendation and praise.

Madam Speaker, I am a veteran. In a few weeks we will once again honour our veterans for the sacrifice they made in preserving our life and our freedoms. I served four years honourably, and I'm a disabled veteran. I also served as a police officer, and I served as a first responder for the Canadian Coast Guard off the coast of B.C. In 2001 I led a three-member Canadian team to the world championship in marine search and rescue. I've had the privilege to serve on the town council of Rimbey, and as I stated earlier, I'm honoured to be the MLA of my constituency. Being in service to others are not hollow words with me. It is fundamental to my character, and it is who I am.

As an MLA I bring to this Assembly a wide range of experiences. I have owned and operated small businesses, and I have taught fibre-optic engineering transmission for Bell Labs. I have tried out for two professional baseball teams, and I was a stockbroker, a commodities broker, a hedge fund manager, and a derivatives market specialist. In between all of that, I raised a family.

My goal is to apply all my life experiences in service to my constituents. The Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre constituency, my constituency, is a microcosm of this province. The constituency's northern boundary borders the community of Drayton Valley and extends all the way south of Sundre. The constituency's east boundary lies on the east shores of Gull Lake and extends all the way to the Icefields Parkway and the B.C. border. All in all there are 37 communities in my constituency if I count all the unincorporated communities and the summer villages.

Our constituency has a strong agricultural base, a vibrant logging industry, and we are blessed with an abundant amount of oil and gas development. In addition to these industries, we have a very large tourism industry. We are, indeed, a very diverse constituency.

That said, Madam Speaker, it is not our industries that make us special. It is the people who live in our communities, who make up our communities that make this a very special constituency. I have lived and worked in many places, but I've never lived in a place more diverse than the place I live in today, which is Rimbey. I currently live in Rimbey with my wife, Deborah, who is the minister of the United Church; my son, Thomas; and my daughter, Aylish.

I would like to take this opportunity now to thank my constituents for electing me as their Wildrose representative in this Assembly. These people in this constituency are fiercely independent. They're hard-working and honest to a fault. A handshake can still be a binding contract. These are great traits. It is important for me to note, Madam Speaker, that they did elect a Wildrose member to this Assembly. Among the many reasons for supporting the Wildrose party, my constituents have voted against what this government did to diminish property rights and democratic rights, and they voted in favour of a Wildrose government that would restore those rights. While some in the current government may actually deny this reality, the constituents of Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre do not.

When they read a law that states that the minister can make a regulation approving the dumping, deposit, or emission of any substance on an individual's land and the only right of appeal is to the minister who did it, when they read a law that says that the commissioner is not required to afford an opportunity to be represented by legal counsel, when they read a law that says that no person has a right to compensation by reason of this act or any regulation made thereunder, they don't need a lawyer to tell them what they've just read. They understand it. In fairness, I would like to point out that this government did try to remedy one of the aforementioned extracts that I just read, but it only attempted to do so in response to the large public outcry and only after repeated denials.

The sad fact is that an absolute right to be fairly and justly compensated when a capricious government decision, be it intentional or unintentional, deprives a property owner of a livelihood does not exist in law in Alberta. One of my goals as an MLA is to enshrine into legislation a property rights provision that would guarantee that individual landowners would be treated fairly and justly. Clearly, I have my work cut out for me. It was extremely disappointing that the throne speech did not mention property rights.

Madam Speaker, my constituency has a variety of urgent needs. The communities of Benalto, Eckville, and Bentley unselfishly support Sylvan Lake's desire in an attempt to secure an urgent care facility. Sylvan Lake is not in my constituency, but such a facility has regional implications. It can provide relief to the urgent care resources in Red Deer. Most importantly, it can save lives in Sylvan Lake, in those surrounding communities.

The community of Sundre is at risk of being flooded by the Red Deer River. This local issue will require considerable political will. I encourage this government to adopt a permanent solution for the citizens and the community of Sundre. They deserve nothing less.

The community of Eckville is in desperate need of doctors. The community of Rocky Mountain House is still waiting for a hospital after being told years ago they were on the top of priorities to get a new hospital. It still hasn't happened.

The community of Rimbey is in desperate need of a new seniors' lodge. The existing lodge was first constructed in the '60s. The lodge has no fire suppression system. The roof needs major overhauls. The lodge kitchen is too small and substandard.

As a result, refrigerators have to be located out in hallways, and food is stored elsewhere in the building. There's just no room.

With regard to the safety of the seniors in that lodge, in one wing of that facility the emergency responders cannot get a gurney down the hallway. Several rooms are too small. The hallways are too small for gurneys to be taken down. Volunteer firefighters must be dispatched on every emergency call to carry a senior out of their room to a waiting gurney. Transferring fragile and distressed seniors in this fashion is both unacceptable and dangerous. The Minister of Municipal Affairs is aware of this issue, and I want to thank him for his support and encourage his office to act swiftly to resolve this concern. Our seniors deserve expediency.

Our infrastructure needs are significant. I was disappointed the throne speech was silent on the topic of setting long-term infrastructure priorities and goals. The citizens of our constituency and Albertans as a whole deserve to know when they can expect infrastructure investments.

One of Alberta's greatest natural resources actually lies in my constituency. We call this resource the west country. The communities of Rocky Mountain House, Sundre, and Caroline and our First Nation communities are the gateway to the west country. On any given weekend the west country may see as many as 60,000 Albertans venturing out into the backcountry to enjoy the parks, trails, and rivers. The need for policing and the need for enforcement of Alberta's wildlife rules and regulations is of paramount concern. These resources are lacking. Law enforcement can take as much as 90 minutes or more to respond to an emergency call. It is my hope that we can correct these shortcomings.

Madam Speaker, as I just stated, the west country is one of Alberta's most valuable resources, and it is being stressed by many competing interests, some man-made, some natural. As the Wildrose MLA representing this region of Alberta, I can assure this Assembly and all Albertans and state categorically that climate change is real and undeniable. One only needs to travel to the Icefields Parkway and witness how far the glaciers have receded over the years to examine the evidence.

This world we live in now has a population of about 7 billion people, and Alberta is creeping ever closer to a population of 4 million people. We also have a huge functioning industrial complex. The Wildrose knows that mankind has a significant impact on the environment. What concerns the Wildrose the most is: what are we doing as citizens, communities, and government to reduce our environmental footprint? Successful, well-thought-out efforts to reduce our environmental footprint are good for our quality of life. It's smart business for our thriving industries. It is the right thing to do for our future generations.

The last subject I would like to address, Madam Speaker, is electricity. Electricity has been problematic for this PC government ever since it deregulated. Although many of the rules and regulations pertinent to deregulation were never applied until much later, the real problem with Alberta's electricity market still exists, and it's twofold. The market pricing system for the wholesale electricity market is fundamentally flawed. The AESO developed a very simple pricing system for the wholesale market that always guarantees that industry will be paid the highest price for the lowest cost electricity. This does not serve Albertans. Alberta's electricity market has harmed hard-working Albertans, our seniors, our small-business owners, and our low-income citizens. It's unjust, and it's not working. I call upon the Minister of Energy to release the Retail Market Review Committee's findings so we can get down to implementing solutions now, not later.

Complicating matters further, Alberta's electricity market has been corrupted due to political meddling in the electricity transmission system. With the greatest respect, Madam Speaker, there is no other way to describe Alberta's transmission system. This government has legislated five transmission line projects that are not needed and approved a transmission system upgrade that has costs spiralling out of control. The projected cost of the $16.6 billion proposal is now on track to more than double. We are building transmission lines that Albertans don't need, and we are not building the transmission lines that Albertans need. This government has approved two HVDC transmission lines at an added cost of $2 billion just for the pleasure of using DC technology, only to convert that technology back to AC so we can use it. It just doesn't make sense. Had we just proposed AC transmission lines, it would have saved taxpayers $2 billion. Imagine what that could have done for education or health care.

Incredibly, there are no cost controls in place, and as a result, the cost to build the transmission line in Alberta is double what it costs to build a transmission line in any other jurisdiction. There's no rational explanation for these outrageous costs. I hope some of the responsible fiscal conservatives across the aisle took notice of what I just said.

Madam Speaker, Alberta needs a robust, efficient, reliable electricity system. The proper way to design such a system is through a public vetting process that requires a cost-benefit analysis so that the most efficient and economical solution can be approved in the public interest. After all, it is the public that pays.

I thank you, Madam Speaker, and I congratulate you on your appointment.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. I do agree with you that the west country is a very valuable resource.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies. Anyone wishing to ask any questions or to comment to the hon. member can do so now. The Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'd just like to ask the member – I had the opportunity to attend one of the presentations that he gave on the subject that he just spoke about, the electricity transmission lines and so forth, prior to him being elected. I know that he went all over the province to do that with Mr. Keith Wilson as well. I just wonder if he could tell us a little bit about that experience and what he heard and if it had an effect of pushing him into running for office.

Mr. Anglin: I wasn't expecting anybody to question me on electricity, but I will tell the Assembly this – some of you know; I've been into your ridings – I got involved in this situation only because I was a neighbour of individuals who were losing their homes to electricity transmission lines, and it made no sense to me that they would lose their home. When I got in and I dug into this, what I discovered was how corrupt the process had gotten. We have a lot of new PC MLAs here today who may not understand this, but this has a long history to it, and it needs to be corrected.

We may have started on the first step today, but I will tell you this: I still travel around and talk about electricity, and I show up with all of the evidence. I show up with AESO's documents, AltaLink's documents, ATCO's documents, and the EUB documents. I show people what's gone wrong. I show people how this thing has taken on a life of its own and that what we're doing is absolutely, fundamentally wrong.

I have to tell you that it has a lot of bearing on how I ended up running because in this process I had six private investigators tap my phones during an EUB process, and no one in government was ever held accountable. That was my decision to run for the Wildrose. If you allow government agencies to tap the phones of citizens and not be held accountable, that is a threat to democracy, and that's reality.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We still have two and a half minutes. Are there any other members on 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you for that very impassioned speech. I know this isn't your first time running for provincial office. As a former leader of the Green Party I appreciate your comments on carbon and the fact that it is real. The fact is that its challenges are ever embracing. I'm wondering with your former background and where you are now, I guess, what you – we have a carbon levy. It's at $15 a tonne. It's based on intensity targets. What are your feelings on this? Are your feelings that it should be more robust? Should it be on actual emissions as they come out of our industries? What's your take on this given your background, or has this changed?

Mr. Anglin: Madam Speaker, actually, I've never changed on this. I fought with the Green Party, who were in favour of a carbon tax, over this very issue. I am not in favour of a carbon tax and never have been, and I still would oppose one.

I think the solution is to reduce carbon emissions. I think that's the key. We are an extremely wealthy province, and we actually have the ability to do that. We just need the political will to carry that out. I sat down with the hon. Minister of Energy and explained this, and I think he listened. I'm going to be taking this up in committee because there are some real solutions here as long as people are willing to be open minded. We can do some things as a province that can actually show the world not only that what we do is good; we can be the leader in the world. I actually believe this.

I'll say one thing. Somebody on the other side just mentioned that I had no proof that someone tapped my telephones. I carry that proof with me. I have it.

The Acting Speaker: We have 45 seconds left on 29(2)(a). Anyone else like to ask a question?

Seeing no one, I would ask the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky to give his response to the throne speech.

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm honoured to rise today on behalf of my constituents of Grande Prairie-Smoky. We are so blessed in the north with opportunity and growth and prosperity. This government recognizes that generations of Albertans have worked to create the many advantages we enjoy today.

Madam Speaker, I was first elected to Grande Prairie county council in 1992 and for the last 10 years served as reeve until my recent election. Through the years I served, we saw many changes to Alberta, which have allowed growth in all sectors of our economy. We are blessed in the north with all four pillars, including agriculture, forestry, energy, and tourism.

The constituency of Grande Prairie-Smoky includes the city of Grande Prairie, the towns of Sexsmith, Valleyview, Fox Creek, as well as many rural municipalities. Overall it is one of the fastest growing areas in the province. In fact, the last census confirmed a population increase of 16 and a half per cent in the city of Grande Prairie and 13 and a half per cent in the county.

As well, the city of Grande Prairie was recently named the most entrepreneurial city in Canada. As such, I understand the importance of effective planning and wise spending. This is why I was excited to hear about our government's long-term plan to further attract business and investment. I've been involved with issues dealing with economic development in my constituency, so I know first-hand the significance of decisions by our hon. Premier. This government's commitment to simplify regulatory burdens will continue to make Alberta the most attractive place for businesses and help advance our knowledge-based economy.

Madam Speaker, efficiency and responsibility are also themes that I often hear at the doors of my constituents, and I'm sure these are echoed across our province. This is why I'm optimistic about the implementation of results-based budgeting by our Premier. Program budgets will be scrutinized every three years and publicly reported so that everyone can see how their tax dollars are being invested. The future prosperity and quality of life in this province will depend on this type of innovative thinking and will ensure that Alberta will maintain a strong fiscal position in North America.

With more young families moving to the Grande Prairie-Smoky region, Madam Speaker, it is also exciting to hear the Premier's focus on investing in families and communities. The growth of the population of the Grande Prairie region will require the maintenance and building of many schools. This was certainly one of the major issues I heard as I travelled the province meeting with families throughout the summer. The education of our youth is the basis of our continued success, and constituents of Grande Prairie-Smoky recognize the importance of our strong education system.

I am also excited, Madam Speaker, about the way our government is moving forward with respect to health care. The commitment to build family care clinics will help supplement the high volumes in anticipated new hospitals in Grande Prairie that will be opened in 2015. Through the use of multidisciplinary teams of health care professionals at the front lines of care the citizens of the Grande Prairie region and all Albertans will have more treatment options with less waiting. Alberta expects a health care system that will respond to the needs of community and maximize the use of resources available.

As I mentioned previously, I have been involved in municipal politics for the past 20 years in an area that has experienced significant population growth. I have dealt with the challenges that often arise in regions as the region attracts more people, and I can honestly say that our Premier understands these challenges and possesses values needed to overcome the obstacles. This understanding is also true when it comes to Alberta's energy sector.

As a third-generation farmer I have always had a deep love and respect for our environment. Madam Speaker, my grandfather arrived in this province over 100 years ago. He was one of the first 100 people to walk the Edson Trail into the Grande Prairie region, where he homesteaded. My family continues to own and farm this homestead. Agriculture, therefore, is not only a part of Alberta's rich history but also a significant part of my family's history. With the support of my wife, Tina, and our four children, and two grandchildren, I look forward to serving the people of Alberta in our noble cause.

The economic success of this province and the quality of life of the people are intertwined with the preservation of our environment, everything from farming the land, enjoying outdoor activities, and breathing our clean air. We owe it to our future generations to preserve Alberta's environment and natural beauty.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member, for your comments, your response to the throne speech. I didn't realize that Grande Prairie is growing so fast.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies if anybody would like to ask any questions or make any comments.

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next response to the throne speech. I would ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to present his response to the throne speech.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's an honour and privilege to be back in the Legislature and respond to the throne speech given on May 24, 2012, shortly after the last election. Going back, we had about three successive throne speeches. We had one when the hon. Premier ascended to her position, then we had one on February 7, 2012, and then the aforementioned one on May 24, 2012. I must say the highlight of these three throne speeches for me was actually the February 7, 2012, one. That, to me, in comparison to the one on May 24, 2012, had a much clearer direction, a much greater sense of some of the perils facing Alberta, some of the significant challenges that I believed at that time this Premier was willing to take on.

If I just can respond to some of the things that were involved in that throne speech on that date in comparison to the one that recently came out, it says:

Four decades ago our province was just beginning to find its place in an uncertain, fast changing world. New and untested opportunities glimmered on the horizon, and Alberta's government in 1971 resolved to make the most of them, promising to build a society that is not inferior to that in any province or state in North America. It succeeded magnificently.

It goes on later in that throne speech, and I'll quote again:

Now, two generations on, Alberta faces fresh challenges. Long-established ways are being called into question, and comfortable assumptions are being examined anew while Albertans [find] themselves . . . growing older.

I must attest I didn't write that speech, but it seemed to suggest to me anyway that there's a recognition that although the Tory party has been in power for 41 years, there have been different machinations and makeups and markups of what that party has stood for. There was the Lougheed generation from '71 to '85, which in my view did some very good things, very proactive things. They started the Alberta Energy Company. They started the heritage savings trust fund under a recognition that all of the fossil fuel wealth should not be spent in one generation and that one time Alberta will run out of oil and gas or the world will move on. Those truths, I believe, are still evident today and are still worth tackling. That's what I believe it was suggesting in that throne speech of that date.

But since that time, when I saw a Premier who was seemingly harkening back to those days of 1971, the robust leadership under Peter Lougheed, I've seen a walking away from some of that rhetoric, some of the big challenges that are out there: one, our fiscal structure; and two, our energy industry. To be honest here, everything flows from our fiscal structure. If we don't deal with that issue, it's all just smoke and mirrors. We're not dealing with the nub of what's going to set this province up for the long term.

Since 1985 we've had different machinations of Tory governments, governments which I think in essence set up a fiscal structure that was designed not to save, that was designed to spend all the petroleum wealth in one generation. That was the Klein government, and the Stelmach government proceeded on that. The evidence is clear that that's what happened because we're here in this day and age in – what's the date today, guys?

Some Hon. Members: October 23.

Mr. Hehr: Yeah. There we go. On October 23, 2012, that has played out, those two scenarios. A letter in the Calgary Herald actually brought that to me when we were harking back at the sad passing of Premier Lougheed, that this is no longer a province of Peter Lougheed. This is now a province that has been set up under the Getty, Klein, and Stelmach eras. To return to that, there has to be some heavy lifting. You can't just talk about it. You have to do some things, okay?

Let's just talk about that fiscal structure as it stands here today. Right now Alberta takes in approximately $11 billion, $12 billion in petroleum resource wealth a year. We spend it all. We spend it all on services that we use, going to school, building roads, hospitals, education facilities: all good stuff. I'm not going to argue with that. There has been a fiscal structure set up that takes this one-time gift from the heavens above, a barrel of oil, and turns it into something we spend right now. We all know, Madam Speaker, that once you sell a barrel of oil, you never have that barrel of oil to sell again. We're not converting this into a long-term investment that Albertans can use long after we're out of this Legislature, long after we're gone, when people who remain in this province may be able to take part in using some of this largesse.

I come from the school of thought that we do not have the right to spend all of this oil wealth in one generation. We have an obligation to see the tea leaves as they present themselves. One, we're going to run out of oil and gas, probably not for a long time, but two, the world could move on. That could be in 50 or 60 years. To really deal with that, there has to be a recognition that our fiscal structure is broken.

The clearest comparison to this: we're the lowest tax jurisdiction by a country mile, okay? A country mile. If we Albertans even adopted the B.C. tax code, the second lowest tax jurisdiction of all the provinces, we'd bring in $12 billion more in revenue a year. Is it a secret what we're doing here? No, it's not. We're just simply taking the easy way out. We're saying: "No. We don't recognize this as being something to save for the future. No. We recognize this as something we're free to use and let future generations deal with it themselves."

If you believe tourism and farming are going to carry the day after oil and gas is gone – I'm not one of those people who believes that. If we stay on this course, essentially what this government is saying is: "By golly, let's have a good time now. Let's keep taxes low. Let's build all these roads and hospitals and schools, and let's look like heroes doing it because we're not going to make anyone pay for it." Okay? That, to me, is fundamentally wrong. There has to be a recognition that there is going to be a day in this province where things are not going to be better than they are today. We're in the best business at the best time. The oil and gas industry is extremely profitable, and the Alberta people should be able to save something from being in the most profitable business this world has ever seen.

We have 25 per cent of the world's oil resources. If we can't figure out how to save something for the future, well, my goodness, we're not trying very hard. We don't have to look further than Norway, where as a society they have said that this is a one-time resource. They as a society have said: "No. We will pay as we go. We will pay what we need to to ensure the poor, the sick, the disabled, the elderly are taken care of. That's our onus. That's our onus as a society. We will pay for it out of the revenues we bring in out of our taxes and go forth from there." Is that an easy argument to have with the electorate? No. Is it one worth having? Yes.

You know what else? I guess there's another option you can do. Whack the budget by six or 12 billion dollars. Don't monkey around. Take that to the electorate. Say: "No. You guys want low taxes? Great. You're going to get them, but you're not going to get this. You're not going to get that. You're not going to get a road from Fort McMurray paid for by some bonds, again a future generation paying for it. No. This is what you get. These are the taxes you want to pay." And that is a fair proposition as well because that actually will recognize some savings. I don't think it'll be enough, and I don't think the electorate will stand for it. Nevertheless, that is at least a fair proposition for you guys to take to it. Right now this is simply taking the easy way out.

I think there has to be a recognition, and this throne speech seemingly recognizes it. Back to the throne speech that we had on February 7. At that time the hon. Premier said: we are going to look at all revenue sources. If that's too cryptic for you, that's taxation. In fact, I'm friendly with many people in the member's offices. I'm friendly with many people in your party because you're reasonable people, okay? In fact, the thinking at that time was that this is baked into the cake. This is an understanding that taxation in this fiscal structure was broken. I don't think that's changed.

What has just happened is an election. What I see is a government who, four years away from election, is already thinking about the next election, is not willing to do what they think is right. That is saddening, disheartening not only to me but to what we leave behind, for I think the lasting legacy of the last 42 years, or how we're going to be judged, is what we leave behind when it's all said and done, when the oil and gas is gone. I think we as a society, we as this government should set a societal goal. We can save a trillion dollars in the next 60 years to set us up in perpetuity. That's with watching our fiscal side as well as a recognition of the fact that eventually things are going to run out. Is it going to be easy? No.

I tell you what. What's so hard about raising taxes and looking at a taxpayer and saying, "You want to take it in the ear worse somewhere else"? Really, what's the matter with getting up a press conference. "Yeah. We're not going to be the lowest tax jurisdiction by a country mile, but guess what? If you want to move somewhere else, if you want to move your business somewhere else, you're going to take it in the ear worse." That seems like a pretty easy message to sell and go from there. It's really not that hard. Yeah, there'll be some bad days in the paper. Mr. Gunter at the Sun will get all angry and all that stuff there, but you already know that, so do what's right.

I didn't know all this about our fiscal structure when I first came in here. I thought the prosperity would be forever. I encourage people on the government side and on this side to actually investigate what our revenue streams are. You talk to people who sit on Treasury Board. You talk to people who have formerly served in that capacity. They know the issue. Everyone knows the issue. The issue is political will.

A person whom I applaud very much on that side of the House, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, actually ran in the PC leadership and openly talked about the fiscal structure, openly went into debates and said: guys, this ain't good for our long-term prosperity. Have a conversation with him. I think the hon. Premier knows it. I think everyone knows it over there. They're just unwilling to do something. I think you can do it, and I think you'd be abrogating responsibility for good government by not doing it.

Another idea I have is regarding our oil and gas industry. I thought Lougheed had a great idea with the Alberta Energy Company. Ask yourselves: why is every national oil company in the world here? Pretty easy. You pay royalties, and you make money. I understand. Royalties have to be one thing. There has to be a profit margin in there. But are all these other nations smarter than us that they say, "Jeepers; we'll come to Alberta, make a piss-pot of money, and send it back home to our citizens to enjoy better services"? Like, really. It's not that hard. There are reasons why they are here to make money. If they can make money, why can't we? Something to add to that pot of resources we have when those two things happen: one, we run out of oil and gas, or two, the world moves on. And the world could move on sooner rather than later. All this other stuff we talk about, the little things we do on health care and the stuff we do on education, by all means, that is important – okay? – but you're not going to make it sustainable and predictable for the long run unless you do one of those two things.

Anyway, I'm often wrong, never without an opinion, but thank you very much for allowing me to have my time here today, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, for that spirited response to the throne speech.

Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) is there anybody who would like to ask a question or comment from the Member for Calgary-Buffalo? The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Hon. member, can you expand on that often wrong part?

Mr. Hehr: Actually, I used to watch PBS television in the '90s. There was an investment show, and often investment prognosticators are wrong, okay? They do the best with the information they have and go forth from there. It's a 60-40 business we're in. You know, I've said that if you're right 60 per cent of the time, I think you're doing pretty good. We have to deal with the best information available to us.

But I think that in the main the best information available to me at this time is that our fiscal structure with what we're currently doing is broken. One only needs to look at the past 41 years to see that. We have spent $350 billion in petroleum revenues and managed to save $16 billion. Hey, I've stolen you guys' crib notes. The heritage trust fund is worth less than it was in 1976. That's a truism, okay? Unless something is done, really, we're just destined to keep on going through this thing, and we'll never get ahead.

That's where I got it from, so there we go.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other members that would like to ask a question or comment through Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we'll go to our next response to the throne speech. I recognize the hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Mr. Lemke: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It is an honour to rise tonight to respond to the Speech from the Throne. I begin by thanking His Honour the Lieutenant Governor Donald Ethell for delivering a clear and well-articulated plan on behalf of the government of Alberta. I have great confidence that the government under the leadership of the hon. Premier will continue to ensure the long-term prosperity that has made Alberta one of the most affluent jurisdictions in the world.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to acknowledge the tireless work of my predecessors. Our constituency has a proud history dating back to 1905. Stony Plain has the distinction of being one of the original 25 constituencies created along with the province in 1905. It is one of the few original constituency names in continuous use since then. From John McPherson, our first MLA, through to myself, we have had 14 MLAs. I would like to take a minute to recognize Mrs. Cornelia Wood, who until recently was the longest serving woman in the Legislature. She served first from 1940 to 1955. Of course, our very own Pearl Calahasen now has that distinction.

Since 1967 Ralph Jespersen, Bill Purdy, Jim Heron, Stan Woloshyn, and Fred Lindsay have served the people of Stony Plain and are still all active members of our community. I would like to acknowledge Fred Lindsay, who served two terms in this Assembly. He brought his knowledge of the energy sector and policing to his role as a member of cabinet and an MLA, and he left a positive mark on his community and this House.

Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the people of the constituency of Stony Plain for the confidence and trust that they have bestowed upon me. I am honoured and humbled to be representing them in the 28th Legislature of the Alberta Legislative Assembly. I do not take this responsibility lightly. It is a privilege to serve as a democratically elected official.

Clearly, the people of my constituency expect and deserve open, honest, and transparent government. A Member of this Legislative Assembly must remember that they have been given a mandate from the people. They expect me to actively and openly represent their concerns and perspectives to the government. I intend to do that to the best of my abilities and as vociferously as necessary.

What a wonderful constituency it is that I represent, Madam Speaker. We're a vibrant riding of 40,000 industrious people employed in fields as diverse as health care, education, manufacturing, mining, oil and gas. In addition to including its namesake, Stony Plain, my constituency stretches 80 kilometres west of Edmonton and south from highway 16A to the North Saskatchewan River. It encompasses Parkland county and villages like Wabamun, Spring Lake, Duffield, Seba Beach, and Tomahawk along with the Paul First Nation and the Enoch Cree Nation.

The constituency is largely made up of Parkland county. Therefore, much of it is rural and agricultural. One of the most notable attractions in the area is the University of Alberta Devonian gardens. This biodiverse 190-acre property is the most northern botanic garden in Canada. The display gardens, natural areas, and ecological preserves are for public education, enjoyment, and research. Many people in the capital region have had the pleasure of spending the day in the gardens or booking the facilities to celebrate events.

Madam Speaker, Wabamun Lake is one of the many lakes located in my constituency. This popular body of water houses the Wabamun Sailing Club and is well known to water sport enthusiasts around this province.

Lake Wabamun is also the site of much of Alberta's electrical generation, with the Sundance and Keephills power plants. Many Albertans were familiar with the Wabamun generating station, a recognizable landmark that has recently been decommissioned and demolished. However, unit 3 of the Keephills power plant, which began operations in 2011, has replaced it as a major supplier of electricity and employment. This large clean coal fired generation unit is one of the most technologically advanced in the world. The 450 megawatt coal-fired generating unit located about five kilometres south of Lake Wabamun at the Keephills plant is owned and operated by TransAlta and Capital Power Corporation. Carbon dioxide emissions per megawatt are lower than those from a conventional coal generator.

This new generating unit is a critical step in guaranteeing that Alberta's future power needs are met with a reliable, cost-effective, and environmentally responsible source of electricity. It is an example of development which this government endorses, a type of resource development that leads to a cleaner and healthier environment. TransAlta, the operator of the plant, is one of the largest employers in the constituency with approximately 700 employees.

Madam Speaker, another vital employer in our constituency of Stony Plain is the agricultural industry. Historically the constituency has attracted people seeking opportunities in farming the bountiful land. This vital industry has played an enormous part in our area's history and today continues to provide a wholesome, steady livelihood for many of my constituents. I would like to acknowledge the hard work and dedication of Alberta farmers, which has kept a resilient and strong farming sector in many of our communities.

Landowners' rights was a subject often brought up during the recent election. I am pleased that this government guarantees landowners consultation, compensation, and the courts.

Madam Speaker, the people of this constituency are committed to their families and communities. Some have been here for generations while others are part of the wave of recent newcomers from within Canada and outside of our country, all of whom sought the amazing opportunities that this province has to offer its citizens. I promise to partner with them to achieve a better future for us all. In the past I have had the great honour to represent some of them on Stony Plain town council, most recently as the mayor of Stony Plain. I am proud of the accomplishments that we achieved together in co-operation with other town councillors, neighbouring municipalities, and provincial and federal officials.

In addition to the participation of Stony Plain and Spruce Grove, I would also like to acknowledge the eminent role that Parkland county played in co-ordinating the construction of a leisure centre across jurisdictional boundaries. Parkland county is the administration that represents the municipal level interests of many people in the constituency, and in the interests of Parkland county residents, many of whom reside within the constituency of Stony Plain, I look forward to continuing our relationship and making our communities stronger.

Madam Speaker, it is the case that oftentimes a lawmaker as a representative of the people rests his or her success upon the ability to collaborate with others and to effectively listen to what constituents are saying. While serving on town council, we fostered and cultivated effective and productive partnerships, which led to real results for the people of our community. For example, we managed to achieve one of the lowest property taxes in the capital region while maintaining high levels of service, orderly growth, and fiscal responsibility. I assisted the trimunicipal region to increase shared services, which included the building of the TransAlta Tri Leisure Centre. I also was involved in helping form the Capital Region Board, which is fostering increased co-operation amongst 23 municipalities.

These are verifiable examples of how collaboration and negotiation can yield important results for Albertans. I will continue to draw on my experience and knowledge of policy to achieve responsive leadership, open dialogue, and accountability. My continuing vision for the constituency of Stony Plain is in the same vein as the Premier's vision for the province. I want to ensure that the riding remains vibrant, continues to grow, and is a safe community for people pursuing health, happiness, and prosperity, a community of hope and a community with a vibrant future.

Madam Speaker, I am pleased and honoured to be a member of this government with its bold plan for the bright future of this province. This is a Premier that understands Alberta families and what their needs are and what they expect their government to achieve. The hon. Premier firmly believes in investing in families and communities across this province because it is a healthy family and a strong community that is the measure of the quality of life that we enjoy. It is the government's priority to encourage and to develop strong and vigorous families and communities. We believe it is the government's responsibility to create the opportunities and provide the support necessary for parents to raise children that grow into healthy and educated adults. We believe in a world-class education system that prepares our children for the economic future and challenges of tomorrow.

In listening to the throne speech, it was clear that this government will invest in the infrastructure that communities need in order to thrive and prosper: the schools, the hospitals, family care clinics, recreation centres, and the highways that connect us to one another. One thing we know for certain is that Alberta is constantly growing, and we need to meet the challenges of that growth head-on by laying the physical foundation for our communities. However, we will be sure to do it in a fiscally responsible manner. We will spend government revenue with the utmost respect to the taxpayers, who expect government to function as efficiently as possible.

This government will invest in the economic future of this province. The throne speech clearly articulated the notion that a strong and prosperous economy is built with human capital and physical infrastructure, and it is this government's pledge to invest in the building blocks of that future prosperity. This government will continue to secure a dynamic economic future for all Albertans, who deserve to share in the wealth produced by the great resources of this province. We also believe in diversifying our economy and making it more competitive, not just nationally but internationally. In order to accomplish this, we will train a workforce that is skilled and adaptable to the changing needs of an increasingly globalized society. This government has fostered a competitive economic position for this province, and it will continue to do so.

Madam Speaker, I must say that I look forward to working with this dynamic team of professionals. I am proud to mention that a third of our caucus is composed of brand new MLAs, myself included. We will build on the past successes of government while enhancing our caucus with new ideas and fresh perspectives. As well, we have an important balance of professionals with business experience and previous political experience at other levels of government. We have caucus members with legal experience, training in information technology, and science backgrounds. Other members of our team have experience in such diverse areas as the trades, journalism, health care, law enforcement, and engineering.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I look forward to continuing the dedication and constructive collaboration of this government and building upon its past successes. We will continue to make progress on the issues that matter most to the people of my constituency of Stony Plain and to all the people of this tremendous province.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Stony Plain, for that very uplifting response to the throne speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a)? I see the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. I recognize the member.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was wondering if the hon. member would comment on Keephills 3. Keephills 3 utilized the technology called integrated combined cycle, which is clean coal technology, and they received their approval to build the plant based on employing that technology. They constructed the plant, and once online they turned right around and applied to the Alberta Utilities Commission to be exempt from clean coal technology and said that they needed to be exempt from that technology because it made them uncompetitive. They were subsequently denied. I was wondering if you would comment on the clean technology that they have promoted.

Mr. Lemke: Well, thank you for that question. I take your word that you're knowledgeable about Keephills 3, and certainly I will do a little research and get back to you in terms of that.

The Acting Speaker: Any other questions under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we'll move to our next speaker, and I would ask the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat to deliver his maiden speech.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's with great pleasure and gratitude to the voters and residents of Cypress-Medicine Hat that I rise today to deliver my response to the Speech from the Throne. This is, of course, my first speech in the Legislature, so it's also a chance for me to tell everyone a bit more about Cypress-Medicine Hat: our people, our towns, our city, and our needs.

The people who live in Cypress-Medicine Hat include oil and gas workers and investors, farmers and ranchers, business owners, greenhouse operators, and professional people. We have a large number of semiretired and retired people, who have earned our respect by building our economy, our communities, and our institutions.

Young families are also attracted to the quality of life that this constituency provides. I have heard from a wide range of these young families, and over and over they have told me how important the education of their children is. They want to know where the infrastructure dollars for new schools and renovating older schools are going to be spent. Many are concerned that promises made in the past for the region will not materialize. My constituents are also very concerned about rural schooling opportunities, the length of bus rides, and funding to ensure their children have the quality of education that Alberta can afford.

Our location does not allow us to be part of the highway 2 corridor, and this has contributed to a saying in Cypress-Medicine Hat: sometimes we feel we are the forgotten corner of Alberta. When I hear that, I also believe that people from Cypress-Medicine Hat are saying: "Hey, we're independent. We're strong. We believe in working together to help a neighbour, friend, or community." The adjective "independent" perfectly describes the second-, third-, fourth-, fifth-, and even sixth-generation ranching families who reside, earn a living, and pay taxes in the Cypress-Medicine Hat constituency.

John and Kathy Ross, fourth-generation ranchers with Milk River cattle ranches, are now the proud grandparents to one-year-old William Jack Ross, a sixth-generation rancher. Parents Aaron and Rebecca Brower and their three children, Morgan, Lindsay, and Addison, are now the fifth generation on their ranch in the Aden area. These people exemplify those who are concerned about schooling opportunities, ambulatory services, the government's agricultural policies, and, perhaps most of all, property rights.

The adjective “strong” can also be used to describe the people of Cypress-Medicine Hat. Their reaction to our flash flood in the spring of 2010 is a great example. Residents had to care for their families, friends, and in some cases livestock. Many had to flee with little or no warning and then begin the long, arduous task of rebuilding. Incredibly, in some instances the water came so fast and unexpectedly that people had to swim for it.

When the likelihood of another flood developed the next spring, neighbours, friends, and families rolled up their sleeves and laboured to mitigate the chances of it happening. Unfortunately, there are currently many affected people still 29 months later that have not fully been helped by our government. I’m calling upon our government to make this a priority.

The taxpayers and citizens of Alberta were not honoured in this process either. In fact, the Medicine Hat News has reported that $19 million was paid to individuals for flood assistance and restoration, but incredibly up to $20 million was paid to the government-contracted company for administering this program. Albertans ask that our government help people fairly and quickly, and many instances outlined that this didn’t happen. Albertans deserve better.

The people of Cypress-Medicine Hat are both independent and strong. There is an amazing group of friends, vegetable growers, and businesspeople who believe in working together, for example in greenhouses. On less than a quarter section of farmland they’ve turned it into a business enterprise worth an outstanding $55 million a year. I am referring to Redcliff’s greenhouse vegetable packaging co-operative called Red Hat and their associated growers. Their mission statement is “to be the best local distributor of fresh produce,” and, Madam Speaker, they sure do deliver on that promise.

There’s also a lot of history in Cypress-Medicine Hat. This year we had the Medicine Hat stampede celebrating its 125th year. We also had the towns of Redcliff and Bow Island both having extensive celebrations for their 100-year anniversaries. We are already looking forward to the 100-year celebrations of Burdett and Foremost, that will take place this summer.

There’s a location in Cypress-Medicine Hat that I would love to share with you. It is 1,234 metres above sea level, the highest elevation on the prairies between Banff and Labrador, and actually it’s the same elevation as Banff. I’m referring to Elkwater and the interprovincial park Cypress Hills. All of a sudden the hills and trees just seemed to pop up from the prairie, and what a great spot for recreation, wildlife, and just getting away. It’s been over 100 years since a natural cleansing forest fire, thus there are lots of history, vegetation, and activity that we must be careful with.

Cypress-Medicine Hat also includes about the southeastern third of Medicine Hat, and I would be remiss if I did not mention Medicine Hat College, its 2,500 full-time students, along with its excellent reputation for academics and trades. Medicine Hat is a first-rate city with a strong cultural community. Our extensive local theatre, our jazz, our Tongue on the Post festival, and our performing arts centre, the Esplanade, are second to none.

Sports take a back seat to no other community: our Western Hockey League team, the Medicine Hat Tigers, and our Western Major Baseball League team, the Mavericks, and extensive recreation and minor sporting opportunities.

Do you want to see the Great Wall of China someday? You don’t have to go overseas. Just come to Medicine Hat and visit our historical Medalta Potteries and all of its historic china products. It’s fully equipped with an artists-in-residence program and more than 100 years of clay works, china, and entrepreneurial history.

Many will know that Medicine Hat’s nickname is the Gas City. About 100 years ago Rudyard Kipling described Medicine Hat by saying that it has all hell for a basement. Now, it’s no secret that the price of natural gas is down, and it has been for some time. It’s also no secret that many jobs and firms and equipment have left Cypress-Medicine Hat since the royalty review of 2007. This has left our housing market, our business opportunities, our employment wages, and our growth trailing much of the rest of Alberta. With this in mind, I hope and trust that this government’s plans for the natural gas industry will improve this current situation.

But Cypress-Medicine Hat is known for more than its gas. It’s also known for its sunshine. In fact, it’s the national leader for cities for total hours of sunshine, with approximately 2,500 hours of sunshine per year, or close to an amazing 330 days of sunshine. Very often we’re the hot spot in Canada, comparing our daily temperatures to other Canadian cities.

Like many constituencies, there are also things in our communities, especially regarding infrastructure, that could be improved. We are grateful that the government of Alberta has started a $220 million hospital expansion, but my constituents are still concerned about the lack of action and the promises on this project. In 2008 the first sod-turning took place, the second one was identical in 2010, and last week there was a third announcement. Still today the project has not moved forward at a pace that communicates to the people of the southeast corner that they are important. My constituents remember that the initial expansion promise was for a considerably greater project, announced at $480 million.

As well, when the Deputy Premier comes to Medicine Hat and introduces three out-of-town MLAs as your local representatives, well, Medicine Hatters can’t help but wonder how important their needs and wishes are to this government.

My constituents are grateful, though, that the government of Alberta finally announced plans to build an overpass at Dunmore Road over the Trans-Canada highway. This is a very dangerous intersection – our Medicine Hat mayor, Norm Boucher, has expressed tremendous concern – with 150 accidents there in just the last two years.

The Cypress-Medicine Hat constituency is comprised of two counties, Cypress and Forty Mile. It is important to know that both counties are transportation and commodity based. Both the agriculture sector and the oil and gas sector are key players with many opportunities for tourism and recreation. This, of course, makes our road system and the quality of these roads essential to all citizens and taxpayers. In Cypress-Medicine Hat we know that the people of Alberta and Fort McMurray who travel highway 63 need our help, and once that twinning is progressing, please remember there is only 60 miles of highway 3 between Medicine Hat and Lethbridge not twinned and that highway 61’s pavement and shoulders need attention, with many, many serious accidents on it.

In addition to the increasing flow of truck traffic for commodities there are many reports and beliefs that the Bakken oil field and other oil activity will dramatically increase, making highway 61 from Manyberries to Etzikom to Foremost all the more important.

Alberta is also the only province with only one 24-hour border crossing with our neighbours to the south. For at least 15 years the people of Cypress-Medicine Hat have been extolling the virtues of working with the Americans and the federal government to open up the Wild Horse border crossing to more extensive hours. The economic impact of the development of an alternative port of entry to move equipment and machinery faster, more safely, and affordably needs to be considered.

There are two other important economic drivers in my constituency I'd like to mention. Defence Research and Development Canada, or DRDC Suffield as it is known, employs over 200 people and supports our military, NATO forces, and private industry with cutting-edge research in explosives, equipment, safety, robotics, and much more. In Foremost there is an exciting initiative taking place to develop an airspace and improve the local airport to become a Canadian and world leader in flying unmanned aerial vehicles out of sight. Currently the legalities are such that unmanned vehicles can only be flown within the sight of the operator. However, the potential for police, search and rescue, pipeline surveillance, and who knows what else is tremendous. As we develop the ability to fly these unmanned vehicles further and further, this could become a great economic driver for us. Foremost and Cypress-Medicine Hat have the topography, climate, and the people to make this initiative a great success.

In conclusion, let me say once again that I am grateful to the constituents of Cypress-Medicine Hat for the opportunity to serve them in the House, whether they are from Schuler, Redcliff, Medicine Hat, Bow Island, Seven Persons, Aden, or points in between.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, for that very insightful response to the throne speech. I was waiting for you to mention how great the Medicine Hat Tigers are, and you didn't disappoint me.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Is there anyone who would like to ask a question or make a comment? The hon. member from Canmore.

Mr. Casey: Banff-Cochrane, but close.

The Acting Speaker: Banff-Cochrane. Thank you.

Mr. Casey: As more of a comment, I guess, than anything, a 40-year friend of mine is responsible for much of the work at Medalta pottery, Les Manning. Les Manning just received the Order of Canada, I believe two weeks ago, for his contribution to ceramic arts in Alberta, Canada, and around the world. As you know, he teaches around the world. I just wanted to add that on to your Medalta pottery piece, that we're very proud of him. He was a resident of Canmore for 25 years and still is a very close friend of mine. Thank you for mentioning Medalta.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Are there any others that would like to comment under 29(2)(a)? Member for Edmonton-Riverview, under 29(2)(a)? Please proceed.

Mr. Young: I just want to comment. I had the opportunity to go back to Medicine Hat this summer, and I was so impressed by the HALO air ambulance service and the community initiative that brought that together. I just wanted to point that out. It was fantastic the way the community got together for medical ambulance service in the area.

Mr. Barnes: Yes. Thank you very much for mentioning that. We have a great, great group of volunteers. They raise approximately $875,000 to service that whole southeast area. There is a little bit of a concern, though, with the fact that they receive zero funding from the province. STARS, of course, receives somewhere between 20 and 30 per cent. I understand there's a chance of an initiative from Saskatchewan helping with HALO so that we can service the southwestern part of Saskatchewan as well. Thanks for pointing out how hard those volunteers work.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Yeah. I have a comment. In the last few years I also travelled quite a bit in the province. I have been in Medicine Hat once, but I didn't know you have such wonderful pottery. As a teapot collector I would like to know if you can pass the address on to me. I would definitely like to visit that pottery place sometime next summer. I really enjoyed your speech. Thank you.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you very much for that. If you could ever come down and see the artists in residence, who come from around the world to work out of Medicine Hat and make things happen. Again, the society that's making this happen has done a wonderful job of creating opportunities for people that are interested in pottery, and the museum is really growing as well. I would be happy to do that. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any other members under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we'll move to our next speaker for his maiden speech, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. Young: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm honoured to rise here today to reflect on the Speech from the Throne, delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. I would also like to begin by thanking the Lieutenant Governor for his thoughtful words and unwavering commitment to our province and our country. His Honour has led a distinguished career dedicated to public service through his work as a peacekeeper and humanitarian. I hold the utmost respect for his work serving the people of our province.

I would also like to thank the hon. Premier for her leadership and her effort to ensure that the work our government does consistently reflects the values, goals, and aspirations of Albertans. Madam Speaker, with her guidance this government has set in motion a clear, focused, target-driven mandate.

I stand here as a Canadian, an Albertan, an Edmontonian who has been bestowed the privilege of representing the constituency of Edmonton-Riverview, for which I'm humbled and honoured. I would also like to acknowledge the former MLA from Edmonton-Riverview, Kevin Taft, who served the constituency well and maintained support throughout his career through his community engagement.

I had the pleasure of meeting with Kevin this past week on community issues relating to the exciting developments at the University of Alberta's south campus, a large area of untouched land in the core of Edmonton on the banks of the North Saskatchewan River amongst mature, vibrant communities. Edmonton-Riverview representatives have had a history of service to the community before serving as MLAs and after in different roles. Previous Edmonton-Riverview MLAs include Karen Leibovici and Linda Sloan, who continue to represent and advocate for community as members of Edmonton city council.

The area of Edmonton-Riverview is certainly an impressive constituency with a long history. Edmonton-Riverview consistently records the highest voter turnout in the province, 69.2 per cent in the past election. Crestwood Community League was the first of the organized community leagues, founded in 1917 by a group of residents as the 142nd Street community league. Based on the ideas of neighbourhood and social club, it later stressed a wider use of existing public facilities and co-operative joining of residents in a community for civic, social, and recreational activities.

Edmonton-Riverview is a constituency, but the families, individuals, organizations, and businesses don't see themselves as a constituency. They see themselves as a community, and they see themselves as Albertans. These are the communities of Laurier Heights, Belgravia, Malmo Plains, Crestwood, Parkview, Elmwood, Windsor Park, McKernan, Meadowlark, Jasper Park, West Jasper Place-Sherwood, Lansdowne, Grandview, Lynnwood, Lendrum, and Parkallen.

I'm repeatedly amazed by the collection of vibrant communities, and with all of them there is a river that runs through it. The river is an ongoing source of pride for Edmontonians that use it and the communities near it. It is a natural space that serves a wide variety of recreational users: off-leash dog parks, running trails, challenging single-track bike trails, the Edmonton Rowing Club, the Valley Zoo, the Whitemud equestrian centre, and the Trans Canada Trail.

Edmonton-Riverview is also home to the University of Alberta, an institution of learning that serves as a key cornerstone to the growing knowledge economy and innovation for the province. I've experienced this excellence in fostering knowledge and learning at the University of Alberta, having earned a bachelor's degree in education and a master's of business administration at the University of Alberta School of Business.

Excellence at the University of Alberta isn't reserved for learning and research. As an alumnus of the University of Alberta Golden Bears hockey program I've experienced excellence not only with the national championships with the Bears, Pandas, and all the other teams but also the values of teamwork, hard work, commitment, and delivering on a shared vision. The saying that it's amazing what can be accomplished when no one cares who gets the credit is often quoted, but it is a principle that the Golden Bears hockey program demonstrated and that I continue to use as a guiding principle. Individually all have an ego and are all too quick to point fingers, but a successful team doesn't point fingers or feed into egos. A successful team lives by a set of principles, values, and works collectively to deliver on a vision. Members of a team are not the same, but they work together as one.

Admittedly, in sports I was not the highly talented player that you might think. I wasn't blessed with natural talent, but I did know my role and took pride in working much harder, and we were successful. As the whip I find myself in a new position as an MLA but in a very familiar position, building a team and delivering on a vision with the leadership of our Premier. This summer I took the opportunity to conduct numerous health consultations across the province, two in Edmonton-Riverview, on both sides of the river I might add, but also in Medicine Hat, Sylvan Lake, Pincher Creek, Rocky Mountain House, Fort Macleod, Calgary, Lethbridge, Taber, Drumheller, and others. I had the opportunity to attend Carmangay to see their facility. I went to Hanna and Youngstown and heard of grazing lease issues and disaster support.

Each time that I would visit and speak to the community stakeholders on a local issue, I would be asked: what is an MLA from Edmonton-Riverview doing here? Each time I would explain that our Premier is very clear. We are here to govern the whole province, and I feel it my duty to understand the issues across the province. We certainly need to understand and advocate for the issues in our constituency, but we also need to understand the issues across the province, north and south, rural and urban, big city and small town, agriculture and industry, energy and environment, all the issues of Alberta.

I was born in Calgary, and as a young boy my family relocated to an acreage outside of Sherwood Park. My mother, Beverly, would travel east to Tofield, where she worked as a nurse, and my father would travel west to Edmonton, where he worked as an electronic technologist. My extended family spans across the province from Vermilion, Magrath, Cardston, Taber, Calgary, and to Camrose, where our family farm still is today. Today I live in the community of Crestwood with my beautiful wife, Leanne, who has a busy practice as a lawyer, mediator, and adjudicator and is an amazing mother to my two children, Abigail and Taylor.

With the priorities of resource stewardship, economic futures, and family and communities the challenge is balancing the delivery of these services while being fiscally conservative. I'm often asked: how did you get involved in politics, and have you always wanted to be a politician? I certainly didn't want to be a politician when I grew up. I joked that as a police officer bad guys would take shots at you, but as a politician everybody does. I explained that I was a police officer for 17 years. I worked 12 years in operations, or what is known as the street, and realized that simply focusing on law enforcement is not enough.

I've always been an advocate of holding those responsible accountable for offences, but that alone is not enough. We cannot simply arrest our way toward greater public safety. My passion for community has motivated me to inspire initiatives that focused on creating relationships with communities in a way that allowed prevention and intervention efforts to build long-term solutions. This work afforded me the opportunity to deliver a breadth of experience, spending time in emergency response as a beat officer, a criminal investigator, in community engagement, in crime prevention, and in information management.

My policing career was guided by principles and values, including by those of another conservative politician, a man by the name of Sir Robert Peel, who in 1829 laid out a set of principles that brought policing into the modern era, in particular the belief that the police are the public and that the public are the police. Other cornerstone principles are those championed by Robert Trojanowicz, the father of community-based policing, and his belief that working with community as partners in public safety leads to greater public safety and vibrant communities. As every member of the Edmonton Police Service knows, the values of community and family are essential.

Another cornerstone was in 1979, when Herman Goldstein developed problem-oriented policing, an approach that seeks to address the underlying causes of crime, not simply a manifestation of it. A few years later George Kelling and James Wilson brought about the broken windows theory and changed the way that we looked at communities by identifying that simple things like broken windows were important and that communities need to be engaged and involved in their neighbourhoods to build vibrant communities.

As a police officer working downtown for about 10 years and later as a community liaison sergeant working on Whyte Avenue for several years, I became heavily involved in community and association groups. It was through this engagement that I sought to get involved in politics. I joined the Conservative board of MP Laurie Hawn as well as the Edmonton-Riverview PC Association. Before long I found myself on the executive and then as the president. Leading up to the election, I would be asked if I was interested in running. I did not leave policing. Rather, I continued to serve the public in a different role with a larger mandate.

Supporting the greater public good through community involvement has always been a passion of mine. Alberta families play a significant role in building the future of our province, and as their representatives it is our responsibility to advocate for their concerns and for legislation that protects families and helps them to reach their potential.

As His Honour said in the Speech from the Throne, this begins by investing in families and communities. This province's commitment to Albertan families is evident in its ongoing creation of the social policy framework. The future of our social policy depends greatly on the ideas of our community members. We've reached out to Albertans to turn their ideas into action through a social policy framework initiative, which has been ongoing this summer.

His Honour's Speech from the Throne also addressed the importance of public service. The public service in our province is strong and offers Albertans a great standard of living. It is directly connected to the future and success of Alberta's economy. Our government continues to invest in public service and in the infrastructure that supports it to secure Alberta's economic future.

Madam Speaker, I believe it is critical that we continue to invest in our public sector while remaining fiscally conservative. The Speech from the Throne laid forth a strong fiscal framework that will help us to achieve this promise. A part of this strong fiscal framework is our government's unwavering commitment to transparency, which promotes trustworthy leadership that generally takes Albertans' concerns to heart. The Associate Minister of Accountability, Transparency and Transformation will review Alberta's freedom of information and protection of privacy and oversee fundamental changes to the way we do business. I'm looking forward to working with the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Conklin in this regard.

In closing, I would like to thank the constituents of Edmonton-Riverview for giving me this opportunity to represent them. To His Honour the Lieutenant Governor: thank you for sharing your words about the future of our province through the Speech from the Throne. To all the members of this House: I look forward to working with each and every one of you as the session continues. We are a dynamic group of representatives of which I am honoured to be a part as we work to do the best we can do for all Albertans.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. That was a very engaging maiden speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Are there any members that would like to comment or question? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you for recognizing me. Just to be honest, I'm sort of befuddled by the term "fiscal conservative." This just might be me sitting on this side of the fence, you know. I don't know if you were paying attention to my throne speech and some of the things I brought up there. Don't worry; I'm a one-trick pony. I'll keep going on that theme over and over in case you missed it. Nevertheless, I look at our financial layout. Right now we're the highest spending government of all the provinces. I understand that. It seems to me that we're in a high-wage, high-inflation area. It costs more to run a business here. Why wouldn't it cost more to run a government here? At the same time, we're the lowest taxed jurisdiction in this province. I pointed out the fact that we're the lowest taxed by a country mile. Does this model, this fiscal structure that you were talking about, fit with your version of fiscal conservatism?

Mr. Young: Thank you very much for the question. I think that at the end of the day we need to deliver services to Albertans, and we need to do it keeping an eye on what we spend. What we're looking at is our spending. The revenue side is difficult to control. There are world economies and lots of factors that come into play. We have a budget. We need to look at how tight we can keep to that budget. In terms of the tax structure the Alberta advantage is an important part of that, not just as a revenue stream.

Mr. Hehr: I'm going to follow up on that. I'll try and frame it in terms of royalties. We spend every last dime of fossil fuel resources we bring out of the ground. Is that our right and privilege here as a society to spend all this at one time? Is that your vision of fiscal conservatism?

Mr. Young: I think we need to save. I think we need to spend and deliver services and work within our budget. I think part of our budget also needs to be building up savings, and that's through the heritage trust fund, through the sustainability fund. We need to deliver services now but also in the future.

Mr. Hehr: Well, how much of that royalty revenue should we save? We spent it all, $350 billion, over the course of the last 40 years. How much is a viable thing to save, and then where do we get the shortfall from?

Mr. Young: Well, we're having ongoing conversations with Albertans on that budget, and they've been telling us that we need to save, and we also need to deliver services.

Mr. Hehr: I know that, but you also know what I just told you. We spend all $12 billion of the resources we're bringing in now, okay? We've spent virtually all the $350 billion we've brought in since 1971. We have services we have to deliver. How much of that should we save for the future, and how much should we ask citizens to pay for? Or is the current model you have, this fiscal conservative model you talked about in your speech, your definition of fiscally conservative?

Mr. Young: Well, sticking to your budget is certainly fiscally conservative. On the revenue side things are going to ebb and flow, and we need to stay within our budget.

Mr. Hehr: Okay. Clear.

The Acting Speaker: Thanks, hon. members.

Are there any others? The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I actually had the pleasure to talk with Mr. Young when he was in Carmangay this summer. I just want to congratulate you on being an MLA and for your past history as a peace officer in the city of Edmonton. It's good to have people like that as part of this Assembly, so thank you for that.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who would like to comment or question under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we'll move to our next response to the throne speech. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's an honour to rise in order to respond to the Speech from the Throne given back on May 24, 2012. Before I get to the substance of the throne speech, I'd like to of course begin by thanking the voters of the riding of Edmonton-Strathcona for their support in the last election. Edmonton-Strathcona is a diverse riding with a population that consists of students and professors and public service workers and artists and writers and young families and tradespeople and small-business owners and seniors. Collectively they share, notwithstanding that diversity, a unique level of, shall we say, hopefulness and advocacy and engagement.

When I say hopefulness and engagement, there is that hopefulness and engagement when it comes to things like the arts, when it comes to matters of equality and justice, when it comes to matters of education, when it comes to issues relating to the protection or the acknowledgement even of our environment, when it comes to issues around basic principles of fairness, and overall when it comes to issues that are focused on building the strength of our communities as it relates to the overriding quality of life experienced by individual Albertans, that is understood by all of us.

There is a general consensus in Edmonton-Strathcona, certainly not without exception – obviously, that's what a democracy is about – but, notwithstanding, a general consensus that we don't do well if we're not all doing well, that we don't measure our success if we're not all succeeding, and that simply looking at the bottom line of certain, you know, multinational corporations here or certain corporations there is not the way to determine if we as community members and we as an extension of those community members are doing our job to promote and increase and enhance the quality of life experienced by all Albertans.

That being said, I just want to reiterate how pleased and proud I am to represent that riding because it truly is a diverse riding, and it's a riding that gives so much to the province overall in terms of its academics and its arts and its theatre and its small-business community and its entertainment section. I'm very, very proud to be able to represent it.

It's interesting to listen to people give their maiden speeches when it's their first year, when they've just been elected, when they're new MLAs. In a way it makes me just ever so slightly sad because I think back to the level of enthusiasm and expectation I had when I gave my first speech in response to the Speech from the Throne. I have to say that here we are now, and this is the fifth Speech from the Throne that I will be responding to, written by the second Premier since I've been elected. I feel like I've had more than simply five years go by in terms of the way I look at what we've done here.

I think, though, that certainly one of the things that I did when I first started here and something that I did as a student of politics in my other life, whether it was in this province or other provinces, when I looked at a government and I evaluated that government and that government's leadership, was look at whether that government had a vision and was trying to achieve something and was succeeding in achieving something that would leave a legacy about which members of those governments or people who participated or worked with that government would be proud when they left, whether you could point to initiatives or projects or improvements in the quality of life for the people whom you serve when you leave.

Or, conversely, are you in a situation – and I have seen governments like this before and not just Conservative governments – where you're simply doing everything you can to hold on to power, and your presence in the Legislature is more about your personal position as an MLA and staying there? Then you're sort of working collectively, somewhat frantically with your colleagues to just hold on to power, lurching from crisis to crisis, coming up with one plan here to answer this problem and another plan there to answer that problem. Then two or three years later you go back and look at those plans and those promises that you made in response to this problem and that problem, and not only were you pushed off your agenda so that you're no longer looking at what you've achieved, what your vision was, what it was that brought you into politics, but all those plans and all those issue management strategies that your communications folks advised that you use have gotten nowhere. So you find that, really, you've made lots of grand statements, but the plans continue to be just plans for more plans and further plans.

I remember I think it was my first or second year here when the government came out with directive 74, the plan to reduce tailings ponds in Alberta. I remember that it was very frustrating for me because I was able to go back to 1972, I believe it was, when my father raised the issue of the growing tailings ponds and the threat that they presented to wildlife and wildfowl in the environment. And here we were, you know, whatever it was at that point, I guess just about 30 years later. We were finally bringing in directive 74, and we finally had a plan to start planning to reduce the growth and the footprint of these tailings ponds.

Now, here we are two or three years after that, and only two of the nine major corporations who are growing those tailings ponds are even in compliance with the plan to make a plan to ultimately plan to reduce our tailings ponds. The other seven aren't even in compliance with the plan to make a plan. Now, when you consider how much paper and how many trees were cut down to put out the many press releases which happily and gleefully announced the plan to make a plan to make a plan, you'd think that if those resources had been dedicated to maybe trying to get those other seven companies to be in compliance, we might be closer to having a record here in this Assembly that we could be proud of. But we don't.

So I can't help, unfortunately, reading this Speech from the Throne through the lens of a lot of plans that haven't really gone anywhere. When you think about legacies, you think about what it is when all of us are talking to our grandkids and saying: "This is what happened when we were in this Assembly. This is what I can point to. I was part of this. I made this change. I got them to change this idea." Or: "I took this particular proposal to my caucus and it became real." Whatever the conversation is, you need to be able to point to something. I'm afraid that this government at 40, whatever many years old it is, is not doing so well in the legacy-building department.

Now, I will say that at the beginning of this government's term back in 1971 and then probably for the first 10 years there was some pretty significant legacy building. I'm afraid, however, that not only have we lost that sense of governance and that ability to build legacy but, in fact, this government is feeding on that previous legacy. It's not just not growing; we're actually reducing it. There are, of course, a few obvious examples of that. I mean, in the early days of this government significant effort was devoted to developing a robust oil and gas industry that would carry this province into the future and spread great wealth and innovation and economic development to all Albertans, and there was, obviously, great success in that regard.

When that decision was first made and those projects were first initiated, the idea was to benefit the greatest number of Albertans possible, to marshal our resource in a way that benefited Albertans. Here we are 45 years later, and the percentage of our resource that is marshalled for Albertans has dropped by about two-thirds. It's a pittance of what it once was. So someone is marshalling our resources, but it's not Albertans anymore who are marshalling our resources, or it's a much, much smaller number of Albertans who are marshalling that resource. Meanwhile the liability to future generations as a result of marshalling that resource grows every day. It's probably grown a hundred-fold since those initiatives first began. Think about that. What is the legacy that this term is going to leave?

Another example, the human rights code, Bill 1, the first Conservative Premier's, Premier Lougheed's, was our human rights code, a time of pride in Alberta, the first human rights code, the first human rights commission in Canada. Here we are 44 years later, and two years ago or three years ago we introduced a piece of legislation that permanently scarred – scarred – our human rights code, embarrassed this province in relation to the rest of the country, and put a permanent scar which is unprecedented in any other similar piece of legislation in this country.

Today we introduced an Education Act. We have now become so equivocal on the Bill 1, that Premier Lougheed introduced, that human rights code, that once-proud statement of principle, that we've decided that we are not quite comfortable putting it into an Education Act that outlines the terms and conditions under which education in this province is supported and funded with public dollars. It's shameful. It's a level of cynicism which is really not surprising for a government, I suppose, that is 45 or 44 years old. But it is unfortunate.

You need to think about what the legacy is that will be left after this term, and so far it's not looking so good.

We've talked about our education system as a whole. The throne speech doesn't make any specific plans for when we're going to finally join the rest of the country and move to full-day kindergarten. I'm throwing it out there. Maybe sometime in the next four years if you guys want to have something to run on, something that you can touch and point to, you might want to get moving on that plan. I've seen no indication that we're going anywhere on it, notwithstanding that it was a promise made by the Premier repeatedly during her efforts to become your leader. It's an important issue that we need to build on and that I'm disappointed to see no movement forward on.

Now we're in a position where we're dealing with, as the Member for Calgary-Buffalo stated and did a really good job of outlining, an unrealistic situation here. Nobody is making hard decisions. Everyone is making easy decisions, and they're not even easy good decisions. They're just easy decisions. It's really important for everybody here to think about the legacy that we're going to leave. We need to think about what we're going to ask our kids to clean up. How much debt are we going to ask them to sacrifice to pay off? How much money are we going to ask them to pay to clean up the environment that we are simply not dealing with right now?

We can come up with plans and more plans and committees and more committees, but nothing is changing on the ground. Absolutely nothing is changing on the ground. We're about to go into deliberation on one of the largest growths in the oil sands that we've had in many, many years, and we have no more information on which to base that decision than we did 10 years ago because we're really not moving; we're just talking about moving. So the ultimate liability of that will be left with our kids.

I don't mean to be such a downer. I know I sound a bit like a downer right now. I guess that's what comes after five years. Who knows? Maybe in 10 years, if I get re-elected, I'll be happy again. Then suddenly maybe the rose-coloured glasses have just never come off; I'm not sure.

I simply ask you to think about what is the legacy. Simply staying in power? That's not a legacy. It's an act, but it's not a legacy. It's not something that you're proud of. It's not something you tell your children about. It's not something you write about. It's not something that people remember when you're gone. Right now this throne speech contains no legacy. It just contains empty promises geared towards holding onto power with very little that you can hold onto, touch, or hold accountable. That needs to change, and I hope it does.

Thank you.

9:20

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, for your thoughtful response to the throne speech.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Anyone with a comment or question? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: I enjoyed your comments as always. The introduction of the Education Act struck me as sort of one of those things. What do you think the aversion is to this party now, the one that under Lougheed started the human rights legislation? What do you think is the big aversion to simply recognizing sexual orientation as a protected right in this province, mentioning that we will not tolerate discrimination in any form or fashion that this government touches? What is the aversion?

We saw it for 10 years of Klein, when he wouldn't recognize it in the human rights code, we saw it in bill 44, and now we see it here in this Education Act. It seems to me that Albertans have moved so far past this, yet this government is still willing to segregate people on this characteristic that has nothing to do with their human worth.

Ms Notley: You know, I was talking about the difference between taking a position and pursuing a vision and leaving a legacy that you can be proud of versus scrambling to hold on to power and polling that 30 per cent or 25 per cent of the population that you need to swing to win that critical number of seats. It's a cynical, cynical, cynical move on the part of this government. They abandoned the principles that I think the majority of them on that side right now know are right in order to stave off a threat from their right flank. Albertans actually expected them to move forward and stand up for those principles that they believe are right. Certainly, the Premier made every effort to make it sound as though she would. Instead they've capitulated to a very loud minority, a small group of Albertans who are not prepared to move ahead with the rest of the country and certainly the majority of Albertans.

Sometimes something is just right. The human rights code is one of those few documents that you would think there would be consensus on with everybody, that it is just right. You don't back away from it. You don't get nervous about it. You don't stop making eye contact and think: well, I'd better not mention this in school because someone might be taking offence. When we start thinking that way about something as basic as the human rights code, we have capitulated in a way that is really, really damaging to the overall culture of our province.

I find it particularly ironic that that move is accompanied cynically with the so-called antibullying language. It is crazy-making because, of course, it's that very drive that underlies the decision to back away, not make eye contact, and remove reference to the human rights code from our Education Act of all things. Why wouldn't we say that that should be honoured? It's simply a statement of principle. It didn't mean anything when it was in there before, and it wouldn't mean anything now. It's meaningful in its absence. It has become meaningful in its absence, quite frankly. It wasn't meaningful before, legally, at all. It was simply a statement of principle. But its absence now is a statement to Albertans that we can be bullied.

It's so ironic that the government is trying to suggest that there's antibullying language in the Education Act because they're leaving the door open for bullying to go unanswered because the very tools that you would need to answer it – teachers are now being told that they need to be very careful about talking about them without first running through a whole bunch of hoops.

So it's really a mess that they've created because of, in answer to your question, simply a lack of backbone and a desire to get elected over a desire to make a principled decision.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Is there anyone else who would like to comment or question the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, we will move on to our next presenter in response to the throne speech, the hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane for his maiden speech.

Mr. Casey: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you for the tough job you're doing tonight. I don't envy your position at all, trying to remember everyone's constituencies.

I would like to start by thanking the Honourable Lieutenant Governor for his inspiring words and his commitment to this great province. At the same time I would also like to thank our hon. Premier for her dedication and loyalty to the people of Alberta. I have to say that I couldn't be more proud, after getting to know the Premier, to be a part of her government.

Madam Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to rise before you in this Assembly as the newly elected Member for Banff-Cochrane, and I have to say that given the previous speaker I am especially proud to be a newly elected member that brings enthusiasm, innovation, and commitment to this government to make things work and to make things better for all Albertans.

The faith and obligations placed on me by the people of this constituency are both a humbling and a daunting experience, but I'm more than ready to get on with the task at hand. However, I must begin with a true regret, which is that my father is not alive to witness this day. My dad, Horace Casey, was a rural politician in Ontario for my entire childhood. He served as a councillor and reeve of Thurlow township as well as warden of Hastings county. During those years council meetings would often adjourn to our kitchen table, where politics was discussed until it was time for everyone to go home and milk their cows.

Politics was the language spoken at our table, and while I do not have a degree in political science, I can assure you that I have served a very practical apprenticeship, discussing all matters political with some of the most down-to-earth and honest men I have ever had the privilege of knowing. My father would have been exceptionally proud of me today, and of course it is every son's ultimate desire to gain that respect and blessing.

Madam Speaker, my wife, Pennie, and I moved to Canmore in 1973 as 21-year-old newlyweds. From the first time that we saw the Rocky Mountains pushing up from the foothills, there was little doubt where we would spend our lives. To say that it was love at first sight is an understatement. Canmore and Alberta have both been very good to us, giving us the ability to withstand recessions, raise a strong, healthy family, and achieve goals beyond our wildest dreams.

We have two adult daughters, Alison and Shannon Casey, and a new, second-generation Albertan born last August to Shannon, Casey Lazzarotto. By the way, Madam Speaker, for those that have not had the experience, all the verbose things that people tell you about being a grandparent seem initially to be a little exaggerated, but they are all absolutely true.

Madam Speaker, I was first elected to town council in 1995 and elected mayor in 1998. During that time we were experiencing a growth rate of over 10 per cent, which is almost an impossible rate to sustain. The challenges were divisive, complicated, and seemingly insurmountable, much like today, but it was a great way to cut your teeth in politics.

After a three-year break back in the real world I was re-elected mayor in 2004 and held that position until April 23 of this year. During that time we developed one of the first successful municipal housing corporations in Alberta and established a regional waste commission and the first regional transit commission in the province. We also pioneered the concept of wildlife movement corridors and developed a process of screening developments to ensure sustained benefit for the community and minimize impact on the environment.

In spite of having rigid environmental and development regulations, Canmore had over $1 billion of construction investment in the last 10 years, which is no small achievement for a community of 12,000 people. All of this happened, Madam Speaker, in the middle of a major economic downturn. This success proves it is possible to have strong environmental and development regulations while still enjoying the benefits of economic growth, sentiments that were also expressed by the Honourable Lieutenant Governor in his Speech from the Throne.

The responsible development of our natural resources is extremely important, and I'm more than confident that our Premier will protect our environment while advancing world-leading resource stewardship and further improving Alberta's advantage in the global marketplace.

Madam Speaker, Banff-Cochrane is an incredibly beautiful and diverse constituency. In fact, many of the images that people from around the world associate with Alberta are found within this riding. Beginning in the east, there is Rocky View county, the town of Cochrane, and the hamlet of Bragg Creek. Nestled in the foothills of Rocky View county are some of the most beautiful and productive ranches found anywhere in Alberta. This area is incredibly proud of its western heritage and rightly so. The town of Cochrane is the largest urban centre in the constituency, with 18,000 residents. It serves as a commercial core for the area and is a wonderful blend of urban and rural lifestyles. It is also home to a diversity of industries, the largest being Spray Lakes Sawmills. The hamlet of Bragg Creek is a picturesque community tucked away in the forested foothills south of Cochrane and bordering Kananaskis Country.

9:30

Kananaskis Country, Madam Speaker, is a proud product of Peter Lougheed, who wanted to set aside this remarkable place for future generations, a true legacy. This area is 4,000 square kilometres of unique mountain and foothills landscape where conservation, recreation, and industry coexist. There are six provincial parks, four wildland parks, and 39 provincial recreation areas that represent two-thirds of the total area of Kananaskis Country. Commercial activities like oil and gas exploration and timber harvesting also occur in the region.

Bordering the west side of Kananaskis Country is Banff national park, Canada's first national park and UNESCO world heritage site. It is over 6,000 square kilometres of valleys, mountains, glaciers, forests, meadows, rivers. Contained within the Banff-Cochrane constituency are icons such as Lake Louise, Moraine Lake, the Valley of the Ten Peaks, and Temple Glacier to name but a few. Banff park is also home to some of Alberta's most popular ski areas: Lake Louise, Sunshine Village, and Norquay. The town of Banff forms a commercial hub for the park and has just over 8,000 permanent residents. However, on a busy summer day that number can swell to an estimated 25,000 visitors. Madam Speaker, Banff has a tourism history going back over a hundred years. Virtually no visitor to Alberta misses the opportunity to experience the natural splendour of this area, and I would doubt that many Albertans have not been there at least once.

Together the towns of Banff and Canmore form the major mountain destinations for Alberta. Canmore has a population of 12,000 permanent residents and 6,000 nonpermanent residents that have second-home properties in the community. Since the closing of the coal mines in 1979 Canmore has grown as a tourist destination and a popular second-home location, primarily for Albertans. It is also home to the Canmore Nordic Centre, a legacy of the 1988 Olympic Games, which hosts national and international cross-country and biathlon events each year. These events are made possible because of the $26 million renovation and upgrade that were completed by the provincial government in recent years.

Madam Speaker, Canmore's neighbour is the municipal district of Bighorn. There are several small hamlets in this area, with Exshaw being the largest at 400 residents. It is also home to most of the major industrial and mining operations in the constituency, those being Lafarge, Baymag, and Graymont. The MD is also home to timber harvesting, ranching, oil and gas, and tourism industries. Between Bighorn and Rocky View county is the Morley reserve, which is home to three bands, the Bearspaw, Chiniki, and Wesley bands. The bands recently developed the Stoney Nakoda Resort and Casino and previously developed Nakoda Lodge, which is without doubt one of the most magnificent settings in the foothills. There are also many beautiful ranches located on the reserve up against the backdrop of the Rocky Mountains.

With all the natural beauty and abundance that Banff-Cochrane has, it is sometimes hard to imagine that there are some very real challenges facing us. As an example, Madam Speaker, much of the constituency is struggling to meet the demands of years of sustained growth and development pressure. Provincial transportation, education, and infrastructure have fallen behind, leaving traffic congested and schools overcrowded. Cochrane in particular is in desperate need of improvements to the intersection of highways 22 and 1A, and their schools are so overcrowded that the stage in a gymnasium is currently being used as a classroom.

Tourism is a primary industry in the west portion of the riding. It is one of the major economic drivers in the province, yet it is perceived by many to be a nice-to-have but not an essential part of the Alberta economic well-being. It is time that tourism is recognized as the industry it is and is supported by the province in a similar way to other recognized industries.

Banff and Canmore are without supportive living and long-term care facilities for seniors in spite of the fact that recent assessments have demonstrated the need. In the eastern slopes region the lack of current land-use planning has resulted in ongoing conflicts between recreational users, community groups, and industry. It is essential that we move ahead on the South Saskatchewan land-use plan to address many of these issues. I'm proud to say, Madam Speaker, that the government is currently working on resolution to many of these issues and will continue to. Of course, all of our constituencies have similar issues, but working together as a team, both sides of this House working in the best interest of all Albertans, we can find reasonable resolutions to many of these challenges.

Madam Speaker, while the opportunities in Alberta are plentiful and the quality of life remains the highest in Canada, this government recognizes that building and maintaining such a prosperous province comes with many challenges. As someone who is familiar with issues that arise from population and industry growth, I can say with confidence that our Premier will face these challenges with intelligence and integrity. I'm excited about our Premier's commitment to further invest in public services and infrastructure across our province, commitments that will not only benefit the constituents of Banff-Cochrane but will help secure Alberta's economic future. As the Lieutenant Governor mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, making strategic investments in both human capital and infrastructure will strengthen our province.

I look forward to working collaboratively with my hon. colleagues in order to address the challenges we face so that we can ensure that future generations enjoy the opportunity and prosperity we have today.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, for that very informative maiden speech. I have to say that, indeed, you do live in one of the most naturally beautiful constituencies in this province.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Is there anyone who would like to comment or ask a question of the hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane? The Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you. To the member. You mentioned that you have no long-term care or seniors' facilities in your riding there, and it's an issue. Can you address that more and explain to members what that means to your community and what the need really is?

Thank you.

Mr. Casey: I think that the recent assessment had that we needed about 110 beds for supportive living at least in the community. There's a renovation going on in the lodge currently. We had a fire in our lodge that, thankfully, no one was injured in. During the rebuilding of the lodge it became obvious that there needed to be supportive living. It looks like there's going to be an opportunity to combine some of the new construction with that, so we will be getting some beds.

The truth is that currently for anyone living in the Bow Valley, so in the Banff-Canmore area, really – if you need supportive living, a lot of people end up going to Calgary or to High River, leaving the valley. For some it's like taking a sailor away from the ocean. You know, if you can't look out every day and see the water, you feel that you're lost. For people that have lived their lives surrounded by those walls that we call mountains, taking them out of those environments at an old age really is a hardship for them.

I mean, I think we've certainly had some success moving forward, but it's a desperate need, and it's something that we need to move forward on for sure.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members who would like to comment or question the Member for Banff-Cochrane under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I would ask the hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General to respond to the throne speech.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker, and congratulations on your recent election and, I believe, one of your first evenings in the throne.

It's an honour for me to rise today in response to the speech by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, Don Ethell, on May 23, 2012. As I considered my remarks for this evening, I wanted to mention, you know, that like many people in this Assembly I'm from another province. It talks about the promise of Alberta, the fact that we attract so many people from other provinces. Indeed, I am an immigrant from Saskatchewan. I moved here from Regina via Saskatoon 12 years ago, and I think the Member for Calgary-Lougheed is also from Saskatchewan.

Madam Speaker, this is my second term as an MLA, although the riding names have changed. I had the privilege last term of representing the constituency of Calgary-Egmont from 2008 to 2012. Calgary-Egmont has a long history in our city, having been represented by Merv Leitch starting in '71, also by David Carter, who became the Speaker, and former minister Denis Herard before me. Now, the Electoral Boundaries Commission in 2010 changed the name of the riding to Calgary-Acadia, as well as some other minor changes, reassigning the communities of Ramsay and Kingsland to Calgary-Fort and Calgary-Glenmore, respectively, and adding the community of Southwood while maintaining the existing areas of Willow Park, Maple Ridge, Acadia, Fairview, Riverbend, and Manchester within its borders.

Now, many asked me why the name was changed. The original name of Egmont was named after the Earl of Egmont, Fred Perceval, who had actually a 28-room house where, interestingly, Southcentre Mall is today. I'm told that the staircase from the house is now in the Black Swan pub on Southport Road. Madam Speaker, the reality is that my office received repeated calls from Edgemont, a subdivision in the far northwest of Calgary. So we did not contest the name change as the name of Acadia reflects the modern reality of our constituency. Indeed, much has changed in Calgary since it was named Egmont in 1971.

Madam Speaker, anyone who enters public office, regardless of party affiliation, deserves credit, and I want to say thank you to the four others who ran against me for putting their names forward and supporting our democratic system. I'd also like to thank the approximately 7,000 people who placed their confidence in me at the ballot box. This is an increase in percentage from the 2008 election. More importantly, I would say, the turnout was up to 59 per cent, up substantially from the 36 per cent in 2008. I think that's great news all around.

Madam Speaker, I held office hours and will continue to maintain activity within my own constituency but also want to welcome my new constituency manager, Christina Steed.

Madam Speaker, my family originally came from southwestern Saskatchewan, near Fox Valley, a short drive across the border from Medicine Hat. My ancestors are German, and my late paternal grandfather, Jake, ran a gas station and service shop. His wife, Frances, was a teacher's aide. My maternal grandfather, Phil Hauk, was a teacher and principal, and my grandmother lives today in Calgary and is 95 years old. My mother, Marguerite, is a retired teacher who operates a property management company in Calgary, and my father, Brian, is a retired insurance adjuster who works part-time in the same city. All of these individuals I've mentioned have encouraged me on my quest for public office. Frankly, since I was 13 years old and knocked on doors on a cold night in Regina, this has always been my ambition.

We have many rights under our constitution, and with the right to vote, I would say to anyone here, to all Albertans, comes the responsibility to exercise that vote. Members of all parties must continually encourage the people to vote and not just during election time but throughout the four-year cycle of the government.

I've had a few occupations – banker, part-time singer, lawyer, real estate investor, and entrepreneur – but none has given me the sense of community and service as public office. Some of my best days in public office have been as minister of housing and urban affairs because that has shown me the compassionate side of Alberta. Madam Speaker, we've been able to assist people with affordable housing as well as the homeless people in a financially responsible manner through private-sector partnerships. At the same time, we've housed 3,995 formerly homeless people. Also, the private-sector partnership model saved over $1 billion over four years.

I've also had the opportunity, of course, to serve as Solicitor General and now as Minister of Justice and Provincial Secretary, and I look upon myself as having 3.8 million clients, except that I don't have to send out a bill anymore to these clients. I have to say this in jest, of course, because I along with every member here is proud of his or her profession.

Looking forward, my key priorities will continue to be prudent financial management in my department and a continuation, of course, of the safe communities initiative. I'd like to thank my ministerial staff – Mat Steppan, Chad Barber, Josh Stewart, Avery Trimble, Shannon Clarke, and Arlene Yam – for their constant assistance, particularly as we prepare on a very important initiative, and that is to begin the Alberta property rights advocate, something that I look forward to having a key involvement in.

Madam Speaker, during the course of a campaign we owe a debt of gratitude to all of our volunteers, and there were close to 200 volunteers on my campaign. Many people in this Assembly are of many different faiths, and according to my own faith I'd like to thank God for giving me the rare opportunity of being one of 829 to serve in this Assembly.

Ronald Reagan said that each generation goes further than the generation past because it stands on the shoulders of that generation. Along these lines I'd like to say a special thank you to someone I lost just before the election, my grandfather Phil. I've met many people since becoming an MLA, but I can tell you that he's the greatest person I've ever met. He taught me the value of hard work, service to the public, respect for our heritage. I don't know of anyone who would match his spirit of generosity. Shortly before he died, he shared with me that he had thought about running for public office but didn't actually have the opportunity because he had five small children.

I want to say thank you to my parents, Marguerite and Brian; my long-time friend Pierre Poilievre, Member of Parliament for Nepean-Carleton, for his always objective and curt counsel; all of our donors; and, of course, the Premier for all of her support throughout the campaign.

Madam Speaker, regardless of our partisan affiliation, may we strive to improve our public's view of this Chamber and of public officials every day that we are here.

With that, I would move to adjourn debate, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister, and thank you for that very gracious response to the throne speech.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 1

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012

[Adjourned debate October 23: Mr. Oberle]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am pleased to rise this evening to speak to Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, which would give presumptive coverage for posttraumatic stress disorder for first responders. This is the kind of bill that is easy for a member of the opposition to rise and speak in favour of.

I would say that when we look at our first responders, they have a quite different job than most of us. When they go to work in the morning, for them to have a meaningful day at work they are heading into situations that most of us end up running away from. I was struck by this when I was on my way down to Fort Macleod to have a meeting with the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod. It was the day of those terrible wildfires down south. I'd called Chief Weasel Head on the Blood reserve to find out how things were going, and I was grateful to hear that things were going well with the firefighting efforts. I spoke with Terry Michaelis, the mayor of Milk River, later that day, and he also commended the incredible work of the first responders.

I had driven past a home that was on fire while I was on my way down, just outside of Claresholm. I knew that there was an incredible amount of demand in the south to deal with those wildfires. I was a bit fearful of what was happening at that home, but as I was driving by, having called in a 911, I was pleased to see a Claresholm firefighting unit heading in the direction to take the fire out. On my way back from Fort Macleod I stopped in to see how the fire had gone. Unfortunately, they couldn't save the house. The other home had been burned down. They told me that an old fella with his dog had managed to make it out safely.

What I was struck by was just how down to earth these men were in talking about the very dangerous work that they had done that day. This is what we see with our first responders, that very real, everyday heroism, that commitment to duty, that commitment to honour, and the incredible courage that they display. I've seen that as well when I went to a Pride event at the Edmonton Police Service and spoke with the tactical team there. I am also going to be going on a drive-along with sheriffs to see what they see first-hand every day. Then, of course, we all know the kind of trauma that our paramedics see every day on the job. I think that all of us in this Legislature feel great gratitude and thank them for the work that they do.

I also had the great fortune in the last six weeks to go to the firefighters' balls for both Okotoks and High River. In High River our chief there, Chief Len Zebedee, received a diamond jubilee award for his 28 years of service. It was a great honour for me to witness that. His wife, Pat, gave a prayer as a firefighter's spouse, and I can tell you that there wasn't a dry eye in the room. Pat's son Cody, who's also following in Dad's footsteps at Heritage Pointe, was compelled to get into the firefighting service because of the experience of his father and the great and incredible leadership his dad had shown. So Pat is a mom as well as a wife giving that prayer every time that bell rings.

In Okotoks Chief Ken Thevenot spoke passionately about the work of this Chamber in adding chronic illnesses to workers' compensation coverage, and he wanted me to pass along to my colleagues in the Legislature his great gratitude for seeing those illnesses added to workers' compensation coverage.

We know that this is dangerous work for many of our first responders. We all know there are physical risks that they face. We all know, as well, that there are chronic illnesses that many of them face. We also know that there is psychological stress that our first responders face. Bill 1 accepts that this level of psychological stress is work related. Fortunately, we've seen that it is relatively rare.

We've got 27,000 first responders in Alberta: 13,500 are firefighters, both full- and part-time; 9,200 are paramedics; 3,800 are police; and 700 are sheriffs. In the last two and a half years the Workers' Compensation Board has approved 22 cases of post-traumatic stress disorder coverage. Of that, four were first responders.

Now, that might seem to indicate that those who go into this profession are particularly hardy, and from what I've experienced, that is certainly true. But it may also suggest that there is a culture within these communities that makes it difficult for them to reach out for help when they're facing psychological stress. I think that this amendment goes a long way towards changing that culture so that those who do suffer from this illness are able to seek help, able to get the medical services that they need, and able to either get back to work or counselled into another profession. We know that the extreme trauma or the chronic trauma that they face on a day-to-day basis can take its toll on many of them. They deserve our support, and they deserve to be able to get help.

We will be proposing some minor amendments to the legislation, which I hope will be well received by the government. In particular, I would say that with my own riding, in High River and Okotoks, we've got a hybrid department of full-time and part-time paid firefighters as well as volunteer firefighters, so we would like the government to consider the addition of volunteer firefighter coverage. We know that they don't need income replacement, but they do need their medical costs covered in the event that they are diagnosed with this illness.

With that, I'm supportive of the government's initiative in this regard. We intend to work with the government to see this passed, and I commend the government on bringing it forward for debate in this Legislature and being the first government to propose this type of presumptive coverage.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Is there anyone else who would like to speak in second reading to Bill 1?

Mr. Young: I just wanted to reiterate the importance of this. I've experienced a couple of things personally, and often the culture of, "Just push the issue down," is prevalent in first responders. Whether you're a tactical guy or a community guy, you end up seeing some things, whether it's a terrible case of a stabbing or a homicide or some of the horrific ones of young, young children, whether it's sexual abuse or in the nature of those.

As well, you know, a lot of our members get exposed to infectious diseases, needle pricks. I personally had a guy who had HIV spit blood in my eye. Then you have to go home and talk to your wife and deal with that and go through the whole ordeal of getting tested and all those types of things.

People can be tough on the outside, but those feelings are not addressed. You deal with the incident at the time, whether it's cutting down a suicide victim or finding another one who's been in a garage for some time. Those memories and those feelings you carry with you. They don't just go away from one incident, but they build over time. So reflecting those emotional issues of first responders as well as fire and ambulance and that is certainly the right thing to do. I should also add that the services are proactively dealing with this, talking about everything from suicide prevention to support and psychological services, but this adds in a layer of support that is certainly well supported.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members that wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is a pleasure to stand and debate this important piece of legislation. First off, I would like to say that I am pleased to see the Premier and this government bring this forward and recognize the importance of this issue.

Posttraumatic stress disorder is a devastating condition. I've had the opportunity to meet with various stakeholders over the course of the summer break to discuss this bill, and some of them have opened up to me about the stresses, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview just did, that they have experienced while on the job. The reality is that there are few professions that have such prolonged and consistent exposure to the types of events that our first responders see on a regular basis. These incidents would cause nightmares in the average citizen, but for our first responders they're just part of the job, part of the everyday routine. However, some of these experiences may have a more traumatic and long-term effect.

Now, due to the extreme nature of some of these stories that were shared with me, I'll spare the details to this House, but I think it's important to remember that when an infant dies or a toddler drowns or when a mother is breathing her last breaths and asking a first responder to pass a message on to her children, it's those people who have to go home at night. They have to look their wives, their loved ones in the face. They have to go to bed. They have to get up the next day and go and do the exact same thing over again.

This is the reason that we need to get this bill right. Although first responders possess strength that is commendable and their ability to make swift and decisive decisions under the stress of extreme situations is very incredible, we in society at large need them to be able to function at a high level in order for them to fulfill their roles of protecting us. They understand their role and know full well what it is they've signed up for. Our role should be to return the favour. We need to support them and their families when posttraumatic stress disorder is diagnosed, and we need to ensure that the treatment that they receive is one that allows them to take their lives back. We need to ensure that we don't play politics with their mental well-being.

Now, there are many positives in this bill. The presumptive nature should go without saying, and again I'd like to congratulate the government for recognizing that. The inclusion of EMTs, peace and police officers is a very logical decision as well. There will be discussion in this House if other, I guess, careers should be added to that mix, and I am happy to start where we're at now.

I'm pleased to see that the bill also explicitly notes that the diagnosis will be contingent on the most recent edition of Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, published by the American Psychiatric Association. With that, we can confidently move forward knowing that our first responders will always be diagnosed with the most current information possible. That said, I would like to flag that the standards are set to change next year, when the DSM-5 comes into play in May, and that may impact whether or not individuals who may not have qualified leading up to May of 2013 may then be able to under the new model. It may present a challenge for the WCB, and I would just like to flag that.

I'm also particularly pleased to see that this legislation covers first responders who are or have been a first responder, and I'm hopeful that the compensation will be offered to those who have struggled to receive coverage from WCB for this condition in the past. In my constituency there is an individual who spent 26 years in the military and as a firefighter, and about 10 years ago he started suffering the trauma of posttraumatic stress disorder. He could not get coverage from the WCB, so he spent years of his life and $30,000 of his own money to receive the treatment just to allow him to sleep at night. I'm hopeful that this legislation may allow for some recourse for him to recover the costs of his treatment.

Now, I do have some serious reservations about the phrase "unless the contrary is proven." There is a widely held belief that the WCB is inherently set up to dismiss or reject claims. Further, a Mental Health Commission of Canada advisory committee in a submission entitled Stress at Work, Mental Injury and the Law in Canada, final revision, dated February 21, 2009, at page 16 notes:

In some important ways the uncertain legal situation surrounding mental injury at work mimics that which surrounded physical injury at work during the late 19th century. And ironically it was the fact that employees were winning more of their claims against employers during that period that led to the introduction of Workers' Compensation legislation.

It goes on to say:

Workers' compensation law is at an ethical and practical crossroads with regard to whether or to what extent it can and should hold the line against employee claims for stress related disability.

I can table five copies of that, please.

10:00

Well, Madam Speaker, it seems that this is an ethical problem that our WCB doesn't seem to have. As the hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned earlier, 20 of 42 claims presented to the WCB were rejected in just the last two and a half years. I believe it may be problematic for us to pass this legislation under the pretext that first responders are going to receive the treatment that they require, yet we are leaving it up to administrative laws to determine their accessibility.

According to another paper filed by Clinical Psychology Review, tabled here, that summarized 28 studies of PTSD in first responders, research suggests that approximately 10 per cent of all first responders may meet the criteria for PTSD and could benefit from some form of treatment. In Alberta that number would equal 2,700 of our men and women on the front lines. Now, according to WCB four of a potential 2,700 have claimed PTSD coverage since 2010. That's quite a difference, and I suggest that we explore why. Why only four when it should be closer to 2,700? Perhaps it's due to the negative stigma attached to mental disorders such as PTSD and amplified with first responders.

In a PhD dissertation exploring PTSD in first responders, it is suggested that there is an unwritten code in these fraternities or families of first responders that you do not appear weak, that you do not express emotion. Those who do appear weak face the fear of rejection from their co-workers, and those who take it a step further face being put on reduced duty and perhaps losing their job on the front lines altogether, which all too often is a part of the identity of who they are and what makes them the person that they are.

This administrative stress, these feelings of abandonment by the people closest to them and the depression linked to this, can compound that trauma. I believe that those first responders who are suffering from PTSD should have access to culturally competent clinicians who are familiar with the research and realities that first responders face not only in the field when dealing with the crisis that instigates the disorder but also the very real stressors that exist within the organizations that they work in.

Four out of 2,700. The others are possibly self-medicating, drinking to fall asleep at night, taking drugs to stop the nightmares. We need to do a better job of educating the general public about mental health, and we need to do a better job educating our first responders about the realities of stress-related trauma. We need to do this because these are the people that we ask to protect us and save our loved ones in the time of crisis. It is in all of our best interests to ensure that they are able to perform those duties when we need them to. I believe we need to embark on an educational campaign specific to first responders and help these people come to terms with their disorder, to have the confidence to seek help without the fear of rejection from their peers, and ultimately to get their lives back.

This legislation will be the first of its kind in Canada, and the precedent it will set is the reason why it's so imperative for us to get this right. We need to set the bar high to ensure our first responders are provided with the best practices of posttraumatic stress disorder treatment and that they are not encumbered by the administrative laws of the WCB. I look forward to working with my fellow members on all sides of the floor to strengthen this bill and will certainly support it moving forward.

Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like to move to adjourn debate at this time.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Given the hour and the fact that this is the first day of session, I think we should all perhaps go home early tonight. I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 10:05 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Let us pray. Dear Lord, give us the strength to labour diligently, the wisdom to think clearly, the courage to speak thoughtfully, and the conviction to always act without prejudice. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce through you to all members of the Legislature 64 members from Kensington school along with teachers Jaelene McEwen, Kim Shanks, Becky Medwid, and Zinnia Lischuk. They are here today to watch the proceedings, and I hope that everyone behaves accordingly. Would you please rise and receive a warm welcome?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the Assembly Advocis, the Financial Advisors Association of Canada, on its second Advocis day at the Alberta Legislature. For more than 100 years Advocis members have provided financial advice to Albertans, delivering security and peace of mind. The Advocis representatives are joining us today in the members' and the public galleries, and I would now ask them to rise so that we may all join in giving them a warm welcome to the Alberta Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislative Assembly two members of my legislative office staff. Some of you may know Elizabeth Day, my administrative assistant, as she has worked in this building for almost eight years with several ministers and several MLAs. Nelson Ching recently moved to Edmonton from Calgary to join my office as my special assistant after spending almost two years as a constituency assistant for the Member for Calgary-Greenway. I invite my colleagues to call Elizabeth or Nelson if they ever need anything from my office. I am blessed to have such a hard-working, dedicated support staff in my office, and I thank them for their efforts each and every day on behalf of Albertans. They're seated in members' gallery, and I ask that they please rise and accept the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The Associate Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a special pleasure for me today to rise and introduce to you and through you a large contingent from Lethbridge. We call them Team Lethbridge. This is a vibrant and exciting group of people representing advanced education, education in the business community, and many other organizations, 18 to be sure. They've come to Edmonton to meet with ministers and to talk to our government both about some of the great things that are happening in Lethbridge and also about some of those unique challenges that we might face. I would like to ask all of the members of Team Lethbridge to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly our guests from the Union of Canadian Correctional Officers. These 11 correctional officers are a small portion representing approximately 1,100 federal correctional officers employed in several federal prisons situated in Alberta. They are here today to request that their contributions to the public safety of Albertans be recognized by the members of this Assembly through Bill 1, which currently acknowledges police officers, firefighters, and EMTs but does not recognize correctional officers despite the fact that they are first responders. I would now like to ask my guests to rise as I call their names: Kyle Reynolds, Cheryl Reynolds, Janine Enskat, Sandra Krstic, Lacy Mitchell, James Rutledge, Kevin Ransome, Melissa Moher, Andrea Tait, David Baron, and Eryn Lindon. I would ask all members of the Assembly to join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure on your behalf to rise and introduce through you to the Assembly a constituent of yours sitting in your gallery, Irene Feika, who is a passionate advocate on behalf of citizens with disabilities. Irene has been a board member of PLAN Edmonton since 2007 as well as a past executive director of the Alberta Committee of Citizens with Disabilities. With Irene today is her grandson Kody Griffiths. Kody is a grade 8 student attending Ottewell school in the Edmonton-Gold Bar area and loves phys ed and woodworking. I would now like to ask Kody to rise. Irene, please give us a hearty wave. We will acknowledge your attendance, and you will receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly eight very important people. Some are here for the first time and some for the second time. They actually come from Slave Lake and from the Slave Lake Native Friendship Centre. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I ask that they stand as I introduce them: Mrs. Elsie Stenstrom, Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Jean Potskin, Mrs. Maryann Courturielle, Miss Bernice Willier, and Mr. Adelard Beaver. Of course, they are driven here by their bus driver, Ms Elizabeth McSweyn, and their chaperone –these seniors need a chaperone? – Miss Inga Lanctot. I'd ask that my colleagues from this House please give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona stole my thunder, but I'm going to continue as planned anyway. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you a constituent of mine, Kyle Reynolds, with his wife, Cheryl. Kyle was a correctional officer at the Bowden Institution for many years until he developed posttraumatic stress disorder resulting from an incident he witnessed at his job in the prison. He is here along with a number of corrections officers from across this province to represent a group of first responders that has been overlooked by Bill 1. Kyle along with other COs in attendance are here to support an amendment to Bill 1 that will be brought forward by my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona. I ask Kyle and his wife, Cheryl, and other correctional officers in the members' gallery to please rise and twice receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: I don't have anyone listed here for members' statements. I'm sure there are some, so perhaps we could start with the hon. member, the leader of the New Democratic opposition.

Food Safety Monitoring

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the middle of the largest beef recall in Canadian history this Premier assured Albertans that beef was safe to buy and serve to their families. This is one of the most irresponsible statements on food safety since Ralph Klein said that farmers with BSE-infected animals should shoot, shovel, and shut up. In a misguided attempt to protect the beef industry, this government risks perpetuating the very problems which undermine it. Only if Albertans, Canadians, and foreign customers can be assured of the safety of our beef will our brand remain strong. Ignoring the problem is the worst thing this government can do, yet that is exactly what it is doing.

By rejecting the NDP's call for a public enquiry, the Premier is undermining the very efforts to ensure that the problems with the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and their monitoring systems of Alberta beef will be corrected. Despite an investigation recommendation after the tragic listeriosis crisis of 2008 the CFIA was to conduct an audit of their resources, and that has never been fully completed. The federal Conservatives' budget includes cuts to the CFIA of $56 million a year by 2015, yet this Premier again refuses to stand up for the protection of consumers and for the health and sustainability of our beef industry by not opposing these federal cuts.

Attempts by the Premier, her agriculture minister, and even the Leader of the Official Opposition to trivialize the threat of E coli are unacceptable. E coli can be deadly, and there have been many outbreaks in Canada and around the world that have cost many people their lives. For this reason, we place an emphasis on preventing contaminated meat from reaching grocery stores and your family's kitchen table.

This government has not only failed to protect the health and safety of Alberta families, but they continue to neglect the beef industry, which employs thousands of people in our province. Mr. Speaker, Albertans deserve better.

The Speaker: Thank you for your patience, hon. members. Unfortunately, I had a page out of order in my script here. I do have the list here. I should have recognized the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek first, so I extend my apologies to you for the error. I recognize you now.

Primary Care Networks

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wildrose caucus supports primary care networks. I'd like to talk about the valuable work that is being done by doctors across our province under the primary care network model. Over 2,600 physicians have formed collaboration teams with other health care providers to increase access and the quality of care for Albertans. Doctors, nurses, dietitians, mental health workers, and many other health care providers work side by side, bringing comprehensive care to over 2.9 million Albertans.

This summer we saw the Auditor General's report on primary care networks, where he pointed out, "We found that various PCNs have developed a number of performance measures to manage the delivery of their individual clinical programs, but AHS does not compile or assess this information on an overall basis." He goes further to say that primary health care is one of the top five strategies in the five-year action plan, yet "the provincial primary healthcare plan has not yet been developed." It is extraordinary when you think about what the Auditor General is saying. A government that is supposed to lead isn't actually leading or, for that matter, doing what they said that they would be doing.

Mr. Speaker, the PCNs are a valuable asset to our health care system. We need to support what they are doing and allow them to brag about what they are accomplishing for their customers, their patients.

This government likes to brag about all the good things that they were doing, but let's give credit where credit is really due, to our health care professionals, who know how the system works. They know how to fix it. We need to allow them to do what they do best, and that is to take care of Albertans the way Albertans expect them to.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'm sure there are members across the way who were having a conversation who would wish to not continue doing so. Whoever has the floor has the right to be heard. Let's please respect that as best we can.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Child Abuse Awareness Month

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. October is national Child Abuse Awareness Month. It's a time to learn more about how Albertans can work together to stop abuse from happening by supporting parents and families to become stronger. As a social worker myself I had the pleasure of working in the field of child protection during the early years of my career. You can rest assured that this is a subject that is very close to my heart.

Preventing child abuse and neglect is a community responsibility. It depends on family members, neighbours, teachers, health professionals, and anyone involved in a child's life to provide help when they can or report any concerns they may have about a family which is struggling.

Every day concerned Albertans act on this responsibility, and they call the confidential child abuse hotline. Mr. Speaker, each of these calls has been critical in ensuring that families are receiving help to keep their children safe. Some of those calls have kept families together by linking them with supports in their communities. I encourage all Albertans to call the confidential child abuse hotline to report any concerns they may have about a child or family. Anyone who thinks a child or family may need help to prevent abuse or neglect can call 1.800.387.KIDS.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we can create safer and stronger communities by us working together like this.

Thank you very much.

Canonization of Kateri Tekakwitha

Ms Calahasen: The song Only the Good Die Young is fitting for the Lily of the Mohawks, Kateri Tekakwitha, who died at a young age. She is the first North American Indian to be canonized by the Roman Catholic Church, which occurred on October 21, 2012, after years of lobbying by many, many people.

Kateri was born in 1656 to a Mohawk chief and an Algonquin mother at the village of Ossernenon near New York. At the age of four smallpox attacked her village, taking the lives of her parents and baby brother. Although she survived the epidemic, she was left an orphan, weak, scarred, and partially blind. She was adopted by her aunt and uncle and grew up living a traditional life of picking roots, preparing medicines and dyes, collecting firewood, and tending to cornfields. She was never formally educated and was never able to read or write in any language. She, however, loved nature and often went into the woods to speak with God.

At the age of 18 a Jesuit missionary came to the village, and although her uncle disliked the Black Robes and this strange new religion, he allowed her to receive religious instruction. Kateri found her calling, loving Jesus and his teachings. She was eventually baptized and given the name "Kateri," little knowing the ramifications of her Christianity. She became the village outcast. She was refused food on Sundays because she refused to work. She was taunted and threatened with torture or death if she did not renounce her religion. This increasing hostility made her run away, and months later she ended up at St. Francis Xavier near Montreal.

Although she died far too young, Blessed Kateri Tekakwitha's life is still an inspiration to many. I am proud the trustees of Grande Prairie Catholic schools renamed Kateri mission school to St. Kateri Catholic school in honour of St. Kateri, very fitting as their focus is on reading strategies and interventions for students. What an honour.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Ken Stewart

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was a privilege for me to be appointed the Deputy Chair of Committees, or, in other words, the third Speaker of the House. When it came time for me to be outfitted with the parliamentary garb of a Speaker, I was directed to a men's clothing shop in downtown Edmonton that specialized in this type of clothing. In this magical little shop known as Stewart's Men's Wear I discovered this wise old wizard, who was able to measure me up, with his tape measure of course, and order the correct size of pants, shirts, and robe within minutes.

What is magical is Mr. Ken Stewart himself, who is 85 years old and has worked in this clothing business for 68 years. I've never met anyone before who has worked in any business for 68 years. It takes a very special person to serve judges, lawyers, clerks, and parliamentarians for over 68 years.

It's my honour to pay tribute to this incredibly hard-working Albertan, who is up at 5 a.m. every day, exercises for an hour, and is at work by 8:30. Ken Stewart goes above and beyond the call of service. He even walked out to the street that I was parked on to personally hand me my clothing so that I could hurry back and be here as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that Ken Stewart is an extraordinary and hard-working Albertan, who is so humble that he was unable to come today to personally receive our thanks and appreciation for the outstanding work he has done for over 68 years to ensure that judges, lawyers, clerks, parliamentarians, and Speakers look their very best in their judicial garb. Thank you, Ken, for your extraordinary service to our community, and may you continue to serve for as long as your heart and health allow.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of the Official Opposition.

MLA Remuneration

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We need clarity on the government's next cash grab for MLA pay increases. As you know, the Wildrose has opposed the increase, but we see evidence in public statements and public actions that the PCs want the taxpayers to fund all of their RRSP contributions, another $1,000 per month. Yesterday the Premier denied being involved in the effort, yet her government whip said that he misunderstood the directions he got from the Premier. Which is it? Does the Premier want to grab another $1,000 a month from taxpayers or not?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I too have been listening to some of the comments in the press, and I think it's a bit disingenuous of the Leader of the Opposition to talk about MLAs in that committee voting for a pay raise when, indeed, if you take away the transition allowance, it's actually a substantial cut to MLA compensation in the province of Alberta, which we actually have been supporting, including reducing what came from the Major report. As you so eloquently put it yesterday, Mr. Speaker, this is a committee of the Legislature, a committee of all MLAs, and it should be more appropriately dealt with in that committee.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am not talking about the committee. I am talking about the Premier's public statements made in the media, which are about as clear as mud about what the government's real intentions are. We think that they want to increase by $1,000 per month, put this in place as a replacement for the no-meet committee money. Will the Premier assure us, as she did with the transition allowance, that this $1,000-a-month idea will be killed?

Mr. Horner: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, this is a committee of the Legislature, not a government committee.

The other thing that I think is a bit disingenuous, again, is the hon. Leader of the Opposition talking about what the committee might or might not be doing and then attributing it to the government. This is a committee of the Legislature of Alberta. For a party that touts itself as being extremely democratic and protecting that, you would think they would protect the honour of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm on that committee. I was at that meeting, and it did pass. Perhaps the hon. member would like to check the transcript.

Since we can't get a promise that they will scrub this 8 per cent increase in MLA pay, can the Premier explain how they can possibly enter into public-sector wage negotiations with that 8 per cent pay increase for MLAs out there?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as a member of that committee I'm sure the hon. member is well aware that what is being proposed, as I understand it, not being a member of the committee, and what is being offered in the Legislature would be a substantial cut to the overall MLA compensation. It would be a lie to try to present it in any other way. I would suggest that that's perhaps what is going on outside of this House. The ongoing negotiations that we have with the public sector: we've been very clear – at least I’ve been very clear in my position – where we’re going in the future on that. I’m sure it will be unfolded in the fullness of time.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition for her second main set of questions.

Health Services Expense Reporting

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This isn’t the only example of how the PC government completely disregards taxpayer dollars that we saw over the summer. It began with Merali’s $350,000 spending spree in Capital health. It continued through the Premier’s million-dollar Olympic junket to London and then on to Evan Berger’s $120,000 patronage plum. Merali at AHS was bad enough, but the PCs actually offered him a job first to watch over the expenses of all government. Who was responsible for this sloppy bit of hiring?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, we did not hire him, so let’s be clear about that. The interview was done. There was an offer made. Mr. Merali did not accept that offer. I would suggest to you that the hon. member has brought up a previous member of this House being employed by this government. It’s interesting that there are five previous candidates in the election being employed by that party across the way.

The Speaker: Hon. members, just a cautionary note about invoking names of people who are not able to be here to defend themselves.

Second question, please.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government’s buddy-buddy hiring system brought Merali back into the government family and given that they are refusing to reveal all of the expenses incurred by all of the senior people in the health administration, who else in the government family are they trying to protect?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, obviously a politically staged question for the stunt. But, again, I’ll go back. The hon. members yesterday talked about the fact that they believe that hiring previous candidates in elections is somehow a bad thing, yet, as I said, their party has done exactly the same thing because they do see the value in people who are willing to put their names forward for election in this province and who have a passion for this province, as do we.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, Albertans simply want the truth.

Let’s go back to the issue at hand. The issue at hand is the release of all of the government expenses for those who are in senior positions at the health regions. Why won’t the government just agree to release all of the expense claims so that Albertans can have all of the truth about the health expenses of senior officials?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the information pertaining to travel and expense claims of any executive member of any of the current or former health regions is entirely available to Albertans through the freedom of information and protection of privacy process. With respect to current members of the senior executive of Alberta Health Services members should know that at the request of those individuals their expenses have been released or are about to be released, and the board of Alberta Health Services has asked for an independent audit of those expenses to confirm if they were in accordance with the policies in place at the time.

Ms Smith: I seem to recall the board chair complaining about the cost of FOIP expenses.

Provincial Fiscal Position

Ms Smith: In any case, Mr. Speaker, energy prices remain low, yet this government has made no effort to adjust its spending to reflect this new, harsh reality. Regular Albertans, the people we talk to, are worried about the swelling deficit, yet the Minister of Finance said here yesterday that captains of industry are “very confident” as he prepares for his next huge budget deficit. Today EnCana reported a third-quarter loss of $1.2 billion, mainly due to lower natural gas prices. How big is the loss that the Alberta government is going to report?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member well knows or should know given the amount of time she’s now had in the House, we will be doing our second-quarter update at the end of November. We’ve already done our first-quarter update. I don’t think I need to go back over that again because it’s very public. I will say again what I said yesterday: we will balance the budget, including funding our capital plan. We’re going to bring forward a vision and a plan for this province that the other members obviously could not because they’re not in government.

Ms Smith: That’s not what he said.

Given that the minister has gone so far as to speculate about a new mortgage and given that the world watched in awe as Premier Klein paid off the last provincial mortgage – there was even a celebration over that – to the Finance minister: when did Albertans give him permission to take out a new mortgage?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, given that the Finance critic couldn’t read the financial statements of the province of Alberta, it’s understandable that the Leader of the Official Opposition cannot as well. We have the lowest personal taxes in Canada. We have no net debt. We have net assets in this province. We have savings. We have a sustainability account. We have the best financial picture of any province in Canada. We will build the infrastructure that Albertans want like highway 63 now, when they need it, not in the future and not defer it to when it’s going to cost more and when other people may have been injured.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the minister likes to imagine that borrowing for roads and schools is the equivalent of a household mortgage. Of course, if things get tough in your household mortgage, you can always sell and downsize. What provincial assets does the minister have in mind to sell if things get tough here?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, if my budget is balanced on a monthly basis and I’m making my mortgage payments, I’m not selling anything. I’m actually operating the way I should operate, the way every household in this province operates, and, in fact, the way every business in this province operates. It’s time they learned that.

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Provincial Budget

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Conservative government projected a $3 billion deficit despite oil at $90 a barrel. With $41 billion in expenses income taxes only account for about $12 billion in revenue while $11 billion in resource revenue is being spent as fast as it is sucked out of the ground. We have a revenue problem, and the Liberal fair tax plan solves this. We'd balance the budget. We'd still be the lowest tax jurisdiction in the country. To the Minister of Finance: why does your government insist on tying our social services and children's education to the price of a barrel of oil?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, indeed, we have not. We have provided stable and predictable funding to those social services and to education and to health care. We have provided for the best possible health and education programs in our province. I would have to say . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members, please. Let's try and have some civility and decorum continue here.

Hon. President of Treasury Board, please continue.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's pretty understandable that the reason the party that is now asking the question moved from there to there is because they advocated for raising Albertans' taxes and taking more money out of their pockets than they should. We're not going to do that.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, stable, predictable underfunding is more like it.

Given that this government is unwilling to show leadership in addressing our revenue problem, would rather waste taxpayers' money on jet-setting across the world, adding more PR staff, and voting themselves hefty pay raises, to the Minister of Finance: after six consecutive deficits how do you propose to balance the books, or do you just plan to change the definition of a balanced budget?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, the plan for balancing the books will be released in the budget that's going to be coming forward into this Legislature next spring. As I've said before and I'll say again, we will have a balanced operating plan, a balanced capital plan. We're going to actually talk about savings because that's what Albertans have told us to talk about. We're going to talk about putting forward a business plan. I know you folks over there probably wouldn't understand that part, but we're going to put forward a business plan that Albertans will understand and that will be related to what they do on a daily basis.

The Speaker: The hon. Liberal opposition leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Alberta heritage savings trust fund was set up to save nonrenewable resource revenue for future generations and today it's worth less than what it was a quarter century ago and given that the Minister of Finance and his associate minister are conducting a dollars and nonsense tour, begging Albertans to let them use their life savings to pay the daily bills, to the Minister of Finance: is your plan simply to raid the heritage savings trust fund in order to finance the PC's unbudgeted election promises?

Mr. Horner: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, I will not and this government will not apologize for going out and talking to Albertans about their money and their savings. And I recognize that even though we did offer the invitation to the members opposite to attend a lot of these open houses, we didn't see any of them there. Obviously, we're listening; they're making it up.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the New Democratic opposition.

Resource Revenue Projections

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. When this government introduced the budget before the election, they projected oil at $99 a barrel, but in January Shell warned that oil could be as low as $70 a barrel. Other forecasters projected prices between $75 and $80 a barrel. Given that industry experts projected prices far lower than this Conservative government did, will the Finance minister admit that the government's budget is based on reckless and unrealistic expectations?

Mr. Horner: Well, it's an interesting rewrite of history, but unfortunately it's not true. The national forecasting agencies which we used are the Conference Board of Canada, IHS Global, the Centre for Spatial Economics, BMO Capital Markets, Credit Suisse, Deutsche Bank – and I could go on, Mr. Speaker – CIBC World Markets, J.P. Morgan, National Bank Financial, Peters & Co., RBC, Scotiabank, Toronto-Dominion, for all of whom, including independent analysts from the U.S. Energy Information Administration, the range was $91 to $120. We went to the middle and down one notch. That's the estimate we used.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the price of oil today is now $13 a barrel lower than the government's estimate, how can the government pretend to be surprised when this projected deficit has ballooned from $868 million to $3 billion?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I wasn't surprised at all. I'm the one that delivered the message.

It's obvious to me that members opposite seem to think that the price of oil is set at the beginning of the year and stays there for the rest of the year. We know better, Mr. Speaker. That's why we're talking about a range, and that's why we're talking about actuals to budget. We're not talking about rewriting the budget every three months, which I know is something that gives them something to talk about. The reality is that last year at this time we were projecting a deficit. Do you know what happened? We were $23 million away from a balanced budget at the end of the fiscal year that finished in March. So to suggest that I or they could actually predict what the price of oil is is utter nonsense.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, why doesn't the Finance minister come clean and admit that this government deliberately overestimated revenue in the last budget in order to hide the deficit reality from Albertans during the election?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I've tried to indicate and as the documents prove, we don't make up the estimate. We use the estimates from these public and private estimators that are at that point in time. What we do know is that they are variable.

I would ask that the hon. member help us with the market access piece, which is so critical for us to attain the appropriate price for our product, that Albertans are now being hosed for because we don't have market access. We need that market access to get us back to a number that is more reasonable for our projections.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

School Construction

Mr. McAllister: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maybe we'll let the Finance minister sit down and grab a drink for a quick second and switch to education.

Yesterday a government MLA stood in this House and practically begged the Education minister to build a school in his riding. I think it's safe to say that 87 of us in here could do the same thing. The current approach to building schools is creating confusion and uncertainty for everybody as they wait on pins and needles to see if schools will be approved in their riding. To the minister: how are these decisions prioritized? Is there an established criteria that you follow to determine who gets new or renovated schools?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, that's a great question. It's on the mind of many Albertans. I would just say that this government is committed to building schools and building infrastructure. There probably are 87 MLAs that would ask that question in this House. I'm not sure how that reconciles with the opposition promise to cut $1.7 billion out of the budget. These are not easy decisions to make. We take the requests we get from every school division across the province, and we measure those against each other in terms of which are the biggest health and safety issues, which are the biggest issues in terms of enrolment growth, and where don't we have desks. We're looking for partnerships, like I explained yesterday.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I always find it interesting when government refers to cuts because I think we talked about a bureaucracy being shaved. We didn't say anything about schools.

Given that so many boards and parents, Mr. Speaker, are in the dark about plans for schools in their area, given that there have been accusations of politics determining a role in where these new schools are going to be built, wouldn't it be prudent, then, for the minister to commit to creating and releasing a set criteria on how these decisions are made for building and renovating schools so we all know what's going on?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, just for clarity for the member his party's policy was to cut $1.7 billion out of capital in this last election, and the year before that the alternative budget was to cut $2.4 billion out of capital.

With respect to the question on the priorities of the... [interjection] Mr. Speaker, it seems the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre doesn't want to listen to the answer.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie, you rose on a point of order? Thank you. It's been noted.

Hon. member, your final question.

Mr. McAllister: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. Trust me when I say that I'll try and proceed with some civility as we go through it.

Given that we are now staring a $3 billion deficit in the face regardless of how it's sliced on the other side, given that during the election campaign the government made a promise to Albertans to build 50 schools and renovate 70 more, and given that it made a prior promise to build and renovate 33 more, will the minister stand up today, go on record, tell Albertans that they will build and they will renovate all the schools that they promised they would in the time frame that they said they would?

Mr. J. Johnson: Absolutely. We've got a promise from our Premier that we're going to open 50 schools and renovate 70 more within this term, Mr. Speaker, and we're working on a capital list right now that's going to deliver exactly that. I can tell you that in addition to that, we will open 15 new schools this school year. We just opened 13; there are two more to come. The Minister of Infrastructure would tell you that there are 22 new schools under way right now and 13 other modernizations. There is a significant amount of capital being invested into schools. We realize that it's not enough, and our Premier realizes that it's not enough, and we're going to invest in families and communities just like she said we would.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, followed by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Bullying Awareness and Prevention

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bullying continues to be a topic of great discussion with the tragic events of the last few weeks in our country. It is safe to say that everyone in this House agrees that this is not a new challenge. The most significant part of a child's day is spent in school, which increases the likelihood that a child can be bullied at school. My questions are for the Minister of Education. Can the minister tell the House what his department is doing now to ensure that Alberta children can feel safe at school?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, that is a very good question. Let me be very clear that bullying is unacceptable. Period. This is a very diverse province. We want the schools to respect diversity. Every child is unique, and every child deserves to feel safe, accepted, respected, with no exceptions. School boards and teachers across the province are doing some very great work in this regard and, without getting into the new Education Act because that would be out of order, we're going to even strengthen the expectations on school boards to that end.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: Mr. Minister, what resources are available for kids who are being bullied and are afraid to share their story or for parents that are concerned that their children are either being bullied or may be the bully?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, these are very difficult situations to be in, and I'm very happy to say that in partnership with my colleagues the Minister of Human Services and the Minister of Health there are a number of resources that are out there today. Like I said, the school boards and trustees and our great educators and the great people that work in my ministry on this are working very hard as well. We do have a 24-hour hotline for students and parents. There are also three different websites that various folks can go to for support, whether they're parents, students, or educators. We have a number of resources that are available for teachers and other initiatives that are ongoing throughout the year that are diverse across the province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: Mr. Minister, what is contained in today's curriculum that helps our children to develop these skills?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, what I can tell you is that curriculum and assessment revisions are being developed in response to Inspiring Education and the three Es. The central pillar of the three Es was the ethical citizen and, with respect to that, the expectations of the ethical citizen as one who contributes to the community, one who respects diversity, is collaborative, and works with others. We want someone who earns what they get.

I just came from the Me to We big conference down in Calgary, and I can tell you that there are some exceptional initiatives that are ongoing in this province that are demonstrating the citizenship that our students are learning.

One we should profile is Mackenzie Martin, one of our pages, who rented the Winspear Centre a couple of weeks ago and put on an incredible conference that was profiling the International Day of the Girl Child. She deserves a lot of credit for that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Little Bow Continuing Care Centre

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Wildrose believes in putting Albertans first and following through on our commitments. Unfortunately, the government does not share these values. On page 8 of the government's election platform it clearly states in its continuing care strategy, and I quote: enhances the care capacity of every long-term and continuing care centre in Alberta, whether they are newly built facilities or renovations and upgrades to existing ones. End quote. To the Premier: how can Albertans believe a word you say when only three months after the election you broke a clearly defined campaign promise by shutting down the Little Bow continuing care centre in Carmangay?

The Speaker: Hon. member, it's the custom to table documents that you're quoting from, so I ask you to consider that.

The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for making that request.

This government has not failed to deliver on its commitment to Albertans with respect to continuing care. As was asked and answered in the House yesterday, Alberta Health Services made a decision regarding a particular continuing care facility in Carmangay, one of the oldest facilities in the province. Mr. Speaker, we discussed yesterday in the House the reasons that led to their decision.

The fact of the matter is that in the last year alone over 120 net new continuing care beds have been opened in the south zone of Alberta. As hon. members should also know, the new beds that we are building today are capable of delivering all levels of care to Albertans, including long-term care.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government's campaign platform clearly states a promise to build 1,000, and I quote, long-term care spaces, end quote, does the Minister of Health accept the AHS definition of long-term care as around-the-clock, 24-hour, registered nursing care?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, as we've said many times before in this House, including before the election of the hon. member, we are committed to delivering a thousand beds a year. If any member of the House cares to take a look around the province, they will see that the new beds that are being developed are equipped to handle all levels of care from supportive living up to and including long-term care. [interjections] This supports aging in place. . .

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: Excuse me, hon. member. I hesitate to interrupt, but again, interjections are not on. [interjections] Excuse me. No interruptions, including when I'm speaking, please, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. Please. The point is that the Minister of Health has the floor. When you have the floor, I'll do the same for you.

Please proceed, hon. Minister of Health.

Little Bow Continuing Care Centre (continued)

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I was saying, I think the critical difference between us is that this government is committed strongly to a principle of supporting aging in place for all Albertans. That means keeping couples together, that means not forcing people to move facilities when their care needs change, and that means supporting families and communities.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Premier was enjoying an all-expense-paid trip to the London Olympics while the Health minister was busy closing down the Little Bow continuing care centre, does the Premier find it acceptable that she could have kept her word, that she could have kept this facility open, and that she could have kept families together in Carmangay all for the cost of her luxury Olympic retreat?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, other than commenting on the disrespectful nature of the question and the fact that the Premier is not in the House today and that the question doesn't concern public policy in the remotest respect, I'd say to the hon. member once again that this government is committed to supporting modern approaches to continuing care for seniors that allow them to age in place and stay together in their own communities.

The Speaker: Hon. members, just a reminder. Procedurally speaking, we do not, out of custom and tradition, refer to the absence of any members from this House.

Let us move on. Edmonton-South West followed by the Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

School Construction (continued)

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Overcrowding in schools has become a pervasive issue in this province. In some cases, like in my constituency of Edmonton-South West, schools have had to request portables in order to deal with this issue. Johnny Bright school, for example, has a current capacity of 850 kids but has close to 1,000 kids in the school. Could the Minister of Education please indicate whether school overcrowding is a priority issue to be addressed at this time?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I think I've spoken to that already today, but the answer again is: absolutely. We know that there are some significant growth pressures in certain areas, especially in the large metro areas around the perimeter, or in the south by Okotoks and Airdrie, in Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie. Those things are no secret, but they're going to be addressed in one of three ways. We not only have the option to build new schools, but we've got to use the modulars and the portable fleet that we have as much as possible and invest in that. The other unique thing that we have a challenge with is that we actually do have a surplus of space in some of the metro areas, like Edmonton with an extra 50,000 spaces. They're just in the wrong spots.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance. There's been a lot of discussion about new schools, but could the minister please be more clear and indicate how the government plans to fund and build these new schools?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I indicated earlier in some of my responses to the hon. members opposite, we were talking to Albertans throughout the summer about how we might be able to approach capital in different ways and looking at alternative solutions, P3s and a number of other things that we've been doing. There are other methods of financing and getting value for that capital. We're going to take whatever approach we can to fit the needs. Albertans are asking us to build that infrastructure. We're not not going to build it now because they need it now.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To really spread out my questions, could the Minister of Infrastructure please advise as to which specific communities and districts will be receiving these new schools?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Education stated earlier today, he and I work closely to review the capital requests of all the school boards in the province and with the parents and families to come up with a priority list. I can assure you that growth pressures will be taken into account when we do that. We hope to be able to announce where and when the next school projects will be built over the next several months.

School Class Sizes

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, despite projected growth in our schools doubling, Alberta classrooms have approximately 600 fewer teachers today than they did two years ago. Class sizes continue to rise, and teachers' working conditions continue to spiral downward. The government accepted a Learning Commission report in 2002 which committed to reducing classroom sizes, yet little has been done in this regard. To the Minister of Education: has the government simply given up on the recommendations of the Learning Commission report from approximately a decade ago?

Mr. J. Johnson: No, absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. The class size initiative is ongoing. It's still one of the envelopes that we use to fund schools. As a matter of fact, since . . .

Mr. Mason: But you're not reducing class sizes.

Mr. J. Johnson: Well, it has had some success, but we're actually focusing our attention on the earlier grades, the primary grades, 1 to 3, and trying to have the most impact there.

We've actually invested $1.6 billion in class size reduction since that report came out. I think that last year alone it was close to a quarter of a billion dollars. As a matter of fact, over the last 10 years – the hon. member talks about the last couple of years – the number of teachers in our school system has gone up 13 per cent.

Mr. Hehr: And it's made no difference on class sizes. They're still out of whack from what the Learning Commission recommendations were.

Given that teachers across the province have identified heavy workloads and increasing classroom sizes, two of the most detrimental factors to our children's education, will this government commit to reducing class sizes and ensuring optimal teaching environments?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, we're going to continue to invest in and continue to work on the class size initiative. Absolutely. But there are other factors also at play in terms of how effective those classes are, including the skill of the teacher, and probably more impactful is the makeup of that class. With the inclusive education system we have now and the different types of students that they have in that room that the teacher has to work with, those are big challenges as well, and we need to try and face those at the same time as we deal with just the class size.

Mr. Hehr: Given that when the hon. Premier was running to become the leader of this great province, she promised full-day kindergarten within one year of taking office and that has clearly not happened, what are your plans to get this done in the next four years?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, it's a good question, and many Albertans are asking this. We are committed to full-day kindergarten. There's no question about that. Right now being led by the Minister of Human Services is a review of early childhood development as a strategy. Prekindergarten, preschool, and kindergarten are part of that early childhood development strategy. So as that's concluded this year and we further study the requirements for funding for not only capital but the professionals that are needed for full-day kindergarten, we will be moving to full-day kindergarten options across the province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Bill 44 Parental Rights Clause

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Conservative government likes to talk about antibullying, but there still lurks in this Chamber and around Alberta a bill that casts a dark and nasty shadow over their best intentions. Section 11 of Bill 44 puts a chill on good teaching practices, puts up walls, and discourages discussion on important issues. My questions are all to the Minister of Education. Will this minister not admit that this contentious section of Bill 44, section 11, undermines his attempt to build an effective antibullying and human rights education strategy?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, that bill does not fall under the purview of Education, but I'm happy to comment on maybe any implications that may or may not have been felt in the education system over the last four years since the bill was passed. To my knowledge and from what I'm hearing from my ministry, there have been no negative implications, and we don't have cases of a chill in the classroom or complaints that have come forward through my ministry.

Mr. Eggen: Teachers around the province would beg to differ, Mr. Speaker.

Given limitations imposed by Bill 44 that make it much more difficult to discuss and teach important lessons on equality, diversity, and the acceptance of differences, how can the members of this Conservative caucus stand and debate in good conscience antibullying legislation when teachers are no longer able to address these issues without Bill 44 breathing down their necks?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member is alleging that teachers are being bullied, I would like to know about that. I want to know about those cases. You should be phoning my office so that we can deal with it. Those are not cases that have been coming through the ministry. Let's not forget the rights of the parents, who do have a right to choice with respect to education, and that's a foundational piece of our education system.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, given that Bill 44 seeks to limit discussion on important issues about discrimination, gender, sexuality, why won't this minister use his influence to help rescind this bully Bill 44 section so that we can get on with the business of promoting equality, acceptance, and open discussion in our schools?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the member that we need to get on with it. We need to look forward. We need to deal with the Education Act. Let's not look back to a bill that was debated thoroughly in the House four years ago and passed. We have not been seeing negative implications of that bill.

Highway Safety

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Minister of Transportation for answering the Wildrose call for a timeline on the twinning of highway 63. However, highway 63 is not the only priority in the north. Wildrose heard time and time again on our consultation tour that highway 881 is also in need of urgent attention as it faces many of the same stresses as highway 63. Many residents in the area are calling for the upgrading of highway 881 to a primary designation. Has the Minister of Transportation done a cost-benefit analysis? Where is this on your priority list?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for the question. The fact is, interestingly enough, that the opposition party put a request out last week which actually had a schedule slower than what this government has committed to. Further, after their asking for three years' capital spending to be spread out to four, it never would have been built had they been in control of things. Having said that, at the same time that we committed to keep the promise we've kept, we have also actually committed to adding some passing lanes on highway 881 and other things to make it safer. This government is performing on behalf of Albertans.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, given that so far the government's progress on twinning highway 63 is incredibly behind schedule – it was in 2006 – will the Minister of Transportation commit to a detailed plan for twinning highway 63, including stages, including timelines, so Albertans will really know that this is a top priority for this government?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows and by now almost every Albertan knows, the highway will be fully twinned and opened by the end of fall 2016. Now, along the way there will be different stages which will become public as the tenders are let and received because that's part of the process. I'm sure the hon. member will be happy to be a part of that process as a member of this House and as an Albertan, and we will make those things public as they become firm. Like all Albertans that appreciate the commitment by this Premier to get this done, I'm sure the hon. member appreciates that commitment as well.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, given that so many senseless deaths on highway 63 have occurred as Albertans have waited for this highway to be twinned and given that winter is fast approaching and there are no road lines on a 70-kilometre stretch of highway north of the Wandering River community, can the Minister of Transportation at least commit to a definite date that these lines will be repainted?

Mr. McIver: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is right about one thing. The one thing missing on the section of road is lines. In fact, this government has gone to what I would say is a little bit of an extraordinary measure. They're bringing in a piece of equipment that will actually dry the wet, snowed upon road and allow painting right behind it, a bit of an extraordinary step, but we're doing it because we think that the safety of Albertans is that important. I thank the member for the question. It could be this week. We're hoping by Friday. Again, I can tell you this much, that as soon as the equipment arrives, we will not delay in putting it to work in providing that extra safety for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Bicycle Safety on Roadways and Trails

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sadly, Edmonton-Gold Bar lost one of its residents in a tragic motor vehicle accident in Prince Edward Island this past summer. Elizabeth Sovis was struck while on a bike, one of the numerous biking vacations she had with her husband, Dr. Edmund Auger. It was Elizabeth's wish that Alberta be a leader in the development of safe cycling trails. To the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation: what steps are being taken to make sure that Alberta's trail system is safe for all users?

Ms Cusanelli: I want to thank the hon. member for my first question in the House. I would also like to thank him very much for being an advocate on behalf of Dr. Auger. I was able to meet with Dr. Auger and, at that time, was able to tell him that we are very sorry for his loss.

Part of what makes the Trans Canada Trail so valuable is the fact that it will provide a safe place for all users to be able to enjoy cycling, walking, OHVs, and even boating here in Alberta. We look forward to continuing the progress along with many of the contributors here in Alberta and, hopefully, to being able to carry on the legacy that Dr. Auger's wife would have liked us to carry on for her.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You mentioned progress. Could you give us more of an outline of what that progress is?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Here in Alberta we have the second-greatest amount of trail to develop, and I can report that we are continuing to make progress. Currently we have about 60 per cent of the Alberta leg completed, which is similar to the extent that Ontario has completed their section. One of our newest sections is through the Glenbow Ranch provincial park near Calgary. This legacy trail is really going to be the result of hundreds of volunteers coming together and donors who are working with Alberta TrailNet. We are well on our way, but certainly more work is needed.

Mr. Dorward: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: how is the budget and financing side of the trail doing?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta trail is being developed through the nonprofit registered charity organization. I met with Deborah Apps with the Trans Canada Trail and Linda Strong-Watson and Peter Barr with Alberta TrailNet to find collaborative ways in which we can raise money to complete the Alberta portion by 2017. Their trail project is a partnership, and I am so proud to share that Albertans are some of the highest donors in Canada when it comes to raising funds for this trail. Completing the rest of our trail is a big investment, and I know Albertans and the trail foundations will be working collaboratively towards this endeavour to make that happen.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Cancellation of Funding for Police Training Facility

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The cancellation of the Fort Macleod police college is the zenith of PC mismanagement, punishing hard-working Albertans in the region. This PC government came to this community for 13 years consulting with the municipality, businesses, and enforcement agents and handed out contracts in July of 2012. I repeat: July of this year. The government had said over and over that it made sense to build this facility. But after pulling the rug from under the project and the town, there has been no apology made to the people of Fort Macleod or to the businesses and local officials who are being hit in the pocketbook by this decision. When will the Solicitor General pick up the phone, apologize to Fort Macleod, and explain why he . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would first like to thank this hon. member for what I believe is his first question in the House.

As I stated in the media earlier this year, in July of this year I heard from police chiefs in Calgary, in Edmonton, and also the chief commissioner of the RCMP in Alberta, representing 94 per cent of the new recruits in this province, indicating that this facility was not required and would not be fully used. We acted in the taxpayers' interests in cancelling it as quickly as we could.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister please explain how it can be so incompetent for 13 years, promising the project to the people of Fort Macleod and consulting with various enforcement agencies over that time, and then within a single month change its mind completely?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I again thank the member for that question. As I indicated, we acted as quickly as possible in July. If only this member's caucus could act as quickly as possible with their promises. In one breath they say: balance the budget. In another breath last night all we heard was: spend, spend, spend, more to protect seniors from rising energy costs, another urgent care centre for Sylvan Lake, a new Rocky Mountain hospital. This all costs money, and if we're going to balance the budget, we have to make these tough decisions.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this community was so negatively impacted by the decision to cancel the project, will the government do the right thing and guarantee that the town of Fort Macleod will be compensated for all it has invested, committed, and directed from their own grant fund and that it be returned to them as quickly as possible?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, I have met with the entire council of Fort Macleod, and it's unfortunate the member doesn't know that. We've been discussing with them what sort of opportunities can come out of the water infrastructure investments. This is not all bad news. Of course, the opposition would make everyone think that this is awful and bad news, but I can assure him – I even have a quote here from the mayor: we have recently held some positive meetings with representatives and leaders from the various government ministries and are working towards recovering all our expenses and are working with them, and we understand that we can and should come out of this in a position that allows us to continue to forge a bright future for this community. That's this municipality in Fort Macleod that has accepted the decision and understands the new opportunities that are coming forward for that community.

Private Registry Services

Ms Jansen: Mr. Speaker, my constituents in Calgary-North West depend on registry offices for essential services, including drivers' licences and vehicle registrations. My constituency does not have one. We have a large population, a high number of car dealerships in our area, and my constituents are asking for a registry office nearby to make their busy lives easier. My question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. Will you allow for more registry agent offices for more Albertans so they can easily access the services they depend on?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd first like to congratulate the member on asking her first question in this House. It was a good question. My first recollection of the member was when I was child and she was on 2 and 7. The best rendition of Hello, Calgary, the old theme song of channels 2 and 7, is by this member.

We are excited to move forth with the Association of Registry Agents to provide more online services and an expansion of our registry area network.

Ms Jansen: Mr. Speaker, I would then counsel the minister to listen to his elders.

I am very glad to hear the ministry is moving forward with plans to better serve my constituents. Even so, it has been a very long time since we've had a new registry office. I'm glad to hear you're reviewing the registry agent model, but what does that mean for my constituents in Calgary-North West?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're looking to move forward with providing more services for Albertans, first of all, providing more services online. Secondly, I'm working with the Association of Alberta Registry Agents to expand our expansion and relocation policy so that Albertans can have access to services closer to home. I'm also looking to find ways to ensure that we have consistent records, consistent service standards to ensure that Albertans receive the services they require.

Ms Jansen: My final question to the minister, Mr. Speaker. We know that there is a tremendous increase in the number of Albertans who are turning to the Internet for their goods and services, and I'm very glad that you've acknowledged that, Minister. This option gives people in rural Alberta the access they need 24 hours a day. So, Minister, are you going to do something about those registry offices to make them available over the Internet?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yes. The member has been advocating this, and I've been working on this. We look forward to bringing forward changes in the next short period of time to ensure that Albertans have access to more services online when they need them.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, before we proceed with the final member's statement for today, might we have unanimous consent to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to my colleagues in the Assembly. You know how excited I get when I get an opportunity to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly someone from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. Indeed, joining us today in the public gallery is Roy Skoreyko. Roy is a wonderful constituent, very involved in the community, and is a real advocate. He sat on the PDD board and has advocated around housing, PDD, and mental illness. He is a great addition to my constituency, and I'm delighted to introduce him in the Assembly today. Please join me in welcoming him.

XL Foods Inc. Beef Recall

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak to the ongoing situation in my constituency of Strathmore-Brooks caused by the temporary shutdown of the XL Foods plant. Yesterday I welcomed news of the plant restarting operations with the approval of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency. Today I will focus on the impact the closure has had on the community of Brooks and the surrounding region. While I've been tempted to ask a question in question period on this, I would rather not politicize the issue. Instead, all parties need to work together.

I've spoken with many cattle producers and industry groups in the past several weeks, and I've been told the cattle industry has lost millions of dollars of revenue each day. This is something that affects all of Alberta, from local businesses to service providers to feedlots.

Locally many of the 2,200 workers are living cheque to cheque. The food bank is running out of food. There are families that need winter clothing for the harsh winter ahead. They haven't received any income in weeks, and it looks like they'll be waiting weeks before receiving any kind of payment, with rent due on November 1. It's up to elected representatives to take the initiative and step up to help those that have been affected. I would like to challenge every member of this House to make a $100 donation, as I have done, to the city of Brooks food bank, which can be done online at brooks.ca, and you will receive a tax receipt.

The Newell regional economic development initiative under the county of Newell recently released a study on the economic impact of the closure of the XL Foods plant. The total economic loss for the Newell region amounted to an estimated $226,000 in wages each day that this plant was closed. The closure represents a tremendous loss to the community and local businesses. Although the situation looks positive with JBS, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency, and XL Foods working together, we're not out of the woods yet. Government needs to listen closely to what the industry is saying now and take actions to help the workers in Brooks.

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance on behalf of.

Bill 2 Responsible Energy Development Act

Mr. Horner: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. I would like to request leave on behalf of my colleague the hon. Minister of Energy to introduce Bill 2, the Responsible Energy Development Act.

Through Bill 2 Alberta is setting the stage for the next 50 years of effective and efficient energy resource regulation and development. The proposed legislation will create a single regulator for oil, gas, oil sands, and coal. The new regulator will be efficient and effective for landowners, efficient and effective for industry, and committed to Alberta's stringent environmental standards.

Mr. Speaker, I move first reading of Bill 2, the Responsible Energy Development Act.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Services for Persons with Disabilities.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and in accordance with the legislation table the requisite number of copies of the 2011-12 annual report for the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to table an article from the CBC referencing a Macdonald-Laurier report which seems to indicate that Alberta's fiscal structure is at some peril going forward. I've long said this, too, and it looks like increasing numbers of people are joining that chorus. I have the requisite number of copies here and will go forth from that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have here the requisite number of copies of two documents I referenced yesterday in my speech on Bill 1, one called Stress at Work, Mental Injury and the Law in Canada and another from Clinical Psychology Review from 2012.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others?

If not, then it's my pleasure pursuant to section 28(1) of the Ombudsman Act to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Ombudsman for the period April 1, 2011, through March 31, 2012.

I think we have a point of order which the hon. Member for Airdrie wished to address. Hon. Member for Airdrie, please proceed.

Point of Order Inflammatory Language

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the point of order that I referred to, I'd like to cite Standing Order 23.

Mr. Hancock: It's (h), (i), and (j).

Mr. Anderson: I've learned so much from this member about (h), (i), and (j) over the years. He's trained me well.

Actually, I'm not using (h), (i), and (j). I'm just going to use (j), with regard to the Education minister using "abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder." I think you would agree that his language in his answer to the question clearly created massive amounts of disorder, and I'm going to tell you why, Mr. Speaker.

In his comments he flat out says that the Wildrose would cut spending to infrastructure, would cut infrastructure projects out of the budget, and he gives numbers from our alternative budget. Of course, what the Wildrose has always said is that, indeed, we would take the projects on the capital list and take the ones that would wait a year or two and spread those out over an extra year or two. That's what we've said consistently. Now, that is the truth of the matter.

However, it's really amazing that this minister would say that when, after the first-quarter update was released just recently, this very Finance minister was quoted in several newspapers and radio shows. I'm just taking one; I could cite more. After saying that the financial situation is worse than forecast, the Treasury Board President says that unless things change, the provincial government is looking at lower energy royalties than budgeted in the first quarter of this year. If that happens, government departments have been put on notice that they may have to reduce operational spending and look at whether capital spending plans can be deferred.

That seems to be exactly what the Wildrose position is, Mr. Speaker, exactly the same position.

When this minister here comes into this House and, I believe, uses very abusive and insulting language by misleading Albertans into thinking that the Wildrose would cut the schools and the roads and the facilities that the people of Alberta need while his government is saying something else, that is simply not the case. I think we're both saying that in times of trouble we need to make sure that we defer infrastructure projects so that we can balance the budget, so that we can live within our means. That is what the position of this party has been, and finally the government seems to be coming to around to it. Congratulations for following us on that.

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I feel the need to defend myself somewhat. I certainly didn't intend to be abusive or hurt anyone's feelings by any stretch of the imagination. We may disagree on what the facts are here. It seems like this is more an exercise in extending debate than actually talking about abuse in the House because we did have a rather raucous session here.

I've got two documents in front of me, Mr. Speaker. If I misspoke, I'll apologize. This one is the alternative budget from the Wildrose from 2012, that clearly says that they would save $1.623 billion out of the capital budget. They would cut roughly $1.7 billion out of the budget. This was brought forward just before the election. The previous one that I referred to was the Wildrose alternative budget from 2011, which clearly states that they would cut $2.41 billion out of the capital budget. So I'm not sure that I misspoke, misled anyone. I don't have the Blues to see my language exactly, but I certainly didn't intend to be abusive.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's interesting that the hon. member would rise under 23(j), "uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder." Now, if anybody should understand what that section means.

However, it's very clear that the hon. member has not been listening to himself or to his party leader because if he had, he'd not only understand the concept of abusive and insulting language, but he'd also understand that you cannot advocate, as he and virtually every one of the members on his side of the House have in their maiden speeches, for building things in their constituencies – not a bad thing to do because we do need to have the infrastructure for this province to grow – and then by the same token say: balance the budget, including capital spending; and, by the way, pay cash for your capital spending and cut that amount; and don't build the capital stuff right now; but, by the way, I need a school in my riding. Or was it five?

The Speaker: Are there others? Thank you.

Hon. members, let me first direct you to Beauchesne 494.

It has been formally ruled by Speakers that statements by Members respecting themselves and particularly within their own knowledge must be accepted. It is not unparliamentary temperately to criticize statements made by Members as being contrary to the facts; but no imputation of intentional falsehood is permissible. On rare occasions this may result in the House having to accept two contradictory accounts of the same incident.

I think that yesterday I spoke to this, and I'll be very brief today to simply say that the hon. Member for Airdrie has stood and clarified his party's position and his point, and it's all recorded in Hansard now. Thank you. The hon. Minister of Education, followed by the hon. Government House Leader, have stood up and indicated their points. This, to me, is much more a difference of opinion and a point of clarification than it is a significant point of order. It's not infrequent that we'll have varying accounts of the same issue, and I think that is the case today. So we're going to accept the clarifications as being just that, and we're going to move on with Orders of the Day, I believe.

Orders of the Day
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 6
Protection and Compliance Statutes
Amendment Act, 2012

Mr. Jeneroux: Mr. Speaker, I ask approval to introduce the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act for second reading.

Albertans have the right to expect a safe a workplace, the right to feel secure in the belief that work done around and for them is in keeping with the safety codes that are in place, and the right to expect to be treated fairly in business transactions.

This act amends the Occupational Health and Safety Act, the Safety Codes Act, and the Fair Trading Act. These amendments have been bundled together because they share common threads. They all address penalties for when laws governing safety and fair trade practices are contravened. These are all aimed at improving health, safety, and fairness for Albertans in public, in the marketplace, and on the work site. The intent of this legislation is to ensure willing and active compliance with existing regulations by creating new penalties and bolstering those that already exist for those who ignore the provisions of the three acts being amended.

It is important to note, Mr. Speaker, that the great majority of employers and businesses in Alberta willingly and carefully comply with the rules that are in place which govern their activities. However, there are some who repeatedly and chronically choose not to do so. The provisions of this act are aimed directly at them. This act sends a clear message that they will not be able to flout the rules and put either the safety or financial security of Albertans at risk without meaningful consequences.

Administrative penalties will allow regulators to do much more than issue a warning to violators. In the past many of these warnings have been ignored, and the only way to deal with the situation was through protracted and costly suspensions or prosecutions. Administrative penalties provide for a middle ground, one which points to the seriousness of the violation in question and government's commitment to eliminating those violations.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The seriousness and commitment of government is evident in the fines that can be levied under each of the amendments in each of these three acts. The Occupational Health and Safety Act is under the jurisdiction of Alberta Human Services. It covers all aspects of health and safety in the workplace. The amendments to this act will add maximum administrative penalties of $10,000 per occurrence per day and will provide an effective way of dealing with high-risk noncompliers.

The Safety Codes Act is under the jurisdiction of Municipal Affairs. It covers construction and maintenance of safe buildings and equipment and related public safety. These amendments will bring a three-year limitation period in which charges can be laid and increase maximum court fines to $100,000 for a first offence and $500,000 for a second offence.

The Fair Trading Act is under the jurisdiction of Service Alberta. It prohibits unfair practices and misleading advertising in connection with consumer transactions. It also provides consumer cancellation rights, a seller's code of conduct, and requires some types of businesses to be licensed. Amendments to this act introduce new administrative penalties of up to $100,000 and increase maximum court fines from $15,000 to $100,000 for a first offence and from $30,000 to $100,000 for subsequent offences.

No one is likely to see those fines as a slap on the wrist, Mr. Speaker. They're intended to be a wake-up call for those who put their interests ahead of safety and fairness. The administrative penalties make it clear that the cost of doing business is greatly reduced when they play by the rules. The Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act is about accountability. Those who put the public in danger will be held accountable for their actions. Those who do not believe in the need for a fair marketplace and who erode customer confidence will be held accountable. Those who put workers at risk of injury or death will be held accountable.

Albertans have the right to expect a safe workplace. They have the right to feel secure in the expectation that work done around and for them is in keeping with the safety codes that are in place, and they have the right to expect to be treated fairly in business transactions. This act will go a long way in helping to meet those expectations.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also move to adjourn debate.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

3:00

Bill 9
Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2012

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think this is the first time that you've been in the chair this session. It looks good on you.

I am pleased to rise and move second reading of Bill 9, the Corporate Tax Amendment Act.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta is recognized by many as a place of opportunity. The province was pioneered on the vision and innovation of early settlers, who transformed what was once their dreams, the opportunity they had, and their vision into a thriving region in which millions of Albertans live, play, and work. Today Alberta continues to attract visionaries and innovators, people who make it their business to move Alberta forward. The Alberta government supports the work of these modern-day pioneers, and the changes proposed in Bill 9 will ensure that Alberta continues to maintain a fair, equitable, and competitive tax regime, a drawing card for many businesses around the world.

The biggest change to the act is an enhancement to the scientific research and experimental development tax credit. This program reflects the government's recognition of the importance of research and development in Alberta. It provides a refundable tax credit to corporations for research and development in Alberta. The proposed amendments, originally announced in Budget 2012, will enhance annual benefits to Alberta companies by $25 million, making more funds available to support research and development in those Alberta companies. Ultimately, the changes to the scientific research and development tax credit will make this program more competitive and underscore Alberta as a place for research and development.

Bill 9 also includes proposed technical, administrative, and policy changes that, if passed, will ensure that Alberta's tax regime remains fair and equitable. We propose to eliminate an insurance company's ability to claim different reserve amounts to cover future claims for federal and Alberta purposes. Currently insurers are deducting different amounts for Alberta and federal tax purposes, and as a result they may pay the federal taxes but may avoid paying provincial taxes. Bill 9 would eliminate this practice, thereby simplifying both administration and maintaining a higher degree of fairness in our system.

Also in the spirit of fairness Bill 9 proposes changes that would help ensure that all corporations pay their taxes. One of our challenges is that sometimes – and this will come as no surprise, I'm sure, Mr. Speaker – corporate debtors don't provide government with up-to-date contact information, making it difficult to collect the said payment. The proposed amendments would ensure we have the legislative authority to use outside databases to find those folks. We've also added a provision that would allow us to release taxpayer information in certain specific circumstances such as upon request of the Auditor General.

The final amendment I'll touch upon proposes some changes to the insurance corporations tax. This is to clarify the definition of marine insurance. Basically, we're proposing to clarify the exemption for marine insurance so that, consistent with past policy, insurance on pleasure craft continues to be subject to the tax.

While I've highlighted the most significant of the proposals, there are several other amendments to the Corporate Tax Act. There are also technical corrections to correct the calculation of the scientific research and experimental development tax credit. I'm only mentioning this, Mr. Speaker, because it does take up about eight pages of the bill, it is about the calculation, and our time here is limited. The remaining amendments are minor in nature and are needed to keep our legislation both current and effective.

Alberta's ongoing attention and improvement to our tax regime is an important factor in our position as a destination to live and run a business and one of the reasons we continue to attract the best and the brightest. I encourage all members to support Bill 9, the Corporate Tax Amendment Act, and I now move to adjourn debate on the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Olesen moved, seconded by Mr. Luan, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate October 23: Mr. Denis]

The Deputy Speaker: I recognize the next speaker, the hon. member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you. It's just Airdrie now, Mr. Speaker. That's okay.

It is an honour to stand before you today as the newly re-elected member for the wonderful constituency of Airdrie. I count it as one of the greatest honours of my life that the people of my hometown have trusted me to represent their families and loved ones in this Legislature. I thank them for trusting me and also for trusting my reasons and motives for joining the Wildrose two and a half years ago. It seems a lot longer than that. I did it because I felt my constituents deserved an MLA who was able to fight and vote freely for what I feel is in the best interests of both my constituents and Albertans.

There is a self-evident truth, I believe, and it is that an MLA without a free vote is a constituency without true representation. I am honoured that the people of Airdrie and area overwhelmingly endorsed my decision at the polls in the spring. It is a trust I will continue to work daily as hard as I can to uphold.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I didn't take this opportunity to say how much I love and am grateful for my mom and dad. Any strengths I have I owe to my father and mother in the way that they raised me, while my weaknesses – and they are certainly many – are all my own. [interjection] That's right. That's called personal responsibility, for those across the aisle.

Of course, there is my family. There is no one I love and admire more in the world than my beautiful wife and best friend, Anita. The blessing of sharing our life together is simply the best thing that will ever happen to me, not only because I get to spend my whole life with my best friend but also because of our four beautiful children: Derek, Bryce, Spencer, and little Joshua. Although it's an honour to serve in this House, the worst part of this job is being away from them, Mr. Speaker. However, it makes me cherish all the more the time that I do spend with them when I'm at home. Nothing in this world brings me more happiness than they do, and I always want to make sure they know that, no matter what life brings.

Mr. Speaker, I am an Albertan, born and raised. I love this province. I cannot get enough of her. I'm almost irrational about it. When I'm driving around Alberta, one minute I'll be on my iPod listening to Metallica and Aerosmith and rocking out to that, and then the next minute Paul Brandt's Alberta Bound comes on, and I start tearing up. It's really weird, but I can't help it. I don't think many of us can. Who can resist the look of driving toward the Rockies in the summer and watching those huge giants loom up as we go to Banff or Jasper? Who doesn't gaze and wonder at the miles upon miles of yellow canola fields under a deep blue Alberta sky? Who doesn't smile peacefully when driving through the rolling hills and valleys of cattle country with those iconic pumpjacks working their magic in the backdrop, symbolizing in a perfect picture the combination of natural beauty, hard work, and the we-can-do-anything spirit that is so quintessentially Albertan?

Mr. Speaker, all of us in this House come here for different reasons. My reasons are these. I believe Alberta has the potential to be one of the greatest ongoing success stories in the world. I believe we can become a world magnet for families, entrepreneurs, artists, and any hard-working soul wanting to find a better life and that we can be that place long after the age of oil has passed. I believe that the key to becoming that kind of province is to recommit ourselves to the principles of personal freedom and democracy that have repeatedly proven to be the cornerstone of any truly just, fair, and prosperous society.

So I must ask: does this government's agenda promote freedom and democracy? Does it empower Albertans to better themselves by allowing them the freedom to make the choices they feel are best? Or is it an agenda that enshrines a government-knows-best attitude using trickle-down, government policies?

For example, I believe in economic freedom. As someone who loves to read and study history, I am convinced that the free market system is the only economic model on Earth that has consistently shown the ability to lift millions of people from poverty into the middle class and, in many cases, beyond. It would take hours upon hours to adequately outline the improvements in life expectancy, quality of life, technology, innovation, the arts, human rights, and so many others that have come about because of the power of the free market to capture the naturally innovative and aspiring spirits of mankind. In such a system the government's role is not to compete with the free market and its entrepreneurs and innovators; it is to set a fair playing field, enforce the rules, and get the heck out of the way.

This PC government has not improved our economic freedoms. Our regulatory burden is one of the largest and most inefficient in the country. Many would-be investors in Alberta are uncertain about this government's growing reputation of changing the rules of the game to suit their political purposes of the moment. Examples include spending billions in taxpayer funds to pick winners and losers with corporate handouts like the $2 billion carbon capture grant giveaway; messing around with the royalty framework six or seven times before finally settling it; seizing oil, gas, and grazing leases and other property rights without guarantees of proper compensation; shutting down for no good reason independent private health facilities working within the public system; and the constant flirtations with tax increases. The bottom line is that we are less economically free and less stable than we have been in decades, and that has to change.

We need to always be asking ourselves, "What can we do to responsibly free our entrepreneurs and job creators?" rather than "How can we milk them and burden them just a little bit more to pad government coffers or fulfill some random wish of a special-interest group?" This is the economic freedom I and my Wildrose colleagues are here to fight for.

That brings me to another freedom. I believe in being free from debt, free from government debt. We all remember the great accomplishment in 2005, when Ralph Klein announced that Alberta was debt free. All of the sacrifices of the '90s were over, and we were now free of the burden of debt. I remember the photograph, Ralph standing beside this huge cheque with "paid in full" emblazoned across it. Now we could build that heritage fund. At that time the feeling was that we could build that heritage fund and invest oil and gas revenues in a fund that would eventually earn enough annual interest that we wouldn't have to rely on volatile oil and gas revenues any longer. We could use the fund to build up multibillion-dollar research and scholarship endowments for generations to benefit from. And we could do this while still spending what we needed on infrastructure and core social programs.

But we all know it didn't work that way. Instead, this government went on an unprecedented spending spree, increasing capital spending by roughly 700 per cent in less than a decade, resulting in massive inflation and cost overruns with relatively little to show for it. They spent billions upon billions on public union salaries and pensions, driving them up to be by far the highest in Canada and much more lucrative than their equivalents in the private sector. Our heritage fund was continually raided until it became worth less when adjusted for inflation than in 1976, when Premier Lougheed first established it. In addition, Ralph's $17 billion rainy-day fund is now almost gone, and our financial net worth as a province is down one full half in just five years. And now, even with oil at $90 to $100, the government has decided to return us into debt to finance their spending addiction. In fact, a report by the well-respected MacDonald-Laurier Institute says that Alberta is the most likely province in all of Canada to face an EU-style debt crisis because of its high spending and overreliance on oil revenues.

I and my Wildrose colleagues are here to fight this fiscal madness. We will not sit back while this government mortgages our children's futures. We will not let this government squander opportunities that every other jurisdiction on Earth can only dream of. We will not buy the excuses or the implication that if we don't borrow to spend, we can't build schools or treat the sick. It's simply not true. We can have world-class schools, medical facilities, roads, and other infrastructure and still live within our exceptionally considerable financial means. But it does mean we need a government that knows the difference between our needs and our wants and isn't burdened with feeling obligated to pay back certain groups and individuals for political support and favours. We must remain free of debt and save for the future so our children can become even more economically free than we are.

Freedom must be pursued and protected in other areas as well. The freedom of parents to choose the type of education and the learning environment that best suits their child's learning needs and their family's values is critical. Yes, our education system is good, but it could be so much better if we would allow more competition and innovation into the education system, more public schools with specialized programs, charter schools, francophone schools, faith-based schools, specialty schools for trades or those with learning disabilities, and different types of learning methods that ensure children are able to work at a pace that works best for them while ensuring that learning problems are caught early and opportunities to excel faster than others are made available if wanted and desired. Freedom in education means better education for all of our children.

Then there is freedom in health care. So-called progressives have got to open their minds to new possibilities. I always thought that's what it meant to be progressive, but the almost religious devotion of progressives to the current method of delivering universal health care is difficult to comprehend. We know from universal health systems around the world that we can give Albertans more choices on who they want to provide health care to them. We don't need to hold on to the broken systems and ancient, ritualistic ways of providing health care, all the while ignoring the horrendous inefficiencies of our current systems. There are so many universal health systems around the world that provide patient choice and competition and, most importantly, better results for people. Let's embrace these ideas, not reject them out of fear.

Finally, there is the freedom to live in a society free of government corruption and intimidation. I know and recognize full well that the majority of members opposite are not corrupt, but they are part of a governing culture, an apparatus, that has become corrupted, in my view. I know they say that there's no culture of entitlement or corruption or anything untoward. Well, then stop claiming it and start proving it because your government's actions do not match your rhetoric.

A transparent and accountable government does not hire ex-cabinet ministers back into their old departments mere months after they are turfed by voters. Transparent governments don't campaign on fiscal responsibility during the election, then vote themselves an 8 per cent raise right after the election. Accountable governments don't promise to balance the budget during an election, and then decide to change what the definition of a balanced budget is after the election.

Clean governments don't base their decisions on where to build new schools or hospitals on what party the area's MLA belongs to. They don't promise a wide-reaching health inquiry to get down to the bottom of widespread intimidation of our health professionals and then neuter that inquiry so that threats and intimidation can be swept under the rug. Transparent Premiers don't post their expenses only after being FOIPed by the opposition; they do it before. They don't charge their Law Society fees, Air Miles card fees, and lip balm to the taxpayer and then try to justify it. They don't spend a million dollars on a taxpayer-sponsored Olympic party and try to say that it was good value for money.

Mr. Speaker, we need a government that knows the difference between right and wrong, between transparency and secrecy, accountability and corruption. I and my Wildrose colleagues will fight to make sure Albertans live in a province free from government corruption, intimidation, and entitlement. We cannot truly have freedom for our people without it. Ronald Reagan once said:

Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. We didn't pass it to our children in the bloodstream. It must be fought for, protected, and handed on for them to do the same, or one day we will spend our sunset years telling our children and our children's children what it was once like . . . [when] men were free.

I love this province and its people. I know we can be the best place on Earth to live, work, and raise a family, with a strong and certain future based on a purposefully chosen path today. I believe that the principles of freedom – economic freedom, freedom of speech, freedom from debt, freedom in health care and education, and freedom from government corruption and intimidation – will see Alberta achieve its potential as a place of hope and prosperity in the world for Albertans both today and tomorrow.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I've asked this of a number of different people that have already given their responses to the throne speech, so I'd like to extend the same thing to the hon. member, and that is: could he name three personal issues and three constituency issues that he'd like to drive forward, that are important to him? We all come here, I hope, because we want to change the world. What are the things that you want to change either to make better or eliminate? Could you share that with me?

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Airdrie in response, through the chair.

Mr. Anderson: So many, but I will give you three. You know, one of the main things I think is that if we're going to fix the budget in this province – and that is one of my goals, hon. members, to see us with a truly balanced budget, one where we're not taking on debt as debt servicing costs and all these types of things – we have got to take the politics out of infrastructure in this province. It is a huge part of our budget – $7 billion, $6 billion, $5 billion – whatever the year is. It's a huge chunk of money, and what's happening in this province, I believe, is that it has been highly politicized.

If you go to the city of Calgary website or the city of Edmonton website, you can actually look and see what the actual order is of the projects that are coming up, whether it be a recreational facility or a road or anything like that. You can tell right away what's next on the list. That kind of transparency is incredible because what it does is that it allows – if something moves up or down the list all of a sudden randomly, was that done for political reasons, or was there a population change, or did something change to make that change important to occur?

That's what we need done in the province. We have all these requests coming for schools and health facilities and all of these things. Why can't we come up with an infrastructure priority list that is transparent, completely transparent? List it out, put it online, make sure everybody knows where they are in the queue and what pieces of information, what criteria, were used to put them there so everyone can be confident of that.

Then when the Finance minister comes with a budgeted amount of money, whether that be 4 and a half billion dollars or, in their case, $6 billion or whatever, whatever the amount is, we know that that huge amount of money is being spent on the top 40, 50, 100, whatever it is, projects that are the most important to get done that year, that it's not being politicized, that deals aren't being cut between powerful cabinet ministers or MLAs that need help with their re-election or to punish a constituency in some cases or whatever. That would just do so much to improve not only the civility in Alberta's politics but to improve the way that we budget. I guarantee we could get so much more bang for our buck, for our infrastructure dollar if we did it that way, but we don't.

That's one thing, hon. member, balancing the budget, depoliticizing infrastructure in this province.

Also, one thing I am passionate about is education. One of my little guys has autism, and we've been going through that journey with him. He's just beyond precious. One thing we have noticed is that in early childhood development he got the support he needed, and thank goodness for that. We really have some great programs in the zero to six age grouping there for kids with disabilities. But after six we're noticing that it really drops off. For a lot of these kids a lot of the behavioural problems and the things that cause so many problems down the road happen in their K to 4 years, and they never get that back. It's almost like they just lose all that support they're getting. They get some, but it's just not anywhere near the same. That's one area I'd really like to focus on in education.

Also, as I spoke about in my remarks, just the idea that we could create a curriculum, create choices so that parents – children learn in such different ways. You know, boys are much more hands on as a general rule; girls really excel in other ways, using other learning methods. I think if we could start introducing curriculum and learning opportunities that were really personalized to the individual child and allowed them to work at their own pace and in their own way and be able to identify right away if they're falling behind or if they have the desire to go ahead, give them that opportunity. I think that introducing those types of models into our public system but also the charter system would be a big improvement.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll recognize the hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great honour that I speak today in the House in response to the throne speech, and it is exciting to be back here with all of you people. As many of you have mentioned, none of us would be here without the hard work of the volunteers and supporters, but above all else not a single one of us would be here without the trust and support of our constituents. We must remember that we are here to represent them, not tell them what to do.

We would not be here without the support of our amazing family and friends, so to all of these people: thank you for putting your trust in me. And thank you to all of my colleagues. I salute you and your efforts.

I extend congratulations to you as well, Mr. Speaker, for your election to the chair. I hope we have the pleasure of working together for many years to come.

I am pleased to extend well wishes to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor for his dedication to serving Alberta and Her Majesty as well as for presenting the Speech from the Throne.

I was elected to represent the constituency of Medicine Hat in the far southeast corner of the great province of Alberta. We are entirely surrounded by the constituency represented by my friend the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat. I am the 14th elected MLA, representing the seventh different political party in this constituency. I am only the 822nd person elected as an MLA in the 107 years as a province. Now with a population of almost 3.8 million people it is a very humbling position, indeed.

Medicine Hat was represented by Liberals from 1905 to 1913 and then the Conservatives from 1913 to 1921. Between 1921 and 1926 we were a multimember constituency, which included representation from the hon. Perren Baker, whom I will speak more about later. Social Credit was represented from 1935 to 1975 by both John and Elizabeth Robinson, quite possibly the first husband and wife to serve as MLAs. The hon. Jim Horsman served from 1975 to 1993 under Premier Lougheed. Premier Lougheed was a leader among leaders, a statesman respected across Canada. My wish is that all MLAs, including those members in government, will strive with the honour of Premier Lougheed. Most recently the hon. Rob Renner served from 1993 till retirement in 2012. Many of these MLAs held various ministerial roles, and it proves that our part of the province provides major talent.

A common thread my predecessors recognized is that government has an important but small role to play. My constituents realize that when change is needed, Albertans will lead the way, as witnessed by 34 per cent voting Wildrose on April 23.

Mr. Speaker, I mentioned Perren Baker previously, and I would like to speak more about him. He was first elected in 1921, serving the United Farmers. As well, we know the wild rose is Alberta's provincial flower and is a fantastic representation of Alberta. The wild rose is strong, hardy, and resilient, and it is also the name of the caucus that I am very proud to sit with. You may be wondering why I mention both Mr. Baker and the wild rose. Well, in 1930, when the wild rose was chosen as our provincial flower, it was done with assistance from Alberta's schoolchildren when Mr. Baker was our Minister of Education. Without that process and without Mr. Baker we may have picked the prairie sage. We may have chosen the hairy false golden aster, or we could have selected the horned bladderwort, all flowers found in Alberta. I know I am thankful to them for the choice of the wild rose, not only because it is a beautiful flower and a great symbol for Albertans, as mentioned, but because I don't know how many of my colleagues would want to sit as the Horned Bladderwort Party.

I was raised on the Sunny Slope farm, my Danish grandfather's homestead north of Gull Lake, Saskatchewan. Besides helping on the farm, I grew up listening to and playing music, participating in sports, including track and field, hockey, football, and riding motocross. I enjoyed the freedoms, lessons, and opportunities that farm life offered, but in 1985 I entered the oil and gas supply industry. I arrived in Medicine Hat in 1994, and in 1996 I met the love of my life, Angela Kolody. She is my rock and she is my strength, and I could not be here without her love, guidance, and support.

In 1999 I was very fortunate to become a business partner with a supply company I worked in, and through hard work and a lot of determination life has been good to us. We have a passion for travel. While we have travelled domestically and internationally, Medicine Hat is home and quite simply is one of the best places in the world to live, work, and play.

I've always been a conservative, but in recent years I found myself without a true conservative party. Like many Albertans, I found a home in the new conservative grassroots party called Wildrose. In 2011 I attended a rally where our leader, now the amazing Leader of the Official Opposition, spoke in Medicine Hat, and I decided to run for public office. At the time Premier Stelmach was in firm control of a majority government, the current MLA was in his 18th year, and I was entering my 27th year in the oil and gas industry. I guess you could say that life has changed a bit because after a hard-fought campaign the voters put their trust in me and the Wildrose to represent them in the Legislature.

3:30

What has amazed me is how many Albertans not only talk about change but also the right kind of change and, above all, the type of change that will put Albertans first. As a former drummer in a band I feel a connection to the Scorpions rock band. Like the Scorpions, I feel the wind of change is upon us. This change is political, though, and it is based on our history of strong conservative principles and values. Our seniors are being left behind, families aren't being listened to, and farmers and ranchers are being ignored and ridiculed by the current government. This government does not represent change, and they continue to show the inability to change. But hang on, Alberta, because change is coming. It's coming from this side of the House, and most importantly it's coming from Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, Medicine Hat is an amazing place to call home, with over 60,000 residents, and we are growing and thinking bigger. Alberta is growing, too, but we all face challenges. Every city is competing for companies, large and small, to provide employment for their citizens. I will work with not only our community organizations but, most importantly, with each and every Albertan to ensure we do our best to promote Medicine Hat.

Medicine Hat is rich in history, including the First Nations, who lived here and provided our city with its name. We are rich in culture, and we have a quality of life nearly impossible to find anywhere else. Medicine Hat is situated along the banks of the mighty South Saskatchewan River, spreading outward on both sides. Water is life, and we are fortunate to have sufficient quantities to sustain us now and well into the future.

Medicine Hat owns their power generation plant, and we are a producer and supplier of oil and natural gas. We have been referred to, as my friend the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat mentioned in his speech yesterday, by Rudyard Kipling in the early 1900s as having "all hell for a basement." Medicine Hat is a leader in promoting alternative energy systems through grants. Plus, we are embarking on a solar power electricity program unique in Canada. This innovation taking place in Medicine Hat is what's truly exciting.

Medicine Hat has a wide array of indoor and outdoor activities, and we enjoy an extensive park and path system. The summers are hot, the days are long, and winter is broken by the warm and regular chinook winds. Medicine Hat's sunrises and sunsets are second to none, and being blessed with having the magnificent Cypress Hills nearby along with kilometres of open, rolling countryside, it is no wonder we are known as the Oasis on the Prairies. It is a slice of heaven I am thankful to call home.

Medicine Hat not only services southeastern Alberta but also southwestern Saskatchewan as a hub to well over 100,000 people. There are a number of churches and religions plus a myriad of groups and social organizations that people can join to get involved in their community. The Medicine Hat Exhibition & Stampede celebrated its 125th anniversary this year, making us older than the Calgary Stampede, and we are darn proud of that.

Medalta Potteries is an amazing historical site and resource, but it has also moved into the 21st century by accepting artists in residence from around the world to mix history into new ways and ideas of art. Our Medicine Hat College grows year after year, not only in curriculum but also with their reputation.

Our annual JazzFest, running for 16 consecutive years, makes it the longest running jazz festival in Alberta. We have multiple theatre and dance groups performing in small venues right up to our renowned Esplanade. As the Official Opposition critic for Culture I am very proud to support and highlight the great cultural scene in Medicine Hat, and I look forward to working collaboratively with my friend the Minister of Culture.

We are proud to have the REDI Enterprises Society call Medicine Hat home. This amazing group works with individuals that face physical and mental challenges by providing caretaking or housing options as well as providing work training and job placement. REDI also works with those suffering brain injuries and assists in their rehabilitation. A unique program, REDI recycling, raises funds to support their operations while helping the environment. REDI is truly an inclusive community solution to diverse community challenges and issues within Medicine Hat.

Our key industries are manufacturing, oil and gas production and processing, defence and aerospace, construction, agriculture, and tourism. We benefit from the proximity of CFB Suffield and BATUS and DRDC. This is one of the largest military training and research bases of its kind in the world.

Mr. Speaker, Medicine Hat does have some challenges, yet we also have the capabilities to meet them head-on. Alberta has embarked on a 10-year plan to end homelessness while Medicine Hat has taken on a more ambitious five-year plan. With social support groups working together, Medicine Hat could be the first city in Alberta to meet this goal, and what an amazing accomplishment that would be.

Medicine Hat was and still is feeling the effects of the PC royalty review. Due to the natural gas based resource industry surrounding us, the current low market prices are driving our local companies and employees to other parts of the country and the world. Penalizing the experience, technology, equipment, and business owners with expensive, burdensome, and complicated interprovincial barriers and regulations is not the way to maximize on our wealth of local talent. Most levels of industry suffer from this problem, and government must correct their mistakes before it's too late.

Medicine Hat is finally receiving our hospital expansion that has been talked about for almost a decade, having been promised and postponed and then repromised. We hope it will be completed as intended without further delays or facility service reductions. Embarrassingly, though, in a province as wealthy and fortunate as Alberta, Medicine Hat is still the only major city in Alberta without a detox and treatment facility. There are issues around doctor shortages, schools and teachers, affordable retirement facilities, plus many families and individuals simply struggle day to day just to survive.

I will help individuals as much as I possibly can. If someone has been wronged by our government, I want to help to make it right. I say this to the government: I stand here today not only to challenge and speak up but also to support you in making decisions beneficial to Albertans. Be assured that as the opposition we do not simply think that our job is to oppose for the sake of opposing; however, when you do something unacceptable, we will stand up for Albertans and make sure their voices are heard. Remember that 56 per cent of Albertans did not vote for the current government; hence, there is much they should listen to.

Mr. Speaker, lastly but most importantly, I will serve all of my constituents and all Albertans no matter what their political leaning is. I shall do this with honour, with respect, and with humility, and I will always put the needs of Albertans before everything else. I fully understand that I am the current but temporary voice of the voters of Medicine Hat, and my job is to represent them to the best of my abilities, not build personal empires.

In conclusion, take a little Scorpions, add a little bit of Medicine Hat, combine a pinch of Saskatchewan, mix it all together really well, and I feel the renewed wind of change is upon us. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mr. McAllister: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, I had the pleasure of growing up in Medicine Hat and was pretty much raised there, so I appreciate everything you had to say, as we all do anyway. But my question for the member is that the one thing I didn't hear you mention was the junior A hockey team, the Medicine Hat Tigers. Are they a proud franchise? Did you want to touch on them at all? Just having a bit of a connection there from me. Are you a proud Tigers supporter? I'm curious.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. Now, I do realize that the member is sitting beside you, but our tradition means that you speak to the chair.

The hon. Member for Medicine Hat in response. Thank you.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank my hon. colleague for the question. The Medicine Hat history in sports goes way back. We do have the Medicine Hat Tigers. I am a big fan. The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat did mention them yesterday, so I didn't want to double up on the same speech, but, yeah, I'm a very big Tigers fan. I have my jersey. I mean, Lanny McDonald, Kelly Hrudey: some of those great people came through the Medicine Hat Tigers organization.

It's fantastic that these young individuals are chasing their dreams, I think, as many of us are, right? The opportunity afforded to us here in the Legislature, you know – these opportunities don't come along. Not very many people are able to grasp that brass ring as it goes along on the carousel. Not many people even want to put themselves out to be those people. But you see young individuals chasing their dreams, and it's so great that we can be part of Medicine Hat to watch these young folks do that.

We also have a great baseball team, the Medicine Hat Mavericks. Sports, I think, is big in a lot of the smaller communities. I think it's that connection that communities, you know, give back to their sporting people. It's also nice, I guess, coming from a smaller centre. We don't have the NHL in place, so we still have our hockey to watch this year.

It is great. Medicine Hat is a great sporting town, and I appreciate the question.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We still have some time. I'll recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, a pleasure to hear from you, Member. A couple of comments. You may not know this, or you may, but this is my 10th anniversary of being in the Legislature as a result of your predecessor, all credit to your predecessor, who fired me from the Palliser health region in 2002. It was a real shock to me to have him replaced there, and a pleasure, let me say that. It always rankled a bit for me to have him . . .

Mr. Hancock: No. It's his neighbour.

Dr. Swann: Oh, I'm sorry. I have the wrong person. Anyway, it's an opportunity to highlight that.

Medicine Hat is close to my heart, having worked there 10 years. The other thing I think it's opportune to raise is: how do you feel about the public utility in Medicine Hat and how that's kept prices low and people really in very favourable straits in terms of their energy portfolios? Would you comment on that?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Thank you very much to the member for the question. Medicine Hat is very blessed that we do own our own utilities: our power generation, our oil and gas division. It's put us in a really positive spot within, I guess, our own fiscal framework. We're able to identify the needs on the supply side. We can run that revenue through into the power generation side. Sometimes one side will make a profit one year; sometimes they both make a profit. It is a huge advantage when we control the power generation, when we control a lot of the natural gas production coming in.

The city just branched out and bought I think it was a couple of hundred oil wells south of Medicine Hat. We're branching out into that resource sector to make sure that we have a balanced portfolio. We've realized that having natural gas so heavily weighted into our city finances has normally been a very good thing, but in this last downturn it's been a bit of a negative, so they've decided to get into the oil industry to try and balance that portfolio. They're trying to redevelop an older field, and they're having some good initial successes.

So it is beneficial, I think.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, we have seven seconds.

Dr. Swann: For your information, it was Minister Lorne Taylor at the time who ensured that I was fired, and I believe that you replaced him.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

I will now recognize the hon. Member for Livingstone-McLeod.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and good day, everyone. My name is Pat Stier. Firstly, I would like to congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on being elected to your new position as Speaker of the House. I'm sure that your many years of experience will be of great assistance in your future endeavours here, presiding over the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, it's with great pride that I rise here today to speak to the Assembly as the representative from Livingstone-McLeod. I am proud, happy, and thrilled to serve the people of such a fabulous, vast, and beautiful area of this province. I'm following in the footsteps of many very distinguished predecessors – Mr. Evan Berger, Mr. David Coutts, Mr. LeRoy Fjordbotten, and Mr.

Frederick Bradley, just to name a few – all of whom did a fine job of representing their constituents. I have a great deal of respect for all of these gentlemen, and I will be diligent in my efforts to uphold their very high standards.

Mr. Speaker, I'm a lifelong resident of the southern foothills region. I live on what remains of my family's farm today. My grandparents were pioneers and settled in the Beddington and Okotoks areas initially, then later Blackie at the turn of the last century. My parents eventually became owners of a ranch near De Winton, where we as a family raised Angus cattle, Arabian horses, plus grain and hay crops for over 30 years. Throughout my own working career I was employed primarily in a seismic data segment of the oil and gas industry in Calgary and spent many years in municipal government, including four years as a municipal councillor.

Prior to my nomination and the recent election I continued to work in the MD of Foothills as a rural land planning consultant, which included projects in many of the areas of Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Speaker, once again the constituency boundaries for Livingstone-Macleod have changed, and in the recent 2012 election the footprint of the riding was adjusted significantly towards the north with areas that were formerly part of the Foothills-Rocky View, Banff-Cochrane, and Highwood ridings, including the communities of Priddis, Millarville, Turner Valley, Black Diamond, Longview, Meadowbank, and Cayley along with the acreage areas near Red Deer Lake just south of Calgary. To the south another adjustment was made where the areas south of the Waterton River, including the Blood reserve, were removed. So, then, for clarity purposes so that we all understand what a big area it is, the new boundary now stretches along the western side from Priddis in the northwest corner all the way to the southwest end near Waterton park while along the eastern side it now stretches from High River in the northeast corner to just east of Fort Macleod in the southeast end, with the Waterton River being the new overall southern boundary.

Mr. Speaker, southwest Alberta is where the plains that provide choice farming and ranchland meet the foothills and the majestic eastern slopes before abruptly giving way to the Rocky Mountains. To the east there are vast open areas of croplands, and to the west there are some of the most majestic and beautiful panoramic views in Alberta that include the fabulous foothills and mountain vistas along with the Porcupine Hills, that are one of the few unglaciated hills in Alberta. This is a unique grazing environment with rough fescue grasslands on the lower slopes and tall, spiky Douglas fir trees on the ridges.

There are over 20 communities in the Livingstone-Macleod riding. The list in the southern quadrant includes Nanton, Stavely, Claresholm, Granum, Fort Macleod, Cowley, Pincher Creek, Lundbreck, plus the Crowsnest Pass communities of Frank, Bellevue, Hillcrest, Blairmore, and Coleman along with the MDs of Foothills and Ranchland, Willow Creek, Pincher Creek, and the Piikani reserve. Each of these communities and the overall area have a fabulous history, and there are numerous historical sites that may be toured throughout the region.

In the southwest corner, most notably, are the various locations in the Crowsnest Pass, where at the turn of the last century coal mining was at its peak. Coleman, Bellevue, and Leitch Collieries all have and are fine exhibits of mining operations that were prevalent in the area.

Unfortunately, as well there is the reality of that era in terms of several disasters in the mining industry along with several fires plus, of course, the horrible event that took place when Turtle Mountain collapsed on the town of Frank in 1903. This is displayed at the Frank Slide Interpretive Centre, and I would encourage all Albertans to take a moment to tour that facility there along with Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump, that is just nearby.

Along the highway 2 corridor are the towns of Fort Macleod, where the first North West Mounted Police post was established in what was then the North-West Territories, along with Claresholm and Nanton, both of which are well known in historical terms for the flying service training school built in '41 to train British Commonwealth pilots and later in the '50s for training NATO airmen. Claresholm was also a significant CP Rail location. The railway brought settlers that raised cattle, grain, and carried crops to market, and it also brought coal from the mines and provided a means for soldiers to head off to war.

Looking to the northwest area of the new riding, where we have the community of Longview in the south and the hamlet of Priddis in the north, are several key communities, including Turner Valley, which, of course, is well known as the birthplace of Alberta's oil and gas industry. Beginning in 1914, for over 30 years Turner Valley was a major supplier of oil and gas and the largest producer at the time, actually, in the British Empire. Today, while there are still ongoing oil and gas activities in the general area, the former Turner Valley gas plant remains as a national historic site.

Nearby to Turner Valley is the town of Black Diamond, which is actually well known for its coal-mining days, which grew in size quickly as the entire area developed into quite a resource region overall. Also close by is the Eden Valley reserve and the historic Bar U Ranch, located near Longview, which at one time was comprised of approximately 147,000 acres of prime ranchland and is also a natural historic site viewed by thousands of people every year.

But today the area of Livingstone-Macleod is a thriving hub of agricultural activity primarily. While there's an immense amount of pressure on the region from the oil and gas industry, there are also several significant new industries, including motion picture production, which has brought the fabulous vistas of this riding to viewers throughout the world. As well, we also have the amazing wind energy business thriving down in the Pincher-Cowley wind corridor. As time moves forward, we must endeavour to create and maintain a balance between these new land uses, agriculture, and good stewardship of the land in this very majestic region. Indeed, while much work has been done in terms of preserving agricultural land and protecting natural areas, more must be accomplished in the future to guarantee that we are doing everything possible to protect our water sources, our air, our forests, our natural capital that we so much treasure in these fabulous viewsheds.

Further, however, we must at the same time ensure that we are carefully reviewing all new legislation to ensure that our landowner property rights are also protected. Over the course of the last couple of years hundreds of Albertans attended meetings throughout the province extremely concerned about the new land-use framework and the land-use bills, specifically bills 19, 24, 36, and 50. Hundreds of hours – literally hundreds of hours – were voluntarily contributed by concerned individuals, and thousands of miles were travelled by landowners and special-interest groups who sought to ensure that their voices were heard on these issues so that change could be made to these poorly conceived legislations. I will guarantee that their work will not have been for nothing. I will continue to carry their message to this government at every opportunity available to me.

In addition, the people of Livingstone-Macleod have brought to my attention the very serious need for upgrades to several seniors' facilities in Blairmore, Pincher Creek, and Claresholm, where some of the housing authority buildings, in fact, and mechanical equipment are in a very sad state and require immediate attention.

Similarly, Mr. Speaker, I will bring again to the attention of this House that the decision to cancel the Alberta public security and law enforcement training centre at Fort Macleod was not only poorly conceived. It was done at the expense of 13 years of planning, consulting, and several millions of Albertans' tax dollars along with the future hopes and dreams and investments of the people who live and call the Fort Macleod area their home. This government must reimburse all of the stakeholders in this very sad and appalling decision regarding this issue and do so immediately, accompanied by an apology to all of those residents and stakeholders who so looked forward to this project being completed and operational.

As the representative for Livingstone-Macleod and as the sustainable resources critic for the Official Opposition in the next four years I intend to work as diligently as possible on these aforementioned issues, and I do so hand in hand with community leaders, special-interest groups, and other constituents toward those objectives.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, as the Livingstone-Macleod MLA I am proud to serve the residents of the riding and look forward to challenging my fellow members of this Assembly towards all of these very worthwhile goals.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This province is a wonderful place to live, work, and raise a family, and I'm particularly proud of the constituency of Calgary-Fish Creek, which I'm honoured to be representing. It's a great place to live, it's a great place to raise your family, it has great schools, it has great people, and I'm privileged to have Fish Creek provincial park right in my backyard. Not only is this place a great place to be, but the people that I serve are great people to serve.

Mr. Speaker, I take pride in knowing my community. I make a strong effort to genuinely listen to the concerns of my constituents. I try to make myself as approachable as possible, whether it's through phone calls, e-mails, attending events in the constituency, or just plain shopping for groceries. I want to hear from the people that I am honoured to represent, and I hear a lot of concerns about health care, about seniors, about education.

Mr. Speaker, it's a personal concern for me to be looking after my aging mother, who is not only my best friend but my biggest cheerleader. Every Sunday before I leave, she says: you go get those people. I spend a lot of time with seniors. My mom is in a seniors' facility. I've got lots of personal experience and lots of experience as the former Seniors critic.

One must ask how this government is treating our seniors today. Is it fair, Mr. Speaker, to nickel and dime our seniors to death? Do they honestly believe that one shower a week is fair? Do they honestly believe it's fair to charge seniors as you wheel them into the dining room? Do they honestly believe that it is fair to charge seniors for their medications? I love and respect the seniors in this riding and this province, and I think it's important that we take care of the seniors in this province.

It heartens me to be able to hand over my Seniors critic position to my colleague from Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, who I know will take care of the seniors in this province. It's also my pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to serve as the Health critic for the Wildrose caucus. Health care is the number one priority of Albertans, and it's my personal priority. Every single day I speak with concerned health professionals. Whether they're nurses, doctors, LPNs, or, for that matter, any health care professional, they work tirelessly every day on behalf of Albertans. I want to thank the front-line workers, who do the job that they do every day.

Mr. Speaker, I greatly appreciate this throne speech every year. This is an opportunity for the government to lay out the big picture for Albertans. The throne speech feels a lot like a New Year's resolution to me. I sometimes think that we should call the throne speech the happy throne speech. While it is a chance to start things afresh, it feels like the same words are repeated over and over year after year. We hear every year about the importance of health care and education and fiscal responsibility. These are bedrock Alberta values. But where is the plan? Where is the progress? Where are the results?

We also get a strong sense of whom the government has been talking with and whom they have been listening to. Mr. Speaker, sometimes they are not the same thing. We have a lot of consultation going on in this province and a lot of conversation. Sadly, the important conversation doesn't seem to be in the community but in the Premier's office. This is sad to me because I believe in genuine conversation from bottom to top and back again. A sincere conversation is not just talking and listening. It also involves compromise. Otherwise, the conversation is just a lecture from the top to the bottom. Our system is a democracy, not some lower form based on the power of one person.

Mr. Speaker, this is in large part why I crossed the floor from the government caucus to the Wildrose caucus. To say the least, crossing the floor was one of the most difficult decisions in my life. Oh, what a journey that was. Two and a half years later, coming onto three, I still get emotional about the issue and still remember a lot of things that were done in making that decision to cross the floor. The year before I crossed the floor, I door-knocked from May to October. The constituents of Calgary-Fish Creek made it very clear that they didn't like what was happening in government. I didn't like it either. One must make a decision on what is the right thing on behalf of the people that you're elected to serve.

Too often politics seem to be about ideology or the battle of the day in the media. Politics are also about personal relationships, how you treat people and how you are treated.

Respect is everything you need to know about a person. It turned out a lot of people in my social world only cared about power. They cared about the perks of the job and future perks as well. I can say that many of the people I've worked with in this government respected my decisions. My constituents did. They re-elected me to represent them in Calgary-Fish Creek to fight for their values, our principles, our priorities, and I will continue to do that as an MLA.

Not only have I had the honour of being an MLA, I've also had the honour of being a cabinet minister in the past. I had the privilege of sitting at the table of a true leader, a leader that listened to what his caucus and what his cabinet had to say. He provided leadership and direction, not marching orders.

After I left cabinet, I continued to proudly serve the public interest. I started to feel that something was missing in Alberta and in our government. Well, Mr. Speaker, I can say that I've found that feeling again. I feel re-energized under my current leader in the Official Opposition. We have a leader who listens, forges a consensus, and drives forward. There are no marching orders that drive us, just the will of our caucus and our constituents.

We take the time to connect with our constituents and people from all over the province that don't feel that they're being listened to. We don't need travelling road shows to show we're listening. We pick up the phone and we ask. We know what the priorities of Albertans are. We need health care available when we need it. We need more beds for our seniors in the community, not just stuck in some hospital ward. We need surgical suites up and running so we can get that knee and hip replacement in good time, not in eight months. We need schools in our community that are open and in good repair with the tools available to thrive. We need safe roads and highways, not excuses and not new laws. These are the issues we will drive forward as an Official Opposition.

The health issues are what I will fight for in the Legislature for the patients, for the health professions, for all Albertans. We hear from the government on a regular basis how things are pretty good, but pretty good isn't enough, Mr. Speaker. We need to give credit where credit is due, and that's to the hard work of our health care professionals at the front line.

My policy, especially when I was a minister, was that if you want to know the best way to do things, you should consult with those who are actually doing them. I don't believe that it's happening anymore. I hear every day from the doctors, the nurses, and other health care professionals begging for the government to listen. The tired solution for them is to spend more money, and we know that doesn't work. It has been tried for years, and we're no further ahead. To hear from experts, we're actually worse off. That's why now the government has been backtracking its mistake since AHS was created. After years of tuning out Albertans, we finally – finally – might see a return to local decision-making. Better late than never, I suppose, Mr. Speaker, and let's get it right this time.

We're here to advocate for the right dollars in the right place, the right care at the right time. We need better management of our precious health care system. The health professionals know it's not about how it is being spent but about where it's going to be spent. We need results to know what we're doing. There is a lot of money in the system, but somehow it doesn't flow to the front lines. In the last few years we've seen bonuses paid to AHS executives, yet we've seen nurses laid off and then hired back again. How can we see hiring freezes on all staff at the same time as lavish expense accounts and bonuses for our executive? It just doesn't make sense for me or the front-line staff or Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, this is a great province. I'm proud to say I'm an Albertan. I'm proud to stand here in the Legislature as an MLA representing the people of Calgary-Fish Creek. I'm so honoured to be able to serve and do what they want.

I'm proud to be a member of the Official Opposition. I'm proud to be the Health critic, fighting on behalf of the health care professionals who work tirelessly on behalf of Albertans. I'm proud to work with my staff every day. I'm proud of every single one of my colleagues. And, lastly, I'm proud to be a wife and a mother.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Drumheller-Stettler.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am a husband and a father and a Wildrose legislative member for the constituency of Drumheller-Stettler. My name is Rick Strankman, and I kind of remember it in that order.

On April 23 I began a historic journey with all of you here today. From a young age politics has always been a source of interest to me. As far back as high school my classmates to this day remind me of how I thrived on discussing controversial issues. Some 40 years later I stand before you with the trust of the people from Drumheller-Stettler, with the opportunity to represent them in this Legislature to the very best of my ability. I am truly humbled by this honour.

Adventure, freedom, and democracy have always been instrumental in my activism that has naturally taken me to this political ring. My wonderful wife of 33 years, Dianne, and I have strived to instill these values in our two children, Pamela and Jay, whom my wife and I cherish.

Following high school I proceeded to immerse myself in the family farm. Ranching also has been a part of the family and is something many Albertans are very proud of. I share that sense of pride and accomplishment with all of them as well as with some 20 other families that celebrated 100 years of living in the adverse area now known as the special areas. Agriculture and ranching have always been a very vital part of the Alberta lifestyle and our economic well-being, and it's also a part of our very identity.

Many years ago I expanded my personal skill set by pursuing my pilot's licence. Flying has also been a source of relaxation, if you can believe that, and adventure and has served as a great means to meet people throughout Alberta and my constituency. The many personal contacts that I have made during my aerial application exploits have resulted in many lifelong friends that I hold very near and dear to my heart. I'd like to say, sir, that there is only one guy who knows where I've been with that ag plane.

The days leading up to April 23 were also very special and something that I will always remember with great appreciation. The people that helped with my campaign gave of themselves selflessly to create a better Alberta. They are my heroes.

The people of Drumheller-Stettler have always been long-time stalwarts of Alberta and of Canada. They are the very fabric of rural society and the values of Alberta. The constituency has many small businesses, working professionals, farmers, ranchers, and a thriving oil and gas industry over a vast area.

Drumheller-Stettler consists of a vast land mass and is very diverse, with both urban and rural areas that require diverse leadership and guidance. The larger towns in the area are comprised of Hanna, Stettler, and Drumheller, with the rest of the population being made up of smaller hamlets and villages. Those smaller centres serve as a hub to those living in more rural locations. With an electorate of 23,000 and a population of over 33,000 people spread throughout this expansive riding, my challenge will be to be available and responsive, to be there for their very needs and to do that to the best of my ability.

The Drumheller valley boasts some of the most beautiful scenery found anywhere on Earth. The Royal Tyrrell Museum has taken its place as one of the great museums of the world. A world-class museum set against the backdrop of world-class scenery, it is a must-see destination, and I highly recommend it to anyone.

The increasingly popular Canadian Badlands Passion Play, that is performed in a natural amphitheatre that actually exists within the Drumheller townscape, is as authentic as it is entertaining. I had the privilege to attend a performance this past July with my wife.

Stettler also is a true Alberta town. It is the heart of Alberta and the home to a classic steam train, owned by Alberta Prairie Railway Excursions, that was founded back in 1990 and is one of Alberta and Canada's top tourist attractions. Over the last 20 years more than 350,000 people from all over the world, across Canada, and around Alberta have come to Stettler to board the train for the 67-kilometre round trip that takes the riders to the Big Valley station, also within this riding. The trip is complete with some horse-mounted gunmen to revisit the history of this province. You might appreciate that, Mr. Donovan. The heart that beats in Stettler is that of a very healthy business centre with an active and diverse community.

The town of Hanna is located near the centre of the constituency, a very special place with a fantastic championship golf course that challenges even the most seasoned golfer. Hanna serves as the centre of a large trading area in my constituency known as the special areas. Hanna is known as the home to the internationally acclaimed and award-winning rock band Nickelback. The band has also remembered their hometown and even shot their Photograph music video in and around Hanna, their story of growing up on the prairies. I might take a moment, Mr. Speaker, to ad lib that the grandfather of the Nickelback Kroeger boys was MLA Henry Kroeger, whom I knew and did business with in my early years as a farmer.

The special areas is an area that requires a certain type of people, people that know what it takes to manage crops and resources in a fragile, diverse, adverse environment. I am dedicated to the protection of the special areas from the drastic changes that may jeopardize this legacy of success. The special areas is my home, always has been my home, and will be my home. It has always been my view that the people of Drumheller-Stettler view their environment as a place of positive potential and feel a need to protect that environment from harm. I share that need to protect our environment with them.

It is almost as if the environmental stability of Drumheller-Stettler recently has come under attack by Alberta's own government. The situation taking place at the Berry Creek reservoir has seen the water critical to the irrigation needs of two dozen farm families evaporate or disappear through mismanagement and, along with it, the possibility of several crops for the next two years. The fish stock in the reservoir, that boasted a record pike being caught last year, will also take many years to repair.

A short distance away there is another situation that took place with the removal of nests that were used by the ferruginous hawk population in the Bullpound pasture area. The ferruginous hawk is the largest species of hawk in North America and is currently listed as endangered or threatened in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, my experiences with my activism culminated in Kindersley, Saskatchewan, on August 1 this past summer, when Prime Minister Harper announced that my comrades and I were pardoned for the consequences that resulted from fighting the unjust monopoly that was held by the Canadian Wheat Board until that day. August 1 of this year saw the history of western Canadian farming change for the better and finally saw free enterprise come to prairie farmers. The long road I travelled with 12 other activists who put it on the line alongside me taught me something very important. We can make real changes. We just have to have the resolve to do it. We changed the policy of a country.

From the time we are three years old, we all know right from wrong. That's what Wildrose is about, doing the right thing. We just have to have that resolve. It is incumbent upon me to represent the best interests and the wishes of the people of Drumheller-Stettler, and I will do everything within my abilities to live up to this honour. I stand before you with no particular malice to anyone, and I look forward to working with all members of this Assembly in the days ahead to preserve and protect our way of life for all Albertans.

I would like to say a special thank you to my Wildrose CA board, that did amazing work before and during the election. I'd also like to thank my fellow elected Wildrose comrades, that I will be sharing this prestigious and, I might add, historic journey with for their support and encouragement.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me the honour of addressing this Legislature today.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to move adjournment for this session.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Before I accept that motion, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I personally want to thank the Member for Drumheller-Stettler and commend him for his guts in standing up to the Canadian Wheat Board and his unselfish willingness to defend what is right for farmers in western Canada. Thank you, member.

The Deputy Speaker: Would you like to respond, hon. member?

Mr. Strankman: No, sir. I think it goes without saying.

I would like to make a comment, though, if I could, to the member opposite, Mr. Horner, the Minister of Finance . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, we refer to the office, not the member.

Mr. Strankman: . . . the Minister of Finance, sir, for his part also in helping achieve the freedom on the Canadian Wheat Board.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I believe I heard a motion from the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler to adjourn debate on His Honour's speech.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 3

Education Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the government of Alberta I'm very pleased to rise today to move second reading of Bill 3, the Education Act.

This legislation is the result of years of discussion, consultation, and debate on the future of Alberta's education system. We've spoken with students and their parents, teachers, support staff, school administrators, school board trustees, superintendents, community, and business representatives. The result of this province-wide conversation is the legislation that I'm confident all Albertans will be proud of.

I'd like to point out that we have members of the Public School Boards' Association in the gallery today to take in this momentous occasion.

While I have the honour of speaking to it today, no one person can take credit for this act. This has been the result of years of work. If any one person deserves credit, it's our Minister of Human Services, who spent years of his life developing the foundation and most of the body of this legislation. It was truly a shared effort. Tens of thousands of Albertans have made this act what it is today. In fact, it's the result of one of the most far-reaching consultations in Alberta's history.

Albertans are passionate about education, and they should be because our kids deserve the best education system we can give them. The Education Act is a vision for our education system built by Albertans for Albertans. I'm proud of it. In my time as a co-chair of the Inspiring Education steering committee I was involved in discussions with thousands of Albertans over a period of two years about the future of our education system. As a father with three children in school I was very interested in the future of the education system in our province. It was timely that we were talking about what an educated Albertan looks like in 2030 or a kid entering our system in 2009. As a matter of fact, my daughter was entering the system in 2009.

I'm happy to say that what people told us in Inspiring Education was that we need to put students first. I believe that Bill 3 embodies that philosophy. This act does many things. There are many details to go over, but there are three main themes of this bill. One is that it contains very strong language about and commitment to respecting diversity and creating welcome, safe, respectful school environments. It empowers school boards to make local decisions, and it affirms the important role the family plays as the primary educator of their children. Even changes to administrative responsibilities can be tied back to putting students first. An example of this is the natural person powers. This is a change in response to requests from school boards. They want to be more responsive to their local needs, and they want us to remove the barriers for them to do that.

I would now like to go through some of the highlights of Bill 3, and the first feature I'd like to highlight is the roles and responsibilities. Education is a shared responsibility. It requires collaboration, engagement, and empowerment of all partners in the system. These partners include parents, students, school boards and trustees, and others in the community. By outlining the roles and responsibilities of participants in our education system, Bill 3 acknowledges that active engagement is crucial for student success. An example of school boards' responsibility is to partner with postsecondary institutions and the community to help students transition to postsecondary education. Responsibilities for parents and students include helping to maintain a welcoming, caring, respectful, and safe learning environment.

This morning I had the chance to participate in We Day, which is happening, well, not right now anymore but earlier today in Calgary. We Day is a gathering of thousands of Alberta students, 16,000 to be exact, and is a celebration of the power of youth to make a positive impact on the world. It was an incredible event that 600 of our schools took part in, with a waiting list of another 500 schools. These students that attended and others that weren't able to be there have embraced their role in making their communities and the world a better place. By including the responsibility to help schools be welcoming, caring, respectful, and safe in Bill 3, we are acknowledging that students are able and willing and expected to be a positive force in the world. From what I saw at We Day this morning, I know that they are more than capable of doing so.

As parents we also share that responsibility. Bill 3 acknowledges parents as the primary guides and decision-makers with respect to their child's education. The language we have in the bill is directly out of Inspiring Education, widely accepted around Alberta, and directly out of the United Nations universal declaration of human rights. The Education Act is the first legislation in Canada to formally recognize the essential role of parents as a child's first and important teacher. This means parents must have the tools they need to make decisions in the best interests of their children. This includes the right to be kept informed about the education of their children by those who have information to share: teachers, administrators, the board, and government. By clearly outlining these roles and responsibilities, the Education Act emphasizes that for our education system to stay successful, everyone involved must play their part.

Another way we are encouraging student success is through changes to age of access and compulsory attendance. Students will now have access to provincially funded high school education until they turn 21. The Education Act also raises compulsory attendance from 16 to 17. Both of these changes demonstrate the importance that Albertans place on education and on continuing education. They will encourage students to complete high school. Improving our high school completion rates is important as we plan for the future of this province. Expanding educational opportunities for students will result in greater social and economic success for both the students and for the entire province of Alberta.

As I've mentioned, all aspects of the Education Act are focused on student success, and to be successful, they need to feel safe. The legislation makes it clear that students must feel free from physical and emotional harm and that bullying is not accepted under any circumstances, not by students, teachers, or anyone else in the school community, not ever, no exceptions. In fact, I'm proud to say that the Education Act features some of the strongest antibullying legislation in the country.

Bill 3 acknowledges that bullying behaviour can happen anywhere, especially in a world dominated by technology. Bullying that occurs outside the school grounds can nonetheless affect the school environment; therefore, we have clarified our expectations regarding how school boards should deal with this type of bullying because every child needs to feel safe. We didn't include specific groups of children in the act or specify things that kids can't be bullied about because an inclusive system means every kid gets support, every student, every time, every kid celebrated, no bullying tolerated.

Next I'd like to move on to a few of the items with respect to governance and co-operation, Mr. Speaker. While these changes are administrative, they are also focused on responding to local needs and encouraging student success. One such change is regarding the separate school establishment process. This change includes broader community involvement and engagement in the establishment of separate school districts.

The Education Act also allows separate school electorates to choose which jurisdiction, public or separate, they want to vote in or run in for election as a trustee. This creates a more democratic procedure while continuing to support constitutionally protected minority rights. It provides a good balance and is in response to what we've heard from Albertans. In that vein, we've also made some changes regarding francophone electors. They will no longer need to have a child enrolled in a school operated by a francophone regional authority to vote or to run for election as a trustee. This change was developed with direct input from the francophone community.

Bill 3 includes several more governance changes which will maintain choice for Alberta families, and these include changes to charter and private schools as well as composite board establishment. Charter and private schools continue to be a part of the broad range of educational choices for parents and students in Alberta's education system. The Education Act provides criteria for the establishment of a charter school. It clarifies that only societies or nonprofit companies may establish a charter school. The act also ensures that students in private schools continue to receive sound educational programming by defining actions the minister may take regarding the financial viability of a private school.

Finally, Bill 3 also allows for the creation of composite boards comprised of public and separate school divisions but only on the request of those districts.

Another way we're working towards an improved system, Mr. Speaker, is through changes to the administrative and financial responsibilities of school boards. An example of this is the natural person powers, which I spoke of earlier, but Bill 3 also provides the minister with powers to direct school boards to co-operate with each other to provide transportation services. This may provide Albertans with a better return on investment for the transportation funding provided to boards.

School boards will also be required to establish an audit committee. This will enhance Albertans' confidence in our investment in our education system and in it being used effectively. Albertans want our education system to be well funded, and it is. However, they also want to see the results of that investment and as much of that investment go directly to the students and their instruction as possible. If school fees are being charged, they want to know why. Therefore, the Education Act contains a commitment to develop regulations which will review how boards determine school fees, how school fees are communicated, and policies around waivers. This will be part of the regulations review that will follow the Education Act being signed into law.

Once it's passed, a review of regulations and policies will be required. This alignment of regulations and policies will ensure a successful transition and strengthening of Alberta's education system for the future. As we have throughout the creation of the Education Act, we will seek input from Albertans, and we will develop and revise the regulations.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the new Education Act is a significant step forward. It brings to life the vision for the future of education that thousands of Albertans shared with us through Inspiring Education, setting the direction, Speak Out, and other public consultations. I'm proud that the new Education Act is built on the foundation that parents, students, teachers, administrators, and the community are all important partners in the education system. I sincerely hope that you will join me in supporting this foundational piece of legislation.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Hon. members, just for procedure, just to let you know, the next speaker will have 20 minutes, and then the next additional speaker will have 15 minutes, with Standing Order 29(2)(a) applying after those.

At this time I will recognize the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with some degree of satisfaction that I rise today to speak to Bill 3, the Education Act. I sincerely hope the third time is the charm. This is the third time this bill has been presented to this Legislature for debate. Bill 18, of course, and I think we all remember Bill 2, and now we're looking at the third time coming in.

I would say that we do give general support to this bill. You've already heard the hon. Member for Airdrie and the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View speak in general terms about how we can support this bill, but I will take some reservation. I am worried that we are already off to a bad start on this bill, a 188-page bill that was delivered to us yesterday, and now we're already in a position where we're debating it less than 24 hours later. This is not a very good start and not really in keeping, I think, with the new tone we're trying to set in the Legislature.

I would certainly hope that the hon. members on the other side would appreciate that even though we are generally speaking in favour of it today, we have observed that from time to time with such large documents there are clauses in there that do cause some consternation to the stakeholders. So do keep in mind that I reserve the right to come back at some future point when we've talked to stakeholders to see whether or not all of the issues that we might have with this bill have been addressed. But I will say that we do have general support.

Let me return to a couple of the issues that were raised in the spring Legislature that we feel have been largely addressed in this new and improved version of this bill. First of all, the great controversy arose because of the addition of Alberta Human Rights Act provisions to the Education Act and in particular to home-school families. I know that the members of the other opposition parties have expressed concern about the exclusion of this in applying to home-school families, and I know that they have raised concerns about Bill 44. I would acknowledge that there aren't any teachers that have been hauled before the Human Rights Commission under the provisions of Bill 44, but there are religious leaders who have been hauled before the Human Rights Commission. I'll mention Bishop Fred Henry, and I'll mention Reverend Stephen Boissin.

This is part of the reason why we were encouraged by the Premier's commitment to remove section 3 from the human rights code so that we could restore free speech, restore freedom of religion. In the absence of the Premier keeping that commitment, it's quite clear that we could not have the Education Act include this provision and potentially have home-school families hauled before the Human Rights Commission for teaching their children the tenets of the faith throughout the course of a school day. So we're very pleased that the government recognized that this was an affront to the religious freedom and religious rights of our home-school families and that they have addressed this in this legislation.

The second thing I would say is that I do believe that the government did hear the lesson loud and clear on the steps of the Legislature when I stood along with the hon. Member for Airdrie before 2,000 home-school families and their children, who had come to protest to the previous Education minister to let him know their displeasure. It's very clear to me that because of this activism on the part of these grassroots parents the government had no choice but to respond.

Also having I think it was three full days of filibuster from the then hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore and the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere probably had something to do as well with the fact that that bill did not pass in the spring session and was able over the course of the last few months to undergo a substantial rewrite. I would say that in many ways our Wildrose members are very pleased that we have had such an incredible influence on the outcome of this bill, which is why once again I think we can speak generally in support of it.

One of the things I would say about education in this province, and this goes back to the legacy of a former Premier, Premier Klein, is that when I went to the Preston Manning conference in February of 2010, they talked about the ways in which this government should be assessed on its performance in a whole range of different policy areas. For the most part the government was getting Ds and Fs, but in the area of education the group there assembled – most of us were conservatives – scored the government a B plus in education. It was because of the actions taken in the 1990s to give parental choice, to acknowledge that parents have a right to choose the kind of education that they want for their children, to allow for public schools, to allow for vibrant Catholic schools, to allow for charter schools, home-schooling, virtual schooling. This has made Alberta's education system responsive to parents, and that is the one thing that we have to preserve, not only to ensure that parental rights are acknowledged and recognized but to ensure that children get the best education that their parents choose for them.

There are still a few concerns, though, that we are likely to bring forward some minor amendments from. We may bring forward more, but there are three that we are concerned about right now. First of all, on the issue of charter schools: I believe that the reform efforts that began with charter schools have somewhat stalled, and that's unfortunate because many of the charter schools in this province have not only earned an incredible amount of recognition outside the province but, of course, also the support of the parents who send their children to those schools.

I take a little bit of pleasure in the fact that there is a left-wing progressive blogger named Donald Gutstein who blames me in part for bringing charter schools to Alberta because of a column that I wrote with scholar Fazil Mihlar when I was an intern at the Fraser Institute talking about how important charter schools were to give that amount of parental rights and that amount of choice in programs to a variety of children and how good it would be for Alberta to go down that path.

I'm glad that we're looking at the issue of charter schools, and I'm hopeful that we can make some amendments to re-embrace the original vision of what charter schools were supposed to mean in this province.

Secondly, on the issue of Catholic education, I think we recall that in the dying days of Bill 2, when it was quite clear it was not going to pass, the Catholic school trustees were very alarmed at the potential provisions that would force an end to Catholic education or at least an end to their autonomy. We were pleased to see that much of the language that was offensive to the Catholic school trustees has been removed. I myself am a student of both public education and Catholic education. I went back and forth between the two. I graduated from the same high school as the hon. Premier, Bishop Carroll high school in Calgary. My brother sends his children to Catholic education.

The fact that my family has always had the option of two fully publicly funded school boards, major school boards in major cities, has been something that my family has valued, and I think all families deserve to be able to continue to have that choice. The language that would have forced those boards together – I've talked to the superintendent in my area for the Christ the Redeemer school. He's read through at least half of the act. He wasn't able to get through all 188 pages either by the time I spoke with him, but he's assured me that what he's seeing he also likes. We'll do some more consultation with our Catholic stakeholders just to make sure that all of those provisions are taken out that were offensive to them, but I think that this is an important principle for us to support, that we do have two strong public school systems. One is a public board; the other is a separate board. We want to be able to maintain that autonomy because it does give additional choice in education as well as being able to provide the full funding.

The third area I would raise is the issue of covering education up to age 21. I think we all recognize that we want to be able to encourage those who have not been able to finish the school program within the usual time frame and give them the opportunity to go back to school. The thing that we are concerned about, though, is that there may be integrated classrooms with some of these older young adults, 21 years old, being in the same classrooms as younger people. You can well imagine, as we're dealing with issues of bullying, as we're dealing with issues of sexual assaults or any potential problems that we might have along those lines, that when you put groups of people together with that great age difference there is the potential, I think, for parents to be concerned that there are going to be problems.

We want to make sure that when we're implementing this age limit that we do have opportunities for those older young adults to be segregated from the younger population so that we don't end up creating any additional problems of integrating children who are not of the same maturity level and certainly should not be socializing in the same way. There are some great models for this in my own riding, for instance. The Christ the Redeemer school division has St. Luke's school, which does an outreach program. We also have a distance learning program in many of our schools that provides the opportunity for older students to be able to return. I think the main barrier that we're trying to eliminate here is the cost barrier of kids being able to return to school. I hope that we put a little bit more clarity around that, maybe if not in the legislation then certainly in the regulations so that we can avoid any future problems.

The last area I would mention – and this is an area that was raised with me as I was travelling around the province talking to our First Nations leaders – is that they are very disappointed that they were not consulted in the process of developing this legislation. One of the things that we have to be aware of is that our aboriginal students do follow the Alberta curriculum. They will follow Alberta law. But they do get funded by our federal counterparts, and our federal counterparts are not paying for these students to go to school up to age 21. If we're imposing upon our aboriginal communities this extra requirement that they go to school, where is the money going to come from? I think that this is a piece that we have to be talking about with our federal counterparts to make sure the funding flows through.

While I'm talking about this, I would say that our First Nations communities have told me that the funding currently for education is inadequate. In many communities they're getting $5,500 per student. If those students go off-reserve to a nonreserve school, the school board is charging them $9,000 to $10,000 to $11,000. There's a shortfall there. I would say that this should be a priority. If we're going to be discussing with our federal counterparts how we might be able to raise the revenue to be able to have children funded all the way up to age 21 on our reserves, then I think we also should add this additional component. How do we make sure that we've got an adequate level of funding flowing through to the reserve so that every aboriginal student gets the same high quality of education that we're able to provide to nonreserve students?

Those are the areas that we're going to be taking a closer look at. Once again, I'm pleased that the government did listen to the public, did listen to parents, did listen to the home-school families, did listen to the Catholic school trustees, and did make the revisions that the Wildrose caucus had been calling for in the previous spring election. We are delighted to acknowledge that we will be making some minor changes, but we do think that this is a significant improvement. We do look forward to working with the government to improve the bill and enact the changes, which we know are going to have many positive impacts on Alberta's students, parents, and teachers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

4:40

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I will recognize the next speaker and remind you that after each subsequent speaker from here on, Standing Order 29(2)(a) will apply.

I'll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and speak to this piece of legislation. I believe it's my third opportunity to speak to this bill in second reading since this is our third shot at it. So we'll see how this one goes compared to previous ones.

You know, this Education Act is a long-awaited piece of legislation. There's no question that a great deal of work has gone into it and that there has been quite a significant amount of consultation. How can you not, over the course of three attempts to introduce it?

There are many good pieces in the legislation, and I'd like to start by just talking briefly about some of those things which I think are positive additions to our Education Act through this piece of legislation. Then, unfortunately, I'll end by outlining some of the areas that we think need to be improved and some of the items which I think are somewhat disappointing to Albertans as a result of their inclusion or, in this case, their omission.

Some of the things that the act did do which I think are important: one of the first things I see is that we are looking at doing things like raising the age of access to 21 years. That was a positive improvement in terms of ensuring that students have every opportunity to complete their education. That is a reasonable improvement.

We were certainly also happy to see that the government accepted a couple of the amendments that were put forward by members of the opposition. One of the ones that we outlined was an amendment to have the process by which charter schools are established remain the same and that it not be expanded so that we end up with a proliferation of charter schools throughout the province or, alternatively, that we end up with a situation where we have, you know, Walmart opening up a charter school just because it might be a way to help market some of their stuff. I know that that was certainly never the intention of the government when the original legislation came forward, and it just happened to be the case that the language they used might have allowed for it. As a result, we are pleased to see that those types of loopholes and that kind of language were changed. So that was certainly good.

I think that, generally speaking, there have been some reasonably good improvements to the legislation that, without question, respond to issues that have been raised by many of the stakeholders and particularly by some of the school board associations and the Public School Boards' Association.

Having said that, as you know, this bill did not pass last time because there was a great deal of controversy over certain elements of it. I would like to say that we are very disappointed that the government has responded to the controversy in the way that it has. There is no question that our colleagues in the Wildrose and some of our colleagues in the government caucus took on this particular issue, but I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the outcome that we see reflected in this Education Act reflects a capitulation, and it reflects a failure to respect the paramountcy of our Human Rights Act and the concept of human rights in this province. So I'm very, very disappointed in the way that that failure has found its way into this piece of legislation.

Now, there were a number of people – and the Official Opposition leader talked about the many demonstrators that were here in front of this Legislature last spring. There's no question that there was a lot of passion within that particular community about the previous language in I believe it was section 16 of the last version of this act. At the time it struck me as a tempest in a teapot because, really, the import of that language was not what those people suggested it was, the notion that parents would be hauled in front of the Human Rights Commission and all that kind of stuff. It was not a correct interpretation of what that language meant. It was simply a statement of principle, and it actually had no legal force and effect, so it really was quite a tempest in a teapot that everybody got themselves really wrapped up over.

What is concerning to me: while that was meaningless, its inclusion, the subsequent decision of the government to remove reference to our human rights code and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms from the act is in itself significant because it represents the capitulation to the notion that somehow our Education Act and our schools, which are authorized in our education system, which are a function of this province and of our community, cannot talk about the human rights code in our education system, that somehow that's a sensitive topic, that we need to look down and not make eye contact over it because it might offend somebody if we talk about notions of equality and diversity. It's very, very disappointing that the government has capitulated in that way. That's all I will say on that.

Now, on the other hand, the government has spent a lot of time talking about its bullying legislation and the element of this act around bullying. While I appreciate the sentiment behind talking about it and raising awareness and everybody sharing their general sense of concern about the issue, I will say to you that the language in this act is not really the solution to the bullying problem. Certainly, the combination of this act and the amended human rights code, which truly is a licence for bullying, you know, will ensure that substantive efforts to reduce bullying in some cases will actually be muted or discouraged by the legislative framework, that this government has over the course of two, three years, with the introduction of this act and the amendment to the human rights code, actually undermined efforts to reduce bullying.

I also want to talk about, really, the nuts and bolts of: how do we deal with bullying in our schools? We do really all care about that, and I do believe we all are genuinely concerned about this issue. I think many of us or most of us were concerned about it long before the very tragic events that occurred with respect to Amanda Todd in B.C. We've all known that it's a long-standing problem.

What I would say to you, having been in the system as a parent and having been in the system as an advocate and as someone who has met with teachers and special-needs assistants and parents of children with disabilities and parents on student councils, the way you get at bullying is that you do not put 30 kids into the same classroom, a third of whom actually need special-needs support, and put one teacher in there and pull out the aides and then expect everyone to get along and then at lunchtime open the doors, kick them out onto the playground, and don't send anybody out there to model and/or enforce good behaviour because you can't afford to have anybody out there. That's not how you stop bullying. Quite the opposite. That is how you engender bullying. That's how you make sure it happens.

If you create stress in the classroom because those kids who are potential victims of bullying and also potential perpetrators of bullying are unable to get the support that they need in those classrooms and then you make the classrooms too big and then you cut resources to school boards and to schools so that they can't pay for people to be on the playground to monitor the activity that occurs on that playground, you're going to get bullying.

There's nothing in this act that stops that. There's nothing in the act that addresses that. The principal can have all the legal obligations he wants, but if he can't afford to create an environment in the classroom that addresses people's diverse needs and models appropriate behaviour on the playground and in the classroom and ensures that there is no stress within that classroom, if that principal, he or she, cannot create that environment, that principal is not going to be able to deal with the bullying.

What happens is that it turns into a triage dynamic in the schools. I've met with principals and teachers, and they will say: "We're triaging right now. I've got a kid here who should have a full-time special-needs assistant. I've got another kid here who actually needs three hours a day of one-on-one assistance in this one particular area. That's what I'm dealing with. Over there I see a kid that looks a bit like a victim, and I do see a dynamic where there's bullying starting to happen. You know what? God bless, I don't have time to do anything about it. I'm one principal. And you know what? I don't have enough teachers, and I don't have enough staff, and I don't have enough other people to be able to get in there and stop that bullying before it happens. I'm doing triage with the 12-year-old kid who hasn't learned to read yet because for the last three years he or she has not had the special-needs support that they should have gotten many, many years before."

That is happening more and more, Mr. Speaker, in our schools because overall we are funding less in terms of the special-needs populations in our schools. Whether you're talking about new immigrants, whether you're talking about the aboriginal population, whether you're talking about special-needs children, some of whom may have once been coded, some of whom are no longer coded, it doesn't matter. When you look at the absolute population of those people and you look at the resources that have been dedicated to special-needs funding in our schools, the fact of the matter is that it has gone down substantially, and the safety and the security and the diversity and the welcoming nature of our classrooms has deteriorated as a result.

We can make all the motherhood and apple pie statements that we want around bullying, but until such time as we are prepared to properly resource our schools so that the professionals and the parents and the kids who are in those school systems have the resources necessary to actually deal with bullying, then it is nothing more than smoke and mirrors, it's nothing more than a website, and it won't bring about a change.

To me, that's truly one of the most important pieces that needs to be discussed in this act because I cannot emphasize enough how, both anecdotally and statistically, we have seen the level of support given to kids who are vulnerable in our schools drop over the course of the last five or six years.

It is a travesty in a province that's supposed to be the richest province in the country, in a province where we're supposed to be, you know, hand over fist with money and where there's absolutely no need to ever consider our revenue streams, to ever consider making the wealthy pay a little bit more, to ever consider making oil companies pay a little bit more in royalties. No need to do that because it's all okely-dokely here in Alberta, and there is nothing that we need in our system because we're doing everything just so.

Well, the fact of the matter, Mr. Speaker, is that that's not the case, and this Education Act, notwithstanding the effort that went into writing it, is not going to change that. It will not change that, and it will not change the vulnerability and the risk that a growing number of our kids in this province are facing when they go to school every day because we're not addressing the resources required to provide a truly equal education to every student. Not just that middle, average student or that most intelligent student that's going to cope and survive and succeed no matter what the circumstances are because that kid is a coper and he or she is really smart, but I'm talking about those other kids that actually need a well-funded, thoughtful education system to be able to make sure that we all move forward and succeed. That's what's being left behind in our education system right now.

We talked about, you know, the whole issue of asking school boards to ensure that they develop policies that work against bullying. The Edmonton public school board developed first in the country – or I think it was maybe the second in the country, first in the province and maybe second in the country – a very progressive policy about inclusions and acceptance of children and, actually, staff members with different sexual orientations. It was a leading document, a leading policy.

The fact of the matter is that between this piece of legislation and the human rights code, it's not entirely sure how effectively they are going to be able to implement that policy because there are so many tools now at the disposal of certain parents who do not support those values to interfere with the sharing of those values throughout our public school system. That is a concern.

I think I'm coming close to the end of my time. I look forward to further debate over the course of the next few days. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available if anyone has a question for this member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I too share your sentiments when you said that it was a tempest in a teapot, that the Human Rights Act being included in the act was going to somehow have, I guess, people march into homes and separate parents and families and the like. I think that giving a little more explanation to members of this House on how actually a human rights complaint would be lodged and the circumstances by which it may happen, in order to have that happen, may help some members here and alleviate their fears of how that would actually happen, how the complaint process works at human rights, who would have to lodge the complaint, et cetera, et cetera. If you could help us with that, that would be worth it, in my view.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo. Just a reminder that we speak to the chair.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to respond.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you. There's no question that the previous legislation simply talked about recognizing the principles of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the human rights code. As, you know, we debated at great length in the last session, the fact of the matter is that it is not possible for one piece of legislation to change the application of another piece of legislation. The fact of the matter was that it was always only ever a statement in principle.

The ability of people to file claims under the human rights code, either about parents or teachers or anything, is exactly as it was before, with or without this language in the Education Act because it's a function of how the human rights code itself is constructed, and it's a function of how that human rights code is enforced. That language in the Education Act had no impact on that. It didn't then; it doesn't now. What we have now is simply the spectre of this government refusing to include reference to the human rights code in our Education Act, notwithstanding, as I said last night, that it happened to be Bill 1, the first bill introduced by former Premier Lougheed, a flagship bill that was to define the progressive in Progressive Conservative. Well, clearly, we've lost that in this Conservative Party, and we're now doing everything we can to mimic the cousins in Ottawa.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there others? There's still some time remaining.

With that, then, I will recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and privilege, as always, to get up and speak on any bill but in particular on the Education Act, and it is the third time I've had the pleasure to do so. The timing is that it's time this bill gets passed although I do have some reservations about the bill that I will discuss and make amendments on when it comes time.

I will start by noting some of the positives. I do understand that the current Minister of Human Services, the former Deputy Premier, and now the current minister have worked long and hard in putting this bill together, and I will recognize before my comments that it's not always easy to appease and put together an education system that works for everybody. However, with those being my comments, I will still offer some of the positive aspects as well as the criticism, with those foregoing statements having been said, nonetheless, for the record.

If we look at the proposed education bill, I enjoy not only the philosophical sentiment but the actual sentiment of increasing the right to at least K to 12 education to be accomplished until you're 21.

5:00

Given the framework of modern society, young adults maybe going into the workforce at a younger age, some people running with the wrong crowd or the like, we should extend every opportunity to children to finish high school. The evidence is overwhelmingly clear that if you don't finish high school, not only do that individual person's chances of economic success diminish greatly, but the chances of that person becoming involved in crime, involved in social welfare services and the like increase twofold or threefold. So I believe this goes a long way in trying to recognize a problem that is not only in our society but in many societies. It also recognizes that Alberta does have many attractive opportunities economically for people at a young age, and this allows them, maybe, to go back and finish their education.

I also like that they increased the age of compulsory school attendance to 17. It's one of those statements that I believe will encourage kids to stay in school and, again, finish high school for the aforementioned reasons. Now, we all know full well that it's pretty difficult to get a 16-year-old to go to school if they don't want to go. Nevertheless, the sentiment of this and the message involved from this government shows leadership. We expect our kids to go to school to 17, to become part of an educated workforce, to become part of becoming great citizens. That type of leadership statement is often worth as much as the ability to, say, force a kid to go to school up till the age of 17 would be. I believe that shows some leadership on a policy direction that I would support.

I believe, too, that student-centred residency is a good thing. We should be dealing with where students, kids, live, not where their parents live. We have many different forms of family in the modern world, which reflects the ongoing nature that kids should be the focus, not the parents, and I support that as well.

School boards are happy with the natural power provision. Now we'll have to see what that actually means in regulation. I understand the process is a year-long event to sort that out, so although we'll see what comes out in the small print, the large print is actually quite well received by our school board partners.

I like the language around specialized supports and services, around supporting people with unique challenges in the classroom. Of course, as alluded to by previous speakers, this is only as good as our economic commitment to those who do need the support and the like. Nevertheless, from a leadership perspective this is reasonably good stuff.

In the main there's a lot of stuff in the Education Act that I like.

I will also comment on the bullying aspect. At the start the concept of bullying in school is one that I agree should be put to an end as much as it humanly can be. School is a difficult place. It is for almost anyone growing up in the education system at one time or another. Nevertheless, many children receive it far worse than others, and this should be eradicated in a safe, responsible manner. Again, this is a leadership moment where we have sort of said as a society that we will not tolerate this.

Now, I will agree with my good friend from the fourth party, who states that all of this flows from our commitment to public education in general. Without adequate supports for education, without having teachers in classrooms, without having reasonable size limits in classrooms, without having appropriate opportunities for children to learn, this is a hollow promise. If you have 30, 35 kids in a classroom with one teacher, not only is it difficult for them to learn, but bullying can and does and will continue. Although I like the statement, it's going to have to be backed up with a commitment to actually resource our schools and our teachers with the financial backing that they need to make sure that kids are getting the attention they deserve to thrive both academically and socially and to ensure that kids are not being picked on.

At the end of the day we want to make sure that part of education is not only learning, but it's learning to interact with the rest of our society. Some of it is that, by golly, you should feel good about growing up. I know far too many kids who didn't have a good experience in school, many of them because of bullying, many because of uncomfortable experiences. We should try to remember that growing up ain't easy, and if a school system can be that inclusive, caring, sharing environment where our society comes together and learns to live in acceptance of each other and to be respectful of each other, by all means, that's what we would like to accomplish. The act goes some way in doing that.

I would also note that I like the fact that the minister – I might have gotten my first amendment passed in this House. Maybe I got one other one passed some other time. But there. My contribution to the legislative process has been duly noted, and I thank the minister for implementing that small change to create what I thought was a more inclusive school setting. Bullying can be not only from child to child. It has to be a respectful school where principals, teachers, parents, everyone observe that schools are not a place for bullying. I believe that was reflected in the wording of the act.

I will now move to what I would consider to be my major criticism of the act. Like I said earlier, leadership and language from a government matters a great deal because it sets the tone for what you expect you want the rest of society to follow through on, and the values you enshrine in your legislation and how you write it matter. You might not think it does in practicality. It might not make a hill of beans of difference, maybe, on how it plays out in day-to-day life, but it matters from a tone, from a leadership position of what we expect our populace to live by.

If you look at our last two drafts of this Education Act, it said full stop that we will incorporate the language of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta human rights code. In those two documents it says explicitly that we will not discriminate against an individual on the base of race, religion, ethnicity, gender, or sexual orientation. That is clear in those documents, and when we say that in our Education Act, it's clear. People know that. They understand that.

When we start playing with that concept, regardless of whether those things still apply – because they do – we start sending a message to people that, well, although that is really the case, our government recognizes that in certain instances we're allowed to ignore those values. We're allowed in certain instances to ignore the freedom of religion, the freedom of respect for sexual orientation or people that we find diverse. When you start playing with that language, allowing those exceptions, people know your commitment to those values is not really that strong.

I saw that in what played out in Bill 44 in a different fashion, and I see that being played out now. Frankly, I was hoping for better, and I thought: I hope people actually consider that. This was supposed to be a new Progressive Conservative Party that was supposed to be letting those old social wars go. There was seemingly a recognition that we will not tolerate discrimination by any group on the basis of sexual orientation regardless of how long they yell on the Legislature steps, no matter how many letters they're going to write to your constituency office, no matter whether they are going to vote against you in an election or not. We as a people have to stand up for those values, and I believe the government should be standing up for those values.

5:10

Let me point that out because it's clear in here if we look at the wording of what this government has now done. It is right here in section 16. It says that one group is treated differently than other groups. It's under diversity and respect.

16(1) All courses or programs of study [offered] and instructional materials used in a school must reflect the diverse nature and heritage of society in Alberta, promote understanding and respect for others and honour and respect the common values and beliefs of Albertans.

Here's clause (2). This is where you're monkeying around with words, when you're treating people differently, when you're saying: it's really okay to not worry about the Alberta human rights code or the Charter of Rights and Freedoms in this instance. This is what it says:

(2) For greater certainty, the courses or programs of study and instructional materials referred to in subsection (1) must not promote or foster doctrines of racial or ethnic superiority or persecution . . .

religious or otherwise.

You see how that language has been tightened down. There's no longer any reference to people with disabilities, to people's sexual orientation.

Mr. Anderson: That was Lougheed's language.

Mr. Hehr: That's 1985. It's now 2012. Okay? There we go.

You're saying that in certain circumstances it's all right to treat people differently. It's all right. If you're a home-schooler, it's all right. Go ahead. When you're teaching education, it's all right. Have at 'er because these groups don't matter. They don't apply in this legislation. They don't apply to you. You go ahead. That to me is wrong. Okay? It is just wrong to send those mixed messages and mixed metaphors out to society. I believe we can do better. I'm very disappointed in this.

Frankly, I don't think it lends a lot of credence to how you really take your bullying motion seriously. We all look at the bullying motion, and it's common knowledge that children who get bullied in school are or may be perceived to be of a different sexual orientation.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available if anyone has a question or comment. The Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. member if he has anything else to add.

The Deputy Speaker: Through the chair. Thank you.

Mr. Hehr: I'd just like to complete that thought. That's very kind of you. Children who are bullied in school – and we have many public educators on that side of the aisle; they should know this – are often ridiculed for reasons of perceived or maybe even different sexual orientation. When you're saying that it's okay for one group of people to be discriminated against, does that really wash when you're saying that bullying and no tolerance of this stuff is really where we're going? Or are we really sending a mixed message? "Yeah, it's okay. Bully those kids still. They're not really included in the language we're covering in this act, so it's okay. You know something? They maybe don't play on the hockey team or the football team. They're a little strange. Go ahead. Bully them." That's the trouble when we mix metaphors, this differentiation in what is expected from different groups of people.

To be honest, I'd like the government and some of you other colleagues to maybe have a discussion about this. There have been two previous ministers who said that this was wrong. At least their drafts that came to this floor said that it was wrong. I appreciate that this minister has worked hard and tried to do this, but I think you as a caucus should go back and discuss whether we should send this mixed message out to really placate a noisy group.

Only 1.5 per cent of our population is home-schooling, and I guess out of that population maybe .2 are really upset about it. I don't know the whole numbers. But, really, come on. Human rights codes mean a lot. And when you don't include them by reference – or not even by reference. When you go out of your way to say in a different language that this doesn't matter, that you're allowed to do what you want, that's where it's really wrong. I encourage you guys to go back into caucus and say: are we really going to do that?

In any event, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We still have some time. Are there others?

Okay. With that, then, I'll recognize the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, thank you. An honour to rise. Truly, an honour to rise as the Official Opposition critic for Education. Might I say as well that I like to refer to it as "advocate" because I think it strikes a much better tone.

I guess we might say that the third time is a charm where the Education Act is concerned. Why don't we start with a compliment? Do something completely different, tip our cap to the Minister of Education who was able to make this work and get this bill through. Government does work sometimes. Government does listen sometimes. I believe there were amendments from both sides of the political spectrum, which is tremendous, even though we might not agree with the ones from the members on my left, literally. It is troubling to me that it's so hard sometimes to get to this point. It seems so difficult to listen to the public when they're screaming their displeasure. But, again, we did get there.

To understand where we are, I think, if anything, it helps to know where we came from. Without going back to the beginning of the Education Act, I think it is important that we go back to Bill 2 or at least to the beginning of the last session, the end of the last sitting of the spring Legislature, when we had so many people here voicing their displeasure, because that is when the rubber hit the road. That is when Albertans rose up. That is when the Wildrose Party, led by my colleague the Member for Airdrie and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek and a couple of members who are no longer with us, stood up and said: "We hear you. We are listening. We'll be your voice. We will push for the amendments that Albertans want to see in the Education Act." So thank you, sir. Thank you, ma'am.

Mr. Speaker, I heard it loud and clear during the election campaign. I heard it on doorsteps. I heard it at coffee shops. I heard it in church. I heard it at the grocery store. And I would put to you that probably all of us did where the Education Act was concerned. Albertans do not want and did not want the Human Rights Act tied to the Education Act, so we asked them to change it.

The Education minister at the time, you'll recall, tried to marginalize home-schoolers, seemingly suggesting that it was a small group of radical-thinking people with these intolerant views. Well, it didn't take long to see that it wasn't a small group at all and that home-schoolers had a very, very good point. They were supported by charter schools. They were supported by separate schools. They were supported by many in the public system. But it did take a small group of people to come forward and start the ball rolling, and they were backed by a small but very mighty caucus, the Wildrose caucus. Might I point out that – and this may be one of the biggest reasons why – that caucus has since more than quadrupled in size.

On the issue of parental rights in education parents are the primary educators of their kids. This takes nothing away from the great work that teachers do and the lifelong legacy that teachers leave with their students. Let us never forget that as we talk about parents. We have probably all been touched in positive ways in a legacy aspect from teachers and the mark that they have left on us. But parents have to be empowered to make the decisions they feel are right concerning their kids. You should be able to teach your kids your beliefs without a bureaucrat standing over your shoulder to make sure you are doing it their way. Thank you to the minister once again for recognizing that where his predecessor would not recognize it.

Now, I went to the minister's press conference yesterday downstairs and was very impressed with how forthright he was on many of the issues that were raised. One thing did disappoint me, though, at that press conference, and that is that the former Education minister, now Deputy Premier, was not there to address many members of the media that would have liked to have asked him questions. On the issue of the Alberta Human Rights Act, which I think is fair to point out because we all remember how polarizing that debate was and all the things that were exchanged, I had several reporters say to me yesterday: "I really would like to ask that minister a question to see what it is that's changed so radically with all of these people all of a sudden, including the minister himself. How is it that they all lump into this new category where it's acceptable?"

On the issue of human rights in education I think we can probably take a lead from the federal government and, in particular, from the Member for Westlock-St. Paul, Mr. Brian Storseth, who succeeded in amending the Canadian Human Rights Act, rightfully pointing out that freedom such as freedom of religion or freedom of association doesn't mean anything without the guarantee of expression, and that does extend to education.

I can support the revised provision to promote understanding and respect for others and to honour and respect the common values and beliefs of Albertans precisely because those common values do include freedom of expression and they do include freedom of religion. This will clear the way, I believe, for parents to continue to do what they do best; that is, parents can be full participants in the education of their children without fearing persecution from a human rights lawyer who has his or her own agenda.

Now, I do have some concerns with the new Education Act, of course. I think we probably all do. It's a thick document. It'll never be perfect. I would like to make a point on a couple of them. First of all, increasing the age of access to 21 is a novel goal. We should try to get as many kids to graduate as we can. I know we'd all agree on that. My concern is the potential social problems that could arise when you have a 21-year-old young man in a cafeteria with a 15-year-old girl for all intents and purposes. I think schools are aware of that concern, too. I know I heard it from principals. I heard it from educators in my travels this summer. I would bet that the Education minister did as well as probably many of us. It's something to keep our eye on, to make sure that the supports are there for schools so that they deal with these issues and they don't morph into something much more serious that we wouldn't want to see. There could be other options that we could look at, perhaps a community college class.

Raising the compulsory age to 17. Again, the idea is great. Let's keep our kids in school, I think, as long as we can. Let's get them through grade 12. But there would be, I think, potential problems with enforcement of this. I'd rather see us catch students and help them before they get to the point where they do want to drop out. Again, I think we'd all agree on that point. I guess to close on it, to say that improving our grad rate – I just think it's a lot more complex than to suggest that changing the age will fix it, but maybe it is a good step. Raising it by a year does seem, you know, a little simplistic. I hope it works. Let's monitor the level of success.

On the issue of inclusion in our schools – many people have spoken to it already, and I'm sure we'll hear more – I'm concerned that in our desire to be more inclusive, are we making the environment more difficult for the students and the teachers at times? In our desire for the greater good we might actually be being counterproductive. There's no template or formula, I don't think, when it comes to including students with special needs in classes.

I've heard it from several teachers, again, in my travels around the province this summer, specific examples where, you know, you might have a classroom with three or four students below the reading level by a couple of years. Maybe you add a special-needs student to that classroom, and then you have a couple of students with ESL that are struggling with the language. You can wind up taking away from the entire group sometimes is what I'm hearing from parents and from teachers. So we want to make sure that we give them the resources they need to make this happen. I think it makes great sense, also, to let these things be decided locally. Let teachers and principals and parents have their say. There is no one-size-fits-all approach. If we travelled our own schools, I'm sure we'd hear that there are many different circumstances.

It's a huge bill. It is hugely important to the future of our kids, which means it's hugely important to the future of Alberta. I know we all take it seriously. I see the passion, hear the passion today. I heard it when I was trying to make some points to counter some points that were made over here, although I listened to those points without feeling the need to throw my points at them at the same time.

Again, I applaud the work of the government and the current Education minister on this. We all had better recognize the years of work that went into it and the thousands of stakeholders and parents that had their say to try and put this together. Once again I'd like to applaud the opposition and my colleagues the Member for Airdrie and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, the other two members who were here, that I think led the charge in many ways to get some of this done.

There is much, much to say on the bill. I know many others want to have their say. We're going to go through it. We're going to consult with stakeholders. I look forward to more discussion.

Again, thank you for the honour of speaking on behalf of what I view as something very important in the province of Alberta.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak on Bill 3, and I feel quite privileged to be able to do so. I acknowledge that this has been a work-in-progress for a number of years, that there have been many groups that have been consulted. I'm happy to share my perspective and those that represent many Albertans, so I come at this bill with a mixed review.

I'll begin by outlining the aspects of this bill that I agree with. First, the student-centred residency. The fact that it's where the student resides as opposed to a parent or guardian and is more student focused I think is a positive. As well, raising the age of access to 21 I think is very important. I myself am a teacher and educator. I taught for six years in a very special school that has students that range from the age of 15 to 24, and I can say with great confidence that that school works very, very well. I find it outrageous that there's an insinuation that if there are older students with younger students, there will be predator acts that will automatically take place because of different ages.

I think it's about respect, respecting students of all ages. The advantage when you look at schools like K to 12 is that you have older students that are able to mentor younger students. In addition to that, coming from my own experience, I think there are students that because of extraneous circumstances or circumstances outside of their control are unable to complete their high school or complete their schooling within the prescribed number of years, and some of them require additional time to be able to do that. So giving them the access to finish their schooling I think is very, very important.

I'd like to talk about inclusive education, which, again, I think is a fantastic concept that has been often touted by this government. The challenge that I hear from colleagues and from many teachers around the province is that an inclusive classroom is a great concept, but in order for students and teachers to be successful, you need an appropriate number of resources for them. Putting 30 students in a classroom, 10 with special needs and extraneous needs, with one teacher to try to ensure that they can deliver the highest quality of education is quite absurd.

The concept of inclusive education can work and can work very, very well, but there need to be supports available. Again, I can draw from my own experiences where the school that I taught at had youth workers, support workers, outreach workers, a native elder, a social worker all on hand to provide wraparound services. I look forward to pressing this government to ensure that schools, teachers, students, and parents have the resources to ensure that our children and our students are successful.

Another aspect that I like from this is the fact that the francophone elector and trustee eligibility has been broadened – and I can't find it off the top here – where the requirement was removed that they had to have a student enrolled in a school. I think that that will be very well accepted by many French speakers and francophones.

There are aspects of this act that I will articulate that need to be changed or amended and ones that I find very disappointing. First and foremost, it's quite alarming that the wording of this proposed bill has the removal of the Canadian Charter of Rights of Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act. A former Premier of this province, who led the Conservatives to their first victory, former Premier Lougheed, was the one who introduced the Alberta Human Rights Act, and I find it quite alarming that this government somehow deems it appropriate to remove that from the Education Act. Those two documents protect the fundamental human rights and democratic rights of all people. It is my belief that this needs to be amended and inserted back into this education bill.

Another aspect that's missing is that school fees are not addressed. More and more schools are being downloaded with additional fees. We've got deferred maintenance on infrastructure. You know, I'd love to articulate that. Today it was uttered many times that the province was clear and free from debt years ago, when a former Premier announced it. It depends how you define that. When you transfer infrastructure deficit off your own books and then say, "Yes, we're debt free" – well, the head of the public school board was on CBC this morning talking about how in the next couple of years the public school board will have a billion-dollar infrastructure deficit. I'm sure that if we don't start addressing that now, that number is just going to continue to soar.

As well, something is missing from this act, full-day kindergarten. Again, this was a promise of our Premier some months back. I find it disappointing that this is not going to be realized in the time that was initially committed to. And the fact that we still have grade 3 provincial exams: clearly, that's something that needs to be addressed.

The last point that I'd like to bring up is the issue of bullying, which I think is a very serious matter. I'm happy to see that this is an issue that we are discussing and that is coming up and that all of us are feeling a responsibility in legislation. However, my frustration, as my colleague has mentioned, is that it's difficult and challenging for educators and school staff to deal with the issue of bullying when there are so few staff members. You've got larger class sizes or class sizes that continue to grow, and you have a shortage of staff that are able to be there to ensure that bullying does not take place.

In addition to that, the chilling effect of Bill 44, which was passed some time ago, is going to be a huge deterrent or an obstruction to schools dealing with bullying. I say that because if, for example, the reason that one child is being bullied happens to be based on an issue that a parent deems to be contentious, well, now the school can't deal with it. They can't address it. They can't sit down with the students to talk about the implications of their actions or words. I find that to be very, very restrictive. In fact, that nullifies and paralyzes schools to be able to deal with certain bullying situations.

I and my colleagues will be calling on this government and the House and all members to heed our calls for amending this bill to ensure that it truly is inclusive and reflects the values of all Albertans and protects our students and ensures that they get the highest quality of education.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to touch on my colleague for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. I guess that as a father of a 15-year-old daughter that's where I worry about the 21-year-old in the same parameters. I guess that's one of my complaints about the Education Act as it's presented here. I understand that at 18 there's a bit of a difference there. I mean, you can lead people down a different path in the same scenario. I guess that's where my stance is as a very protective father, to say the least. I don't want to put my 15-year-old daughter into that position or a 14 and a half year old. She could have been there at the beginning of grade 10. That's just one of my thoughts, I guess, where my background comes from on the difference in age.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, do you care to respond?

Mr. Bilous: Oh, yes, I would love to. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The issue here is that there's an assumption that based on age, suddenly there's going to be either some kind of issue or putting the life of a 15-year-old in jeopardy. The reality is that schools are meant to be safe places. Regardless of that, if we have an appropriate number of staff working in the schools, the member's daughter or anyone's child, therefore, should be safely watched over.

You know, with the issue of discriminating against students that are older or saying that they can't be part of the school environment, I think that what we're doing is that we're missing out on an opportunity. As I touched on earlier, older students can learn from younger students and vice versa. Quite often in elementary schools grade 6 students will mentor grade 1 students and work with them. I think there's much learning that can take place. I would ask the members to consider the positives in that situation. I'll leave my comments there.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Under 29(2)(a)? Okay.

Additional speakers? The Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise here and speak to Bill 3, the Education Act. I'm excited about this. As the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View pointed out, this is a success story in government. This is when government actually – it took an election and a near-death experience – did listen at the end of the day.

You know, I was going to read some kind of a more generic, fun speech, but I just have to address certain things, as members in this House know. It's too much to listen to some of this and not respond.

First of all, the importance of parental rights is absolutely paramount. It is something that is laid out very clearly in the United Nations declaration of human rights, that parents have a prior right to determine what education their children will receive. Now, that doesn't mean they get to pick which textbooks their kids are going to have to study grade 3 math, for example. We understand there are limits to that. What it does mean is that parents have the right to make sure that the learning environment that they send their kids to, the schools that they send their kids to, is something that is in line with their values and is something that is in line with what they're teaching their children.

That's why in Alberta, unlike in other dictatorships around the world, we allow parents the freedom to choose where they send their children to school. We allow them to choose if they're going to send them to a public school, a very inclusive public school, one that includes all folks from all different backgrounds. That's where I choose to send the only child of mine that's old enough to go to school right now. That's what I want for my child. Others send theirs to private, religious-based schools, where the religious curriculum is taught and permeates through the entire curriculum as a whole. You see that in Catholic schools, obviously. You see that in other faith-based schools of all faiths: Christian, Muslim.

We have a great school in Chestermere, near Chestermere and Conrich, the Khalsa school, a great school for young Sikhs. It's a great school, and it's something that we should be proud of, and I think we are. I think the vast majority of the people in this House, on that side of the House and this side of the House, are proud of that reputation of giving parents the right to educate their children as they see fit.

Now, let's be very clear. The Human Rights Act as currently constituted does apply to the Education Act. It does apply to it. It applies to every act in Alberta, to every single act, okay? [interjection] Well, I'll get to it. I'll get to it. Therefore, there's nothing in that act – if something is out of line with the Human Rights Act in that act, guess what? Not only the Human Rights Act but the Charter of Rights and Freedoms will take care of that, will make sure that it is in line with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. So that's taken care of.

The problem was never that. That was never the objection of the home-schoolers, the Catholic schoolers, and the thousands of other parents across this province that had a problem with this. The problem was that the act seemed to create a possibility, at the very least a possibility if not a probability, that the act could be used in certain circumstances. If parents did not teach their children something in line with what the Human Rights Commission had said or values that the Human Rights Commission had found, if they had not taught their children that value, the act could be used as a sword to essentially end the accreditation of the faith-based school in question. It could be used to end the right of the parents to home-educate their children.

It did not explicitly say that by any stretch, but the hole was there, and you could see it. It was plain in the language that somebody up to mischief under a different Education minister or perhaps under a different government could use that to take away the rights of certain parents who had certain values to be able to teach their children or send their kids to certain schools, and a school could even lose their accreditation over it. That was always the problem, and that's why hundreds of Albertans gathered on the steps of the Legislature and thousands across the province to protest this act. I am very glad that they did because I think that the government after a period of time did come to the understanding and agreement with those parents.

Now, I personally am tired of hearing the allegations that parents who believed in this change, who believe that their children should be taught in Catholic school and taught a Catholic doctrine, which we know is not the same – you know, obviously, a lot of people have different beliefs. We know that some of those beliefs don't make sense to certain sensibilities of others and vice versa. We know that there's some controversy on some of those beliefs, and I don't think it is right to tell parents of a different faith that because they want their kids to be brought up in that environment and taught those values, they are somehow intolerant bigots. That has got to stop.

That's why I absolutely applaud the Education minister, the current Education minister, not the former Education minister, who absolutely went along with that type of ridicule and name calling and fearmongering and hate-mongering. That Education minister used those exact same arguments against not only this party but against the actual home-schoolers and Catholic schoolers and people that had a problem themselves in the media and so forth with his quotes. He used those exact same arguments, and it was very offensive.

This Education minister seems to be much smarter about it. Not only smarter about it, but I think he genuinely sees that you can't persecute people because they choose to have their children educated in a faith-based environment. He should be absolutely applauded for showing that type of leadership.

The accusations, I believe, of intolerance are unfounded and wrong. Frankly, I would ask the folks that are accusing those of us over here and over there and parents in general in that situation of being intolerant to maybe look in the mirror a little bit because I think that the intolerance might be on the other side.

All right. Now that that's done, there are a couple of things I would like to address in this act that I think could be improved or are in here already and that I support. First of all, bullying. Everyone in this Assembly agrees that no person, no child should be bullied for any reason. I don't care what their sexual orientation is, whether they are skinny or fat or something in between. I don't care what the colour of their skin is, what their religion is. It doesn't matter. No child should ever have to undergo bullying for any reason. I think everybody in this House – everybody – can agree on that. So I again would like to applaud the Education minister and the former Education minister and the former, former Education minister for making this a key part of the bill. It's something that I think we certainly all support in this House.

Three improvements I think we could have here, and I think we'll be bringing some amendments on a couple of them anyway. First of all, we saw what I think is the stupidity of the no-zero policy, a teacher who was fired for giving out a zero for incomplete work. What a ridiculous, nonsensical thing that is. You shouldn't have to put something like that in a piece of legislation. It should be so common sense. I have four kids. I expect teachers in this province – if my child does not turn in their assignment, they'd better darn well get a zero on their work so that they learn a lesson and they make sure to turn their work in the next time. That should absolutely be addressed. No teacher should be fired for giving a zero for incomplete work. We'd like to see that in the bill. I don't know how you'd word it. I'm open to suggestions. But it's just so ridiculous. Obviously, with the Education Act you don't want to interfere with local autonomy; however, the Education Act does layout some base parameters, some base expectations that go across the entire province, and this, I think, should be one.

The second piece is mandatory school fees, something that we campaigned vigorously on during the election. I think it makes sense. There should be no mandatory fees in place if the course in question is something that a child needs to progress or graduate or go to the next grade. We're not talking about field trips. We're not talking about transportation, even, and some of these other things. We're just talking about: you cannot pass this course unless you pay these fees, and if you don't pass this course, then you can't be promoted to the next level or graduate and so forth. That should be eliminated. It wouldn't cost that much money. We could make this a priority. That's something that we think we should do, and I am disappointed to see that that's not in there.

Lastly, charter schools. Charter schools, I believe, are a fantastic way for the school system to innovate, for the public school system to innovate. We forget that charter schools are public schools. They are public schools. They are not private schools as sometimes they are accused of being. They are public schools. First-come, first-served, no-tuition charter schools. In my view, we should be making it far more easy – far more easy – for groups, for public schools themselves, for others to transform their schools into charter schools or to start new charter schools because charter schools, like I say, are the great innovators.

There are different learning methods – pedagogical, I think, is the word – that are used and different ways of teaching the curriculum to different types of students; for example, students with disabilities, people with reading disabilities who might be good in math and science but not good in reading, people with language needs, and so forth. I think we should be opening the doors. Just open the doors wide for charter schools, let innovation take hold, give more flexibility to the public system to offer specialized programs in the trades for children with disabilities and so forth.

Although that part isn't in this act, I hope that in the future with the good work that the hon. House leader has done as well as the current Education minister on – help me out here. What's that great thing, the report that you put forward?

An Hon. Member: Inspiring Education.

Mr. Anderson: Inspiring Education – I lost the word for a second – the great work that was done there. Please continue to build on that. I think we are going to continue to lead the nation on education.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

5:50

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Associate Minister of Finance.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know the member across considers himself to be a very principled individual, and I know that he and his party have advocated for greater local autonomy. He mentioned in his speech the issue around creating policy or legislation or some specific guidance in the School Act that maybe suggests that the provincial government should step into that which is normally considered a responsibility of a locally elected school board. I know as a former school board trustee that we need to continue to make sure our school boards have the authority to make decisions based on their electorate and the wishes of their electorate. I don't think there's any language within the current School Act or the proposed one, this new Education Act, that suggests that school boards can't allow a policy. Wouldn't it be consistent with the principles of what this member has advocated for with his party to allow school boards to continue to set that policy?

Mr. Anderson: That's a very fair question, and it needs to be debated. I guess my point is that although I think we all agree that there should be local autonomy in our school system as much as possible, we do have a School Act. It's a very thick act. The reason we have this is that it sets out some basic parameters, just very basic things about how the education system will be run, and then local school boards have to work within that framework. For example, curriculum. We set the curriculum. We don't just leave that to the school boards. The province sets the curriculum, so there's a general standard. Now, there are differences in how it's taught between the different school boards and so forth, and there's flexibility in other areas.

I guess the issue here – and maybe this is more about protecting teachers than anything else – is that there needs to be, in my view, a basic standard around how we treat our teachers and how we deal with their decisions. I just cannot find one justification for why a teacher, certainly an experienced teacher like the one in question but any teacher, frankly, should ever be fired – ever be fired – for giving a zero to a student for not completing his assignment. He's doing his job. In fact, he's probably doing his job far more than the teacher that would not give a zero for an incomplete assignment. He's doing that child a much greater service than the teacher that would just kind of let it slide. I just think it's completely wrong.

I guess the point there is that although I agree with you that we should try to keep local autonomy as sacrosanct as possible, I think we do need to have a minimum standard. I think that making sure teachers are not fired for doing their job should be part of that minimum standard.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others? The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: I'm fascinated by the hon. member's concept of assessment, so I'm just interested to ask: when a teacher is doing an assessment of a student's knowledge with respect to, say, for example, a physics course, is that assessment to be based on the student's understanding of the content of the course? Or should that assessment with respect to that particular course be based on whether the student showed up for class or not? What is the mark in the physics course intended to designate on a transcript as it goes forward to a university or to the workforce? Is it the understanding of the content of the course, or is it supposed to be about work ethic?

Mr. Anderson: It should clearly be both. Clearly, if someone wants to go to university, they need to (a) learn how to attend class – that's key – and (b) comprehend the material. I think it's both. So I think if someone doesn't do their work, if someone doesn't show up to class, then they should receive a lower mark and be assessed lower.

Mr. Hancock: I take it, then, from the hon. member's comments that we should stop allowing students to challenge exams on courses in order to get the criteria for a class, that every student should be required to go through a full course of subject and to write all the assessment tools throughout that course before they get a mark on the course? We shouldn't have challenge exams on any courses available to students?

Mr. Anderson: You know, I would think that in order to allow a student to catch up or to excel and get ahead if the student is that fantastic, he should be given that opportunity.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. The time for 29(2)(a) has elapsed.

I would ask at this time: are there any additional speakers? The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a bill that makes me proud to be part of an effective Wildrose opposition. The government made a bad decision to try and negate parental rights in the previous Education Act, and an effective opposition forced them to backtrack. The opposition that arose to the previous Education Act was enormous. The response came from parents across the province that were united about one thing: they cared about the education of their children.

Mr. Speaker, as a parent of two children, one in school and one no longer in school, I appreciate that it is my paramount right to educate my child the way my husband and I see fit. I have to say that I might have to sit down and take a drink of water because I've just learned that our choice has led me to educate our 10-year-old daughter, Madison, in the St. Marguerite Catholic school in Innisfail, which was my parental choice, and then I learned that the hon. Member for Airdrie educates his child in a public school. Given our dynamics I find that very interesting.

Over 2,000 people came and protested in the freezing cold on the steps of this Legislature. As the Member for Airdrie and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek have reminded me, the media had remarked that this was one of the biggest crowds they had ever seen at the Legislature. The members for Airdrie and Calgary-Fish Creek fought for parental rights until the last day of the legislative sitting, when opposition to the bill forced the government to let it die on the Order Paper. With that, parents from across this province breathed a sigh of relief.

After trying to act as if the Wildrose opposition was only trying to fearmonger, the government has taken our position and taken the contentious sections out of the bill. Now Bill 3 is generally a good piece of legislation. I'll leave it to my colleagues that have some amendments to improve this bill further. I appreciate all the hard work that they're doing on that.

I am reminded of an initiative that was first taken on behalf of the MLA for Calgary-Fish Creek when she started to advocate for seniors who were getting terrible centralized meals. After I became elected, she educated me on how this process worked and the bureaucracy of all of it, that they just have to do it because that's the way it's done. It wasn't right, Mr. Speaker, and the government took no initiative to change this. However, there was an effective opposition, and the government finally decided to listen. I believe that's what has happened on the Education Act.

I would like to take a moment to thank the government for bringing this bill forward in a much more respectful manner than we saw when this bill was last introduced. I think the minister has been honest and forthcoming with his intentions. It is a lot different than what parents saw the last time this bill was introduced, when the then Education minister, now Deputy Premier, tried to sneak in section 16, acted as if opponents to this bill didn't know what they were talking about, and even tweeted that those who protested the bill at the Legislature were protesting against human rights in the education system. That move was a complete and utter disrespect to parents across this province, opponents of the bill in this House, and perhaps, I think, this government as well.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, an effective opposition has forced this government to listen to Albertans, and now we have a good piece of legislation that will benefit parents, students, and educators across this province. I'm proud to be part of a Wildrose opposition that helped lead this, and I hope this government will work together to put Albertans first.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, October 24, 2012

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 8

Electric Utilities Amendment Act, 2012

The Deputy Speaker: The chair recognizes the hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I'm pleased to take the bill to the next level of debate this evening. The legislation is designed in order to ensure that we create a change that's recommended by the Critical Transmission Review Committee, the recommendations of which were accepted by the government of Alberta earlier this year.

Essentially, that committee – and they listened to Albertans; they took feedback from Albertans – recommended that the four critical transmission projects in the province be proceeded with, which the government concurred with, and also recommended that the legislation be changed in order to ensure that all future critical transmission decisions and recommendations are made by the Alberta Utilities Commission. In that respect, we have here a bill which deals with that.

So, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to recommend to the House that this legislation move forward and that we allow the important recommendation from the Critical Transmission Review Committee to be accepted. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

The chair will now recognize the hon. Member for . . .

Mr. Hughes: I move to adjourn.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 1

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012

[Adjourned debate October 23: Mr. Wilson]

The Deputy Speaker: The chair will recognize the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Let me make sure I get this right. We're talking about Bill 1. Is that correct? Thank you very much. You didn't make your motion. I was going to get up and speak on Bill 8.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak for this bill. I, too, would like to thank the Minister of Education and the government for listening and making the changes that you have made. In my riding, and even before . . .

Some Hon. Members: Bill 1.

Mr. Anglin: I'll get the numbers right. All right. When I saw the member over there, I knew which bill I was looking at.

As a former first responder . . . [interjections] I will say that the Minister of Energy did a great job throwing me off track when he didn't put the motion forward.

But this is serious. This is a very good bill in the sense that it does put the onus on the WCB to provide care for this posttraumatic stress disorder. It was mentioned a little bit earlier – and it's really important, and that's why I asked to speak to this bill – that this type of disorder doesn't just necessarily appear. It is something – and I think we all know this – that does come over time. It is something that is absolutely significant.

At 17 years old I went off and joined the Marines, and I lost friends in the process. Now, I lost friends in action, but I lost friends when they came back because they didn't come back. They were different, and they didn't survive. I can look back now and say that that was posttraumatic stress disorder. When I was a police officer, we had counsellors that actually worked in the police department. It affects everybody so differently, and how it affects them is really important as to how they're treated. In putting the onus on the WCB, I want to thank this government for bringing this bill forward.

I think it is extremely important that we do one more thing. I brought this forward. It's important to me because this is an issue that was brought up, and we will be making a motion to this later. In the definition of the bill we've left out a few occupations that I think are significant, and some of them were actually brought here today.

One of those was correctional officers. When I look at first responders, to me the definition of the first responder is who you call when you're in trouble and who will put their life on the line to protect you or to serve our best interests. Correctional officers do that. When there is trouble in a prison, they are the ones that have to step forward and risk their lives, risk danger to subdue or do whatever they have to do. They also are subject to a tremendous number of other scenarios that can bring on this syndrome.

Mr. Speaker, this bill does cover firefighters, and this bill does cover volunteer firefighters. I will be introducing an amendment which actually deals with the Municipal Government Act more than this bill, but they're tied together in the definition of what a volunteer firefighter is. Now, this act will make sure that volunteer firefighters are covered. That's not the issue. The issue is: when somebody is covered and they are suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder, do they need the aggravation from some bean-counter at a municipal level trying to make an argument about whether they're an employee or not an employee? It is a grey area in the Municipal Government Act that has been there for quite a long time. As I researched that issue, a number of municipalities have had to deal with it over a different set of times.

Let me explain what goes on. Volunteer firefighters are generally not paid, hence the term "volunteer." But some communities actually remunerate their volunteer firefighters by a set fee. Others will remunerate them based on a wage. Others will pay them so much for calls and so much for training. If you look at our employment act, which has what the definition of "employee" is, it says that it's anybody who gets a wage. But when you look at the definition of volunteer firefighter, it's not clear. So these volunteers get hung up. Every now and then it pops up. The law firm of Brownlee will actually confirm this for anyone who wants to check it. It's been around a long time. It's just been a headache.

Looking at this act, that it wanted to cover the volunteer firefighters, I thought this would be a good opportunity to clear up the definition of a volunteer firefighter. All I did was look at the act, and I'm going to submit this, that says that regardless of the remuneration, they are still volunteer firefighters. If someone is suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder, the last thing they need is some bureaucratic headache, trying to figure out something that might not even be associated with it. The fact is that they don't need that headache. All I was asking for in these motions I'll be bringing forward is clarification on the definition.

Beyond that, let me just share my experiences in dealing with this issue. It is dear to my heart. I served in the military. I served as a police officer, and then I also served on the Canadian Coast Guard fast response search and rescue off the coast of B.C. I have to tell you I can share all sorts of comical stories, but I can also share some very personal stories of having to deal with some pretty traumatic stuff.

I will tell you, from going through the Marines and being a police officer, that there's something extremely traumatic when you find a child that has drowned. It really sets a person in a different frame of mind when you see the innocent life. How do you live with this? How does it work with you over not just the next few days but maybe even the next few years? In my case I still have several memories in my life. I can still see these people. I'm still haunted. Now, some might say I suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder; others might say I suffer from something else. The point I'm trying to make is that when there is an actual diagnosis, the thing we need to do is make sure the care is there. I commend this government for taking this step.

I just ask you to take a look at the definition and look at some of these people like the corrections officers and keep in mind – we all know this – that there are police officers, there are people in the military who never see front-line duty, but there are social workers that work for the police department, and they are on front-line duty. There are social workers in the prisons that are on front-line duty. That distinguishes them as something separate from other social workers. It is something to think about. Who is that front-line person? Who is that person that puts themselves out there first on that first call? That's important.

Corrections officers, in my mind, without question are in harm's way every time they show up to work. Police officers, every time that call comes, are in harm's way. Firefighters, every time that alarm rings, are in harm's way. That's really important. To me the definition is: if you put yourself in harm's way, you are a first responder.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-South East.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, thank you. It's an honour again to stand before you in this House and speak again to this bill. I commend the hon. Premier for introducing this bill and protecting the people on the front lines. Certainly, as a paramedic for the last 13 years in this province, I can tell you that many times I've held lifeless bodies in my hands, baby children. I've sat alongside members in the ambulance that are going through home troubles. Police officers, the same thing: they live a regular life just like all of us, and they go through the same trials and tribulations. But at the same time, like the member has stated in this House, they step out and they put it on the line. They put all their own misery away, and they save those that need saving. They witness the carnage on the streets.

I can tell you about one of the things, and it was mentioned yesterday. When we talk about the idea that many people aren't reporting it, it is the culture of first responders to take care of one another in those times. Through critical incident debriefing we recognize when somebody is going through that time, when they're under stress, and we deal with it at the time. We collectively come together. It's a good mechanism. Whether it's the city of Calgary, the city of Edmonton, or provincial entities, I know that they're very caring people, and the critical incident debriefing teams do a great job of making sure that they catch many things. In the instances when they don't, it's clear that this government has made a commitment to protect our first responders and make sure that they continue to live life and have a fruitful life with their families.

Again, I commend the Premier, and at the same time I commend all those right now, as we speak, holding the lifeless bodies, picking up after the carnage on the highways, and stepping up for those who can't step up for themselves.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't want to take long by any stretch, but I do want to stand on behalf of the Wildrose caucus and give our full support to this bill. Obviously, we have a couple of amendments that will be brought forward. Specifically with regard to our correctional officers that's not an amendment we'll be bringing forward. It's an amendment that our friends in the NDP will be bringing forward, but we're planning to support that as well.

I guess like everyone who has their own perspective on a first responder or first responders that have touched their lives, I've had the unfortunate tragedy of having to witness some fatalities over the last couple of years on the QE II in two separate circumstances. It's an awful experience.

All I can remember, really, from those two experiences was just that when I came upon it, being the first on the scene, the next people at the scene, not more than a few minutes later, were our first responders. I was just astonished at how selfless they were, how the only thing they cared about was first and foremost the people that were in the accident – and that was the only concern to begin with – but also the safety of those coming upon the scene in a very chaotic situation where if things weren't taken care of properly, it could have become an even worse situation, with more injuries and fatalities. Then, of course, taking the time to help those who had come to the fatality or seen the accident up close and making sure that they were okay, making sure that they were properly supported, making sure that they were being cared for, offering to drive me and others if need be just to another location in order to kind of gather our thoughts before moving on.

Anyway, it just blows my mind, and I think it really overwhelms everybody in this Assembly, the incredible selflessness of these people. They never want to, but they are so willing to put themselves not only in harm's way but also in very difficult positions. Somebody has to do this job. It's one of the worst jobs in the world in some ways in that you have to see things that no one ever wants to see, nor should they see. At the same time they do it because they care about people, they love people, they want to help people, and they want to not just help the victims of the accidents, which they do an incredible job of, but also everyone affected by them at the scene. I just think that that's something that says so much about these individuals.

There's a great scripture that says that there's no greater love than he who lays down his life for his friends. I think that that perfectly exemplifies and represents these heroes, these great first responders that we have. So to them, including our past first responder and current first responders that are in this Chamber, I want to thank them from the bottom of my heart for that. I think we all feel the same.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Airdrie.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Are there others? I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-McCall.

7:50

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to speak in favour of this bill. I'd also like to congratulate the government for bringing this bill which will amend the Workers' Compensation Act to allow paramedics, firefighters, sheriffs, and police officers to receive WCB coverage for posttraumatic stress disorder without having to prove that the PTSD is work related.

This will also streamline the process for first responders to receive WCB coverage for PTSD, which also has the potential to mitigate a number of social problems associated with the disorder; that is, substance abuse, addictions, domestic violence, et cetera.

As emergency first responders are much more likely to encounter extremely stressful situations and experience greater psychological and emotional trauma than other professions because it happens over time – it may not happen one time or two times because, you know, this is a pattern and because they encounter different situations over time – it is reasonable and appropriate that the government streamline their actions to WCB coverage for posttraumatic stress disorder.

Many emergency responders suffering from PTSD may not seek the help they need because of their pride or the stigma of mental illness, so reducing or eliminating barriers to treatment is essential, and I think this bill will go a long way to correct those problems.

I support this bill on behalf of my caucus as well, and I congratulate the government again for bringing this bill forward. This may not be a perfect bill, you know. We can debate and change it as we go along, but this is the first step in the right direction.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I would recognize the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to speak to Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012. I want to indicate that we have some amendments to this bill, but we are very supportive of the concept. The idea that workers who are faced with trauma that affects them, maybe in a permanent way because of traumatic events that they've experienced, should be compensated, should be eligible for compensation without having to prove that their job is the source each and every time, is a very progressive and positive direction and follows up on a number of other initiatives that the government has adopted, stemming from the example of the government of Manitoba, that first established this principle for firefighters. I think that it's an important and positive step to take.

You know, many workers are faced with very, very difficult jobs. People often say to me: boy, I wouldn't want to have your job. But, quite frankly, the kind of jobs that first responders do are far, far more traumatic than this. I mean, the worst thing that can happen to us other than losing an election, I suppose, is to be called to order by the Speaker, and I can't imagine what would happen if that ever happened to me. But I think if you really think about the jobs that some people do and how it affects them, you realize that this is the least, really, that we can do for those brave men and women who put themselves in harm's way in order to protect us and to protect our families.

I think the flaw in the bill, if I can get to that, is that the bill is a little too restrictive. It attempts to categorize people and say that these particular occupations should be deemed and other ones should not be. In fact, the bill specifically excludes certain categories. Now, I don't think that that's right. I think that the bill needs to be broadened. We've heard about volunteer firefighters from the hon. Member for – is it Rimbey-Ponoka? What's it called now?

Mr. Anglin: Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Mason: Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. That has a nice beat to it, hon. member.

You know, he talked about the sort of grey area that volunteer firefighters fall into. It's not that their work is much different from professional firefighters; it's just that the employment relationship is different. The work and the potential exposure to traumatic events is no different. So I think that their proposed amendment sounds like a very good one. We have some others as well.

Correctional officers, for example, are excluded in the bill, and they shouldn't be. Peace officers are defined narrowly as sheriffs. There are other peace officers. Social workers have been mentioned. Even in some cases medical professionals may well be subject to the kind of stress and traumatic incidents that first responders covered by this bill are.

I think that that's a problem, and I'd ask the government to really consider broadening it. It's not just people who wear a uniform. It's not just male-dominated occupations. Others who don't wear a uniform may actually also be on the front lines, may place themselves in harm's way, and may in fact have lifelong consequences as a result of the job that they have.

When the Premier talked about this legislation on May 24, she said that the legislation returns the courtesy and the favour to the first responders, who arrive at the time of our greatest need. I would say that it's a high-risk and potentially traumatic occupation, and the legislation must properly include all workers who are employed as first responders and in potentially traumatic occupations.

The government claims that this is the first legislation of its kind in Canada, but I would point out that many provinces have already extended presumptive compensation to firefighters in cases of primary site cancer. The concept is not new in legislation.

As I mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, I think the government is deliberately narrowing its definition of first responder, excluding corrections staff and social workers who provide first response duties. The associate minister says that the bill is a recognition of the incredible stress that first responders go through in serving us on our highways. I guess the question I have is: is the government really just looking at people whose job is on the highways?

I think that we need to emphasize that first responders work in many locations and confront many kinds of traumatic situations that the bill in its present form simply doesn't cover.

We've been in contact with a number of stakeholders that have an interest in this legislation, and they all emphasize that it is a good first step. This bill is a good first step, but it doesn't extend presumptive coverage to all first responders. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the legislation in its current form does not fully match the government's claims because, as I've mentioned, corrections officers and social workers are not included in the list of first responders.

We've been in touch with the Union of Canadian Correctional Officers. Some of their members were introduced today. I think some are still here. Your stamina is amazing, and I appreciate the fact that you have endured to get to this debate.

They have provided us with the wording for an amendment which would include federal corrections officers under the definition of peace officers. Mr. Speaker, we'd go further. We think that both federal and provincial correctional officers should be included, and we have prepared an amendment to address this when we get to the committee stage.

The Alberta College of Social Workers would like to see social workers as defined by the Health Professions Act specifically covered by the legislation.

Although stakeholders are primarily interested in having the correct occupations listed in the bill, our amendment to 24.2(2) is based on the idea that discriminating by occupation denies presumptive coverage for PTSD claims for workers in a vast number of occupations where traumatic events may be experienced during the fulfillment of their duties. It reflects our belief that no specific list of occupations can fully include all workers who experience traumatic events in the line of duty.

Mr. Speaker, as my colleague has now arrived and has been sending me text messages to make sure that the debate continued until she got here, which may explain why I kind of slowed down there in my remarks, I will conclude my remarks and turn you over to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Without that, then I would ask for other members willing to speak to this bill. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: There you go. I was tempted to use 29(2)(a) to ask the previous speaker if he didn't think it might be appropriate to give his colleague an opportunity to catch her breath and let him talk about that for a little while, but what the heck.

It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to Bill 1, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2012, and to talk about some of the issues that are covered in this bill, both the great steps forward that it represents as well as the concerns that we have that we truly hope the government will give some deliberation to, notwithstanding some public statements not to that effect in the last couple of days.

This bill, as previous speakers have indicated, relates to the application of the presumptive principle with respect to post-traumatic stress disorder and its diagnosis amidst a particular group of occupations. Let me start by saying that there is no question that the issue of posttraumatic stress disorder amongst a number of different occupations in Canada is a grave one, and it's one about which we should be deeply concerned and on which we should take action. Certainly, to the extent that this bill commences that process of taking action, I think it's an incredible step forward.

Of course, all of us have, I'm sure, followed to some extent the public conversation about the issue of posttraumatic stress disorder amongst our military personnel and the struggles that those particular Canadians face. There's no question that the same kind of issue exists among certain uniformed and other professionals and occupations in Alberta. There is no question that the presumption is rightly applied to the people that are named in this bill. No question about that, that the people named in this bill I think will benefit from the presumption.

And it is about time because I believe that for many years, as a result of some denial on the part of people within this profession as well as denial on the part of those who stand in supervisory roles within this profession as well as a series of denials on the part of various workers' compensation administrations, the real compensable injury, the injury that occurs naturally as a result of the work that these people do, has gone uncompensated. So to the extent that this bill is going to remedy that, this is a very, very good thing. I certainly don't want to say that we would not support this bill because a little ways forward is better than no ways forward, and there is no question that there is a significant improvement in the lives of some people as a result of this.

As many of you may know, in my past life I practised law, and one of the areas that I was very involved with was health and safety, workers' health and safety and occupation health and safety. In fact, I think I may have been the representative on one of the first two or three PTSD cases ever accepted by the Workers' Compensation Board in Alberta back in the early '90s. Ironically, that case related to a corrections officer.

That brings me to the beginning of the concerns that we have with this piece of legislation in that it does not apply to enough people. The mechanism that this government has chosen to extend this long overdue and necessary protection to key employees in our community is unfortunately flawed because by doing it by naming people, the minute – anyone who is a lawyer or has been anywhere close to law knows that it's a fairly simple principle in the law: you name something and by definition you, unfortunately, exclude that which you do not name. So using a list to extend a benefit is an unfortunate way to go because you then exclude those who aren't on the list. There are a number of people who are not on this list that should be on this list.

Now, the associate minister who is responsible for workers' compensation has been quoted in the media a couple of times talking about how: well, this is just focused on first responders, first responders who deal with the extreme trauma that we often see on highways, responding to car accidents, that kind of thing. In no way, shape, or form do I want to negate the severity and the significance of the trauma that those kinds of first responders come across. It is significant, and they should of course get this coverage.

The difficulty is that that's not the only kind of trauma out there. Moreover, this legislation doesn't limit it to just highway activity. It extends PTSD coverage to any person who falls under the list that the government has identified regardless of the nature of the trauma that they've been exposed to. That's good because their job is typically full of trauma, but nonetheless it is difficult, then, when the minister says: oh, the reason that we're not covering all these other people who respond to trauma is because they're not responding to highway traffic accidents.

Let me give an example. I use an old one because I want to be sure not to, you know, be insensitive to people who were associated with this example, but you can imagine that it would apply today. I recall when I was living in B.C. that the independent children's advocate produced an independent report about the fatality of a young child. The child was somewhere between six and 18 months. What happened was they were known to the ministry, living with a parent, and the social worker was contacted by a neighbour who was worried that there was domestic abuse and disorder going on in the adjacent apartment and that the child was at risk.

So the social worker contacted a police officer, and they went to the apartment to see what was going on. What they found was the stuff of headlines for the next six months in B.C. It was a horrible, horrible scene that they both came upon. The police officer and the social worker together came upon the scene and found the deceased six-month-old child and a lot of other stuff which was very traumatizing for everyone that was involved in that situation.

Now, with this legislation being applied to that, what would happen is that if the police officer did get posttraumatic stress disorder as a result of this very traumatic event, they would automatically get coverage, and that's good. But what would happen to the social worker is that she would have to make a claim, and then she would have to prove that this event was what caused her posttraumatic stress disorder. And be clear. The way she proves that is she watches as the WCB and their investigators and their psychologists and their psychiatrists pore through every detail of her life and look at whether or not she might possibly have been abused as a child, whether she might be abused in her marriage, whether she might have been exposed to trauma when she was in college, all those things. They will aggressively pursue whether or not there was another explanation for why she might have developed posttraumatic stress disorder. You can imagine that at the end of that process if she hadn't already had post-traumatic stress disorder, she would by then.

That's exactly what happens right now. When the average worker who is not covered by this presumption makes a claim for posttraumatic stress disorder, their life is turned inside out in the process of them trying to make the case that it was their work and the trauma they were exposed to at their work that caused the disease for which they are now seeking compensation. You can imagine, then, that that contradiction doesn't make sense, so we'll be introducing amendments to expand and extend the implication out.

I want to go back to corrections officers because that's a more narrow one that defies rational explanation for why they are excluded from this group. Corrections officers are, in fact, the official first responder within the prison system. The only difference that we're actually seeing is that some people who are listed in this act respond to trauma and violence experienced by the general public and corrections officers respond to trauma and violence experienced by criminals or, in some unfortunate cases, their colleagues. What we're really doing is making a judgment based on the quality of the victim – i.e., the person that the first responder is helping – rather than making a judgment based on the true injury experienced by the person who is responding to that emergency. That's the only difference between the corrections officers and the other people that are listed.

I really am waiting for the associate minister or someone else from this government to explain what the rationale is for excluding that particular group. We have copious amounts of evidence that the situation in our prisons over the last 20 years, 25 years has deteriorated dramatically. You know, back in the day when I was representing corrections officers, everyone was screaming about double-bunking. Well, now people are screaming about triple-bunking.

Just today there was a report that came out about how the mental health of prisoners and the attempts at self-mutilation and the suicide attempts have gone up dramatically just in the last two or three years. I suspect that the same statistics will show that the level of violence within our prison systems has gone up as well because of overcrowding. The associate minister in charge of the Workers' Compensation Board ought to, of anybody in this building, know about that because at one point he was responsible as the former Solicitor General for the work and the conditions that existed in the Remand Centre, so how he could not know about this?

I remember taking tours in the Remand Centre when I represented corrections officers. It became very clear to me that each and every day a lot of these folks went to work to what was almost a war zone. They walked into their office, and then immediately their blood pressure went up, their heart rate went up, their need to ensure their own safety and their consciousness of their need to ensure their own safety went up, and they functioned at that level for a shift of eight to 12 hours or however long they had to. In the midst of that if they had to respond to a violent altercation or to, you know, assaults or, in some cases, homicides, well, they were already vibrating before they even got to the traumatic event.

Anyone who has walked through those centres knows that that's the reality that these folks live with. But in doing that, they keep the rest of the public safe. They do. They keep all of us safe. So I don't understand why we would distinguish them. They're not quite the same. You know, it's not quite as neat to have an election campaign photo op with this particular group although I'm sure they'd be happy to do that if the Premier had asked. But the fact of the matter is that the work that they do is no less valuable than the work that is done by all the other people that are mentioned in this bill. The nature of the work and the nature of their response is no different.

While I congratulate this government on recognizing the importance of posttraumatic stress disorder as a genuine occupational hazard and while I am glad that that protection has been extended to the people that are listed in this act, I worry that in naming that bunch, those who were not named will be presented with even greater challenges when it comes to applying for posttraumatic stress disorder compensation as a result of not being named because there will in effect be an institutional statement that the work that they do is not traumatic.

The thing that this government needs to understand is that we can't make value judgments about the nature of the trauma. The fact of the matter is that if there is trauma, the fact that that trauma was induced because they were saving a baby from a fire or the fact that that trauma was induced because they, unfortunately, were discovering a child who had just deceased or the fact that that trauma was induced because they were pulling two murderers apart from each other in the middle of a fight in a prison doesn't matter. The fact is that the trauma is the trauma, and that's the principle of the Workers' Compensation Act. Injecting value judgments into the nature or the history of the injury goes counter to the principles that are inherent in the Workers' Compensation Act.

This is really, really important. Mental health issues as a whole are huge. They are huge challenges in our community, in our cities, in our province, in our country. Posttraumatic stress disorder, for what it's worth, is not the only type of injury that occurs as a result of workplace trauma, by the way. There are other mental health injuries that also occur as a result of trauma in the workplace – bullying, ironically, going back to a conversation that we had earlier today – but they're poorly recognized in terms of our ability to treat them. They are almost never recognized in terms of our ability to compensate for them. It's really, really important that we do a better job of understanding the diagnosis and the nature of the injury and the relationship between that and the work. I hope this discussion can continue and that we can get some answers.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was wondering if the hon. member will comment on something that is called duration of threat. In combat they know that if they extend beyond I think it's 25, 29 straight days, if they don't remove that person from the threat, they start to lose those people. In the police force when you put somebody undercover in a situation where they're in a constant threatening situation, they know that they have to pull that person out of that undercover operation. Otherwise, they begin to lose these people to these types of injuries. I was wondering if you would draw the correlation between that and corrections officers.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's interesting that you ask that question. As I was saying, my own personal experience in working with corrections officers and observing the conditions of their employment in our prisons is such that, as I say, I sort of almost flippantly use the phrase "war zone." Now, a lot of these folks go home. It is true. They will go home. Maybe, you know, their shifts extend, they work double time, they work overtime, but they will manage to go home for a bit. But day after day after day, knowing that you're going into a situation where you can't be totally sure that you can protect yourself or your colleagues from the risks that you face as a result of your workplace, that does slowly build up. Whether it creates the posttraumatic stress disorder itself or whether it enhances the vulnerability of someone to develop it if they are exposed to a particularly traumatic event, it doesn't matter. It's absolutely a factor.

I would go so far as to say that in representing other types of employees, I've represented employees who work as social workers in youth and group homes, where they work with youth who are highly volatile with, effectively, criminal backgrounds, where they fully are aware that they are understaffed, where they are fully aware that they could be overpowered at any time, and where days over days over days, when people call in and miss shifts and they're working by themselves, they too start to develop that sense of vulnerability and that sense of risk that, I think it's arguable, sort of wears them down such that if they are then presented with a particular traumatic event, they're more likely to respond as a result.

I think the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre raises a really good point that corrections officers in our system, based on the objective evidence that has been provided by the academic community looking at and studying our prison system over the last 10 or 15 years, essentially face the same kind of hazards as someone who is in some form of combat for any extended period of time.

It's truly a strange oversight. That is really what this appears to me to be. I just don't understand the rationale behind this particular oversight. The work they do is very difficult to distinguish sometimes from the work that is done by the other folks that are mentioned in this list, not in any way to negate the extremely important work that the other important folks on this list do. But, you know, I think it would behoove this government to reconsider the policy decisions that they've made thus far and to add the corrections officers, both federal and provincial, to this list and then also to listen to us when we come up with some proposals down the road for how to restructure the application of this presumption in a way that more fairly compensates people based on the trauma and the injury rather than based on what their title is.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We still have some time if others would wish to participate.

Seeing none, are there other speakers that would like to speak to this at second reading?

Seeing none, I would ask the hon. Associate Minister of Services for Persons with Disabilities on behalf of the hon. Premier to close.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to close the debate on second reading of Bill 1.

Mr. Speaker, as we go forward into committee, assuming that we now pass this vote, I'll look forward. There are, of course, no amendments on the floor at this time, and obviously we're expecting some. It's been an interesting debate, and I'm sure we'll have more.

I want to point out a couple of things. First of all, nobody is denying that anybody in Alberta faces stress in their work or very stressful, perhaps traumatic incidents in their workplace. Occasionally those could even lead to posttraumatic stress disorder. As the situation stands today, any worker in any occupation in Alberta can be diagnosed with posttraumatic stress disorder and can receive compensation for that if the PTSD is linked to an incident that happened in their workplace. The difficulty with PTSD is actually not in linking it to an incident in the workplace. It's in the diagnosis in the first place, and that's true whether it's presumptive or not. The only thing that Bill 1 would change is that if a first responder has been diagnosed with PTSD, it's presumptive that that occurred as a result of incidents in the workplace.

Now, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona accidentally but very cleanly identified the problem and demonstrated the problem that she herself is accusing the government of. She said that by naming someone, we exclude other people. I suppose that's true. The only logical way out of that dilemma, of course, would either be to include all occupations in the bill – let's just presumptively attribute everybody's PTSD to their workplace situation, thereby not excluding anybody – or to drop the bill entirely, thereby also not excluding anybody. I don't think that's what the member is advocating. I'm assuming that's not what she's advocating because she went on to list some additional occupations. She doesn't like it when the government lists some occupations, thereby excluding somebody, but has no qualms whatsoever about listing additional occupations.

She talked about the fact that the government is making value judgments while she went on to make value judgments, thereby underlining the difficulty of it, even going so far as to say that it's not just PTSD, that there are other types of injury which clearly aren't contemplated in this bill. The bill is about PTSD. The member points out that she has reams of evidence, which usually means more than a page, so I'm looking forward to debating a proposed amendment in third reading. We'll see.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I'd be pleased to call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 1 read a second time]

Bill 3 Education Act

[Debate adjourned October 24]

The Deputy Speaker: Just for the record members speaking are now limited to 15 minutes of speaking time. At the end of the 15 minutes Standing Order 29(2)(a) will be available.

To start the debate, I'll recognize the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to stand here before the House and discuss Bill 3, the Education Act. Being a proud father of two sons, I know the challenges associated with having kids, let alone educating them. The children are our future, and it's rewarding to have an opportunity to have input into not only my children's education but the education of all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, what we have before us is a good piece of legislation that took a battle to get. It's encouraging to see a document that has taken into account so many Wildrose policies. Like I mentioned in my maiden speech, these Wildrose policies are based on ideology, that being the ideology of common sense. I know Albertans will recognize this for what it is, the government engaging in good politics and incorporating the good ideas presented by the Official Opposition into pieces of legislation for the betterment of all Albertans and putting petty politics aside.

When the government introduced the Education Act in the spring, they added section 16, which limited parental rights in education of their children throughout the province in exchange for cumbersome, repressive education guardianship by the state. I would like to praise this change in Bill 3, which is now presented to us in the House.

The people of Strathmore-Brooks believe in an education system which respects the rights of parents to choose how their children are educated. I would like to take a moment to thank the Minister of Education for his commitment to build a new public school in Brooks, which will allow the Catholic school to move into the old public school, which is greatly needed as the Catholic school in Brooks has had to make new classrooms out of storage rooms, as has the Catholic school in Strathmore, which we will discuss later. This is an infrastructure problem, but it should be recognized in the act that physical limitations put restrictions on the curriculum and abilities of teachers to teach properly and educate our students. It's time this government gives full recognition to the state of overcrowding in Alberta schools.

It's my hope that this government will continue to respect the choices of parents who home-school their children and, furthermore, allow the parents to teach them according to their core values. I anticipate that the scope of this bill will be broadened to fully encompass the real and present needs of schools in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for listening to my comments.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

I'll recognize the next speaker, the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour to rise and speak on behalf of the citizens of Little Bow and to present their issues and share in their importance to them.

Mr. Speaker, I've had the privilege of talking to some people, but again I'd like to talk with more of my constituents about this. I think it is a very positive step that they've taken with Bill 3. Again, with my colleague from Strathmore-Brooks, it's great to see that they're using some Wildrose philosophies making their way into Bill 3 and are actually listening to some people in this province. It's great to see, and it's nice to be able to work together. Thank you, my hon. friend from across. [interjections]

If I could continue on, Mr. Speaker, one concern I do have is under section 18(1), where it reads:

The Minister may by order do the following . . .

- (d) subject to the right of a board to provide religious instruction, prohibit the use of a course, a program of study or a learning and teaching resource in schools.

One of the concerns I have with that is that it puts quite a bit of power in the minister's hands. A private board has the right to provide religious instruction only. Anything else is subject to the minister's approval or disapproval.

The minister can also say what learning resources can or cannot be used as learning resources that they already may have. Just a concern I have on that. Other than that I think that there are quite a few positives to this, and I'm glad that this has come through after the chaos that Bill 2 went through this spring. I'd also argue that there is potential for abuse of this legislation. There could be quite a bit of power to disallow some board material to be used in learning resources. This is again up to the minister's discretion, and this is something that I guess I'd flag.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also a strong advocate for education. I believe all students should finish high school as I also did myself, which got me here today. What scares me about the flaw with the ages in there – and I spoke to it earlier with my colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, the age differences in there. See, I'm a proud father of a 15-year-old girl that's a great child. I'm not worried about some of the issues there, but you tend to lead astray people that are following along when they get with people in the 20- to 21-year-old range who could be out of school. I guess that worries me quite a bit.

In my riding I have lots of private schools, charter schools, public schools, and Catholic schools as well as lots of home-schoolers. Again, I'm glad to see that this new bill as presented has very many positives to it and again, I add, has quite a few of our Wildrose philosophies in it. I'm just glad to see that you guys have come across the table on some of those issues.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

I'll recognize the next speaker, the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to talk about education and the responsibilities we have as a province. We know children are our most valuable resource, not a resource in the traditional sense to exploit but, rather, one we must help develop and nurture so each child can reach his or her full potential. Like an atom the awesome power is there, but it must be handled with care to create, not destroy. We all know this, and with the best of intentions we try to facilitate it.

Schools are built. Sometimes, unfortunately, they are not built in the right places, not based on prioritized need but, rather, as political favours in areas where the current government has supporters that live and work. Albertans think it's long past time for this old-fashioned political patronage to stop. If this government has confidence in its policies and its understanding of the needs of all Albertans, whether they voted right or left, then it should demonstrate that by providing new or upgraded schools based solely on prioritized needs. It is something that my colleagues and I have been fighting for and will continue to do to ensure fairness and equality for all Albertans.

A lot of money could be saved, it seems to me, if teachers were consulted. These front-line workers know what's needed, why it's needed, where it's needed, and when it's needed. Does anyone in the current government ever ask them what they require to properly educate their students, our children and grandchildren? If so, then you know they don't need more bosses or layers of management at the provincial level. If the government would reduce the number of rules and regulations that require more people to administer and oversee them, our teachers and students would be much better off. I talked with a grade 2 teacher recently. She's a fantastic leader in our community. She has a blind child in her class, and she only gets the help of a classroom assistant for two hours a day and none on Friday.

Too much of the funding for education seems to go to administration, and too little trickles down to the classrooms, where the children are and where their needs are not being fully met. Unfortunately, this trend continues unabated. This is not leadership from the province but, rather, an abdication of responsibility, I submit. Why is it that when cuts are made, they are made in the classrooms? Some class sizes have grown to nearly unmanageable numbers. Teachers and assistants are cut in an attempt to meet budgets, but those cuts are in the wrong place. Let's stop this practice and have the courage to cut where it's needed. Let's trim at the top, not cut in the classroom.

Teachers work long hours, not just in their classrooms with students but at home studying, preparing lessons, marking, and answering questions from concerned parents that may e-mail or call them. In our attempt to help are we, in fact, encouraging behaviours that are contrary to the best needs of our children, our families, and society? If our policies were working, wouldn't we have smaller class sizes? If our policies were working, wouldn't we have schools built or renovated where they are needed?

I'd like to point out that you can't legislate self-esteem by protecting children or adults from experiencing the consequences of their choices. Passing a child who fails is an answer, but it's not the right answer. Not giving a deserved zero to students because it makes them feel bad is teaching a lie. It's not preparing our children for real life. The provincial government isn't showing leadership and courage. Alberta's children deserve no less than the very best education, and our teachers are already among the best in the world. They deserve no less than the very best resources.

We need to be continually mindful and respectful of parents' rights. At the end of the day and, truly, all of the time parents are the ones that should be making decisions about their children. They need and are entitled to a strong say in decisions that affect their children and affect the education of their children. This government speaks of partnerships. Well, parents are the senior partners.

All 13 – yes, Mr. Speaker, 13 – of my children received quality education in the Westwind school district. They have each gone on to earn postsecondary degrees and are now raising families of their own and contributing to the quality of life in their communities. I can remember a time when one of my children got a zero on an assignment. He came home upset and angry, but I can tell you that he didn't do it again. Now that he's in the real world, he's thankful that he learned this lesson early on when the consequence was relatively cheap.

We are strong supporters of public and home-school education, and I'm glad to see the government recognizes this as well. Generally speaking, this is a good bill, and we're grateful that it's been presented. As mentioned, there are a couple of amendments the Wildrose will be putting forward, and I believe that they will improve the bill. Working in co-operation, I hope that the other members of this House will also support these amendments. Too often an idea is shot down simply because of who proposed it. I sure hope that will not be the case in this instance.

In conclusion, I admit that I'm not an expert on education although I have been a teacher, but as parents of 13 children my amazing wife, Sheila, and I know how important it is that parents take responsibility.

Ms Calahasen: Thirteen. Wow.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you. [interjection] I used to have hair before I started.

Anyway, as I said, my amazing wife, Sheila, and I know how important it is that parents take responsibility for and have a say in their children's education. I would like to thank and congratulate the government for recognizing this. With a couple of amendments I know this bill will be of great assistance to education in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I would recognize the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise today and speak to the new and, I'm happy to say, improved Education Act. First and foremost, let me say that my Wildrose colleagues and I have heard the message loud and clear from parents across this province that the education of their children is important to them and that they as parents have the primary right to make the decisions regarding the education of their children. So my colleagues and I have been fighting hard to ensure that parental rights are respected in this legislation.

I'm pleased to see that Bill 3 will re-establish the primacy of parental rights and decisions about education, and I'm thankful we now seem to have an Education minister who actually listens to Alberta's parents. I'm also happy to find that Bill 3 provides general support for the autonomy of both the parents and our elected school boards.

Mr. Speaker, first as a candidate and now as the MLA for Cypress-Medicine Hat I received countless communications from my constituents on the subject of education. I'd like to take a few minutes to tell this House about some of that feedback and how it relates to Bill 3. I have heard time and time again how choice in our education system is important. There is no one-size-fits-all approach to either learning or teaching. All Albertans benefit from the freedom, and parents in our province have to choose how their children will be educated, whether that be through public, Catholic, private, charter, or home-schooling. This also means ensuring that families in rural areas have the same freedom and choice in education and have access to the same opportunity that Albertans have in other areas of the province.

8:40

There are several measures in this legislation with regard to charter schools, and I certainly hope these measures are there to strengthen the choice in our education system, not to hinder the creation of these charter schools.

There's also a measure in this legislation to provide school boards with natural person powers. I hope this will contribute to more flexible learning opportunities and support for our students.

Another thing I've heard from many, many parents in my constituency is the importance of innovation in the education system. A lot of Cypress-Medicine Hat people are looking with great interest at Finland, where students are ranked among the top performers internationally and where they place a huge emphasis on innovation within their education system. I believe Alberta has a great education system, but I also believe that we can strive to be even better. If there are lessons to be learned from systems in other jurisdictions – and I’ve offered Finland as one example – I certainly hope the government will look at these lessons.

Mr. Speaker, while this piece of legislation is much improved from the government’s previous attempts to update the Education Act, it is not perfect. I am disappointed that the issue of school fees has not been addressed, especially considering this was a major campaign issue during the last campaign. In Cypress-Medicine Hat I talked to many, many young families about the mandatory school fees being a burden. It takes away professional time from our teachers and our administrators, who have to collect these school fees, and I’ve heard of many unfair ways that the collection of these fees is applied, with some schools and some school boards doing more extreme measures than others. I pose this question to my colleagues especially on the government side. Is this really the best use of the time of these highly trained professionals?

Mr. Speaker, I sincerely hope that all members of this Assembly will work towards promoting a culture of education choice, innovation, and competition and that we will always keep the best interests of our children in mind as we continue to debate this legislation.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Again, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I’d recognize the Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is great to be back here today to speak to Bill 3, the Education Act. Although I do not have the fortune and the privilege myself to be a parent, I have heard before, during, and after the election from so many concerned parents in my constituency of Medicine Hat. I hear time and time again how they want their rights as parents respected by the government, and I hear time and time again how they want the best for their children not only inside the classroom but in everything they do.

Mr. Speaker, we are proud to live in Alberta, and we are lucky to live in Alberta. There is no reason that our children should not have a world-class education in a province as great as ours. There is no reason that our children should not be raised in a strong and free Alberta, an Alberta where parents’ rights are respected, an Alberta where students are truly being put first.

I’m glad to see that the current government has listened to many of the concerns that my friend the hon. Member for Airdrie raised in the previous Legislature. It is fantastic to see that Bill 3 respects the rights of parents to have the ultimate say in their children’s education. Mr. Speaker, I know that this recognition of parental rights will ultimately provide a better education for our future generations, and it will ensure that parents are the ultimate deciders.

It is great to see that we have a Minister of Education that has recognized the many flaws in the previous versions of this legislation and has listened to the concerns of the opposition and, more importantly, listened to the concerns of the parents. You may remember, Mr. Speaker, that parents had to march to the steps of this building in order for their voices to be heard. Although it took such measures for their voices to be heard, I am hopeful that this government has learned that you need to meet with parents and teachers and that by doing so, the best possible results will be achieved.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to recognize that there are still some flaws with this bill, that my friend the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View has addressed and will continue to address. I look forward to supporting this bill along with my colleagues so that we can ensure that our future generations have the best possible education with the best possible opportunities. There will be amendments to fix the flaws, and I will readily vote in favour of positive changes. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the parents and constituents of Medicine Hat I look forward to supporting the bill.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, let me finish by saying this: we must always remember that we are here to represent our constituents, and we are here to listen to them and make the best possible decisions. By working together and listening to the public, who truly are our bosses, I believe that we can make good decisions, and that is exactly what I came here to do.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is also available at this time.

Are there other members who wish to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak to Bill 3, the Education Act. Quite frankly, I think it’s appropriate that this bill is named Bill 3 as it’s the third time this government has introduced this act. Like they say, the third time is the charm. Hopefully, we’ll be able to get it passed this time.

You know, I’m glad that the time was taken to consult with concerned stakeholders about the implications of this proposed bill. It’s been a long time since the last Education Act, and when a lot of time passes, it’s tempting to make wholesale changes. After all, this bill is nearly 200 pages long. There were a lot of concerned groups. All too often people will point fingers at special interests, but there were concerns, and they have been brought up in this House already from home-school parents as well as those who teach in the public, separate, and charter schools.

My colleague from Airdrie and I and colleagues from Calgary-Glenmore and Fort McMurray, who are no longer with us, spent many, many long hours debating this bill in the spring Legislature. It’s amazing when you think back to all of the comments that were made at that particular time from members of the opposition in regard to painting us as, you know, taking some serious time on the debate of this bill. Lo and behold, the amendments that we were proposing in regard to parents having the ultimate right and the section under human rights have been changed.

I guess for us it’s another Wildrose victory, but I think, more importantly, it’s a victory for parents in this province that actually spent the time and spent absolutely hours upon hours upon hours . . .

An Hon. Member: Cheers.

Mrs. Forsyth: I think one of the members is trying to speak to me or raising his cup to me. Maybe he’d like to get up and debate. The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, I think it is, can have the opportunity to speak if he’d like.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I think everyone knows that from the moment I was elected in this Legislature, I’ve always stood up for children. It’s been one of my passions. My colleague next to me talked about his passions in the throne speech, having been the father of four little boys, the importance that he thought about education. He spoke very, very eloquently about that.

As the former minister of children’s services I brought the Amber Alert program to Canada. I’m still very, very proud of that. A piece of legislation that I actually brought forward as a private member’s bill with the Official Opposition, the Wildrose, is the Mandatory Reporting of Child Pornography Act, which, if I may,

Mr. Speaker, was passed in this Legislature but still hasn't been proclaimed. You sometimes wonder exactly where the government is.

In that time in this Legislature, as I've said, my focus has always been on vulnerable children. I've got to tell you that I was pleased to see in the bill the inclusion of bullying. I look back on that with some pride. I just want to take people back a step in the Legislature, if I may, please, because I brought the bullying bill forward to the Legislature in 2008. It was Bill 210, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2008. Now, Mr. Speaker, I haven't had time to go through here to see if you were one of the people that spoke on that particular bill, but I can tell you that as a private member's bill there were many members of this Legislature that got up and spoke in support of that bill.

At that particular time it then followed with Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. We talked at that particular time, and I talked at that particular time. It was a very innovative piece of legislation, if I may say so myself, because I did what I naturally do, and that's consult with people that are very on top of issues. In that particular bill, 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, I talked to students, I talked to teachers, I talked to the resource officers in the schools, and I talked to police officers. All of those people collaborated and came together with what we had considered at that particular time probably one of the most innovative pieces of legislation across this country to deal with the issue of bullying.

You know, I'm just going to give you some ideas. I spoke in the Legislature in 2009.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce [the bill] . . .

Our society is changing rapidly. We have all these new technologies – Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, text messaging – and somebody is probably inventing a new way to communicate right now as I'm speaking. All of these technologies have put a new face on an old problem, [and that's] bullying.

As I mentioned earlier, we have a very large, large piece of legislation, and I haven't had a lot of time to look at exactly all of the education. But I can tell you that there are several concerns that as a member of the Official Opposition, Wildrose, I think have to be brought to the table in regard to what they're discussing about bullying and how they think that's going to be enhancing and helping the kids that are going to school on that particular issue. We're going to have some time, and I'm going to have some time to sit down and read the legislation very closely, but immediately what comes to mind with this particular piece of legislation is the fact that there are several things that I don't see in it.

The first thing that I don't see – and I can stand to be corrected by the Minister of Education; he's here – is where it talks about weapons and how you're going to deal with weapons in schools. I'm sure that he will point out to us that piece of legislation because that's very key when we're trying to deal with protection of our kids in schools because kids carry weapons. At that particular time in 2009 I talked about the fact of the bullying that was going on and children carrying billy clubs into the school. Now, one must ask oneself what kind of an education tool a billy club is in the back of a backpack that a student will be carrying into school.

We also talked in my particular private member's bill about drug paraphernalia. That kind of thing I haven't seen in the minister's bill on education. I'm sure that he's going to be able to tell me what is included and where it is included.

I think we need to get some clarification on: no student shall bully another person. I know that they talk about: "refrain from, report and not tolerate bullying or bullying behaviour directed toward others in the school, whether or not it occurs within the school building, during the school day or by electronic means." I think one of the questions that this minister has to answer is: does that include on a school bus? I can tell you that children are bullied on the school bus. We heard that in full when I brought the legislation forward in 2008 and in 2009.

I think one of the other things that, you know, was brought to my attention by the police resource officers and the police that were in the schools is the ability for the teachers and the principal to have a reporting mechanism in place to track the bullying because the bullying escalates. While it can start as a simple push on the grounds, that bullying can continue to escalate.

When I spoke in the Legislature in 2009, I talked about a horrific bullying incident that actually happened in the schools in Edmonton. I don't know if you remember, Mr. Speaker. The parents spent hours upon hours in the Legislature. I will refer to that as we go into the committee because I think it's important. I talked about this poor child, the bruises, the horrific – horrific – damage that was done and that he took to his personal parts. Fed up at the very end, he went home towards the end of the school year and decided that that was enough and obviously committed suicide by starting the car and closing the garage door. I know that if this government is really serious about the issue of bullying and the addition, if I may, of the protection of students, it's important that we need to talk.

I'm sure the minister will tell me if this new bill, the Education Act, talks about the protection of teachers. I again will go back through Hansard and talk about all of the teachers that I heard from that were bullied. They were not only bullied by students, but they were bullied by other parents.

So if we're going to have what is considered a comprehensive, well-thought-out, innovative piece of legislation that the government can brag on, and rightfully brag on, as the new Education Act, I think these are all of the things that as a government they have to think about. As the Official Opposition we're going to take some time and spend the weekend. I'm going to talk to my colleagues. Many of them have talked about being parents of 13 to being parents of four and the importance of getting this particular piece of legislation right and making sure that our number one priority, if I may, is the education of our children and, no question, absolutely, the protection of our children. By saying that, I also want to incorporate and stress the importance of the protection of our teachers.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I'll sit down, and hopefully the minister will answer some of the questions that I've brought forward and will maybe have his staff – I know as a former minister that he has staff that will be able to probably go through Hansard. If his staff hasn't got time – and I know he's very busy – we'd be pleased to give him the information for Hansard for him to be able to access the bill, access the conversation, access what was incorporated in the bill. We'd be pleased to help him through the process of making the Education Act probably the best education act in this country.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I'll recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Oh, sorry. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, did you want to comment under 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Mason: No. To speak to the bill in my turn.

The Deputy Speaker: I'll recognize you next. I recognized the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw already. Thank you.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's no secret that the foundation of our entire province is the education system. A strong education allows our children to thrive. It strengthens our social fabric, and it is the foundation for long-term success, benefiting all Albertans.

I would be remiss if I chose not to mention, much to, I'm sure, the disappointment of the members, specifically, for Edmonton-Gold Bar, Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill, Lesser Slave Lake, and perhaps the Minister of Transportation, the good work that our colleagues over here did in the spring to have this amended. If you would so choose to raise your glasses, as I saw you doing earlier . . .

Mr. Anderson: Cheers, cheers.

Mr. Wilson: Exactly.

The good Member for Airdrie, the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, and the former members of this caucus fought hard for some changes to this bill. Mock it if you like, but we're proud of these changes. It's democracy in action. I think that there's a lot to be proud of here.

9:00

Now, it was a very important issue in my riding. I actually had a couple of individuals who came up to Edmonton for the protest that day. They had never taken part in the political process before. They didn't really know what to expect, but I'm sure that what they see here today and the results of Bill 3 as it stands are a great reward for them. It demonstrates to them and, hopefully, all Albertans that citizen engagement should not be overlooked. It is a very powerful thing in this democracy, and it should be used any given time.

I would also like to say that we need to recognize the value of teachers in our society. Next to parents, teachers are the single biggest influence that our kids are going to have. We need to ensure that they are able to maximize that value and give them the support that they require when they are in the classroom. As noted earlier, teachers face many challenges, and we need to ensure that they're supported. If they have children with special needs, ESL students, and they're holding back others, and there is not the support there to ensure that everyone can move forward as a group, it's a detriment to the entire process.

I think that this may relate in some interesting ways back to some of the other policies that we see in Bill 3, specifically changing the age of access to 21 and the age of compulsory attendance to 17. I share the concern that my hon. colleague from Little Bow and others today have brought up about having 21-year-olds in the classroom in high schools with, you know, someone perhaps the age of 15 to 16. It's not because their lives are threatened. It's just simply because they have a different set of life experiences that they're bringing. They have gone through a different level of maturity than someone younger, and that can pose somewhat of a threat to the natural progression and natural growing up and maturing of those young people. It's a valid concern, and I look forward to debating it in this House.

I think that what we need to recognize, though, is that perhaps we have an opportunity here, instead of band-aiding some of these causes, to try and approach this from a root cause perspective. I think that when we say that kids are being left behind at a young age, when they're a grade or two behind in math or a grade or two behind in reading, and the rest of the kids are moving forward, these are the kids that are going to be the ones dropping out in high school. If we could just find a way to fix the problem at its root, to give teachers the support that they require in the classroom so that these kids aren't left behind, perhaps we wouldn't have almost what could be considered an epidemic in our province because we have one of the highest, if not the highest, dropout rates in the country. I just think it's an opportunity, and I hope that the hon. minister looks into some of these support systems that could potentially help fix this.

If we look at the social costs of letting these children slip through the cracks at an early age, do a cost-benefit analysis as to what the grand societal cost is as they perhaps require further government services in the future, if we just transplant that money, invest it in prevention, we may have a very different result. Let's try and break that cycle by providing teachers the support they need and have been asking for for decades, and let's start catching these kids early.

Another thing I'd like to bring up is the potential use of schools. This government has a very aggressive agenda for building new schools. [interjection] That wasn't a joke. Some of us over here tend to think it is, but we'll take the government at their word at this point.

I'd like to argue that schools can be used for so much more than simply educational institutions. It's a massive piece of infrastructure. It can be the hub of a community. We spend tax dollars to build and maintain these schools, but many of them sit empty after 5 o'clock. They have so much potential to do good things in the community. Have after school programs in there. Community groups or associations can use them. Use them as educational facilities for adults who require remedial training, perhaps the 18- to 21-year-olds, or ESL training for some of the immigrant population that we have in our province.

We can use them for evening or late-night daycare facilities and assist women in poverty who are struggling to find solutions to earn a living wage. We hear this all the time. As the critic for the Human Services portfolio I spend a lot of time with nonprofit organizations in Calgary, and one of the major issues facing women today, especially women in poverty, is the fact that they cannot find affordable daycare and accessible daycare outside of the main hours of 9 to 5. Well, if we have a school in a community that's accessible, that doesn't require a commute, that's got transit that goes by it, let's open this up to our communities. Let's stop charging obscene amounts of money to rent these facilities. It becomes cost prohibitive.

There are provinces in our country that have been doing this. It's a pilot project. I believe New Brunswick has a lot of success in this, Mr. Minister. I would highly encourage you to pick up the phone and see what your colleagues in that province have to say about a system like this because we, again, have an opportunity, with the number of schools you are suggesting you are going to build, to do so much more good than just simply educating our youth.

Now, in my riding I've recently had the opportunity to visit a couple of schools. One of them is Centennial high school. I was thoroughly impressed with the level of education that is being offered here. It's so different than what I experienced when I was in high school. It's got experiential learning, classes on leadership. Who would have thought? What a great idea. Let's teach our young kids about the values of leadership, about the values of community service, volunteerism. There is a full salon that operates out of this high school. There are engineering suites so kids can get an entrance into thermal dynamic engineering, electrical engineering. Now, this is a major industry in Calgary. These kids are able to just transition seamlessly into these programs in university, and it's all because of the innovative thinking that our public school systems are doing. I think it's great.

I've also visited the grade 6 students at the Fish Creek school and was so impressed not only by their level of engagement but by the fact that, at a school with 700 students, they have over 400 full-time volunteer parents that come by and help out. Four hundred. That's incredible.

As the father of a two-year-old, and this act is going to impact how he is educated in this province. I take this process very seriously. I'm encouraged by much of what we see in this bill. I look forward to further debate, and I look forward to helping pass this important piece of legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak yet again to the latest iteration of the Education Act. This particular session it's numbered as Bill 3. I want to indicate that there's much about this bill that is praiseworthy. There's much about this bill, I think, that the New Democrat opposition can support. I have to say that the consultation process was exhaustive, some might say repetitive, with regard to this bill.

I think that there are some good things about it. I think the provision to give natural person powers to boards is a positive thing. When I served on Edmonton city council, legislation was introduced by the government to give natural person power to municipalities, and I think it proved an effective tool for municipalities so they weren't so narrowly constrained by the "You can do this, and you can't do this, and you can do this, but you can't do that" approach that had previously existed. I think that it will tap into the capacity of boards to be innovative and creative in their approaches. I think that that's a good thing, and I think, frankly, Mr. Speaker, there are many other aspects that I won't really touch on tonight in second reading that are worthy of support.

I want to talk a little bit about a couple of things, though, that I have a concern about. The first one has to do with the government's approach to bullying. It talks about bullying in this particular piece of legislation, and that's a good thing. It should do that. It should address it. We need to ensure that there are programs in place, steps in place, safeguards in place in order to prevent bullying in the schools.

I think that it's important that we give principals and teachers the authority to deal with bullying both on and off school property and, as well, empower them to deal with it online. However, I think there are some real challenges facing an administrator who has got to balance fixing the roof, funding the athletic program or the music program, managing a staff of teachers and other staff, and so on and who is also charged with monitoring the Internet. But I think, in that sense, there is a step forward.

However, I do want to raise a real concern. It was raised by my colleague today in question period, and that is provisions in Bill 44 that prevent teachers from dealing with many issues that commonly give rise to bullying in schools. That has to do with religious discrimination. It has to do with gender discrimination and with discrimination against GLBT students.

To prevent teachers from talking about these things in the school, to in fact subject them to being hauled before the Human Rights Commission if they don't deal with the parents first before dealing with these things I think is creating more potential for bullying and prevents schools from being able to provide the appropriate education in order to make sure that we fully accept all students and that we prevent discrimination against those students based on their sexual orientation, their gender identification, in some cases their religious beliefs. All of those things, I think, cannot be excluded from discussion in the classroom if we truly want to build bridges of understanding between all people and all students in our classes.

I think the government has tied one hand behind the backs of principals and teachers in dealing with bullying, and I don't think, unless they're prepared to rescind those particular sections, that they can truly say that they as a government are truly interested in doing everything possible to prevent bullying in our schools. That's an issue I think we're going to be talking about quite a bit in the debate with respect to this.

A related thing that's of concern to us, Mr. Speaker, is the amendment that members of the Wildrose and some members of the government were just toasting a little while ago, and that is changes that remove the reference to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act. I think it's deplorable. I think that it is pandering to fringe groups in our education system, and the vast majority of students who participate in the public school system will suffer as a result.

The Alberta Bill of Rights was Bill 1 of the Peter Lougheed government when this Progressive Conservative Party was first elected in the province of Alberta in 1971. In those days Bill 1 really was a big deal, and the fact that this Conservative government is running away from it, won't even talk about it in the act, won't even make it something that we talk to our children about is deplorable. It's gutless. I'm amazed that they caved in to the Wildrose and their allies on this issue. I think it's disgraceful. Mr. Speaker, that's something that we want to see put back in. That's something that we believe in.

Just to finish, Mr. Speaker, I want to talk about the things that the bill doesn't address. It doesn't address the fact that we still have a serious shortage of teachers, that we're hundreds of teachers short of where we were a couple of years ago, that the number of aides and support, especially for children with special needs, has been cut way back. The provisions of this bill allowing an appeal to the minister won't deal with that effectively. The massive problem we have with deferred maintenance in our school system is not addressed.

The approach of creating new schools through P3s is another problem that I think this bill could have addressed. I think it's important that we put in this legislation that schools need to be owned and operated by the public school system and by school boards. I think that the government is blindly going in a direction that it doesn't fully understand the consequences of.

If you look at the situation in Britain, where P3s have been used extensively, there are major failures throughout that system. Those chickens will come home to roost, perhaps not in this term of the Legislature, but down the road the problems will exist. School boards are of course desperate to get funding for new schools, so they accept the P3s, but they have started to document the problems related to P3s. The real problems will only come when the schools are quite a bit older, I'm afraid, Mr. Speaker.

Nor does the bill effectively deal with the government policies that encourage the closure of schools in older neighbourhoods, discriminatory utilization formulas and so forth that pressure school boards to close schools in older areas, making the revitalization of those communities much more difficult. That's a piece, I think, that the government doesn't yet understand.

Mr. Speaker, with regard to that, I'm sure that we're going to have a very good debate. I think there'll be some good amendments and discussion to follow.

I want to indicate that I'm really quite of a mixed view on this bill. There is much, as I said, in this bill that is positive and praiseworthy and will help our children, help our educators, and help those people who are administering and setting policy for the various school districts, but there are some serious concerns that we have with respect to this. We want to strengthen public education, and we want to ensure that students get the best teaching and the best curriculum that is available, that broadens their view, that broadens their outlook on society and their fellow human beings, and we want to make sure that that is available to all children in our society.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a) for this member?

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First off, let me congratulate the hon. Education minister, my good friend and neighbour to the north, for finally incorporating some common sense into this bill.

The previous bill, of course, was introduced by the former Education minister, who was then promoted to Deputy Premier. In it he tried to force the Alberta Human Rights Act on home-schooling parents and others in the guise of defending human rights. Nothing could be further from the truth. Those who take on the socialist forum and agenda claim to be defenders of minorities in advocating for these types of absurd policies that were proposed in the previous bill, but in reality these people have been advocating for the perpetual encroachment of the state on the family, and this is an injustice.

Mr. Speaker, my constituents spoke loud and clear in the last election. It is parents and not the government who should be primarily responsible when it comes to education. In particular, when it comes to morals and ethics, it should be, again, the parents and not the government who should be making those decisions.

When this bill came out, I asked a constituent of mine who is a home-schooler – her name is Crystal Dean – and she got some messaging from other home-schoolers in our area and across the province. I'd like to read a few quotes from that. I asked her what she wanted the government to know. She stated:

We want them to know that home schoolers aren't against human rights. In fact many of our families stand up for the rights of those who have no voice, those suffering and injured.

Due process and the basic presumptions which guide the legal system are not the foundations on which [the human rights] tribunals [exist]... The embedding of the Alberta human rights act sets off red flags. Why does an existing legislation have to be embedded in the education act?

She asks:

If the [Alberta Human Rights Act] is already overarching as it is commonly suggested, what is the purpose to it being placed in to another act?

True hate crimes need to be prosecuted as criminal under the Criminal Code.

9:20

She states, again:

Education programs offered and instructional materials used in schools must not promote or foster doctrines of racial or ethnic superiority or persecution, religious intolerance or persecution, social change through violent action or disobedience of laws.

She concludes, saying:

Prosecuting individuals who speak their mind is a type of social engineering and societal control that is a loss of human rights.

Mr. Speaker, I think those statements are well said, and I applaud her for passing on those words of advice to this Legislature.

Again, I just want to applaud the current Education minister for putting forward this bill and listening to Albertans and, in particular, home-schoolers across the province. I look forward to working with you to strengthen this act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do have a question for the hon. member. He did read the current wording of the bill with respect to showing – I forget the exact word – tolerance based on religion and so on, but the particular legislation does not include ensuring that there's no discrimination against gays and lesbians in schools. Does he think that it should be amended to make sure that those things are included?

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, what we're talking about here is parental rights, and I think that if you look under most enabling legislation, parental rights are supreme. I think it's a fundamental difference of opinion on this side and apparently on the other side as well that we believe that parents are primarily responsible for teaching their children education as well as morals and ethics. Of course, it has nothing to do with those types of rights. Those rights are already protected in the Charter and other enabling legislation, and anyone that is found guilty of violating that type of legislation can be brought before the courts. This legislation has nothing to do with that.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I just want to follow up with that, and I've found it here now. It says that instructional materials and courses and programs of study "must not promote or foster doctrines of racial or ethnic superiority or persecution." Now, what if that happens to be the religious view of a parent? It may not promote religious intolerance or persecution, but what if that is the view of the parent? So my question is: why do we have these things in here as prohibited ideas or prohibited courses and programs of study but not have protection for gay and lesbian students in schools? Are you suggesting that parents actually have the right to tell their children that they can discriminate against other students based on that?

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, that definition has been in place for decades, and in this province we have many different people and many different faiths, and those types of views have to be respected. True tolerance is also respecting those views as well.

In the previous bill the issue that we had was that the Human Rights Commission and their opinions – and it wasn't a definitive certainty – potentially could have been forced upon home-schooling families to dictate the morals and ethics in their own home. I quite frankly find that type of issue deplorable. Parents in their own home should always have the right to teach morals and ethics, and I stand by that.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this also applies to the public school system. Does the hon. member then believe that we should be tolerating discrimination, bullying against students in our public system who have different sexual orientations?

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Human Rights Act already apply to the public system and the Education Act.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there other comments?

Seeing none, are there others that wish to speak? I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 3. Before Bill 3 we had Bill 2 and Bill 18, and I think we have been hashing them around for a long time. This is the third time. I hope we get it right this time, but it doesn't look like it.

Mr. Speaker, lots of work has gone into this. You know, there are many good measures in the bill that will improve education in Alberta. I'm a strong supporter of the public school system. As the member before said, it should be publicly funded and publicly delivered like health care. This bill is not addressing the shortage of teachers, class sizes, and so on and so forth.

This is a major revision of the School Act which the department describes as less prescriptive, meaning that it allows greater flexibility than the School Act did. You know, it has been largely uncontroversial except for a move by some social conservatives to ensure that parental rights remain such as being able to receive notice and pull their kids out of sex education instruction or where sexual orientation is discussed and to remove a reference to the Charter of Rights, where sexual orientation is a protected ground.

This is generally modernization of the old School Act and mostly administrative in nature, and it has broad support among the school community and Albertans at large besides the provisions of section 16, diversity and respect. While it is large enough, a large bill, you know, we can probably find something to dislike about this. The majority seems agreeable to most because there are lots of good measures, like I said, in the bill, and this bill will generally improve education.

We oppose changes to section 16 as it discriminates against homosexuals. Section 16 of the new Education Act takes out the reference with respect to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act in the previous act, and it replaces it with a reference to common values and beliefs of Albertans. As the school should be safe for everyone, including gays and lesbians, I don't know why this government won't stand up for gays and lesbians in Alberta. The Premier is a human rights lawyer. Don't gays and lesbians have specific legal rights in the Education Act?

Canada is an inclusive society, so why isn't the Education Act an inclusive act? We are the last province to include gay rights in the Human Rights Act. The GLBT are the most often bullied as they are seen as vulnerable. If bullying is a priority, why not include specific protection under this act? Bill 44, clause 9, specifically allowed parents to remove their children from instruction about gay and lesbian rights and lifestyles. Why discriminate specifically against gays and lesbians when it is not okay to discriminate against people with disabilities?

This act also replaces rigid, defined roles and responsibilities in the education system, and that contains most of the legislative guidelines regarding education in Alberta. This act was passed in 1988, and beside minor administrative changes it has not been revised since. You know, some of the changes are to modernize the School Act. The school board responsible for funding a child's education changes to where the student lives, and that's a good thing. I support that. Students currently get free high school education to the age of 19, and that will change to 21. This will give the opportunity to more Albertans to complete their education. I like this measure also.

9:30

The mandatory age to attend school changes from 16 to 17. That's also a good thing. Parents', students', and school boards' and trustees' responsibilities are also listed. Students are expected to take more responsibility. School boards must come up with codes of conduct, but not private schools, along with establishing a provincial bullying awareness week. These are all good things in the bill.

There are some good measures in the bill, and this will go a long ways to improving education in Alberta. As I said, I'm a strong supporter of the public education system, and we should be working to strengthen the public education system on the whole.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any comments or questions to the member under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I'll recognize the Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my great pleasure to rise and speak to the educational needs of all Albertans and on behalf of the constituents of Lacombe-Ponoka. In the tabling of the new education bill I am pleased to see the changes made to the proposed act that was tabled in the last Legislature, specifically those eliminating the contentious sections that the parents and the Wildrose were opposed to. I'd particularly like to commend those recognizing the primacy of parental rights in the decisions in educating their children.

However, Mr. Speaker, there are still issues with the proposed Education Act. We the Wildrose believe that inclusivity for special-needs children is important but only with adequate supports. We've heard from many teachers that are concerned that special-needs children will be pushed into classrooms without the help, and that will be detrimental to both the children needing support and the rest of the class who have had their teacher pulled away to provide that support. I believe this to be in line with what is required in our classrooms.

A kindergarten teacher in my constituency has asked me to share a letter with all of you, my colleagues in this Legislature.

Dear [Mr.] Fox,

I would like to make you aware of some of the concerns I have regarding the Education system in our province and within your constituency. I feel that these concerns are very important and show that it is becoming more and more difficult for teachers to give top quality education to our children.

This is My Story.

Under the Learning Commission of 2002, the recommendation for Division One classes is to have no more than 17 students in a classroom. This year, I have 23 children in a full day, full time, 5 days a week Kindergarten class. The full time position is supported by the school (not the school board) which pulls money from other areas.

The Government is advocating for inclusive Education. The funding for Special Education has been frozen for the last few years, and I have heard that it will be reduced another 25% in the future. Of the 23 children in my class, 16 are on Individual Program Plans for Mild/Moderate needs. I have one full time Educational Assistant. At this point, the Educational Assistant is already pulled from the Kindergarten room to help in another classroom for 5 periods a week. I have been asked to let her assist in other Grade 1 to 9 classrooms in our school as well, to support the high number of special needs students in these rooms. This does not help support the special needs of our youngest students, nor does it help me to provide adequate instruction for the regular students.

She goes on to ask:

Why is it that the richest province in Canada is not helping to provide the best learning environment for our children?

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to cut my comments short and just thank you for the time here this evening to hear the issues of one of my teachers, one of my constituents, here in this Legislature. Thank you so much for your time.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, hon. member, I'd just like to remind you that it is customary and a requirement when you quote from a document that that document be tabled. I would hope that maybe tomorrow you would table the appropriate number of copies of that letter.

Mr. Fox: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Other speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wasn't planning on speaking on this bill tonight, but I feel compelled to, so please, I beg the forbearance of my colleagues in the House if my comments seem a little bit scattered as I'm speaking with very few notes.

I'd like to make a few comments, first of all. I think that the province of Alberta has a great education system. I think a big part of the reason for our province's success over time – over the last not just 40 years but 50, 60, 70 years – is that we do have a great education system. That system is a credit to everyone who is involved with it, not us here but, rather, the teachers, the parents, the trustees, and all those who have safeguarded that system over the years. In fact, our Education minister shortly after the election attended a conference in Korea in which the province of Alberta's logo was included amongst the top education systems in the world, and I think we can be justifiably proud of that.

One of the principles that we can also be very proud of is the principle of choice. Under the overriding and overarching education system that we have in this province, we have a great deal of choices available to parents. We have public schools, we have separate schools, we have charter schools, we have private schools, at least in some areas, and, yes, we also have home-schools. I guess, part of my reason for speaking here in the Chamber is that tonight I had something confirmed to me which I have known for a long time. Now I know that it's also an opinion held by the leader of the New Democrat opposition, and that is that home-schoolers are part of a fringe group.

Well, I'm a home-schooler, sir. I guess mainly more correctly put, we're a home-school family. My two sons didn't learn a whole lot from me other than maybe swearing and a few other bad habits, but I will tell you that my wife, who is a doctor of veterinary medicine who holds a master of business administration degree, felt it was important enough to teach our sons at home that she put her careers on hold for 15 years so she could teach them at home. Now, that was a choice, Mr. Speaker, that we made, and I will tell you that both my mother-in-law and my mother were public school teachers. They did not support the choice that my wife and I made at the time because they felt that it wasn't a good parental choice, so it's not like we had a ton of support. It's not like we had support in our community.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, part of the reason why we chose this route is because our oldest son, who now is in his third year of a master of divinity program at Concordia Lutheran Seminary and, God willing, in a couple of years will be ordained as a Lutheran pastor, taught himself to read at the age of two and was reading at a grade 9 level by the time he was age six. When my wife told a good friend of ours, a teacher, about this young man, that teacher said: you know, I used to really enjoy having students like Roland in my class, but now they're just a problem. So you can understand why we made the decision to home-school instead of sending this young, precocious man, who we thought had great potential – and I think he still has great potential – to a school where he would create a problem for a teacher.

We made that decision, and, you know, we're glad we did. That was 1993. I'd like to point out that not too long before 1993 home-schooling was illegal in this province, and you could be taken to court if you tried to teach your kids at home. You might also find it interesting, Mr. Speaker, to know that home-schooling is still illegal in two EU countries, namely Germany and Sweden. You can't home-school your kids in Germany or Sweden. In fact, there was a story in the recent Epoch Times about a family who have become educational refugees from Sweden, who have actually left Sweden to live on an island that is technically in Denmark so that they don't have their kids taken away from them by the Swedish government for home-schooling.

Mr. Speaker, it's interesting. Parenthetically, I'll tell you a story. When we lived in Germany 12 years ago and our youngest son was 10 years old – our younger son is also in university; he's taking a poli sci degree at U of C – he walked down the street one day, and he was going to go buy buns at the bakery. An elderly lady stopped him and said: why aren't you in school? We found out later that, in fact, everyone in Germany is entitled to be a truant officer. If they find a child on the streets during school hours, they're entitled to report that child at least in the state of Bavaria, where we lived. My son knew exactly what this woman was asking him, and what he did was feign that he didn't understand German, which actually worked pretty well. That's the kind of thing that home-schoolers fight against, and sadly we still fight that in the Legislature in 2012.

Why am I concerned about this? Well, I will tell you that we talk a lot about the concerns of home-schoolers, but I've been there, my friends. I've been there. I've taken the ridicule from people who say, "You know, your kid is going to be a weirdo, your kid is going to be socially inept," and all those things. I'll tell you that you have to stand up for what you believe in. My wife, I think, did a tremendous job in helping those boys along, and I'm terribly proud of her.

I have to tell you that where this then leads me today is that before the election, knowing that I was a home-school parent, I was approached by a lot of home-school parents, not just home-school parents but others. They told me that they chose home-schooling for a lot of different reasons but that the primary reason was one of choice, one of choice and one of freedom, one of the opportunity to choose when you taught, where you taught, what you taught, and why you taught. In fact, Mr. Speaker, that's why we chose home-schooling, and if you ask home-schooling parents, that's why they choose it.

This government has always supported home-schooling as a choice. This province is one of only two provinces in the dominion where home-schoolers are funded by the provincial government. Alberta and one other province: that's it. Everywhere else if you decide to home-school, you're on your own. In fact, we have parents from Saskatchewan moving across to the other side of the border to live on the Alberta side of Lloydminster so they can get funding for their home-school programs.

Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of some of the discussion we had during the throne speech debate when we talked about working together, I have to tell you that I am bothered by my colleagues in the Official Opposition when they stand up and insist that all of the changes made to the Education Act were purely due to their efforts. Guys, it wasn't just you. There were people on this side of the House, many of my colleagues, who also had the ear of the Education minister and urged him to make changes to Bill 2 as it was in the spring session. Maybe, guys, you could follow the lead of Harry S. Truman when he said: it is amazing what you can accomplish if you don't care who gets the credit.

Mr. Speaker, in that spirit I think that we have an excellent piece of legislation. I'd like to congratulate the Education minister because he has brought forward this Education Act in a real consultative format and in a way that I do believe has improved it. Is it perfect? No. Show me a piece of legislation that is. But it is very good. If it's not perfect, if there are areas where it needs improvement, I urge hon. members to bring forward amendments in Committee of the Whole.

I'd like to close, Mr. Speaker, by encouraging my colleague the hon. Minister of Education because to me what he has shown through the development of this bill as he brings it forward is that he's following the words of Indira Gandhi. Indira Gandhi once said: "There are two kinds of people, those who do the work and those who take the credit. Try to be in the first group; there is less competition there."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Questions or comments? The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. That was a very good speech. I really enjoyed that and commend that he's such a passionate defender of the rights of home-schoolers and parents in education.

But I would ask the good doctor if he would go back, if he had read the Hansard, if he had seen the debates, and if he had noticed that the only thing standing between that act being passed as was and not being passed was four members on this side of the House that were berated repeatedly in this House by members on that side of the House, including your Deputy Premier, calling us intolerant for sticking up for home-schoolers, calling us deniers of human rights, calling us antigay, calling us all sorts of things.

We stood here. We took it. We fought. We stood on the steps of the Legislature. We did interviews on it, being called all kinds of things by media and bloggers and so forth. We did it. So before you get a little too self-righteous on that, remember that just a few months ago that legislation would have been passed, and the home-schoolers that approached you would have been out of luck because it would have been in the Education Act. We stood up and we fought it. We have given credit to this Education minister and to yourself. Just remember that some people had to be berated over and over and over again on your behalf and on behalf of home-schoolers across this province.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member in response.

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, my response to the hon. Member for Airdrie – and I'll try to be succinct. You know, what you did in the spring session was fine, and it was great. I didn't read every line out of Hansard, but I was well aware of the opposition you placed in front of it. I thought I made my point about taking credit fairly clear, but maybe I didn't.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there other questions or comments?

I'll recognize the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to make a note that I'm not rising for the second time speaking on this bill. It was an error the first time, if you remember correctly. I actually went and spoke on three bills all at once.

Mr. Anderson: A multitasker.

Mr. Anglin: I am a multitasker.

But I do want to extend my congratulations to the government and to the Minister of Education because there were some serious flaws in the previous bill – serious flaws – and I'm going to share some experiences on that. Something took place here that I think is significant, and it doesn't take place very often, which is that the minister listened and did make some changes. I know there are people who don't agree with the changes, but the reality is that this is about a democratic process.

I have to tell you that I learned something about my constituency during that whole process. I was not elected at the time, but even when I ran for office and since I've been elected, what I discovered about my constituency is just how prevalent home-schooling was. I knew it existed. I have friends who do it. What I didn't realize was how many people were doing it. I live in a very rural, sparse riding, and there are hundreds and hundreds, maybe thousands. It's absolutely amazing how many people take advantage of this, and what they were worried about was their right to choose. That was their concern.

I have to tell you that, like with many other issues, mostly this government doesn't listen. It took thousands of people to come up to the Legislature. To me, that's really not necessary. There were petitions from all around the province. The reality is that you hear these things, and you don't necessarily have to see them. But it happened, and you made the changes, and I'm grateful for that. But it shouldn't be like pulling teeth to make changes. We can read this legislation. We can see mistakes. We should not be afraid to make the changes and should not be afraid to even admit when we try to make changes that we might have to correct those. Nothing can be perfect. We always need to listen to the criticism and be willing to work on that.

Now, there are a couple of things that didn't happen in the bill. I'm not sure if they should or should not be in it, and maybe the minister can comment on it when I'm done.

School bus safety. Yes, we have a great school system, but I will tell you, knowing other jurisdictions, that our school bus safety is not up to par, and it's not the best. In my own community we had an extreme tragedy, and I can tell you that there are other jurisdictions where no motorists would dare pass a school bus. They would not. The penalty is too stiff. Something that maybe this bill could actually take a look at is school bus safety. We did talk about bullying on the school bus, and that would be an issue, but school bus safety is more than bullying. In my community nearly 80, 85 per cent of all students ride in these school buses for great distances. In my community alone – I live in the town of Rimbey – some of those students don't get home for 90 minutes after school. That's how long it takes the school bus to make its route. So it is something that is actually of deep concern.

The other thing that was mentioned – and we do need to address this – is the amount of money that we fund education with and how much of it goes to administration versus how much gets to the front line. We are losing teachers, and particularly with special needs we do not have enough aides. I'm hearing that from school board to school board to school board, and that is significant. You need to hear that.

Dealing with these types of issues is significant, yet all of a sudden, even in my own riding, I'm hearing that teachers are going to take a trip to Las Vegas on the school board's dime to attend training. Now, I'm not against teachers' training. I think teachers' training is absolutely important. But do they need to go to Las Vegas in the winter? I have to tell you that that looks like the Premier's trip to the Olympics. I mean, it is a holiday. You can't look at it any other way. Professional training is absolutely necessary, but the fact is: do you need to spend the money to go there versus bringing that training here? That is about being efficient and dealing with the whole issue of properly spending money and having accountability.

The other thing. I do want to talk about this because it is important, and it's one of the great advantages of being here in Alberta. My whole family went to Catholic school. I got expelled in the first grade, so I went to public school.

An Hon. Member: Really?

Mr. Anglin: Yes, from an Irish Catholic family. I devastated my family. I was public school educated. I'll explain that later.

My son, who does not take after me, who takes after my wonderful wife, is an extremely brilliant child. He's an extremely brilliant kid. He was 17 years old, and his teachers came to me and said: "He has surpassed us in physics. He has surpassed us in calculus." So we had to go do something to help him be challenged because his teachers couldn't challenge him anymore. For us there were options out there, and that to me is the real value. I mean, there's no question about it.

We can't create a perfect world legislatively, but we can create the options and give the parents the rights to take those options and make good use of them. That's what I was able to do. I was able to find something private for my son so that I could challenge him, so I could have him challenged, so that he could continue on. Lo and behold, my daughter is in the arts and music, and that's a big issue. I take my daughter now up here to Edmonton so she can then choose to go, and actually she excels at what she does, playing the piano. She taught herself on the guitar, and now she's gotten into drama. These are things that are all part of her education.

It's because of our educational system and the broad choices we allow that allows that to happen. What I would like to see is that all Albertans have the access that I have, and I know not all of them do. That is an issue of poverty versus somebody who can afford to take them. It is an issue that we have to think about. We can make improvements.

I want to say something that is near and dear to my heart. Anybody can take credit for making changes. You're right. Not anyone can say that they stood out on those steps or stood out on the front line. You either are there or you're not. I'll tell you something, and you need to think about this in that caucus over there. If you stand up too strong, you will find yourself sitting over there behind him. It's happened, and that's important to know. You can giggle about it, but that's a fact. I have fought this government. Many of you know this, and many of you will never come and debate me on those issues when I go out and fight, and I still do it.

The reality is that it takes a lot of courage to go out there, and it's easy to criticize from way back there, isn't it? There is the difference. I'm going to share something that Gandhi did say: first they will laugh at you, then they will mock you, and then they will listen.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there other speakers who wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, I will ask the Minister of Education to close debate.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I just want to say that there have been some great comments here tonight and some great debate. You can get the sense of the passion and the diverse views not only in this room but that reflect what's happening right across Alberta with this very important bill. But I do believe that we found a good balance between some of the contentious issues of affirming the role of the family in Alberta while still making sure that we're not eroding any application of the very important and foundational Alberta Human Rights Act.

We have been given some good questions, and we'll come back and be able to discuss those at length in committee. Right now I'd like to call the question, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Seeing that it's close to 10 o'clock and that I think we've made good progress tonight, some real good discussion on bills 1 and 3, I'd ask that we adjourn the House until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 9:57 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, October 25, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Let us pray. Dear God, Holy Creator and author of all wisdom, as we conclude our work for this week in this Assembly, let us renew our energies with great thanks to those people who sent us here and, in doing so, put their trust in us to represent them to the best of our abilities. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise again today to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly two groups of grade 6 students from the Woodhaven middle school in Spruce Grove. This is the second trip for students from this school to visit us this week, as you're well aware, and both groups are very bright, very energetic students. They are accompanied by their teachers Mrs. April Kluh and Mr. Graeme Webber as well as parent helpers Mrs. Krista Rumberg, Mrs. Wanda Bell, Mrs. Cyndi Hoekstra, Mr. Jim Sicotte, Mrs. Angela Maidens, Mrs. Marilyn Freund, who is an EA, Mrs. Jody Jansen, and Ms Linda Wilson. I believe they are seated in both galleries – I think some of them are just coming in as we speak – and I would ask that they rise and be given the enthusiastic warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Enterprise and Advanced Education.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today if I may. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the House some very hard-working individuals from the Ministry of Enterprise and Advanced Education, specifically the community partnerships and literacy and Campus Alberta connections, both within the Campus Alberta partnerships sector of postsecondary and community education. Joining us today – I'll ask them to rise as I say their names, and I believe they're in the members' gallery – are Les Skinner, Morgan Bamford, Michelle Jehn, Diana Blackman, Iona Neumeier, Heather Macrae, Kenton Puttick, and Rose Prefontaine. Welcome.

The Speaker: Do you have a second introduction, hon. minister?

Mr. Khan: I have one more introduction.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Khan: Again, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you some wonderful members of our community in St. Albert. We have three classes from Elmer S. Gish school, a school that also holds the distinction of being the school where my wife first attended in grade 9, the year they opened. I would like the students from Elmer S. Gish to rise, please, to be acknowledged, and I would very much like to acknowledge and thank their leaders and their teachers, who are stalwarts of our community in St. Albert: Mr. Bradley Gibson, Miss Carolyn Greig, Mrs. Carey Rizzato, and Mrs. Gisela McKerracher. Thank you so much for coming today.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With your indulgence, I have two introductions, and I'd like to do them at the same time because they're both here for the same issue. First, I'd like to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a group of homeowners from Sherwood Park and Stony Plain: Allan Bleiken of Sunrise Village in Sherwood Park, Yvonne Byer and Doris Smith of Folkstone Place in Stony Plain. When they purchased their new homes, they experienced significant problems. I want to thank them for working with Municipal Affairs so we can learn from their stories. Along with many Albertans they look forward to the important legislation being introduced here this afternoon.

I would also like to introduce, Mr. Speaker, six staff members from the Department of Municipal Affairs. They have all worked incredibly hard to bring forward this important legislation today: Lesley MacAllister, Diane McLean, Wilma Sisk, Daniel Ward, Elizabeth Wightman, and I'm going to single out Allison Scott. We know that she was not pregnant before this concept started, and her son is now three years old, so we've nicknamed this new homeowners legislation coming forward Logan's Bill, named in honour of her son.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank all of these individuals for their incredible work to bring forward a fantastic piece of legislation here this afternoon. I'd ask that the members of the Assembly please give them the warm welcome they deserve.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all the members of this Assembly Ms Rhonda Clarke-Gauthier. Rhonda is a resident of my constituency of Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley. She's an active member of my constituency association and was my election co-manager. She's the mother of two great sons and a very involved community member, including 4-H. Presently she farms with her husband and is the CEO for the Mighty Peace Watershed Alliance. I would ask Rhonda, who is seated in the public gallery, to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and privilege for me to rise today on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly four aspiring leaders and dedicated representatives of Progressive Conservative Youth at MacEwan University and the University of Alberta Progressive Conservative Association. Both organizations strive to promote the fundamental principles of the Progressive Conservative Association of Alberta and to provide a strong catalyst for political engagement at both of these fine academic postsecondary institutions. The guests are seated in the members' gallery, and as I mention their names, I would ask that they please rise: Cameron McCoy, Daniel Rose, Arundee Singh Sandhu, Daniel St. Pierre. I would now ask that we give them the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly our guest, Damian Abrahams. Originally from Haida Gwaii, Damian is a student at Concordia University. He worked in my constituency office as our STEP student this summer and has stayed on once a week as a practicum student this fall. Damian is a peer mentor at Concordia, a traditional west coast performer and teacher, a father of two, and an active community volunteer. I would like now to ask Damian to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House Constable Amanda Trenchard of the Edmonton Police Service. She's a tireless volunteer with the law enforcement torch relay and Special Olympics. Today she is here with Megan Sanders, an athlete in the Special Olympics. In fact, today we celebrated the beginning of the Special Olympics Be a Fan Day campaign. One of the symbols of that campaign is the wearing of red shoelaces, so I encourage all members of the House to get their red shoelaces as a symbol of the Special Olympics. If they would please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

World Teachers' Day

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A few weeks ago, on October 5, we celebrated World Teachers' Day, a day that gives us a chance to celebrate the difference a great teacher makes in our lives. Here in Alberta we are lucky enough to have one of the best education systems in the world because of these teachers.

I am so proud of my daughter-in-law, who not only is the mother of my three grandchildren but is also an amazing teacher. I know she is one of the many hard-working and dedicated teachers our province is blessed with.

Teachers help our children to discover their strengths, spark their imaginations, and succeed in a rapidly changing world. Teaching isn't only about what happens in the classroom. Teachers help build our communities through coaching, mentoring, volunteering, and in countless ways. Of course, we don't need to wait until next October to acknowledge the hard-working teachers in our province. I encourage all Albertans to take the time to thank a teacher, whether it is your high school English teacher who inspired you to love reading, the junior high science teacher who helped you finally understand why ice floats, or a teacher who is making a difference in your child's life right now. Every day is a great day to celebrate Alberta's teachers.

I would personally like to take the opportunity to thank the family of one of my favourite teachers. She has since passed away. She nurtured a love of reading and social studies, which, coincidentally, includes politics.

Through their hard work, dedication, and passion for their profession teachers inspire our children to achieve their dreams.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Support for Multilingual Services in Alberta

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [Remarks in Punjabi]

[Translation] Canada is quickly becoming a nation of many languages. The latest national census shows that more than 200 languages are now being spoken in our country. In both our major cities around 20 per cent of the population do not speak one of our official languages at home. I can tell you that percentage is even higher in my riding of Calgary-McCall.

As the number of languages grows, our new Canadians need additional support and resources. Language services play a large role in helping our neighbours appreciate Albertan values, understand our rules and laws, and integrate seamlessly into our workforce and education systems.

Alberta Liberals believe we need to make government more accessible by using a phone service to deliver government information in more languages. If a quarter of Albertans can't understand service providers or the operator on the other end of a government helpline, then they are already at a disadvantage.

To better integrate and interact with the broader community, new Albertans need to be able to speak the language. That's why Alberta Liberals would make funding for second language programs a top priority. More language training services will relieve stress on families and make newcomers better able to communicate, get an education, and find employment.

The process to speed up the recognition of foreign credentials has stalled. Government needs to work with professional groups to create streamlined paths forward so new Albertans can have their training recognized. By recognizing previous education and work experience, everyone has a greater opportunity to reach their full potential.

As our population grows and changes, the government must address the language needs of all Albertans to ensure our province remains a diverse and prosperous home for all. [As submitted]

Mr. Speaker, it's a great honour for me to read my member's statement in Punjabi, and I hope all the members were able to keep up with me. I'm sure you were able to keep up with me.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member, [remarks in Punjabi] Congratulations! Everyone is pleased, and so am I. [As submitted]

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

University of Calgary West Campus

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to share an exciting update about the University of Calgary in its plans for west campus. The west campus is a 184-acre sector of land surrounding and including the Alberta Children's hospital, and it was transferred to the university by the Alberta government in 1995. The university has recently determined that the remaining undeveloped lands aren't needed for core academic purposes.

Some of you will be aware of the way that the University of British Columbia or Simon Fraser have handled their land endowments. The University of Calgary plans to adopt a similar model and set up the West Campus Development Trust to make use of this land. What they're envisioning is a mixture of residential, commercial, and research land usage, all integrated into existing surrounding mature communities.

As you may know, Mr. Speaker, the University of Calgary is located in Calgary's inner city and is at the core of my constituency, Calgary-Varsity. Naturally, input on this development from the neighbouring mature communities is critical. First, stakeholder meetings have begun and include representatives from all of the community associations, and residents from all of the communities will be invited to offer their comments.

Mr. Speaker, this process represents a unique opportunity. How often does over 100 acres of land right in the inner city become available to be used and integrated into an existing community? This is a gift, especially for constituents of Calgary-Varsity.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Walden Heights Seniors' Centre

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to have this opportunity to announce that last week on October 17 a brand new seniors' centre celebrated its grand opening in my riding of Calgary-South East. Walden Heights offers a range of living accommodations for its residents, including rental apartments, condos, and supportive living units. In order to offer a holistic living-in-place service for residents, this facility also offers memory care programs on site to assist residents and ensure a high quality of life. Last week's event completed the opening of Walden Heights by adding 80 supportive living units with funding from the affordable supportive living initiative. This adds to the existing 87 spaces that were opened last spring in partnership with Alberta Health Services.

I'm excited to say that Walden Heights sets new standards for supportive living in the city of Calgary. This care facility is dedicated to serving the particular and diverse needs of our seniors. By offering a variety of living arrangements to choose from, Walden Heights ensures that its residents receive precisely the right type of care, customized to their unique situations. This allows Walden Heights to be a model of resident-focused flexibility that can adapt to seniors' care requirements as they constantly evolve. By providing over $12.7 million in funding through the affordable supportive living initiative, the Alberta government has taken a further step moving forward and ensuring quality of care for Alberta seniors.

I'm especially proud to say that this excellent new facility is located in my constituency, and I have no doubt that it will bring untold benefits to our community. I look forward to visiting there very often.

Thank you.

XL Foods Inc. Beef Recall

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, I stand today to address the ongoing situation in my constituency of Strathmore-Brooks caused by the temporary shutdown of XL Foods. Recent developments look positive for the city of Brooks, the affected workers, and the Alberta cattle producers, but this Assembly must be vigilant in supporting the beef industry and ensuring consumer safety. Consumer safety is the primary concern of cattle producers. To suggest anything less is irresponsible and inexcusable.

It was surprising to hear in this Assembly yesterday an opposition member's statement aimed at scoring a few political points rather than helping solve the situation. While it has been refreshing to see the spirit of nonpartisanship on this issue for the most part in this Assembly, it is disappointing that a member of this Legislature would make such irresponsible statements without the facts and undermine the recovery of the beef industry. With consumer confidence shaken by recent events, it's so important to stand by our cattle producers and to listen to what they're saying rather than politicizing the issue. I would like to suggest that members that aren't educated on the cattle industry take this opportunity to learn from producers about this dynamic industry and see the pride and dedication that they have in producing the best beef in the world. Just stopping by for a photo op doesn't cut it with Canadian cattle producers.

This situation is about people who have been affected by E coli, the workers who experienced hardship due to the temporary shutdown, and the Alberta beef industry. Trying to score some political points off the hardship these people have endured is unacceptable to the people of Brooks and is certainly unacceptable to the Alberta cattle producers. I'd like to thank the members from both sides of the House who donated to my challenge yesterday and encourage those that haven't yet to please do so.

Alberta beef remains a premium product. It's recognized around the world as a premium product and will continue to be so under the stewardship of cattle producers.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of the Official Opposition for her first main question.

Political Party Financial Contributions

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Some very serious allegations have been made today. The law governing political contributions prohibits donating other people's money to a political party, but it appears that's what has happened. A well-known Edmontonian made a contribution of $7,500 to the Wildrose Party legally, but his alleged contribution to the PCs is said to be $430,000 in a single cheque. If this is true, it is an ethical scandal of enormous proportions. Will the Premier join me in asking the Chief Electoral Officer to conduct an immediate and thorough investigation?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first thing I want to say is that the reason we're able to have this discussion today in the House and in the public domain is because we have in place elections financing legislation that ensures that political fundraising and political contributions are fully transparent. Of course, six months from the day of the election all financial reporting was provided to the Chief Electoral Officer. We are absolutely confident with respect to the process that we put in place to conform with that legislation, and we very much respect the independence of the Chief Electoral Officer. However, what I have asked the Progressive Conservative Party today is to consult with the Chief Electoral Officer to ensure that things are in full compliance.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One thing we can't know is whether or not there was one cheque. Given that something like this happened before, involving illegal contributions and the PC Party, and that the then Justice minister, who is now the Premier, quashed the charges on the recommendation of the Chief Electoral Officer, how can Albertans be certain that this won't get swept under the rug again?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of the Opposition has a short memory. Last time through this discussion there were a number of allegations made that were found to be entirely unfounded. We went to the people of Alberta and talked about those, and six months ago the people of Alberta again voted for this government because they can trust this government. They can have confidence in this government. While we are prepared to co-operate fully with the Chief Electoral Officer, we will not dignify the allegations that are made in this House that are completely unfounded to start this cyclical debate again.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think I should remind the Premier that there were 37 instances where the Chief Electoral Officer found illegal donations had been made.

We will see this government time and time again dodge, hide, obscure, bury, and avoid the truth. Some call it a culture of corruption. We know they are not reliable to investigate themselves, so now with another huge ethical scandal brewing, can we be sure that we are going to get the truth this time?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, let's go back to the fact that it is not the job of the government of Alberta to investigate itself. It is the job of the Chief Electoral Officer to investigate any political party and any concern with respect to financial contributions. Frankly, I take exception to the fact that there would be any suggestion in this House that any minister, including myself, would do anything to quash a prosecution. That is offensive and rude.

Speaker's Ruling

Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, I would also like to just point out again – and I know you all know this – that we have to be really careful with questions that deal with political party matters because this is not the forum for that. I noted how carefully worded the questions were today.

We'll carry on with the second main question from the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Political Party Financial Contributions

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, we're dealing with the issue of whether the government can follow the law, its own law. This apparent breach of the act raises a host of questions about contributions, influence, transparency, and government ethics. The individual alleged to have made the huge contribution to the PCs is seeking taxpayer support for a hockey arena in Edmonton. How can taxpayers be certain that there is no connection between the contribution to the PC Party and the contribution to an arena?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the first thing I would note is that in every one of those questions the words "apparent" and "alleged" have been used. That is inappropriate in terms of a debate around government public policy. The Chief Electoral Officer has the opportunity to investigate wherever he chooses to, and that is his discretion.

With respect to the fundamental issue, Mr. Speaker, as a candidate for leader of this party, as the elected leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, as the Premier in this House last fall, during the provincial election and since the election our position has not changed. It is a public conversation. We have been consistent, and there is no reason to suggest a connection between the two, particularly when our position does not support the request from the person who made the contribution.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's just further the public conversation because given that the individual also deals with the government on pharmaceuticals, how can taxpayers be certain that there is no connection between the contribution to the party and the decisions affecting drugstores? To the Premier.

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, apparently we've moved from offensive to repulsive, but perhaps that's beside the point.

In answer to the question, as a matter of public policy, if the questioner is interested, we negotiate the rules that govern pharmacies with the Pharmacists Association of Alberta and all pharmacy providers. We negotiate with them as one group. No one particular provider receives special treatment. Those are the rules, Mr. Speaker, and that's how they're followed.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, given that the number $430,000 represents a quarter of the money raised by the PC Party and given that the PC Party formed the government and given that the donor has two multimillion-dollar items before the government, doesn't that make the Premier just a little bit uncomfortable?

Ms Redford: What makes me uncomfortable is that the Leader of the Opposition would allege any wrongdoing with respect to any decision that this government would make, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health has very clearly set out that there is a contracting process in place that separates government from anything to do with the contract negotiations around pharmacies. As I've said very clearly, the position of this government with respect to arena funding has been consistent since the day that I decided to run for leader of this party, and it will not change.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I know I speak for every Wildrose MLA, even those who are Flames fans, when we want the Edmonton Oilers to get a new arena so that they can remain in Edmonton. Our Wildrose leader has even proposed a lottery strategy to help that happen while keeping taxpayers off the hook. However, the report today regarding Mr. Katz allegedly cutting a $430,000 cheque to the cash-strapped PCs in the dying days of the election campaign is very unnerving, to say the least. To the Premier: has your government made a deal with Mr. Katz to give or allow him to use taxpayer money to fund this new arena?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the best opportunity that we have in question period is the opportunity to answer the question consistently over and over again. We have clearly said that there will be no direct provincial government funding to any professional sports arena. That position has not changed in the past 18 months, nor will it.

Mr. Anderson: You notice she used the words "no direct" funding, Mr. Speaker.

Given that this Premier has already approved $100 million in taxpayer cash to be funneled through MSI grants to Mr. Katz's arena deal and given that Mr. Katz may have paid $430,000 to the PC Party when they were out of money in the last two weeks of the campaign, how can this Premier assure Albertans that her government hasn't been bought and paid for by the highest bidder?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's somewhat interesting, the fantasy that's coming from the other side. I love conspiracy theory books myself, but this one takes the cake. There has been no $100 million approval by anyone in this government to fund any professional sports arena. The municipal sustainability initiative is a fund which we provide to municipalities which allows municipalities to make their own decisions, which, I know, this Wildrose Alliance Party would not have them do. Mr. Speaker, there has been no deal made.

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're getting right close to the line here where you might want to revisit a ruling that was made on November 30, 2011, by the previous Speaker. I'll allow one more question, but please be careful. If anybody has questions along political lines, refer to page 1514 of Hansard from November 30 regarding comments and questions pertaining to political parties which may or may not be within the domain of the government. I see them as two separate things.

Hon. member, proceed.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We'll get to where you've quoted on that on Monday first thing.

Political Party Financial Contributions (continued)

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, if this Premier truly has nothing to hide as she claims, will she reassure Albertans her government has not been bought and paid for by immediately providing visual evidence of the cheques her party received from Mr. Katz, his family, friends, businesses, employees, and relations, the actual cheques and deposit slips? Prove that your hands are clean instead of using this opportunity to sweep another scandal under the rug.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I've already said that we've asked the party to co-operate fully with the Chief Electoral Officer. We are confident with respect to the administration of our finances, and we'll do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Multilingual Government Services

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last election the Alberta Liberals ran on a platform to help new Canadians settle in Alberta by expanding government services in more languages. In light of new Canadian census data almost one-fifth of people living in Calgary and Edmonton now speak a language at home other than English or French. Clearly, the language landscape in Alberta is rapidly changing before our eyes. To the Minister of Service Alberta: will the government follow the Liberal lead and create a telephone translation line for all government services to help new Albertans navigate through the system?

The Speaker: Whoever's cellphone is ringing, could you please turn it off immediately? Some bell is ringing somewhere.

The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The government of Alberta attempts in many ways to reach out to Canadians regardless of the language they speak. For example, in our health services we have translation services available for a multitude of languages. Specific to our 310 call centre service that my department provides, I have looked at ways in which we can help extend that service to people speaking a multitude of languages.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: why has the government not increased funding to traditional language instruction and Internet and mobile programs so that new Albertans can have the opportunity to get an education, to enter into the workforce?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, my department is not the one that deals with settlement services, but regardless I'd be very happy to take this question. The fact is that our government is a government that's committed to welcoming new people from all over the world, and we understand the fact that Albertans today, Alberta students today, Alberta citizens today, play a role in helping facilitate Alberta's connection to many jurisdictions, whether that be China, India, the Philippines. We're reaching out and bridging with many other jurisdictions.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now to the Minister of Human Services: why is this government ignoring untapped human resources by failing to quickly recognize foreign credentials to meet the needs of industry and ensure that all Albertans can reach their full potential?

Mr. Khan: Our department is responsible for recognizing credentials both provincially and internationally, and we're working with our colleagues in the federal world, in the national world, to make sure that we are being responsive to the needs of our growing workforce here in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by the Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With the PC Party's disclosure statement came the revelation that Daryl Katz, his immediate family, their company, and several of his top executives had donated a total of $430,000 to the PC campaign. Our local billionaire just bought himself a government. My question is to the Premier. Will she admit that her government's weak-kneed elections financing act allows corporations and wealthy Albertans to buy influence with this PC government?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, if this elections act was so weak, we wouldn't be standing in this House today talking about this issue. The fact that we're here says that this legislation allows for all Albertans to have confidence in the political system and the political contribution system that we have. We will always continue to strive to improve. I know that we had discussions in the spring that led to recommendations from the Chief Electoral Officer that our government is bringing in sometime this fall. We'll continue to do that, but the elections legislation works.

The Speaker: Hon. member, be careful of the language here, please. Again we're on the fine line.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the legislation obviously worked for the government.

Given that the Katz contribution accounted for over 25 per cent of the PC's fundraising and given that the Oilers owner has demanded $100 million plus a casino licence for his downtown arena and that his primary business, Rexall drugs, is potentially affected by this government's decisions in dozens of ways, will this Premier admit that by accepting this massive donation, this government has irreparably compromised itself?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, asking the question is no better than offering an allegation in that form. We've made it very clear, as our Minister of Health has. We have structures in place in this province that ensure independent contract negotiations. We ensure that we have an independent office of the Chief Electoral Officer to deal with strong enforcement of our legislation. Albertans can have confidence that we have systems in this province that allow for public discussion, public disclosure, and full transparency.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that legislation puts an upside limit during an election year on political contributions of $30,000 and that this Conservative government accepted a $430,000 cheque and given this massive conflict of interest created by this huge donation and given that it is likely illegal, this Premier should do the right thing and order her party to give the money back.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm going to ask you to relook at your words in Hansard once they get printed because the words you're using now are getting to that fine line as well.

Hon. Premier, if you wish to respond.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as I've said, we are going to comply fully with all legislation. We have complied fully with all legislation. We will continue to co-operate with the Chief Electoral Officer. The suggestion that we as a government would somehow change policy, that we were elected on by the people of Alberta, because of this circumstance is absurd. We have said very clearly – I have said it in the House today, and I have said it for the past 18 months – that we have a perspective and a position with respect to the funding of professional sports arenas. It has not changed, and it will not change.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, this Premier's record on transparency is laughable. She releases a new expense policy only after her expenses are FOIPed by the opposition, changes the law while Justice minister in a way that concealed illegal donations to the PC Party, creates a six-figure patronage appointment to a defeated cabinet minister, and now we learn of an alleged $430,000 donation from Mr. Katz, which, if true, would also be illegal. Instead of talking about transparency, Ms Premier, how about you do the right thing and have your party return the money to Mr. Katz and apologize to the people for yet another one of your scandals?

The Speaker: Hon. member, you know better. That is a direct question about political party activity, not about government activity. Would you like to rephrase or go to your next question? Let's go to your second main.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Mr. Speaker, let's put it this way, then. If the government claims that its mother ship has done nothing wrong by accepting such a massive donation from essentially one person, will the Premier recognize that doing so clearly violated the spirit of the law, that one person should not be permitted to essentially buy an election, and direct her Minister of Justice to amend the elections act to close what amounts to an outrageous flaw in the legislation?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, it's not for the government of Alberta or for me or for that hon. member to make any conclusion with respect to whether or not the elections finance legislation was respected or not or followed or not. It is the job of the Chief Electoral Officer. This is a building that houses the Legislature. We have independent officers. We appointed a Chief Electoral Officer in an office to ensure that all political parties comply with the law, and I fully expect that the Chief Electoral Officer does his job every day. We will continue to co-operate with the Chief Electoral Officer every day as a political party in this province.

Mr. Anderson: The room is spinning from all that spin over there. This is incredible.

Given that the former Chief Electoral Officer, Lorne Gibson, asked for several prosecutions for illegal donations to be conducted in his 2009 report, including three new ones, Premier, and given the Premier, who was then the Justice minister, opted to deny that request, will this Premier satisfy this House that if wrongdoing is found in the Katz affair or any other of the almost daily revelations about your government, Ms Premier, that she will direct her Justice minister to prosecute those cases to the full extent of the law and quit hiding?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, you know what? I'm just going to try to remember what this hon. member did before he was elected to the Legislature. Oh, yeah. He was a lawyer. As a lawyer this hon. member, who is a member of the legal profession, should know that it is not the job of the Minister of Justice to direct prosecutions in this province. We have an independent prosecutions branch that ensures that all decisions that are made with respect to prosecutions are made independently. It is the job of our prosecutions branch to determine whether or not any prosecution should take place, not the job of government, and this government will not do that.

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, I know it's Thursday. Over the weekend could I ask all of you to please find your copy or a copy of House of Commons Procedure and Practice and review page 504, wherein it says that questions in question period shall be ruled out of order if they "concern internal party matters, or party or election expenses."

Now, I didn't make up the rules, but there is a tradition and a history of following them. [interjections] Hon. members, please. Hon. members, let's move on.

Integrated Resource Management

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development talks about world-leading and world-class environmental management, and my constituents are asking me how this fits into an integrated resource management system for oil and gas, coal, and forestry. My question to the minister: where in this new integrated system is the environmental protection that my constituents, indeed all Albertans, expect?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for the question. Environmental protection is the cornerstone of integrated resource management. Simply put, it means setting environmental, social, and economic outcomes that Albertans expect. It means that Alberta is a leader in environmental protection and world-class resource development. This is the time to do this, and we are appropriate to do this now.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is again to the same minister. As a big fan of integrity I'm asking the minister: where is the evidence that there's action being taken and not just words being spoken?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, with regard to that, we look at the land-use planning that we're doing, the announcement with regard to the lower Athabasca regional plan, legally binding limits for air and for water. We look at the conservation that we've put into that plan, 2 million hectares, an area three times the size of Banff national park, more caribou habitat protection in there as well as an arm's-length monitoring agency, which ensures a comprehensive science-based and credible system in government. Certainly, yesterday we announced further improvements that bolster the commitment to responsible resource management.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again: how can you assure Albertans and how can I assure my constituents that as the economy heats up, we're not just going to forget environmental protection in favour of accelerated growth?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's exactly what we're doing with regard to our regional plans. When we look at the lower Athabasca regional plan, we look at the creation of a province-wide arm's-length agency to make sure that the science and the data is independently reported and collected. When we look at the consistent process that we make with effective regulatory processes as well and when we look at the inclusion of the protection of property rights as we develop all of those, this is the proof that we're moving towards and the commitment that we have made as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Critical Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The transmission review committee did not consider, review, or report on any evidence that proved the north-south transmission lines were needed. Its findings were based on assumptions. Given that the assumptions had been proven inaccurate, in some cases proven to be false, will the Minister of Energy agree that we need to be smarter and more logical and re-evaluate these multibillion dollar lines based on a proper needs assessment and a proper cost-benefit analysis?

Mr. Hughes: Mr. Speaker, the Critical Transmission Review Committee took a look at a wide range of sources of information and came to a conclusion, and that conclusion was that these four major pieces of transmission were required and that Alberta should proceed with them. In fact, I would say that the hon. member at times in his own career in recent years has very much supported parts of this. I've seen materials related to that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that I support responsible spending, given that all the stakeholders, including this government now, all agree it is unwise and wrong for cabinet to approve transmission lines, how can this government claim its past decision to approve transmission lines is somehow correct when everyone, including this government, now agrees it's unwise and wrong both now and in the future?

Mr. Hughes: Mr. Speaker, the need for these critical transmission lines was put forward by the Alberta Utilities Commission. It was the speed with which the government at the time made a decision to implement and to have these lines put in place. That was then; this is now. In the future the province of Alberta will ensure that the complete process is handled by the Alberta Utilities Commission.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that no engineer can explain why this government decided to spend an additional $2 billion to convert electricity from AC to DC and presuming this government has a reason for this decision, how does this extra expense of $2 billion benefit Albertans when no more electricity is produced, consumed, or transmitted?

Mr. Hughes: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's easy to be an armchair quarterback of anything, and it's particularly easy to be an armchair quarterback of engineers and experts who have come to very responsible conclusions and have provided good advice to the Alberta Utilities Commission, the critical transmission committee, and the government of Alberta. What we're doing is that we're upgrading and improving the transmission system in this province for the next 20 years to ensure that Albertans have a robust transmission system for their electricity.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Highway 686

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Rural Alberta depends on road networks, and one of those networks impacts not only economic possibilities but also work potential in my constituency. My communities are very anxious to see secondary road 686 upgraded and maintained. I'm sure they'd be ecstatic to see it paved from Red Earth to Peerless Lake and Trout Lake. Would the Minister of Transportation please provide my constituents an update on this crucial highway?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have to inform the hon. member through you that the piece of road in question is not on the current three-year plan, which makes me nervous based on the seating plan in here right now, but I want to assure the hon. member that each year we review the traffic volumes, the safety records, the infrastructure conditions as well as new economic conditions or development that might take place, and we will continue to do so.

2:20

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, given the fact that it's not on the paving list in the next little while, what can my constituents expect in terms of making sure this road gets maintained to a place where they can at least drive and won't lose their mufflers? Can you please give my constituents at least some comfort in terms of what can happen?

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that the member is representing the concerns of her constituency, and I appreciate that she may have received phone calls or other communications about that. I want to assure her that each year we review the needs, we review the condition of the roads, whether they're better or worse, as well as the other economic conditions around that. We will continue to do so, and as those needs change, so too will our reaction to them.

Ms Calahasen: Well, given the fact that this road could potentially be connected to Fort McMurray, the economic engine of this province, could the Minister of Transportation please indicate how we can ensure that this road can be connected to the Fort McMurray area so that we can see the potential economic activity benefits for the constituents in my constituency?

Mr. McIver: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, there are a couple hundred kilometres in between the west end of highway 686 and the east end of highway 686 where there is no road. Again, as the economic conditions develop, as the needs develop, as new development plans happen – and they may well because, as I understand it, there are resources in that interim area – and as those decisions are made by industry and approvals are given, we will consider these things seriously and take them into account every year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Wildlife Protection

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. This government has taken to talking about using science and evidence as the basis for a number of issues, but one place they are not using this is the protection of wildlife. The new regional plan for Athabasca allows development in 80 per cent of the land, which has, does, and will affect caribou survival. Any recommended wildlife corridors have been completely ignored, and no cumulative effects are being taken into account. To the minister of SRD: why is this department deliberately ignoring science and evidence when it comes to long-term sustainability of Alberta's caribou and other wildlife?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the province of Alberta in collaboration with the federal government and Ministry of Environment is working on a joint monitoring plan in the oil sands region for air, land, water, and biodiversity to ensure that we have a good plan in place to monitor the science, working with science to monitor all of those areas in the oil sands. It's a three-year plan that we've come together on to ensure that all of those areas will be monitored, and that will be publicly reported.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Back to the same minister. Can the minister tell me exactly which studies she has read or reviewed that uphold the current approach that the government is taking as a good idea for Alberta wildlife? I have the studies that show that it isn't, so I'd like to hear what studies she's read.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If the hon. member would actually read the three-year plan that we have for the environmental monitoring for air, land, water, and biodiversity in the oil sands, she would see what outcomes we're looking at there. We certainly have the Alberta caribou strategy. The federal government has one, and we're reviewing how that fits in there. In the lower Athabasca region we have set limits and triggers to make sure that as we have strong resource development of the oil sands, we are taking care of the environment and wildlife aspects in that region as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Back to the same minister. Given that even captured wildlife like those animals in Guzoo don't fare very well under this government, can the minister explain what possible reason was used to allow Guzoo to reopen after years and years and years of failing to meet even the most basic of standards and any of the criteria that were put out there? Was there a miracle that happened? Why would you allow this place to open?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the Guzoo was always left open. It was left open under a court order. Inspections have been done, and if you look at what has been done with regard to that, Guzoo has strict regulations that they must meet. We are monitoring, making sure those have happened. But they've always remained open.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View. [interjections] The Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has the floor on this wonderful Thursday afternoon.

Election Finances Legislation

Ms Notley: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, yesterday we learned of reports that a local billionaire walked into the Premier's campaign office with a cheque for $430,000. He then had it helpfully broken into smaller pieces in order to fit it through the loopholes that this government has written into our election finances legislation. My question is to the Attorney General. Why won't he close the loopholes that allow rich corporations to buy not only this government but also the hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars that it distributes?

The Speaker: I'll invite the hon. Minister of Justice to answer the question, but you saw what happened last time we got into this, so be careful, hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, I understand the legislation has been complied with. As the Premier indicated before, it works. It wouldn't actually come to the table unless we actually hadn't complied with the legislation. I want to remind this hon. member that union donations are also allowed. Does she want to ban those as well?

Ms Notley: Yes, we do.

Well, Mr. Speaker, given that under this government's rules Mr. Katz, his wife, his mother, his father, his company, maybe his dog, his goldfish, and the neighbour's cat seem to have donated to the PC Party in this past election and given that Mr. Katz stands to receive a 20,000 per cent return on this investment, will the minister admit that in doing nothing to fix these loopholes, Albertans could be forgiven for concluding that Denmark is not the only place where something is rotten?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I'm not exactly sure I can catch my breath after that comment, but if this member has a problem and she wants to complain to the Chief Electoral Officer, she should do so because the Chief Electoral Officer is an independent body that reports to this Legislature, not to me.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, this is about the legislation. We need a system where voters decide elections, not dollars, so given that there is really only one clear action that can restore public confidence and clean up this corrupted election finances system, will the minister finally concede that it is time to ban union and corporate donations to political parties?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, the current act has no issue with corporate or union donations as long as they're handled within current limits. The current limits work. If she has . . . [interjections] Mr. Speaker, could I have order, please?

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Minister of Justice had the floor, and I believe he still does. Have you concluded your comments?

Mr. Denis: I'm finished.

No-zero Grading Policy

Mr. McAllister: It's been quite a day in here so far, Mr. Speaker.

I think a victory has been scored this week for both Alberta parents and democracy on the subject of education. After spending most of the pre-election spring session ignoring parents and the Wildrose opposition, the government has finally come around on our position on ensuring the paramount rights of parents in the education system. Parents across Alberta are also asking me, everywhere I go, about that nonsensical no-zero policy, and I would suggest that probably many of the members on the other side are being asked about it as well. My question to the Education minister is: isn't there some way we can work together in this Assembly and solve that situation?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the hon. minister, who is dealing with a situation that is unfolding this afternoon, I will take that question under advisement for him. I do appreciate as well the hon. member's desire to work together in the interest of parents and children.

Mr. McAllister: Man, I wish I had heard the start of that. To the minister: did I hear that you're thinking about working with us and maybe amending this in some way so that we might represent parents? That's kind of what I thought I heard. I would just ask this, then . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister. [interjections]
You asked your second question.

Mr. McAllister: I'm sorry. Okay.

The Speaker: Oh, it was part of his nonallowed preamble? Well, perhaps we'll review that as well.
Hon. minister.

2:30

Mr. Horner: I think that was the preamble to the preamble, Mr. Speaker.

As I said before, I'm sure the minister will be very pleased to learn that the hon. member opposite is going to work with him on the education bill that is before the House as well as work with him with the parents and for the benefit of all children in the province of Alberta, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I thought we were here to represent parents and the people that put us in these chairs, which is why I asked the question that I did.

Given that we are here to represent Albertans and parents and given that every parent wants that nonsensical policy abolished, could we commit to actually representing parents and working on it, getting together and trying to get rid of that policy so Mr. Dorval and other teachers aren't thrown under the bus for having the audacity to give a zero to a student that does zero work?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. minister the other day did talk about the autonomy of our school boards and the ability for school boards to create that environment where there is a structured approach to how they present that education and, obviously, the province of Alberta's responsibilities around the curriculum and setting the standards of where we want the K to 12 system to be. I'm sure, as I said, that the hon. minister will be most appreciative of the hon. member's offer to work together in the interests of all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

New School Construction in Cochrane

Mr. Casey: Mr. Speaker, Cochrane has seen a population increase of 27.5 per cent in the last five years. K to 8 schools already have a utilization rate of over 90 per cent, and by 2014 that is projected to grow to 103 per cent. There is no indication that the explosive growth in Cochrane will slow, and the overcrowding of facilities is stressing the entire system. To the Minister of Education: what is the plan for addressing infrastructure shortfalls for school facilities in Cochrane?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, the minister has been called to rather an emergency situation, and I am standing here to let the hon. member know that we have been working with both the Minister of Infrastructure and the Minister of Education to encourage the school boards to be very creative when developing plans to make sure their infrastructure is put to good use. Just yesterday the Edmonton public school board announced they were developing a new infrastructure strategy to address how they deal with the excess space that they have in their communities. I know that the Minister of Education had spoken to the board chair to congratulate them on undertaking that work, which they anticipate will bring recommendations by the end of this year.

Mr. Casey: To the President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance: is the minister willing to consider alternate funding models in order to get school facilities built in rapidly growing areas such as Cochrane in a timely manner?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the critical things that we are looking at is partnerships. Where there's an opportunity for a school facility, is there also an opportunity for a community library? Is there also an opportunity for a recreation centre? Is there also an opportunity for a nursing facility? New facilities need to be multipurpose, and they have to meet the multiple needs of the community. There is an expectation that we have put on the school boards and on the ministries to come to us with those kinds of plans. Some boards are doing a great job, and there are a number of examples around the province: Olds, Fort McMurray, Jasper. Those are just a few. I know that there's a lot of innovation out there, and we're encouraging them. So I am very open to alternative methods.

Mr. Casey: To the same minister: can we expect changes to be brought forward for consideration in the 2013-14 budget that will begin to address this backlog of school facilities?

Mr. Horner: Well, as I said yesterday in this House, Mr. Speaker, we will be coming forward with a full and comprehensive business plan, which includes the operating, the capital, and savings as well. We will be bringing forward what Albertans have told us over the summer, and that is that they want us to build the infrastructure when they need it, not just when we have the cash in the bank.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Health Services Local Decision-making

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year AHS announced restructuring plans to engage front-line workers and allow for more local decision-making, but the latest numbers tell the story of another government failure. Staff engagement numbers show that only 1 in 2 are proud to even be associated with AHS while physician engagement sits even lower, at 39 per cent. Now the new board chair wants to try again with a hospital-empowering pilot project at the Rockyview general. My questions are all to the Minister of Health. Given your history of your expanding bureaucracy and ignoring the cries of our front-line staff, how will you ensure that his project doesn't also fail miserably?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is correct in that the newly appointed board chair of Alberta Health Services has talked about his desire and that of the board to do a better job of supporting health care workers, and that includes both physicians and other workers that deliver care. One of the strategies to approach this that has been discussed with me and which I support is to give to the greatest extent possible local health care workers better tools to support operational decision-making on a day-to-day basis. That means engaging staff in meaningful discussion about new strategies, it means allowing basic funding decisions to be made at a unit level, and it means in general empowering those workers to deliver the quality of care that they want to deliver.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that when Stephen Lockwood took the helm of the AHS board last month, the Minister of Health – that's you, Minister – shot down any hope for real change by saying: we're committed to the system we have in place. That's your quote, not mine. Are we to believe that you'll now adopt the Wildrose policy of localized decision-making, or will you continue to resist those meaningful and necessary changes that you're now hearing from your new board chair?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the position of this government a year ago and the position of this government today is that we are absolutely not interested in restructuring, reorganizing, or otherwise making changes that will disrupt the efficient delivery of health care. That does not mean that we are not interested in ensuring that local administrators and people that deliver care to us on a day-to-day basis have the tools that they need in order to do their job. That means listening rather than talking, focusing on positive outcomes – and there is a list of many that we could discuss in this House that have been achieved by Alberta Health Services – and recognizing local success and giving credit where it is due.

Mrs. Forsyth: Minister, you've failed miserably at listening.

Let me take you back to your own Alberta Health Act. Given that the national benchmark for physician engagement sits at 76 per cent while Alberta scores at barely half that number, will you admit that you have failed doctors by not including the issues of bullying and intimidation in the health inquiry?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the failure that needs to be discussed in this House is the failure of this hon. member and her colleagues to refrain from the negativity, cynicism, and personal attacks with respect to our health care system that result in these kinds of attitudes.

The fact of the matter, Mr. Speaker, is that satisfaction figures are slowly increasing within Alberta Health Services. We have admitted as a government that it was a very large change that took place over a relatively short period of time. Everyone, from the board on down, is actively involved in finding new and more meaningful ways to engage workers, and they are delivering results for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Southwest Calgary Ring Road

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is again directed to the Minister of Transportation. First, my hon. colleague, I would like to congratulate you and our colleagues on your progress in improving driver, passenger, and road safety along highway 63.

My question, though, is about the southwest portion of the Calgary ring road. This highway is of great interest to my constituents, and on their behalf I am asking for an update as to when there will be news about its construction.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the congratulations, but I can assure the hon. member that that was a team effort, with this Premier and this government working together for the betterment of Albertans.

On the question of the southwest Calgary ring road we're still in negotiations, Mr. Speaker. I haven't anything to report other than that there is no agreement yet. I certainly would like to have one. When there is more news to share, I will be sharing it loudly and proudly.

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Minister.

Traffic and congestion are among the top three issues for my constituency. Can you please remind this Legislature how much money the province has supported the city of Calgary with in transportation grants, which can also be used to address traffic congestion in southwest Calgary?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, through Municipal Affairs and our department and through this government we actually support Calgary and all Alberta municipalities quite well, including the municipal sustainability initiative that is really the most generous of any in any province in Canada. Through that, the city of Calgary has received and has committed more than $1.5 billion in the last five years on roads, bridges, and transit projects, including the west LRT, $190 million from the basic municipality transit grant, and there's more which I'll share with the hon. member.

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Minister.

My final question today is for the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. As our neighbours on the Tsuu T'ina Nation expand commercial activities, can you please advise my constituents as to what role your department has in monitoring developments on First Nations' lands?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta, like all provincial governments, has no jurisdiction to monitor commercial development on First Nation reserves. As a matter of fact, the Canadian Constitution is quite clear that the federal government is responsible for First Nations' land. I can tell this member that under section 38(2) of the Indian Act in order for First Nations to lease reserve land for development, it first must be designated by the government of Canada. I can tell you that the lands within the Tsuu T'ina Nation have already been approved and designated for development by that government.

The Speaker: Hon. members, in a few seconds we'll resume with Members' Statements, beginning with Edmonton-South West.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Bessie Nichols School

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to announce that last week on October 16 Bessie Nichols school celebrated its grand opening in my riding of Edmonton-South West. Bessie Nichols is one of 15 new schools to open their doors in the province this school year. Nothing could more strongly reflect this government's commitment to Alberta's education system than this. I believe it's fitting that this inspiring symbol of education is named after another inspiring figure; namely, the first woman to be voted to the Edmonton public school board and to civic office in Edmonton, 100 years ago.

New schools like Bessie Nichols are a step toward remedying the issue of school overcrowding, which, as many of you know, has become a concern in many communities. These new schools provide spaces in which students can be taught in a wide variety of programs using innovative methods and technologies.

However, this new school represents so much more than a new piece of educational infrastructure. It represents a focal point for the community, and it provides students and their families with a sense of belonging and pride. Each new school is an investment in Alberta's future as it benefits our families, our communities, our cultural vibrancy, and our economy.

As the representative for Edmonton-South West I am particularly proud and excited to have Bessie Nichols school in my constituency, and I am certain that its impact on the families in our community will be nothing short of inspiring.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

New Home Buyer Protection Act

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have to say that today might be a bit of an emotional day for me – and I'm sure the day is quite emotional for most Albertans – as I stand and request leave to introduce Bill 5, the New Home Buyer Protection Act, or, as I cited before, what we've called in the department Logan's Bill.

I'm very proud to have members of the department who worked so hard on this, Mr. Speaker. Anybody who ever questions the integrity or dedication of our civil service simply has to look at the years of work put in to make sure that this is a proper bill.

Mr. Speaker, our homes are the biggest purchase most of us will ever make. This legislation is intended to protect Albertans who are buying new homes, but most importantly it is designed to raise the quality of the production of the homes in the province of Alberta. This law balances the need for consumer protection while still ensuring affordable purchases of new homes plus allowing free enterprise to still work in this province.

The legislation will give Alberta the strongest new home warranty protection in all of Canada with one year on materials and labour; two years on delivery systems such as heating and plumbing and air conditioning; five years' building envelope coverage will be mandatory for homebuyers, but homebuyers will also have the option of additional years of coverage; and, finally, 10 years on major structural components.

I very much look forward to debating this bill in this House, and I am proud and honoured to table Bill 5, the New Home Buyer Protection Act.

I move that the bill be read a first time.

[Motion carried; Bill 5 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Employment Pension Plans Act

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce Bill 10, the Employment Pension Plans Act, which is a complete rewrite of the current Employment Pension Plans Act and sets standards for private-sector pension plans.

These revisions to the act will help modernize it and provide more flexibility as employers and plan members look for alternative ways to manage their pension plans. This will help ensure that the benefits promised under these plans can be delivered.

This effort is the culmination of a five-year project with British Columbia. Work started on the new act in 2007 – it even predates the child for which the previous act was mentioned – when Alberta and British Columbia formed an expert panel to review pension legislation in our two provinces and find ways to strengthen and harmonize this type of legislation. This new legislation reflects the panel's recommendations as well as other changes that have become necessary as events have unfolded since the work was started.

Key updates in the new act will make it easier to design new pension plans to meet the needs of Alberta employers and employees. The act also clarifies the roles and responsibilities of the various parties involved in managing pension plans and adds requirements to encourage good governance, all of which improve how plans are managed. Overall, the new Employment Pension Plans Act makes Alberta's private-sector pension plans legislation stronger and more in tune with the way that pension plans need to work in our changing times.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 10 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 10, the Employment Pension Plans Act, be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and table the appropriate number of copies of the 2011-2012 annual report of Travel Alberta. It was a very successful year for our Crown corporation with the launch of the first-ever provincial tourism brand, highlighting some of the signature experiences and breathtaking landscapes that Alberta has to offer and share with visitors from around the world. The new Remember To Breathe campaign and brand earned many awards, and the signature video for the campaign had almost 1.5 million views on YouTube. Other highlights in the report include a new and improved province-wide co-operative marketing program and working with industry partners to host more than 300 media visits, which gained valuable exposure for Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, on behalf of my colleague from Calgary-McCall I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the Canadian census report on languages entitled Analytical Document: Linguistic Characteristics of Canadians, Language, 2011 Census of Population.

Thank you very much.

2:50

The Speaker: Did you have a second one to table?

Ms Cusanelli: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation on another tabling.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise once again and table the 2011-12 annual report of the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation. It has been a very busy and very positive year for the foundation. They provided grants and supports to over 100 provincial sport and recreation organizations and supported countless other local clubs and organizations and committees.

Highlights include Fairview's hosting of the 2011 Alberta 55 Plus Summer Games and Spruce Grove, Stony Plain, and Parkland county's fantastic 2012 Alberta Winter Games. Alberta was very well represented by Team Alberta North at the 2012 Arctic Winter Games in Whitehorse this past February. The foundation has once again shown that positive collaboration with our stakeholders creates great opportunities for Albertans to get active and to get out and enjoy our province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there any other tablings? The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to provide the requisite number of copies of the document I referred to in question period yesterday. This document is titled Alberta by Design, the PC Party of Alberta election platform 2012.

The Speaker: Thank you. I believe that completes our Routine.

Orders of the Day
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 2
Responsible Energy Development Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Hughes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise to move second reading of Bill 2 today.

The Responsible Energy Development Act, Bill 2, will create a single regulator for upstream oil, gas, oil sands, and coal development in Alberta. What we're proposing to do through this legislation is create a made-in-Alberta approach to how our energy resources are regulated. This will be more efficient for landowners. It will be more effective and efficient for industry. It will provide a unified approach to regulation that supports important environmental safeguards.

I think every member of the Legislature can agree that our province is indeed in a unique position in the world. Our province has been blessed with abundant resources, our economy is among the best in the world, and our citizens are committed to creating a province in which people want to live, work, and raise a family.

Two years ago the government of Alberta embarked on an important project that looked at the way Alberta regulated its energy resources with an eye to efficiency, effectiveness, and best practices around the world. A task force was created to make recommendations about improvements we could make. My colleague the Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development chaired that task force, and she did so very ably, I might note. She met with Albertans, stakeholders, and First Nations communities across the province to hear their thoughts about how we could steward our resources more responsibly.

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

We heard from Albertans that they want to have a say in what projects are planned. We heard from Albertans that the development of our province's resources should not come at the expense of our environment. We heard from Albertans and industry that the current regulatory system is confusing and, at times, difficult to navigate. We heard from landowners that they feel they're powerless when they feel industry is not holding up its end of the deal. We heard from landowners that resolving conflicts with private corporations is challenging and very expensive.

I'm happy to say that we've addressed these concerns and frustrations through the Responsible Energy Development Act. The proposed legislation in front of you will create a single regulator that will benefit not only our economy but our nation's economy. It will help ensure that we remain an attractive place to do business. It will support job creation and bolster the economy so we can continue to invest in education, health care, caring for seniors, and the many services that the province of Alberta provides for the citizens of this province.

It's an important milestone in the province. We're fulfilling the promise that the Premier and government made to do things better with a system that makes sense. What we're creating is a one-stop approach that will make it easier for Albertans and for industry to navigate the system.

The regulator, which will be operational by June of next year – that's 2013 – will bring together the regulatory functions of the Energy Resources Conservation Board and the Ministry of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development for energy resource activities. This consolidation cannot be underestimated in terms of its importance and its impact. Currently a major oil sands development could require over 200 applications. Through the new regulator we will look at the entire process and look for efficiencies, areas where proponents used to go to multiple places where they can now access a more unified approach. The regulator will have the flexibility it needs to receive applications and make decisions about energy resource activities.

It creates a new entity, Madam Speaker, and it involves the repeal of the Energy Resources Conservation Act. This new organization will have a strong governance model that includes a small board of directors and a chief executive officer. The board will be accountable to the Minister of Energy but will have accountability as well to my colleague the Minister of Environment and Sustainable Resource Development. To be clear, the Minister of Energy won't manage this board. It's an arm's-length board. The new entity will have hearing commissioners appointed separately by cabinet to ensure that hearings and reviews are effective and fair.

As well, Albertans will know how this regulator is performing. Performance measures will be developed and reported to Albertans. The regulator will also be transparent and will provide reports and information to the Minister of Energy as required and as requested.

Our commitment to the environment remains strong. Through this legislation the new regulator will administer the Public Lands Act, the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act, and the Water Act in terms of energy resource development. It's an essential shift that gives the regulator broader inspection and investigative powers as well. If companies or individuals are found in noncompliance of the legislation or of an approval, the regulator can use any of the tools within any of the existing statutes to address the concern and the issue. This approach broadens the regulator's ability to ensure that individuals and corporations act properly according to the legislation in the province. Not only that, but if individuals and corporations are found in noncompliance, fines under the energy statutes have been raised significantly to align with those in place under the current environmental legislation.

This new legislation is about creating a regulatory system that is effective and efficient but not at the environment's expense. Economic development and environmental management are two sides of the same coin, and with the Responsible Energy Development Act we're achieving that right balance. The fact is that we wouldn't think of moving to a single regulator if we thought even for one second that the move would compromise environmental protection.

While talk today surrounds the new single regulator, it's essential that we stress that the single regulator is one piece in a much larger, co-ordinated integrated resource management system that we're putting in place in this province. It's part of our commitment to plan in an integrated manner, considering what is healthy for the economy, the environment, and society. This important work includes a single regulator, a world-class environmental monitoring system, announced by my colleague, and land-use planning, also announced by my colleague. Recently we released the lower Athabasca regional plan, which is a responsible plan putting in place for the next 50 years a plan for growth in that area. We're currently working on additional regional plans across the province.

As I mentioned earlier, we heard from Albertans and specifically landowners across the province that they can feel powerless when things go wrong on their land. All over Alberta landowners enter into private agreements with industry and corporations. When things don't go according to plan, they have a challenge seeking recourse, and as somebody who grew up in rural Alberta, I know how important that is. The stewards of land, the landowners, we all know, are the best trustees and responsible parties to look after the interests of the land.

Clearly, protecting the rights of landowners is a priority for this government. Through the Responsible Energy Development Act, landowners can choose to register their private surface agreements with the regulator. If a landowner does not feel that industry is complying, if industry isn't living up to their commitments, Madam Speaker, then the regulator may investigate and can issue an order directing companies to comply. This is a big assistance to landowners in their relationships with energy companies.

Another key thing our task force heard and acted on was to create a dispute resolution mechanism. The single regulator will be authorized to require that both parties participate in an alternative dispute resolution process when the regulator considers it appropriate in order to resolve outstanding issues. We're enabling landowners and stakeholders who are adversely and directly affected to state their concerns to the regulator and participate when hearings are held. Provision is made for decisions to be reviewed or reconsidered in a manner that provides appropriate checks and balances for the decision-making process.

We also know that we have people across this great province who have a vested interest in how we develop our resources, where that happens, and there are many who want to have input. Our government is creating a policy management office, or PMO – we'll have one of our own – as we're calling it, which will be responsible for setting policy direction that the regulator will deliver on. One of the PMO's first and most important tasks is to create a public engagement framework. That framework will create mechanisms for Albertans to have their input heard early on in the policy-making process.

Premier Redford has committed to consulting with Albertans on important issues, and that's a priority as far as energy resources are concerned. While this new regulator will be operational by next June, we do have important work ahead of us first. The proposed legislation sets the stage and builds the foundation for the single regulator. We are in the process of developing the regulations that will accompany the Responsible Energy Development Act. This is essential work that will require feedback and consultation from Albertans to ensure we're hitting the mark by providing for effective participation. I can't stress enough what an exciting time this is. This is a once-in-a-generation opportunity to bring to Albertans the next generation regulator for the development of our resources.

Through the Responsible Energy Development Act we're implementing a regulatory system that makes sense for Alberta, makes sense for Canada, makes sense for the environment. The new regulator will provide effective processes for Albertans to be heard and respected on an ongoing basis. It will protect the rights of landowners. It will safeguard the environment. It will be a one-stop approach that will make it easier for Albertans, industry, and landowners to navigate the system. Simply put, it's an approach to energy regulation that makes sense. It's the right time. It's the right approach. It's the right thing to do.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would now move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 6 Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012

[Adjourned debate October 24: Mr. Jeneroux]

The Acting Speaker: I now recognize the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Now, I wasn't going to speak to this bill because I had initially thought it was just going to be a housekeeping bill. On the surface it looks reasonable. Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012, looks reasonable in what it's aiming to do, which is to amend the Fair Trading Act, the Occupational Health and Safety Act, and the Safety Codes Act.

Let me first speak about the things that we think are positive about this approach, and then I'll speak about things that I am concerned about and give my recommendations at the end. What I like about the Fair Trading Act is, of course, that it's going to aim to protect workers and consumers from unfair trade practices. This is good. We know that there have been instances where the act has been perceived to be too weak on the bad guys, on those who are doing wrong. Increasing the penalties as a deterrent, once again, is a good idea in principle as long as it's being targeted at those who are truly doing wrong. That's a positive.

Secondly, the OH and S Act: we all know that the Auditor General has called for more enforcement. We support the government's efforts to improve the safety of work sites for all workers. Every worker should have the confidence going to work that they're going to come home at the end of shift healthy, without having had a workplace injury. We understand as well that one of the ways to ensure compliance is to have harsher penalties. Again, as long it's targeted against those who are doing wrong, those who have sloppy practices, not only in practice will this be good, but we think the intention of it is good.

Under, of course, the Safety Codes Act, I think we all remember the tragic case recently of a young girl who was killed when construction debris that had not been properly secured flew off a building in Calgary. I commend the government on recognizing that part of the way you get compliance, once again, is to ensure that there are stiffer penalties so that you do end up encouraging corporations to take every action they can to secure their safe work environment.

However, one of the concerns that we have – and we have observed this with government in other bills – is that from time to time the good intentions do not translate into addressing the right people in practice. I would just draw the Assembly's attention to the .05 bill. We support the notion of going after drunk drivers. We do. But with that bill, once again, giving administrative penalties, to allow officers at the roadside to be prosecutor, judge, and jury with a very serious penalty – taking away a person's car and licence for three days – we think that oversteps the line of administrative penalties.

When we look at what is happening here, once again, we're seeing that the maximum penalty under the Fair Trading Act would allow for an administrative penalty to go up to a high of $100,000. We also acknowledge that under the Safety Codes Act it would allow an administrative penalty to go up as high as $100,000 in the first instance and then up to $500,000 in the case of subsequent instances. Once again, if this is targeted at genuine shortfalls in safety on work sites and if it's targeted at people who are genuinely doing wrong, then it's all right. But what I think we're most concerned about is that we are targeting the right people, that we're not giving excessive powers to enforcement officers and administrative agencies through administrative penalties and short-circuiting the Charter rights to be able to have due process and ensure that you have reasonable access to the courts.

Now, I am open-minded about being convinced that this is the right approach, but I have to say that that type of approach does leave me with some reservations. What I would hope is that we could put more language around having some kind of appeal process in the event that these fines are levied so that we do have an opportunity for somebody who may have been wrongly fined in one of these excessive amounts to ensure that they have a second order of appeal so that they can address the issue. The appeal has to be independent. It can't be appealed to the ministry which also levied the fine in the first place. We're going to be taking a closer look at this legislation to see if that condition can be satisfied.

The second thing I would raise a concern about is that while we do want to levy fines, we also want to be cognizant of where these fines are going. In the case of a $500,000 fine for a safety violation, should those dollars go into general revenues, or should those dollars go to make restitution to the people who are harmed by the unsafe workplace or the unsafe practices? I think that what we have seen in the past was a good precedent set by this government with the victims' restitution fund. In the event of assets seized from criminal activity, the dollars and assets went into a fund that nominally was supposed to go towards victim restitution.

We think that same kind of principle might be able to apply here, that if there are going to be additional high fines levied, perhaps the approach would be to have an independent fund that would be able to build up, and with those funds you could make restitution to those who are harmed, whether they were consumers or whether they were those who were working in the unsafe workplace, or be able to hire additional officers to assist with the compliance.

Part of the approach that we have heard does cause some concerns for business owners is that there does seem to be an attitude among inspectors when they go into a workplace that they can't leave until they find something to write up, and that is part of the reason that we expressed some concern on behalf of our small-business community about giving excessive powers to our enforcement officers without looking at the other side of things.

We think that the government and its officers can play a role in helping to educate small-business owners about the kinds of practices they can put in place to improve the workplace environment. You can do a carrot-and-stick approach, and those will be the kinds of things that we will be looking for in the bill as well as, if they're not in the bill, putting them forward as amendments.

Once again, I've risen twice to speak in favour of government legislation put forward in this Legislature. On this one I will reserve my support until I'm able to see what kind of amendments we might be able to make through Committee of the Whole, and we'll see in third reading whether or not it is satisfactory to earn my vote. At this moment I do have some serious reservations about how this might work in practice though I do commend the government for the intention behind the bill.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I now recognize the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Madam Speaker. We in the Liberal caucus have discussed this bill and are mostly in favour of it. I have learned to always reserve the final thumbs-up because the devil is always in the details.

This is actually an omnibus bill. It contains changes to three different acts. As a short trip down memory lane, we used to get a much longer period of time to debate omnibus bills. It was 30 minutes at that point, with the idea that if you were having to debate many different bills, you should have more time to be able to do it. Through a series of changes over the last 15 years, I guess, we're now down to 15 minutes to discuss this whether we like it or not.

Happily, there's not a lot of complexity in this bill. It's essentially going through and raising the fines or penalties in each of the sectors. The three different bills that are being analyzed here are the Fair Trading Act, the Occupational Health and Safety Act, and the Safety Codes Act. In each instance, maybe not with the safety codes, they are increasing the administrative penalties to something that is beyond the cost of doing business. The previous ones were in the sort of $15,000 range, and in this day and age, when you're talking about building a house or working on some larger business site or safety codes on a job site, $15,000 is, frankly, the cost of doing business. You just pass it onto the consumer, who's going to buy it in the end. It's not a big deal. I think it's important that we do keep penalties, which are made to dissuade a certain kind of action, current so that they are a dissuasion and not, as I said, the cost of doing business.

As the Leader of the Official Opposition mentioned, when we look at the safety codes part of this, I mean, this is important. People die when these codes aren't followed particularly. Or they're hurt; they're injured for life. It's our business as legislators to try and design a system or to design the overall policy to make sure that everyone is responsible when they create a job site.

As the Liberal critic for Municipal Affairs my piece of this is the safety codes piece. Again, there are small amendments being made here in that they are changing the maximum fines. There was $15,000 for a first offence and $30,000 if you got beyond that. Some people do, and $15,000 or $30,000 in this day and age? Nah. So what they're contemplating in the proposed act is going up to $100,000 for the first and $500,000 for the second. That's more substantial. That, I think, has the effect of saying: that is a lot of business. And that would be darn hard to pass on to the consumer under the guise of, you know, coloured tile or something in the bathroom. You're going to notice that one.

That's important because there's a lot of pressure in this day and age to keep driving down the price of things. This is where I start to disagree with a number of my colleagues in the House. In that competitive marketplace that is so valued by so many of my colleagues here, part of that competition and that competitive edge comes from cutting corners. It comes from skating close to the line.

That efficiency can result in people getting hurt. I work with a lot of the people that come out the other end of that kind of thing. They're trying to exist on AISH or workers' compensation, and it's no fun. Nobody wants to be on government benefits for the rest of their life. Trust me; this is not a happy place to be. You're just in continual poverty. So it's important that we make it clear to all business owners, to anyone running a site in which a safety code has been developed that they adhere to those safety codes and that they make a workplace as safe as they possibly can for people to work in.

At this point I will recommend to and remind everyone that if you really wanted a safe workplace, you would get a union site because union sites have always had a better safety record than any non-union site. That is well documented, and you're welcome to go and look it up. It's true because the union gives, you know, the backing to an individual worker to say: I'm not going to do that; it's not safe. Knowing that they have the union behind them, they're more willing to speak out than somebody that's working on a mom-and-pop operation, who maybe are even related to the mom and pop, and everybody's working hard to try and meet that deadline or get under that particular budget item.

It happens. I don't think people do it deliberately, but if they were reminded that cutting that corner or not putting that particular thing in place could cost them $100,000 the first time out and $500,000 if it was a repeat, that's going to make everybody pause and go: "You know what? Let's just take the extra minute here. Let's just put up the extra scaffold. Let's just move the tools now and get them from underfoot. Let's just recoil that rope over here." That's the point of the legislation. It's been successful if it's made people go and re-examine what they're doing to make sure that they have a safe workplace.

Now, the second piece of this is the monitoring, compliance, and enforcement part of it. This is giving us higher penalties – fair enough – but if we're not monitoring that work site, we're not catching where these potential deficiencies are. We don't want to have to wait until the end product, which is that somebody gets hurt or killed, before people are looking at it and fines are evoked. So I would like to see more monitoring in place.

In this case the monitoring is delegated down to the municipalities. It's one of those long, constitutional devolutions. Blah, blah, blah. Nonetheless, it does come down to the municipalities to do the monitoring of the site, and a lot of municipalities don't have enough money to put enough inspectors out there. Anybody that has been waiting for an inspector to come by and okay something or other will know exactly what I'm talking about. It's so far behind, actually, that it has become pretty commonplace in house building, at least in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, that they've commenced building before the inspector ever comes on the site to okay the first thing that was supposed to happen. They all know that everything is running ahead of the inspectors actually getting there.

This is an area where the government consistently underfunds and/or cuts. The first thing that's going to get cut, the first thing on the chopping block is any monitoring staff, and that is true for any department here. If we want to go through and look at SRD, if we want to look at tourism, anything that has a monitor involved with it or some monitoring capacity is what gets cut. Then everybody, you know, puts their panties on their head and runs around when a disaster happens going: how did we miss this? Well, you missed it.

Mr. Anderson: I have never run around with panties on my head.

Ms Blakeman: Well, that's a good thing, and I'm glad to hear that from the hon. member. But, you know, we don't want it to reach that stage. Honestly. We don't want it to reach that stage.

We want that omission, that shortcoming, that lack of full fulfillment of a safety code to be caught early, not caught when somebody has actually been hurt or killed by it or some sort of disaster is triggered or whatever. You know, people look to government. You can think of those people that when a disaster happens, what do they do? They turn to the government and say: "Why didn't you do something? Why didn't you the government catch this? That's your job." It's true because the only group that can be trusted to monitor something in an unbiased way and consistently is government.

Now, this is going to lead into my having a short tangent here about how much this government tends to farm out monitoring practices and have industry self-monitor. Bad, bad idea for exactly all of those reasons because they may stay a little close to the line, and as a result stuff is going to get by. I think monitoring should be one of the things that government does. Unlike my colleagues, I think there is a role for government, and I think that monitoring is one of those roles, ensuring compliance and enforcement, frankly. What we are getting here is a piece that is improving, one would hope, the enforcement because it's not actually making the enforcement happen, but it's saying: okay, you did bad, and now we're going to fine you.

The second thing that's happening is that there is a limitation – well, I'm sorry. It's written as a limitation period of three years for prosecution of offences under this. That's just the language of the legislation. Actually, it's increasing it from six months, but it's always written as, "If you pass the three-year mark, then you're too late to prosecute it," rather than saying that you have up until this time. So a three-year limitation for prosecution of offences under this. Much better than six months.

You know, just given how fast some sectors are going and how slow other sectors are going, like the courts, trying to get something through or doing the back work that is needed to go forward to try and lay charges and prosecute an offence like this, you need that extra time – I mean, six months for a lawyer; that's not going to happen – for the court system. Let's make it what really works. I think the government has done the right thing here. They certainly had lots of advice, as far as I can tell, on how to go through with that.

Let me just quickly check to see if I was supposed to say anything on behalf of my colleagues. I think not.

Mr. Donovan: I want to run around with my panties; I can't wait.

Ms Blakeman: No. Honestly, you guys. It's funny, but you do not want to be doing that because that's when disaster has struck, and you look like fools. That's the problem, whether it's the company or the government that ends up doing that. You all know what I mean. You've seen those deer-in-the-headlights CEOs caught on television going: I had no idea. Well, yes, you did. That's not the position you want to be in.

Oh, one thing: the Fair Trading Act. That is a really cool piece of legislation, oft-ignored and underappreciated, in my opinion, because it is one of the few pieces of consumer protection legislation that we still have under this government. At one point – you will be amazed – there used to be a department of consumer protection. You're kidding. No, Laurie. It's absolutely true. There was an entire department, and now we are down to a couple of little acts and a bureau. No, wait: a desk in somebody's department buried deep in Service Alberta.

So we're grateful that there's still the Fair Trading Act, and when I get a chance to speak to this in Committee of the Whole, I'll be sure to wax on about how important the Fair Trading Act is because there's a lot of stuff hidden in there, and I want to get started on talking about Ticketmaster and secondary sales of tickets again. But I'll wait until we are in Committee of the Whole to be talking about that.

Thank you very much for the opportunity. As I said, my caucus is giving this a tentative thumbs-up, and I appreciate the opportunity to bring a few concerns to the floor.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I would remind the members that naming a member in the House is not something that we do, even if that's naming yourself, I suspect. Thank you very much.

We now have a five-minute comment period, and that's under 29(2)(a). Are there any members that have a comment or would like to ask a question of the Member for Edmonton-Centre? The Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Would you have anything else you would like to add to that because you've tantalized us on a couple of things that you might bring up next.

Ms Blakeman: Well, I started to talk about the Fair Trading Act, and then I said that I would hold it over because if you actually look at that act, it covers a whole range of things that you hardly ever think of.

Secondary ticket sales is one of the things that this government promises me is being looked after or could be prosecuted under the Fair Trading Act. This was an issue that I had brought up with the government sometime ago, before it was sort of fashionable. You'll all know what secondary ticket sales are now. That's when they go on sale at Ticketmaster and you hear that they were on sale for one second before they sold out. Then you find out that there's another website you can go to. It actually probably gives you a little pop-up that says, "Didn't get your ticket? Go visit Second Sell," or whatever the name of the secondary site is. You go there and, indeed, tickets to the concert that you want – holy mackerel – are five times the price of what was on the original site or was the original cost of the tickets.

I brought this up because I represent a lot of technicians and stagecraft people that work, for example, in rock concerts and big touring shows that come through. They get paid based on the size of the house, and the size of the house is based on the number of seats times the cost of the ticket. So if the ticket is in there at 50 bucks times X number of seats, they're going to get paid at a certain rate. But, in fact, if most of the people that buy tickets have now paid $500 for the ticket, those people should have been paid more money. That's the deal. And those are people that live here, and they spend their paycheques here, and they pay their mortgage here, and they buy their groceries here, and the money stays here in Alberta. These are just plain old working folks that happen to work in the theatre or in special events.

I came into this because I was trying to make sure that they would get paid as was the way their contract was set up. The government didn't agree with me quite so much and wiped out the one portion that was protecting them at the time by saying that the Fair Trading Act was going to protect them. I haven't yet seen the government actually invoke the Fair Trading Act to protect these people, and they're certainly well aware of the problem with Ticketmaster now. Ontario, interestingly enough, did actually bring through an act that specifically addressed secondary ticket sales, and I will continue on that during Committee of the Whole.

Thank you so much.

3:30

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We still have two minutes if anyone else would like to comment or question.

Ms Blakeman: I didn't use the whole five minutes?

The Acting Speaker: No.

Seeing none, we'll move on to our next speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise with some interest to speak to Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes and Amendment Act, 2012. I can feel and see that although it is perhaps somewhat of a housekeeping bill, it does in fact cover quite a wide breadth of legislation in a number of different ministries or at least different legislation, including the changes to the Fair Trading Act, the Occupational Health and Safety Act, and also, I believe, something to do with the Safety Codes Act. I'm here to try to raise some areas of interest that each of these sections pertains to, to both workers and protection of Albertans. I think that to some degree I'm feeling favourable towards this bill although I think there are a number of areas where we can focus our efforts perhaps more specifically and perhaps make some minor changes with the assistance of some of my colleagues.

The bill seems to make minor but really quite significant changes to occupational health and safety legislation, especially in regard to penalties, but we also have this nagging feeling that it ignores some of these larger issues that we have been advocating and that other groups have been advocating for years; namely, the extension of the Occupational Health and Safety Act and the Workers' Compensation Act to include all paid farm workers.

Now, currently health and safety regulation excludes domestic workers such as nannies and housekeepers and so forth, federal government employees and workers in federally regulated industries like banks and transportation companies, people that cross provincial borders, television and radio broadcasters, and farmers and certain agricultural workers. According to workers' advocacy groups such as the Alberta Federation of Labour Alberta remains the only province where farm workers are excluded from occupational health and safety legislation. Of course, we've heard a great deal of information about this, and quite frankly I think it's something that we could do in this bill and in other forms of legislation to rectify that situation.

This bill has been sort of advertised as legislation to protect the health and safety of Albertans, increase protections for Albertans, with changes to ensure that offenders can no longer assume that penalties for safety code violations are just simply the cost of doing business. Well, I must say that there are some areas where we do find concern. Certainly, in the level of the fines as outlined in this new bill, we think that perhaps they are still somewhat low. Certainly, there are, like I said, other areas where we could include more workers under protective acts here in this provincial Legislature.

The bill is providing the ability for the director of the Fair Trading Act to levy administrative penalties to a maximum of $100,000 to all businesses regulated by the act regardless of whether a licence is required or not. I notice an appeals process will also be established, and I think that's a reasonable addition. Certainly, the prosecution of an offence under the Fair Trading Act can no longer occur more than three years after the offence. This bill is changing, I believe, that three-year limitation period as well. A question, I guess, that's brought up in this bill is about whether the consumer knew or ought to have known that the offence was committed. I would just like to question how we would determine that. It seems to be a somewhat open-ended part of this that I was wondering about when I was reading the language of this legislation.

Also, the idea of the Occupational Health and Safety Act: currently officers can educate and can issue orders to reinforce compliance, and if those measures do not achieve a compliance, then the alternative is, of course, prosecution. This bill will allow the government to levy administrative penalties against persons regulated by OHS legislation. I have a question about that that we can perhaps delve into further in Committee of the Whole. In fact, an OHS expert has told us that administrative penalties are a good deal for all minor violations that government does not want to take to court. In effect, they are an intermediate tool to hold violators to account. Therefore, we can say that the bill is perhaps – and this is up for debate – an enabling measure, really, to allow officers to levy administrative penalties.

The bill does not seem to define the specific regulations that would lead to the levying of an administrative penalty rather than a prosecution in court. This is perhaps something that we can provide some further illumination on here in the House during the second or third reading.

As well, I just wanted to ask in regard to OHS officers. They know which offences will receive administrative penalties and which ones will be prosecuted in court. How could they know that if there are no specific regulations that are included in this bill? Again, just a point of clarification that I wanted to bring forward.

I certainly recognize the need to compile and make these updates in Bill 6. As I say, I think that we are working on a couple of amendments that might help to clarify these issues and others. Certainly, I have, with some reservations, a positive message to bring during second reading.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Are there any members who would like to ask a question or make a comment? The Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I listened to my colleague here talk about worker safety with workers' comp for farmers. Could you elaborate? I guess I want to hear your take on it.

Mr. Eggen: Sure. Absolutely. We know that it's been a sensitive issue all of the years that I've been involved in the Legislature but also with my family involved in farming as well. By not having the same coverage for farm workers as other workers might enjoy, then we have people that are left exposed to injury without compensation. Now, I know that we need to have some rules around this to ensure that we're not putting unfair penalties onto family farming operations, but I think that's probably where we need to make those definitions more clear.

We all know what's happening in the countryside. Farms are getting larger. They're becoming, ostensibly, medium- to sometimes very large-sized businesses. Maybe they will stand under the auspices of a family farm, but in reality it is a large commercial industrial operation that hires and employs lots of workers on wages. There's got to be a way – other provinces have done it – to extend benefits, especially workers' compensation benefits, to farm workers. I think we need to revisit that, not just under this sort of legislation but under definitions of what constitutes a family farm, a commercial operation, or a large industrial operation. Does that help?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

We still have three minutes under Standing Order 29(2)(a). I recognize the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

3:40

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I'm just picking up on what the Member for Edmonton-Calder was saying. I had always approached this as: what's important is paid farm workers. Part of the way the government wiggles out of this is by constantly standing up and talking about, you know, cherubic farm children that are working for mom and dad. It's not family members that we're trying to get at and protect. It's paid farm workers. I'm thinking of one fellow I knew who literally was paid $500 a month, and that was it. He lived on-site and was on duty, essentially, 24 hours a day or was expected to be and didn't own a thing and could never get out of it at 500 bucks a month.

Mr. Donovan: Sounds like the guy that owns the farm.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, but he actually has an asset. The worker had nothing, and that's the difference. He was just ripped off, frankly, and he could never get himself going. He didn't have enough money and couldn't save enough money to buy a truck or, you know, even to get away from there or have a holiday. He didn't get any holidays. It was just really awful.

I'm restricting my campaign on this to paid farm workers, but I'm interested to hear from the member if he's looking to include all farm workers.

Thank you.

Mr. Eggen: Well, I believe that the most pressing, obvious injustice that we have in regard to not having workers' compensation and so forth and unemployment insurance for farm workers is with the paid commercial farm workers. I think that's the low-hanging fruit, to use a cliché that I don't like to use, actually, the most obvious, pressing thing, that we're the only province in the country that fails to do so.

You know, there's the larger issue, I think, in terms of occupational health and safety coverage for other people as well like domestic workers that I think that we deserve to visit as well because more people are bringing in domestic workers, it seems, and that's another issue that I have an interest in.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other members wishing to comment or question? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw. You have 20 seconds.

Excuse me, hon. member. Are you speaking under 29(2)(a) or speaking on the bill?

Mr. Wilson: I'm sorry, Madam Speaker. I was planning to speak on the bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you. Go ahead.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is a pleasure to stand here and comment on the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012. Obviously, as we've heard today, there are three bills that are being impacted by this, and I do think that it's an important piece of legislation. I think that, you know, there are improvements that can be made, and I just want to talk through a few of them, starting with the Fair Trading Act and, I guess, the overall principle of protecting Albertans from business operators that wilfully take advantage of workers or customers.

The reality is that there are people out there who possess such little integrity and strength of character – and they're only out for themselves – that we need to have legislation that will allow and provide for the director the ability to levy these administrative penalties to penalize companies who don't follow the rules.

I have a couple of examples that I'd like to share, one of which has impacted members in my very constituency of Calgary-Shaw. There's a gentleman who had – I don't know if "gentleman" is the correct word for it. There's an individual who's been charged, and he was running a contracting business. Now, this contractor would go to various individuals and do up estimates and quotes to do work in their homes, renovate their kitchens. He'd take deposits.

He would never get the work done. He'd hire other contractors, who would then go in and start some of the work, but then he wouldn't actually pay those contractors. The contractor that he had hired would then leave the job half done, leaving these families with absolutely no recourse.

Now, this individual continued doing this over and over and over again until he was eventually in the hole or owing some of his creditors in the range of $1.5 million. What makes matters worse is that not only was there no recourse for the consumers in the first place to get that money back, nor was there recourse for the contractors that he had hired to go and start working for him, but he actually was able to start up another company under another name and do the whole thing over again. It's absolutely shameful. I'm hopeful that what we see in this act will start to prevent some of these people from wilfully taking advantage of others. You know, if someone is in this situation, where they're clearly bankrupt or they have no way of paying back the creditors that they owe, I'm unsure how a fine is really going to impact what they're going to do, but I'm hopeful that at least it would stop them from going and starting up another company and doing the rinse-repeat to other people.

Now, there's another example that I'd like to share as well. This is a story of an individual that I personally had done business with through the last company I worked at before being elected. Our company did business with him. He wilfully contracted our company to provide services for a very large and well-known event that took place in the city of Calgary. It was incredibly high profile. There were dozens of vendors that this individual and his corporation, I guess, strung along, that they would be getting paid after the event. Unfortunately for many of us, we didn't.

The hard reality is that there are laws that protect people like this. What this individual did is: the day after the event he filed for insolvency. That gave him, I guess, a green light to not pay any of those bills. There was no recourse. Lawsuits were filed.

Mr. Anderson: Who was that?

Mr. Wilson: Actually, it's interesting that you should ask. He was the former chief of staff to the Premier.

This is an individual who after filing insolvency – again, this is a very personal story. It was a fact. I was the individual responsible for negotiating with him around our services.

Ms Blakeman: He ripped off IATSE, too.

Mr. Wilson: Yes, absolutely, he ripped off IATSE. Yeah. There's no question he did.

Ms Blakeman: It came to thousands of dollars.

Mr. Wilson: Yes. There are lawsuits that are still filed, I think. Ours was in the range of $70,000.

The reality is: he files for insolvency, does not pay the bills. The next day he starts a company under a new name, operating out of the same building that he was in in downtown Calgary. He moves his office furniture, sells some of it, doesn't advise the creditors that he's selling off assets even though he's claimed insolvency and he's making money. Then, obviously, you know, this individual has gained some notoriety for some political success that he's had since then.

Again, it's incredibly unfortunate that there is no recourse for a number of these creditors. Let's keep in mind that we are not only talking about IATSE, a large union. I think it was about $30,000 that they were stiffed.

Ms Blakeman: It was a lot of money, and the union covered it.

Mr. Wilson: Sure. Exactly.

We're talking about small businesses as well. We're talking about small businesses where, you know, a $10,000 hit is enough for them to not be able to pay the bills that month, to not be able to make the rent. The reality is that without recourse to stop individuals like this from continuing behaviour that is clearly devoid of character, when there is intent and there is wilful intent – there is no possible way that that individual thought he would be able to pay those bills the week before the event was going to happen, but he allowed it to happen.

Had that individual suggested to some of those vendors, "Listen, this might not go as planned. Are you able to cut us a break? Let's start negotiating now because we're in trouble," I'm sure a lot of those vendors would have stepped up out of respect for the fact that it was the Dalai Lama coming to Calgary to address a crowd. I'm sure that for the people of Calgary those vendors would have said: "You know what? For the benefit of all citizens here let's not prevent them from being able to enjoy this."

But that never happened. Insolvency was filed. Lawsuits were filed. Lawsuits were never paid. The individual was hired by the Premier and now is on Power & Politics on CBC. He's on CTV. He's writing a book, and hopefully in that book we have a little chapter on how to get away with things.

Mrs. Forsyth: How about integrity?

Mr. Wilson: I doubt you'll find a chapter on integrity in that book.

The reality is that the Fair Trading Act, hopefully, will now have the teeth to prevent these sorts of actions moving forward. So in that sense I'm fully supportive of this part of the bill.

3:50

The occupational health and safety side of this act: I think there are a lot of positives here as well. The Auditor General has clearly asked this government to take some action with regard to ensuring that workplace safety is a paramount concern moving forward, and I think that some of these administrative penalties are going to help achieve that. It was first asked for, I believe, in the April 2010 Auditor General's report and again mentioned in July 2012. But we have some movement. We have some action. Small steps are sometimes good steps. We do have some concerns, obviously, about overzealous OH and S officers or how these fines are going to be impacted just by the will of an officer as opposed to actually having a set guideline as to how they can levy these fines because there is a pretty high maximum.

We're encouraged to see that there is a provision for smaller fines to be handed out to the individual worker if they're not following code. There is an amount of responsibility. It's incumbent upon the worker to follow the safety code just as it is upon the employers who are there trying to protect these guys and girls and women and men who are out there every single day. If you're not wearing steel-toed boots on a construction site, it's not always the employer who needs to be the one who catches the fine for that. Losing a day's wage is, I believe, an incentive or a disincentive to change behaviour. In this case, I think that it's probably a positive thing.

The private sector and the oil and gas sector have led the way in workplace safety in our province. They preach safety. It is their number one concern because they recognize that the people that work for them are their most important asset. Without them they're nothing. I think that it's good to see that our government across the floor here is starting to recognize that as well, and they're starting to follow some of these recommendations from our Auditor General.

With regard to the creative settlements, again, I applaud the Leader of the Official Opposition for her idea of having a fund set aside so that when some of these large fines are levied by OH and S, the government will be able to force payment of these, based on this act, whereas perhaps before there was an issue with that. I'd really like to see that money go to a good cause, to go to further educating some of our workplaces, to go to further educating on the best practices of safety standards. I think that an amendment that our hon. leader will be bringing forward, hopefully, will address some of these things.

The reality is that our economy and everything that we have here in Alberta is dependent on workers being able to go to work, feel safe, feel secure, go home at night, get up, and do it again. We've had other conversations about this earlier this week as well.

With regard to the third section, which takes into account the Safety Codes Act, there are some, again, increased fines. I think that anyone who was privy to the story of that tragedy that happened in Calgary with the three-year-old girl who was killed by a windstorm and improperly secured metal – it just breaks the heart of anyone who hears it. It infuriates the blood of anyone who also heard that the maximum fine that was allowed at the time was $15,000, for the life of a three-year-old child, because they didn't follow code. It's awful. It's very encouraging to see that now with new increased maximums in this area, we're going to be able to actually put some teeth into that so that when something as serious and as tragic and as devastating as the death of an infant happens on downtown Calgary streets in the province of Alberta, the people responsible are going to pay, and they're going to pay dearly.

Perhaps some clarification by the ministry would be appreciated with regard specifically to section 40.3(3). Are we sure that the daily fine of $10,000 can only be applied once a person has received a notice of a violation? In other words, the two-year limit for a fine in 40.3(5) wouldn't mean that a company would have to pay a daily fine going back two years? Again, just seeking clarity. Also, with regard to specific regulations concerning these multiday fines in cases where there is no imminent danger and a company can't get the needed subcontractor back to fix something right away, what kind of recourse would there be?

The only other question that I would raise is around the prime contractors, Madam Speaker. I just consider it from a residential building construction perspective. If, for example, a builder in a development is building two dozen homes at a time, are they as the prime contractor now expected to have a safety officer in every single one of those building sites, which is clearly unreasonable? [interjection] Sure. I appreciate your feedback, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

I guess what I'm wondering is: are we passing legislation that is unrealistic to be followed? If we are, in the sense of something like residential construction are we setting ourselves up for some sort of failure? I fully understand why we would do this on large construction sites. But if we're in a development where there are two dozen homes being built by a single builder, is it okay for them as the prime contractor for all of those builds to have one safety individual in that community, or are they, again, expected to now have a single prime contractor represented in every single one of those homes? Let's be realistic. If they are, those costs will simply be passed down to the homebuyer. I think that we need to be realistic about whether or not that would be followed. The feedback that we've received from stakeholders in the industry is that that just simply would not be.

Other than that, I look forward to continuing to debate this legislation. I look forward to seeing some teeth, and I do applaud the work that has been done by these three ministries to come together on this bill and actually get something done.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Now we have Standing Order 29(2)(a). I recognize the hon. House leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was tempted to rise on a point of order but decided it was more appropriate to wait until comments and questions and just raise the fact.

The latter part of the hon. member's speech I was very interested in, but the earlier part of his speech took quite a considerable amount of time relative to an incident that happened in his life. I understand that might have been a very traumatic incident. It might have been a very difficult incident. But I would remind the member that under the rules of the House we have immunity in this House to say pretty much anything we want to say in the course of doing our business. It's not really appropriate under the rules to talk about someone outside the House who cannot be here to defend themselves. While I have no doubt that the comments he made were well intended, under the rules it is totally inappropriate to be talking about somebody who is clearly identifiable outside the House who is not here to get up and return those comments.

Rather than raise that as a point of order, I'd just remind the hon. member to read 493(4) of Beauchesne's.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Government House Leader. Point well made.

Is there anyone else who would like to comment under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I would ask if there are any members who would like to speak on this bill? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you, colleagues. Everyone believes in safety and fairness. It's like motherhood and apple pie. It's the golden rule: treat others the way you'd like to be treated. Who dares speak out against safety? Not me. It's a just and worthy goal.

Government has a role in encouraging this and in helping ensure that people are safe when they go to work, that the public is protected when they're near work sites, and that consumers are treated fairly. The standard approach is to create proper rules and regulations on how this will be accomplished, with set penalties for violations. This is best done, I believe, with input from all stakeholders. Who knows better where dangers lie than a company's front-line workers? Few know better what accidents cost than the companies that have to pay for remediation and the consequences of them.

As a businessman I can tell you that accidents cost far more than education and training in safe operating practices; 28.38 grams of prevention really are worth more than 0.454 kilograms of cure. That doesn't roll off the tongue like an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, does it? Thanks to others, we have to use those references.

The theory behind stiffer penalties and fines is that businesses and providers will be hurt so much by the fine that they'll be motivated to be safer and fairer. Brush your teeth or they'll fall out: the fear factor. To some extent this works, but alone, I submit, it's not enough and never will be. I know the phrase, "Hi, I'm from the government; I'm here to help" is the punchline from a joke, but it doesn't have to be.

I believe Albertans would like to see occupational health and safety and relevant government agencies and personnel act more as a resource to industry and business to help educate and assist them with compliance, safety, and prevention. We believe OH and S and other regulators and enforcers can do more good by consulting with business owners and managers to help them develop safe practices. Because inspectors have the opportunity to visit so many more workplaces and have investigated and seen so many more accidents, their knowledge of problem areas and potential dangers is likely much larger than that of most business owners.

When I operated my oil field services company, we had a commercial motor vehicle inspector who was very thorough. No matter what we did, he'd find some reason to hold up our trucks and give us a ticket for some infraction. Finally, we arranged a meeting. I expressed my frustration and asked if he could change his paradigm. "Our violations and your fines and delays are costing us money, morale, and goodwill with our customers. We want to operate legally," I told him. "Could you be a resource to us? Could you come to a staff meeting and teach us about the kinds of things you're looking for in an attempt to keep the highways safer?"

He said that he'd much rather do this than give out tickets but that no one had ever asked him before. Within a short time this former, well, enemy, shall I say, became a vital part of helping our little company become safer and more compliant. He was happier, and so were we. Morale rose, costs fell, customers received better service, and our new friend was more respected and appreciated.

We believe in free enterprise. We think prices are the best allocator of scarce resources. Competition is the best guarantee of value for your money. People can buy a surround system at a wholesale store for a fraction of the cost of buying it from a specialty electronics dealer, but they have to haul it home and install it themselves. That might be worth it to one, but someone else might not be as handy or might want a more professional system with delivery and installation included. Is she being gouged or taken advantage of? We don't think so because she had alternatives and options.

Because of competition, consumers have choices. One of the prices of such freedom is the responsibility to perform our own due diligence. Before we buy a car or kitchen appliance, we can talk to people, go online, or check consumer reports to find ratings about features, reliability, and warranty. We can compare prices and even find online suppliers for most things. We don't have to shop at or use the services of a supplier who we think is gouging us. Who's to say what gouging is? Isn't that a bit subjective? One person may place a higher value on ease and immediacy than another person does.

Should a government department punish a supplier who knows the cost of his business, including the risks, and couldn't survive unless he was meeting the needs of that segment of society that constitutes his customers? Just because a person is willing to pay more for something than someone else is doesn't mean he's being ripped off. Such overregulation may eliminate a choice that he currently values and is making with full or limited knowledge. We don't know that a nanny state approach is required. Do we need an enhanced government agency to threaten a fine and fine a business who doesn't treat customers fairly? The marketplace guarantees such enterprises will soon fail because people will quit buying or using their services.

Now, the point that my colleague raised about those businesses that somehow skirt and get around rules and regulations: those need to be dealt with, of course. They shouldn't be allowed to be resurrected from time to time to perpetuate their frauds. But businesses will fail ultimately if they don't treat people fairly and cost-effectively.

We do not think government has a role in protecting people from their own ignorance. If they receive zeros for failing to turn in assignments, they have already learned that choices have consequences. Come to think of it, if schools continue that practice, maybe there is such a need for these extra regulations.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Would any other members like to comment or question the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner?

Seeing none at this time, we'll move on to our next speaker. I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to stand up and debate Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012. One of the things that I mentioned in my response to the Speech from the Throne was how proud I was to be a member of the opposition. I have to tell you – and I've said this in the Legislature before, actually, when we were sitting in a party of four – about the opportunities that arise as a member of the opposition. I've said in this Legislature before how much I respected members of the opposition for their ability to get up and stand and speak on any piece of legislation, which, I can say, was a huge learning curve for me as a former member of government, where you had your speeches all handed to you. I am actually pleased to stand up and speak on the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, 2012.

In our caucus what we do have, which is very nice and I am forever thankful for, is critics that are responsible for the bills. I've been on the critic side where we've . . . [interjection] Sorry, Madam Speaker. I have a new member that just loves to agitate. He's having all sorts of fun giving me a hard time, but, you know, it makes me feel young again.

We had a meeting this morning after a very early breakfast with Team Lethbridge. Our member dragged us out bright and early at 7:30 this morning. We were back into session at 8:30, getting a briefing note on the bill that I would like to talk about. I had some questions because, like everybody else in this Legislature, you're busy trying to take care of your constituency. You're busy trying to take care of your own critic position. I found this bill very interesting in the fact that it's a joint bill which has actually taken three separate pieces of legislation.

My question to the critic at the time was: is this an omnibus piece of legislation? He eloquently – and he's done a very, very good job, actually, the Member for Calgary-Shaw – spoke about how they're taking the Fair Trading Act, which comes under Service Alberta obviously, the Occupational Health and Safety Act, under Human Services, and the Safety Codes Act, under Municipal Affairs, and bringing it under one piece of legislation.

I notice that we have a new member carrying this piece of legislation forward. Having had the opportunity to meet him in the summer, I know that he'll do a good job of answering the questions that we're going to be able to ask him in this second reading.

Our Official Opposition leader, from Highwood, has talked about how she felt about what we're going to do with the fines and how we're going to utilize the fines. When we spoke about that this morning, it made me appreciate why I'm here because she always comes up with a lot of these bright things that I sometimes wish I had beaten her to the track on and I could take the credit for. We talked about that fact that she thought it was important that we set up a fund so that people could access the fund. As the former Solicitor General I know that it worked very successfully. The victims of crime fund was good for victims of crime. She touched on the fact that she would like to bring forward an amendment, and I'm sure that we'll see that when we get into the process of Committee of the Whole.

One of the things that act talks about under the sections under the Fair Trading Act, which now has been incorporated into Bill 6, the Protection and Compliance Statutes Amendment Act, is to provide the ability for the director to allow penalties, obviously, up to a maximum of $100,000. We support that. For penalties over $500 the notices of offences will be given in advance. Madam Speaker, there are many things that we like about this. We think that Albertans have to be treated fairly in the course of business transactions. It's important to keep customer confidence high.

I know that when I was the critic under Service Alberta and I was going through estimates, that was one of the things that I asked the minister about at the time, the compliances that were following under him. It also gives the government more tools to penalize companies who don't follow the rules and take advantage of workers or customers. Well, Madam Speaker, who could not accept that as a good recommendation and something that should be incorporated in the bill. I think that Albertans expect us to do that, and I think they expect the government to do that. You always wonder, when you're dealing with the legislation from the government, why these things weren't incorporated in the bill the first time. So we're pleased that the government is doing that.

We've heard in the conversations that some of our members have spoken about dealing with shady operators and the scams, and I think everybody can tell a personal story about the shady operator and the scam. I know a passion for you is the shady scams and the shady operators that we hear about who are taking advantage of our vulnerable seniors, who are so trustworthy. You know, they want their porch fixed or they need something in their house fixed, and the shady operator or shady scam dealer says – and, you know, I'm not an electrician by any means, Madam Speaker, or anything else – they're going to have to rip off the roof and all of that stuff to provide the small, little thing that the senior wants, to fix their porch. I think probably that's a great thing that we need to incorporate in this bill.

One of the things that we have to be concerned about is taking the ability of the court. You know, it's something that we've discussed in the House because we think that ultimately, for anything everybody should have the ability to have the courts as a recourse if they want to have a recourse if they don't like a fine. We can see that when we're driving. You know, we can get pulled over for speeding, and we always have that ability. That's one of the things that the Wildrose Party does very, very well. When we're talking about the Fair Trading Act under Service Alberta, it's always nice to be able to talk to what's going on with the consumers and our stakeholders.

I think the Occupational Health and Safety Act, which falls under Human Services, is something that all the opposition parties and, we know, the Auditor General have called for more enforcement under. I'm sure not only will the Auditor General be happy that we're seeing this brought forward under Human Services, but there's no question that we think Albertans need a safer place to work. I think it was last week alone that we saw three deaths in a row – bang, bang, bang – workplace injuries.

I know I sat with one of my staff this morning when we were getting prepared for a question, and he was sharing that his absenteeism yesterday was due to a funeral, and it just happened to be that one of his friends was killed in a workplace accident very suddenly. You know, those kinds of personal stories that you hear when you ask what happened, obviously, hit home. I'm sure everybody can share where they think work safety is important. I mean, we hear of accidents.

Both of my sons work in the workplace. One is with the rigs, and no one needs to know how dangerous the rigs can be. He's a driller. We know that that's obvious. The other is a refrigeration and air conditioning mechanic, but that doesn't mean that there doesn't have to be work safety, especially when he's going into a store to make sure that the food we eat is safe.

I don't think anyone is going to dispute some of the things that we're seeing in the Occupational Health and Safety Act. I know that our critic, the Member for Calgary-Shaw, is on top of this. He has talked to us about how he feels the Occupational Health and Safety Act is going to be strengthened.

We then go into the safety codes, and it's increasing the maximum fines to $100,000 for the first offence and $500,000 for a second or any other offence after that. I think the public and the opposition parties have called for increases to the safety code fines.

There are all the things in the bill that we like, and there are some things that we're going to be watching. Our critic has mentioned to us that he's going to have some time over the weekend to be able to talk to some of the people, for example, with the Home Builders' Association. We would like to get some clarification of their concerns.

Madam Speaker, with those few comments I'll sit down and listen to the rest of the debate.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Under Standing Order 29(2)(a), are there any other members that wish to comment or ask any questions?

Are there any other members that would like to speak on the bill in second reading?

If not, I will call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West to close debate.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'd like to close the debate.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

[Motion carried; Bill 6 read a second time]

Bill 9

Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2012

[Adjourned debate October 24: Mr. Horner]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I don't understand why you got the robes from that place, but I never see you wearing the robes from that place. I don't get it. It's throwing me off. I want to see the robes.

The Acting Speaker: They're not ready yet.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Sorry. I just had to ask.

Madam Speaker, Bill 9 is obviously, for the most part, a housekeeping bill. It deals with some insurance provisions and some other things in our tax code and so forth to bring ourselves in line with certain things that are federal in nature. My only criticism of it is that it would be nice to have a little bit more time to consult on a bill of such a technical nature with folks that are expert in these areas.

That said, it seems fair in nature. I'm always a little bit worried that there is a little bit of – essentially, it's a correction of a taxation issue with those who insure pleasure crafts, and it will result in more revenue from taxation going to government very indirectly, I guess. I'm going to say that I am never in favour of any tax increase, and that would include the one here as much as it is very, very small.

It does bring it in line with other folks, so I think we'll give it a pass in that regard. But I would urge the government to be very, very careful and to not find reasons to nickel and dime folks. I'm not saying that this was the case here, but let's do everything we can to keep taxes low and not find excuses to raise them or find ways to grab a few hundred thousand or a few million here and there because that seems to become habitual for politicians if we start.

With that, I would be happy to see this bill voted on.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any other members who wish to speak on Bill 9? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

4:20

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Madam Speaker. Well, my goodness. This is a hodgepodge of various bits and pieces that have all found their way into this particular bill. Watch this. It's a red-letter day because I'm going to agree with my colleague from Airdrie. You know, the briefing was great – thanks very much – but we like to revolve through and have an opportunity to run bills by stakeholder groups, and there just isn't time to do that given the timeline that the government is on.

By the way, given that the government can call us at any time and is in complete control of the agenda, they could have just started earlier in October if they were really interested in this. They don't seem to want to do that, but they want to get through everything by December. So it's made it hard for me. I'm not going to be able to give this a big wahoo, you know, thumbs-up, let's go, approval on it because I haven't been able to go back and talk to the people that would give us feedback on this bill. I mean, it's lined up, it's coming, but there was just no way we could do that kind of a turnaround in 48 hours.

The bill covers a whole bunch of stuff, a lot of stuff around science and research taxes. There's some attempt – it looks like insurance companies were able to claim from a pot of money both federally and provincially, and they're cutting that off. Well, darn. I'm sorry. That sounds really snide, and I don't want to pick on the insurance companies because, you know, they're just out there in their tattered rags huddled on the corner weeping in the cold. I know how tough it is for them. But what's fair is fair.

I mean, one of the things that the Liberals keep raising is that the government has a revenue problem. I would say that we're spending probably about the right amount. I'm just going to argue where you're spending it. But the revenue is a real problem. When we are subsidizing every single day the operations of the government by 30 per cent with oil and gas revenue that came out of the ground yesterday, that's a bad sign. So anything that the government can be doing to close loopholes that people or corporations are able to take advantage of is a good thing because at this point we need every penny to be able to cover what's going on. Closing that loophole looks like a good idea.

The marine insurance one is interesting. It looks like they were totally exempt. If you had a pleasure craft, which I'm assuming is not my father's fishing boat but something a little larger and probably with a motor, if you were paying insurance on that, then the insurance was tax deductible, and it no longer will be after this. Fair enough.

A couple of other ones caught my attention as I was trying to read my way through this. Oh, the kind of double appeal, where if a corporation had already negotiated a settlement with the feds, they couldn't then appeal to Alberta courts for a different sort of deal. They're going to have to do the same thing. That looks reasonable to me as well.

I'm admitting that I'm being slightly hoist on my own petard on the bit around using the individual's personal information to go after the individual directors on the board if the corporation has defaulted. Every day I hear another story about how somebody's personal, private records or their privacy has been violated mostly because either the government has allowed too many people to watch them or take their information or the people that have the information are using it for a reason that it wasn't collected for.

So this is the pointy bit for me. Would it be fair to go after those corporate directors if the corporation has failed? Well, I know that in the not-for-profit world there was a theatre in Edmonton that defaulted. I think it was actually officially going under, and they did come after the directors, who were just on a board of directors for a little tiddlywink theatre that had a budget of, like, $125,000, not a big deal. But they each got nailed, and they each paid for a long time to cover off that debt. Was that appropriate? Yep, it was because as directors they were supposed to be overseeing the policy and making sure that that company had good advice to be able to operate in a reasonable and fiscally responsible way. They had a fiduciary responsibility.

I'm very uncomfortable about using people's personal information. I agree that in this instance, this instance only – don't slop over into anything else – it probably is appropriate to be using the information to try and exact the payment, extract it from the directors if the corporation defaulted. The money is owed to the province, which is to the people. It should be collected. I hope that, when implemented, it will encourage those directors to conduct the business of the corporation in a way that is mindful of the fact that this money does go to the citizens of the province. I think that sometimes there's too much attention paid to the corporate profit line and not enough to the effects of what the corporation is doing.

Now, I actually understand that the issue I was just talking about, which is using that personal information, has actually been allowed for quite a while, but this is just going to protect the government from litigation and make it so that those individual directors couldn't come back and sue them. Again, probably fair enough. I really don't feel enough on top of this to go whole hog with this, so I'm going to have the critic take the time to meet with those people that could give us some feedback on this bill, and I will reserve judgment on the principle of it until such time.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Pursuant to Standing Order 29(2)(a) we have two minutes if there are any members who would like to comment or question the Member for Edmonton-Centre. The Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Well, I'd like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Centre for her thoughtful comments. I'm just looking through, and having been briefed on this Bill 9, I certainly am interested in speaking at length on it. I just want to make sure that you have an idea. I guess the one area that I found interesting was this change on pleasure crafts and boats so that there was a way by which you could have a marine craft – I don't know if the member has a boat herself; I know she has a Ski-Doo. People were somehow not paying the same rate of insurance for their recreational boat. You know, I was just thinking about this. I know we don't have a very large commercial fishery here in the province of Alberta, but I'm just wondering if you maybe thought of some commercial fishers that we do have and then some of the commercial tour operators of boats that we have, too?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. I hesitate to interrupt, but the House stands adjourned until Monday at 1:30 p.m. Thank you.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, October 29, 2012

Prayers

The Speaker: Let us pray and thereafter remain standing for the singing of our national anthem. As we begin this week of our duties in this Assembly, we ask for renewed strength and guidance regarding the tasks that will come before us. We also ask that wisdom, patience, and civility guide our speech and our actions. Amen.

Hon. members, our national anthem today will be led by Mr. Paul Lorieau. Please join in as you wish and in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Merci beaucoup, M. Lorieau, and thank you, members. Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Fabrizio Inserra, consul general of Italy in Vancouver. I'd like to welcome Mr. Inserra to Alberta on his official visit. The consul general joins us today in the spirit of the valuable and productive relationship Alberta and Italy share. Alberta enjoys a strong and vibrant Italian community, and our government is grateful for the relationships we have built both here and abroad. Our jurisdictions share many important partnerships in trade, industry, and education. I'm confident that this visit to our province will help strengthen current areas of co-operation and help identify new opportunities for future relations. Mr. Inserra is seated in the Speaker's gallery today to watch our proceedings, and I'd now ask Consul General Inserra to please rise and receive our best wishes along with the traditional warm welcome of this House.

Introduction of Guests

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, it's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a great-looking and very smart group of students from Rochester, which is a small town in my constituency, just south of Athabasca. It's a beautiful little community nestled in the Tawatinaw Valley. We're thrilled to have these kids, their teacher, their classroom volunteer, and their bus driver here taking part in the School at the Leg. this week. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What a pleasure it is to rise to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly nine great minds from Smith, Alberta. They attend Smith elementary school. It's approximately two and a half hours from here, depending, of course, on the weather. This time they're here, and they've made it pretty good. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that they stand along with their principal, Mrs. Brenna Liddell, and teacher, Mr. Andrew Jansen, to receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through to this Assembly a group of guests who are members of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. These workers represent nearly 90 licensed practical nurses, health care aides, housekeepers, and food service staff who have been locked out of Monterey Place in Calgary since June 26. Their employer, Triple A Living Communities, receives a financial subsidy from this government. However, instead of giving these hard-working individuals the wages they deserve, Triple A has been paying wages up to 27 per cent lower than industry standard while padding their bottom line. Alberta's NDP is proud to stand with these workers during their struggle. I would now ask my guests to rise as I call their names and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: Carrie-Lynn Rusznak, Maria Doris Auman, Anna Barroga, Trevor Zimmerman, Carmelita Calanza, Mayna Joseph, Maggie Junio, Jill MacMullin, Sadhna Nand, and Nafisa Sadat. Please welcome them with me.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to rise today to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly 14 employees from Alberta Transportation. The traffic safety services division staff are here today to tour the Legislature Building and to witness the democratic process first-hand. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two members of the board of Alberta Health Services: Mrs. Cathy Roozen and Dr. Ruth Collins-Nakai. Mrs. Roozen serves as the vice-chair of the board and was first appointed in February 2011. Dr. Collins-Nakai has served on the board since July of 2008. Later today I'll be tabling the annual report of Alberta Health Services. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank our guests today for their contribution to the improvement in our health care system over the last few years. Please join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a couple of very good friends of mine: Mr. Brodie Boychuk and his mother, Donna McBride. Brodie is a constituent of mine in the mighty constituency of Calgary-Buffalo. He's my eyes and ears on the east side of the constituency as my office and my house are down in the west. But let me tell you something. Brodie lets me know what's going on. In fact, the hon. Minister of Human Services received a letter from Brodie recently, and the hon. minister agreed with his position. So we're moving the chains forward on the democratic process as well.

I would also like to introduce his mother, Donna, who is the manager of financial literacy for Momentum, a Calgary nonprofit group, and who does everything she can to ensure that Brodie and other individuals with disabilities in the community can live independent and engaging lives.

They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Michael Stuart. Michael is a second-year commerce student at the U of A, majoring in accounting, who resides in the constituency of Edmonton-Centre. He was born and raised in B.C. but is now proud to call Alberta home. In his words, he has fallen in love with this province. His long-term goals are to complete extensive education and run for office one day. I would ask that Mr. Stuart stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly the board of governors from Grande Prairie Regional College. They're here visiting the Legislature while in Edmonton for their annual retreat. They are excited about the upcoming partnership with Alberta Health Services as funding for the Grande Prairie regional hospital was announced last week. Approximately 4,000 metres of the hospital will be available for the nursing and medical careers program with the Grande Prairie Regional College to create an educational training facility. I am proud to introduce to you Mr. Don Gnatiuk, CEO and president, and Mr. Vince Vavrek, chair of the board of governors. I'd ask that the 17 guests with us here today please rise for the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly two familiar faces to many of you in the Legislature. They've been attending the Legislature regularly for eight years. They stand before the Assembly to remind this government that farm workers are persons in the dominion of Canada and that they have the same rights as any and every other person in this great dominion. They're here to remind the Premier once again and ask her when she will deliver on her promise to include farm workers in the protection under occupational health and safety, workers' compensation, and standards for child labour in this province. I'll ask Darlene Dunlop and Eric Musekamp to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Racette School Vehicle Crash

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with great sorrow that I rise today to talk about a tragic event that has saddened all Albertans and, indeed, people right across this country. When we send our children off to school, we believe we are sending them to a place where they can feel safe and secure. Last Thursday that sense of safety was shattered when a van drove through a window of a junior high school in St. Paul. This tragedy has forever altered so many lives.

To the family of grade 6 student Megan Wolitski, who wanted to grow up and be a teacher like her mom: we wish you strength. The loss of such a young life is heartbreaking and difficult to comprehend. Please know that our thoughts and prayers are with you. To the families of the other children who were injured and some who are still in hospital, we send our prayers for their speedy recovery.

Mr. Speaker, people in the community of St. Paul will be experiencing grief as well as shock, confusion, and certainly anger. In situations like this it's often easy to forget that the man who was driving that van has a family of his own, and our thoughts and prayers are also with them.

St. Paul is truly an amazing community, and on Thursday I saw first-hand how the community came together during that crisis. I was moved by the courage I saw amongst the principal and the teachers, who acted quickly to get the children to safety and to help those who had been injured. I saw the tireless work of the emergency responders and the police who rushed to the scene to rescue the children and to rush them to hospitals, and I saw the school trustees and the superintendent, who rallied to support their school community and ensure that counselling services were available. On behalf of all Albertans I want to thank you all. You have all shown tremendous leadership and amazing strength over the last few very difficult days.

Finally, to the students of Racette junior high school: I'd like to convey my sincere condolences for the loss of your classmate Megan and our hope for the quick recovery of your other classmates. I know that all members of this Assembly will be thinking of you, your school, and your community of St. Paul.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills on behalf of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak to the senseless tragedy that occurred in my constituency in St. Paul last week, where a vehicle drove through the window of a grade 6 classroom at Racette school, resulting in the death of one student and serious injuries to many others. While several students have been treated and released, students are still in the hospital receiving treatment at this time.

I'd like to extend my deepest condolences and prayers to the Wolitski family, dealing with the loss of their daughter Megan, and my thoughts are also with all of the affected families, teachers, and the principal of Racette school.

The response of first responders in St. Paul has been truly amazing in this time of need. The St. Paul Fire Department, St. Paul & District Ambulance Service, and local RCMP acted valiantly and professionally. I'd like to recognize the support of the St. Paul education regional division school board, in particular Superintendent Glen Brodziak and board chair, Maureen Miller, in these difficult times. I'd also like to acknowledge the Member of Parliament for Westlock-St. Paul for his support to families and the community.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to thank the Premier for her full support and attention during this tragedy. Despite a busy schedule, the Premier knew every detail as it came forward, and her very hands-on approach helped comfort the community, knowing that this government's support has and will continue to be full and unconditional. That hands-on approach was followed by the Minister of Education and the Minister of Infrastructure, who quickly travelled to St. Paul and offered that I travel with them to show our support. As a new MLA dealing with what could likely be the most difficult situation in my career, their professionalism and compassion will never be forgotten. I'd also like to recognize the Leader of the Official Opposition and our caucus for allowing me the flexibility to deal with the tragedy on the ground in my constituency.

This tragedy has had a tremendous impact on the town of St. Paul and the whole province. When parents send their children off to school in the morning, they don't expect something like this to happen. Our community is strong, resilient, and courageous, and we will give our full support, love, and prayers to those families.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [applause]

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is indeed a very tragic and very serious issue, obviously. Members of the Liberal caucus as well as the NDP caucus wish to contribute some comments as well. This requires unanimous consent, as you all know, so I will ask only one question. Does anyone object to hearing comments from the third and fourth parties?

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great sorrow that I rise today and speak some brief words on the tragedy that occurred in St. Paul. Really, we ask ourselves often in times of tragedy why or how this happens, and there are no easy words or no easy explanations.

My heart especially goes out to Megan Wolitski's family at this time of tremendous sorrow, and I wish them Godspeed in dealing with this tragedy. At the same time I hope they will be comforted by our thoughts here in the Legislature. I know it will take some time and the loss will always be with them in some regard, yet we hope that their healing will be quick.

I look at this, too, from the way the hon. minister and people have responded here in saying how the school community and the broader community have bound together. We must always remember that the public school is often the hub of our school communities. It's where relationships are formed, where the best of our community is brought out. It's a testament to what they do every day that they were able to rise to this challenge and lead the community in a sense of healing. I applaud the teachers and everyone involved with that who are dealing with this crisis and working as hard as they can. By all accounts our first responders did the best they could.

My heart goes out to the families who still have their children in the hospital. I wish them as best a speedy recovery and time to mourn the loss of their good friend Megan.

In any event, I believe it's for us in this Legislature at this time to remember to continue to try to build strong schools, have teachers in schools for not only day-to-day learning but to deal with tragedies like this because the school is the hub.

I would like to just in closing say that my thoughts and prayers go out to everyone in St. Paul. I wish them all the strength in character that I know they have to deal with this situation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

1:50

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, I'm going to hold the clock back before we start question period to allow the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder to address his comments on behalf of the NDP opposition.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today our thoughts and prayers go out to the families and friends of those affected by the terrible accident in St. Paul last Thursday. This is surely a most difficult and heartbreaking time for everyone involved.

We stand together with all Albertans in offering our sincerest condolences to the friends and family of Megan Wolitski, who passed away last Friday. No doubt her absence will cause a great deal of grief and suffering for everyone who has known her. Nothing is more tragic than a life taken too soon.

We also pray for the well-being of the two girls still in hospital, that they are able to make a full recovery and rejoin their classmates soon.

Our condolences, finally, to the community of St. Paul. St. Paul is a very tight-knit and caring community, and their resolve in this situation has been an inspiration to all Albertans. The healing road is often a long one, but the people in St. Paul should know that here at the Legislature we walk with them every step of the way.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My thoughts are also with the families and the community as they overcome this tragedy.

Political Party Financial Contributions

Ms Smith: Turning to the business of the day, Mr. Speaker, Alberta's reputation has been damaged. Our election financing process looks like it's been broken by abuse. We have asked the Chief Electoral Officer to investigate the enormous and potentially illegal contribution from a single source to the government party. But even if the contribution is technically legal through a loophole in the existing law, it means the law is deeply flawed. When will the government fix it?

The Speaker: Did you wish to direct that question to anyone in particular?

The hon. President of Treasury Board.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, the Chief Electoral Officer is an officer of this Legislative Assembly, and we respect that on this side of the House a great deal. We believe that he is discharging his duties under the legislation that he has in front of him, and he's doing a good job doing that. Of course, the party opposite doesn't really want to talk about its own history in this regard in terms of that sort of thing. Perhaps in the 2004 election campaign, when one individual bankrolled 75 per cent of their entire political contributions for that campaign, one must wonder . . .

Mr. Anderson: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: A point of order has been noted from the Member for Airdrie.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition for her first supplemental.

Ms Smith: I look forward to the hon. Member for Airdrie correcting the record.

Continuing on, Mr. Speaker, given that the government's vague answers and insistence that everything is okay have done nothing to restore the public's confidence, surely the Premier must agree that the shell game that is damaging our public's trust has no place in our democracy.

Mr. Horner: Again, Mr. Speaker, one talks about shell games across the way. This party has followed all of the rules that are in place. We will co-operate with the Chief Electoral Officer on this matter to a T. But, again, somewhat hypocritical of the party across the way when in the 2007 by-election the same individual who bankrolled 75 per cent of their 2004 election campaign bankrolled 99.7 per cent of that party's contributions. Incredible.

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, let's be cautioned again that party matters ought not come forward in the form of questions during question period from either side. [interjection] Hon. member, please, from either side. So let's keep this above that threshold, and I'm sure we'll do just fine.

I invite your second supplemental, hon. leader.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to hear the hon. member say that this could easily be cleared up because while the Chief Electoral Officer does his work, there is a very simple way for the Premier to repair some of the damage in the meantime. The Premier campaigned on transparency. She could simply release the cheques and the deposit slips. Why won't she?

The Speaker: President of Treasury Board, you may respond if you wish. Otherwise, let's be reminded of the admonishment I just gave.

Mr. Horner: Agreed, Mr. Speaker. Again, I will restate what the Premier has said many, many times. We will comply with all of the Chief Electoral Officer's requests in this matter. We have always followed the rules, as I'm told the party across the way has as well. It's obviously clear that they saw nothing wrong in the past with those donations, like in the 2008 election campaign where a single individual bankrolled nearly a quarter of that party's contributions. A bit hypocritical.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation, AIMCo, is a Crown corporation that manages $70 billion worth of Alberta's financial assets. Daryl Katz is on the board of AIMCo. He is also at the centre of this donations mess, and his two largest business interests, hockey and drugstores, are affected by government decisions. Even if this doesn't bother the Premier, can't anyone in this government understand that that makes Albertans just a little bit uncomfortable?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, this side of the House does not drag private individuals through the mud and besmirch them with innuendo, making accusations of almost criminality. I find that absolutely deplorable. Mr. Katz is one of nine individuals on our AIMCo board. Frankly, AIMCo did better than most mutual funds or sovereign funds in the last several years. The board sets the overall strategic direction for the corporation and oversees that development. The individuals on that board have served Alberta taxpayers extremely well.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, let me connect some dots. Given that a quarter of the government's election donations are said to be from a single source and given that that source wants $100 million from the government for a hockey arena and he sits on the board of a Crown corporation that invests $70 billion of assets owned by Albertans, doesn't anyone in this government have a problem with that?

The Speaker: Hon. members, let's be careful with our language. Suggesting that the government received election contributions during the election period may be crossing the line, but I'll leave it up to the President of Treasury Board to respond if he wishes.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, again, the accusation is against an individual, of doing something illegal. I think that individual outside of this House would have something to say about that as well as the associates that are with him. Perhaps the hon. members would like to make those accusations outside the doors.

I find it incredible that they're saying that we have bent to his will of some sort. The actual fact is that the Katz Group asked for a change in casino licences. We said no. The group asked for direct funding for the arena. We said no then; we say no today. That has been our position, and it will continue to be our position.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, let me give you some more dots to connect. Daryl Katz's partner in the arena project, WAM Development Corp., also receives hundreds of millions of dollars for joint land development projects with AIMCo. Katz, AIMCo, WAM, arenas, donations: doesn't anyone in this government have a problem with that?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, next they'll probably be suggesting that I was at the grassy knoll when JFK was assassinated.

There are a number of dots that also could be connected. In the 2008 election campaign one individual funded a quarter of that party's total electoral campaigns. What was he asking them? Did he buy himself a party, Mr. Speaker? I don't know.

Funding for Professional Sports Arena

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, on Thursday this Premier stated that no direct provincial government funding would be used to pay for Mr. Katz's new downtown arena. Yet the mayor of Edmonton, when asked last month if he expected to get $100 million of arena funding from the province, stated that he was very confident that, quote, a program will be in place and would allow us to get that kind of funding needed from the province for the balance of the arena; we feel the province has been in great support and the money will be there. Unquote. Premier, who is telling the truth, you or the mayor of Edmonton? Has the province promised funding for Katz's arena?

2:00

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, we have had MSI funding in place for a while now. It's a very clear program with very clear guidelines that send money to municipalities so they can decide the priorities of the people they represent. This opposition is consistently criticizing the city of Edmonton for using those funds for the arena even though they're supposed to say that they respect the municipality's right to make decisions. I have yet heard the opposition, the Member for Airdrie, criticize his mayor for putting $3.5 million in MSI funds to renovate the Plainsmen Arena or the Member for Calgary-Foothills – $10.1 million in MSI funding went to the field house down there.

Mr. Anderson: So local arena equals professional sports arena. Good comparison, Minister. Real good job.

Mr. Speaker, just for all the folks at home who don't understand the weaselly language around here: Premier, will there be any provincial funding for the arena at all? That means any direct funding, indirect funding, grant funding, delayed funding, ongoing funding, outgoing or incoming funding, backdoor funding, front door funding, side funding, up or down funding. Has the province committed any kind of funding whatsoever for this professional sports arena? [interjections] Come clean, Minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, it doesn't matter what plan they have. I just spoke to the mayor today, and this arena would be solely owned by the municipality. Solely owned by the municipality. [interjections] The only thing weaselly going on is the insinuations consistently from this member attacking the city of Edmonton for deciding where MSI funding, provided by the province to municipalities, where they decide the priorities of the people of the municipality. [interjections] All he can criticize is northern Alberta, but his constituency seems to be exempt, and they can spend money on public arenas.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: Hon. members, I am going to keep a list of people who are interjecting, and I will bypass you when your turn comes around if you persist in future interjections, okay? I don't care if it's question period, and I don't care that it's Monday. I will not tolerate more of that stuff. You might as well know it right now.

The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure sick Albertans and poor Albertans are real happy that this minister is willing to spend $100 million on Mr. Katz's priorities. Way to go, Minister.

Mr. Speaker, if the mayor of Edmonton says that he has been assured by the province that the needed taxpayer funding will be made available in some way or fashion for this new pro arena, how can Albertans be sure that this funding wasn't only made available after Mr. Katz trucked over $430,000 to the PC Party in their darkest hour of election need? In other words, how do we know that this decision was nothing more than pure political payback?

Mr. Griffiths: One more time. We fund MSI, which goes to municipalities so they can decide the priorities of the people they represent. We're not taking any money from the sick or impoverished, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the hon. member across the way just last week said in a question in this House: our Wildrose leader is proposing a lottery strategy to help keep the Oilers in Edmonton, which will keep taxpayers off the hook. This is lottery money that goes to not-for-profits and charitable organizations, but they are going to rip it from them and give it to a private professional arena.

The Speaker: The leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Election Finances Legislation

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let's bring some reason to the House and stick to the real issue. The Conservative government is once again fending off accusations of improper election contributions because Alberta's election finances law leaves holes you could drive a truck through. The current rules do nothing to prevent large contributions to all leadership candidates in all political parties from companies, unions, and wealthy individuals. To the Premier: what will the government do to update these laws and put an end to the sale of political influence from any political party to the highest bidder?

The Speaker: Hon. member, we're all good up to the point of entering a political party at the end of your question. I'll ask the Minister of Justice if he wishes to comment.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would point out to this member that the very reason we're having the conversation today about contributions gives proof to the fact that the existing system works. We have a system of accountability and an existing system of disclosure. As indicated on the Order Paper, though, I will be introducing some election amendments in the next week or two, and we'll have the discussion at that time.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We all agree that campaign disclosures are a good start, but they're only a start. Given that some disclosures have revealed offshore donations to PC leadership bids, the illegal campaign contributions, and now this massive $430,000 donation from one small group of individuals, will the Premier commit today to true campaign finance reform by closing the gaping holes in electoral finances legislation, putting hard limits on election and leadership contributions?

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm certain that the hon. leader of the Liberal party would consider that 22 per cent of his entire 2008 election contributions were not from one individual, I would hope, because then that probably violates the law as well, but that's indeed what happened. The party didn't see anything wrong with the way that their donations came in, nor did the Chief Electoral Officer. That's what we have to date.

I think the minister has commented quite well on where we're going with that act. We will continue to co-operate with the Chief Electoral Officer, an officer of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader for your final supplemental.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal government tackled these issues years ago with their Federal Accountability Act. With respect to party leadership and campaign finance rules, will the Premier show true leadership and accountability by committing at the very least to take a look at these measures and draft a new, made-in-Alberta policy, better than the Swiss cheese policy we currently have?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again, I think that we can debate these issues more when we have the Election Accountability Amendment Act on the floor here. I do believe the member may have some input there, and perhaps he'll want to propose some amendments to any legislation that we have. Then on top of that, I will also indicate to him that we will follow as closely as possible the Chief Electoral Officer's recommendations, which I do look forward to receiving.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche–St. Paul–Two Hills.

Political Party Financial Contributions

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. No reasonable person would believe that Daryl Katz would have given up to $430,000 to the Tory campaign without getting something in return. There had to be negotiations, and Albertans want to know the terms of the deal. Will the Premier disclose to Albertans whether she, her senior officials, or anyone purporting to be representing her government or having influence with her government committed to anything for the benefit of the PC party's savior?

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. members, you know, I don't know how many times I have to remind people about what some of the rules are that we have followed for decades if not centuries, and one of them is to not reference issues pertaining to party issues as such and try to ask someone from the government to account for that. It's specifically not allowed under our rules of play, hon. member, so you may wish to rephrase that question. I will ask the President of Treasury Board nonetheless if he wishes to respond, and then I'll listen carefully to your supplementals.

Political Party Financial Contributions

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll answer the question which was posed to me. Is there any deal between the government of Alberta and the Katz Group – let's put it that way – in terms of the arena? The answer is no. For the umpteenth dozen time the answer is no.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that the questions that I want to know have to do with the impact on the government and the government's policies of donations to the political party that formed the government and given that I am focusing on the impact of the government and given that the scandal cuts to the heart of Albertans' trust in this PC government, the Premier has a responsibility to come clean, so will she admit that there were, indeed, negotiations with Mr. Katz, a deal was struck, and tell Albertans what price they will have to pay for Daryl Katz bankrolling the PC party?

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: Hon. member, you were doing so well until that last little part. This is the last time I'm going to say this in this House on this issue, okay? I'm going to ask the President of Treasury Board if he wishes to comment. If he does, he's welcome to do so, and after that, no more. We're not going to stand here and watch rules being broken.

The hon. member.

2:10 Political Party Financial Contributions

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, there were a lot of givens in there and a lot of preamble to that last question, but I want to say a couple of things. First of all, donations do not impact government policy. That's the first thing.

The second thing that I would – and this is for clarity to the members opposite as well. The question to me, as I understand it, was: did the Katz Group have discussions with anyone in government about us potentially funding, direct funding, or whatever funding the Edmonton Oilers and their arena? The answer, Mr. Speaker, is no, we did not enter into any agreements with them to do that. There were also discussions from members opposite about whether or not we had discussions around changing casino rules. I can say that the request was made to us to do that. We said no, Mr. Speaker, for the umpteenth dozen time.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition for your final question.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that reasonable people may reasonably assume that by taking a $430,000 donation, the government is subject to undue influence, will the government do the right thing and give the money back?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that the Chief Electoral Officer is reviewing whether it came in in $10 or $30,000, that it didn't come in from one individual. That's the first point that I'll make.

The second point that I will make, Mr. Speaker, is that I'm sure the hon. member is reasonable, and a reasonable person would understand that when I say that there's no deal, there's no deal. So I am hoping that the hon. member, through you, is being reasonable about his understanding of the English language. It's no, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Member for Airdrie, you had a point of order? So noted.

The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, followed by the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Election Finances Legislation

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's election laws are quickly becoming the biggest joke across the country. In this past year alone the Wildrose discovered that the PC Party had received and solicited tens of thousands of tax dollars in illegal donations. Only when they were caught with their hands in the cookie jar did they call in the Chief Electoral Officer for recommendations to help clean up their mess. Will the Justice minister then simply reveal to the Legislature the Chief Electoral Officer's report and recommendations today, or will he continue to hide behind this government's pattern of secrecy?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, if this member has a particular complaint about any particular financing, I suggest he go and talk to the Chief Electoral Officer, who is an independent officer of the Legislature. He does not report to me. He does not report to anybody else.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that in 2009 this Premier, who was then the Justice minister, ignored the advice of the previous independent Chief Electoral Officer, will this government implement all recommendations in the upcoming report or just those that allow their culture of corruption and entitlement to continue?

Mr. Denis: As I have previously indicated publicly in this Chamber, we will endeavour to follow the Chief Electoral Officer's recommendations as closely as possible. His recommendations will also be made public, Mr. Speaker, and at the same time every member of this Assembly will have the opportunity to go and view and actually propose amendments and debate the Election Accountability Amendment Act. I would encourage the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills to stand up and do so and participate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that almost a third of this government's campaign donations came from, essentially, one person, will this Justice minister recognize that accepting a $430,000 donation . . .

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

Mr. Saskiw: . . . would clearly violate the law or at least commit to amending the elections act to close what amounts to another massive PC loophole?

Speaker's Ruling

Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: All right, that's it. If you want me to take up the rest of your question period reading you the rules, I'm prepared to do it. Minister of Human Services, you rose on a point of order.

Let me just remind a few of you, some of you who are new to the House, others of you who are old to the House and should know better, that page 502 of House of Commons Procedure and Practice says that in question period "a question should not . . . be hypothetical." That's one reminder for you.

A little further on it says on page 504, again with respect to questions, that they should not "concern internal party matters, or party or election expenses."

I could go on with others, but suffice it to say that I really am in a dilemma, hon. members. On the one hand, I am charged with upholding the rules of this House. On the other hand, I like to allow as much freedom of expression and freedom of speech, which people died for, so that you would have it but not so that you would abuse it – not so that you would abuse it – and I've had enough of it, hon. members. You're smart enough to have gotten yourself elected. Stay smart enough to stay elected. Rephrase your question when you've been given a warning by the Speaker, please. Otherwise, I will simply have to take the uncomfortable stance of ruling it out of order. Now, clearly, that admonishment stands.

I'm not up here for my own good sake. I'm up here to protect the integrity of this House. If some of you don't see it that way, I invite you to come and speak with me in my office after.

Hon. member, the final question that you had just asked really, really got to me and to a number of other people. Let's move on.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 13(2), wherein a member can ask the Speaker to explain a ruling, given that the rules that you quoted refer to election expenses and internal party matters and given that people on this side of the House have been asking about the implication of election revenue on government action and on legislation and legislative policy, could you explain how it is that one thing actually negates what we would suggest is our legitimate right and obligation on behalf of all Albertans to ask about the other thing, which is our legislation and the impact on government policy?

The Speaker: Hon. member, that's fine. That's precisely what I had said earlier. I said that you're welcome to ask questions that hold the government accountable, but you are not welcome to ask anyone in the House to account for party matters or party or political dealings, as I just read aloud. That's why we follow these traditions. Now, if somebody wishes to change them, I'd invite you to come and see me about that, and we can maybe ask House leaders to have a look at it, and you can overturn centuries, perhaps, of tradition. Other than that, no additional clarification ought be needed except as I have referenced for you, and if you like, I can read you some more. In the meantime, let us move on.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hopefully, my questions won't be party oriented and will be directed at the government.

Regional Health Care Centres

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, in the past two weeks the Minister of Health announced hospital projects in Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Grande Prairie, High Prairie, and Edson. Two of these are very critical and important hospitals for my constituents in the northwest part of the province. Each project had its plans changed since originally announced. To the Minister of Health: why do you keep changing the plans for these hospitals?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the answer is actually quite simple. We engage in a planning process with the community, with health care workers who support residents in those areas about current and future anticipated needs for those communities. In the case of all the projects that were referred to by the hon. member, we did just that. We spent the better part of a year looking at not only primary health care and continuing care service requirements, but we looked at specialty services like cancer treatment, like the need for CT scanning, and like the need for renal dialysis and incorporated those elements in these plans in order that local residents would no longer have to travel to the larger centres to receive those services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Health: given that these communities have been promised hospitals for years now, why has it taken so long to get them up and running?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, it's true that government has been working with those communities for several years, and I'm very proud to stand here today in the House and say that this government delivered on those promises. Not only did we deliver, as I said earlier, on basic health care services that communities require; we delivered on what I think is a very important demand, and that is the demand of citizens outside the major centres of this province to access specialized services, to access services that support aboriginal health, to access services that support children and stronger communities. All of those things have been incorporated in these new projects.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now to the Minister of Infrastructure: why have the costs escalated from their original projections, and will the increase in cost affect the government's commitments to balance the budget by 2013-14?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, these projects are proof of the government's commitment to have a health care system that fits Albertans now and into the future. We have worked hard to ensure we're getting the full value of taxpayers' dollars while meeting the needs of residents of these communities. After consulting with these communities, the scopes of these projects were expanded. With expansion comes increased costs. This government has found money within its existing budget to fund these expansions, and no new money was required for any of these projects. This is good news for communities all over Alberta.

2:20 Leasehold Compensation in Lower Athabasca Region

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, the central planning document known as the lower Athabasca regional plan is further evidence of how out of touch this government has become. The plan will reportedly cancel 19 oil sands leases and bring uncertainty to an already volatile industry. The province is on the hook to compensate these companies, but Albertans have no idea how much they'll have to pay. The Wildrose believes in protecting property rights. To the hon. Minister of Environment and SRD: just how much will Albertans pay for this government's property rights attack?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to say that this government fully supports property rights in Alberta and has done so through a property rights advocate that is being set up. We have support from many people with regard to the lower Athabasca region, including the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers, who also have endorsed our plan with regard to moving forward. There may be up to $30 million with regard to negotiations that may be taking place with the Minister of Energy and with regard to those leaseholders, but I have to say that they have been very supportive of this plan.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given the government owes potentially millions of dollars in compensation for the extinguishing of oil sands leases, just how will this government decide what is full and fair compensation, and will these oil companies be reimbursed for their costs plus the loss of revenue and a rate of return?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said in my last comments, the oil companies that may be affected will be approaching the Minister of Energy about that. To date and to the best of my knowledge I don't know that that has happened other than that the industry has said that they also support the development in the oil sands but also what we've done with regard to the lower Athabasca region, making sure we put aside conservation areas, recreation areas, places for the community to grow while extracting resources.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given that the South Saskatchewan regional plan is next in line and given that the South Saskatchewan contains far less Crown land than the first plan, can this government promise that no private leases or holding of land will be affected by the implementation of the South Saskatchewan regional plan?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad to say that on Friday we announced the continuation of input from Albertans with regard to the South Saskatchewan regional plan. What I can promise you is that we will be listening and consulting with Albertans, and from that plan we'll move forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Aids to Daily Living Program

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is for the Minister of Health. Minister, the Alberta aids to daily living program assists Albertans with long-term disability and chronic or terminal illness to maintain their independence by providing monetary assistance to buy medical equipment and necessary supplies. Unfortunately, my constituents in Calgary-Bow are now waiting up to eight weeks for assessments by a health care professional, who determines their needs and their eligibility for aids to daily living. Could you please explain what is causing this wait and what is being done to address this issue?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is correct. An increasing number of Albertans rely on the Alberta aids to daily living program to supply them with devices and other services that support them in living independently. In Calgary the norm in the last few years has been a two- to three-week wait time. We are experiencing higher volume in Calgary. This accounts for the longer wait time. Alberta Health Services is currently looking into a plan to reduce that through increasing resources and reorganizing the delivery system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: will we, and if so, when will we return to the two-week wait time for assessments in Calgary and, more generally, in Alberta?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, as I said, we're seeing in Calgary and across the province an increase in demand for the services provided by the aids to daily living program. This, of course, is to be expected as our population ages, as we continue to put more resources as a government into supporting people to live independently in the community for as long as possible. As I said, Alberta Health Services is working on the issue. We're hopeful that in the near future we will see wait times for these assessments decrease.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given the diverse economic makeup of my constituency what can be done to increase access to this kind of program?
